Physical Plant requests return of 8,000 missing envelopes

Special blue recyclable envelopes created last year by the Physical Plant have proven to be very popular on the UI campus — too popular, in fact.

The envelopes, which have windows instead of lines for addresses, are so well-liked that of 10,000 envelopes originally in circulation, 8,000 are missing.

"We suspect it's because people think they're nifty and use them for private purposes," said Carol Casey, waste management coordinator for the UI Physical Plant and one of the developers of the blue envelope.

"These could be reused. Now that the fiscal year is ending, we need to get them back into the system so that we can use them for business reports," Casey said.

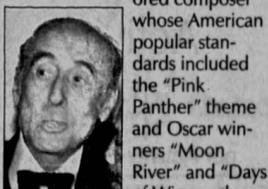

The envelopes are made from recycled milk cartons, and although they are more expensive to buy than normal paper envelopes, they should pay for themselves in terms of their longer durability — if they are kept in circulation.

Casey asks that people return all blue envelopes to her through campus mail as soon as possible.

Henry Mancini dead at 70

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Henry Mancini, the much-honored composer whose American popular standards included the "Pink Panther" theme and Oscar winners "Moon River" and "Days of Wine and Roses," died Tuesday at age 70.

Mancini

His death from complications of liver and pancreatic cancer came at his home and with his wife, Ginny, at his side, publicist Linda Dozeretz said. He had been ailing for several months.

"I've probably sang 'Moon River' more than anyone else in the world, and I never get tired of it. It's always fresh," friend Andy Williams said in a telephone interview from his theater in Branson, Mo. "He was special and he'll be missed."

Clinton offers depleted welfare plan

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Unveiling a centerpiece of his domestic agenda, President Clinton Tuesday proposed a scaled-down $9.3 billion welfare-reform plan imposing a two-year lifetime limit on cash benefits and steering aid recipients into the work force.

"There's no greater gap between our good intentions and our misguided consequences than you see in the welfare system," Clinton said in a speech announcing his program.

"Today we have to restore faith in the beginning in certain basic principles that our forbearers took for granted: the bond of family, the virtue of community, the dignity of work," he said.

The president spoke before an audience of current and former welfare recipients and civic leaders, gathered in a bank where Harry Truman once worked as a clerk.

"If you really want to know what's wrong with the welfare system, talk to the people who are stuck in it," Clinton said. "They want to change it more than most people you know — and if you give them half a chance they will."

Clinton's five-year plan would

"If you really want to know what's wrong with the welfare system, talk to the people who are stuck in it."

President Clinton

largely be paid for by cutting social programs, especially aid to immigrants and the homeless. Subsidies to wealthy farmers would be cut for a savings of $500 million.

A huge chunk of the money — about $7 billion — would be spent on education, training and day-care programs, and $1.2 billion would be targeted for work programs.

In Washington, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, called the president's plan "limp" and said it does not meet the test of placing welfare recipients in "productive tax-paying jobs with a future."

Instead, Gramm said, the plan would create "more government programs to ease the transition at a cost of billions of dollars."

"The plain effect of the president's proposal is to leave most welfare programs untouched while spending more on some and trusting bureaucrats to invent a handful of new welfare programs to take up the slack," Gramm said.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt said Clinton's legislation would provoke discussion in Congress this year, but action on the bill would likely wait until next year because of the focus on health care.

Clinton, Congress table health-care melee

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton asked a key Senate committee Tuesday to hold off any health-reform votes to avoid certain defeat. Separately, a House panel narrowly salvaged a central aspect of his plan.

The House Ways and Means Committee rejected, 20-18, a Republican proposal that would have scrapped a requirement that employers buy insurance for their workers, a centerpiece of Clinton's plan.

Earlier, leaders of the Senate Finance Committee said after meeting with Clinton at the White House that one way around the dispute would be to put off for a few years the requirement that companies pay most of workers' insurance premiums.

"There is a strong, large feeling on the Republican side against compulsion that absolutely forces people to do things they don't want to do," said Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon, ranking Republican on the panel.

Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., acknowledged that for now, all sides agreed there was no agreement and that the struggle to put together a compromise before the fall elections would continue.

"We agreed that ... there is not now a majority for any health-care reform plan in the Senate Finance Committee, that we will continue to work on a bipartisan basis to provide legislation that covers everybody," he said.

Packwood was more blunt. "At the moment, all plans are dead," Packwood said. "Anybody's plan."

Clinton held the Oval Office session as Democratic leaders in both houses wrestled over how to craft legislation that could win approval before Congress adjourns for the See HEALTH CARE, Page 7

After overcoming back spasms, 30 mph headwinds and a curious grizzly bear on his 32-day 3,200-mile bike trip to raise money for a disabled children's arts program, UI Professor Steve Thunder-McGuire peddled into Iowa City Tuesday.

POLICE TIGHT-LIPPED

Simpson questioned in slaying of ex-wife

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A blood-soaked glove reported in his home. A midnight flight to Chicago. Drops of reddish-brown liquid on his driveway. An ex-wife he once allegedly threatened to kill found stabbed to death near the body of another man.

These are a few of the elements in the killing of O.J. Simpson's former wife. But is one of America's best-loved sports stars a suspect in the slayings?

His attorney says no. Police won't say. Friends say it simply can't be true and that Simpson and his wife were trying to reconcile.

One source quoted by the Los Angeles Times said that authorities already are convinced that Simpson is their prime suspect.

And Simpson is emotionally drained, according to friends, relatives and his attorney, who met with him Tuesday at his mansion.

"It's difficult enough with the shock that your wife's been murdered, but to hear that you may be accused of it — well, it's awful," attorney Howard Weitzman said.

Authorities released an autopsy report Tuesday that found Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Lyle Goldman died of multiple stab wounds, but withheld other details. Coroner's spokesman Scott Carrier said officials didn't know what kind of weapon was used.

The Times reported today that the woman's throat was slashed and Goldman's wounds indicated that he put up a fierce struggle before he died.

Police refused to say if they were able to determine the time of the deaths.

Kidnapping threatens cease-fire in Rwanda

Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Hutu militiamen abducted 30 to 40 ethnic Tutsi children Tuesday from a church where they had sought shelter from Rwanda's civil war, and the United Nations feared they would be massacred.

"When they take them away, they usually kill them," said Brig. Gen. Henry Anyidoho, deputy commander of the U.N. force.

Hutu militias have been blamed for most of the estimated 200,000 deaths in the two-month war between Hutu government troops and militiamen, and the Rwandan Patriotic Front, a rebel group made up mostly of minority Tutsis.

But in Tunisia on Tuesday night, there was hope the bloodshed might end when the warring factions agreed to an immediate cease-fire under pressure from the Organization of African Unity. The development was reported by Pasteur Bizimungu, the head of the Rwandan Patriotic Front delegation.

Several previous cease-fire efforts have failed.

In Kigali, Anyidoho said the children were taken from the St. Famille church, where about 3,000 Tutsis are awaiting U.N. evacuation to Tutsi-controlled areas. The church is in a district held by government soldiers under siege by rebels.

U.N. officials evacuated 400 Tutsis from the church Monday despite threats from Hutu militiamen. More evacuations were planned for Tuesday, but the operation was suspended when peacekeepers encountered menacing Hutu militias.

"We don't want to take any chances. We want to make sure no one will open fire on us," said a U.N. spokesman, Pierre Mehu.

Shortly afterward, the children were abducted.

Lifeguards claim job isn't all fun in the sun

Lifeguarding, contrary to popular belief, is not quite the "Bay-watch" of summer jobs that most think it to be.

and able to save someone's life," said Jeanne Pasut, a lifeguard at the UI Field House who also teaches swimming classes. "For me, it's more than hanging out at the pool. It's a fulfilling experience teaching someone to swim and knowing you could one day save their lives."

Stephanie Galbreath, who has been a lifeguard for three years, said besides being fulfilling, it's also a lot of work.

"Most people think that a lifeguard has the ideal life, but it's more than sitting out and getting a scanned the area filled with screaming and running children ebbing closer to the pool side.

Galbreath made what lifeguards call "a save" Monday afternoon, when she dove into the pool to pull a young girl out of the water who had apparently misjudged the water depth.

Galbreath said she had noticed the child move into the deeper pool area, so when the child began to kick and sink into the water, she was able to immediately jump in and pull the girl to safety. "Lifeguarding is something like baby-sitting a kid," Galbreath said.

 3:30 p.m.

"You have to look for stuff before it happens and be prepared for anything that kid might do."

Lifeguards are required to complete a course certifying participants as qualified lifeguards. Completion of the course includes physical skill testing, written tests, time trials and proof of current CPR certification and standard first aid knowledge. Other requirements include having the ability to swim 500 yards in under 10 minutes and diving a minimum of 9 feet to retrieve a 10-pound brick.

City Park lifeguards must complete an intense three-day training program of operational reviews, skills testing and continuous simulated emergency procedures enabling them to be prepared for anything from heart attacks and seizures to chemical spills.

Lifeguard Charlie Kohler, a UI sophomore, said he doesn't think about "what ifs," because when an emergency occurs, everything becomes automatic.

"You feel your heart rate jump about double what it should be, and you feel the adrenaline rush," he said. "You have to be confident that the training you've been through will pay off, so you pull the individual out."

Kohler said patrons may think the lifeguards are too strict, but he said they have to be that way.

"Their lives are in our hands," he said.

Galbreath agreed.

"Lifeguards have to make sure the patrons have a good time without worrying about drowning, because they know someone is watching out for them," she said.

Rawlings gets raise, regents give praise

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings III will see a 3 percent pay raise beginning July 1, matching the salary increases most of the UI faculty will receive, the Iowa State Board of Regents decided at its meeting Tuesday.

The board voted to give the heads of all five regents institutions the raise. Rawlings and Iowa State University President Martin Jischke will see increases from $176,500 to $182,100, while University of Northern Iowa President Constantine Curris' salary will go to $143,000.

Regents President Marvin Berenstein said last year's budget difficulties resulted in only a 1 percent increase for the institution heads, so the regents wanted to return the salaries to a competitive level.

"All the institution heads have done a fine job the past year. We're very pleased with their performances," he said. "If we don't take care of them, they'll leave."

The board also approved the UI's preliminary budget of more than $703 million at the meeting. Although the UI's General Education Fund received $14.4 million in new revenues and strategic reallocations, the UI was forced to cut nearly $1.4 million from colleges and departments across the university.

"We are making choices and downsizing some units," Rawlings told the board. "We are reducing some budgets in favor of others that get a higher priority in our strategic plan. It's part of an overall effort to build on our strengths."

Both Rawlings and Berenstein called attention to the fact that state appropriations represent less than half of the $1.8 billion total budget for the regents institutions. The schools also receive a large amount of revenue from federal grants and contracts, patient-care revenue and private funding.

"There is an emphasis on creating our own funding to leverage the state funds," Rawlings said. "There is a multiplier effect that is very healthy for the region and the state as a whole."

After approving the preliminary budgets for the five institutions, the regents entered a long discussion about the future of the Lakeside Laboratory at Lake Okoboji. The board approved a preliminary budget of $300,000 for the nature-study laboratory, half of which is funded by the UI, but warned that the facility's future is in jeopardy if a local community group does not provide a firmer promise of financial support for the lab.

In other regents news: The board approved the name of the south pavilion addition of the UI Hospital and Clinics — the Pomerantz Family Pavilion. The Pomerantz family donated $3 million to help complete the pavilion, which will house the Eye Institute and the Family Care Center. Marvin Pomerantz was a regents president until the Iowa state Senate rejected his reappointment to the board last year.

The regents received preliminary athletic budgets for 1995 from the three universities. Regent Elizabeth Hendricks expressed reservations about the $2 increase in single-game ticket prices for UI and ISU basketball and UI football. "There is a point at which the ordinary fan will not be able to afford $24 for a football game or $15 for a basketball game," she said. "I hope the athletic people are cognizant of that fact."

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

For the first time in its history, Hancher Auditorium has what may be called a few bad seats. Workers removed seats and carpet Tuesday afternoon as part of a remodeling project now under way. A word of warning — don't buy any tickets from scalpers promising "front row center" (at least for a while).

Crews tear up Hancher; renovation to take months

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Summer entertainment choices will be limited for area audiences as construction to make Hancher Auditorium more accessible for disabled persons is planned to run until September.

Associate director of Hancher Chuck Swanson said there will be no programs at the arts center for the next few months.

Fund-raising efforts raised $1.6 million for the construction. The UI is providing approximately $400,000 for renovations.

Although the 22-year-old building is not in violation of any of the rules of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, Swanson said Hancher officials "wanted to move in that direction."

Swanson said the construction is going well. Merit Construction of Cedar Rapids won the bid on the contract.

"They have made some good progress," he said.

The remodeling project involves removing and replacing seating in the auditorium, according to Swanson. The main floor has been completed, he said, and work is currently being done on the balcony.

The auditorium housed 2,664 seats, some of which will be lost to allow more seating for the disabled.

In the lobby, new carpeting will be installed and the walls will be repainted and repaired. The rest rooms on the main floor will be expanded and made more accessible to disabled persons.

A new stage floor will be added, and the dressing rooms will be updated and also made more accessible, Swanson said.

Fund-raising efforts for the project began in the 1992-93 season, but gifts were donated prior to 1992 as well, he said.

The first program following the renovations is Sept. 30, Swanson said. Construction is expected to be completed by mid-September.

LOCAL SITES VIE FOR ABORTION PILL

RU-486 courted for test, sale in Iowa City by 1996

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

A controversial abortion-inducing drug may be used in the United States by 1996, said Gayle Sand, director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St.

Both the Emma Goldman Clinic and Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, 2 S. Linn St., have applied to become test sites for RU-486, the so-called abortion pill, but neither has heard yet whether it has been selected.

The French manufacturer of the pill donated the patent for RU-486 to the New York-based Population Council, and the drug was approved for testing in the United States in May.

Only about 12 areas around the country will be chosen as test sites for this newest abortion method.

Planned Parenthood Manager Mary Manix said the clinic applied to be a test site 18 months ago, when it looked like the drug would be approved for testing.

"We have not heard yet whether we will be chosen, but it may be happening soon," Manix said.

Samona Joy Smit, legislative director for Iowa Right to Life in Des Moines, said the prospect of the drug being tested in Iowa, a state with no parental notification laws, is chilling.

"These clinics are already willing to do the surgical procedure on our 13- and 15-year-old daughters, and there's no reason at all to think that they're not going to give young girls RU-486 without their parents' knowledge," she said.

"It's not a panacea. It's not a magic pill. It's not hassle-free and it does have side effects."

Gayle Sand, director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women

Smit said giving this type of drug to younger women is especially dangerous because they will not be under a doctor's supervision, and their parents will not know of the potential problems that may occur.

Sand said RU-486 is a breakthrough for women who see surgical procedures as invasive. Using the drug is more private and gives women more control in the abortion process, she said.

However, she warned that the drug is not an easy way out for women who wish to terminate a pregnancy.

"It's not a panacea. It's not a magic pill," she said. "It's not hassle-free and it does have side effects."

RU-486 imitates the process of a natural miscarriage by blocking progesterone, a hormone released by the ovaries to nourish the lining of the uterus and help the embryo grow.

Sand said she expects to know by the end of the summer if the Emma Goldman Clinic is selected for RU-486 testing. Only women with good health in weeks two through seven of their pregnancies will be eligible to try the drug.

Testing will probably take about a year and then the Food and Drug Administration will review the data to decide whether to approve its use in the United States.

"It's highly likely that this will be available to women in 1996," Sand said. "We're very excited to have this kind of technology available."

Smit said the drug is "just one more way to override a woman's most basic instinct, which is to protect her child."

INSURANCE ALLIANCE

Board lets UIHC become player in bold state health-care system

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa state Board of Regents authorized the UI to proceed with plans to help form the first statewide organized health-care delivery system at its meeting Tuesday.

The UI, along with the Iowa Health System, Mercy Health Services and Blue Cross / Blue Shield announced plans last week to establish a large provider insurance alliance, known as the Unity Choice Health Plan, that will connect urban and rural physicians to health-care facilities across the state.

UI Vice President for Health Science Henri Manasse told the regents the UI will no longer be competitive in the health-care market if it does not participate in the system.

"It is important for us to be a player, to be accessible to all the people of Iowa, not to get shut out of the marketplace and to preserve this particular institution as a center of excellence," he said. "It is important for us to have a continuous flow of patients, not just from a financial point of view, but also we need a large base of patients that are going to be used as participants in the educational process."

Regents John Tyrrell and Nancy Pellett cautioned UI officials to remember the needs of rural Iowans when designing the system.

"I have real concerns about rural Iowa," Tyrrell said. "We have to keep them in mind."

Reflections on Bosnia

Last week, the House of Representatives voted to add an amendment to the defense authorizations bill that would unilaterally lift the arms embargo on Bosnia. Its proponents, and there were many, argued with emotion rarely seen on the floor of the House that the embargo was handcuffing a people under brutal assault and enabling what has become known as "ethnic cleansing" to occur.

The amendment's proponents argued that by preventing the import of arms into the Balkans, the United Nations was violating its own charter by obstructing the self-defense of one of its own. Instead it had taken matters into its own hands, promising a peace process which had been an abject failure for three years.

This simultaneous success of the arms embargo and the failure of the peace process had left the Bosnians to the nonexistent mercies of Serbian exterminators and doomed a nation to utter destruction. According to the amendment's proponents, the United Nations' inability to reverse its cruel hypocrisy requires the United States to act on its own and abandon the embargo. They noted that the embargo was a European creation and that the United States had been opposed to it all along.

But despite the seeming logic of this position, this action comes too late. The arms embargo may have been a bad idea from the start; it may have been a better plan to simply sell anybody the arms they demanded and let the two sides fight it out. There may even have been a time after the initial failure of the Cyrus Vance peace plan when lifting the embargo might have been prudent. There is no question, however, that that time is past.

The depth of the U.N. involvement in this war has given it its present shape. While the Bosnians might once have had a chance of survival alone, they can no longer win this war. The aggression wrought under cover of the arms embargo has shattered their military position and devastated their production capacities. Even with access to weaponry, the Bosnians no longer have a chance of stopping the Serbian assault, much less rolling back Serbian gains. This is the direct result of U.N. involvement; the war is already international. The United Nations cannot tie the hands of a nation while it is beaten for three years, then free it to fight back and wash its own hands of the matter.

If arming the Bosnians will not help, that leaves only a return to the peace process. Granted, the record of negotiations to date is no great cause for optimism. But its failure is largely attributable to two vain hopes.

First, the Bosnians have continued to fight rather than accede to an "unjust" peace plan in a belief that the arms embargo might be lifted — and that they could then regain their land. They must be made to understand that their only hope for survival is to accept whatever peace plan is negotiated.

Second, the United Nations has held out hope for a settlement that will restore much of Bosnia. This will never happen: Short of a credible threat of an outright invasion by NATO, there will be no force in the Balkans capable of compelling Serbian concessions.

Only when these two ideals are publicly and unequivocally rejected will a peace of any kind be possible. Until then, the carnage that the House objected to so passionately will continue.

VIOLENCE IS CONTAGIOUS

Conflict from within

Most African-Americans generally feel it's unbrotherly to denounce a fellow African-American. There is a bond borne out of years of enduring age-old social evils like racism and police brutality. True police brutality and racism are evil; but the greatest problem facing African-Americans today is not from Klan members or arrogant police officers, it is the threat posed by violent youth from their own community.

The statistics are frightening. Every day we are treated to a dose of new bursts of violence from vengeful or drug-consuming black youths in New York, Harlem, Crown Heights, Chicago or elsewhere who relish in violently destroying lives.

Consider the recent example of James Todd, a 65-year-old retiree, who on May 7, on his way to a grocery store, accidentally bumped into a teen-ager but was not quick enough to apologize. As he walked home, the vengeful teen-ager caught up with him and shot him dead. Also, Shaul Linyear of Brooklyn, fed up of being laughed at by neighbors for wearing tattered basketball sneakers, robbed and killed a black man to get money for new sneakers. Unprovoked violence.

The list is endless, and by the end of this week, many more will join the unfortunate ranks of victims. Violence is contagious and its results are only too clear.

What is not clear however is why the leaders of the black community have been slow in condemning this brutal orgy from their own. The black caucus, Louis Farrakhan's Nation of Islam and all the powerful African-American lobby groups suddenly lose their tongues when the unprovoked fury of a black youth too often claims a life.

Not so when a black youth is beaten or killed by the police. Then, mobilization is quick. Recent scenes of massive demonstrations and marches to police headquarters demanding justice are only too fresh in our memories. Consider the aftermaths of the Rodney King beatings, the April 29 death of Ernest Sayon in police custody or the January scuffle at a Harlem mosque.

These are two standards applied in dealing with equal evil. It is time for the seemingly embarrassed majority of African-Americans to drop the gloves in dealing with black teen-age murderers — to stop coddling them and speak against them with the same passion that condemned Rodney King's and Earnest Sayon's persecutors.

For the fear and folly of destroying ourselves lurks in the woods. As Arthur Miller put it in his best-selling book "Death of a Salesman": "The woods are burning and the principal victims are not whites. They are the majority of decent, hard-working African-Americans."

How to start a new industrial revolution

Turkey, a country torn between its Islamic heritage and its European aspirations, has been unsuccessfully petitioning to join the European Union (formerly the European Community). Its application is a nonstarter with the EU, which has apparently concluded that it cannot take the chance of having an Islamic country in its midst. This, many Turks believe correctly, is a patently discriminatory attitude. While such nonmember nations as Austria and Switzerland are encouraged to join, with Austria on the verge of becoming a member, Turkey's application to join the EU languishes and may never see light of the day.

Instead of trying to join this racially exclusive economic club, Turkey and other developing nations must forge ahead on their own by pursuing a different economic strategy. Trying to join European or American dominated trading blocs will make them enslaved to policies that can only be sustained by mature economies. Look at Mexico. Under the much-touted NAFTA, Mexico has been forced to accept stringent environmental and labor standards that a 19th-century American capitalist would never have accepted.

What developing nations need is not more economic aid or to join trading blocs. What these nations need is an old-fashioned unrestricted industrial revolution based on some very simple economic principles. There is nothing new or magical about these policies. The central concept of this plan is having no economic plan. All that the developing nations need to do in order to eventually achieve economic prosperity is to literally suspend their governments! Let me explain.

First, developing nations must unilaterally eliminate all internal and external tariffs and duties, as well as all other limitations on trade. On its surface, this seems to be a radical proposal. The benefits derived from this unilateral action has been examined by such economists as Milton Friedman. By this bold step, developing nations can in effect create a one-way free trade agreement with the rest of the world without all the onerous restrictions that countries in NAFTA and the EU have to live with. They can reap the benefits of billions of dollars of export subsidies that governments in industrialized nations pay their industries. This act will also make the exports of developing nations more competitive, as the prices of imported ingredients go down, as well as increasing the purchasing power of their populations having access to unlimited imports.

Second, developing nations must unilaterally eliminate all internal and external restrictions on the movement of people and assets to and from all other countries. This action creates a borderless economy. Without archaic national borders, developing nations can reap the benefits of ambitious capitalists and workers, who will find their open capitalist system more financially rewarding than their own over-taxed and over-regulated economies. This influx of labor also keeps a strong lid on wage increases in times of high economic growth.

Third, developing nations must cap their governmental spending to only 5 percent of their gross domestic product. This measure effectively controls the size of government, which in this system must only provide basic services. In the tradition of Adam Smith, the government should concentrate on maintaining domestic tranquility as well as providing the legal framework for the enforcement of private contracts. The less a government has to spend, the less intrusive it becomes in the economy.

In most of the nations with advanced economies, governmental spending (and therefore taxes) accounts for close to half of the economy. With the virtual elimination of their governments, developing nations will be operating under a great competitive advantage against Europe, Japan and the United States. With no government, no regulation, almost zero taxes and unlimited labor supply, developing nations can create vibrant economies that would be the envy of the world.

This plan undoubtedly shocks the conscience of people with a generous heart. What about the poor? How would they fare in such an unbridled form of capitalism? Developing nations such as Turkey cannot be expected to provide their populations with a European-style welfare system. Such attempts have always been abysmal failures, as one can witness in much of postcolonial Africa. Newly independent nations in Africa, under European-influenced leaders, burdened their economies with generous welfare systems and suffered disastrous consequences. Coups and crop failures and untold miseries have followed ever since. A mature economy is required to support any generous welfare system. Developing nations must first achieve that status. It is only through making a great sacrifice today that they can ensure a prosperous future, perhaps not for themselves, but at least for generations to come.

Juneteenth: a celebration of freedom

The celebration of freedom for many slaves in the United States occurred once President Abraham Lincoln declared in the Emancipation Proclamation that all slaves within any state shall be forever free; this date was Jan. 1, 1863. However, it was 2½ years later that slaves in Texas were informed of their freedom. Texan slaves were not aware of their freedom until Gen. Gordon Granger was escorted by the U.S. military into Galveston, Texas, giving the official notice that the Emancipation Proclamation was law.

As we celebrate Juneteenth this year, we must keep in mind that freedom has not been thoroughly accomplished for black people and other people of color. The United States holds many blacks and other people of color in bondage through its economic, political and educational systems.

Economic bondage forces many to be slaves to another's idea, where they work their entire lives creating another person's business and riches. The U.S. political system operates with the same slavemaster slave mentality that existed during the years of physical slavery. The U.S. educational system that was established with a Eurocentric frame of reference has shackled many with a mentality to crave and exalt

As we celebrate Juneteenth this year, we must keep in mind that freedom has not been thoroughly accomplished for black people and other people of color.

This resulted in a celebration of freedom that has become known as Juneteenth Celebration, because it occurred around June 19. The celebration itself generally occurs June 16-19 in most cities.

The origin of Juneteenth is in the black churches of Texas. After the proclamation, many black slaves departed white churches and established their own churches. These black churches were institutions that provided religious, political and social functions for the newly freed blacks. Black churches also provided many of the events to celebrate Juneteenth — parades, horse races, formal and informal dances, and picnics.

Juneteenth has migrated throughout the United States into many black communities. It has evolved where several cultures come together to share themselves in education, food, dance and music. Juneteenth is also a time to reflect on how slavery denied blacks and other people of color human and cultural rights.

The Eurocentric world view and lifestyle instead of their own world views and lifestyles. If a group of people has no power over their labor, no power to govern themselves and no knowledge of themselves, though they may have physical freedom, those people are slaves to the will of those who have power over their labor, power to govern themselves and knowledge of themselves.

Juneteenth is a celebration of freedom that all people must become aware of, and we must be committed to continuing the struggle for human and cultural rights for all people. We will never reach our potential of racial harmony until there is freedom among all races. The harvest of a multicultural society can never be reaped as long as there is only freedom for one group in that society.

Bicyclists should have access to Pentacrest

To the Editor:

The Pentacrest should remain open for bicycling. A committee has been designated for the purpose of imposing permanent restrictions on this large two block area that connects north and south Iowa City and both sides of the busy Iowa River corridor.

Many official university vehicles use the sidewalks; pedestrians must step off to the side. There is no sense of sharing, the vehicles treat it as their road first. Bike riders, on the other hand, are able to share. Banning bicyclists would formalize this frightening double standard. The attempt to close the Pentacrest to bicycling is not therefore in favor of pedestrians on business days. It probably is to make a tourist environment or a picture postcard appearance for motorists. There are many weekends, weeks and months that the university isn't in session. The bicyclist can share the tranquility, and more people of all kinds are bicycling now. Traffic on the streets around the Pentacrest is murderous; we are forced onto the sidewalks precisely in this area. It will be a terrible loss to the concept of nonmotor vehicle transportation if this area is closed to the bicycle.

GUEST OPINION

Villifying the body: then and now

The 1648 journal of John Winthrop, governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, recounts the conviction and execution of one Margaret Jones of Charlestown for witchcraft. One point of evidence against her hinges on an intimate physical description: "(S)he had (upon search) an apparent teat in her secret parts as fresh as if it had been newly sucked, and after it had been scanned, upon a forced search, that was withered and another began on the opposite side." My footnote explains that many colonists believed demons nursed at such supernatural breasts.

Feminism has by now given us ample discourse with which to challenge such rhetoric. Essentially the products of a paranoid patriarchy, the critique typically runs, such attempts to control women demonize the female body in an attempt to justify misogynistic violence. Much of feminism claims that today we simply ought to know better than to accept such portrayals unresistingly.

Now, however, we see a trend that underneath its humorous surface harbors many of the same antagonisms underlying the Winthrop excerpt. Only this time, it is the male figure who is on trial, and the ground zero of guilt is not the metamorphosing breast, but the rampant penis. Consider the case of Paula Jones, former Arkansas clerk who several weeks ago filed suit against Bill Clinton for allegedly sexually harassing her when he was governor. Amid questions of Jones' credibility, her lawyer has announced that Jones can describe Clinton's penis, and Newsweek has quoted the suit as claiming "there were distinguishing characteristics in Clinton's genital area that were obvious to Jones."

Instead of debating the legal implications of such evidence, I want to focus on the larger theoretical significance of an approach that so closely links the physicality of the penis with culpability. Whether in the Clinton case or in earlier charges against Michael Jackson, establishing guilt by reproducing the penis involves a demonization of the male body that resembles the misogynistic tactics of Winthrop's witch burners.

This fetishization of the penis as the proof of transgression reinforces the current atmosphere of "phallobia" that underwrites maleness with a dark subtext of sexual threat and social oppression. This "misandrony" finds expression throughout popular culture today, from stereotypical images of "deadbeat dads" and lecherous male employers to the cult phenomenon of repressed memories of sexual abuse to the folk heroine status accorded Lorena Bobbitt for her socially resonant act of slicing away her husband's penis.

It might be a mere coincidence that the much hailed "year of the woman" in politics has been followed by more penises in the headlines than at any time in recent memory. Then again, it might not. It is possible that advances being made by women are inspiring a cultural climate that among other things critiques men by scrutinizing, vilifying and punishing the penis.

Ultimately, this issue boils down to the politics of representation. Notice that I do not address the argument that Clinton's penis may "really" have distinguishing marks while Margaret Jones did not "actually" sprout an extra breast. What concerns me is not who comes closer to describing an absolute truth, but who has the power to depict whom and how this power is used for social gain. The power to describe constitutes the potential to construct society's attitude toward an issue, an individual or an entire gender.

It is this narrative power more than any "objective" criterion that factors into a society's judgments about the truths of victimization and guilt. In other words, the transgressor inheres largely in the stories we tell about him. Who is to say, after all, that the Puritan colonists did not believe the testimony against Margaret Jones every bit as much as we might believe that a description of a penis proves harassment? Despite those who would claim the two situations differ completely, a fundamental analogy does hold.

My goal has not been to dismiss Paula Jones, Anita Hill, Lorena Bobbitt or the boy who made charges against Michael Jackson, nor has it been to flout feminism's fight against gender discrimination. I have simply tried to point out that when it comes to today's male, our society can fall completely into the same demonizing rhetoric that feminism has been fighting for decades. It seems to me that people miss the point who would in the same breath denounce the misogynistic rhetoric of Winthrop's day and then suggest that the proof of a man's prurience is in his penis.

Animal rights activists

To the Editor:

I have always been puzzled by the behavior of the animal rights activists, especially as to wearing furs. Nothing is warmer in cold weather, and it can make a woman look 10 years younger.

The activists forget that they sit on leather upholstery. They use leather belts to keep up their pants. They wear leather shoes and suede or leather jackets. They use leather pocketbooks and many more things that are made from furbearing animals. Many eat red meat, chicken, turkey, fish. Why harass people who wear furs? All these things come from living animals. Why furs only?

Among other things, they are so against animals for research. Research helps to reduce pain, sickness and fight diseases. So why don't those people volunteer THEMSELVES for research instead of animals for the good of mankind? Not just lip service! When they get seriously ill, they will certainly and gladly use medications derived from research to protect and improve their own. You bet.

Today most furs are raised on farms. Remember Mother Nature is not very kind to wildlife — disease, starvation, cold, predators, etc.

Animal rights activists forget to address the biggest problem for our wildlife: the infringement of the natural habitat by shopping centers, suburban living, highways. Also, hundreds of thousands of animals are killed yearly on highways.

I am an animal lover and have my own wildlife preserve to do my little part to help. We have to be normal in our thinking and not be blinded by those who, without knowledgeable information, try to tell us how to live our lives: what to wear, what to eat, not to raise animals for food, etc.

Nobody is telling them not to eat meat, use leather or fur, or medicine derived through animal research. So please do not tell us how to live our lives. This is still a free country.

They also say that they are for the good of the environment, and at the same time, they, without thinking, tell us to wear fake furs which are made from an oil byproduct (a nonrenewable source, which is not biodegradable and which is not healthy).

Why aren't the animal rights activists active on zoning boards or raising money for wetlands, etc.? That's where their voices should be heard. Let us all work together for the best solutions for the environment. Let us also keep our freedoms.

Don't abandon family values

To the Editor:

Over the weekend as I watched on TV the tributes being paid the fallen heroes of our American history, it was obvious that the only freedom of which they were conscious was the freedom to give total responsibility to their country so that the future freedom of others might be protected.

Compare that noble stance with the social theories emanating from some of our university educational "experts" diametrically opposed to that sense of responsibility. For instance, "no absolutes" and "relativism," or "values clarification" in which each individual sets up his / her own standards of behavior in direct contradiction to the values established over the centuries and have been found to be solid in every respect. The inevitable result: selfishness.

"Children are basically perfect. Let them behave naturally." But this theory reduces children to the status of animals where "might makes right." Survival of the fittest.

Children are advised, "Parents are out-of-date. Don't depend on them for patterns of social behavior." Shall we throw away the combined learning of millions of thoughtful people over countless centuries and have to relearn the hard way?

Are these the kinds of freedom license for which those noble martyrs gave their lives? I don't think so. But I do know the fate of a nation that allows itself to be subverted from simple, basic standards of human behavior. At least 85 percent of American citizens who know and respect true family values need to be heard from, and at once.

Foreboding omens?

To the Editor:

Folks are thinking of the past years and recent times in our country's past, like back to 1924 when things were different.

I have heard more than one person say: "earthquakes, AIDS, hurricanes and tornadoes, children killing children, guns in schools, forest fires, soaring murder rates, floods, mud slides and 30 million, yes, 30 million American babies killed in abortions at their parents' request!"

The final comment: "Is God trying to tell us something?" God bless you!

Pools offer cool relief, alternative to heatwave

When the temperature heats up so much that even the air conditioning doesn't feel cool anymore, perhaps the only way to find relief is by spending the day at the nearest pool.

day of the summer to socialize, exercise and generally beat the heat.

"We don't have air conditioning anyway, so I come here with my friends to swim and hang out," UI senior Jay Harbison said.

According to UI senior Jesus Villegas, there seems to be two kinds of people who come to the pools: those who want to scope and those who want to relax.

He said that if you want to scope, City Park is a good place to come between 1 and 3 p.m. That's right when both the temperature and people's desires to have fun are running high.

Villegas said 4 p.m. is a better time to relax, because by then most of the children have left.

Trying to service that many people at one time, managing lifeguards, listening to patron complaints and servicing the pool keeps Van Wyk running from the time the pool opens at 6:30 a.m. until 9 p.m.

Even a nonswimmer like UI senior Joshelle Gildon can't resist dipping into the waters whenever she gets the chance, although getting her out of the water may be something entirely different.

"I can't believe I'm in a swimsuit!" she exclaimed. "But in these 90-degree days when there's nothing else to do, I just like being in the water."

Regents hear orchestrated plan for minority recruitment

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Instead of a melting pot or a salad bowl, colleges and universities should strive for the image of a symphony orchestra in their efforts to attract and retain minorities, a professor from the University of Northern Iowa told the Iowa state Board of Regents at its meeting Tuesday.

"We need to include this image, where everyone is respected for their uniqueness and talents, and where a tuba will let a piccolo remain a piccolo," said Scharron Clayton, citing the ideas of an educational researcher. "A tuba recognizes, even if it's never seen a piccolo lo before, that once the music comes out, it will help us to play effectively."

Clayton, associate professor and assistant dean of the UNI College of Humanities and Fine Arts, addressed the board on the subject of recruitment and retention of minority students and faculty at the regents institutions.

"The status of ethnic minorities on our campuses is in jeopardy," she said. "Most every college and university in the country at some time must wonder why they cannot either attract students and faculty of color or, if they attract them, why they can't retain them."

One important step for campuses is to identify the risk probability for students of color dropping out or transferring, Clayton said.

"When students and faculty of color walk upon our campuses nationally and locally, they are putting themselves at risk," she said.

Programs can be designed to reduce the risk for particular student populations, Clayton said. Programs also may be needed for the entire campus to help improve the climate for minorities, she added.

The climate and environment on campuses are key issues in tenure decisions, acts of intolerance, and reasons for students and faculty members leaving a school, Clayton said.

"Many believe that if we simply increase the number of minorities, our climate and tradition for retention will improve," she said. "The evidence suggests otherwise. An increase in the presence of minorities will accompany an increase in the use of stereotypes among persons in the environment."

Clayton said campuses experience three stages in successfully recruiting and retaining minority students and faculty. First, institutions remove barriers to minority admissions.

Next, colleges and universities work to improve the environment and recruit a more diverse faculty and administration — who serve as role models for the student population, she said. This will improve retention rates.

To help graduation rates, schools must take the third step: getting faculty to help minority students achieve academic success in all majors, Clayton said.

The allocation of resources to help achieve these goals must be collaborative in nature, Clayton told the board.

"We have to look at a seamless sort of situation where the entire university garners its energy to support and put forth the issue of retention and recruitment," she said.

Regent John Tyrrell said the issue is one needing continued study and a course of action.

"Any program we set up is realistically going to be a long-term one. It's not going to be fast enough for the people of color, and it's going to be too fast for the white population," he said. "But we should work at encouraging our regents institutions in setting up comprehensive programs."

Regent President Marvin Berenstein encouraged Clayton to work with the board to set up some sort of seminar to address minority recruitment and retention.

Backed-up payments demanded in sewer deal

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City is asking the owner of Baculis' Mobile Home Park to pay the city $88,125, three-fourths of $117,500, for unpaid sewer service received from 1981 to 1992, when the error was discovered.

Both the Johnson County Health Department and city clerk's office have records showing Baculis Park was on the municipal sewer system since 1972. Neither office had any reason to suspect the owner, Dave Baculis, wasn't being billed. The city is seeking reimbursement starting from 1981 instead of 1972 because there aren't any records covering the first nine years.

Under Iowa law, Gentry said, knowledge of one department or office of the city is attributed to the city as a whole whether employees have actual knowledge or not.

Iowa City City Council considered options for collecting the outstanding debt. Baculis has asked the Council to treat him like any other customer when a longtime error is discovered, which means he would pay only half the amount.

The city discovered the discrepancy in July 1992 and began investigation. In a June 9 memo to the Council, city attorney Linda Gentry explains that Baculis Park was connected to the city sanitary sewer system some time between October 1972 and November 1973, but the hookup wasn't done by the city or its contractors.

A sanitary sewer easement was obtained by the city from Baculis, but the easement doesn't grant the park any rights or privileges to connect a private sanitary sewer service line to the city system, Gentry said. She described a "mystery check" which appeared April 28, 1992 but was dated August 1972 for $2,000. There are no city records or indication in the Baculis check register showing the purpose of the check.

"The amount is too high to be a sanitary sewer service connection fee, and may have been an assessment fee," Gentry says in the memo. "The check remains unexplained."

Finance Department billings to Baculis Park clearly showed it was only being billed for water and refuse (solid waste), Gentry said.

Linda Gentry, Iowa City city attorney in a memo regarding the discrepancy

Baculis claims unfair treatment, Gentry says, based on the fact that the city paid for individual water meters to be installed at one Iowa City mobile home park but refused to do it for Baculis Park in the early 1970s. Gentry confirmed this, referring to "different fiscal and political climates."

If Baculis doesn't pay the amount asked by the Council within 60 days, the Council will then consider a resolution to collect the money in the same manner as a property tax.

Council lets parking issue idle, hands out accessibility advice

City attorney says procedure exists by which businesses can navigate tricky building codes to help serve the disabled.

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

Miscommunication between the city and the construction contractor of the Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., 214 N. Linn St., led to a nonhandicapped accessible entrance to the restaurant, the owner said in response to a protest yesterday.

David Panther, Hamburg Inn No. 2 owner, told the Iowa City City Council he wanted to make the restaurant handicap accessible after a recent fire but was told that it wasn't possible due to city building codes.

City attorney Linda Gentry said there is an easement procedure in place to make it possible to get around codes which prohibit a sloped entrance and a doorway that's flush with the sidewalk.

Panther said he's willing to make the changes and will have his contractor contact Gentry.

The Council also deferred a proposal to increase parking ramp rates until Aug. 2 so that a subcommittee can look into the issue. The proposed ordinance would increase hourly parking fees in the Capitol Street parking ramp from 50 cents per hour to 30 cents per 30 minutes and in the Dubuque Street parking ramp from 45 cents per hour to 30 cents per 30 minutes.

Revenue generated from the new rates will go to the transit system and also fund Johnson County SEATS, a paratransit service for the elderly and disabled, which needs an additional $90,000 to cover a budget shortfall.

The Iowa City Downtown Association lobbied against the raise, saying it would hurt businesses and compound a "negative perception" of the parking situation.

In other business, the Council approved a two-year agreement for a 3 percent across-the-board wage increase for city employees at the beginning of each year to begin July 1.

The Council also decided to apply for grant funds from the Iowa Department of Transportation to construct the Iowa River Corridor Trail between Sturgis Ferry Park and Napoleon Park, which includes a crossing of the river. The total project cost is estimated at $500,000.

investigation," said Cmdr. David Gascon, a police spokesman. "There is no indication at this point that any arrest is imminent."

The Times and Los Angeles Daily News reported Tuesday that a blood-soaked glove was found at Simpson's home, with the Daily News saying the glove matched one found near the bodies.

Weitzman denied that a bloody glove was found at the house. He confirmed that a bloody towel was found in Simpson's room at the O'Hare Plaza-Hotel in Chicago but said Simpson used it when he broke a glass in the room and cut himself.

In still another development, therapist Susan Forward told KCBS-TV that Nicole Simpson was "a classic battered wife" who was threatened and stalked by her ex-husband.

The beatings "were very severe ... he would say to her things like, if he can't have her then no one can," said Forward.

Forward said she had two sessions with Nicole Simpson while she was going through her divorce in 1992.

Meanwhile, dozens of reporters and photographers kept vigil outside Simpson's $1.2 million gated estate, watching a stream of visitors come and go. Among them were the singer Jermaine Jackson, Simpson's former University of Southern California and Buffalo Bills teammate Bob Chandler and Simpson's sister.

Simpson was questioned for more than three hours Monday in the slayings of Nicole Simpson, 35, his second ex-wife, and Goldman, 25, a waiter at the trendy Mezzawith the apparent murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Lyle Goldman near the woman's Los Angeles-area condominium.

luna restaurant near Nicole Simpson's Brentwood condominium.

Their bloodied bodies were found about 12:10 a.m. Monday near the condo, about two miles from Simpson's estate in Brentwood.

Weitzman said police estimated the killings occurred at 11 p.m. Sunday.

Simpson and his ex-wife spent Sunday afternoon with their two children at a school music recital.

Simpson reportedly flew from Los Angeles to Chicago on an 11:45 p.m. flight Sunday. The airport is about nine miles in a straight line from his home.

In Chicago, he checked into a hotel where he had made a reservation three to five days earlier.

Simpson rushed home after hearing of the killings, his attorney said.

Asked if law enforcement has ever characterized Simpson as a suspect in the deaths, Weitzman said, "There has been no indication by law enforcement to me of that fact. They've been communicative and we are in touch."

Weitzman refused to discuss small reddish-brown stains leading up Simpson's driveway to a point about 50 feet from the garage. Police marked the stains Tuesday during a search of the estate.

Simpson, 46, and Nicole Simpson had a stormy relationship. In 1989, Simpson allegedly screamed

"I'll kill you" as he slapped and kicked his then-wife in a pre-dawn New Year's Day argument. He pleaded no-contest to wife beating and was placed on two years' probation.

The couple divorced in 1992, but friends said they were trying to reconcile. Their children, who were sleeping in the condo when the bodies were found, are reportedly staying with relatives.

The relationship between Goldman and Nicole Simpson was unclear. Simpson said through his attorney that he had never heard of Goldman.

But neighbors of Nicole Simpson said they had seen Goldman with the woman and her children.

but the peacekeepers are too few and too lightly armed to prevent abductions and murders. The U.N. Security Council has authorized 5,500 peacekeepers for Rwanda, but they are not expected to arrive for weeks.

The government army and rebel soldiers held more cease-fire talks Tuesday at the U.N. compound in Kigali. But the rebels warned they might break off the talks over the abduction of the children.

"This is very, very serious," said Col. Frank Mugambage, a rebel officer.

Another round of talks was set for Thursday, but it was not clear whether the rebels would attend.

The rebels have defeated government troops in most of the north and east of the central African nation and are expected to focus their efforts on Kigali, which they have largely surrounded. Rebel leaders say they will not agree to a cease-fire until the government stops the massacre of Tutsis.

In neighboring Burundi, meanwhile, soldiers of the Tutsi-dominated army traded sporadic gunfire with armed civilians of the Hutu majority in hills overlooking Bujumbura.

It was the fifth straight day of violence in and around Burundi's capital, increasing worries that ethnic slaughter could spread from Rwanda. Clashes also have been reported in northwestern Burundi in recent days.

Tension has been high between Burundi's Tutsis and the Hutus, who won control of the government in the country's first democratic elections last June. The Tutsis retained control of the army.

As in Rwanda, rivalry between the two ethnic groups has led to frequent bloodbaths since independence from Belgium in 1962.

There was widespread violence in Burundi last fall in which an estimated 100,000 people were killed and 1 million fled their homes. The trouble followed an unsuccessful military coup in October.

leaned against his Schwinn mountain bike in the Wendy's Old-Fashioned Hamburgers restaurant parking lot shortly after his arrival.

The trek was sponsored by Wendy's.

Thunder-McGuire rode past Alaskan glaciers, through the Yukon and over the Canadian Rockies, at one point climbing 6,000 feet with his 100 pounds of gear. By the time he finished, he had worn out one pair of thick rubber tires.

Thunder-McGuire said back spasms plagued him for the first couple of days of his trips. Somewhere in British Columbia, he peddled over a hill to find a blond grizzly bear in his path.

"I clapped and hollered and hoped he would leave. After 25 minutes, a car came from the other direction and the bear went from my side of the road," he said. "After that, everybody told me bear stories."

On the last leg, he battled the sweltering heat wave in Iowa. But the hardest part of the trip overall, Thunder-McGuire said, was the 30 mph headwinds he was constantly battling.

Thunder-McGuire, who phoned his family daily, made the trek alone. Besides his bike, he said he depended mostly on duct tape which he used to fix a tire, patch a sleeping mattress and repair a pair of boots.

He started his day at 5 a.m. and tried to ride 80 miles before 1 p.m. The afternoons were devoted to more leisurely riding. Around 8:30 p.m. he would go to sleep, either in a campground or hotel, and start again the next day.

On his record day he traveled 160 miles.

The pledges for his trip have totaled $2,500 so far. Pledge sheets can still be obtained at Wendy's and UIHC schools.

Dennis Corwin, principal of UIHC schools' patient education department, called Thunder-McGuire's fund-raising accomplishment an "incredible commitment" which "gives us inspiration."

Thunder-McGuire became involved with the Miracle Arts Program when he visited there as an artist.

HEALTH CARE

year and returns home to campaign.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell told reporters he was prepared to consider "any reasonable alternative" to Clinton's original bill, as long as it achieved universal coverage.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., indicated Clinton's proposal to require employers to pay for health insurance would have to be softened.

"My preference is to have an employer-employee requirement that goes into effect right away," he said. But he added, "There also is nothing wrong with considering the idea of phasing this in some way."

The issue of whether companies should have to insure their workers remained the key point of debate.

Rep. Sam Gibbons, acting chairman of Ways and Means, said his panel's vote affirming the requirement for employers to provide insurance was a "drop-dead, do-or-die amendment." Gibbons said before the vote that if the requirement had been voted down, health-care reform for this session of Congress would have been dead.

Democrats on the House Education and Labor Committee rejected a Republican plan that would require employers to offer — but not pay for — insurance coverage.

Demonstrating the importance to the White House of guaranteed health coverage for all, Hillary Rodham Clinton refused to rule out the possibility of sacrificing abortion coverage to reach that goal.

She told the League of Women Voters it was hard to tell "exactly where we are going to have to make whatever compromise, or where it's going to be taken out of our hands and the Congress will basically argue it out."

Asked point-blank if they should ever consider backing down on abortion rights to achieve comprehensive health reform, Rodham Clinton replied, "That's one of those questions that we just cannot even answer right now, because we have to get to the forest of universal coverage first."

The dilemma for Clinton is how to ensure coverage for all if not by requiring employers to pay most costs for their workers.

Moynihan's committee, with several moderate Republicans, is seen as an important forum in the search for a compromise.

WITHDRAWAL PROMPTS ACTION

U.S., Japan and S. Korea agree to impose sanctions on N. Korea

Paul Shin
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Voicing dismay over North Korea's plan to quit the U.N. nuclear watchdog group, the United States, Japan and South Korea pledged Tuesday to push ahead with sanctions against the Communist state.

South Korean authorities, meanwhile, sought to calm the public, scaling back plans for the biggest civil-defense drill in years and publicly playing down the possibility of war with North Korea. But jitters sent South Korean stock prices down sharply.

North Korea's withdrawal from the International Atomic Energy Agency would make it virtually impossible to check whether it is complying with provisions of the nuclear arms-control pact it signed in 1985.

Although the regime in Pyongyang says its nuclear-research program is for peaceful purposes, the refusal to permit full U.N. inspections has fueled suspicions that the North Korea is trying to build atomic bombs.

Officials of the IAEA said they had not been notified by North Korea that it was withdrawing from the 120-nation U.N. organization. But North Korea's ambassador to the United Nations, Pak Gil Yon, told reporters in New York on Tuesday that formal notice would be delivered later in the day.

The United States is leading a campaign to impose sanctions to pressure North Korea to allow U.N. inspections. The isolationist North Korean government has warned it would consider sanctions an act of war.

President Clinton and Prime Minister Tsutomu Hata of Japan spoke by telephone Tuesday about North Korea's announcement late Monday that it was leaving the IAEA. Japan's Foreign Ministry quoted Clinton as saying North Korea's withdrawal would make the nuclear dispute more serious.

In Seoul, South Korea's foreign minister, Han Sung-joo, said prospects for dialogue with North Korea had diminished. "We have now run into a critical juncture where decisive and firm measures are necessary," he said.

The Japanese Foreign Ministry

said North Korea's action "runs counter to the desires of international society" and urged it to reconsider. Japan renewed its promise to support any sanctions agreed to by the U.N. Security Council.

After an emergency meeting of South Korean security officials, Deputy Prime Minister Lee Hong-koo said Pyongyang's move would strengthen international resolve to seek sanctions, a process he predicted would take two to three weeks.

"We have now run into a critical juncture where decisive and firm measures are necessary."

Han Sung-joo, South Korea's foreign minister

In recent days, South Korea has taken steps to improve war readiness, including ordering a check of underground shelters and emergency water supplies. Its military is on high alert and police are on special guard against saboteurs and infiltrators.

But on Tuesday, authorities moved to calm public unease. "There is no reason to talk or worry about a war," said Han, the foreign minister.

A statement issued by Prime Minister Lee Yung-duk stressed that today's civil defense drill, billed earlier as the biggest such exercise in years, would be routine.

"These events were designed to remind the public that there is nothing to fear as long as we are fully prepared," Lee's statement said.

Making an informal effort to mediate the dispute, former President Carter met with President Kim Young-sam and other South Korean officials Tuesday. Carter plans to visit North Korea for four days despite the North Korean pullout from the IAEA, South Korean officials said.

South Korean newspapers, quoting unidentified government sources, said Carter would convey to North Korean officials U.S. conditions for high-level talks on improving ties, something Pyongyang has long sought.

Those conditions include North Korea allowing inspections of two facilities at its main nuclear complex at Yongbyon and disclosing records on extracting plutonium in the past, the Seoul newspaper Dong-A Ilbo said.

An IAEA demand for inspections of the two sites, which North Korea has denied are nuclear facilities, prompted the Pyongyang government to announce in March 1993 that it would quit the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Associated Press

South Korean firefighters, dressed in fire-prevention suits, prepare an escape chute during a civil-defense drill in downtown Seoul, South Korea, Tuesday. A national drill is scheduled for today in preparation for a possible North Korean attack. About 200 firefighters and 10 fire engines took part in Tuesday's drill.

PARTISAN RHETORIC ENSUES

Senate votes on limited hearings investigating Whitewater venture

Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted on straight party lines Tuesday for a Democratic resolution to begin narrowly focused Whitewater hearings by July 29, rejecting Republican demands for a broad inquiry.

The straight party-line vote of 56-43 came after a fiercely partisan debate on Whitewater.

The hearings are to probe the propriety of meetings between Clinton administration officials and banking regulators and the death of White House Deputy Counsel Vincent Foster, who handled some Whitewater matters for the president.

But they will not, as Republicans wanted, delve into President and Hillary Rodham Clintons' Arkansas land investment, known as Whitewater.

Hearings into that subject will be held only after special counsel Robert Fiske Jr. completes his criminal probe of that subject, Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, insisted.

Fiske said he would be finished with the Washington phase of his work — looking into the meetings with regulators and Foster's death — by the end of July.

The hearings issue has tied up the Senate since the middle of last week with partisan rhetoric, and Whitewater debate continued after the vote — all part of an unrelated airport construction bill.

The Whitewater resolution was sponsored by Mitchell, who said Republicans were only interested in "a political circus." But across the country, he said, "nobody's paying any attention to this."

He said GOP senators were trying "to damage the reputation of the president and first lady of the United States. That's what this is all about."

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., the chief Republican supporter of more comprehensive hearings, countered that Democrats were trying to cover up a scandal.

"Would Democratic colleagues accept hearings so limited in scope if there was a Republican in the White House?" he asked.

Sen. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., said the Mitchell resolution would "continue the stonewalling" by Democrats. He called the plan "the Mitchell fig-leaf amendment."

Mitchell's resolution calls for the hearings to be conducted by the Senate Banking Committee.

The hearings are to focus on:
• Communications between White House officials and banking regulators relating to the Clintons' former Arkansas real estate investment. The focus would be on the contacts, not the investment.

• The National Park Service police investigation into the death of White House Deputy Counsel Vincent Foster, who handled some Whitewater matters for the president.

• The way White House officials handled documents in Foster's office after his death.

D'Amato proposed that a special banking subcommittee, evenly divided between Democrats and Republicans, investigate 17 areas. The N.Y. Republican, as ranking GOP member of the committee, sought to be co-chairman of the investigation and give Republicans independent subpoena power to call their own witnesses.

D'Amato wanted to probe:
• Details of the operations of Whitewater Development, the land investment company, and management of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association, which was owned by the Clintons' Whitewater partner.

• Policies of the Resolution Trust Corp., federal banking agencies and other federal regulatory agencies.

• The Justice Department's handling of the Resolution Trust Corp.'s criminal referrals to the Madison Guaranty case.

• Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., did not vote.

British cop fined for slapping youth

Jessica Baldwin
Associated Press

LONDON — When police Constable Steve Guscott caught up with a sassy teen-ager on his beat who had been harassing an old lady, he did what he would have done to one of his own sons — he slapped him.

The teen charged the 42-year-old officer with assault and now Guscott, who has 20 years of unblemished service, must pay $225 and could lose his job.

Guscott has become a hero to many Britons who are disturbed about rising crime and long for a bit of old-fashioned discipline.

"It used to be if you had a run-in with a policeman, he would box you around the ears, and you would go home crying and tell your dad about it and he'd give you another one," said Kevin Escott, a friend of the officer.

Guscott's boss, Avon and Somerset District Commander Superintendent Mike Nelson, said police switchboards had been "totally overwhelmed" Tuesday by calls of support for the officer, who is based in Minehead, 140 miles west of London.

"It does show there is a wind of change within society that perhaps indicates that the pendulum has swung too far, and it may be time to redress that balance," said Nelson, who will be a character witness for Guscott at his disciplinary hearing next month.

The Sun newspaper reported 52,687 in favor of Guscott and 2,195 against him on a "You the Jury" phone line it set up. The Daily Mirror set up a similar line and reported more than 20,000 calls, which were 15 to 1 in favor of the police officer.

At a magistrates' court hearing Monday, Guscott pleaded guilty to common assault of a 14-year-old boy. He was ordered to pay a $150 fine and $75 in compensation to the teen-ager.

The prosecution said Guscott, who had been called to investigate a report of youths repeatedly banging on an old woman's door, struck the teen-ager twice, once on the nose with his elbow and once with an open-handed slap.

Guscott admitted the slap but denied the elbow. His lawyer, Ian Wilson, said the slap was "no more and no less than he would do with his own son if he had behaved in a similar manner."

Escott, who has known Guscott for nine years as a fellow volunteer on emergency sea rescue lifeboats, described the officer as an "honest, straightforward family man."

After the March incident, Guscott explained the case at a lifeboat practice meeting, Escott said in a telephone interview.

"(Guscott) has got our full support. It would have been easy for him to say, 'No, I didn't do it.' But he's not that sort of bloke." He added that the teen was known around town as a troublemaker.

Guscott, whose sons are 9 and 12, won't talk about the incident before the disciplinary hearing. But he described himself to reporters Tuesday as "an old-fashioned bobby."

Sgt. Robin Hobbs, the Police Federation representative for the counties of Avon and Somerset, blamed the courts.

"The youth of today seems to be putting up two fingers to the law and saying there is no punishment for it," Hobbs told BBC radio, referring to an obscene gesture.

Rosemary Thompson, chairwoman of the magistrates' association, told British Broadcasting Corp. radio the courts could not treat Guscott any differently than they would anyone else who pleaded guilty to an assault.

MASS EXODUS EXPECTED

Interviews to validate asylum arranged for Haitian refugees

George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bracing for a large-scale exodus from Haiti, more than 60 U.S. immigration officers have assembled in Jamaica to begin implementing the new policy of offering a haven to Haitians fleeing political persecution.

An administration official said the operation in Kingston may be the immigration service's largest in the world.

But outside critics expressed concern that the "asylum interview" experiment may be inadequate.

Arthur Helton, director of migration programs at the Open Society Institute, said he believes that President Clinton may be left with no choice but to intervene militarily if the Haitian exodus overwhelms the processing facilities.

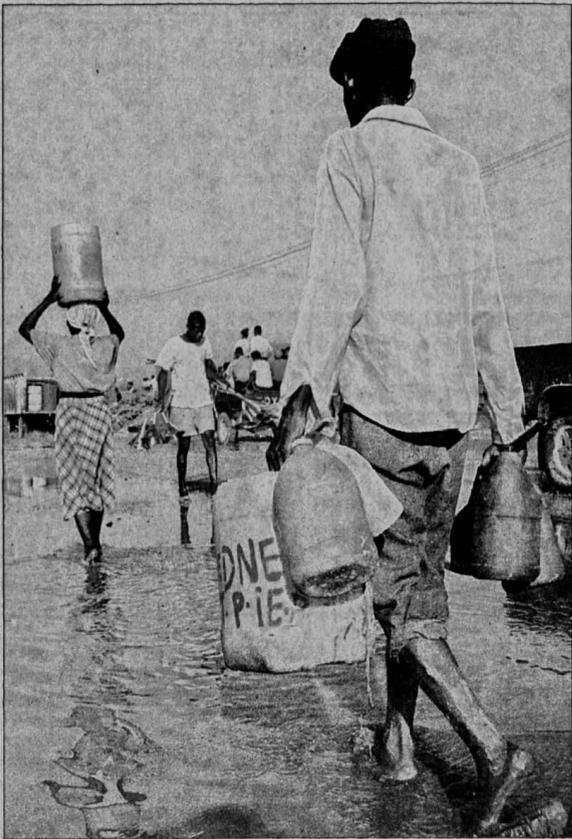

Asked about that possibility, an administration official said the United States is expecting an outflow larger than can be accommodated, but he declined to specify the official projections.

Officials were being coy on Tuesday about when the shipboard processing center will open for business, apparently out of concern that a publicly announced target date could lead to a surge of refugees. Officials would say only that the processing center will open soon.

More than five weeks have passed since Clinton said he was suspending his policy of forcibly returning all Haitian boat people to their homeland. The delay in getting the program off the ground has prompted some criticism that the administration is not serious about sparing political refugees.

More than 1,500 Haitian boat people have been repatriated without screening since Clinton's announcement.

When the new policy goes into effect, Haitian migrants picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard will be taken to Kingston harbor for shipboard interviews. Those who plausibly claim they are fleeing political persecution will be allowed to go to the United States or to a third country to pursue their asylum claims. The remainder will be repatriated to Haiti.

The administration also is making arrangements for land-based processing in the Turks and Caicos Islands, but the Jamaican operation will open first.

Lawyers take tactical turn in Menendez trial

Associate Press

LOS ANGELES — Lyle Menendez threatened his younger brother, Erik, the night they killed their parents, Erik's lawyers say. That's news to the prosecutors, who cite the brothers' harmonious defense at their first murder trial.

The allegation, a sign that there may be a split defense as the brothers face a new trial, came to light Monday as prosecutors replied to a brief Erik's lawyers filed in April that was never made public.

The prosecutors quoted the defense brief as saying Lyle, 26, had threatened Erik, 23, and that it was crucial for the defense to prove the "theory that Erik was fearful of Lyle at the time of the alleged crimes."

Prosecutors countered in their brief that any effort to portray Lyle Menendez as the mastermind who dominated Erik conflicted with Erik's 10 days of testimony in the brothers' first trial.

The brothers admitted to the shotgun slayings of their millionaire parents, Jose Menendez, 45, and Kitty, 47, at their Beverly Hills mansion in 1989. The brothers said they killed their parents in self-defense, fearing they would kill them after years of physical and psychological abuse.

The prosecution argued the brothers killed to get their hands on the multimillion-dollar family fortune, which has since dwindled.

At the trial, Erik never mentioned fearing his brother.

Caned teen visited by mother one week before slated release

Associated Press

SINGAPORE — With a week of his prison sentence remaining, an American teen-ager who became the center of an international clamor after he was flogged was visited by his mother Tuesday.

"He seems very, very good," Randy Chan told reporters after a 20-minute call on Michael Fay, 19, at Queenstown Prison.

"He had a lot of things to say, but some were personal," she said.

Chan was accompanied by two teen-age friends of her son.

Apart from his lawyers and U.S. Embassy officials, three people can see Fay every two weeks.

CRITERIA SYSTEM IN DEVELOPMENT

Computer-game ratings planned

Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The computer-game industry will develop a ratings system to voluntarily label the sex and violent content of about 2,000 new games that come to market each year.

The Software Publishers Association, the industry's principal trade group, said Tuesday it will work with four other computer software groups to develop ratings criteria and symbols. Ken Wasch, executive director of the association, said the group will also try to coordinate its ratings with those of video game makers.

Consumers could see labeled games on retailers' shelves by December's holiday shopping season, Wasch said in an interview.

Under the plan, the industry won't rate some 5,000 computer games already in stores, Wasch said. The plan would cover games sold on floppy discs as well as CD-ROMs, compact discs that look like music CDs but contain sound, text and images.

The video-game industry is developing its own set of ratings criteria for sex and violent content for those games played on special devices hooked up to TV sets.

Congressional and consumer concern over the violent content in video games has led to a number of ratings proposals covering both video and computer games.

Although both industries are taking steps in this area, lawmakers have said they will continue to press ahead with legislation.

Differences between the two industries over the content of a ratings scheme have led video-game and computer-game companies to begin developing separate plans.

"No one wants to see two sets of ratings that could confuse consumers," Wasch said.

Even though future video and computer games will be labeled, there's nothing in any of the ratings plans that would require a retailer to sell only new games that are rated.

And there is nothing to stop a retailer from selling a game with a lot of sexual content to a child. Those decisions will be left up to individual retailers.

AMA seeks new classifications

Brenda C. Coleman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Letters and numbers aren't enough, the American Medical Association says in calling for more descriptive movie ratings.

It wants ratings to target more age groups, describe violent acts and extend to television programs. It also wants to include future entertainment technologies and to apply ratings to video and music recordings.

At their annual five-day meeting, AMA policy-makers voted to support overhauling the current rating system. The action follows recent congressional attention to violence on big and small screens.

"It is not censorship, it is helping parents parent," said Dr. Robert McAfee, an AMA trustee and the group's president-elect.

"Given the ubiquitousness of violent programming that can come into your home, that any 4- or 5-year-old may witness ... we have every right as physicians to begin to do prevention."

The push for expanded and extended ratings came from the AMA's trustees. The AMA's 430 policy-makers on Tuesday adopted their recommendations without debate.

Now the 294,000-member AMA, the nation's largest doctors' group, will use its clout to try to get the recommendations on ratings implemented.

Among other proposals, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., has gone as far as pushing a monitoring system, though he has said he would ask colleagues to abandon legislation if the industry voluntarily monitors itself and makes annual reports.

Barbara Dixon, a spokeswoman for the Motion Picture Association of America, said her group is always willing to listen to criticism but does not undertake changes in the rating system lightly.

"The parents think it's doing a pretty good job," she said. "We're hesitant to change something that's worked so well."

UI's Mims receives Hewlett award

Iowa associate athletic director Fred Mims has been named recipient of the 1994 Lan Hewlett Award. He received the award last week in Chicago at a convention for the National Association of Academic Advisors for Athletics.

The award was established in 1989 in honor of Lan Hewlett, a longtime academic advisor at the University of Texas. The award is presented annually to a collegiate academic advisor for outstanding performance in athletics.

Mims has been director of athletic student services for the past 15 years and lettered at the UI in baseball and basketball.

BASKETBALL

Big Ten team playing rough in South America

A Big Ten all-star basketball team had three players ejected for fighting and fell to 0-4 with a 92-77 loss to Argentina despite 16 points and eight rebounds by Iowa's Kenyon Murray.

The loss in Buenos Aires Monday completed the first part of a trip to Argentina. The Big Ten team, coached by Iowa's Tom Davis, will play the Argentine National Team again today in Tucuman and finish its trip with another game in Tucuman on Thursday against an opponent yet to be named.

Argentina was leading 41-37 with 43 seconds left in the first half when a fight broke out after a battle for a rebound. Purdue's Justin Jennings, Michigan State's Jamie Feick and Howard Moore of Illinois, plus three Argentine players, were ejected.

Penn State's Dan Earl and Ohio State's Rick Yudd each added 15 points for the Big Ten team. Iowa's Andre Woolridge missed his second straight game because of a thigh bruise. He's expected to play Wednesday.

Murray is the Big Ten's leading scorer on the trip, averaging 16.5 points.

NBA

Lucas takes over in Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Lucas took charge of the Philadelphia 76ers on Tuesday and his assessment of the situation was honest.

"We won't win the NBA championship next year," he said, "but we hope to be a better team."

Lucas doesn't have to do all that much to accomplish that goal as the 76ers have lost 160 games in failing to make the playoffs the past three seasons.

Owner Harold Katz signed Lucas to a four-year contract as vice president of basketball operations, general manager and coach.

The general manager's job opened last month when Jim Lynam left to coach the Washington Bullets.

Title game could be moved from Orange Bowl

MIAMI (AP) — The chairman of the Orange Bowl Committee says the New Year's night game will remain in its current home — for now.

Ed Williamson said he supported a move from the Orange Bowl to Joe Robbie Stadium. In response to the remark, dozens of city leaders lobbied to keep from losing the game.

"My position is: I'm not going to try to steer the committee at this point," Williamson said. "It's not going to be a subject of discussion anymore. A year from now, when we're in the last year of our contract, it'll be appropriate for the committee to look at all our options and whether we should continue playing in that stadium."

Rangers break 54-year-old jinx

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Fifty-four years of waiting, 54 years of wanting, are over. The New York Rangers are Stanley Cup champions at last!

The Rangers capped an extraordinary championship series by beating the Vancouver Canucks 3-2 Tuesday night in Game seven.

As the tense final seconds ticked off the clock at Madison Square Garden, where the home team had never before hoisted the most famous trophy in team sports, 18,200 raucous fans released more than five decades of pent-up passion.

Fireworks exploded, smoke filled the arena, everyone wearing white jerseys hugged, and fans exchanged high-fives and screamed as rock music blared from the Garden audio system.

The announcement that Rangers defenseman Brian Leetch won the Conn Smythe Trophy as playoff MVP was barely audible over the triple-digit-decibel celebration of the end of hockey's cruelest curse.

Finally, 4,232 games after last winning Lord Stanley's cup in 1940, the Rangers tasted sweet success again.

The fourth championship for New York, which also won in 1928 and 1933, ended the league's longest title drought. That dubious distinction now belongs to the Detroit Red Wings, who haven't won since 1955.

Three stars who had not shined recently — Leetch, Adam Graves and Mark Messier — came through when it mattered most for the Rangers, who also got a 28-save performance from Mike Richter.

Leetch finished the playoffs with 11 goals and 34 points, second-highest ever in both categories for a defenseman. He is the first American-born player to win the Smythe.

"The Stanley Cup is what we all play for and the Cup here in New York is just amazing," Leetch said. "This was the toughest game I've ever been a part of, just so tough to win."

"It wasn't the 54 years, it was just never having been through it before. Mark kept telling me the fourth game would be toughest you'll ever have to win in your life, and it was."

Messier, the team captain and one of the greatest clutch players in hockey history, held the 32-pound Stanley Cup aloft to the delight of the crowd. He handed it to Leetch, who in turn handed it to Jay Wells. The 35-year-old defenseman, who had never won a title, kissed the trophy before passing it on.

"I'm so numb, I don't know what to say," said Messier, who was on five Stanley Cup champions at Edmonton. "This is completely different — the pressure, the magnitude of being under the microscope, erasing all the ghosts."

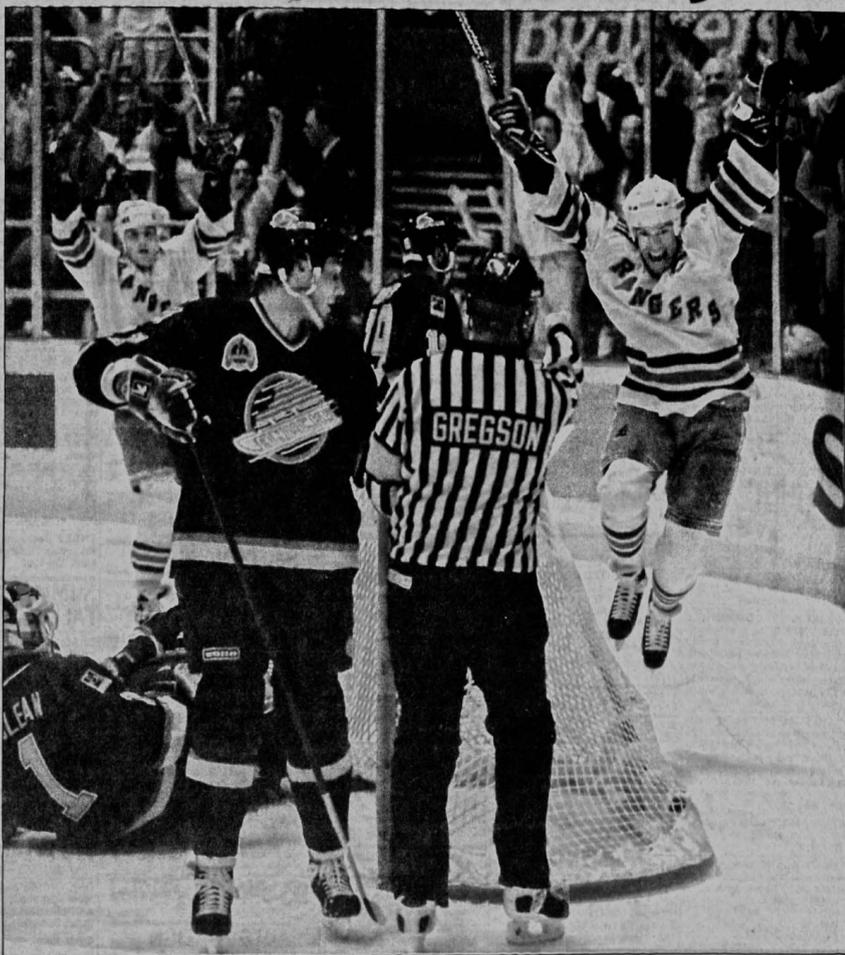

Vancouver, still without a championship since joining the NHL in 1970, had the Rangers scrambling in the third period to protect the prize.

Martin Gelinas just missed the net with Richter out of position with 6:40 to go; about a minute later, a shot by Nathan Lafayette hit the post.

In the end, however, the Canucks couldn't complete what would have been one of hockey's all-time comebacks.

They trailed three games to one before winning twice to force only the 10th Game seven in Stanley Cup finals history. But New York, by virtue of having the league's top regular-season record, got to play Game seven at the Garden and was determined not to become just the second team ever to blow a 3-1 finals lead.

Vancouver had the NHL's 14th-best record but earned its second trip to the finals by upsetting Calgary, Dallas and Toronto in the first three rounds. The Canucks were swept by the New York Islanders in 1982.

"Vancouver played beautifully," Richter said. "The sign of a winner is to come back under adversity."

According to legend, the infamous Stanley Cup Curse was born after the Rangers' success on the ice and at the gate forced the Garden's original hockey tenants — the New York Americans — to fold in 1942. Americans founder Red Dutton said the Rangers wouldn't win another title in his lifetime.

Dutton's jinx worked overtime, well past his death in 1987. In fact, until this year, the Rangers got as far as the finals only three times since Dutton unleashed his hex.

Rivals reveled in the Rangers' misery.

The derisive chant "19-40! 19-40!" has been heard in opponents' arenas for years. It became especially popular on Long Island in the 1980s, when the Islanders — who didn't even join the NHL until 1972 — won four championships.

Rudy T, Riley get ready for 'must-win' Game four

Bill Barnard

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks and Houston Rockets treat success with a smirk. They treat failure with a snarl.

Time and again during the playoffs, the two teams have taken the momentum, only to lose it in a wave of errors and complacency.

But whenever they've been beaten, the Knicks and Rockets have battled back, even when their fans appeared to abandon them.

When the Rockets lost twice at home to Phoenix local papers called Houston "Choke City," and they won three straight. After New York lost its first home game of the playoffs to fall behind 3-2 against Indiana, fans wrote the Knicks off as finished before their game at Indianapolis.

Not only did New York win Game six on the road, they won again in Game seven to advance to the finals against the Rockets, whose comeback victory over Phoenix was almost as shocking of Denver's upset of Seattle.

"To be a champion, you have to overcome human nature," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said Tuesday. "Human nature says that when something happens good, you tend to relax."

With the seventh game of the Stanley Cup hockey series occupying Madison Square Garden Tuesday, the Rockets moved to the Downtown Athletic Club for practice. The team met the media in air-conditioned comfort in the room where Heisman Trophy winners are announced.

"As coach, I have to say the obvious thing is to avoid complacency," Tomjanovich said. "I tell them to stay relaxed and focused when we're ahead. But saying the obvious thing hasn't worked, not for us or the Knicks. That's what I mean when I say you have to overcome human nature to be a champion."

Rockets forward Robert Horry said that when they take the court tonight with a 2-1 lead over the Knicks, they have to tell themselves it's the first of two road games Houston needs to win.

"We still feel like our backs are against the wall because we're going to be in their gym," Horry said. "Maybe that's the way to keep the momentum going, and we can win the next two games. We can't let them win two on their court and go up 3-2."

Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon said he wanted to "play this like a must-win game because we have to keep them down. Just winning the series should be motivational enough."

Knicks coach Pat Riley said that the Rockets' talk about sweeping three games in New York has his team ready mentally.

"Momentum can backfire on a team in this situation because you get full of yourself," Riley said. "You get proud of what you've done."

Derek Harper, who had his best game of the playoffs in Sunday's loss with 21 points, seven assists and four steals, said that happened to the Knicks after they won at Houston in Game two.

"We've had our ups and downs, like any basketball team," Harper said. "The hardest thing is to find some consistency. It's difficult to stay on an even keel."

"We need to get the momentum back and take it with us the rest of the way," Knicks forward Charles Smith said.

Twins win sixth straight

Associated Press

BOSTON — The Minnesota Twins won their sixth straight game and sent the Boston Red Sox to their sixth consecutive defeat Tuesday night, taking advantage of three errors for a 5-4 victory.

The Twins scored unearned runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings. Dave Winfield broke a 4-4 tie in the fifth with a sacrifice fly.

The Red Sox lost their eighth in a row at Fenway Park. They have dropped 11 of their last 13 overall.

Third baseman Scott Cooper, shortstop John Valentin and first baseman Mo Vaughn made the Boston errors. Vaughn let Cooper's throw go through his glove in the fifth, allowing the tying run to score and setting up Winfield's sacrifice fly.

Dave Stevens (2-1) pitched 3½ innings of scoreless relief for the Twins. Gar Finnvid (0-4), who allowed five runs — two earned — in four innings for Boston, is still seeking his first major-league win.

Rick Aguilera, the sixth Minnesota pitcher, got three outs for his 14th save.

Twins starter Pat Mahomes lasted just 2½ innings, allowing four runs on three hits and five walks.

Chuck Knoblauch had a two-run single for Minnesota in the third and Matt Walbeck drove in a run in the fourth on a groundout.

Andre Dawson hit a three-run homer for Boston, his 12th of the season. He now has 424 home runs and 1,003 extra-base hits, one behind Honus Wagner for 20th place on the career extra-base hit list.

Indians 7, Blue Jays 5

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle and Eddie Murray started the eighth inning with home runs on consecutive pitches as the Cleveland Indians beat the Toronto Blue Jays for their 13th straight home win.

The streak at Jacobs Field matches the Indians' best since they won 14 in a row at Cleveland Stadium in 1954 — the year of their last pennant. They also won 13 straight home games in 1965. Belle and Murray each drove in three runs off Juan Guzman (6-6). Belle hit an RBI single in the first, then added an RBI double in the third before Murray followed with a two-run single.

Angels 1, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chuck Finley pitched a seven-hitter and outdueled Mark Gubicza as the California Angels scored an unearned run to beat the Kansas City Royals.

Finley (5-5) raised his career record in Kauffman Stadium to 5-2, walking one and striking out eight. It was his second shutout of the season and 10th of his career, and fourth complete game.

Gubicza (4-6) struck out a season-high eight, walked only one and gave up eight hits in 7½ innings.

The Angels were helped by two errors.

The Royals loaded the bases with one out in the fifth on singles by Dave Henderson, Felix Jose and Terry Shumpert's walk. But Jose Lind grounded into a double play.

Thanks to the Beef Industry Council, easy to understand information and illustrations are now available at each Econofoods to provide consumers cutting directions, storage and wrapping guidelines, product information and recipe ideas for whole cuts of beef. With this information you can buy cost saving large packages of beef with the confidence to provide a good value for your family.

BROILED STEAKS WITH BELL PEPPER AND POTATOES

TOTAL PREPARATION AND COOKING TIME: 30 MINUTES (4 SERVINGS)

- 2 boneless beef top loin steaks, cut 1 inch thick (approx. 8 ounces each)
- 2 large baking potatoes, cut lengthwise into 8 wedges
- 1 large red bell pepper, cut lengthwise into 8 wedges
- Seasoning:
  - 2 tablespoons olive oil
  - 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
  - 1 teaspoon garlic salt
  - 1 teaspoon dried rosemary leaves, crushed
  - 1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
  - 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves, crushed

1. Pierce potatoes with fork. Microwave on HIGH 6 minutes. Cool slightly; cut lengthwise into 4 wedges.
2. Meanwhile in medium bowl, combine seasoning ingredients. Add potatoes and bell pepper; toss to coat.
3. Place beef steaks and vegetables on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Broil steaks 12 to 17 minutes until steaks are rare to medium doneness and vegetables are tender, turning steaks and vegetables once.
4. Trim fat from steaks. Carve steaks into slices; serve with vegetables.

STEAK WITH SPICY POTATOES

TOTAL PREPARATION AND COOKING TIME: 30 MINUTES (4 SERVINGS)

- 1 pound boneless beef top sirloin steak, cut 1 inch thick
- Vegetable cooking spray
- 2 large all-purpose potatoes, cut diagonally into 1/2 inch thick slices
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 teaspoon Spicy Seasoning Mix
- Salt (optional)

1. Spray rack of broiler with cooking spray. Place steak on one side of rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat; arrange potatoes on the other side. Combine oil and seasoning mix; brush potatoes with half of the mixture.
2. Broil 16 to 18 minutes until steak is rare to medium doneness and potatoes are tender, turning steaks and potatoes once; brush potatoes with remaining seasoned oil.
3. Trim fat from steak. Carve steak crosswise into slices. Season steak and potatoes with salt, if desired.

Spicy Seasoning Mix:
Combine 3 tablespoons chili powder, 2 teaspoons ground cumin, 1-1/2 teaspoons garlic powder, 3/4 teaspoon dried oregano leaves, 1/2 teaspoon ground red pepper. Cover and store in airtight container. Shake before using to blend. (Makes about 1/3 cup)

SPICY THREE-PEPPER STEAK

TOTAL PREPARATION AND COOKING TIME: 30 MINUTES (4 SERVINGS)

- 1 pound beef top round steak, cut 1 inch thick
- Salt (optional)
- Seasoning:
  - 2 cloves garlic, crushed
  - 1 teaspoon paprika
  - 1 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
  - 1/2 teaspoon pepper
  - 1/2 teaspoon ground red pepper
  - 1/2 teaspoon ground white pepper

1. Combine seasoning ingredients; press evenly into both sides of beef steak.
2. Place steak on grid over medium coals. Grill steak 12 to 14 minutes for rare to medium doneness, turning once. Season with salt, if desired.
3. Trim fat from steak, if necessary. Carve steak crosswise into thin slices.

Cook's Tips:
Test about 4 inches above coals for medium with a 4-second hand count.

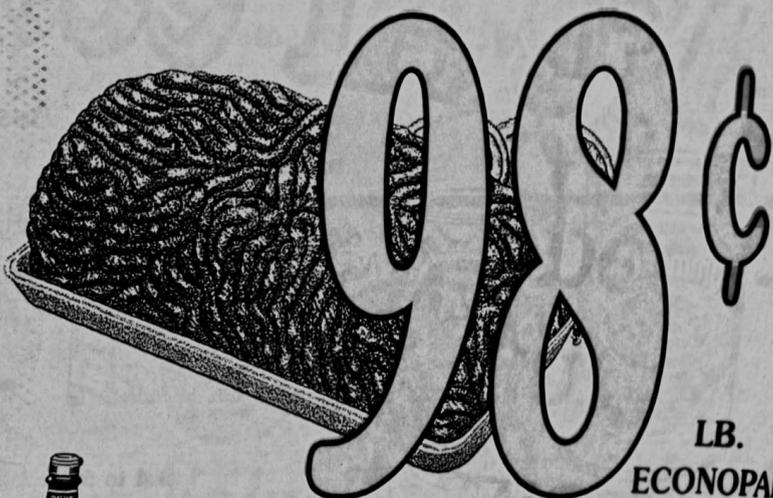

To broil, place steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Broil 15 to 18 minutes for rare to medium doneness, turning once.
