Clinton shuffles lineup of advisers

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In the biggest shake-up of his administration, President Clinton replaced White House Chief of Staff Mack McLarty with budget director Leon Panetta on Monday, enlisting a tested Washington insider to take over from a low-key boyhood friend.

Changing staff at a pivotal moment in Congress' deliberations on health-reform and anti-crime legislation, Clinton said, "No one in Washington has a better understanding of both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue than Leon Panetta and no one has earned greater respect at both ends."

A former congressman who was chairman of the House Budget Committee and then a prime architect of Clinton's deficit-reduction strategy, Panetta signaled that other White House staff changes would be made to "make the best use of the talent and abilities that are here."

Clinton also announced that senior adviser David Gergen will move to the State Department to concentrate on foreign affairs in an interim step before leaving the administration. And Alice Rivlin, deputy budget director, was named to succeed Panetta, the first woman to head that office.

The changes, Clinton said, "will add strength and vitality to this White House and to our administration." They come at a time when Clinton's popularity has been slipping.

For months, rumors have swirled of a shake-up at the White House and in Clinton's foreign policy team as the president has appeared to move from crisis to crisis, winning razor-thin legislative victories at the last possible moment.

While stepping down from the top staff job, McLarty will remain at the White House in a position of influence. "He has been and will continue to be my closest and most trusted personal adviser," Clinton said. McLarty is among the last of the Arkansas inner circle that accompanied Clinton to Washington. Deputy counsel Vincent Foster committed suicide, and Deputy Attorney General Webster Hubbell and White House administration chief David Watkins resigned.

The only other major changes in Clinton's administration were the replacement of George Stephanopoulos as communications

Rawlings will serve as chairman for two years.

President of the UI since 1988, Rawlings is also a member of the board of directors of the American Council on Education and the NCAA Presidents Commission.

Studies find more than 8 drinks can shrink brain

GOLD COAST, Australia (AP) — Autopsies of alcoholics show that drinking eight beers a day can shrink the brain, a scientist said Monday.

Brain damage also can result from nutritional deficiencies caused by heavy drinking. Clive Harper, a professor at Sydney University, told a five-day conference on alcoholism.

Harper said autopsy studies were carried out on the brains of people who had a history of consuming up to 30 drinks a day. "We study their brain tissues, count the number of brain cells, do various measurements and sometimes look at the chemistry of the brain," he said.

SIMPSON DEFENSE WARNS AGAINST ASSUMPTIONS

Coroner's report details murder scene

Louinn Lota
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Nicole Brown Simpson lay in a fetal position, in a black dress with bare feet, blood on her legs, arms and face. Ronald Goldman slumped in the dirt, his back against a tree stump, blue jeans and sweater dark with blood. That is what a coroner's investigator saw on the morning of June 13.

A neighbor discovered their bloodied bodies near the gated entrance to Brown Simpson's townhouse early that morning after seeing Brown Simpson's dog wandering around the neighborhood, according to a report by the Los Angeles County coroner's investigator.

The report was obtained by TV's syndicated "American Journal" for broadcast Monday. The show gave the Associated Press a copy of the report Sunday.

Also Sunday, defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey warned against assuming that blood collected as evidence will implicate Brown Simpson's ex-husband, O.J. Simpson. Bailey said DNA analysis of the blood could help clear him, and he will not plead insanity.

"In California, you don't approach the question of insanity until you have a trial on guilt," Bailey told CNN on Sunday. "California really is ahead of the world with the best procedure around because it's inconsistent to talk insanity and guilt or innocence in the same proceeding."

Simpson pleaded innocent to charges of first-degree murder in the slayings of Brown Simpson, 35, and Goldman, 25.

Reportedly, blood found at the scene is of the same type as Simpson's, and blood was found in Simpson's Bronco and in his driveway.

Walkways scheduled to improve campus

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to create a more pedestrian-oriented campus, million-dollar long-term plans are in the works for construction of several more walkways similar to the T. Anne Cleary walkway on North Capitol Street.

UI Associate Director for Planning and Administrative Services Larry Wilson said although there is no specific time frame for completion of the pedestrian projects, the next one scheduled for work will be on Washington Street between the Main Library and the Communication Studies Building — which will eliminate approximately 40 metered parking spaces.

Plans also are currently being developed for three additional walkways:

- One beginning at Newton Road and continuing through much of the West campus to Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

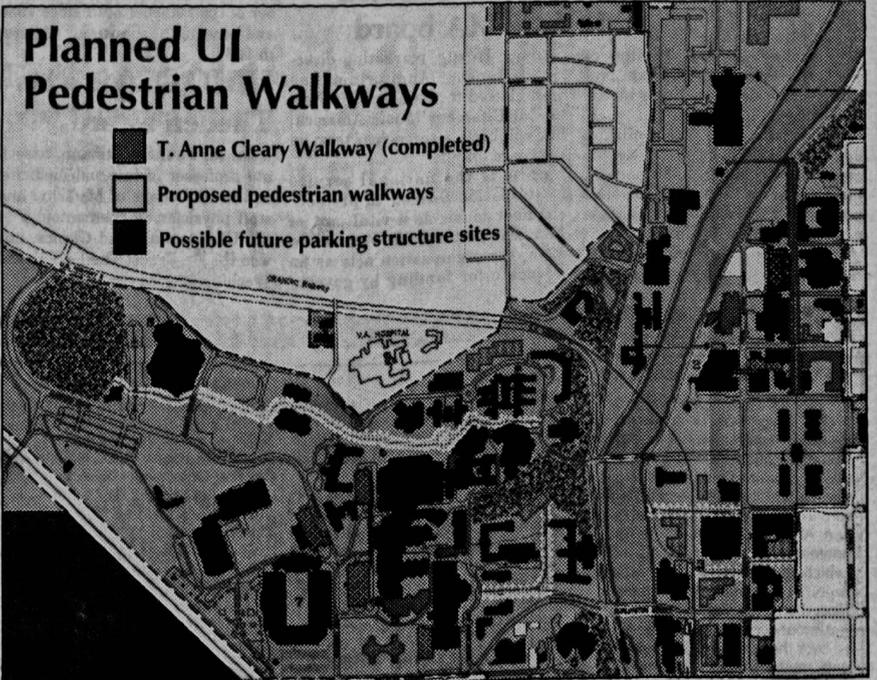

- One on College Street between the Communications Center and the Lindquist Center.

- And another walkway starting at South Grand Avenue and continuing in an L-shape in front of The Field House.

Call for smoke-free restaurants successful

Liza Roche
The Daily Iowan

A UI pediatrics professor who wrote letters urging the owners of 110 Iowa City and Coralville restaurants to prohibit smoking in their establishments last week said response has been overwhelmingly positive.

The letter, sent out by Miles Weinberger, warned the restaurant owners about the dangers of smoking to their customers and employees.

"There have been no hostile calls whatsoever," Weinberger said. "There are a lot of restaurants who have been smoke-free for some time and they're thriving."

He said many area restaurants want to switch but have not because they are afraid they will lose business unless all restaurants go smoke-free.

Although he's lost some business since making his restaurants smoke-free in 1993, Lee Staak, the owner of the three Hardee's restaurants in the Iowa City area, stands by his decision.

"I think it was the right thing to do," Staak said. "As a parent and a businessman that tries to encourage families to come to my restaurants, I thought it was important. Part of that is not having someone blow smoke into your kid's face."

In the letter, Weinberger explained the need to switch over to smoke-free restaurants from sectioned ones because those often do not provide enough separation and ventilation to protect others from passive exposure to cigarette smoke.

He also said that 90 percent of smokers start in childhood or adolescence.

"Restricting public smoking identifies the social unacceptability of this practice," he said. "This sends a clear message to our children."

Bird specialty store 'a hobby gone berserk'

As he watched his owner clean cages, Oliver drawled, "Poor baaa-by."

Oliver, a yellow nape Amazon parrot, is one of 34 species of birds housed at For The Birds, 918 Second Ave., a specialized store co-owned by retired Spanish teacher Dave Schmidt and UI employee Marty Miller.

Schmidt begins his workday at 6:30 a.m., 3 1/2 hours before he opens for business. Amid the chat-books and magazines he sells to keep abreast of aviary research findings and general bird knowledge.

After a 12-hour day tending between 200 and 300 birds, Schmidt said he is able to leave the work behind — one thing he wasn't able to do when he was a high-school teacher.

However, Schmidt said he often does become attached to his birds — all of which are either born and raised at the store or his home.

"Everything we sell here is domestically raised because you just have to be so careful of disease," he said. "It's easy to get attached to a little guy."

He has five pet birds not for sale. One is a $1,200 macaw raised in Des Moines and another a 16-year-old cockatiel.

Schmidt said his customers, many retired, often become friends who call on him when a bird escapes or is ill.

"I can think of customers that maybe their only real contact with another living thing is a bird," he said. "We have a lot of older women that come in here who put their birds outside and spend a lot of time watching them.

"Something different about our store is that we try to do a little personalized service," he said. "We carry stuff out to people's cars and can actually stand and talk to them."

Schmidt said the small 8-year-old store is at its maximum capacity, but he doesn't want to expand for fear that it would make For The Birds too mainstream. He is concerned about the trend of specialized stores because he relies on For The Birds for his retirement.

DAY IN THE LIFE

ter of zebra finches and the squawk of macaws, he does the dirty work that some owners may prefer to leave to employees.

But that's the way Schmidt, who refuses to sell his birds to "unprepared" customers, likes it.

"Ever since I was a kid I wanted to have a pet store, but as I got older, the more it occurred to me that you really have no right to sell animals unless you really know how to take care of them," he said.

Schmidt said the survival instinct of birds makes them difficult to diagnose as sick until it's too late. When a bird is ill in the wild, it attempts to mask its condition because sickly birds are the first to be killed by predators.

"In a full-line pet store, oftentimes the birds will be the first ones to suffer," he said, "because the birds can look healthy when they're not."

Schmidt said he went into the bird business because he has enjoyed owning pet birds since he won a parakeet at a fair as a child.

"This is a hobby gone berserk," he said.

During the day when Schmidt is not busy with customers, ordering supplies or cleaning the ever-present feather dust, he reads the

Roe of Roe vs. Wade joins women's clinic staff

DALLAS (AP) — Norma McCorvey, Jane Roe of the landmark abortion case Roe vs. Wade, began work Monday as a paid counselor at a women's clinic.

She doesn't want the name of the Dallas-area clinic disclosed, at least for now, because she fears she will attract anti-abortion protesters.

"We offer Norma McCorvey many other services other than abortion services, and we didn't want to put a lot of heat on the clinic," McCorvey said.

McCorvey recently published a book, "I Am Roe: My Life, Roe v.

Wade, and Freedom of Choice," about her hard-knocks life.

"What I want people to understand ... is the simple fact that it only takes one person to make a difference, that it doesn't matter how far down in the gutter you get or how absolutely negative everything seems at the time," she said. "There is always that light at the end of the tunnel."

The 1973 Supreme Court decision that won women the right to abortion came too late for McCorvey. She had given birth by the time the case was resolved and had put the baby up for adoption.

James Brown endorses 'cookeez' to fight crime

NEW YORK (AP) — James Brown has a new job: cookeez monster.

A portion of the proceeds from his James Brown Cookeez will go to his Anti-Violence and Crime Preven-

Eight types of cookies are being introduced nationally. The godfather of soul said Monday in a statement that the venture means "literally that we are taking a bite out of crime."

Brown will mark his 40th anniversary in show business in September.

"In 1964, when I was a boy of 11 coming to America from Ireland, the first movie I saw was 'Goldfinger,' and it left an indelible mark on my young psyche," Brosnan says in the July 2 issue of TV Guide.

Brosnan also starred in the title role of the TV series "Remington Steele."

UI professor makes headway in lung function study

Byproducts of bacteria found in grain dust may be responsible for the high rates of airway disease in agricultural workers, according to preliminary research findings of Dr. David Schwartz, associate professor of internal medicine at the UI College of Medicine.

Schwartz said of the 5 million agricultural workers exposed to grain dust each year, 30 percent develop bronchitis and 10 to 15 percent develop asthma, double the rates in the general population.

His preliminary conclusions come in the second year of a four-year study funded by the National Institutes of Health. He is measuring lung function in 350 eastern Iowa grain elevator operators.

UIHC doctor wins Theilen award

Dr. M. Paul Strottmann, associate professor of internal medicine at the UI College of Medicine and staff physician in rheumatology at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, has won the Dr. Ernest Theilen Clinical Teaching and Service Award.

The annual award is presented to a clinical faculty member who demonstrates "dedication, unselfish advocacy of the College of Medicine, and who is considered an honored mentor and distinguished representative of the UIHC health team."

Strottmann, a native Iowan, received his doctor of medicine degree from the UI in 1958 and has been with the college since 1965. He directs clinical services for the rheumatology division in the Department of Internal Medicine.

Established in 1991, the award honors Theilen's contributions to the college. He was a professor and associate chairman for clinical programs in the UI Department of Internal Medicine until his death in 1991.

CAMPBELL WILL SUBMIT PROPOSAL LATER

Branstad's tax plan found 'irresponsible'

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Monday pledged to develop a program to cut property taxes and income taxes. Democratic rival Bonnie Campbell said the governor has "no credibility" on taxes and can't be believed.

Campbell said she wanted an "objective review" of the state's tax structure before offering her alternative but said it would likely include property tax relief by having the state assume a larger share of education costs.

"We rely entirely too much on the property tax," she said.

The two discussed their tax positions at separate news conferences as they began positioning themselves for a general election campaign. Both said they would develop detailed tax proposals before the election, but neither was ready to release those plans Monday.

During the GOP primary campaign, Branstad issued a tax cut pledge focusing on cutting mental health costs currently paid with local property taxes.

On Monday, the governor expanded that plan, saying he wasn't interested only in slowing the growth in taxes, but in seeing actual reductions. He also added income taxes to the list of cuts.

Branstad said the state has gradually assumed a larger share of education spending and that's kept property tax increases lower than the rate of inflation.

"We want to now see if we can't take that from just reducing it below the rate of inflation to actually seeing reductions in the property taxes," Branstad said. "I want to see the actual income tax for working Iowans go down."

Branstad said "the details have not been worked out," and he planned meetings with lawmakers and local officials before revealing a tax cut package.

Campbell dismissed the suggestion that Branstad would stick with a tax cut promise after the election.

"He's not believable; we have a record to look at," Campbell said. "He has a 12-year history of raising taxes. Don't read his lips, read his record."

Campbell said Branstad supported a sales tax increase after the 1982 election, an income tax increase after the 1986 election and another sales tax increase after the 1990 election.

She called Branstad's proposal "irresponsible."

"I absolutely refuse to just tell the people what they want to hear, whether it's true or not," she said.

Campbell said she is still developing a detailed tax package.

Her position is that she opposes any tax increase and wants to study the tax code to see if it's fair.

"I think my commitment to hold the line on taxes, not to increase tax rates, is a responsible one," Campbell said.

Campbell said she wanted a "very objective" study of the state's tax system before proposing a detailed platform.

"I'm concerned that our tax structure be balanced, and we have the right mix of property taxes and income taxes and sales taxes," she said. "We should move some education costs back to the state away from property taxes."

Campbell said she couldn't specify how large that shift would be until after a study of the tax system, which she said is long overdue.

"I'm being responsible," she said. "I will not make promises that I'm not 100 percent sure I can keep."

ARTERIES RETURNED TO NORMAL

Monkeys respond well to low-cholesterol diet

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

Eating a low-cholesterol diet for eight months almost fully restored arterial functioning in monkeys, according to new research at the UI College of Medicine.

The study is encouraging for people with coronary artery disease, including atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries), said researcher and UI Professor of internal medicine Dr. Donald Heistad.

"Even though the monkeys' arteries were scarred, the function of the arteries usually returned to normal," Heistad said. "The rate of recovery in patients with atherosclerosis may be much faster than we thought previously."

Heistad said, however, that monkeys are more responsive to dietary changes than humans and added that many people may need a combination of diet and medication to lower cholesterol.

Heistad said atherosclerosis occurs when fatty plaques block arteries in the heart, increasing the potential for heart attack or stroke. High cholesterol, diabetes and high blood pressure contribute to atherosclerosis.

Matt Gerard, associate editor of Health News, said a low cholesterol diet reduces or excludes high-fat items like red meat, eggs and butter.

"This means that if you haven't eaten well for 10 or 15 years, you know you can get better," Gerard said.

Implications of the study are important, Heistad said, because nearly 500,000 people die of coronary artery disease each year.

With their new album, Zingalamaduni, the members of Arrested Development hope to maintain the success of their ground-breaking 1992 debut. The album title is a Swahili term meaning "beehive of culture," which the band hopes shows through in their widely varied music.

Arrested Development tackles larger goals with newest album

David Bauder
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — In the opening seconds of its new album, Arrested Development realizes every music fan's dream by programming a fictitious radio station.

A disc jockey calls out the names on the diverse play list: Bob Marley, Public Enemy, Curtis Mayfield, Isaac Hayes, Tracy Chapman, Queen Latifah, Black Uhuru, Stevie Wonder.

It may be a dream, but don't doubt Arrested Development's instincts. The band's ground-breaking 1992 debut sold more than 3 million copies, showing they know at least a little about what people want to hear.

Speech, the group's lead writer and rapper, said the goals were more modest upon the release of 3 Years, 5 Months and 2 Days in the Life of.... The title referred to the amount of time it took to find a record company outlet for the band's work.

Arrested Development simply wanted to sell 100,000 copies of the album, enough to avoid getting dropped by Chrysalis. Mission accomplished and then some.

"All the fame, it scared the living daylights out of us," Speech said. "It ... made us want to go deeper into the essence of things, which is our spirituality, and just get deeper into what we did music for in the first place."

Speech, whose real name is Todd Thomas, met his bandmate, Headliner, or Tim Barnwell, at an Atlanta music school in 1987. They were inspired by such musicians as Marley, Mayfield and Public Enemy.

Arrested Development brought a soulful and less musically insistent sound to rap. In lyrics, Speech delivered messages of self-determination, political activism, environmental awareness and respect for women.

The band was instantly contrasted with "gangsta" rappers. Speech played a part in this — he was quoted criticizing some of his more hard-core colleagues — but insists today that the differences were overblown.

Some media members, particularly those not familiar with rap music, embraced Arrested Development as their version of what rap should be. They felt it was safer, he said.

"Arrested Development has always been one piece of the pie," Speech said. "We understand fully

"We've been raised on different African values, which is you don't do entertainment just to entertain. You do entertainment to support the society that you're in. Everything has a purpose."

Speech, lead writer and rapper of Arrested Development that there are other perspectives and viewpoints, but we're all under the umbrella of rap. We're just coming from another perspective."

Arrested Development stumbled slightly with a live disc that was poorly received, and Speech admitted that the group felt the pressure of following up on the initial success.

But they have rebounded strongly with Zingalamaduni. The title is a Swahili term that means "beehive of culture."

It's a similar mix of sampling and live instruments with Speech's rapping mixing easily with the singing of Nadirah. Speech even sings a little himself on the chorus of the jazzy "Ease My Mind."

On the song "Achen' for Acres," Speech urges a direct route to greater self-respect: Buy some land.

"If you've got land to stand on, then you can stand up," he raps.

Speech describes the song "Africa Inside Me" as a lighthearted look at people who don't understand their connection to their heritage. "They still have it in them, whether they know it or not," he said.

But it's a record, not a treatise. Arrested Development's message slips in because the music really swings. The catchy flute lick on "United Minds of America" helps drive the song into a listener's subconscious.

"We've been raised on different African values, which is you don't do entertainment just to entertain," he said. "You do entertainment to support the society that you're in. Everything has a purpose."

Speech doesn't stand for modest goals. "We want to change the perspective of what is hip-hop," he said. "We listened to it since it began. It was the action and feel and energy of hip-hop that was important. We'd like to bring back the feel of hip-hop, which is the energy of youth and the energy of a community that is oppressed."

Arrested Development also seems well prepared to buck a trend in rap music of artists that are discarded quickly by a trend-happy public. Remember Hammer?

"People don't look at these groups for longevity," he said. "They more so look at these groups as being a fad. They don't look at these groups as being something that will satisfy them 10 years down the line."

"Whereas, with Arrested Development, we don't really pay attention to what is going on with the fads. We're just doing good music, something that we feel should be heard — not just the message, but the music itself."

NEW AGE EXPLAINED

'Celestine Prophecy' fails to inspire

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

James Redfield's "The Celestine Prophecy: An Adventure," which is both a detective story and a New Age philosophical tract, is really two books blended into one. One of the two is unique and intriguing; the other is an unmitigated disaster.

"Prophecy" is about an aging flower child who hears of an ancient manuscript containing valuable mystical "insights." He sets out to learn more about it, embarking on a journey that takes him deep into the Peruvian rain forest and pits him against armed soldiers and hostile clergymen. Along the way, he encounters many fellow seekers who help him along his path of spiritual discovery.

Redfield's book is almost entirely without merit as a work of fiction. It's pretty damn boring for an "adventure," and it has no consistent narrative structure whatsoever. Redfield seems to think that the central conceit of his first insight — namely, that all apparent "coincidences" are actually meaningful events — exempts him from having to construct a coherent plot. Whenever the story starts to slow down (every few pages, in other words), someone "coincidentally" pops up to drop a hint that will get the hero's quest moving again.

What's worse, even this non-sequitur approach to writing isn't enough to keep the plot "twists" from becoming utterly predictable. Redfield's sparse, bare-bones writing style makes it impossible for him to stay ahead of the audience; any extraneous detail he drops points clearly to the next development. (For example, if he bothers to mention that there's a woman sitting across the table from the protagonist, it's a safe bet that she will shortly reveal a piece of information vital to the continuation of the quest.)

Redfield's painfully minimalist approach also applies to his characterizations. The nameless protagonist is too one-dimensional to be particularly sympathetic, and the supporting characters all fall into one of two camps: good guys and bad guys. In Redfield's fictional world, the people who believe in the manuscript are all warm, friendly and wise beyond their years whereas the unenlightened are hostile and close-minded. Since Redfield introduces a new person with almost every plot twist, "Prophecy" quickly turns into a confusing parade of drab, redundant characters.

The fact that "Prophecy" has stayed on the best-seller list despite its abysmal story line reflects well on Redfield's New Age philosophy, which is what the book is really about. Redfield has drawn on recent advances in quantum physics and psychology and integrated them with classical Christian theology to create a whole new world view. He spells out this philosophy in nine insights which give detailed descriptions of humankind's forthcoming spiritual awakening.

Many of Redfield's claims are questionable. He had to take some broad liberties with evolutionary theory and quantum physics to set up the framework for his ideas, and some of his conclusions just seem silly (for example, his assertion that there is no such thing as a chance event — that everything which happens around us has deeper meaning). Still, his suggestions make for interesting reading, and they're bound to make people re-examine their own beliefs.

"Celestine Prophecy" contains some thought-provoking theological speculation which is all but drowned out by Redfield's inept attempt at fiction writing. Amateur philosophers and theologians might want to take a look at it, but they'd better be willing to put in the time to separate the good stuff from the pap.

COSTNER GIVES LIMP PERFORMANCE

'Wyatt Earp' bent to windbag epic

... By the end of the film, it's tough not to notice that half the audience has slid from their seats and lie comatose on the floor, having dropped to the ground along the way like exhausted riders on a never-ending wagon train.

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Kevin Costner's epic western "Wyatt Earp" has only two saving graces: One, director Lawrence Kasdan decided to cut the film to three hours plus instead of releasing the planned six-hour version.

And of course, any Costner film in which we are spared the obligatory shot of Kevin's twitching, bobbling gluteal muscles deserves points for originality.

But, apart from these small blessings, "Wyatt Earp" comes off as the most self-indulgent, over-worked windbag of an epic since Michael Cimino's "Heaven's Gate," and that's something of an accomplishment. The inherently riveting, provocative story of legendary lawman Earp and his brothers is nearly impossible to botch or bungle. Kudos to the cast and crew of "Wyatt Earp" ... they've screwed the parallels between Earp's life and the expansion of the American frontier are nearly uncanny, and their natural drama has always made for rapturous, although admittedly preachy films from the classic "High Noon" to the recently released "Tombstone." It's an old yet always gripping story: idealistic lawman is exposed to the tough, dry chaos of the West and hardens into an impenetrable armored warrior willing to sacrifice lives in order to maintain the peace.

That, in short, is the idea "Wyatt Earp" attempts to communicate. Given a three-hour time frame, Costner and Kasdan go nuts getting that concept across. But by the end of the film, it's tough not to notice that half the audience has slid from their seats and lie comatose on the floor, having dropped to the ground along the way like exhausted riders on a never-ending wagon train.

Wyatt Earp
Director:	Lawrence Kasdan
Screenwriters:	Dan Gordon, Lawrence Kasdan
Wyatt Earp	Kevin Costner
Doc Holliday	Dennis Quaid
Nicholas Earp	Gene Hackman
Rating:	PG-13
Four words:	Kevin drags his butt.

The heavy-handed approach to Westerns reached its best expression in flicks like "Unforgiven" and "The Outlaw Josey Wales." "Wyatt Earp" is brooding, shadowy cinematography and dingy production design attempt to approximate the feel of those films with greater and lesser degrees of success. But "Earp" lacks the spark of inspiration which set those films apart.

Largely responsible for this faux pas is Costner himself, who shuffles through "Wyatt Earp" dragging an extra 40 pounds of body fat and what seems like the weight of the world behind him. Sluggish, bland and entirely unconvincing as a hero or a villain (Earp was both), Costner struggles in vain to goose

"Wyatt Earp" into some sort of dynamic tension; but it's like popping six Valium and watching Paul Harvey deliver motivational speeches.

Even with a supporting cast which sports names like Gene Hackman, Michael Madsen, Isabella Rossellini and JoBeth Williams, the feeling of drowsiness is utterly inescapable: With no distinct central persona to live up to the party, the entire ensemble of "Wyatt Earp," like its random excuse for a plot, meanders on and off screen without direction, motivation or a common goal.

The one exception is Dennis Quaid's Doc Holliday, a sickly Southern gent dying of tuberculosis who will do and say anything that might hurry him to his grave. Flick fiends doubtless remember Val Kilmer's prissy, swaggering Holliday in "Tombstone" simply because the role itself presents a virtual playground for any actor.

Quaid doesn't just revel in Holliday's twisted humor ... he lives it. Having dropped 45 pounds to achieve an appropriately emaciated appearance, Quaid growls and hoots, slurs and draws through his scenes with spry wit and a sharp tongue. It's enough to make anyone wonder what would've happened had Costner decided to follow Quaid's diet plan and shed his surprisingly prominent paunch.

Comparing Quaid and Costner's presences and appearances provides an apt closure to any discussion of "Wyatt Earp" 's central problem. One of them is lean, alert and up to the challenge. The other looks like he just woke up and raided the fridge for a Pabst. Costner is simply not in shape to handle "Wyatt Earp" 's many problems. There's too much weight and not enough strength to pull it.

MOSTLY FORGOTTEN PRIME TIME

Gearing up for TV's fall season in wake of last year's fiascos

Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The key word for TV's fall season is "choice." The 1994-95 shows include not only a drama about a young man left to care for his four younger siblings after their parents are killed in a car crash (Fox's "Party of Five") ... there's also a sitcom about a young man left to care for his six younger siblings after their parents are killed in a car crash (ABC's "On Our Own").

But as we anxiously await this autumnal bounty, let's take a moment to reflect upon the mostly unmourned, mostly forgotten, mostly never even noticed shows that debuted LAST fall, and then, one by one, were cut down in their prime time as the networks' shrewdly crafted schedules became killing fields.

Regrets? The networks had a few. Never mind the ne'er-do-well replacements ("Traps," "Monty," "Viper," "Tom" and the rest) that came and went throughout the season. Just among the 1993-94 first-string, there were two dozen casualties.

We come, then, to bury some of those dead. And, goodness knows, not to praise them.

ABC's "Paula Poundstone Show" is as good a place as any to start. A sort of bare-bones comedy-talk-variety hour, it might be described as "Ed Sullivan" meets the flesh-eating virus.

Over time Poundstone might have found a workable formula for a show that, if nothing else, was unique. But the million years or so she required to find her feet turned out to be two fleeting weeks last November. Then the rug was pulled from beneath her.

Still, Poundstone's run was fully twice as long as that of CBS' "South of Sunset." An action drama about a world-weary Los Angeles private eye (Eagles band-member Glenn Frey), "South" was hard to get a bead on.

No wonder. It was sighted only once, then canceled — though not before making network TV history for drawing the smallest audience ever for a series premiere.

Over on ABC, Bill Campbell

Associated Press

Comics Don Rickles, left, and Richard Lewis appear in a scene from the Fox sitcom "Daddy Dearest," which premiered last fall and was soon canceled. Other shows to quickly meet the axe were: ABC's "George" and CBS' "The Trouble with Larry."

resembled Bruce Willis morphing into Pierce Brosnan. Maybe that was why someone signed Campbell for the romantic whodunit "Moon Over Miami," which followed in the tradition of "Moonlighting" and "Remington Steele." Except in one major respect. It bombed.

Former world heavyweight champ George Foreman was dimly miscast as former world heavyweight champ George Foster. ABC's sitcom "George" wasn't so much KO'd as DOA.

And Fox's "Daddy Dearest" gave comic Richard Lewis, whose trademark is his low self-esteem, more than enough reason. But the season's worst, and most deservedly axed, series was CBS' "The Trouble with Larry."

It might have been a dandy soap with a premise like this: Long missing and presumed dead, Larry resurfaces and moves in with his former wife, her new husband and a daughter who thinks the guy is just a family friend. Meanwhile, he puts the moves on his sexy sister-in-law under the very nose of the bride he left behind when, during their African honeymoon a decade ago, he was dragged from their tent by marauding baboons.

Ooh-la-la? Nah. The hellzapoppin' "Larry" was farce so low as to be subterranean. Shtick-monger Bronson Pinchot soloed as the Marx Brothers after '90s downsizing. All in all, it was a show that could've made Milton Berle blanch.

Sample humor: Larry eases into a pair of slacks he warmed in a microwave oven, then coos rapturously, "Hot dog and baked beans."

Rest in peace, Larry. As can we viewers, confident that "Trouble" left behind far too few episodes to ever come to life again on "Nick at Nite."

Family of road-killed opossums proves a test for anti-cruelty law

When Steven Garity ran over a family of opossums crossing the street in Washington, it set off an evenly split debate between Garity and opossum supporters.

David Foster
Associated Press

TUMWATER, Wash. — The opossum and her seven babies made the mistake of crossing in front of Steven Garity's car. They got squished. Garity made the mistake of being in front of a police car. He got charged with cruelty to animals.

And so began the great possum debate with people around here sinking their teeth into a spirited discussion of animal rights: Are opossums such pests that you can't be cruel enough to them? Or do they deserve as much respect as any living creature?

A judge added his opinion Monday, dismissing the case and declaring Tumwater's animal-cruelty ordinance too vague.

But given the possum passions in this southwestern Washington town, the last word on road-kill morality has yet to be heard.

"I'm not a lawyer and certainly not a judge," said Michael Ellis, director of a wildlife rescue center in nearby McCleary. "But I have to say that any human being with any sense of humanity would realize that aiming a car at any animal and running it over intentionally is cruelty."

The case began March 31, when police officer Johnna Stevens saw Garity, 39, suddenly change lanes and hit a mother opossum and the youngsters clinging to her.

"They're pests," the officer quoted Garity as saying. "All's they do is eat dog food and cat food and be a pest. They just hiss at you."

Garity was accused of intentionally running down the opossums and was cited under Tumwater's animal-cruelty ordinance, which says it's a crime if someone "purposefully or recklessly subjects any animal to cruel mistreatment."

The offense carries up to 90 days

"All's they do is eat dog food and cat food and be a pest."

Steven Garity

in jail and a $5,000 fine.

Garity's attorney, Ken Valz, contended Garity was swerving to miss another opossum. Valz also argued that the whole case was ludicrous because state wildlife officials consider the opossum a pest.

He cited a Department of Natural Resources brochure that tells how to kill a "problem" opossum: After trapping it, "gently submerge the trap in water for 10 minutes."

"Most people are astounded that it's gone this far — that any government would prosecute anyone for running over a opossum, intentionally or unintentionally," Valz said.

But the homely opossum — a beady-eyed, naked-tailed marsupial — has its supporters, too.

For weeks, opossums have been the No. 1 topic in the letters section of the local paper, The Olympian. Writers have been about evenly split, pro-Garity vs. pro-opossum.

Opossum sympathizers invoke comparisons to more likable animals.

"What's next — my puppy becomes a pest to someone? Our cat becomes a pest in someone's mind? Maybe someday my son will become a pest to someone," wrote Laura Perkinson. "Will that someone then decide to just run over any or all of these things?"

Garity's supporters lump opossums with all manner of vermin.

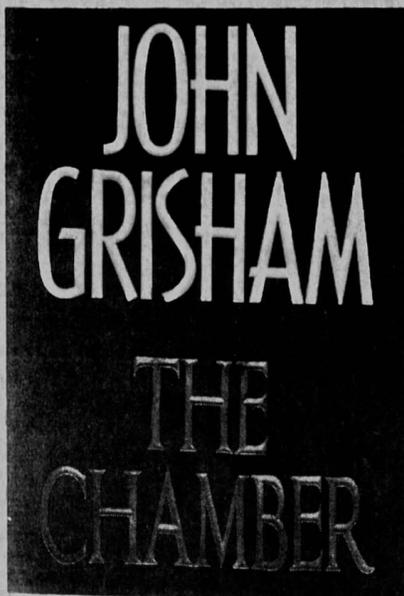

"What would you have said if it had been a rat? The opossum is worse than a rat in most any way you can think — larger, more dangerous and filthy," wrote J. Dana Kintner.

Mina Ensign wrote, "Will some ardent environmentalists soon propose a fine for swatting a fly, lest it interfere with the food chain?"

City Attorney Pat Brock said the case fell under Tumwater's animal-cruelty ordinance. But District Judge C.L. Stiltz ruled Monday it is unconstitutional because it doesn't spell out "cruel mistreatment."

"The part of it that bothers me — putting aside the value of opossums as animals — is that at a minimum, he made a big mess on a road for someone else to clean up," Brock said.

FIVE KILLED

No place is safe from bloodshed in Rwanda

Karin Davies
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Rounds of explosives burst Monday in a churchyard that has become a squalid, crowded refugee camp, killing five people.

"We're all going to die," 16-year-old Yvonne Nyirabukezi said. "When you come here, you don't leave."

The Roman Catholic church has come under regular shelling with the intensified battle for the Rwandan capital.

The yard was stained with blood and strewn with shrapnel. It was not clear who fired the shells, but some of the shells may have been rebel missiles that soared over intended targets.

"We all want to get out of here, anywhere, just out of here," said the girl, who has spent a week inside Ste. Famille Church with 800 other Tutsis.

A 29-year-old Hutu at Ste. Famille, who gave his name only as Manasse, reported five people killed.

A mortar round fired from across a valley exploded inside the church complex as he spoke, kicking up dust and smoke.

Hundreds of Rwandans, most from the minority Tutsi ethnic group, have taken refuge at Ste. Famille in a part of Kigali held by the Hutu-dominated government.

The Tutsis live in fear even of the camp's Hutu guards. Militant Hutus have swept into the red brick church to round up and kill Tutsis. On June 17, rebels broke through government lines to rescue about 600 refugees.

Mortar rounds that hit the compound May 1 killed a dozen people and wounded more than 100. It was uncertain which side fired those shells, too.

The fighting between government forces and rebels of the mainly Tutsi Rwandan Patriotic Front broke out after President Juvenal Habyarimana, a Hutu, died in a mysterious plane crash on April 6. Most of the 200,000 victims have been Tutsi civilians massacred by radical Hutu militias.

The rebels control two-thirds of the country and last week began a fierce offensive trying to overrun the rest of the capital.

During an hour's lull in the fighting Monday, aid workers rescued 45 wounded patients from a Red Cross hospital that has repeatedly come under fire. The hospital, like Ste. Famille, is in the government-held part of the capital.

At nightfall, the rebels pounded central Kigali with a heavy artillery barrage. Small fires blazed on Mount Kigali, a strategic peak the rebels have been trying to capture.

Plans to evacuate other refugees were called off because of the intensified fighting.

The U.N. commander, Maj. Gen. Romeo Dallaire, linked increased combat in Kigali to the arrival of French peacekeepers in western Rwanda. Paris says its mission is strictly humanitarian, but it has supported the government in the past and the rebels fear the French troops will rob them of victory.

French soldiers, uncertain of their welcome, have been moving cautiously, although refugees at Ste. Famille await their arrival.

Aloise Umuhibe, 19, with a Hutu father and a Tutsi mother, has spent two months in a tiny filthy room at the church. "When will the French get here?" she asked.

CASE MIGHT HARM NATION

Private lawsuit against Clinton may be deferred if motion passes

Joel Williams
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President Clinton will ask that a sexual harassment lawsuit be dismissed until after he leaves the presidency, according to papers his lawyer filed today in U.S. District Court.

A motion filed today in Little Rock asks the court to allow Clinton to delay the normally required response to the allegations until courts have decided whether a president can be sued.

Attorney Robert Bennett of Washington said in court papers that Clinton will file a motion by Aug. 5 arguing that presidents are immune while in office from having to deal with private lawsuits. He said responding to allegations and other matters involved in litigation would harm the nation by distracting him from public duties.

The motion will ask the court "to dismiss this complaint without prejudice to reinstatement after the conclusion of his presidency," Bennett wrote.

"Without prejudice" means it could be refiled.

Bennett's filing cites a 1982 U.S. Supreme Court opinion related to former President Nixon, which found that presidents are immune from being sued for official actions taken while they are in office.

The lawsuit filed May 6 by Paula Corbin Jones, a former Arkansas state employee, alleges that Clinton made a lewd sexual advance while he was governor in 1991.

"If the president were required to prepare defenses and consult with counsel in connection with moving to dismiss the complaint on grounds other than immunity, the very interests that immunity seeks to protect will be lost," Bennett said.

He also argues that the constitutional principles calling for separation of powers "require the court to restrain from exercising jurisdiction over this matter until President Clinton is no longer in office."

Jones' attorneys have told the judge that she has a right to see a formal response to the allegations.

Clinton has denied the allegations by Jones, who in 1991 was working for the Arkansas Industrial Development Commission. She alleged that Clinton asked her for sex in a room at a Little Rock hotel where the state agency was holding a conference for which the then-governor was a speaker. She claimed that she suffered retaliation on the job after rejecting Clinton's advances.

If the case went to trial, Bennett's filing said, "it would be shown — based on the plaintiff's own statements contradicting the allegations in the complaint, as well as other evidence — that the allegations are meritless."

Prosecutors are pinning much of their case on the results of DNA tests from blood samples, Bailey said.

"If the DNA comes back and is not a match, then the police had better get busy opening the investigation they may have prematurely closed," Bailey said.

But even if it is a match, Bailey said on ABC Monday, it "is not going to settle the matter conclusively as everybody seems to think."

The coroner's report said a white envelope containing a pair of eyeglasses lay at Goldman's feet. The glasses belonged to Brown Simpson's mother, the report said. Previous reports said the glasses were her own.

Goldman had gone to Brown Simpson's Brentwood condominium to return the glasses, left the previous night at the Mezzaluna restaurant where he worked.

Brown Simpson was last known to be alive at about 11 p.m., when she spoke to her mother on the telephone about the glasses, the report said.

In other developments:
• In West Los Angeles Monday, NBC-TV asked a judge to release sealed documents in Simpson's 1989 wife-battering case. Documents being sought included the search warrant affidavit and photographs, as well as Simpson's psychiatric diagnosis.

Municipal Court Judge Ray Hart held a 45-minute hearing, focusing on media freedoms and fair trial rights and then said he would rule later.

• In New York City on Sunday, a group of activists and politicians rallied to demand that corporations work to curb domestic violence, criticizing companies that kept Simpson on the payroll after his no-contest plea to wife-beating in 1989, including Hertz and NBC.

• Time magazine decided to run a full-page letter in the July 4 issue apologizing to readers upset by its cover treatment of Simpson's police mug shot. No racial implication was intended in the photo illustration, Managing Editor James Gaines said.

• The New York Post said Monday that Brown Simpson had an affair with a restaurant executive in 1992, while she was separated from Simpson, and that Simpson once found them having sex on a couch when he visited his wife's home. Simpson was referring to that incident last October, the paper said, when he was caught on a police 911 tape yelling at his wife, "(you) didn't give a (obscenity) about the kids when you was (obscenity) in the living room."

director when Gergen was hired, and the appointment of William Perry to succeed Les Aspin as defense secretary.

Clinton said McLarty would spend more time shepherding the legislative program — particularly health and welfare reform and a trade agreement — through Congress and preparing for international summits.

Panetta will deal with the day-to-day managing of the White House, duties that traditionally bring the chief of staff his greatest power.

McLarty, one-time owner of an Arkansas auto dealership and president of a regional gas utility, had been criticized from the start for his lack of Washington experience and the perception among some critics that he wasn't tough enough. His nickname was "Mack the Nice."

Yet administration officials said he had an uncanny ability to read Clinton's moods and anticipate his needs. And they said the loosely run White House reflected Clinton's own management style.

Clinton said McLarty came to him more than a month ago with ideas about "a better deployment of our people." Vice President Al Gore also helped with the changes. The final decisions were made by Clinton over lunch with McLarty last Wednesday.

McLarty suggested he was miscast as the top administrator and that he could better serve Clinton as confidant.

"It was difficult to be as responsive to the president's feelings that he wanted to rely on my judgment and thoughts and my counsel and advice," McLarty said, speaking with reporters in his office.

Gergen, a former Republican adviser who joined the White House staff a year ago to help deal with a spate of negative publicity, will be a "special adviser to both the president and the secretary of state."

While Clinton has tried to quell talk of changes in his foreign policy team, Gergen is expected to be warmly welcomed to help Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Officials at state know better results are needed.

A former California congressman, Panetta is expected to be a much stronger administrator than McLarty. He earned a reputation as a deficit hawk, forcing Clinton to make tough cuts in a lean federal budget.

dren who are a major source of new lifelong addicts."

Staa said his restaurants have seen an increase in drive-thru use since they went smoke-free. He also said the average Hardee's customer spends 20 minutes in the restaurant — an amount of time that won't keep smokers away.

Staa doesn't want to see legislation on smoking in restaurants, though.

"I think we have enough government in this business already," he said. "If you really want smoking in restaurants, you need to have two separate rooms."

National chains McDonald's, Arby's and Dairy Queen all have policies prohibiting smoking, although the privately owned franchises of these in Iowa City allow smoking.

CAMPUS

"We're trying to do some work every few years to keep it moving because we're trying to make the campus more pedestrian friendly," Wilson said.

A master plan will be developed during the summer and fall for the walkway between the Communication Studies Building and the library, Wilson said, but he did not know yet when the street will close for construction.

Because the project is still being developed, Wilson said budget figures are not available, but he said the project is similar enough to the T. Anne Cleary pedestrian walkway section west of the Pappajohn Business Administration Building to use those construction figures as an estimate.

The UI spent $820,000 in construction costs for the one-block section between Jefferson and Market streets.

One consideration in developing a construction plan for Washington Street is access to the library's north entrance.

"We will need to provide the necessary access for emergency vehicles, bus traffic and persons with disabilities," Wilson said. "It is implicit that required access for those elements will be provided."

This issue of "reasonable access" is one Wilson said is being considered in plans for several other campus pedestrian walkways.

Although parking spaces will be eliminated when the walkways are constructed, the Campus Planning Framework indicates sites for possible future parking structures on campus.

Wilson said specific areas for walkways were chosen based on ability to reroute any streets and traffic affected by street closings.

the North Korean group. The agenda for the "broad and thorough" talks will include North Korea's missile sales to Syria and Iran and "the status of our diplomatic relations," the State Department said last week.

A South Korean newspaper reported that the United States will offer to exchange diplomatic liaison offices with North Korea if the communist state agrees to open its secretive nuclear program.

The offices would be the first step in a two-stage program that would eventually include formal diplomatic recognition of the North, Dong-A Ilbo said.

Myers said the report was premature. "We can't say that. That's something that has not been worked out," she said. The United States has said it would improve diplomatic relations if North Korea cooperated over concerns for its nuclear program.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole said Sunday the United States should keep up pressure on North Korea in case the communist regime reneges on a promise to freeze its nuclear program.

"You look back over history and their word has not been good," Dole, R-Kan., told C-SPAN.

Dole said he is afraid North Korea could use the talks to stall for time and eventually renew its nuclear program.

"My biggest fear is we might be taken for a ride and they might be buying more time, and when it's all over we might not gain anything," Dole said.

Appearing on the same show, Gallucci said President Clinton has not taken North Korea's promises at face value.

"We do not deal with North Korea yet on a basis of trust," Gallucci said. "We deal on a basis of what they do and what they say that can be verified."

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

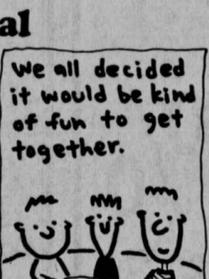

MS. CAULCUS, MAY I ASK WHY YOU AND YOUR TEAM ARE SO LATE IN GETTING TO JURY SELECTION THIS MORNING?

I'M SORRY, YOUR HONOR. WE RAN INTO DEMONSTRATORS EVERYWHERE - OUTSIDE THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT, THE COURTHOUSE, THE ELEVATOR...

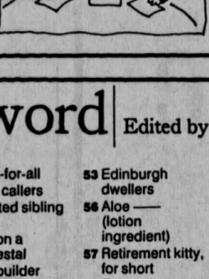

I went out to eat with Steve and Tony today.

We all decided it would be kind of fun to get together.

Steve told us about a crazy cable TV ad he was watching the other day.

Tony was saying he's up for a really good telemarketing job.

Good pitching Key in Yankees win

Associated Press

BOSTON — Jimmy Key allowed six hits in eight innings for his 11th straight victory and became the first 12-game winner in the majors Monday night, pitching the New York Yankees to a 5-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

It was the 10th straight loss at home for the Red Sox, matching their second-longest skid at Fenway Park. Boston also lost 10 straight at home in 1927, and had a 14-game losing streak at Fenway in 1926.

Key (12-1), who has five of New York's 12 wins in June, hasn't lost since his second start of the season.

Aaron Sele (6-4) allowed four runs on eight hits in 6 2-3 innings for Boston. He matched his season high with nine strikeouts.

Mike Gallego drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly in the fifth and an RBI single, Luis Polonia had a run-scoring bunt and Wade Boggs doubled home a run for New York, which won its sixth straight.

Scott Cooper hit his 13th homer into the center-field bleachers in the seventh to become the first left-handed hitter to homer off Key since teammate Mo Vaughn did it at Yankee Stadium last Sept. 18.

Royals 2, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Tom Gordon pitched five-hit ball for 7 1/2 innings and Kansas City scored two unearned runs in the fifth inning and made them stand up against Minnesota.

Gordon (8-4) matched his season-high with eight strikeouts in winning for the fifth time in six decisions. He walked two and allowed Scott Leius' 10th home run in the fifth, and Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

Kevin Tapani (8-5) allowed just five hits and fanned eight, but a three-base error by center fielder Alex Cole and Tapani's two-base throwing miscue set up both Royals' runs in the sixth.

Hubie Brooks drove in the first run with a sacrifice fly and Vince Coleman gave the Royals a 2-0 lead with his ninth triple.

Orioles 7, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Light-hitting Jeff Tackett led off the eighth inning with his first home run in two years and Baltimore handed Cleveland its third home loss in a row after an 18-game winning streak.

Tackett homered on Charles Nagy's first pitch in the eighth, his first home run since June 30, 1992, and only the sixth of his career.

Nagy (6-4) allowed seven runs and 11 hits in eight innings. Tom Bolton (1-1) yielded one run and four hits in 2 1/2 innings to win, and Lee Smith struck out the side in the ninth to earn his major league-leading 26th save.

Harold Baines hit his 12th home run for Baltimore, which led 6-1 until the Indians four runs in the fifth and one in the sixth to tie it.

Brewers 5, Blue Jays 1

MILWAUKEE — Cal Eldred pitched a six-hitter for his third consecutive complete game and Milwaukee sent Toronto to its ninth straight loss.

The Blue Jays' skid is their longest since they lost 12 straight in 1981.

Eldred (9-7), who had three-hitters in his last two starts, walked two and struck out four in his fifth complete game and fifth victory this month.

Al Leiter (3-5) gave up three runs on seven hits and walked four in four innings in his first start since coming off the 15-day disabled list.

Milwaukee, which stranded 14 runners, got four singles and a walk in the third, but only scored twice — on B.J. Surhoff's sacrifice fly and Dave Nilsson's RBI single. Surhoff added an RBI double an inning later, and Jody Reed, who broke an 0-for-15 skid earlier, hit a two-run single in the fifth.

Expos 7, Braves 2

MONTREAL — Ken Hill out-pitched Greg Maddux and became the National League's first 11-game winner as the Montreal Expos beat Atlanta to close within 1 1/2 games of the Braves in the National League East.

The game was tied 1-1 in the seventh before Wil Cordero hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly off Maddux (10-4). Cliff Floyd then broke the game open with a three-run homer.

Hill (11-3) worked 7 1/2 innings, allowing two runs on four hits, striking out three and walking six.

Rockies 12, Padres 7

DENVER — Dante Bichette hit two long home runs, including a grand slam in the eighth inning, and Colorado pounded out 17 hits to beat San Diego.

Bichette tied a club record with five RBI, and Vinny Castilla and Eric Young also homered for Colorado. San Diego, losing consecutive games for the first time since June 15, left 15 runners on base.

David Nied (7-4) got the win and improved to 4-0 lifetime against the Padres. Andy Ashby (3-6) had his three-game winning streak snapped.

Cardinals 9, Mets 8

NEW YORK — A ninth-inning error by shortstop Jose Vizcaino allowed the winning run to score as St. Louis, after blowing a six-run lead in the seventh inning, rallied to beat New York.

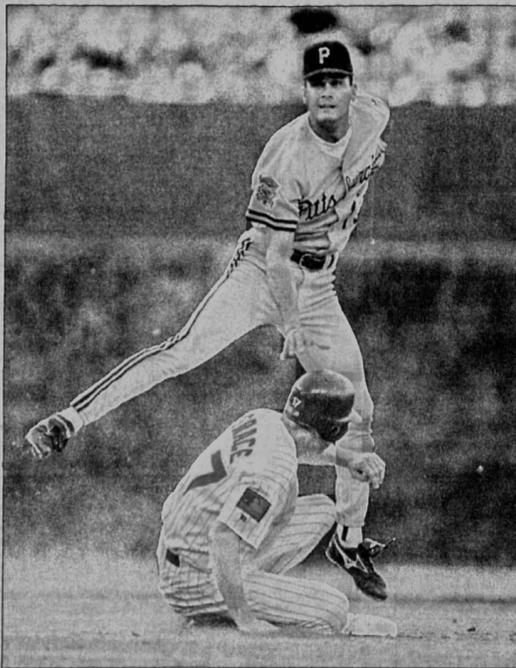

One-out singles by Todd Zeile and pinch-hitter Bernard Gilkey and an RBI double by pinch-hitter Gregg Jefferies tied the game 8-8 against John Franco (1-4). Stan Royer then hit a routine grounder that bounced off Vizcaino's glove and into the outfield, scoring Gilkey from third.

Rich Rodriguez (2-2) pitched 1 1/2 innings for the win.

Phillies 5, Marlins 1

PHILADELPHIA — Shawn Boskie scattered six hits in his first complete game in four years and Jim Eisenreich hit a two-run triple as Philadelphia won its third straight.

Boskie (4-4) struck out four, walked two and allowed only one runner past first base. It was his second career complete game and his first since May 20, 1990, when he pitched for the Chicago Cubs.

The Phillies jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first and knocked out Kurt Miller (1-3) an inning later.

Cubs 2, Pirates 1

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa's shallow sacrifice fly brought home the winning run in the eighth inning and helped Chicago end Pittsburgh's six-game winning streak.

Sosa's pop fly was caught in short center by second baseman Carlos Garcia, whose momentum carried him further into the outfield. Kevin Roberson barely beat the throw which eluded catcher Lance Parrish.

Cubs starter Willie Banks (8-

6) retired 20 consecutive hitters at one point and got the victory. Jeff Ballard (1-1) took the loss, allowing Roberson's leadoff double in the eighth.

Astros 7, Reds 6 (11 innings)

HOUSTON — Craig Biggio singled home the winning run in the 11th inning Monday night to give the Houston Astros a 7-6 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in a matchup of the top two teams in the NL Central.

Houston pulled within 2 1/2 games of the Reds, who rallied for four runs in the ninth inning to tie the game.

Kevin Bass opened the 11th with a single off Jeff Brantley (5-4) and moved to second on a passed ball. Luis Gonzalez had three hits and two RBI.

AEGON ADVANTAGE

Witty Fry steals show

Pat Regan

The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye players and coaches both past and present gathered at Finkbine Golf Course Monday to compete in the AEGON Advantage celebrity golf tournament.

Football coach Hayden Fry and basketball coach Tom Davis along with former Hawkeyes Matt Bullard, Chuck Long, Bobby Hansen and UI President Hunter Rawlings headed the list of competitors.

The players competed in teams of five, with all 41 groups having one celebrity.

Bullard's team took first place followed by the group led by UI men's athletic director Bob Bowsby and former Hawkeye football lineman Dave Haight's fivesome.

Not too many players were concerned about winning, but rather, just having a good time.

"I think it's a real good event," Davis said. "I've gotten to know various fans over the years and for them to come and take part in this — as well as some former players — it makes it real nice."

Fans gathered around the first and 10th tees in the morning and early afternoon to get a glimpse of their favorite Hawkeyes.

Fry entertained the crowd with his usual quick wit and sense of humor. When asked where he will be on Jan. 1, Fry replied, "I know I'll be in Pasadena (for the Rose Bowl), I just haven't figured out how to get the team out there yet."

Fry wasn't all talk though. Donning a black, wide-brimmed Iowa hat, he led his team to a fourth-place finish overall, causing one fan to remark, "He looks like Greg Norman out there."

Fry's punter Nick Gallery was also a fan favorite. Gallery took a golf ball and punted it approximately 15 yards just prior to his opening tee shot.

Hansen followed Gallery and told the crowd how his play in the fourth quarter of Game six of the 1992 NBA Finals sparked the Chicago Bulls to their second title.

"Michael (Jordan) was looking pretty tired so I came in and gave him a breather," Hansen said.

Study: Revised academic demands more beneficial

Doug Tucker

Associated Press

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — About 500 more minority athletes would graduate under revised academic requirements than under NCAA rules adopted five months ago over the protest of black educators, a study says.

A special committee will present its findings to the NCAA Presidents Commission this week and ask that the new standards replace Proposition 16, which schools approved at the NCAA convention last January.

In addition, the committee said in a statement Monday that it will ask that the new requirements take effect in August 1996 instead of August 1995. The changes would all need approval of NCAA schools at their next convention in January.

The study was commissioned at the request of many black educators, who have fought a running battle over standardized test scores since they were made a key element of freshmen eligibility requirements known as Proposition 48 in 1983. Proposition 16 is meant to tighten and replace Proposition 48.

The black coaches and educators, along with many whites, maintain that standardized test scores are racially and culturally discriminatory and do not accurately predict a young person's ability to do college work.

Under the revised standards, the importance of test scores would be greatly diminished.

"The proposed standards are fair," said William DeLauder of Delaware State, co-chairman of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial Eligibility Standards. "They don't rely as heavily on test scores. They ensure that student-athletes have a reasonable level of academic preparedness but also ensure that the level is attainable."

The committee will recommend a sliding scale keyed to an SAT score of 650 and a grade-point average of 2.4 on a 4.0 scale. There would also be a minimum grade point of 2.0 in 13 college-preparedness courses such as math, English and science.

The scale would range from a 2.0 grade average and an 810 SAT to a 3.0 and a 410 SAT.

Under Proposition 48, an incoming freshman needed a 2.0 grade-point average in 11 core courses and a minimum combined SAT score of 700. Proposition 16 raised the number of core courses to 13 and increased the GPA to 2.5.

The survey looked at athletes entering in 1984-85, before Proposition 48 went into effect. It analyzed how each athlete would have done under any of the standards.

According to the results, the number of black graduates would increase by one-third over the Proposition 16 standards and by one-quarter over Proposition 48, the current rule. The committee said overall graduation rates would not be greatly affected.

Daly stirs controversy with Hartford Open scorecard

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — John Daly is the subject of yet another controversy as PGA Tour officials attempt to determine whether he signed for the correct score after the final round of the Greater Hartford Open.

PGA Tour media official Mark Mitchell said a question arose as to whether Daly, who was paired with Clark Dennis Sunday, should have been credited with a bogey on the par-3 fifth hole instead of the par he signed for.

The 1991 PGA champion, who signed for a 5-over-par 75 that gave him a 278 total and a $11,520 check for a 22nd-place tie, would be disqualified if officials determine he signed an incorrect scorecard.

"We can't get in touch with John right now," Mitchell said. "We want to talk to him first to figure out what happened."

Daly, who won the BellSouth Classic in Atlanta in May after serving a 12-week suspension for failing to complete a round in a tournament in Hawaii, has had a number of scorecard-related problems.

He failed to sign cards after an 81 in the second round of the 1992 Australian Masters and a 77 in the final round of the 1993 Kemper Open, and signed an incorrect card after an 87 in the second round of the 1991 World Championship in Jamaica.

WORLD CUP

ABC's ratings soar after U.S. match with Romania

NEW YORK (AP) — Sunday's World Cup game between the United States and Romania received a 7.8 overnight rating in 29 major markets, putting it on track to be the most-watched soccer game ever in the United States.

The Americans' 1-0 loss, televised by ABC, appears likely to eclipse the record 6.6 rating for the 1982 World Cup final between Italy and West Germany, also televised by ABC.

The national rating for Sunday's game will be released on Thursday by Nielsen Media Research.

Sunday's game drew a 20 percent share of the audience in the 29 major markets, about triple the ratings of Wimbledon on NBC and double the Greater Hartford Open on CBS.

Wimbledon got a 2.3 rating on Saturday and a 2.2 on Sunday, while the golf got a 3.3 on Saturday and 3.9 on Sunday.

Also, ABC said today it will televise the United States' second-round game, either on Saturday in Chicago or on Monday at Stanford Stadium. If the Americans play at Stanford, ABC will not televise the second-round game earlier that day at Orlando, Fla.

NBA

Robinson has change of heart, will attend draft

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Glenn Robinson, expected to be the first pick in the NBA draft, won't spoil the show after all.

Robinson's agent, Charles Tucker, said Monday that the former Purdue star won't boycott Wednesday's draft at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis.

"He will attend. Fans and the players deserve this," Tucker said. "We'll do it for the NBA, the fans and the players. But we still have concerns about many issues. We're not going to give up our rights."

Tucker told the Indianapolis Star in a story published Sunday that Robinson, expected to be selected first overall by the Milwaukee Bucks, was considering a boycott to protest the legality of the draft and a possible rookie salary cap.

"We're not trying to embarrass the league or make the ratings go down," Tucker said.

Winnings continue for Bullard

Pat Regan
 The Daily Iowan

Fresh off winning the NBA Championship with the Houston Rockets last Wednesday, former Hawkeye Matt Bullard was on hand Monday for the AEGON Advantage celebrity golf tournament.

"I just want to have fun," he said. "I've only played (golf) once this year, and it was real ugly, so I don't expect to do too well."

Fortunately for him, Bullard's prediction was wrong and he got a chance to experience the winning feeling again when he and his four teammates won the 41-team AEGON Advantage tournament.

Bullard said the feeling of winning a world title is just beginning to hit him.

"It's starting to sink in now, but I want it to take it a long time before it sinks in so I can enjoy this feeling for a long time," he said.

The West Des Moines native is a free agent now, making his NBA future uncertain.

"I'm trying to find a team to play for it could be the Rockets again, or it could be a different team, so it's going to pretty hectic," he said. "I think it would be great to play with a world championship team again, but I've already got a ring and I need to make some money while I can."

"I just want to have fun. I've only played (golf) once this summer, and it was real ugly so I don't expect to do too well."

Matt Bullard, former Hawkeye and current Houston Rocket

The 6-foot-10 Bullard has made his mark in the NBA as an excellent outside shooter and said he is working on other aspects of his game to improve his marketability.

Frank Miller/The Daily Iowan

forward for the Houston Rockets, participated in the event which was held by AEGON to raise money for the athletic department.

"I'm sort of known around the league as being able to hit the 3-pointer, and I'm constantly working on that," Bullard said. "I'm trying to be able to take the ball to the hole a little more. (Opposing defenses) are really getting up on me and they're not letting me get the open shots anymore so any shots I can create off the dribble will really help me a lot."

Bullard transferred as a junior to Iowa from Colorado in 1988. Due to knee injuries, he was never able to show his full ability.

"I enjoyed the people here at Iowa and I've made some lifelong friendships," Bullard said. "It was pretty tough for me having two knee injuries back-to-back, but I guess it's all worked out for me in the long run. I guess that's why they say nothing in life is easy, you have to work for it."

Bullard's summer schedule is booked as he is getting married this summer and has his own three-week basketball camp coming up in Houston; nevertheless, he's still finding time to squeeze in a round of golf.

"I always have a good time coming back and seeing all my old friends," Bullard said.

"I just wanted to come back and play in a tournament like this. It's a real good opportunity to help the university. I had planned this a couple months ago before the championship ever happened so I've been looking forward to coming back."

MAGIC JOHNSON

Johnson finally makes way into front office

John Nadel
 Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson has always wanted to be an NBA owner. After a couple of tries with other teams, he achieved his goal with the team that made him famous — the Los Angeles Lakers.

Johnson, who led the Lakers to five championships in 12 years before his playing career came to an abrupt end in 1991 when he learned he had contracted the virus that causes AIDS, has purchased a part interest in the team.

On a conference call Monday from Hawaii, where he's vacationing, Johnson wouldn't divulge the percentage he purchased from majority owner Dr. Jerry Buss, or how much he was paying.

"It's one percent more than I had or any other player had," Johnson said. "I'm just happy to have whatever that percentage is. This is just a great day for African-American people as well as myself and athletes in general. This is what it's all about. Whatever it (the percentage of ownership) is, it's more than we had yesterday."

"Dr. Buss and I do things strange. He knew that I wanted it, all of a sudden one day, (Buss said), 'OK, I'll sell you part of the team.' He does things at his own pace. He just picked up the phone after he knew I wanted it. All of a sudden, he said, 'You belong here.'"

The percentage is believed to be less than 10 percent, but that could change in the future.

"He knows I want more, that's his decision," Johnson said. "I'm satisfied and happy. I always wanted to own. This is one of the greatest investments I could have."

Johnson, 34, is owed $14.6 million for the 1994-95 season by the Lakers, a negotiation completed before a short-lived comeback that lasted a little over a month and ended with his second and final retirement prior to the 1992-93 season.

"Dr. Buss still has to pay me, this is something separate from that," Johnson said. "I had to reach into my personal account and spend a lot of money."

The Associated Press learned that Johnson is paying in excess of $10 million to purchase his piece of the Lakers.

"His energy, enthusiasm and love of the Lakers cannot help but make our organization stronger," Buss said in a press release.

Johnson returned to the Lakers for the final 16 games of the 1993-94 season as head coach, but announced before the season ended he would not return in that capacity next season.

After his retirement, Johnson made several moves toward moving into a front office. He was part of a group that lost a bid for an expansion franchise in Toronto, and he reportedly negotiated as part of a group to buy the Minnesota Timberwolves.

He will hold the title of vice president and work in "various management areas where his expertise could be beneficial to the Lakers," the team announced.

Those duties will include college and professional player evaluation assistance to Jerry West, the team's executive vice president of basketball operations, and Mitch Kupchak, Lakers' general manager; assisting the coaching staff; and in marketing and public relations.

WIMBLEDON

Martina keeps rolling

Hal Bock
 Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Score this day for America's 30-something women — Martina Navratilova, Zina Garrison Jackson, Lori McNeil and Gigi Fernandez.

And don't forget their precocious teen-age accomplice, Lindsay Davenport.

All five charged into the quarterfinals at Wimbledon Monday, the most Americans to get that far since 1985. And with defending champion and No. 1 seed Steffi Graf long gone, the up side could be limitless for them.

Navratilova, 37, and Davenport, 18, at opposite ends of the tennis timetable, scored straight set victories. Navratilova, on an emotional roll in her last Wimbledon, defeated Helena Sukova 6-1, 6-2. Davenport, still talking about proms and diplomas, powered past Gabriela Sabatini 6-1, 6-3.

Their success here is less of a surprise than that of McNeil, Garrison Jackson and Fernandez, all at the crossroads of careers that parallel each other.

All are 30, veterans in a sport that tolerates age and celebrates youth. Each has been on the Grand Slam circuit for more than a decade with only occasional success.

And now they're all are in the quarterfinals of the most prestigious grass-court tournament in the world.

Fernandez defeated Yayuk Basuki 6-4, 6-1, advancing to a Grand Slam quarterfinal for just the second time since joining the circuit in 1983. It was not without a price. She pulled a right quadriceps muscle and was forced to withdraw from mixed doubles later in the day.

She gets no rest, though, forced to come back today against Garrison Jackson, who defeated second-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 7-5, 4-6, 6-3.

"I had a lot of motivating factors," Garrison Jackson said. Included among them was the success of her longtime pal, McNeil, who beat Graf in the first round and advanced Monday with a difficult 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (7-4) victory over Florencia Labat.

At the start, McNeil's service was broken three straight times. Down 2-4 and facing break point at 0-40, she fought back to win the game.

"That was a big game, a big boost for me to come back and win that game," she said. "It was good for my confidence and maybe not so good for hers."

Twice in the second set, McNeil let match points get away, one on a shot that hit the net and rolled over. She shrugged it off as bad luck, just part of the game.

"It was a real fight out there," she said. "Sometimes you don't always play your best each day. That's part of it. I'm really happy with the way I'm really hanging in there and really fighting hard."

She remembered a time when that might not have happened.

McNeil said her approach to the game changed this year.

"I think on the court and in life in general when things weren't going my way I seemed to not handle them as well," she said. "I've just learned to fight through them, just to accept whatever I'm dealt and try to handle it. I don't get discouraged easily."

"I always believed that I had the talent, and I believed if you continue to work hard in anything you do and you have talent, things will go your way at some point, if you really believe."

"And I believe."

Associated Press

Martina Navratilova plays a return in her ladies singles match to Helena Sukova in the fourth round of play Monday at Wimbledon.
