Combination of chemicals may be making gulf veterans sick

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — The mysterious "Gulf War Syndrome" may have been caused by the combination of bug repellent and anti-nerve gas pills U.S. soldiers took during the war, a newspaper reported.

The military-issued bug repellent became 10 times more potent when combined with the pills, The Santa Cruz Sentinel reported Sunday.

A U.S. Agriculture Department researcher in Gainesville, Fla., accidentally discovered the combined effect while doing research on ways to make pesticides more effective, the paper said.

His findings prompted the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee to request more studies on the combination of the anti-nerve gas pill with other compounds, the paper said.

Some 20,000 gulf war veterans have suffered from fatigue, rashes, memory loss, stomach problems, damaged nervous systems, muscle and joint pain, and other health problems since the 1991 war.

N. Korea defiant as sanctions loom

Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton worked Monday at building a coalition for sanctions against North Korea, calling Russian President Boris Yeltsin and planning to reach out to China.

Administration officials cautioned that getting a vote in the U.N. Security Council could take weeks.

As the administration maneu-vered to try to find a common approach on a sanctions package, North Korea reiterated its warning that sanctions could provoke war.

The isolationist Communist regime also said it would immediately quit the United Nations' nuclear watchdog agency — the International Atomic Energy Agency — and accept no more inspections of its nuclear facilities.

"We have seen the statements from North Korea. We take them very seriously," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

She said a North Korean withdrawal from the IAEA would be "a negative development."

Robert Gallucci, the State Department official coordinating the administration's Korea policy, suggested that a North Korean decision to withdraw from the IAEA and not permit the agency to monitor the North Korean nuclear program could result in even tougher U.N. sanctions than currently planned.

"If it should turn out to be true ... it is quite possible that that would have an impact, or affect the resolution that we are contemplating and that the international community would accept," Gallucci said at a news conference for foreign reporters.

"North Korea was the first topic of conversation" in Clinton's 25-minute call with Yeltsin, Myers said. She said that the two leaders also discussed Yeltsin's plans to visit the United States this fall.

Russia last week lent its support to the U.S. plan to seek sanctions, and Myers said Clinton and Yeltsin discussed the general approach that would be taken.

Clinton also attempted to phone Chinese President Jiang Zemin to discuss China's role in the Security Council debate.

China is a longtime ally of North Korea but reportedly has been frustrated by Pyongyang's hard-line approach and escalation of the ## Coalition voices access concerns

When Iowa City's landmark restaurant, the Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., was devastated by flames this spring, some community members admit they had hopes that some good would come out of the tragedy.

Members of the Johnson County Coalition for Persons with Disabilities hoped that along with all the necessary renovations of the restaurant, the front door would finally become accessible to persons with disabilities.

However, after reopening in early June, the Hamburg Inn, 214 N. Linn St., remains inaccessible to many persons who are confined to wheelchairs.

"The Hamburg is the first business we offered to provide technical assistance to," Tim Clancy, chairman of the coalition, said. "We were under the impression the changes would be made."

The coalition met outside the Hamburg Inn Monday night to voice their concerns of the level of accessibility in Iowa City. Clancy, who relies on a wheelchair for mobility, said the goal wasn't to

VICTIMS SEEK $15 MILLION

Jury finds Exxon Corp. to blame for Valdez oil spill

T.A. Badger
Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A jury on Monday blamed recklessness by Exxon Corp. and Capt. Joseph Hazelwood for the Exxon Valdez disaster, allowing victims of the nation's worst oil spill to seek $15 billion in damages.

Plaintiffs in the federal court case include more than 10,000 commercial fishermen, Alaska natives and property owners who claim they suffered economic harm as a result of the 11 million gallon spill in Prince William Sound.

Brian O'Neill, the plaintiffs' lead lawyer, said he was eager to go after the punitive amount to mend what he sees as continued corporate arrogance.

"Exxon still thinks it's above the law," he told reporters. "You need to take a substantial bite out of their butt before you can change them."

"Nobody wants to cripple Exxon. We want to make them responsible for their actions, the same way you and I are responsible for ours."

The jury deliberated for more than four days before finding recklessness, a requirement before plaintiffs can be eligible to collect punitive damages.

A dollar assessment will be determined by the same 12 jurors in a later phase of the litigation. That phase is expected to begin next month.

In addition to the reckless findings, the jury also said Hazelwood acted negligently the night of the 1989 spill.

O'Neill and his legal team swept each other up in a silent, tearful hug after the verdict was read.

"This is a really great day," O'Neill said later. "It took five years to bring about, but we got there."

Hazelwood received the verdict stoically and declined to answer questions afterward. One of his lawyers, Thomas Russo, said the former Exxon tanker captain would keep trying to clear his name.

"We know more about what happened on the Exxon Valdez than anybody," he said. "To put the blame on Captain Hazelwood is a simplistic solution to what happened. This is not the final chapter as far as we're concerned."

Exxon lawyer Patrick Lynch said he was disappointed and repeated the defense's contention that the company has already been punished enough.

"It's going to take us a while to swallow this," he said.

Lynch said he didn't know if the verdict would push Exxon to pursue an out-of-court settlement.

"I'm just a spear carrier here," Lynch said. Exxon Chairman Lee Raymond, in a statement from his office in Texas, said the spill was "a tragic accident which impacted the lives of many Alaskans. For that we are truly sorry."

Delaying registration assists UI students

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

Ah, procrastination.

It can be a student's best friend and worst enemy, but in terms of registration for summer classes, some UI students found it was actually to their benefit to wait until the last possible moment.

UI junior Tris Curtis breathed a sigh of relief at the Main Library Monday afternoon when she was finally able to add the chemistry class she's been trying to get into for weeks.

"Finally something goes right with registration," she said. "I don't know why it's open now. Maybe they opened up new sections, but I'm just glad I got into it."

New sections also assisted UI senior John Goedken, who found a more convenient section Monday that was not open when he checked two weeks ago.

"It's kind of helpful because now I have an option I didn't think I had before," he said.

Going into Monday's last-minute blitz, University Registrar Jerald Dallam said about 8,000 students had registered for summer classes.

Although he said there is no way to know exactly how many more people will register, Dallam said he expects this year's figures to measure up to last year's total of 10,698.

"If today's registration holds, those numbers are strong enough to give us what we had last year," he said.

Dallam said summer registration has been "fairly consistent" for the last several years.

Frank Miller/The Daily Iowan

UI junior Kathy Jackson types in her registration at the Main Library. Though close to the final deadline for entering, she managed to get into all her classes and didn't feel at all panicked by the timing.

The possibility of a new section opening wasn't the only thing that brought students to campus computers for registration.

UI junior John Clark attributed his last-minute ISIS connection to laziness.

"I just didn't want to admit to myself that I have to go back to class," he said.

Summer: bookstore's calm before the storm

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

At Iowa Book & Supply Co., "Scooter" Hare stands ready for the summer semester.

In the next couple of weeks, hundreds of students will look to his guidance to answer questions like "Where is the 'Bushmen of the Kalahari' book?" or "How much is the Human Sexuality text?" Hare has worked at Iowa Book & Supply for three years and dreams of someday owning a bookstore like Prairie Lights Books. He reads 10 books at a time on topics ranging from German film to religion and tries to know at least something about every book in his department.

"...We have parents coming in with their kids' book list and asking 500 questions about the books, related material, the courses, the dorms and social life on campus."

"Scooter" Hare, employee at Iowa Book & Supply Co.

"I don't want to put something up and don't know what it's about," Hare said. "I look over the textbooks that come in and try to get a sense of what they're about so that I can answer questions."

He said the students are mostly concerned with the cost of textbooks and often complain about how expensive going to school is.

"People who take Western Civilization come in here, browse through the stack of books and determine whether they're gonna take the course by looking at the number of books they'll have to buy," he said.

The customers who ask the most questions, however, are often parents.

"In the beginning of the semester, we have parents coming in with their kids' book list and asking 500 questions about the books, related material, the courses, the dorms and social life on campus," he said.

Hare starts preparing for the summer semester before spring break by sending out text order forms. During break, he contacts the finance department of the bookstore to schedule purchases, rearranges the book sections and then stacks the new books.

"The summer is not a very busy time of year. People are more relaxed, and there aren't as many students on campus," he said.

During the summer the bookshelves are neat and half-empty, and they won't be filled until the beginning of the fall semester.

The slow pace of the summer semester means that he has time to read some of the books he keeps on the shelf at his desk. At the moment, he is finishing up a book called "The Book Your Church Doesn't Want You to Read."

Even in the summer, however, he doesn't have much idle time as he already is planning for the fall semester.

Most of his time, though, is devoted to taking care of his customers.

While many of them are satisfied, Hare said he has received complaints about everything from the highlighting in the used books to Freud's theories.

"Students who sell back their books complain about not getting enough money for them. Then they say, 'It sucked anyway and the course sucked and the professor sucked,'" he said.

Hare sighs as he talks about intolerant customers.

"We're humans too," he said. "I wish students would realize that."

Plug pulled on radio rebel Stern

CLEVELAND (AP) — Somebody finally pulled the plug on radio big-mouth Howard Stern.

Police arrested an employee of a rival station Friday after Stern's broadcast was briefly interrupted by a cut cable.

Stern's New York City-based show is syndicated to stations in several other cities, including WNCX-FM in Cleveland. He came here to promote his recent ratings victory over morning programs on WMJI-FM and WMSM-FM.

About 5,000 rowdy fans stood outside a nightclub featuring female strippers for a glimpse of Stern.

Howard Stern

John Gorman, operations manager at WMSM, said the station didn't condone the broadcast interruption and would discipline any employee who was involved.

Knicks fan Simon needs TV before he can perform

DALLAS (AP) — On the road Paul Simon is a New Yorker of simple needs: just a TV to watch the Knicks battle for the pro basketball championship.

That was the singer-songwriter's lone request when he learned his dressing room at the Meyerson Symphony Center lacked a television set.

While Simon was on stage Friday, his beloved New York Knicks were playing Game 2 of the National Basketball Association finals against the Houston Rockets.

Simon asked the Hotel Crescent Court, where he was staying, for the loan of a set to watch the game during his moments offstage.

Streisand's toaster, canteen snapped up at auction

COMMERCE, Calif. (AP) — The $190 canteen, the $90 toaster and the $440 cosmetics case were anything but castoffs to Barbra Streisand's followers.

"There were things that were affordable for the average fan," Howard Zellman, a spokesman for A.N. Abell Auction Co., said after Sunday's auction of the singer's trinkets. "We had a very excited fan who purchased a waffle iron for $35 dollars."

Other items snapped up included a 17-foot floral sectional sofa, which sold for $1,100; a green-dyed mink vest, which went for $495; and a hot fudge maker that brought in $99.

Streisand put the items up for auction after clearing them out of the houses she donated to the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy earlier this year.

Zellman said he did not know where the proceeds will go.

Hasselhoff says Baywatch is 'good quality show'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Hasselhoff says his bikini-studded TV show about lifeguards is a lot better than people think.

"Anyone who makes fun of 'Baywatch' is doing it out of ignorance. This is a good quality show," Hasselhoff, who plays lifeguard Mitch Buchanan and is the syndicated show's executive producer, said in Saturday's Daily News.

Hasselhoff was responding to frequent jabs by the likes of David Letterman and Jay Leno, who has a running gag called "Jaywatch."

UI grad student wins national computer science fellowship

Eric Van Wyk, a UI graduate student in computer science and research assistant in Weeg Computing Center's Advanced Research Computing Services, has received a High Performance Computing and Communications fellowship from the 1994 NASA Graduate Student Researchers Program at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif.

About five computer science graduates annually receive the award from the NASA program, designed to accelerate the development and application of high performance computing systems.

NASA initiated the GSRP in 1980 to cultivate additional research ties to the academic community and to support promising students pursuing advanced degrees in science and engineering.

Van Wyk is conducting his research with Teodor Rus, a UI professor of computer science, in the area of interactive discovery of parallelism in computer programs.

His work is designed to help programmers take advantage of the multiple processors found in modern supercomputers. The award provides a stipend, tuition and travel funds.

UI composition student receives national ASCAP scholarship

Chee Swen Cheng, a graduate student in the UI School of Music, has been selected to receive a scholarship in composition from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

The UI School of Music was one of 14 institutions selected in the 1993-94 academic year to receive an ASCAP-Raymond Hubbell Music Scholarship Award. The $1,250 award was given to the School of Music to be conferred on an outstanding young composer.

Cheng, who received his bachelor's degree in composition from the UI in May, is a native of Jahor, Malaysia.

He first became interested in composition as a sophomore in the School of Music when he took a composition class. Since then, his development as a composer has been "rapid and dramatic," according to Associate Professor David Gompper, the director of the UI Center for New Music and Cheng's composition teacher.

He plans to continue his musical education in the graduate program in composition at the UI, and he wishes to make a career of composing and teaching.

Oakdale facility fascinates regents

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

UI faculty members hosted the Iowa state Board of Regents to a show and tell of sorts at UI Oakdale Research Campus and Research Park Monday afternoon in hopes of gaining their approval for future development of the site.

"The regents are interested in what is going on, particularly with the technology programs," associate director of University Relations Tom Bauer said. "We just want to let them know what is happening and respond to their questions."

The Oakdale Research Campus is located just off Highway 965, approximately three miles west of the UI's central campus. The park's mission is to promote interaction between corporate and university researchers and scientists in such fields as pharmaceuticals, molecular and cellular biology, industrial bioprocessing and computer simulation.

Larry Wilson, UI associate director of Planning and Administrative Services, presented a master plan to the regents for proposed growth and improvements.

As with any part of the UI campus, any proposed improvements and developments must be approved by the regents before they can be implemented.

Wilson proposed several improvements, including:

- Expanded parking.
- Updating the campus's currently confusing road system.
- And enhancing the appearance and identity of the campus.

"It is important to remember that Oakdale is part of the main campus," Wilson said, expressing concern that Oakdale meet the same standards of appearance as the rest of campus. "Many of the buildings used over time should be phased out and replaced."

The campus is primarily supported from grants and external sources, one of the largest being the Wallace Technology Transfer Foundation which appropriates $321,000 for facilities at Oakdale, Bauer said.

UI Vice President for Research David Skorton called Oakdale a "partnership between the state, the city of Coralville, the university and private corporations."

The three private corporations most directly involved with the research facility are Computer Aided Design Software Inc., Neural Applications Corp. and Breakthrough Inc.

"Each of these companies are integrally woven into the fabric of the general university as well," Skorton said.

Computer Aided Design Software Inc. develops software that simulates mechanical design. The research is a spin-off of similar efforts conducted at the UI. The programs make it easier and less expensive for companies, for example, to develop new machines. Neural Applications Inc. produces computer software that can learn from its own mistakes. The company was created based on graduate research conducted by a Quad Cities native. Breakthrough Inc., developed by a UI speech and pathology doctoral student, produces early learning software for kindergarten through second-grade students and takes them through the process of learning to read.

Oakdale also has been the home of the Center for Biocatalysis and Bioprocessing since its development in 1983. Directed by UI Professor of biocatalysis and bioprocessing John Rosazza, the state of the art laboratory is a premier center for research.

There, ground-breaking work in dealing with hazardous waste is being conducted, among other things.

The regents seemed to be impressed. President Marvin Berenstein said Oakdale is well worth the investment.

"It is marvelous and I am really excited about it," Berenstein said. "It is a coordination between research and education and is an exemplary fact that one makes the other better. It has met the goals and aspirations many times, and it can do nothing but get better."

City Council tantalized by proposed new hotel

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

Developers of a possible new $6 million suite-style hotel on the corner of Dubuque and Burlington streets say they "don't want it to be just another Holiday Inn."

Kevin Hannick of Lepic-Kroeger Realtors presented the idea at Tuesday night's Iowa City City Council meeting, saying the site would be excellent because of its proximity to downtown. He also estimated it would attract an additional $2 million to $3 million in revenue to downtown businesses.

The six-story structure would have 90 to 100 suites and an underground parking area for office space on the first floor, Hannick said. No bar or restaurant would be located in the hotel in what he called a "conscious effort" to draw people to the downtown area.

The suite-style rooms would offer something different from the hotel's nearest competitor, Holiday Inn, located across the street. Hannick described potential clientele as business visitors and families with children, but he said rooms won't be as expensive as Embassy Suites.

In addressing the Council, Han-nick said the area needs commercial zoning and assurance for necessary parking in city ramps before the project can move forward. The Council agreed to put the zoning issue before the planning and zoning commission and route the parking issue to Joe Fowler, the director of parking and transit.

Council member Jim Throgmorton said, "It's a very interesting project, and there's a lot of potential for downtown. I support the concept."

Hannick said he didn't want to discuss tax abatement during his presentation and wouldn't say whether any decision on it would affect the project.

Construction time frames are dependent on the Council, but Hannick said it could start as early as this year.

The summer-film scorecard so far: F for effort, B for potential

John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Business at movie theaters this spring was the worst in seven years. There was no "Indecent Proposal" or "Basic Instinct" — the last two springs' hits. The season's most profitable film wasn't even from a major studio — it was Gramercy's "Four Weddings and a Funeral."

The dismal returns have placed an unusually strong emphasis on the summer season, in which more than 40 percent of the year's tickets are sold. But as we approach the halfway point in the 1994 movie campaign, the studios' scorecards leave a lot to be desired, both recently and for the near future:

COLUMBIA: Bob Hope has better legs than Columbia's movies. The studio's output for the year so far consists of two financial bombs: "I'll Do Anything" and "My Girl 2."

Things may or may not be looking up for the studio with the much-rewritten and -delayed "Wolf," with Jack Nicholson and Michelle Pfeiffer. It also has "Karate Kid 4" and "Blankman."
Score: F. Summer potential: B.

DISNEY: Disney's spring titles "The Inkwell" and "White Fang 2" among them — fared poorly both with critics and ticket buyers. What Disney lacked in quality, it made up for with quantity, and with relentless marketing squeezed millions out of "D2: The Mighty Ducks" and "Blank Check."

Disney should enjoy a busy summer, thanks mostly to its new animated film, "The Lion King." The impact of this movie cannot be measured at the box office alone: Like "Aladdin," "The Lion King" should generate millions of profits from merchandise and the sound-track album.

In the live-action vein, there's "I Love Trouble," starring Julia Roberts and Nick Nolte; a remake of "Angels in the Outfield" starring Danny Glover; Bruce Willis in the steamy "Color of Night"; and Danny DeVito in "Renaissance Man," which made $5.6 million in its debut weekend.

Score: B-. Summer potential: A.

MGM: In the midst of a top-to-bottom overhaul, MGM is almost finished releasing movies produced by previous management. Just as well, since few of these holdovers have performed. Both "Clean Slate" and "That's Entertainment III" disappeared quickly this spring.

MGM has stepped up production and will release three movies this summer: Macaulay Culkin in "Getting Even With Dad," Jeff Bridges and Tommy Lee Jones in "Blown Away" and Charles Grodin in "It Runs in the Family." "Blown Away" faces formidable competition as an action film, but MGM is confident.
Score: F. Summer potential: C.

PARAMOUNT: Virtually silent through the spring, Paramount released "Naked Gun 33 1/3" with some returns and bombed with "Jimmy Hollywood." Its first summer film, "Beverly Hills Cop 3," opened weakly and is now dying.

Paramount has a solid summer lineup, however, with Tom Hanks in "Forrest Gump," Harrison Ford in "Clear and Present Danger" and the "Free Willy"-like seal story "Andre." There's one crapshoot: a movie version of "Lassie."
Score: D. Summer potential: A-

TRISTAR: "Guarding Tess" is TriStar's most successful film — and it's hardly a leader, with a mild $26.6 million to date. The company's other films this season pretty much fizzled: "Threesome," "Cops and Robbers" and "3 Ninjas Kick Back."
TriStar's summer lineup is thin

Andrew Cooper/Warner Bros.

"Maverick," "The Flintstones," "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" and a few other films found audiences this spring, but overall, box-office receipts have been as dismal as the lackluster films offered up by the major studios. There's some hope for the summer, however, with potential blockbusters like "True Lies," "The Lion King" and "The Client" coming up to bat.

with some potential. Andrew Bergman, who directed "Honey-moon in Vegas," returns with the comedy "It Could Happen to You." With "Wagons East," TriStar's challenge is selling a comedy whose star — John Candy — died making it.
Score: D. Potential: D+.

20TH CENTURY FOX: Fox needs a good summer season. Its early 1994 releases — including "Sugar Hill," "Bad Girls," "PCU" and "Ghost in the Machine" — have failed miserably.
The studio is betting heavily on Keanu Reeves — whose action film "Speed" was moved up two months because Fox executives like it so much — and on the $100 million-plus "True Lies," the latest from the "Terminator" actor-director team of Arnold Schwarzenegger and James Cameron.

Also on the summer docket is "Airheads," described as a "Dog Day Afternoon" in a heavy-metal radio station.
Score: F. Potential: B+.

UNIVERSAL: The media may never give "The Flintstones" the credit it deserves, but the film did kick off the summer season with a huge opening of $37.2 million and had earned $62.5 million in just two weeks.

Universal needed it, too: The studio's spring release "The Paper" made $35.1 million but underperformed. Spike Lee's "Crooklyn" has brought in a lifeless $10.2 million.

Universal has three releases this summer: Woody Harrelson's "The Cowboy Way," which made $5 million in its debut weekend; Alec Baldwin as "The Shadow"; and a remake of the old Hal Roach movie series "Little Rascals."
Score: C. Potential: B+.

WARNER BROS.: Consistently Hollywood's top studio, Warner had an uneven spring: Michael Jordan had more baseball hits than "Being Human" had paying customers. But "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" grossed more than $71 million, and "Maverick" is playing well, making $55.5 million in three weeks.

The big problem at the Burbank studio is trying to guess which of its summer films will be the most popular: Kevin Costner in the Western "Wyatt Earp," Susan Sarandon in "The Client" or the horse film "Black Beauty."
Score: B-. Potential: A-

FILM REVIEW

Richard Foreman/20th Century Fox

LAPD cop Jack Traven (Keanu Reeves) and bystander Annie (Sandra Bullock) are trapped aboard a booby-trapped bus in the surprisingly respectable action film "Speed."

'Speed' overcomes all weaknesses with intense action, gripping script

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

It may be difficult to convince audiences that an action film starring Keanu Reeves, of all people, could be a major hit. It may be even harder once they know the premise involves a mad bomber and a booby-trapped bus. But despite all probabilities, "Speed" wins out as the summer's first major surprise.

Reeves' track record is not among the best — typed as a teen-idol hit-maker ever since "Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure," he often ends up in roles too complex for the scope of his talents. His stiff, uncomfortable "serious" acting has only occasionally served him well — in films like "Dangerous Liaisons" and "My Own Private Idaho," where his character was supposed to be tense, emotionless and rigid.

The trend continues with "Speed." Reeves stars as Jack Traven, a heroic LAPD cop (the locale is hammered home often enough to make the film look like a post-Rodney King PR stunt) forced to deal with the ransom demands of terrorist Howard Payne (Dennis "Blue Velvet" Hopper). Infuriated by Jack's interference with a carefully planned bombing, Payne launches a bizarre new plot, this time involving a city transit bus set to explode if it goes under 50 mph.

The premise is almost comical in description, but it works out well in execution — the minimum speed of the bus provides a minimum speed for the story line, which hits an impressive pace early on and rarely slows until the closing credits roll. The worst of Reeves' acting, along with the expected action-film flaws, are left in the dust.

Make no mistake, the flaws are undeniably there: Jack has the backing of the entire L.A. SWAT division, including smarter partner Harry Temple (Jeff Daniels of "The Butcher's Wife"), but somehow ends up doing everything himself, resulting in some severe stretches in logic. Plot points are introduced, then overlooked. Various laws of physics and electronics are ignored or callously massacred.

But action films like "Die Hard" and "Aliens" overcame such problems with high-speed activity, intense visuals and hyper, morbid humor, and "Speed" follows in their footsteps. First-time screenwriter Graham Yost peppers his script with snappy, diverting foxtrot humor as well as a string of heart-stopping miniclimaxes, repeatedly building and breaking tension while always maintaining his story's integrity.

And first-time director Jan De Bont, thanks to his extensive experience as director of photography for visual feasts like "Flatliners," "Black Rain" and "Die Hard," has a strong knack for striking images and relentless pacing.

Supported by two such determined talents — not to mention Hopper's chilling performance as the requisite bad guy and Sandra Bullock's ("Demolition Man") competence as the inevitable romantic interest — even Reeves can't quite fail. His unexpressiveness fits the character enough to be mostly unembarrassing; he doesn't stand out as a reason to see the film, but audiences shouldn't let him drive them away.

On the most shallow surface level, "Speed" may not seem to have a lot in its favor for anyone but determined Keanu fans and die-hard action freaks. But despite every strike against it — a novice writer and director, the Hollywood summer-fluff status, the now-obligatory overdone hype and the worst weaknesses of a miscast star — the film manages to be that rarest of things: an action film so funny, forceful and captivating that it rises above the pack.

MFA exhibit reflects promising talents

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

The UI Museum of Art's "MFA Exhibition 1993-1994" seems more like a tantalizing preview than a self-sufficient art exhibit. The pieces on display, while perfectly adequate in and of themselves, are exciting mainly for the flashes of emerging talent which they reflect.

The only common thread running through the works in "MFA Exhibition" is the fact that all their creators are recent graduates of the School of Art and Art History. The pieces themselves represent such disparate forms as metalwork, painting and multimedia, and range from utterly straightforward to annoyingly opaque.

Some of the items are well-crafted but reflect no particular effort to push the boundaries of their forms. Jeffrey Fullam's "Cleaning Man," Stephen Robinson's "Double-Lidded Tobacco Jar" and Scott Dolan's "Reader" are all solid examples of their respective media. Most of the other works, however, are earnest, generally successful attempts to tweak artistic traditions.

Few (if any) of the experimental pieces contain dramatic deviations from conventional form or technique. With the exception of Colin Ives' computer-animated "Figures of Speech" and Gu Wei Lee's Flexiglass "The 'Between' Dimension," the pieces represent mild probing around the boundaries of established media rather than immersion in "new" or unusual forms. (For example, Leon Johnson uses small snippets of text to make paper-making seem visually interesting in his puckish "Absolution Pool.") This exploration permits the artists to show flashes of thematic innovation while keeping their works rooted in established techniques.

Of course, it's easier to make artistic missteps when working around the fringes, and most of the pieces do have conspicuous flaws. Fortunately, the creative latitude that allowed the artists to make these mistakes also allows them to inject ideas and forms which overshadow the questionable elements. Megan O'Connell's video "Thinking With the Mouth" is long enough to border on self-indulgent, and "Figures of Speech" is marred by Ives' petulant complaint that written these are "symptomatic of a larger cultural privileging of language"; however, both pieces are so thought-provoking that objective viewers will probably be willing to overlook these minor foibles.

The only serious error in presentation is the absence of background information about the works and their creators. An explanatory guidebook including comments by the creators could help clear up the ambiguity in certain pieces. (For example, it's difficult to tell whether Gregory Smith's suitcase sculpture, "The Journey is the Destination," is an ironic comment on modern art or an unexciting "gimmick" piece.)

The best thing about "MFA Exhibition 1993-1994" is the fact that it captures an intermediate stage in the development of several up-and-coming artists. It contains pieces that are worth seeing on their own merits, but it also hints at bigger and better things to come.

"MFA Exhibition 1993-1994" will run through June 19 at the UI Museum of Art.

REGISTRATION DOLLS

Both Clark and Curtis said this is their first summer in Iowa City, but while Clark is sticking around to enjoy the extra freedom, Curtis said she hopes taking a summer class will allow her to graduate sooner.

"Basically, I'm just trying to get out as fast as I can," she said. "I've had so many schedule conflicts that I'm still going to be here a year longer, but this should help cut down my load each semester."

Although Monday was the last day to register directly through ISIS, students may still drop and add classes with no penalty until June 23.

Me dolls, are now sold across the country, including right here at the UI's University Book Store.

"Since it is anatomically impossible to achieve a typical fashion doll shape, little girls who play with Barbies develop unrealistic expectations of themselves," said Norma Linsenman-Schub, one of the creators of the Happy To Be Me concept. "We think they need healthier role models."

There are two dolls on the market: Ali Marie, a brunette, and Jessica Lyn, a blonde. Ali has a more rounded tummy and Jessica has a smaller bust, although both are Caucasians and have relatively thin frames.

Ali and Jessica come with storybooks depicting their complex life stories and demonstrating their creative and independent spirits.

"Jessica adores animals, loves old things, including old people. She's a real humanist, and she's originally from the South," Linsenman-Schub said. "Ali Marie is Italian of descent; she comes from a single-parent family. She's highly creative and dramatic. She loves chocolate and also loves to cook."

Jodi Klaassen, dietitian for Health Iowa at Student Health Service, welcomes the new concept. Klaassen said that the Barbie dolls have part of the blame for the prevalence of dietary disorders.

"The Barbie doll has an unrealistic body, and the industry is not taking into consideration different body shapes and cultures. It is definitely not helping young girls to learn to enjoy eating like normal adults," Klaassen said.

According to Health Iowa, approximately 18 percent of all women have bulimia, while between 20 to 30 percent will display bulimic behaviors. By the time they are 18 years old, 80 percent of females will have started dieting.

"At the moment, we don't encourage people to be healthy, we encourage them to look good," said Laurie Haag, the director for Women's Resource and Action Center. "The Happy To Be Me doll is a step in the right direction. Anything that goes more in the direction of realism is positive."

Sue Lafky, a journalism and mass communication professor who teaches the course Gender and the Media, isn't as impressed by the Happy To Be Me dolls.

"This is a minor change and not a revolution. A real change would be to have a variety of body types. Short, tall, large, small, a doll in a wheelchair," Lafky said.

Linsenman-Schub said Esteem hopes to create more dolls with a variety of body types but have been initially bound by a marketplace that has bought Barbies for 50 years.

"We'll have to establish Happy To Be Me as a household name. Then we can create dolls who are heavier, mother dolls, dolls who have glasses," Linsenman-Schub said.

Esteem is planning to send out three new models: an African American, an Asian American and a Caucasian grandfather doll.

The dolls and accompanying storybooks are sold at the University Book Store for $24.94. The store had 20 dolls, three of which have been sold in the past month.

protest the Hamburg Inn, but to illustrate the group's concerns to management and city officials as well.

"There's a lot of business potential out there, but most people would rather go to places they can get into easily rather than struggle to get in," he said.

David Panther, owner of the Hamburg Inn, said accessibility is an important issue to him and that the Hamburg will eventually become accessible to everyone.

"We have talked about our options," he said. "I feel it would have been more convenient to put in a new door during the construction had we been able. We still will — it is just good business."

Panther said the Hamburg's most viable option is installing a new door that is flush to the building; however, currently, city code says no doors can open out to the sidewalk for public safety reasons.

The city is working with the Hamburg to make that a possibility.

"We are looking for changes in the codes to permit that," Ron Boose, senior building inspector of Iowa City, said. "There is an interest in making buildings more handicap accessible. The process is lengthy and it is going to take effort."

According to the Americans with Disabilities Act, signed into law in 1990, commercial property that is either remodeled or built new must be accessible according to ADA standards. The Hamburg was not required by law to install an accessible door because their renovations were not considered remodeling, Boose said.

Members of the coalition said they have concerns with accessibility throughout the city, and they are not trying to single out the Hamburg.

"The only reason we picked the Hamburg is because it closed and reopened for business (without making the modifications)," Clancy said. "We are not here to point fingers — just to make others realize. Our first interest is to let businesses know that we're here and we want to frequent their establishments."

Jennifer Olson is a member of the coalition and has concerns beyond the Hamburg.

"We are trying to make Iowa City businesses aware of people with disabilities," she said. "There are a lot of businesses in Iowa City that aren't accessible. We can't even get in."

Kevin Burt, ADA / employment coordinator for Independent Living, said the restaurant had a great opportunity to become accessible because of the renovations.

"It was an opportune time," he said. "Hopefully people will see you can't scrap quality-of-life issues."

Hamburg management was adamant that changes will be made but that the changes will take time.

Manager David Cohen said the restaurant does realize the door prevents some patrons from entering the restaurant; however, they could not wait for the city to take action to reopen their business.

the crisis. However, White House officials said a scheduling problem prevented the two leaders from talking directly. Clinton was expected to put his views in writing instead of trying another call, aides said.

China has voiced reluctance to imposing sanctions on North Korea. The best the United States can probably hope is that Beijing will abstain on the vote.

At the State Department, spokesman Mike McCurry cautioned against expecting quick results.

Asked if the vote could take weeks or possibly months, McCurry said, "It could take a considerable amount of time for a discussion like that to unfold at the United Nations. This is a very important issue that many governments want to see addressed with a great deal of precision."

"We're willing to take the time necessary to try to keep a consensus issue," McCurry added.

Of North Korea's latest harsh rhetoric, McCurry said, "Many of their statements repeat statements they've made earlier, and as we've indicated in the past we are not intimidated by those statements."

Myers, the White House spokeswoman, said that Clinton's call to Yeltsin and his efforts to communicate his views to China's president are "part of the ongoing consultation on developing a sanctions proposal."

The United States wants the Security Council to impose sanctions on North Korea for repeatedly blocking efforts to monitor its nuclear program, in violation of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, to which it is a party.

North Korea has denied it is diverting nuclear fuel to build nuclear weapons.

Haiti's military may fade into background

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haiti's military is planning a "strategy of evaporation," preparing to disappear in civilian clothing and carry out guerrilla attacks rather than confront a U.S.-led invading force, sources close to the military say.

The plan reflects the seriousness with which Haiti's military leadership considers the possibility of an invasion to reinstate exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. President Clinton has not ruled out intervention if army commander Raoul Cedras does not step down as he pledged under a U.N. peace plan.

The strategy is already in effect at many of the 20-odd posts and stations in greater Port-au-Prince, one source said. Many of the 1,500 armed servicemen in the capital now wear civilian clothing and are mixing with the population.

While the retreat of Haiti's poorly armed 7,400-member military makes sense given the firepower of an invading force, it is unclear whether ground troops would engage in guerrilla warfare.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity in interviews over the past week, said only a few snipers would be needed for guerrilla attacks. They hoped any retaliation by invaders would cause indiscriminate casualties among ordinary Haitians, cutting support for the invasion.

There has been no formal announcement, but the "strategy of evaporation" has been discussed among senior military leaders and key supporters of Aristide's overthrow in 1991. It was not clear when or where the strategy originated.

In a nationwide address Sunday, the military-backed president, Emile Jonassaint, recalled Haiti's use of guerrilla warfare to win independence from France in 1804.

He also invoked voodoo deities and alluded to unconventional weapons such as poisons and spells to stop foreign invaders.

"We have unsuspected means" with which to fight the enemy, Jonassaint declared in a state-of-emergency message. Haiti's powerless but internationally recognized premier, Robert Malval, questioned just who the enemy was. If Haitians are helpless to liberate themselves from the "thugs," the Aristide-backed premier told private Radio Tropic FM, then help "from foreigners would be welcome."

VISIT FOSTERS GOOD WILL

Clintons host dinner for Japanese royalty

Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clintons whipped up an American show of elegance Monday to entertain the emperor and empress of Japan at a red-carpet, white-tie state dinner in the White House rose garden.

Not even a Washington heat wave dampened the display of good will between the World War II enemies. Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko were joining more than 150 guests for a sunset dinner in a white air-conditioned tent. High humidity made the 92-degree midafternoon temperature feel like 111.

The sides of the tent opened to roses, geraniums and crab apple trees whose branches are interwoven with thousands of tiny white lights. The doors were framed by lace-topped hydrangeas. White House florists produced topiary rose trees for the occasion.

It was the first state dinner of the Clinton administration, and White House aides and protocol officers have agonized over every detail for weeks.

"For a visit like this, you can't do too much work and there can't be too much planning," said Neel Lattimore, Hillary Rodham Clinton's deputy press secretary. "It's very important, a tremendous tradition and a tremendous honor. Protocol plays a tremendous role."

In the tradition of such occasions, it was a day of grand entrances, the royal couple's coming onto a red carpet at the White House north portico — the entrance facing Pennsylvania Avenue.

After a reception in the family quarters, the schedule had the two couples descending the Grand Staircase for a receiving line in the foyer. Then, on the way to dinner, another grand entrance, this time down the stairs on the south side of the White House.

Cellist Mstislav Rostropovich, who is retiring as conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra and returning to his native Russia, was the performer for the night's entertainment in the East Room.

Akihito is only the second Japanese emperor to visit the United States. His father, Hirohito, was entertained in 1975 at a state dinner given by then-President Ford.

The ceremonial day began mid-morning with a blare of trumpets, a 21-gun salute and an honor guard representing all the U.S. military services.

Diplomats, Cabinet officials and members of Congress were among 4,000 guests who stood under a hot sun on the South Lawn.

"The destinies of our two peoples are inextricably linked," Clinton told the emperor. The president recalled that in 1953 when Akihito was crown prince he visited the United States and "nations were rebuilding from the devastation of war, and vivid memories of that conflict divided our two people."

"Today, our two countries have overcome the deplorable rupture brought about by war," responded the emperor.

"The Japanese people will not forget the generosity of support which the United States extended to my country after World War II," he said, thanking his hosts for "the indispensable role played by the United States in assuring Japan's security and world peace for the past half-century."

The United States and Japan are the world's two leading economic powers, and their relations are often marked by tension over trade. Japan also is a key player in efforts to find a peaceful solution to the confrontation with North Korea over its nuclear program.

Clinton has supported giving Japan a permanent seat on the U.N. Security Council.

But substantive issues between the two countries were not on the emperor's agenda. He is limited by the Japanese constitution to a ceremonial role in government.

Akihito's 16-day visit to the United States is designed to promote good will between the two countries. His schedule is weighted toward visits to museums and schools and opportunities for contacts with a wide range of Americans.

The royal couple will visit a suburban elementary school today where some science courses are taught in Japanese. They leave Washington on Wednesday for a visit to the University of Virginia and nearby Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson.

Clintons questioned separately on Whitewater, Foster suicide

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton and his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, were put under oath by federal investigators and questioned in separate interviews about the Whitewater affair and the suicide of deputy counsel Vincent Foster.

The president was questioned for 90 minutes Sunday by Whitewater special counsel Robert Fiske and an assistant. Later, Rodham Clinton was interviewed for an hour. Both sessions took place in the White House residence.

While extremely rare, it wasn't the first time a president was questioned under oath. Ronald Reagan and then-Vice President George Bush gave sworn testimony about the Iran-Contra affair. Jimmy Carter also gave sworn testimony in investigations.

The Clintons were questioned by Fiske about events surrounding the death of Foster, a close friend who once was a law partner with the first lady.

They also were interviewed about White House contacts with Treasury regulators about the status of an investigation into a failed Arkansas thrift owned by the Clintons' Whitewater business partner.

CONFESSION DOUBTED

Terrorist claims responsibility at trial of bombing Flight 103

Samir F. Ghattas
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A Palestinian terrorist being tried in the assassination of a Jordanian diplomat stunned a Beirut courtroom Monday when he claimed he blew up Pan Am Flight 103 in 1988.

The investigating magistrate quickly cast doubt on the claim. Parents of Flight 103 victims also expressed skepticism, speculating it could be an attempt to take international heat off Libya over the bombing that killed 270 people. The bombing of the jetliner over Lockerbie, Scotland, was first linked to Iran and then Syria. But U.S. and British authorities later charged two alleged Libyan intelligence agents, and the U.N. Security Council has imposed sanctions on Libya in an attempt to force their extradition for trial.

Youssef Shaaban, 29, is a follower of the Fatah Revolutionary Council, which is headed by terrorist Abu Nidal, who is believed to be living in Libya. Shaaban offered no details to substantiate his claim to have staged the Pan Am bombing.

"I personally blew up the Lockerbie plane," Shaaban told the six-person Judicial Council, the highest trial court in Lebanon. "I've told the investigating magistrate about it before, but my confession wasn't documented. I say it again now."

The court, presided over by Judge Philip Khairallah, admitted the confession into the minutes without comment. The trial later recessed for a week.

Examining Magistrate Saeed Mirza, who interrogated Shaaban before charging him in the Jan. 29 assassination of Jordanian diplomat Naeb Imran Maaytah, denied the suspect ever mentioned the Lockerbie bombing before.

"It's a mere lie. Had Youssef Shaaban confessed to such a case that still preoccupies the world, I would have given it utmost priority and investigated promptly," Mirza told the Associated Press. "I believe this confession is for the purpose of deception and aims at misleading the investigation, nothing more."

He said he was ready to interrogate Shaaban "and see what information he has on the Pan Am bombing."

A bomb ripped apart the Pan Am Boeing 747 over Scotland on Dec. 21, 1988, as it flew from London toward New York. All 259 people aboard and 11 people on the ground died.

"It's a very convenient confession that so far seems to have absolutely no validity," said Peter Lowenstein of Morristown, N.J., whose 21-year-old son, Alexander, was killed on the plane.

Robert Hunt of Webster, N.Y., whose daughter, Karen, was another victim, said he was skeptical because Shaaban did not offer any corroboration. "Maybe he is trying to divert attention from Libya."

Jim Swire, a spokesman for British relatives of Lockerbie victims, said Shaaban's claim "should be regarded with grave suspicion." Swire's daughter Flora died in the bombing.

Lebanese court sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, speculated Shaaban might have been instructed by Abu Nidal to make the claim to help Libya, chief backer of Nidal's terrorist group.

Abdel Basset Ali Megrahi and Lamem Khalifa Fhimah, both suspected Libyan intelligence agents, have been charged in Britain and the United States in the bombing.

In London, a Foreign Office statement said that "as we have said many times in the past, we believe there is a case to be answered in a court in Scotland or the United States by the two Libyans."

There was no immediate comment by the U.S. government.

Policemen patrol the site of the crashed Pan Am 747 at Lockerbie, Scotland, Dec. 26, 1988. Youssef Shaaban, 29, of Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council faction, told a Beirut court Monday that he carried out the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, killing 270 people. The claim could not immediately be verified. The bombing has in the past been blamed on Iran, Libya and Syria.

have demanded Libya hand over the two suspects for trial in either country. After Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy refused to comply, the Security Council imposed sanctions against Libya in April 1992. Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabri el-Banna, is wanted by the United States, European nations and some Arab countries for a long list of atrocities in which hundreds of people have been killed or wounded. The most infamous of his attacks were the simultaneous assaults on Vienna and Rome airports Dec. 27, 1985, in which 17 people died.

HARASSMENT COMPLAINTS MADE EARLIER

Air Force ends criminal inquiry on sergeant charging retaliation

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force on Monday halted a criminal investigation of a sergeant who claimed the probe was merely a reprisal for her testifying about on-the-job sexual harassment

Air Force secretary Sheila Widnall also granted the request of Sgt. Zenaida Martinez that she be trained as an equal opportunity officer. Widnall met with Martinez for more than an hour at the Pentagon after the 27-year-old military police officer charged that her superiors were trying to scuttle her career after she publicly complained about sexual harassment.

The meeting came under pressure from lawmakers on Capitol Hill who were outraged by the Martinez case. Lawmakers were particularly incensed because Martinez's latest run-in with her superiors stemmed from an appearance she made in March before the House Armed Services Committee in a hearing on harassment.

After returning to her base at Mildenhall, England, from that appearance, Martinez submitted a $200 taxicab receipt which the Air Force paid. Earlier this month her superiors informed her that she was under criminal investigation over the cab fare.

Widnall told Martinez that Gen. Robert Oaks, the Air Force European commander, reviewed the case and ordered the criminal investigation halted. Widnall also said that orders issued last week requiring Martinez to transfer from Mildenhall to McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey had been rescinded.

Widnall then asked Martinez if she wanted to stay in the Air Force and what the service could do to help her career. Martinez said she wanted to train to become an equal opportunity officer. Widnall agreed to make the arrangements. According to Susan Barnes, Martinez's attorney, Widnall offered no apology and did not discuss whether any officers at Mildenhall would be punished.

"I'm very grateful that she took an interest," Martinez said of Widnall. "But I want a career, and that means we need to enforce these sexual harassment laws. There's nothing to prevent something like this happening to me again."

Associated Press

Air Force Sgt. Zenaida Martinez stands outside the Pentagon Monday. Martinez, 27, a military police officer based at Mildenhall Air Force Base in England, filed a formal complaint with the Defense Department inspector general's office last week claiming sexual harassment. Martinez said her superiors had threatened her career over a taxicab voucher.

Court protects signs as free speech

Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court voted unanimously Monday to curb the power of communities to ban signs on private property, citing "a special respect for individual liberty in the home."

The court ruled in favor of a Ladue, Mo., woman who ran afoul of a city ordinance by pleading for peace in the Persian Gulf on a notebook-sized sign in her home's front window.

The St. Louis suburb, a community of mansions and tree-lined streets, went too far in seeking to avoid visual blight and protect real estate values, the court said.

"A special respect for individual liberty in the home has long been part of our culture and our law," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote.

"That principle has special resonance when the government seeks to constrain a person's ability to speak there," he said. "Most Americans would be understandably dismayed, given that tradition, to learn that it was illegal to display from their front window an 8-by-11-inch sign expressing their political views."

That's what happened to Margaret Gilileo, who was cited in 1991 for violating Ladue's anti-sign ordinance after she posted the sign in her bedroom window. It read: "For Peace in the Gulf."

Told about Monday's decision, Gilileo said she was "dancing for joy."

She said she planned to post a sign in her yard stating "Gilileo for Congress." She's one of three Democrats seeking the party's nomination to run against incumbent Rep. James Talent, a Republican.

The court's decision focused on residential signs, but much of its rationale seemed to strengthen constitutional barriers as well to a community banning all commercial signs.

The city of Ladue had made all political signs on private property illegal, no matter what size. So were garage-sale signs, signs seeking lost pets, bake-sale and school-picnic signs, happy birthday and welcome home signs.

Among those allowed are traffic and for-sale signs.

Gilileo challenged the ordinance and won in lower courts. But the city's appeal was accepted by the nation's highest court last October.

Writing for the court Monday, Stevens acknowledged that signs cause special free speech problems.

"Unlike oral speech, signs take up space and may obstruct views, distract motorists, displace alternative uses for land and pose other problems that call for regulation," he said.

WIMBLEDON

Seedings favor ex-champions

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Andre Agassi and Todd Martin were the main beneficiaries Monday when the seedings were announced for Wimbledon.

Agassi, champion two years ago, was made No. 12 — five places above his world ranking. The flamboyant American has dropped in the rankings due to a long layoff at the start of the year following wrist surgery.

Martin, who beat Pete Sampras on Sunday in the finale of the Queen's Club tournament, was rewarded with the No. 6 seeding, three spots above his world ranking.

As expected, defending champions Sampras and Steffi Graf were chosen as the top seeds for the tournament, which starts Monday.

But, while Wimbledon officials stayed with the world rankings for all 16 women's seeds, they departed from the men's list to benefit players as Agassi, Martin, Boris Becker, Jim Courier and Goran Ivanisevic at the expense of higher-ranked clay-court specialists.

Wimbledon is the only one of the four Grand Slam tournaments which reserves the right to deviate from the world rankings in the seedings. The changes are designed mainly to take into consideration a player's record on grass.

The top three men's seeds went according to the rankings: Sampras, Michael Stich and Stefan Edberg. But from then on, the seedings varied.

Three-time Wimbledon champion Becker's proven grass-court prowess earned him the No. 7 seed, though he is ranked 10th.

Courier, runner-up at Wimbledon last year, was seeded fifth, two places above his ranking.

Ivanisevic, runner-up in 1992, was seeded one spot ahead of his ranking at No. 4.

Associated Press
Jim Courier returns a ball Monday at the in the International Grass Court Championship. Courier is a fifth seed at Wimbledon.

ASU's Brock dies after cancer bout

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Arizona State baseball coach Jim Brock was remembered Monday as a good friend and an important influence on his sport.

Brock, one of the winningest coaches in college baseball history, died Sunday night after a yearlong battle with liver and colon cancer. He was 57.

"I feel a deep personal regret for the loss of a great man and a great coach," Arizona State athletic director Charles Harris said Monday. "Jim was a person of principles and of values who has left an undeniable mark on the people he touched in his 23 years as head coach at Arizona State University."

A private memorial service was scheduled for Wednesday at Grace Community Church in Tempe. The family asked that donations in his memory be made to the American Cancer Society and to the ASU foundation for Packard Stadium improvements.

Jerry Kindall, baseball coach of rival University of Arizona, called Brock a good friend.

"On the field we were adversaries, but we were loyal adversaries, loyal to one another," Kindall said. "I learned a great deal from him."

Kindall said he last talked to Brock a week before his death while in Omaha, Neb., at the College World Series. Kindall said Brock told him he was weaker, but his mind was still sharp.

"I'm not at all surprised he was in the dugout in Omaha, that he hung in there so long, when he felt so badly," Kindall said.

Arizona State hitting coach John Pierson said Brock wanted to be in Omaha, even if it was for just the first of the Sun Devils' three games in the double-elimination tournament.

"He loved that place," Pierson said. "He was at home there." In

Keenan stays with Rangers

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mike Keenan will return to coach the New York Rangers for another season, he said Monday, knocking down persistent reports that he will take the vacant Detroit Red Wings job.

"I'm going to be the coach of the New York Rangers next year unless somebody else tells me otherwise, which I wouldn't anticipate," said Keenan, who took the Rangers to the Stanley Cup finals this season in his first as coach.

Published reports in New York have speculated that Keenan will become both the Red Wings coach and general manager before the month is out. He said at a news conference that he didn't know where the reports originated, but said they probably date back to last year, when he became the Rangers coach.

"A lot of this goes back to the transactions and-or the negotiations that took place before I came here," Keenan said. "That speculation has arisen from that. Detroit showed some interest when the New York Rangers hired me."

"Because there is a vacancy now and because I was the general manager and coach before in Chicago, people have made that assumption."

Keenan said he chalked the whole misunderstanding up to being in "a high-profile job or the high-profile situation that you have in New York, and not only that, but we're in the Stanley Cup finals."

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Williams' 23rd ends four-game skid

Associated Press
SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams hit his National League-leading 23rd home run and William VanLandingham and three relievers combined on an eight-hitter as the San Francisco Giants beat the Houston Astros 5-2 Monday.
 The Giants, who totaled five runs in being swept by San Diego last weekend, also got a home run from Todd Benzinger and a base-running boost from Barry Bonds in ending their four-game losing streak.
 VanLandingham (2-0) allowed two runs on four hits over 6 2/3 innings in his fourth major league start. He walked four and struck out five. Dave Burba and Mike Jackson followed, and Rod Beck worked the ninth for his 13th save.
 Beck did allow a two-run homer by Andujar Cedeno, his eighth, in the ninth inning, and walked James Mouton before a bit of luck helped him get the final out. That came when Kevin Bass hit a grounder with Mouton running, and the ball bounced up and hit Mouton, the interference providing the final out.
 Bonds singled to start the fourth, and his aggressive base running led to two runs that put San Francisco ahead to stay, 3-2.

 Royce Clayton followed with a single, and Bonds tried for third, prompting a throw from Mouton, the center fielder. When the ball short-hopped Ken Caminiti, Bonds raced home and Clayton reached third. Steve Scarsone's ground-out then scored Clayton.
Mets 4, Phillies 3
NEW YORK — Bret Saberhagen pitched five-hit ball for seven innings and helped his cause with a pair of timely bunts Monday night, leading the New York Mets to a victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.
 Saberhagen (7-3) gave up two runs, struck out six and walked one to win for the third time in his last four decisions. Josias Manzanillo fanned the side in the eighth, and John Franco pitched a shaky ninth for his 15th save and the 251st of his career, one shy of Dave Righetti's record for saves by a left-hander.
 Franco retired the first two batters in the ninth, then allowed consecutive singles by Pete Incaviglia, Lenny Dykstra and Mariano Duncan to make it 4-3. He then retired Ricky Jordan on a diving catch by center fielder Ryan Thompson.
 David West (2-6) allowed two runs and four hits in five innings.

 Saberhagen had a hand in the Mets' first two runs. He scored the first after a bunt single with one out in the third, took third on Jose Vizcaino's single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Kelly Stinnett.
 In the fifth, Saberhagen sacrificed after Thompson drew a one-out walk. Thompson scored when Phillies third baseman Kim Batiste fielded Vizcaino's infield hit and threw the ball into the stands.
 Batiste, who had two doubles and a single, doubled leading off the sixth and scored an out later on pinch-hitter John Kruk's double to make it 2-1.
 The Mets scored again in the bottom of the sixth. Jeff Kent reached on Batiste's fielding error, took third on David Segui's single and scored when pinch-hitter Joe Orsulak hit into a double play.
 The Phillies closed to within one again, 3-2, in the seventh. Mets third baseman Bobby Bonilla fielded Jordan's grounder and threw the ball into right for a two-base error. One out later, Jim Eisenreich hit an RBI single.
 Thompson hit an RBI single in the eighth for the Mets' final run.
Rockies 7, Braves 2
ATLANTA — Marvin Freeman did what he's done all season. Only this time it was different. It was against his former teammates, the Atlanta Braves.

 Freeman helped Colorado end its 16-game losing streak against the Braves Monday night.
 The Braves had been the only club the Rockies, in their second season, had never defeated. Atlanta went 13-0 against them last season and had won the first three games this season.
 Freeman (6-1) lowered his ERA to 2.89. He signed as a free agent with the Rockies this winter after 3 1/2 years with the Braves. The right-hander allowed eight hits and one run, didn't walk a batter and struck out three in seven innings.
 Freeman said it was the heat and humidity, more than emotion.
 The Rockies got seven hits and four runs off Tom Glavine (7-6), who walked four and struck out six in seven innings.
 "It's hard to get into a groove when you're giving up leadoff hits and walks in every inning," said Glavine. "I've thrown worse games."
 Colorado scored a run in the second on a sacrifice fly by another ex-Brave, Vinny Castilla, and added two runs in the fourth on a two-run single by Charlie Hayes.
 The Rockies fourth run came in the fifth on an RBI single by Andres Galarraga, who had four hits, raised his average to .336 and scored three runs.
 Charlie O'Brien hit a solo home run — his fourth — in the fifth inning for Atlanta, which lost for only the third time in 13 games.
 Chris Jones had a two-run double and Nelson Liriano had an RBI double in the eighth off reliever Gregg Olson to make it 7-1.
 Ryan Klesko's 10th homer, off Steve Reed in the eighth, accounted for the Braves' second run.
Cardinals 2, Marlins 1
ST. LOUIS — Tom Pagnozzi singled in Ray Lankford with one out in the ninth inning Monday night, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a victory over the slumping Florida Marlins.
 Lankford doubled with one out off Robb Nen (2-4) and Mark Whiten drew an intentional walk. Pagnozzi hit a liner to shallow right that scored Lankford when Gary Sheffield was unable to make a shoestring catch.
 Mike Perez (2-1) got the victory despite allowing an inside-the-park home run — the first in Marlins history — to Bret Barberie in the ninth. With none out, Barberie hit a 2-2 pitch off the center field wall as outfielders Lankford and Whiten converged as the ball rebounded back toward the infield. Barberie scored well ahead of the relay throw home.
 The Marlins have lost five in a row and six of their last seven. It's their longest losing streak since they dropped the last six games of the 1993 season.
 The Marlins also fell to 3-13 against the Cardinals in their two years of existence despite limiting them to six hits.

Houston Astros' Luis Gonzalez begins his slide into home plate to score the Astros' second run as San Francisco Giants' catcher Kirt Manwaring chases the ball during the second inning at Candlestick Park. The Astros lead 2-0.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Tribe wins 12th straight

Associated Press
CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Indians won their 12th straight home game and Mark Clark kept his Jacobs Field record perfect Monday night by beating the Toronto Blue Jays 7-3.
 The home streak is the Indians' best since they won 13 in a row at Cleveland Stadium in 1965. Winners of three straight overall, they remained in first place in the AL Central, marking the latest they've been in first place since July 5, 1974.
 Albert Belle hit his 16th home run and Manny Ramirez had his 11th for Cleveland. Joe Carter hit his 16th for Toronto.
 Clark (8-1) won his sixth consecutive decision and improved to 5-0 in eight home starts this year. He allowed three runs and nine hits in 7 1/2 innings.
 Rookie Brad Cornett (0-1) lost his first big league start.
White Sox 1, Athletics 0
CHICAGO — Jason Bere allowed two hits over eight innings and struck out a career-high 14 to lead the White Sox.
 The only hits off Bere (8-1) were by Terry Steinbach — an infield single in the second and a single to left to lead off the seventh.
 Bere, who walked six, matched his career best as he two-hit Boston in 1993, striking out 13.
 The White Sox scored the game's only run in the fifth on Tim Lincecum's RBI single.
 Bobby Witt (4-7) gave up eight hits in pitching his second complete this season.
Twins 5, Red Sox 2
BOSTON — Not even Roger Clemens could break the Red Sox out of their slump as Boston dropped its fifth straight.
 Clemens (6-3), the only Red Sox starter to win since May 26, allowed four runs on eight hits in six innings. He struck out five, increasing his American League-leading total to 103, but was outpitched by Jim Deshaies.

 Deshaies (3-6) allowed two runs on eight hits and struck out a season-high seven in six innings. Rick Aguilera worked the ninth for his 13th save.
 Since April 30, Minnesota has a 26-11 record, the best in the majors.
 The Red Sox have lost seven straight at home, and 10 of 12 overall.
Yankees 3, Orioles 1
BALTIMORE — Melido Perez held the Orioles to six singles over eight innings, ending the Orioles' four-game winning streak.
 Perez (4-3) struck out five and walked one for his second victory in his last nine starts.
 Run-scoring singles by Don Mattingly, Bernie Williams and Danny Tartabull gave New York its fourth victory in 12 games and prevented the Orioles from moving into a first-place tie with the Yankees in the AL East.
 Mattingly's RBI single in the fifth broke a scoreless tie and sent Orioles starter Sid Fernandez (3-4) to his fourth loss in seven starts.
Royals 12, Angels 7
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Pinch-hitter Hubie Brooks' grand slam capped a seven-run comeback in eighth inning.
 Tim Salmon homered and drove in five runs for the Angels. His three-run double in the seventh gave California a 6-4 lead.
 John Dopson (1-4) inherited a 6-5 lead before the Royals stormed back. Dopson loaded the bases and Gary Gaetti singled for a 7-6 lead.
 A moment later, Mike MacFarlane scored on Dopson's wild pitch. After Chico Lind was walked intentionally to load the bases, Bob Patterson relieved and gave up Brooks' eighth grand slam. It was the third pinch-hit grand slam in Royals' history.

 Hipolito Pichardo (1-2) got the victory.
Rangers 17, Mariners 9
ARLINGTON, Texas — Jose Canseco hit three homers and drove in eight runs, offsetting Ken Griffey Jr.'s grand slam and six RBIs, leading the Texas Rangers over the Seattle Mariners.
 Canseco went 5-for-6 with a team-record 14 total bases. He set a career-high for RBIs, as did Griffey. Canseco had missed the past three games with a hip injury.
 Canseco hit a two-run homer in the first inning and a three-run shot in the third that went an estimated 480 feet, the longest in Arlington since the Rangers began recording distances in 1987. He hit a solo shot, his 19th, in the seventh, matching his career high for homers in a game.
 In addition, Canseco had RBI singles in the second and fifth innings. He struck out in the eighth, an inning in which Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez hit consecutive home runs.
 Canseco became the fourth player to homer three times in a game this season. Karl Rhoades, Tim Lincecum and Cory Snyder all did it in April. In his last eight games, Canseco is 19-for-34 with eight homers and 20 RBIs.
 Griffey hit his 26th homer, and sixth career grand slam, in the sixth inning as the Mariners pulled within 11-5. He had a two-run single in the seventh and finished 3-for-5.
 Texas had 22 hits, including three by David Hulse, Rusty Greer, Bill Ripken and Esteban Beltré. Seattle had 12 hits.
 Canseco had his seventh multi-homer game of the season and 19th of his career.

Cardinals 2, Marlins 1
ST. LOUIS — Tom Pagnozzi singled in Ray Lankford with one out in the ninth inning Monday night, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a victory over the slumping Florida Marlins.
 Lankford doubled with one out off Robb Nen (2-4) and Mark Whiten drew an intentional walk. Pagnozzi hit a liner to shallow right that scored Lankford when Gary Sheffield was unable to make a shoestring catch.
 Mike Perez (2-1) got the victory despite allowing an inside-the-park home run — the first in Marlins history — to Bret Barberie in the ninth. With none out, Barberie hit a 2-2 pitch off the center field wall as outfielders Lankford and Whiten converged as the ball rebounded back toward the infield. Barberie scored well ahead of the relay throw home.
 The Marlins have lost five in a row and six of their last seven. It's their longest losing streak since they dropped the last six games of the 1993 season.
 The Marlins also fell to 3-13 against the Cardinals in their two years of existence despite limiting them to six hits.

Hurley ready to play six months after accident

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Sacramento Kings guard Bobby Hurley has recovered enough from injuries sustained in an auto accident to play basketball three times a week.

Team vice president Geoff Petrie met with Hurley last week. Petrie said Hurley had been checked by team physicians and passed his tests.

"Basically, he's been released to do everything he wants," Petrie said Sunday.

Hurley said he expects to play in the Jersey Shore League beginning next week and with the Kings' entry in the Utah Summer Pro League in July.

Hurley missed the final four months of his rookie season when he was nearly killed in an auto accident while leaving Arco Arena after a game last Dec. 12.

"I'm a little rusty, but I've been playing pretty good," Hurley said.

Hall of Famer questioned in ex-wife's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's second ex-wife and a man were killed outside the woman's luxury condominium early Monday and the Hall of Fame football player was questioned by police.

Simpson wasn't arrested. His attorney said Simpson was "devastated" and was cooperating with investigators.

Los Angeles Police Cmdr. David Gascon, when asked if Simpson was a suspect, said: "We are not going to rule anyone out."

The bloodied bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and Ronald Lyle Goldman, 26, of Agoura, were found after midnight outside the West Los Angeles condo, said coroner's spokesman Scott Carrier. Autopsies were planned for today.

"We feel as though sharp-force injuries played a part in her death" as well as the man's, Carrier said, adding that other causes were not ruled out.

At the bottom of steps leading into the tree-shrouded Bundy Drive condo, approached by a secluded private walkway, blood was soaked up by white towels while investigators photographed the crime scene.

Police descended on Simpson's gated $1.2 million Brentwood estate and Simpson was driven off in a car around noon.

"I know nothing," said Simpson, grim as he got into the car headed for police headquarters.

"He is being interviewed as a possible witness, not necessarily an eyewitness, but he is considered a witness at this time," Officer Sandra Castello said at police headquarters.

Simpson, 46, spent about three hours at the headquarters before leaving with his attorney, Howard Weitzman.

No apology from Seles' attacker

LONDON (AP) — The man who stabbed Monica Seles won't say he is sorry, only that he would never do it again, according to an interview published today.

The British tabloid Today ran an interview with Gunther Parche, the German who stabbed Seles in the back with a kitchen knife during a tournament in Hamburg, Germany, on April 30, 1993. Seles hasn't played since.

"I will not say sorry because I shouldn't talk about my feelings," said Parche, whose placement on probation evoked international criticism of the judge. "The only thing I will say is that I would never do this again."

Parche reiterated that he stabbed Seles, hoping his favorite player, Steffi Graf, would regain the No. 1 ranking.

Prime Time league to open eighth season

Coaches and scorekeepers discuss the rules for the Prime Time league draft. Iowa freshman Jess Settles was the No. 1 selection. Games start Wednesday night at Iowa City City High School.

The Daily Iowan

As basketball junkies' memories of March Madness fade away and they prepare for the hype of Dream Team II, they can get their fill of hoops locally through the Prime Time League this summer.

In its eighth season, the league provides current Hawkeye basketball players, alumni and local talents the opportunity to compete during the off season.

NCAA rules limit the league to one Iowa player per team. Seven Hawkeyes and one Gray Team player were distributed among the eight teams in the league's draft Sunday night.

League director and player/coach for the Nike team Randy Larson was pleased with the draft.

"Everyone did a good job of drawing a good mix of talent," Larson said. "It makes it so much better for the players and the fans if the games are competitive."

It was little surprise Big Ten Freshman of the Year Jess Settles was the first player selected, going to the First National Bank team. Hawkeye forward Russ Millard was the second selection, going to the Nike team.

Jim Bartels and Kenyon Murray were also selected in the first round, going to Gatens Realty-Mitchell Phipps Molini Builders and Lepic-Kroeger Realtors-Active Endeavors, respectively.

"Everyone did a good job of drawing a good mix of talent. It makes it so much better for the players and the fans if the games are competitive."

Randy Larson, Prime Time league director

In addition to the current

Hawkeyes, this year's league features several alumni including James Winters, Greg Stokes, Les Jepsen, Val Barnes, Bart Casey and Clay Hargrave.

Winters and Hargrave join Millard on Nike while Barnes, Casey and Jepsen join Mon'ter Glasper on the Goodfellow Printing-Imprinted Sportswear team, and Stokes will play with Bartels.

Larson said the League also allows fans to see what future Hawkeyes, such as Ryan Bowen and Kent McCausland, in action before their Big Ten careers.

"It's always fun to see how young talented kids react when they aren't the star of their high school team or their small college team, and they come in as role players," Larson said.

Prime Time action is open to the public and takes place Wednesday, Sunday and Friday nights at City High's old and new gymnasiums at 6 and 7:30 p.m.

Sandberg stuns Cubs

Rick Gano

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Burned out on his game, struggling to fight off a slump and playing for a floundering last-place team, Ryne Sandberg, the best second baseman of his era, retired Monday.

Sandberg, a 10-time All-Star for the Chicago Cubs and nine-time Gold Glove winner, made his stunning announcement at a news conference. He leaves in the second year of a four-year, $28 million contract.

Under a standard payment schedule, he would already have received about $10.55 million from that deal.

In the "me-first" age of professional sports, Sandberg claimed he couldn't expect the Cubs to pay him when he wasn't playing the way he thought he should.

"I didn't have what I felt I needed to go on the field every day, give my very best and live up to the standards I set for myself," said the 34-year-old Sandberg, who paused twice during the overflow news conference to regain his composure.

"I'm not willing, and I do not want to just hang around. I want to be the best player I can be."

Sandberg said he thought before spring training that this would be his final season with the Cubs because he wanted to spend more time with his family and watch his children grow up.

But the decision to leave came much sooner than even he expected. He said he felt fine physically after an injury-filled 1993, but had lost his drive for the game.

"It took me 2½ months to realize that. I kept thinking it might come back but it never really did," he said.

Sandberg was in a 1-for-28 slump, his average is just .238 and he has only five homers. He entered this season with a .290 career average after batting .309 last season.

The Cubs have struggled all season, landing in last place in the NL Central after a miserable start that saw them lose their first 12 games at Wrigley Field.

"He's financially secured and said he wants to spend more time with his family and playing golf," Richie Bry, his agent, said Monday.

"But if the Cubs were more competitive right now, who knows if he would've retired at this point?" Sandberg insisted the Cubs' losing streaks and his batting slump were not the main reasons for his decision to leave.

"I've been through losing streaks and I've been through slumps. I've been through slumps every year and I know how to come out of slumps. I don't think that was a major part of it," Sandberg said.

The Cubs have not managed to get Sandberg where he always wanted to go — the World Series. Chicago did win divisional titles in 1984, when Sandberg was MVP, and 1989.

Sandberg has played on only three winning teams since 1982, and the Cubs let several key free agents get away in the last several years, including Greg Maddux and Andre Dawson.

Sandberg will no longer draw his hefty salary. But Jim Turner, another of his agents, said details were being worked out on a personal services contract that would compensate Sandberg and maintain his connection with the Cubs.

"We talk about money driving the industry and individuals and the greed involved. He's not a very greedy guy," Cubs manager Tom Trebelhorn said.

Sandberg, a man of few words and a quiet leader in the Cubs clubhouse, didn't tell his teammates until Monday morning, saying he didn't want to distract them.

He did tell Trebelhorn how he was feeling Saturday morning and was given Saturday and Sunday off to reflect.

Cubs first baseman Mark Grace said the news came as "an absolute shock." He said Sandberg had been struggling but did not seem down.

"I'm shocked by it. I'm saddened by it. And I know there's got to be more to it," Grace said.

Sandberg had a .990 fielding percentage at second base, the highest at the position in major league history.

He'd been with the Cubs since 1982, when he was acquired along with Larry Bowa in a trade with

Fassero's no-hit bid spoiled in ninth

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Jeff Fassero lost his no-hitter with two outs in the ninth inning when he failed to catch Carlos Garcia's line drive Monday night in the Montreal Expos' 10-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Fassero (5-4) had a 1-2 count when Garcia hit a waist-high drive back to the mound. Fassero, a left-hander, stuck out his glove to the right side, but the ball bounced out and rolled toward third base.

Fassero quickly recovered and made a strong throw to first baseman Randy Milligan, but Garcia slid head-first and barely beat the play. Umpire Bob Davidson made the call, and there was no dispute about his decision — or the ruling that it was an infield single instead of an error.

It was the second time this season that an Expos' pitcher lost a no-hitter in the ninth. Pedro Martinez held Cincinnati hitless on April 13 until Brian Dorsett led off the ninth with a clean single.

The stunned crowd of 17,236 gave Fassero a big ovation. Still needing one out for his first shutout in 29 major league starts, Fassero lost that, too, when Jay Bell followed with a home run.

Fassero was pulled after Bell's homer, and got a standing ovation.

Fassero struck out six and walked two. Montreal fielders did not need to make any tough plays to preserve the no-hitter; the only difficult play was the one Fassero did not make.

The Pirates have not been no-hit since Bob Gibson did it for St. Louis on Aug. 14, 1971.

Dennis Martinez pitched the last no-hitter for Montreal, a perfect game in Los Angeles on July 28, 1991.

There have been two no-hitters this season. Atlanta's Kent Mercker pitched one in Los Angeles on April 8 and Minnesota's Scott Erickson no-hit Milwaukee on April 27.

Fassero retired the first 11 batters before walking Andy Van Slyke in the fourth inning. He retired the next 11 batters before walking Don Slaught with one out in the eighth.

This is Fassero's first season as a full-time starter. He was converted from a relief role last July, and made 15 starts. He was winless in his last four starts before beating Pittsburgh.

The Expos hit four home runs, three of them in the fifth inning to finish Denny Neagle (6-7).

Marquis Grissom hit his sixth home run and had three hits.

Tyson pleads denied

Thomas P. Wyman

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Tyson says he's grown up enough in prison to know he should have walked a beauty contestant downstairs from his hotel room, but still staunchly denies raping her.

The judge who listened to the former boxing champ's plea for a reduced sentence Monday said he showed signs of rehabilitation, but sent Tyson back to prison anyway.

"I should have been more polite," he told Marion Superior Court Patricia J. Gifford near the close of the three-hour hearing. "I should have walked her downstairs. I should have been more gentlemanly to her."

Gifford said Tyson is bettering himself, but said his plea to leave prison early tripped over education requirements.

Indiana law requires an inmate with less than two years to serve complete an academic or vocational program, and show signs of rehabilitation, to get a reduced sentence.

Tyson listened impassively as the judge refused to free him, then slowly stood up to be led back to prison by sheriff's deputies.

"They want to keep him in
