Jailed Simpson maintains innocence

Fred Bayles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The case against O.J. Simpson is by no means conclusive, defense experts say. The reported evidence is circumstantial, no one has found a murder weapon and Simpson's popularity could sway a jury.

"The story hasn't been written yet," said Roy Black, who won an acquittal for William Kennedy Smith in the Palm Beach rape case. "There is no one piece of conclusive evidence. A lot of people are speculating about his guilt, but his personality and popularity can turn it around."

Simpson is charged with killing his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman. He is scheduled to be arraigned today. Simpson and his lawyer, Robert Shapiro, have steadfastly proclaimed his innocence.

Simpson's first day in court would come after a week in which the case was played out across the country in newspaper headlines and live TV.

His 1989 conviction for spousal abuse was exhumed; police reports of her badly beaten face, blackened eye and cut lip were quoted in detail. Disclosures about bloody evidence allegedly linking him to the murders were published daily.

When police followed a fugitive Simpson over 60 miles of Southern California freeways on Friday, the chase and his subsequent capture were televised live. That's unprecedented in the annals of pretrial publicity.

"The greatest danger to the defense is that people will rush to judgment," said J. Albert Johnson, a Boston lawyer who helped defend fugitive heiress Patty Hearst and other high-profile clients. "It has to be stressed that he returned to his home knowing he would be apprehended. That's not flight, that's a well-grounded fear the system would not work in his case."

Johnson and other defense lawyers say it will be up to Shapiro to present the image of a man profoundly distraught and confused over his wife's slaying and the charges against him.

"There are a lot of people who want to believe he's innocent," Black said.

Simpson's popularity is a major factor in his favor. District Attorney Gil Garcetti acknowledged it's an obstacle to winning a conviction.

"There is no doubt that O.J. Simpson the persona, the hero, is something that most people don't want to let go," Garcetti said. "We're going to have to make sure that any (jury) ... can understand and appreciate that even a person you may love, admire and respect may have committed a horrendous crime."

Along with the public relations campaigns will come courtroom strategies.

The Los Angeles Times reported Garcetti has convened a grand jury in the case. Garcetti has refused to confirm the report.

Airplane crashes, killing all 12 aboard

CHANTILLY, Va. (AP) — A plane chartered in Mexico crashed while approaching Dulles International Airport in a heavy fog Saturday, killing all 12 people aboard, U.S. officials said.

Carl Vogt, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the Lear jet had missed one approach to the airport and was attempting a second when it went down in a heavily wooded area on Dulles property.

"There's no sense that anyone lived. There's no one alive," Vogt said at an early afternoon news briefing at the airport.

Jose Henonin, a spokesman for the private commercial chartering company TAESA in Mexico City, said the plane was an Executive Lear with two crewmen and 10 passengers. He said the passengers were headed to Washington, D.C., for the Mexico-Norway World Cup soccer game.

Artwork by mass murderer tossed on bonfire

NAPERVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Paintings by executed mass murderer John Wayne Gacy were set ablaze Saturday in a bonfire attended by 300 people, including family members of nine victims.

Gacy was executed by lethal injection May 10 for the murders of 33 young men and boys in the 1970s.

Businessman Joe Roth, who helped arrange the bonfire, said many relatives of the victims were angry the state didn't allow them to witness the execution.

"I think being here today and being able to toss that stuff on the fire finally gave them some satisfaction," Roth said.

"One of them told me they finally had their chance to stick a knife into Gacy," he said.

Roth and another businessman spent about $7,300 to buy 25 paintings and drawings by Gacy at a May 14 auction. They also bought letters and other Gacy memorabilia. They said at the time their sole purpose for buying the material was to destroy it.

While Gacy was on death row, many people bought his amateurish paintings and drawings either as curiosities or in hopes that they would increase in value.

1st Stonewall Award given at pride rally

Five-year-old Iowa City residents Alicia McGuire (left) and Kate Malone were two of the more vocal chanters during the 10th annual lesbian, gay and bisexual pride rally and parade Saturday. McGuire's mother, Jennifer McGuire, was one of several people who spoke on issues of gay rights during the Pentacrest rally. The event's organizers presented longtime Iowa City gay rights activist Rick Graf (far right, under the umbrella) the first annual Stonewall Award for his service of over 20 years to the Iowa City gay community. Graf was awarded the Iowa City Human Rights award in 1988.

The rally was sponsored by the UI Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association; Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual People's Union, and the Women's Resource and Action Center.

An estimated 50 gay, lesbian and bisexual community members are scheduled to travel to New York this week to participate in one of the biggest international gay rights marches ever.

Sources of dogs for research reviewed

Holly Reinhardt

Efforts to protect pets from becoming the subjects of animal research at the UI are a start, but questions remain as to the effectiveness of the moves, according to local animal rights activists.

"If all universities did that it would be extremely effective. For one university to do it, it's a commendable thing," said Gretchen Hersman of Protect Our Pets of Iowa. "(But) I don't know how effective it will be."

Michael Metzler, a student in the UI medical science training program, said he doesn't expect a significant change in the number of dogs used in research.

"I think it probably will eliminate a few and that's better than none," he said. "I don't think it will make an enormous difference."

David Skorton, UI vice president for Research, said the new policies were instituted in response to July 1993 revisions of the Animal Welfare Act. He said more changes are a possibility as regulations are reviewed.

"I have the attitude that we need to review programs ... (that require regulatory compliance) periodically, at least annually," he said.

As part of the new policy, the UI will no longer purchase dogs that class-B USDA-licensed dealers have purchased from hobby breeders or private individuals. Both class-A and class-B dealers selling dogs to the UI will be required to provide certification of each animal's source.

Class-A dealers are typically breeders of purebred animals, only allowed to sell the dogs they raise. Class-B dealers can breed their

6 KILLED, 5 WOUNDED IN PUB SHOOTING

Sectarian violence escalates in Ireland

Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Two gunmen walked into a rural pub and fired at random Saturday night, killing six people and wounding five, in the worst atrocity in Northern Ireland's sectarian violence in eight months.

The outlawed pro-British Ulster Volunteer Force, a Protestant paramilitary group, claimed responsibility for the attack in the small village of Loughinisland, a largely Roman Catholic area 20 miles southeast of Belfast.

Shootings in the past two days have taken four lives in the province.

The upsurge in violence follows recent British-Irish efforts to draw Sinn Fein, the IRA's political ally, into peace talks on condition the paramilitary group ceases its violent campaign against British rule.

The gunmen drove up to O'Toole's bar at 10:20 p.m., walked in and opened fire, a Royal Ulster Constabulary spokeswoman said on condition of anonymity. There were about 25 people inside at the time.

News reports said the pubgoers had crowded in to watch Ireland's

Artist flourishes with prickly specialty — tattoos

The Daily Iowan

Tattoo artist Kevis Nutt does his best to soothe quaking customers who come to him expecting the worst.

"There was a woman in today who was shaking, she was so scared," Nutt said. "People always expect it to hurt more than it does. They think it's like getting part of their body amputated or something."

Nutt, 21, said he relies on small talk to relax the customers.

came in with a heart and his ex-girlfriend's name tattooed across his arm and he wanted 'VOID' tattooed over the whole thing," Nutt said.

The store usually gets a rush after dark on the weekends, he said, but it closes at midnight.

"Midnight is a good time to close so we don't have to mess with all the drunks getting out of the bars," Nutt said. "Sometimes we'll lock the door at 11 p.m. but not get out of here until 3 a.m. because we have so many people waiting."

At 8:20 p.m. last Friday, a young man came in for a tattoo of a black panther's head on his upper left shoulder to cover up another tattoo that didn't turn out as well as the man had hoped.

Nutt grabbed the plastic bottles filled with colored inks and traced the panther drawing. He then wiped down the customer's arm and covered it with deodorant to aid in the stencil's transfer to the skin. Nutt laughingly called it a "scratch n' sniff" tattoo.

After the outline was on the arm,

Nutt donned a pair of rubber gloves and the buzz of the tattoo needle began. The customer sat quietly with his hands gently clasped in his lap. He said it didn't hurt.

Acquaintances dropped in periodically throughout the night to talk to Nutt and potential customers browsed the walls covered with designs before leaving.

"I don't plan on doing tattoos for the rest of my life. I'd like to go to college and get into the commercial arts field," Nutt said.

DAY IN THE LIFE

Six years ago, his experience with tattoos began when he got his first one, a homemade peace sign, when he was drunk at a party. It looked easy enough, he said, so he began tattooing others and found he could make a living at it. Nutt now has seven tattoos, five of which he did himself.

Most of his tattooing, however, is done at Beauty is Skin Art, 626 S. Dubuque St. Early Friday evening, Nutt had tattooed a rose, a Tasmanian devil and a star with a

Shoppers buy up Oprah's discards

CHICAGO (AP) — Lucky bargain shoppers got a crack at Oprah Winfrey's wardrobe in a charity sale of her castoffs that raised $150,000.

The talk show host said in May she would sell a cache of clothes ranging in sizes from 8 to 22. The first 2,000 viewers from 50,000 who sent in postcards received tickets. More than 900 other articles of clothing were sold at prices ranging from $10 to $1,000.

Too much pickin' has given Jennings finger problems

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Mammias, don't let your babies grow up to be country singers. Some like Waylon Jennings get carpal tunnel syndrome from all that guitar pickin'.

"How y'all doing?" Jennings said Saturday as he greeted the crowd. "Well, I'm not doing so hot."

Jennings' arms were bandaged during his concert with Willie Nelson. Jennings joked he hurt himself while trying to help Nelson fight off police who arrested Nelson in May for marijuana possession.

Then he told the real story: He recently had surgery for a finger problem and for carpal tunnel syndrome, a nerve injury that can come from repeated bending of the wrist.

School of Medicine gains new dean

Dr. Robert Kelch will become the new dean of the UI College of Medicine following approval by the Iowa state Board of Regents at their June meeting. The approval will be effective Aug. 15.

Kelch is professor and chairman of the Department of Pediatrics at the University of Michigan School of Medicine and physician in chief at the C.S. Mott Children's Hospital. He has been a faculty member there since 1972 and recently served as assistant dean for clinical affairs and as chief of clinical affairs at the University of Michigan Hospitals.

New director selected for UI art department

Art historian Craig Adcock has been appointed the new director of the UI School of Art and Art History. His appointment began June 18.

Adcock was professor and director of the art history division of the Department of Art, Art History and Design at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind.

A specialist in 20th-century art, Adcock has published extensively in scholarly journals, exhibition catalogs and anthologies. He has lectured and read papers at conferences, universities and museums around the country and in Europe.

Adcock received a bachelor's degree in painting with a secondary interest in mathematics and a master's degree in art history from the University of Colorado. He received a doctorate in art history from Cornell University.

"Craig Adcock will provide distinguished leadership for the School of Art and Art History," said Judith Aikin, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts. "I expect that he will be very effective in working with the faculty to build on the University of Iowa's tradition of excellence in the fine arts and to make this school truly one of the top programs in the country."

Hottest summer fashion lies in shades

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Beauty lies, apparently, in what covers the eyes of the beholder.

Whether your sunglasses are plastic or metal, green or silver, clip-on or extravagant, the weather is ripe for shades.

Jennifer Dall-Winther, manager of Wild Things, Old Capitol Mall, said this year customers are spending $50 on average for a pair of sunglasses. Wayfarers and Sohos are the two most popular styles, she said. For fashion in glare wear, Oakley is a popular name brand.

"Most people seem to hold onto a pair for about two months," Dall-Winther said. After that, she said, shades seem to get lost or broken or just plain disappear.

UI junior Utkarsh Sinha said he pays about $30 for a pair of sunglasses, and he has to buy about two pairs yearly. He said he looks for sunglasses that immediately entice him. "I look for something that appeals to me right away," he said. "It has to be something I want. Some of them are just too shiny."

Other pairs seem to be too pricey. Customers are averaging $80 to $120 per pair purchase at Sunglass Co., also in the Old Capitol Mall, manager Amy Barton said. Sunglasses can cost as much as $329 at the Sunglass Co., while Wild Things' prices range up to $200.

Barton said Oakley, Révo and Rayban are the most popular at the Sunglass Co.

"Cheaper ones may not last you as long," Barton said. "For some people, sunglasses may last five years, for others five days. It depends on the pair and the person."

Iowa City resident Marcia Ressa said she's more toward the five-day end of the spectrum so she buys accordingly. She has to buy about six pairs of sunglasses over the course of a year.

"My children get a hold of them," she said.

She has never spent more than $20 on a pair of sunglasses. Ressa prefers mirrored lenses. However, she doesn't like her shades too shaded.

Frank Miller/The Daily Iowan

UI junior Kristin Schultz models the pair of sunglasses she bought at a county fair for $40. She says that "cheap" is the main priority when she buys sunglasses. She got these because she really needed a pair and they were available. Sunglasses are turning out to be popular this bright summer.

Glasses uncool without proper lenses, warn experts

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Just because you've got the coolest pair of sunglasses doesn't necessarily mean that you're in the shade.

Opticians warn that without the proper ultraviolet-ray protection, a pair of sunglasses can leave an unsuspecting buyer burned.

Sarah Smith, a certified registered nurse in ophthalmology, said the search for a perfect pair of sunglasses can present problems.

"Sunglass buying is kind of a Catch-22 situation," she said. "You want to look for blockage of both UV-A and UV-B, but some statements on sunglasses can be misleading."

UV-A and UV-B light contain dangerous rays that can lead to various complications of the eyes. Smith said research is currently being conducted to determine the potential for harm from UV exposure to the eyes.

"There are no absolutes out there," she said.

But there are a few guidelines to follow when searching for the best in sight safekeeping.

Smith said that sunglasses should offer at least 99 percent protection from all forms of UV light. She said if a pair of sunglasses offers protection up to 400 nanometers, they offer 100 percent absorption of the UV rays.

Cathi Miller, a certified optician, said there are other factors involved in purchasing sunglasses, too.

"The tint is important," Miller said. "There are different types of tints for different activities. There are certain colors in the color spectrum that eliminate blue, which is glare."

She recommended ambers and browns for drivers, pilots and skiers, because those tints block out the blue and sharpen details.

A polarized gray or brown tint block reflection and glare. She said those tints are ideal for boating and fishing as well as driving.

Library director closes book on 25 years service; successor looks to future

Amanda Morton
The Daily Iowan

When most people hear the word library, they think of books. To Lolly Eggers, outgoing director of the Iowa City Public Library, the word conjures remembrances of work, colleagues and plenty of changes.

Eggers will be retiring July 1. She has worked at the library for 25 years at various times serving as reference librarian, acting director and head of technical services.

"One fascinating pastime through the years has been watching this library grow."

Lolly Eggers, outgoing director of the Iowa City Public Library

Iowa City facility the smallest library ever to receive the award.

While the library has benefited from the changes over the years, Eggers said it has also been bettered by a constant level of community support.

"Iowa City is a highly educated town enthusiastic about using the library," she said.

After a nationwide search, Sara Craig was named as new director and will assume her position upon Eggers' retirement.

Craig, currently the Iowa City library's assistant director and circulation coordinator, does not envision making any drastic changes when she assumes the role of director. However, she has set goals.

"I want to learn all the facets of this very complex operation, and would like to be visible in the community," she explained.

Her goals for the library include planning for future expansion.

There is currently a national search for the assistant director position which is expected to be filled by Sept. 1.

Eggers, who plans to volunteer at the library during her retirement, said she can't bring herself to leave completely.

"It's a bittersweet point, because I love the library and am happy here," she said.

HETEROSEXUALS ALSO RESPONSIBLE

New AIDS policies needed

The discussion and debate around AIDS in this country has become alarmingly redundant. One sees condom ads everywhere and is continuously inundated with information about how HIV is transmitted — but nothing more. Health educators are apparently trying to reach as many people as possible by keeping their information simple, but by approaching the subject in this manner they are doing themselves and others a disservice.

Public health officials were pleasantly surprised at the rapid decline of the spread of AIDS among the gay population, but they are frustrated by a lack of similar success with the heterosexual population.

When AIDS was first discovered, health officials had help from gay activists who addressed prevention as well as the underlying causes of unsafe sex practices among those who know the risks. Heterosexuals, however, have yet to properly address these issues.

Education about AIDS must also go beyond prevention information. The prevailing attitude in this country is that people who actually contract the fatal HIV no longer merit attention. AIDS activists must be more aggressive in educating the public about the dangers of this belief.

For instance, it would be logical to assume that if two people are both HIV-positive they can have unprotected sex; after all, they seem to have nothing to lose. However, this can have negative consequences. If one partner is taking a drug such as AZT, the virus will eventually mutate and resist the drug. The other partner may then be reinfected with the resistant form of the virus, jeopardizing his or her chances of benefiting from that drug in the future.

One would expect that AIDS patients receive such information from their doctors. But many people with AIDS do not seek medical attention until their disease has progressed so far that it becomes unavoidable. If they don't receive counseling when they first test positive for HIV, they must rely on the media and conventional wisdom for medical advice. When the media and conventional wisdom offer no information, or worse, inaccurate information, the risk to the public health in general is mammoth.

It should be obvious that people with AIDS are still functioning members of society. Just as cancer patients receive support from the general populace — who are familiar with terms such as "chemotherapy" and "malignant cells" — AIDS patients must receive support from people who understand the merits of "T cells" and "combination therapy."

We must stop throwing condoms and sterilized needles at our target populations and instead focus on the larger issues behind prevention. We must also be informed of the workings of AIDS and the physical and emotional consequences it can have for someone who has the disease.

FROM THE COLD WAR TO HAITI

The past as a moral guide

On the campaign trail, candidate Bill Clinton played up domestic policy, downplayed foreign policy and invited comparisons to another young president, John F. Kennedy. As president, Clinton has continuously moved forward on the domestic front but has appeared too willing to compromise his foreign policies, most recently in Haiti.

Clinton is the first president since Woodrow Wilson to take office without the Red menace of the Soviet Union looming ominously on the horizon. Today, communism is no longer the driving force behind U.S. foreign policy.

George Bush tried to make sense of the "New World Order," and the nation's place in it, by elevating second-rate dictators like Manuel Noriega and Saddam Hussein to the level of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

Thankfully, Clinton chooses not to use the wrong reasons to whip the country into a blood-lust frenzy for the right fights or build false bogeymen out of uniformed thugs. The country had an economic interest in the Middle East and a navigational interest in Panama.

The world, the nation and Clinton would be better served if he would look to the past for a chart with which to navigate the ship of state into the future.

Harry Truman spoke of the "false philosophy" of communism during his inaugural address in 1949. In 1957, Dwight Eisenhower expressed a more tempered opinion in his second inaugural address, "for as such things come to pass, the more certain will be the coming of that day when our peoples may freely meet in friendship."

The ideals of freedom around the world were more specifically expressed four years later by Kennedy and should be repeated today by Clinton in Haiti.

"To those peoples in the huts and villages across the globe struggling to break the bonds of mass misery, we pledge our best efforts to help them help themselves ... because it is right," Kennedy said. "If a free society cannot help the many who are poor, it cannot save the few who are rich."

"To our sister republics south of our border, we offer a special pledge to convert our good words into good deeds, in a new alliance for progress, to assist free men and free governments in casting off the chains of poverty. Let all our neighbors know that we shall join with them to oppose aggression or subversion anywhere in the Americas."

Kennedy was referring to the new Communist government in Cuba, but Clinton could apply those same words to Haiti. Clinton must act quickly to help the Haitian people and not hesitantly, as Kennedy did in Cuba.

Some may argue that the United States has no political or economic interest in Haiti. This ignores the simple fact that if Haitians were free to grow and progress at home, they would be less likely to flee to our shores.

The United States has a more basic reason to assist the people of Haiti with whatever force necessary — because it is right.

STEVE LATTIMORE

New reflections on the mascot debate

I was at The Vine the other day with my friend, media mogul Ted Turner. We were throwing back shots of root beer schnapps and chasing them with 33-ounce mugs of Budweiser. Ted and I had been planning to get together to see if we could work out the details for an off-season baseball game between his Atlanta Braves and my Hawkeyes, but when the university handed down its policy of banning nonconference contests with schools (and presumably billionaires) not yet enlightened enough to drop their American Indian-based mascots for ones reflecting the more sensitive political tenor of the day, I called Ted and told him to shine the idea.

"Stay down there in Dixie," I said. "Call me when you get a mascot that empowers the disenfranchised rather than mocks them."

Ted said maybe he'd fly up anyway. We could just hang out and scope out some chicks.

Ted came, but he never got into a groove with the women. He kept asking them if they had change for a thousand, and when that didn't work, he just sat there staring balefully into his glass, whining about the persisting popularity of "the chop."

But Ted's heart is in the right place. At one point, as he licked the last iridescent drop of schnapps from his glass, he told me he'd tried several times to change the name of his Atlanta Braves to something less offensive, but all attempts failed. I was shocked. I hadn't heard. "Sure," Ted said. "We test marketed quite a few. The Atlanta Activists — that died in appeals court. The OPEC nations threatened to remove CNN from their basic-cable menus if we went ahead with the Georgia Geothermal Energy Guys. We didn't get any complaints over our last one, the Rainforest Replenishers, but along with not having a rain forest near Atlanta, we couldn't sell it to eighth-graders. Maybe Ben & Jerry as mascots was a mistake." I have to admit that, except for having a billion dollars, I'd hate to be in Ted's shoes. To do the right thing he has to understand the nature of symbolism and representation. While I'm not sure that he does fully, I'm also not convinced many of the rest of us do either. I keep falling back on common sense, but of course that gets me nowhere.

What do sports organizations mean when they select team names and mascots? There is plenty of evidence suggesting that it's a way to honor (and cash in on) that which already holds considerable regional esteem. Since American Indian mascots have drawn the lion's share of the attention, let's look at the group relegated by a history of American film genre to be their counterparts, the cowboys.

The cowboy is the mascot of the NFL champion Dallas Cowboys. If I can be allowed a smidgen of forbearance to employ a stereotype, there's a bunch of cowboys in Texas (or at least snuff-dipping, truck-driving, Stetson-clad studs named Hank). Combine that with the cowboy-laden mythology surrounding the Southwest and it's logical to think that the gridiron cowboys of Dallas were respectfully named in deference to regional history and folklore.

This history of honoring regionally revered groups with mascots is evinced everywhere. Some might say that's the purpose of a mascot, to give the locals a figure with which to identify and rally around. It seems to me those Cowboy fans are quickly whipped into a lather when their guy with the six-shooters, oversized chaps and 50-gallon lid goes trooping around like he just won backstage passes to the Loretta Swit concert or whatever. And I've never seen Hank come down from the stands and tell him to slap leather.

Is it that the intention behind the symbol, that of good rather than mean spirit, is intended and understood by all those Hanks? I think so, as I believe it is with most American Indian mascots. The adopting of them is a gesture of respect, a way of saying, "Yes, we took your land, but here's a big foam rubber head we'll wear in your honor."

But what if the opposite were true? What if mascots were derived as a way of profiting from stereotypes of local game-goers? (Note: This is the part where the author condemns stereotypes while at the same time shamelessly exploits the potential in them for cheap laughs.) Instead of the Dallas Cowboys, the Lone Star state might be represented on the field by the Texas Cow Pies or maybe the Ft. Worth Imperial Wizards. The Iowa Hawkeyes might give way to the Iowa Hayseeds, with the rally cry of "Pass The Tenderloin" shaking the girders of Kinnick Stadium.

Don't get me wrong. If my own American Indian blood wasn't so watered down, I'd be less than tickled with the Washington Redskins. Shame on owner Jack Kent Cooke. He should be subject to whatever punishment his own ancestry favors, maybe a Dutch rub or a Portuguese man-of-war in the shorts.

On the other hand, I can't get too upset about Chief Illiniwek from the University of Illinois or even my friend Ted's chopping Atlanta Braves. They seem to me respectful, even glorifying representations of regional peoples of legend.

But I could be completely wrong. The Dallas Cowboys' rootin' tootin' mascot might bear some responsibility for the popularity of the redneck joke and may be one of the reasons why Polish people everywhere owe a debt of thanks to Southerners. Or maybe it's true that American Indian mascots are dangerous because they may well be the only American Indians some of us will ever know. All I know for sure is that I wish my group had a mascot. But when a team finally shows pride enough to call themselves the Thundering White Trash, I'll be there. It'll be roller derby's grandest day.

Brothas' night out: a night in the life of four black men

Kip heard the hip-hop blasting as he entered the dorm ... so much drama in the LBC, it's kinda hard bein' Snoop D - O - double G ... KNOCK, KNOCK, KNOCK! "Who is it?"

"Wha 'chu mean, 'Who is it?' " The door flung open, and Kip faced his homie Ali in the doorway. Kip was fully dressed. Ali was in his drawers. "You ain't goin' out?" Kip said, surprised.

"Man, I told my girl I was kickin' it out tonight and she went off. Now she won't gimme none."

Kip laughed at his homie's misfortune. "But you still goin' out, right?" he said.

"Have to. I can't sit around here and listen to her trip all night. Yo, I'll come through as soon as I get dressed."

Back in his own room, Kip and his roommate Cruz were getting ready. They trimmed their 'dos, exchanged Girbauds, timepieces, cologne, shoes, gin and juice. With the hip-hop pounding, Kip and Cruz sang along, Dre got some bitches from the city of Compton to serve me ... I'm sorry bitch but that's just how it goes. We don't love them hoes, I'm out the door.

Ali came through with a homie named Boo from out of town, and the four brothas were izzout ... Rollin' down the street smokin' indo, sippin' on gin and juice. With my mind on my money and my money on my mind.

"Brothas went crazy over some weed for a minute!" said Cruz.

"It took me about an hour to decide that shit wasn't for me, player. I sat in my room one night and I couldn't figure out why I needed it or how."

"Damn Kip, sounds like you just came out of rehab, kid."

"Naw, I had to cut that out, too ... but there's a Kwik Shop. We need to get our drink on!" Cruz exclaimed, and Ali pulled the load into the parking lot. They didn't have enough money for Tangere, and there aren't enough black people in this area for vendors to sell 40-ounce bottles of St. Ides, or the Bull, or Thunder, or anything else black people are supposed to drink. Any malt liquor would do, but even Old English was already sold out. The brothas had to settle for Ice Draft.

"The driver's not drinkin', right?" "Naw," said Ali and Kip in unison. Kip knew that Ali had stopped drinking since little Lolo was born, but Cruz and Boo didn't know that.

"Cool. Then let's 360 these mugs." Everybody agreed, so they passed the 40s around from one to the next, each one taking a gallant swig until there was nothing left but backwash. They were surprised at how quickly the buzz set in.

Pulling up to the club, the lot was packed, but they found a parking space. Kip told Ali that he should back in, and Ali knew exactly what he meant. The threat of a quick exit was always a possibility. They poured out of the load and spied a couple of hood rats looking at them hard as they passed each other. Ali was silent until they were well out of hearing distance.

"Sth! You see how that fool was looking all in my mouth?"

"I know. Why do brothas from around here try to act so hard?"

"Right, we're all black. We're supposed to be brothas."

"Shit! I put that black line down a long time ago. I get tired of niggaz tryin' to front. It ain't even gotta be all that. I just wanna have fun tonight." Ali was clearly disturbed, but Boo continued.

"I hear you. You put your hand out and black folks don't take it, or they take advantage of it. But I still gotta put my hand out."

"Well, that's your problem."

They rolled into the club. It was dark, filled with smoke, crowded with people grinding and floating like butterflies on the dance floor. People standing against the walls, sitting at tables, talking and sipping drinks. Broke but well-dressed. High strung and drunk but trying to look so cool and laid-back.

Cruz punched Kip playfully, "There's some hoes in this house, player. You geeked? You ready to get your mack on?" They were giddy like kids in a candy store as they swayed to the music. The club scene that night played out like so many other times: "What ups" and high fives to the other brothas, dancing with women they knew and pushing up on a few women they didn't know. Cruz spotted a fine light-skinned honey from behind. When she turned around, though, she was all white. He didn't care — he was buzzing — and he kept on talking. He got her phone number. By the time the last call came around, Kip and Ali were visibly upset — Cruz was completely drunk.

"What's the matter with y'all?" Boo asked.

"Man, a night like tonight just makes me appreciate what I already have more and more," said Kip.

"There wasn't anybody in there finer than my girl," said Ali.

"You talk all that stuff. You're just mad because you can't mack," Cruz shot back.

"Oh, but I can and I did. It's true, I'm shackled up with Nia. But the more I go out, the less I see."

"That's where you're wrong," said Cruz, and he pulled out the white girl's phone number. Everybody had a good laugh, including Cruz, before he added, "Yeah, you see me going home to my woman, don't you? Stuff like this," he pointed to the phone number, "I guess that's just the Dogg in me. Every brothas has a little bit of Dogg in him."

"Maybe."

Ali dropped them off on campus near the dormitory; Kip was the last one out of the car.

"You and Nia need to take it easy on each other, man," he said to Ali. "I know you love her. Whatever you were arguing about had nothing to do with going out. I'm already in most of the time with Renae. I think I could marry her, straight up. Anyway, stay up, player, I know you'll do the right thing."

Ali nodded his head, and Kip hopped out of the car singing, "We don't love them hoes, we just rolling down the street ..."

ADMINISTRATION UNSURE OF SUCCESS

Carter deems North Korean crisis over

Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former President Jimmy Carter said Sunday he thinks the crisis with North Korea is over following his trip to Pyongyang and talks with North Korean leader Kim Il Sung on how to resolve the nuclear issue. Kim offered a list of proposals, including a massive reduction in troops in North and South Korea, Carter said.

Administration officials, after meeting with Carter at the White House, weren't quite so euphoric. But they expressed hope that the Carter trip was a signal that confrontation with the communist North could be averted.

"He told me he was very grateful I had gone and thought it was a very fine accomplishment," Carter said in a later interview.

Speaking to several reporters, Carter called the North Korean leader "vigorous and intelligent."

"There may be an opening here," said Assistant Secretary of State Robert Gallucci, the State Department's top official on North Korea.

"There's much that could be there" in North Korea's proposals on ending the crisis, he said. "The issue again is to determine if it is there."

Said Carter on emerging from the meeting, "I personally believe that the crisis is over and I personally believe that Kim Il Sung wants to be sure that the crisis is over."

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Lee Hamilton urged the White House to continue its press for sanctions in case North Korea breaks its promises.

"The crisis is going to keep coming for weeks," Hamilton, D-Ind., told CNN, adding that Carter's trip created a "stepping back from the escalation of tensions."

Former Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger chided Carter, saying the United States can't afford to look weak now. "I really wish he'd stayed home," he told CNN.

Carter, who returned from North Korea on Saturday, met for more than two hours with Gallucci, National Security Adviser Tony Lake, Assistant Secretary of State for Asia Winston Lord and others. During the meeting, he talked by phone for a half-hour with President Clinton, who was spending the weekend at Camp David, the presidential retreat.

He said Kim thought it "desirous" to reduce the military forces of North and South Korea to 100,000 troops each, with proportional cuts to the U.S. military presence of 37,000. Kim told Carter he had 600,000 troops; U.S. intelligence officials say they number 1.1 million.

A senior White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he was not familiar with the troop-reduction proposal but said skeptically, "It's interesting, if nothing else."

In another potential concession, Carter quoted Kim as calling for an agreement to remove weapons from both sides of the demilitarized zone and allow inspections of the equipment "to ease fear ... of an invasion."

Kim also agreed to the idea of allowing a joint team to recover the remains of U.S. servicemen from the Korean War, he said.

Carter previously has said Kim agreed to freeze the nuclear program, to allow inspectors to stay and to hold a first-time ever summit meeting with the president of South Korea.

In exchange, Kim requested a resumption of U.S.-North Korean talks, suspended since last July over the nuclear issue, and sought U.S. help in providing it with a light-water nuclear reactor, which produces less plutonium than North Korea's graphite-moderated reactor.

Associated Press

Former President Jimmy Carter, left, leaves the White House Sunday with National Security Adviser Tony Lake after Carter briefed Lake and top administration officials on his recent trip to North Korea. Carter told reporters he believed the crisis there was over.

'TO KILL IS NOTHING HERE'

Rwanda's present ethnic violence rooted in history of Tutsis, Hutus

Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

BYUMBA, Rwanda — The most difficult thing to reconcile in this war-ravaged country is the stark contrast between its physical beauty and the depth of the hatred that is tearing it apart.

Driving through the Rwandan countryside is a sheer visual joy. Serpentine roads slither through lush green mountains. Terraced fields are carved out of the slopes, providing a rich agriculture that accounts for nearly half of Rwanda's gross domestic product.

Then, in northern and eastern Rwanda, one notices there are no people — or at least very few. The plots of bananas, sweet potatoes, beans, rice, corn and sorghum are empty, save for the odd brave soul tending a single field in an otherwise vacant landscape.

Hundreds of thousands of people have died since the Rwandan civil war erupted anew April 6. Most of the victims have been civilians, largely minority Tutsis killed by Hutus who make up the government-trained, virtually uncontrolled militias.

The rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front, mostly Tutsis with a few anti-government Hutus, has seized two-thirds of the country and is driving government troops and their supporters into Rwanda's southwestern corner, bordering on Burundi and Zaire.

The retreating Rwandan army has left a human wasteland

Associated Press

Wounded Rwandan civilians lie in the corridors of Kigali's Red Cross Hospital, located behind government lines as the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front resumed its assault on the city Sunday. More than 600 patients crowd the small hospital as over 100 casualties arrive daily.

behind: piles upon piles of bodies of men, women and children, many of them chopped to pieces and mutilated by long machetes.

"What kind of person can hack a 6-month-old child in two?" asked a Nigerian major, member of the 450-man U.N. force in Rwanda. "What depth of hatred can make a man do that?"

The question, often asked, goes largely unanswered.

"It's really difficult to trust anybody now," said Cyriaque Ngoboka, body."

There is, of course, the historic explanation. Many Rwandans cite centuries of ethnic animosity.

The Hutus, essentially sedentary farmers, lived in what is now Rwanda for hundreds of years, which was originally inhabited by pygmies called the Twa. Around the 15th century, the Tutsis, a Nilotic tribe of cattle herders, entered the scene.

The Tutsis, making up less than 14 percent of the population, long ruled over the more numerous Hutus. But that changes with rebellion against and independence from Belgium in 1959-60.

Hundreds of thousands of Tutsis fled to neighboring countries to escape the massacres as the Hutus took control. Many of today's Rwandan Patriotic Front soldiers are children of those who fled.

"The source of the hatred comes from on high," affirmed Aloys Nabamwita, a refugee in Kigali, echoing a sentiment frequently heard. "For the little people, it doesn't matter. It comes from people who want power."

Many of the vicious militiamen have been indoctrinated with pure hatred for Tutsis. The militiaman is told that the Tutsi baby now nestled in its mother's arms will come back and kill him 16 years from now, so he is in fact eliminating a future enemy soldier.

Haitian decree restricts journalists; sensitive areas declared off-limits

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The army-backed government banned journalists and other observers from sensitive areas, and a U.S. official condemned the move Saturday as an attempt at intimidation.

The border with the Dominican Republic, territorial waters and state broadcasting installations were declared off-limits under the decree late Friday by provisional President Emile Jonassaint.

Foreigners caught in the prohibited zones without permission will be expelled immediately and Haitians punished by law.

"I think it's clearly intended to intimidate the media and prevent full coverage of what's going on in this country," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schragar.

"We certainly condemn and deplore any attempt to prohibit or prevent the free movement of people or ideas in this country."

The U.N. Security Council imposed a trade embargo on Haiti May 21 to force army leaders to resign and allow the return of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, ousted in a 1991 coup.

President Clinton has banned U.S. air service to Haiti and halted most financial transactions, effective Saturday. He has not ruled out military intervention.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., toured a Port-au-Prince slum Saturday and urged international intervention if military leaders resist the newest sanctions.

"I don't think the United States (or) the international community can accept the example of a military regime that has, by force, deposed a democratically elected government," said Graham, a former Florida governor whose state is only a 90-minute airplane ride from Haiti.

Graham, who said in May that the United States should consider unilateral military intervention, has expressed concern about the impact of Haitian immigration on his state.

On Sunday, Graham had planned to visit the border with the Dominican Republic, but Friday's government decree could cancel the visit.

Current statistics don't match up with incidents of smoking on film

Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Smoking in the movies may not be as glamorous as Bogie and Bacall once made it, but a new study says there's still more lighting up on the silver screen than in the real world.

Smoking has dramatically declined since the 1960s, but University of California researchers who reviewed 30 years of films say Hollywood didn't catch on.

Not only are cigarettes still prevalent, movie heroes are three times more likely to smoke than the real-life role models of American society, the study concluded. This has researchers worried about an undue smoking influence on young moviegoers.

Why should people care if fantasy figures smoke?

"The impression kids get from watching these movies is that most people smoke and smoking is something done by desirable figures," said UC researcher Stan Glantz. "It's not the bad guys who are smoking, it's the good guys."

Anti-smokers have long complained that cigarette makers manipulate movies. In one highly publicized incident, Philip Morris paid $350,000 to get its cigarettes in the James Bond movie "License to Kill" — although the movie credits carried a health warning about smoking.

The industry stopped these "paid product placements" in 1990 even though they didn't influence moviegoers, insisted Tobacco Institute spokesman Thomas Lauria.

"The sight of a smoker does not another smoker make," he said. "This is propaganda by a prominent anti-smoking activist who wants you to see a sinister plot."

Movies shouldn't be puritanical, conceded Glantz. Many characters need to smoke to be believable, as soldiers did in "The Longest Day," the 1963 epic about D-Day. And, sure, gangsters smoked in "The Godfather."

But what about "E.T.," the cud-

Humphrey Bogart, with his trademark cigarette between his lips, and Lauren Bacall appear in the film "The Big Sleep." Smoking in the movies may not be as glamorous as Bogie and Bacall once made it, but a new study says film and smoking still softens the real-life health threat to young fans.

dly extraterrestrial of 1982 whose adopted mom smoked? Or "Ghostbusters," the 1984 hit comedy about de-haunting New York City?

"Smoking had nothing to do with 'Ghostbusters.' But all of a sudden, they all break out cigarettes — it was almost a disjoint in the plot," Glantz said. "Much of the smoking we observed wasn't appropriate to the action."

The study, published in today's American Journal of Public Health, looked at two randomly picked movies from the top-10 grossing films of each year from 1960 through 1990.

Researchers spotted tobacco or tobacco references 785 times in the 62 films, 78 percent of which was on-camera tobacco use. This use did not decline over the decades even though the number of Americans who smoke dwindled from 42.4 percent in 1964 to 25.5 percent in 1990.

"That's counter to what surveys show most people think and to what we expected to find,"

Glantz said. Who smoked did change. In the 1960s, 38 percent of movie smokers were major characters, compared with 26 percent in the '80s.

But the number of young adults smoking on-camera more than doubled from 21 percent in the 1960s to 45 percent in the 1980s — compared to 26 percent of their real-life counterparts. And although only 19 percent of Americans of high socioeconomic status smoke — the real-life role models, according to researchers — 57 percent of their movie counterparts do, the study said.

That statistic is the one that bothers Glantz. Smoking is portrayed as normal behavior "by people who, if you were a teenager, you'd like to be like," he said.

He said he plans to continue the study to see if the tobacco industry's pledge to stop buying movie time has changed post-1990 movies. "Just subjectively, I don't think so — but we'll see."

DAMAGE TO INVESTIGATION SUSPECTED

Whitewater counsel faces obstacles

Joel Williams
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Here's a challenge for the Whitewater special counsel: Prosecute two Arkansans accused of conspiring to defraud the government without letting a key figure reveal from the witness stand what he knows about the politically sensitive probe.

In a trial set to begin today, land mines are out there for special counsel Robert Fiske Jr. in the bank fraud conspiracy case of Charles Matthews and Eugene Fitzhugh. The main problem for the prosecution is David Hale, a former judge who was indicted with Matthews and Fitzhugh for an alleged scheme at Hale's Small Business Administration-backed lending company.

Hale, who was accused of more crimes than the other two, pleaded guilty to two felonies in March and is cooperating with Whitewater investigators as part of a plea bargain.

And that's where the case going to trial today gets touchy for the prosecutors. Fiske's office wants to keep a lid on any testimony by Hale, but Fitzhugh's attorney has subpoenaed Hale as a defense witness.

The Hale-Matthews-Fitzhugh case became part of the wide-ranging Whitewater probe in part because of Hale's assertion last year that President Clinton pressured him into making an improper $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal, a Clinton business partner in Whitewater Development Corp. Whitewater is being investigated because of ties to a failed savings and loan that was owned by James McDougal — also a co-investor with the Clintons in Whitewater, a northern Arkansas real estate venture.

Fiske associate Dennis McInerney made clear in a pretrial hearing June 7 that he did not intend to call Hale as a witness, unless needed for rebuttal. McInerney also told the judge that the trial had "nothing whatsoever" to do with Whitewater.

Last week, however, the special counsel received a subpoena for Hale to testify at the trial. Fiske's office then filed a motion asking the court to limit Hale's testimony to whether he pleaded guilty, when he pleaded guilty and the crimes to which he pleaded guilty.

The special prosecutor, seeking to prevent the opening of certain doors, said in the motion that "a free-ranging examination of Hale into matters unrelated to this trial could potentially damage other ongoing criminal investigations with which Hale is cooperating.

"Disclosure at this time of such matters would hamper these investigations by, among other things, alerting potential subjects of the status of the investigation and previewing the government's evidence, thereby enabling witnesses to tailor their testimony."

U.S. District Judge Stephen Reasoner ruled against the special prosecutor's motion Friday. Reasoner said that such limits on testimony should be for a prior offense unrelated to the case currently being tried.

Report finds neighborhood crime feared more by blacks than whites

Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fear of neighborhood crime has risen almost twice as much among blacks as whites, reflecting the fact that violent crime strikes blacks more frequently, the Justice Department reported Sunday.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said that between 1985 and 1991, the percentage of white households that believe crime in their neighborhoods is a serious problem grew by 50 percent — from 4 percent of all white households to 6 percent.

During the same period, the number of black households expressing serious concern about neighborhood crime almost doubled — from 9 percent of all black households to almost 17 percent. A total of 60,000 households were surveyed.

In central cities, black households viewing neighborhood crime as serious rose from 12 percent to 23 percent over the period.

Among white central city households, the percentage citing neighborhood crime as serious rose from 8 percent in 1985 to 13 percent in 1991. It was not the most frequently mentioned neighborhood problem.

These perceptions, the bureau pointed out, mirror the incidence of violent crime, which victimizes blacks more than whites and central city residents more than those in suburbs or rural areas.

Among all central city households, 15 percent cited crime as a neighborhood problem, compared to 5 percent of suburban and 2 percent of rural households.

Overall, households identifying crime as a serious problem in their neighborhoods rose from 5 percent to 7 percent from 1985 to 1991.

In black central city households, neighborhood crime was the No. 1 concern.

SOME CONTEST FINDINGS

Homosexual marriage ceremonies once part of church, says historian

Brigitte Greenberg
Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — In the Middle Ages, men who loved each other were commonly united by priests in Christian ceremonies much like weddings between men and women, a historian says in a new book.

In 12 years of research that took him to the Vatican library and elsewhere in Europe, John Boswell of Yale University says he found liturgies that joined male couples with invocations to God, the clasping of right hands and kisses to signify the bond.

"In almost every age and place, the ceremony fulfilled what most people today regard as the essence of marriage: a permanent romantic commitment between two people, witnessed and recognized by the community," Boswell wrote in "Same-Sex Unions in Premodern Europe."

Other scholars dispute the findings, saying the ceremonies blessed friendships, not gay love, and should not be confused with Christian marriage.

Boswell acknowledges it is impossible to know whether the same-sex relationships included sexual activity but concludes the ties were stronger and deeper than friendship.

His book carries a June 30 publishing date but has been rushed into bookstores. It has already received considerable attention, due in part to cartoonist Garry Trudeau, whose "Doonesbury" characters discussed Boswell's findings earlier this month.

"What he's trying to do is change the Catholic Church. I think that was his whole purpose," said Vern Bullough, a professor emeritus of history at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Bullough, who has written several texts exploring human sexuality, calls Boswell brilliant but said Boswell's personal background — as a gay man and a convert to Catholicism from Episcopalianism — may have colored the research.

Ralph Hexter, a professor of comparative literature at the University of Colorado and a longtime friend of Boswell's, said Boswell would not allow his own beliefs to cloud his research.

"Knowing him the way I do and his integrity and his deep loyalty to the intellectual pursuits, he would not write this unless he thought that was where the truth lay," Hexter said. "No one can deny, looking at this material, that it celebrates the love of two men for each other."

What Boswell may have unearthed, Bullough said, were so-called sealing ceremonies swearing loyal brotherhood between men.

In one of Boswell's examples of the ceremonies, translated from

"No one can deny, looking at this material, that it celebrates the love of two men for each other."

Ralph Hexter, professor of comparative literature at the University of Colorado

11th-century Greek, a priest says in part:

"For this holy place, we beseech Thee, O Lord. That these thy servants (names) be sanctified with thy spiritual benediction, we beseech Thee, O Lord. That their love abide without offense or scandal all the days of their lives, we beseech Thee, O Lord. That they be granted all things needed for salvation and godly enjoyment of life everlasting, we beseech Thee, O Lord."

The priests who officiated at the rites were members of what has evolved into today's Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches, Boswell said.

A Hartford priest who has known of Boswell's work for many years, the Rev. Richard Cardarelli, said he has been using the liturgies to perform marriage ceremonies for gay and lesbian couples.

"I had integrated some of the prayers that Dr. Boswell has discovered into a ceremony," Cardarelli said. "Most of them have been a celebration of Mass for a gay or lesbian couple who want to make a permanent commitment."

Cardarelli was excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church earlier this year due to involvement with a denomination of lesbians and gays that calls itself the Ecumenical Catholic Church.

Boswell is distorting history and indulging in "wishful thinking," said William Percy, senior professor of medieval history at the University of Massachusetts in Boston and one of three editors of the "Encyclopedia of Homosexuality."

The Christian Bible condemns gay relationships, and Christians of the Middle Ages believed sex should occur only within the bounds of matrimony and to procreate, Percy said.

"Not one of the fathers of the church ever said even a neutral word about homosexuality, let alone a kind one," Percy said. "Of course, men can form close bonds, but that they should have sex was not part of the Christian frame of mind. The idea that these unions would be anything other than spiritual is absurd."

Boswell, 47, was too seriously ill to be interviewed, said Douglas Stumpf, his editor at Villard Books, a division of Random House.

But in an interview with the ABC television news show "Day One" that was videotaped in September when he was preparing his book, the author defended his interpretations of the ceremonies.

"Let these people show I read the Greek or Old Church Slavonic wrong," Boswell said.

When asked whether the services could be for brothers or friends, Boswell replied, "There are ceremonies for that, and these aren't those ceremonies."

Stumpf said Boswell, whose previous book, "Christianity, Social Tolerance, and Homosexuality" was hailed as revolutionary, wants "to correct the historical record."

"He is not a political advocate. He is a historian. He is a trained scholar," Stumpf says. "What people want to make of this ceremony today is up to them."

Simpson's kids shielded by family

Deborah Hastings
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The children of O.J. and Nicole Brown Simpson may be the biggest — and smallest — victims of all.

Last Monday, their mother was killed, allegedly by their father. By Friday night, with Simpson's imprisonment, they were practically fatherless, too.

Sydney Simpson, 9, and her 6-year-old brother Justin were asleep in their house at the time of the killings. Their mother and her friend, Ronald Goldman, were stabbed just outside on the front walk.

"I can't think of anything more terrifying than to go to sleep, and then you're awakened by someone who says your mother is dead," said Dr. Julius Griffin, a child psychiatrist.

The children attended Brown Simpson's funeral Thursday alongside their father, who held their hands and bent down to kiss them tenderly. The family has tried to let the children grieve in private.

"We haven't had the TV on — we don't want the children watching it — and I haven't seen a newspaper in days," said Nicole's oldest sister, Denise Brown.

She said Sunday that the children are staying at the home of Brown Simpson's parents' in Orange County and have met with a priest. They've been to the beach and went out on a boat Saturday.

"The children understand their mother is gone, but they're holding up well," Brown said. "We're a really close family and there's a lot of support here."

But there will not be enough love or therapy to keep them free of emotional scars. Child development experts say the best that can be done for traumatized youngsters is let them be and offer love, gentleness and a listening heart.

"I would hold them. I would let them lead the way," Griffin said. "If they want to talk, let them talk. If they don't, I would sit beside them."

Children feel grief differently. They may act as if nothing has happened. They may act out, stop eating or have nightmares.

At Brown Simpson's funeral, Justin ran between limousines and tugged impatiently at his dress shirt collar. At the burial service, Sydney was captured on film in the tight embrace of woman mourner. The girl smiled, but her shoulders pulled back, as if she would have loved nothing more than to break free and go play.

"Even in grief, you can still horse around with them," said child psychologist Tom Bluett. "With a depressed adult, you can't horse around with them. They don't respond."

Before Sunday's slayings, Sydney and Justin were just the children of divorced parents, the offspring of a famous father who had once beat their mother so severely she was hospitalized.

Like the children of many celebrities in this city, they remained mostly out of the media spotlight.

Neighbors say they were seen around their upscale Brentwood community with their mother and occasionally their father, who lived two miles away.

On the night of the slayings, Simpson — along with his ex-wife and Justin — attended Sydney's dance recital at a nearby school.

Just as the adults are expected to help the children through their grief, Brown Simpson's family says the children are providing comfort, too.

"Even from this black void of despair, there have been two bright lights of hope, peace and laughter," the family said in a statement. "Our Nicole has left us two beautiful children who have touched us deeply within, helping us to heal our wounds of grief and depression."

his case. "The defense does not know everything the police has. One can't really plead until one knows what the evidence is," he said.

Published reports have listed alleged evidence against Simpson: blood matching Simpson's type at the murder scene, blood matching Brown Simpson's type at Simpson's home, matching bloodied gloves found at the murder scene and Simpson's home.

The murder weapon, which police say is a knife, has not been found, a factor that could favor the defense.

"It's a hole in the prosecution's case," Johnson said. "Any missing evidence is a negative to the prosecution's attempt to prove guilt. The question is, is it big enough to create a reasonable doubt?"

Shapiro has brought in a team of forensic experts to examine the evidence.

Dr. Michael Baden, a New York state police pathologist, and Henry Lee, director of Connecticut's State Police Forensic Science Laboratory, have examined Simpson and the autopsy reports. Lee told the Chinese Daily News the evidence was not conclusive.

"The accumulation of circumstantial evidence is like Lego blocks that can be constructed into all sorts of explanations," Black said. "The state is going to put together a mosaic with the evidence. It's Shapiro's job to pull it into a picture favorable to the defense."

Although Simpson has maintained his innocence, legal experts say a guilty plea to voluntary manslaughter could reduce the risk of a death sentence. Prosecutors have not yet decided whether to seek the death penalty.

Voluntary manslaughter is defined as an intentional killing carried out in the heat of passion.

"Assuming that the prosecution's forensic evidence is so compelling that it cannot be undermined ... Simpson's likely defense will be to focus on his confused mental state at the time of killing," said Peter Arenella, a criminal law professor at the University of California, Los Angeles.

If that were the case, Arenella believes Simpson's flight and surrender would add to the defense case.

"Ironically," he said, "Mr. Simpson's bizarre behavior could then be seen as buttressing psychiatric testimony about Mr. Simpson's diminished mental capacity at the time."

own dogs for sale and can also act as brokers of dogs purchased from various locations.

Dealers must present their latest USDA inspection reports to the UI before any animals will be purchased. If a dealer has an inadequate report, no dogs will be purchased.

"We're going to have to work a little harder to get the appropriate number of animal subjects," Skorton said. "That is an extra burden I am glad to take."

The UI Animal Care Unit has also begun using scanners to recognize if a dog has been implanted with an identification chip. Pet owners can request that a veterinarian implant a dog with a microchip for identification purposes.

Hersman said the scanners are a move in the right direction, but she was skeptical of their use.

"With the microchip scanning device they are using, I think that some outside monitor should be used as well, because it is on the honor system," she said.

Metzler said the UI needs to communicate with other universities.

"I'd like to see the different research institutions network a little bit. I'd like an attempt to circulate descriptions of stolen animals between the institutions, at least on a regional basis," he said.

Hersman had additional suggestions for protecting pets from research as well.

"Pet-theft victims should be allowed to tour the labs. There should be more openness," she said. "Another positive step to take would be to photograph all incoming animals."

She said she does not expect the problem of pet theft to disappear.

"As long as there is a large sum of money for the animals, pet theft will continue," Hersman said.

World Cup soccer victory against Italy on television.

Distraught relatives of the victims were ushered through the police cordon around the pub to identify the bodies of victims inside.

A spokesman for the Downe hospital in Downpatrick said five men died at the scene and another in the hospital. Two people were seriously wounded and three less seriously.

"There is no justification for it, no cause for it," said local councilor Patsy Toman, who knew all the victims. "The people who carried this out are the scum of the earth."

The shootings were the worst one-day slaughter in Northern Ireland since the Shankill Road IRA bombing and the subsequent Greysteel pub massacre last fall.

The Irish Republican Army killed 10 people, including one of its own bombers, when it exploded a device Oct. 23 in a fish shop packed with Saturday shoppers on Shankill Road, a Protestant area.

A week later, loyalist gunmen shot seven people dead and wounded 10 in a Greysteel pub a few miles from Londonderry.

On Thursday, a member of the Ulster Volunteer Force, Laurence

Maguire, was sentenced to five life sentences for directing the murder of five Catholics in 1992 and 1993.

Three shootings in the past two days have been linked to Northern Ireland's sectarian violence.

On Thursday, Protestant-based paramilitaries shot and wounded a Catholic butcher. In a revenge attack, the Irish National Liberation Army, a splinter of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, shot and killed a man on Shankill Road.

MATH

skills. The ambitious survey, whose results were released Sunday, takes a comprehensive look at the attitudes of university instructors toward their countries' students, university operations and their own jobs.

Foundation questionnaires were completed by 20,000 respondents in five European, four Western Hemisphere and four Asian-Pacific nations, plus Hong Kong.

On student accomplishment, they were asked if schools in their country have adequately prepared college enrollees in math and quantitative reasoning skills.

Only 15 percent of U.S. respondents said American high-school graduates met the test, the poorest showing among the 14 countries. Faculty in Hong Kong gave their students the highest rating, 40 percent saying they were adequately prepared. South Korea was a close second.

The findings parallel the results of objective international tests on which Japanese, Taiwanese and other Asian students regularly outscore Americans in mathematics.

Asked if undergraduates in their countries are adequately prepared in writing and speaking skills, only 20 percent or less of the faculty thought so in the United States, Australia, Hong Kong, Chile and Israel. South Korean professors showed the greatest satisfaction in that area.

Other findings:

- Academic freedom was most in question in South Korea and the United States. One-third or more of instructors in the two countries feel there are political or ideological restrictions on what a scholar can publish. The report's authors link the U.S. finding to pressure for "political correctness" on American campuses.

- In most countries, less than one-third of respondents believe their universities are competently led.

- Asked whether they prefer teaching or research work, instructors in Russia, Chile, Mexico and the United States express the most interest in teaching. Two-thirds or more in the Netherlands, Japan, Sweden and Germany are more interested in research.

- Russians seem to publish the most. Eighty percent of the Russians said they have written scholarly books in the past three years, compared with under 30 percent of the Americans.

Norway survives heat

Barry Wilner
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — First the Olympics. Now this. 1994 already has been a memorable year for Norway, which staged a near-perfect Olympics and won 26 medals, more than anyone. From Johan Olav Koss to Bjorn Dahlje, there were heroes galore.

Add Kjetil Rekdal and Erik Thorstvedt to that list. In sweltering RFK Stadium in Washington, in the kind of heat Norwegians almost never encounter, they didn't wilt. Indeed, they struck for the only goal in the 85th minute of their World Cup game against Mexico.

After Norway's Jan Age Fjortoft gained control of the ball near the penalty area, Rekdal took it off his foot, charged past Mexico's Claudio Suarez and shot the ball diagonally into the far corner of the net.

That sent a few thousand Norway fans into ecstasy — until Mexico came within inches of tying the first-round game. A header by Luis Alves hit the right goalpost and the rebound was cleared by the defense.

Norway goalie Thorstvedt made two brilliant saves within two minutes earlier in the second half in his nation's first World Cup game in 56 years.

"I'm proud and happy and very tired, too," said Norwegian coach Egil Olsen. "I know we could have lost two goals in the last minute. I know we were lucky."

Earlier Sunday, Belgium edged Morocco 1-0 at Orlando, Fla.

In a later game at Pasadena, Calif., Sweden played Cameroon, the surprise team of the 1990 World Cup. Mexico seemed right at home in sizzling RFK Stadium, and the majority of the crowd of 52,395 was behind the Mexican team. But it was Norway's supporters who were cheering and dancing in the aisles at game's end, thanks to Rekdal, a second-half substitute.

"It was better to put someone in with fresh legs when the team was so tired," he said. "Some of the players couldn't stand on their feet after the game. Now they are walking."

At the Citrus Bowl, Belgium's Marc Degryse put in a header in the 11th minute, then the Belgians held on against the Moroccans and the elements.

established himself as one of baseball's top sluggers in eight seasons with the New York Mets before moving to the Dodgers.

In 1991, he hit 28 homers and drove in 99 runs for Los Angeles despite missing 23 games because of an injured left shoulder. The Dodgers finished one game behind the Atlanta Braves in the NL West.

However, he was limited to a combined 75 games, 10 homers and 37 RBIs in 1992 and 1993 due to

"Yes, we were seriously preoccupied with the heat problem," Belgium coach Paul Van Himst said. "You have to understand that in Belgium, it rains a lot and temperatures like we have here today is not something that we're used to, and the Moroccans were able to deal with a lot better than we were."

But the Belgians were able to win. "We lost but I feel that a tie would have been more fair," Morocco coach Abdellah Blinda said. "We have two more games to look forward to. Life doesn't stop with Belgium."

In other World Cup news: — Miguel Nadal of Spain and Marco Etcheverry of Bolivia will be sitting out the rest of the first round. Spain's captain and Bolivia's dangerous scorer were suspended Sunday for two games in a continuing crackdown on rough play.

FIFA's disciplinary committee decided on two-game minimum suspensions for any player ejected from a World Cup game; that's twice as long as the traditional penalties for red cards on fouls that do not leave a player severely injured or show a gross lack of sportsmanship.

"We want to crack down on violent action," said Joseph Blatter, general secretary of FIFA.

Nearly 400 Irish fans were stranded without game tickets and, in some cases, without hotel rooms in a scam by a London travel agency.

Sportex, the agency that sold the tour packages to the Irish, ripped off about 300 fans who flew to Florida and 78 who were in Massachusetts. Paul Mills and Roy Price of Sportex disappeared shortly after checking the smaller group into a Saugus, Mass., hotel.

With the help of New York police, Saugus police tracked Mills to a hotel in New York City, where it was believed he was scalping tickets.

—An Achilles tendon inflammation is hampering Italy's Roberto Baggio, the 1993 player of the year. But the team said the injury will not force him out of the tournament.

under current Knicks coach Pat Riley, overcame a 3-2 deficit an won two straight at home.

Home teams are 57-11 in all seventh games played in NBA history. But four of the last five championships were clinched on the road.

"We are going to spend two quality days getting ready for Wednesday," Riley said. "I know what history has to say about seventh games and I know we'll be reading about that. Maybe this is the way it has to be for us to get to the promised land."

"It's the opinion of both Dusty Baker and myself that Darryl has several more years of good baseball ahead of him," Quinn said.

Strawberry won't be unavailable for comment until later this month, just before getting his minor league rehabilitation assignment, said Quinn.

In a statement released by the club, Strawberry said: "My agent, Eric Goldschmidt and I were extremely impressed with the manner in which the Giants organization reached out to me."

Cincinnati bombs Atlanta again

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Cincinnati Reds hit a team-record four home runs in the first inning and routed the Atlanta Braves for the second straight day, 12-4 Sunday.

The Braves, with the lowest ERA and best record in the majors, were pounded 16-0 Saturday night by Cincinnati. The Reds got 20 hits in that game, and got 20 more Sunday, including homers by Hal Morris, Kevin Mitchell, Jeff Branson and Eddie Taubensee in a seven-run first inning.

Cincinnati scored 33 runs and had 50 hits in the three-game series. Atlanta absorbed its most-lopsided loss in 16 years Saturday.

The Reds battered John Smoltz (5-7) for eight hits in the first inning. The Braves got four runs back off Jose Rijo (6-4) in the first two innings.

Cubs 10, Giants 6

SAN FRANCISCO — Shawon Dunston homered on the first pitch of the game and later hit another solo shot as the Chicago Cubs defeated San Francisco.

Dunston hit the first pitch from Salomon Torres (2-6) into the left-field bleachers. He led off the fifth inning with his seventh home run of the season.

Dunston and Derrick May each had three of the Cubs' 14 hits. Mark Grace had two hits and drove in three runs.

Kevin Foster (1-1) won his first major league game, going 5 $\frac{1}{3}$ innings, giving up five runs on six hits.

Dodgers 7, Rockies 3

LOS ANGELES — Mike Piazza hit a grand slam and drove in five runs, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers over Colorado.

Piazza hit an RBI single in the sixth inning for the first run of the game. He connected in the seventh for a grand slam, marking the third time in his career he has driven in five runs.

Pedro Astacio (5-5) took a two-hitter and a 7-1 lead into the ninth. Kevin Ritz (1-4) was charged with six runs and seven hits in 6 $\frac{2}{3}$ innings.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — Zane Smith maintained his recent mastery over the St. Louis Cardinals, and Orlando Merced and Jeff King hit consecutive home runs in the seventh inning for Pittsburgh.

Smith (7-6) worked seven innings in 98-degree heat and allowed a run on eight hits with a walk and two strikeouts. Since joining the Pirates in September 1990, Smith is 5-2 with a 1.18 ERA against the Cardinals, with four of the victories at Busch Stadium.

Alejandro Pena pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Padres 5, Astros 1

SAN DIEGO — Scott Sanders struck out a career-high 11 and Tony Gwynn hit a disputed three-run homer, giving the San Diego Padres a victory over Houston.

Bip Roberts of the Padres extended his hitting streak to 22 games, best in the National League since Pittsburgh's Jay Bell hit in 22 straight games in 1992.

Sanders (3-4) allowed one unearned run and four hits in 7 $\frac{1}{3}$ innings. Trevor Hoffman got two outs for his 12th save. He fanned two batters, giving Padre pitchers 14 strikeouts.

Brian Williams (4-3), who had won a career-high four straight decisions, allowed five unearned runs and five hits in six innings.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 1

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers tied a major-league record by homering in their 25th straight game in a victory over the slumping Toronto Blue Jays.

Mickey Tettleton hit the homer, an upper-deck shot leading off the second, to tie the record set by the 1941 New York Yankees. Detroit leads the majors with 102 homers.

Greg Gohr (2-0) pitched into the eighth inning in the second start of his career, and the Tigers scored single runs in the first three innings. The Blue Jays finished ished 1-5 on their six-game road trip.

In the first, Lou Whitaker and Cecil Fielder drew walks from Juan Guzman (6-7) and Whitaker scored on Kirk Gibson's two-out double.

Indians 6, Red Sox 5

CLEVELAND — Jack Morris got his 250th career victory and the Indians won their 18th straight home game, coming from behind to beat the skidding Red Sox.

Boston has lost 11 straight games — its longest losing streak since 1932 — and is two games under .500 exactly one month after being 13 games over .500.

Cleveland's streak at Jacobs Field is the best in the majors since Boston won a record 24 straight at Fenway Park in 1988. The first-place Indians have won nine in a row and have the best record in the American League at 40-25.

Morris (6-4) improved to 5-0 over his last eight starts since shaving his trademark mustache to change his luck. He allowed 11 hits in seven innings.

Twins 10, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — After going without a home run in 498 career at-bats, Pat Meares hit two as the Twins routed the Orioles.

Meares' first homer, a two-run shot, gave the Twins the lead for good and highlighted a six-run third. He also had a solo homer in the eighth to give the Twins a 7-4 lead.

Chris Sabo had four RBI for Baltimore. Pat Mahomes (7-2) got the victory, scattering 12 hits in six-plus innings.

Baltimore starter Mike Oquist (2-2) lasted only $\frac{2}{3}$ innings.

White Sox 7, Angels 1

CHICAGO — Scott Sanderson had a no-hitter through 6 $\frac{2}{3}$ innings and finished with a three-hitter as the White Sox snapped a five-game losing streak.

Sanderson (5-2) retired the first 13 batters he faced before walking Bo Jackson with one out in the fifth. He lost the no-hitter when Chili Davis doubled in the seventh.

Chuck Finley (5-6) gave up 11 hits and seven runs in 4 $\frac{1}{3}$ innings.

Brewers 10, Yankees 7

NEW YORK — Kevin Seitzer drove in three runs, Greg Vaughn homered twice and Matt Mieske hit a two-run homer as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Yankees.

Vaughn led off the seventh inning with a homer off Xavier Hernandez and added a shot off Paul Gibson in the eighth. He has 14 homers this season.

Mieske homered off Gibson in the seventh.

Seitzer singled in a run off Terry Mulholland (5-7) in the first, drew a bases-loaded walk in the fourth and hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Ricky Bones (7-4) pitched the first six innings for the Brewers, allowing four runs on eight hits.

Royals 12, Mariners 9

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Greg Gagne hit an inside-the-park home run off center fielder Quinn Mack's glove in a seven-run seventh inning.

The play was originally scored as an error, but the official scorer changed his mind and gave Gagne his sixth home run. Mack was playing center field because Ken Griffey, a Gold Glover, was used as the designated hitter.

Bill Risley (5-4), the fifth Seattle pitcher, took the loss.

Hipolito Pichardo (2-2) got the victory in relief.

Associated Press

Chicago's Jose Hernandez slides safely as the Giants' Steve Scarsone tries to field an infield throw during the fourth inning Sunday in San Francisco.

pitching 2 $\frac{1}{3}$ innings.

Mets 6, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Dwight Gooden allowed three hits over eight innings for his first victory in over two months to lead the New York Mets to a victory over the Florida Marlins.

Gooden (3-3) picked up his first win since April 16 against Houston. He walked one and struck out six.

Greg Colbrunn accounted for Florida's only run off Gooden with a home run in the second inning.

New York scored two runs in the first inning off Charlie Hough (5-5), whose knuckleball was all over the place.

Phillies 13, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Pitcher Bobby Munoz had three hits and his first two major-league RBI, and Darren Daulton homered as the Philadelphia Phillies routed the Montreal Expos to complete a three-game sweep.

Daulton hit his 14th homer, added an RBI double and scored three times as the Phillies roughed up Jeff Fassero (5-5), who came within one out of a no-hitter in his last outing.

Rookie Tony Longmire hit a three-run double and Billy Hatcher went 3-for-4 with two RBI for Philadelphia.

Munoz (3-2), making his fifth major league start, gave up eight hits in eighth innings and struck out a career-high six.

Arlington 5, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON, Texas — Steve Ontiveros pitched six shutout innings before leaving with an injury and Ruben Sierra homered as the Oakland Athletics defeated Texas to complete a four-game sweep.

Ontiveros (3-2) allowed three hits through six innings before he experienced tightness in his right groin and was forced to leave.

Billy Taylor and Dave Leipfer finished the four-hit shutout for the A's, who have won a season-high six straight and seven of their last eight. Oakland was 8-2 on their just completed road trip.

The Rangers, who were the only team in baseball not to be shut out, have lost six straight and finished a 14-game homestand at 5-9.

Kenny Rogers (8-4) gave up four runs and five hits in seven innings. He struck out nine but walked six — four in a 40-pitch first inning.

Hawkeyes ink two lefty hurlers

The Iowa baseball program has signed two left-handed pitchers Coach Duane Banks has announced.

William Peters from Hawarden, Iowa, and Mike Parenteau from Minnedosa, Manitoba, will join the Hawkeyes next season.

Peters was an all-state selection in 1992 and 1993 and earned all-conference honors the past three years. He also lettered in basketball, football and golf at Sioux City West High School.

Parenteau is transferring from Kirkwood Community College in Cedar Rapids. He posted a 0.78 ERA last season, allowing four earned runs in 46 innings of work, while striking out 78. Parenteau was a member of the Kirkwood team that went to the Junior College World Series in 1993.

Peters and Parenteau are the second and third pitchers the Hawkeyes have signed, joining right-hander Jeremiah Meccage, who committed to Iowa last November.

Big Ten All-Stars get first win in Argentina

For the first time in six tries, the Big Ten men's basketball All-Stars won a game on their eight-game foreign tour, defeating the Cuban National team 88-87 Thursday at Tucuman, Argentina.

Purdue forward Justin Jennings scored from inside the lane with 20 seconds left to play, which gave the All-Stars the victory. Michigan State forward Jamie Feick secured the win with a steal with five seconds left.

The Cuban Nationals built leads as high as 12 points in the first half, but by halftime the All-Stars tied it 46-46. In the second half, the Tom Davis-coached All-Stars led by 10 before Cuba regained the lead in the final minutes.

Jennings led seven Big Ten players in double figures with 18 points. Iowa forward Kenyon Murray chipped in with 14 points, five rebounds and two blocks. Iowa guard Andre Woolridge added 10 points, dished out eight assists and had two steals.

Also for the first time in six games, the All-Stars shot better than 50 percent from the field. Cuba shot 44 percent.

Escalator to be inspected after accident

BALTIMORE (AP) — Escalators at Camden Yards remained shut down Sunday as state inspectors prepared to investigate an accident that sent 28 people to the hospital.

The fans were tumbled atop one another when an escalator jerked to a halt Saturday about 20 minutes before the start of the Minnesota-Baltimore game.

Orioles spokesman Spiro Alafassos said inspectors were expected to examine all escalators at the stadium.

The escalator that came to a halt Saturday will be taken apart to determine the cause of the malfunction, the team and the Maryland Stadium Authority said in a joint statement.

The authority operates and leases Oriole Park at Camden Yards to the team.

Rangers' Hurst announces retirement

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Bruce Hurst, struggling in his comeback attempt with the Texas Rangers, retired Sunday.

Hurst, 36, was 2-1 with a 7.11 ERA in eight starts with the Rangers this season.

His final appearance was Saturday night, when he had no decision against Oakland, allowing six hits and four runs in three innings.

Hurst was 145-113 with a 3.92 ERA in 15 seasons.

San Francisco takes gamble, signs Strawberry

Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Darryl Strawberry signed with the San Francisco Giants on Sunday, six weeks after his release from a drug treatment center and four weeks after being waived by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Giants hope the eight-time All-Star can regain his form and revive the team's struggling offense, ranked among the worst in the majors. The Giants hope to have him in right field by the All-Star break to replace Willie McGee, out for the season with a ruptured Achilles tendon.

Strawberry, 32, was signed to a contract for the rest of the 1994 season, said Giants general manager Bob Quinn. Financial terms were not disclosed.

The troubled outfielder, who was released by the Dodgers on May 25, did not attend the news conference.

Quinn said Strawberry will begin a conditioning program under team supervision, followed by a brief playing assignment with one of the Giants' minor league affiliates.

Quinn said if all went well, Strawberry could be with the team by the All-Star break in mid-July.

"Like anybody who lives in this country, he deserves another chance," Giants manager Dusty Baker said. "I'm looking forward to him joining the team, next month."

The Giants began Sunday a season-low eight games under .500. Expected to win the realigned and weakened NL West, San Francisco has fallen into third place, 4½ games behind Los Angeles.

Despite the presence of Barry Bonds and Matt Williams, the Giants are last in the majors in batting average at .241. They are tied with San Diego for the fewest runs in the majors with 262.

Strawberry has not played since admitting he had a substance abuse problem on April 4, the day before the Dodgers opened the season.

Strawberry was supposed to be paid $3 million this season and $5 million in 1995 under a five-year, $20.25 million contract with the Dodgers on Nov. 8, 1990.

Under a contract settlement reached earlier this season, Strawberry will be paid $4,857,143 on July 1. That will be the remainder the Dodgers owe him from his 1994 salary and half of his 1995 salary.

Though the Giants did not disclose how much they will pay Strawberry, it is possible they got him for the major-league minimum. That total is $109,000 for an entire season — because the Giants signed him for less than a year, they could've gotten him for about $63,000.

Smith forces Game seven

Howard Ulman
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Kenny Smith's horrible series turned terrific with one flick of the wrist that sent a 3-pointer through the hoop and helped the Houston Rockets stay alive.

John Starks' spectacular fourth quarter turned sour when his 3-pointer at the buzzer was partially blocked, and Houston tied the NBA Finals 3-3 with an 86-84 victory Sunday night over the New York Knicks.

Game seven will be Wednesday night in Houston, where the Rockets will try to become the 20th consecutive home team to win a seventh game.

Smith, the starting point guard, had just 25 points on 9-for-27 shooting until his big shot.

The 3-pointer gave the Rockets an 84-77 lead as the crowd and Houston's bench erupted. Smith was mobbed by teammates when he returned to the sidelines as the Knicks called timeout.

But New York wasn't through. Starks, who had 16 points in the last period, hit a field goal and a 3-pointer, making it 84-82.

Houston didn't score on its next possession, but Hakeem Olajuwon stole a bad pass by Starks, was fouled and made two free throws with 39 seconds remaining. He hit two free throws, but New York's Anthony Mason made a 12-footer with 32 seconds remaining, bringing New York within two.

Then Smith, stymied by New York's pressure, took an off-balance shot with the 24-second clock winding down. It went in and out.

New York had one last chance with 7.6 seconds to go. After Robert Horry's non-shooting foul with 5.5 seconds remaining, New York worked the ball to Starks.

Olajuwon jumped out at him as he launched a 3-pointer from the left side and got a piece of the ball. It was knocked out of bounds as the final buzzer sounded. Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich glanced up at the clock then jumped for joy.

He was on his way to a Game seven at home.

"This is what everyone expected, basically. This is the way it was drawn up," Smith said of a Game seven. "The crowd tonight, that was the difference."

"Down the stretch we just made the key plays defensively."

Olajuwon had 30 points and 10 rebounds for Houston, while Carl Herrera had 12 points and Smith seven.

"This is what it's all about," Smith said. "Fortunately, it's not what you've done all series, but what just happened."

Starks finished with 27 points and Patrick Ewing had 17 points

The Houston Rockets' Kenny Smith (30) and Otis Thorpe (33) celebrate during the fourth quarter of best-of-seven series at 3-3. Game seven will be played Wednesday night in Houston.

PRIME TIME

Glasper's dunk sparks Goodfellow victory

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

After being down nine points late in the second half, Goodfellow Printing — Imprinted Sportswear came back to beat Nike in the last minute, 120-117 in the Prime Time League Wednesday night at City High.

The score was tied at 113 with 1:23 remaining when Goodfellow's Monty Glasper stole the ball at midcourt and took it down for a dunk which put Goodfellow up by two.

Nike came back to tie it at 115, but a 3-pointer by Jason Hershberger put Goodfellow up to stay. Nike came within one point at 118-117, but Val Barnes sealed the win, hitting a pair of free throws with three seconds left for two of his 35 points.

Nike had a chance to tie at the end, but Ron Lassen's desperation 3-pointer at the horn hit the rim but did not go in.

Goodfellow improved to 1-1 on the season with the win while Nike fell to 0-2.

Russ Millard and James Winters had strong games for Nike. Winters had 35 points on the night and Millard had 28 with nine rebounds.

Barnes said the win was especially important for Goodfellow after dropping the season opener last Wednesday in double overtime.

"We had the same type of situation Wednesday. We messed up on some things, and we talked about it before the game about what we needed to do," Barnes said. "Last week I kind of let the team down. I kind of shot some bad shots. I told them today I was going to come out and play better and I tried to do that."

Nike led throughout the first half and was up 55-53 at halftime. Goodfellow came back early in the second half and took the lead 75-74 with 13:15 remaining. Nike immediately regained the lead and was up 99-90 with 7:06 left when Glasper accidentally caught Winters with a finger to the eye. Winters left the game and did not return.

Barnes said being patient was a big factor in the win and feels Goodfellow is a contender.

"We kind of rushed a couple of shots and let them get some long passes because we didn't get back on defense. We just came back and took our time," Barnes said. "We think we're one of the better teams in this league, and we just had to show ourselves that we were. It was a confidence builder for us."

In other Prime Time action Wednesday, Hawkeye forward Jim Bartels continued his fast start with 40 points and 13 rebounds in Gatens Realty — Mitchell Phipps Molini Builders' 110-81 win over the University of Iowa Community Credit Union team. Bartels has 78 points in two games. Gatens improved to 1-1 with the win while UICCU fell to 1-1.

Fitzpatrick's improved to 2-4 with a 101-88 over Lepic Kroeger Realtors — Active Endeavors. John Carter led Fitzpatrick's with 21 points and 10 rebounds. Lepic Kroeger fell to 1-1 with the loss.

First National Bank also stands at 2-0 after beating Hills Bank and Trust Co. 117-111. Brian Westlake led First National with 30 points and Hawkeye forward Jess Settles contributed 29 points and 11 rebounds. First National is tied with Fitzpatrick's for first place while Hills fell to 0-2.

The Prime Time League hits the courts again Wednesday at 6 p.m. at Iowa City City High School.

U.S. OPEN

No winner after four rounds

Ron Sirak
Associated Press

OAKMONT, Pa. — Colin Montgomerie never had a chance, and that got him into a three-way playoff for the U.S. Open Championship with Ernie Els and Loren Roberts.

With Montgomerie safely tucked away in a TV trailer, Els and Roberts, playing one group apart, both bogeyed the 18th hole of Sunday's final round to set up the first three-way playoff in the Open since 1963.

"I feel like I'm 1-up," Montgomerie said about today's 18-hole playoff. "They had an opportunity to win it and didn't. I didn't have that opportunity."

Maybe it was best he didn't. On another sweltering, 95-degree day at Oakmont Country Club, it looked like no one wanted to take home the title.

Montgomerie parred the 18th for a 1-under-par 70 and finished at 5-under 279 for the tournament. Then he sat back and watched as first Roberts and then Els threw away chances to win the championship.

Roberts drove well down the left side of the 18th fairway but hit his second shot long, to the back of the green, just in the first low cut of the rough. His chip down the slippery slope ended 4½ feet from the hole.

He never gave it a chance, missing the putt by about two inches on the low side of the hole. Roberts tapped in for a 70.

"I could kick myself," Roberts said. "I could have won the Open with that 4½ foot putt. I still have a chance to win the Open tomorrow."

Next came Els, the 24-year-old South African who appears to be the game's next star. But his worst mistake this day may have been mental.

"I never looked at the scoreboard," Els said.

"I didn't know Loren had dropped one there," he said about Roberts' bogey on 18.

The 18-hole playoff, the eighth three-way playoff in Open history, will start at 10 a.m. EDT.

Els or Montgomerie, of Scotland, could become the first foreign player to win the Open since Australian David Graham in 1981, and only the fourth since 1927.
