Man charged after Lindquist Center mayhem

A man accused of assaulting two women and destroying property in the south lobby of the Lindquist Center around 10 p.m. Tuesday is in police custody.

Burl Henry, 31, was charged with second-degree criminal mischief and two counts of simple assault.

Henry allegedly tore through the Lindquist Center lobby at 9:40 p.m. and began breaking objects within the area. UI Public Safety Lt. Mike Laing said the wall and at least two phones and several clay pots were damaged in the lobby.

Outside, a car window was shattered and a tree was uprooted. No damage estimate was available.

After leaving the center, Henry allegedly headed northeast. He reportedly started swinging his arms and harassing a woman near Phillips Hall. Although he didn't touch her, blood from injuries sustained at Lindquist Center did come in contact with the woman.

Laing said another incident followed shortly thereafter involving Henry and a woman near Old Capitol Mall; she, too, allegedly came into contact with Laing's blood.

Carpenter released from UI Hospitals and Clinics

The carpenter who fell 30 feet down an elevator shaft when a platform collapsed on the fourth floor of Bowen Science Building was released from UI Hospitals and Clinics Wednesday.

Richard Redlinger, 27, an employee of Selzer-Werderitsch Construction Company, had been admitted to the hospital Tuesday morning. The company had been contracted to remodel the building.

Man rescued by Iowa City firefighters

The Iowa City Fire Department responded to a house fire at 41 Regal Lane at 8 a.m. Wednesday and found one person trapped on the second floor.

Iowa City resident Russ Richardson was rescued from the second-floor bedroom window by firefighters using a ground ladder. He was treated by Johnson County Paramedics for minor injuries and released. His wife and daughter, who were also home at the time of the fire, were able to escape without injury.

Hunt for missing rafter wears on

Dam dangers explained by UI professor

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

Many people don't realize how dangerous a dam like the one under the Burlington Street bridge is until it's too late.

The presumed drowning of UI senior Brent Hartman is just the latest of several tragedies that occur each year when people get too close to what's called a "low-head dam" and get caught in a turbulent, deadly undertow of water.

Subhash Jain, UI professor of civil engineering, said once water flows over the dam, there is a space created because the water wants to cut down close to the river bottom. This, he said, is a hole that must be filled and water rushes back to fill it up. The result is a continuous spiral of water.

"Anything caught in this recirculation will be trapped," he said. "It's a phenomenon called hydraulic jump."

Once someone gets caught in this spiral of water, Jain said, it is virtually impossible to swim out.

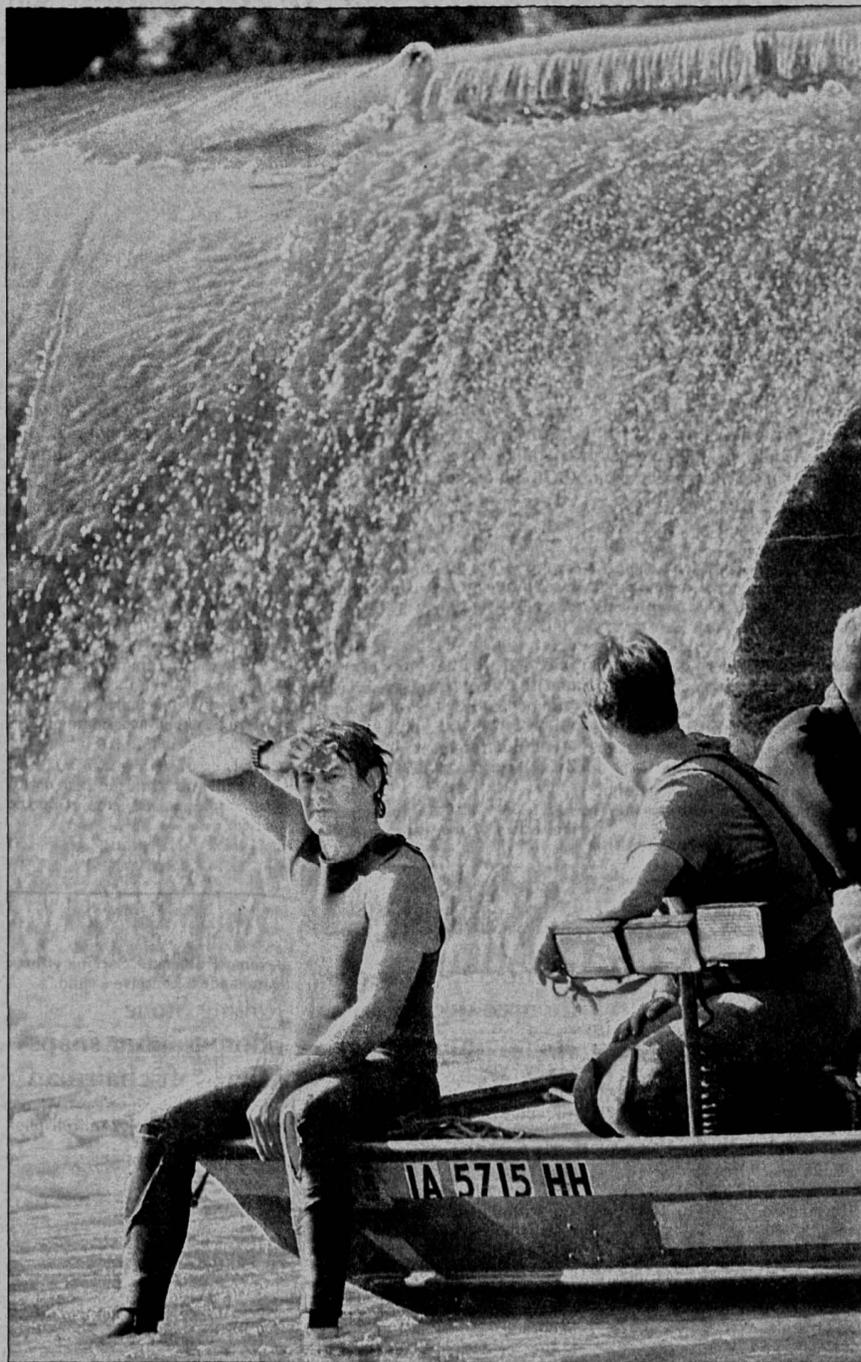

"The only way out may be to actually crawl along the bottom," he said, referring to a small runway of water that gets forced out of the loop near the river's bottom.

This effect at the Burlington Street dam has claimed at least one life in the last five years.

Previously both a flour-grinding water mill and an electricity-generating water wheel have been a part of the dam; however, Jim Howard, associate director of building operations and maintenance for the UI Physical Plant, said the dam hasn't generated power for more than 30 years.

Veteran diver Calvin Colony examines the area under the Burlington Street dam Wednesday afternoon for the body of Brent Hartman, one of two people to go over the dam Tuesday afternoon. The Iowa River was lowered 4 feet, making the search easier for divers, the Johnson County Sheriff's Department, Iowa City Police Department and the Iowa City Fire Department, as well as a dog (left) who is specially trained to smell humans underwater. Hartman was not found.

Accident stuns family, friends

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

Family members and close friends of Brent Hartman watched and waited along the banks of the Iowa River Wednesday as rescue workers searched for his body.

The 22-year-old UI senior is presumed to have drowned after the inflatable raft he and his childhood friend Tom Wisnasky, 21, were floating in went over the Burlington Street dam shortly after 3 p.m. Tuesday. Wisnasky managed to swim to shore and was rescued.

Wisnasky's mother, Judy, spent the day at the scene along with many members of the Hartman family, curious onlookers and a number of television cameramen and reporters.

"I think it's very sad. All I care about is getting Brent's family through this and getting my son through this. He's got a long way to go," she said.

Hartman, a communications studies major from Naperville, Ill., transferred to the UI from Yavapai Junior College in Prescott, Ariz., two years ago. Hartman was a pitcher for the Hawkeyes the past two years and had a school record for most saves in a season in 1993.

He sat out most of last season with an arm injury and had finished his eligibility as a UI baseball player this spring.

UI baseball coach Duane Banks said Hartman was a great person and "a good kid."

"He did everything he was supposed to do and he did it right," Banks said. "He was going to graduate in August and had a job waiting for him. It's not fair."

Banks said he heard of the accident after it happened Tuesday afternoon but never thought that it might involve one of his own.

"He was a hard worker in the classroom and on the baseball field," Banks said. "There was only one thing he did wrong. It's a sad thing."

I.C. suffers effects of '93 flood

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

The flood of 1993 may seem like a distant memory, but to those who have been in charge of coordinating the aftermath, the end is not yet in sight.

Just one week shy of the one-year anniversary of Gov. Terry Branstad declaring Johnson County a state disaster area, City Manager Steve Atkins said the most difficult part of his role in flood management has been listening to stories of personal tragedy from the people of Iowa City.

"The human life element — people out of their homes and losing all their furniture — was what I found most troubling and, quite frankly, the most time-consuming.

"A flood is a protracted tragedy. It stays and stays and you can't do anything," Atkins said. "You can't begin to recover and that's just really got to drag on you."

As flood waters continued to wreak havoc all over the city throughout the summer, Iowa City finance director Don Yucuis kept track of damage amounts.

When it was all over, he had requested more than $1.5 million in assistance. Of this total, 90 percent will be provided by the federal government and 10 percent will be state money.

To date, the city has received $731,372 from the Federal Emergency Management Administration and the Federal Highway Administration.

At the Alamo Motor Inn, time has been standing still since the summer of 1993.

Dust coats the window panes in the lobby. The local fun and entertainment brochures for Iowa City and Coralville are more than a year old.

On the walls of the reception area hang the "Employee of the Month" plaques — the last hard-working employees won awards in May of last year. The desk clerk of the month was Jim; the housekeeper of the month, Becky.

When the phone rings, the answering machine eventually kicks in, "This is the Alamo Motor Inn. We are no longer operating as a motel."

In fact, the place is to be torn down next year because it was so severely damaged by the flood of '93.

The Alamo Motor Inn is just one of more than a hundred Coralville Strip businesses affected by the flood. According to Coralville City Engineer Dan Holderness, more than 65 businesses closed down during the period with water damaging 45 buildings. The entire strip was paralyzed for 10 weeks last summer.

Vera Lepic and her husband spent five years remodeling the Alamo Motor Inn, and although her material losses were covered by flood insurance, there is no compensation for the effort she put into the place. Lepic hasn't decided what will be built on the site. But she is certain of one thing: There will never be another.

Simpson defense team may have to check egos

Jeff Meyer
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — One of Robert Shapiro's biggest challenges in defending O.J. Simpson on murder charges may be keeping members of his star-studded legal team happy.

F. Lee Bailey and Alan Der- showitz, strong-willed and opinion-

"When they come together there is a potential for conflict and for pushing aside and running over people."

Ted Cassman, Northern California lawyer

ated legal heavyweights accustomed to the limelight, have been called in to help Shapiro.

"Criminal defense lawyers are a breed apart," said Ted Cassman, a Northern California lawyer. "They tend to be real lone wolf types. They tend to be very aggressive and powerful people who ... oftentimes aren't particularly careful about other people's feelings."

"When they come together there is a potential for conflict and for pushing aside and running over people," Cassman added.

Beverly Hills civil rights attorney Leo Terrell said Shapiro's biggest task will be "balancing the egos." "He has to be a manager and make sure each of them are comfortable with their role," Terrell said.

The first major step in Simpson's case comes today in a preliminary hearing at which prosecutors will try to persuade a judge they have enough evidence to proceed to trial.

Simpson is Shapiro accused of stabbing to death his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman on June 12.

Shapiro is expected to try the case but could be joined in the courtroom by Bailey, a gifted trial lawyer who also represented Albert DeSalvo in the Boston Strangler case. Confident, colorful and dapper, Bailey is a commanding presence before juries with his booming voice.

In contrast, Shapiro is low-key and even-tempered. During the Simpson case so far, he has been firm but cordial. He is known for his to-the-point questioning.

Despite their differences in courtroom style, Bailey and Shapiro are longtime friends. Bailey is godfather to Shapiro's first son, and Shapiro successfully

Cambus driver makes most of being in control

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

UI junior Angie Zaiser gets bus sick so it may seem weird that she is a Cambus driver.

"As long as I am in control of the bus, I don't get sick," she said last Thursday morning while she was driving the Blue route.

Zaiser, one of 120 Cambus drivers, personifies control as she maintains composure while battling busy Melrose Avenue traffic at about 9:30 a.m. She is behind the wheel of bus No. 78, securely

Frank Miller/The Daily Iowan

UI junior Angie Zaiser loves her job as a Cambus driver. Although Cambus driver comradeship makes the job fun, she does get irritated by critical comments from passengers about KBOB radio, the country music station she listens to while driving. "I always listen to it; people make fun of me," she said. "You always get comments on music no matter what you play."

them because we are late. We are trying to provide the best service we can," she said.

Still, many riders don't seem to appreciate the job Zaiser and other bus drivers do. Zaiser said if only one rider each day would say "thank-you," she would be happy. Although most riders do not show gratitude, Zaiser loves her job.

"I really like it here," she said. "The people that work with me are a lot of fun — it's a job that takes a certain personality."

The Cambus driver comradeship is evident each time another bus is passed.

"You have to wave," she said. "It is the unwritten law."

Zaiser said although her job as a Cambus driver may not be the most interesting, it is probably one of the best on campus.

"It's not too exciting; you're just driving around in a circle," she said. "But the flexibility of the job and the people you are working with make it the best place to work at the university."

For entertainment while driving, Zaiser relies on KBOB country radio.

"I always listen to it; people make fun of me," she said. "You always get comments on music no matter what you play."

If riders don't comment on drivers' musical tastes, they're commenting on something. Zaiser has been yelled at, called names and had her driving critiqued by riders.

"There was a man who got on the bus at Schaeffer; he was upset and called me a horse's ass and asked me where I had learned to drive. He rang the bell at a nonmandatory stop," she said.

"He got up before the bus had stopped and slammed into the windshield. It was sort of poetic justice."

belted into the bright blue vinyl driver's seat.

Her eyes flicker several different directions, both hands on the wheel and a phone cradled on her shoulder. Despite having to deal with many things at once, a smile remains on her face.

However, this one-year veteran of bus driving didn't like it at first.

"After my first day of training, I wanted to quit," she said. "It is very difficult to master the skills of driving a big bus. People don't understand what it entails."

After driving a Cambus for several hours, Zaiser said it can be quite a transition to drive her car.

"You're dragging something behind you that's 40 feet long," she said. "Then you drive a little car like mine and it's like, 'Whoa.'" Zaiser has experience as a Cambus passenger, too. That experience makes her more aware of the passengers she serves.

"Most times I'll stop for people running. Some people take it personally if you don't stop," she said. "I was left standing at many stops my freshman year."

She said Cambus drivers try to pick up everyone.

Androgynous Pat leaving 'SNL'

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — One thing's finally clear about Pat: He or she — is history.

Julia Sweeney, who plays the androgynous character on "Saturday Night Live," is leaving the NBC show after four years.

"I really wanted to leave before I got bitter, and I felt like I was on the verge of bitterness," Sweeney said Monday.

"It's a really difficult job, and I didn't know what was in it for me anymore, except the money and the chance to meet celebrities," she said.

Sweeney has said she became disenchanted with "SNL" because it didn't give women enough air time.

Actors, director take lessons on NASA

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Tom Hanks, Kevin Bacon and Ron

Howard all but blasted off into space.

Hanks took the controls, Bacon was pilot and Howard was flight director for a simulated shuttle mission at the U.S. Space and Rocket Center as they researched roles for an upcoming movie about the Apollo 13 mission, which took place in 1970.

Howard will direct the film based on the book "Lost Moon," by Apollo 13 commander James Lovell Jr. and Jeff Kluger, which is scheduled for publication this fall.

"They've been super laid-back but serious about their mission here — to learn about NASA and the way a space mission operates," center spokeswoman Marianne Higgins said Monday.

Pornographer seeks divorce due to sexual abandonment

NEW YORK (AP) — Porn publisher Al Goldstein wants to divorce his fourth wife because of sexual abandonment — more or less.

The publisher of Screw magazine says he married Patricia Flaherty Goldstein because she assured him she wanted to have children. He testified Tuesday that she would not have intercourse with him and would only perform oral sex.

He is seeking a divorce or annulment on grounds of abandonment and fraud.

Justice David Saxe told the lawyers Goldstein's testimony raised the question of whether he could claim sexual abandonment if his wife was performing oral sex.

A lawyer for Flaherty Goldstein, 32, said that question was moot.

"There is not a shred of evidence that Mrs. Goldstein ever refused to have sex with her husband," said

Jerome Halperin. "Serious efforts were made to conceive a child."

Leibovitz, who does covers for Vanity Fair and Rolling Stone, has been taking photos for the Microsoft chairman's new book, company spokeswoman Mich Mathews said. But she said she wasn't exactly sure what Saturday's shoot was for.

Gates was photographed on an unfinished section of a four-lane highway.

Doctor presented award for nuclear medicine work

Dr. Peter Kirchner, professor of radiology and internal medicine at the UI College of Medicine, was honored in Hungary for his extraordinary work in the field of nuclear medicine.

Kirchner was awarded the Gorgy Hevesy Memorial Medal by the Hungarian Society of Nuclear Medicine at its annual fall 1993 meeting. The prize is named for a Hungarian Nobel laureate.

"I was very honored," said Kirchner, who is an expatriate Hungarian. "Hevesy is generally accepted as the founder of nuclear medicine.

It was very nice and rather touching to get the award which bears his name in the country of his birth."

Kirchner also was elected vice chairman of the American Board of Nuclear Medicine.

Researchers elected to honorary society

Two UI College of Medicine researchers were among 80 selected nationwide for membership in the American Society of Clinical Investigation.

Dr. John Cowdery, professor of internal medicine, was selected for membership for his research on how cell products regulate aspects of the immune system.

Dr. Larry Tobacman, associate professor of internal medicine, was honored for his study on proteins responsible for regulating skeletal and heart muscle contractions.

The ASCI is a national recognition honorary society of clinical researchers.

Grant given to find effects of music on Alzheimer's patients

The effect music has on the agitation levels of Alzheimer's residents living in long-term care facilities is the focus of a new study by two UI researchers.

Dr. Elizabeth Swanson, interim associate vice president for health professions education in the Office of the Vice President for Health Science and associate professor in the College of Nursing, has received a 2 1/2-year grant of $107,000 from the National Institutes of Health. The research involves measuring residents' agitation levels before and after sessions of listening to music.

Both researchers agree that different techniques for caring for Alzheimer's residents should be explored.

Sites for the study include the Oaknoll Retirement Residence in Iowa City, the Iowa City Care Center, the Iowa Veterans' Home in Marshalltown and the Iowa Lutheran Home in Muscatine.

VOLUNTEERS LESSENER DISASTER

Neighbors forged friendships through worst of '93 deluge

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Although the flood of '93 left many Iowa City and Coralville homes filled with water, they weren't able to dampen the spirit of a community.

Angie Maher, 704 Eastmoor Drive, said she knows many of her neighbors better after having survived the tragedy together.

"I did meet a lot of the neighbors I never would have met," she said. "Whenever it rained in the middle of the nights, we got up. If water started coming into a house, there was a fear that a neighbor could be

David Greedy/The Daily Iowan

"The flood affected everybody in Johnson County one way or another; if it wasn't for the volunteers, it would have been worse."

Charles Duffy, Johnson County supervisor

Marathon Construction employee Jeff McArtor has been repairing the house at 725 Edgewater Drive in Coralville since early spring. He is completely rebuilding the inside after flood waters swept over the area nearly one year ago. The house, now owned by Jim Glasgow and Laurie Pulchin of Marathon Construction, was raised several feet earlier in the year, just in case, for the event of another flood.

that will stay with her and serve as a reminder of the '93 floods.

"One night I came back from Colorado, it was dark, lightning and I was standing in about 3 feet of water," Maher said. "That typifies the entire summer."

Johnson County supervisor Charles Duffy said the number of volunteers lessened the devastation of the flood.

"The flood affected everybody in Johnson County one way or another; if it wasn't for the volunteers, it would have been worse," he said.

Duffy said volunteers worked well together, despite the amount of work they had to do.

"It's pretty tough when you can't get in your home for a month and a half or so, and all of your possessions are ruined by water," Duffy said.

But after the experiences of last summer, Maher said she appreciates the little things a lot more.

"I learned not to take the simple things for granted, like driving your car and having mail delivered to your door," she said.

After surviving a difficult year full of hard work and cleanup, parties are planned throughout Eastmoor and Normandy neighborhoods.

"We are just relaxed," Larson said. "I don't think this will ever happen again. I truly believe it was a 500-year flood."

trapped. There was always the fear that something was going to happen to someone."

One year later, residents of Eastmoor and Normandy drives have dry homes and fond memories of the way their small community banded together.

Jack Larson said he will never forget the bonds that were formed in response to the disaster. The basement of his home at 604 Normandy Drive was filled with 5 feet of groundwater. He and his family were forced to reside in a hotel for a month.

"The thing that stands out the most is the comradeship among neighbors and the friendships that were cemented," Larson said. "There was a tremendous amount of work and stress."

Maher said there is one memory

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM

Atomic clocks set to drop 'leap second'

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Leap year comes once every four years to correct the difference between an ordinary year and an astronomical year.

Slightly more often, a leap second occurs to correct the difference between the atomic clock and civilian time. Judah Levine of the National Institutes of Standard and Technology's Time Frequency Division in Boulder, Colo., said the subtle time change occurs once every 12 to 18 months.

Today, that change will be made at 7 p.m. CST.

"There are two kinds of time," Levine said. "The standard comes from the atomic clocks, which is universal time."

Most people, however, are content to go by plain ol' "civilian" time. Civilian time is just a fancy way to refer to the less than perfect clocks we're all surrounded by — on walls, in cars and on your wrist.

"Atomic clocks are ahead; when that builds up, we add one second to atomic time to bring it back into synchronization," Levine said. "All standard lab clocks in the U.S. will drop one second this afternoon."

Making such a seemingly small change may seem unnecessary, but Levine explained that the change is meant to be subtle.

"The idea is that the correction be so small that most people can ignore it. There is no nuisance in civilian time," he said.

Today will be the 29th use of the leap second since the system began in 1972. Levine said there were other versions of the same practice prior to that time.

ALBUM REVIEWS

New groups, new directions on new CDs

Lush
Split
After wading in the placid water of Lake Shogazer on their second album, Spooky, Lush dives into an ocean of new musical possibilities on its spectacular third release, Split.

From the opening strings of "Light from a Dead Star" through the post-riot-grrrl rockers "Black-out" and "Hypocrite" and the majestic astral visions of "Desire Lines," Lush finally realizes the full potential hinted at in its early EPs.

Gone are the blurry, indistinct vocals and Robin Guthrie trademark production style, replaced by a strong sense of adapting production and mixing styles to match the individual needs of each song. Some of the credit surely goes to Alan Moulder, who continues his remarkable run of mixing credits, including, most recently, Nine Inch Nails' The Downward Spiral.

By stripping away much of the aural gauze covering previous Lush releases, Lush allows the beautiful vocals by Miki Berenyi and Emma Anderson to shine. The lyrics, while not always brilliant, at least serve to strengthen the element of personality which was so sorely lacking on Spooky.

Overall, Split is a triumphant comeback for a band seeking to avoid the black hole of obscurity already swallowing many of its contemporaries from the 1990-91 London club scene.

Weezer

Weezer
Ah, that young, enterprising spirit that drives so many to start bands (and fail to see soon enough what a pointless venture it can be). If Weezer has any single thing going for it, it is an irrepressible spirit, one that elevates potentially unremarkable guitar pop songs into playful wads of distorted joy.

Weezer's brand of smirking punk-flavored pop owes at least a small debt to Pavement, which seems to have been among the first groups to suggest that heavy guitar chords don't necessarily dictate a heavy attitude. Weezer is musically playful as well, and the band gets bored with one riff or song quickly enough that you don't have to. "My Name is Jonas"

Pride & Glory
Pride & Glory

The fourth track on Pride & Glory's new self-titled CD announces itself with a roaring, bubbly beer belch. And when the fumes clear, the song unfolds as a soft, rambling Southern-style back-porch ballad, surprisingly articulate and even a little wistful.

This type of weird contradiction soaks every track on Pride & Glory, thanks to the band's strange style. They seem to have found a curious synthesis of Southern rock, Seattle grunge and bluegrass which lends itself well to just about any idiom, from a trite drinking song like "Lovin' Woman" to the full-blown dueling banjos surge of the opener, "Losin' Your Mind."

Imagine a Mason-jar shot of Kentucky moonshine with a 42-ounce cappuccino chaser and you've got a clear idea of the feeling this band invokes. Better yet, imagine Eddie Vedder writing and singing for Lynard Skynard or the Allman Brothers, equal parts self-absorption, gut-level emotion and heart-on-the-sleeve philosophy all kept in check by big fuzzy guitars and blinding harmonica solos.

Pride & Glory deserves a close listen from fans of both grunge and Southern rock, if for no other reason than the fact that grunge can only go so far on its own, and Southern rock has always needed a good solid kick in the head.

Warren G

Regulate ... g funk era
Like most hip-hop artists, first-time producer Warren G fills his debut release with talent other than his own. The sad thing is, "Regulate," the album's first single, is a poor example of the diversity, creativity and addictiveness that era's other tracks radiate.

Although "Regulate" does include some decent guest vox from Dogg Pound's Nate Dogg, it lacks the spontaneity of the other songs. While most of the album keeps listeners asking, to quote one era track, "What's Next?", "Regulate" just keeps repeating the same groove over and over.

Aside from the first track, almost every song sounds completely different from the next, thanks to a wide array of guest rappers, ranging from the funky, '70s-style flow of the Dove Shack to the hardcore, Lady of Rage-wannabee holler of Super Soul Sis. Lil Malik, no longer a stranger to the rap world, also shares a track with Warren G. No matter what style of hip-hop fan you are, Regulate ... g funk era has something to offer, whether it's softcore gangsta rap, funk, R&B or just a break from the monotonous rap that has begun to dominate the scene.

Jazzfest back from the waves with eclectic lineup for July 4

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

The fact that the 1993 Iowa City Jazz Festival had more water problems than the Titanic was one of the most disheartening consequences of last year's bizarre, tropical summer.

Perhaps most unfortunate was the fact that, in the festival's first two years, organizers were able to double the event's attendance from 5,000 in 1991 to nearly 10,000 in '92. 1993 was expected to be the biggest ever, forecasted at a crowd of 15,000 to 20,000. Word had begun to circulate throughout the Midwest about the event, and it was said that the festival could become one of the region's biggest.

It's well-known that the festival's organizers had to wait another year to see their dreams come true.

But the sun is breaking through, making last year look increasingly like a temporary setback. The summer of 1994 has been a relatively dry one, and the Jazz Fest's fourth run, scheduled for Monday, looks like the one to beat. A wider diversity of musical types, a carry-over in word-of-mouth hype from previous years and a general atmosphere of good fortune are coalescing around what could be the best

Barbara J. Crawford/Rounder Records

Duke Robillard (pictured), Mahlatini and the Mahotella Queens, Voices of Soul and the T.S. Monk Jr. sextet are among the acts performing at the July 4 Iowa City Jazz Festival. The downtown show begins at noon and ends when the fireworks end; admission is free.

made up of talented high-school students from across Iowa, will make the Jazz Festival one stop on their statewide summer tour, which concludes with a performance at the Iowa State Fair in Des Moines.

The element of diversity in the festival this year finds its initial expression with the inclusion of the Voices of Soul, the first gospel group to ever perform at the event. A local UI student organization 40 members strong, Voices of Soul's purpose is to maintain a musical heritage by performing both traditional and contemporary gospel numbers.

Duke Robillard, perhaps best known for his rock 'n' roll guitar playing, will shift gears and dish out his rare brand of 1930s and '40s-style swing guitar in true mid-summer band shell fashion. Remember to bring your lawn chairs, sparklers and lemonade.

In direct contrast, saxophonist Tim Berne and Bloodcount follow up, popping in to rev up their unusual blend of avant-garde jazz.

Previous years offered no rigid time schedules: For the most part, bands will take the stage when the previous group is finished. This year's roster, in order:

Returning to open the festival are the State Fair Jazz Band Singers, who were forced to bow out last year due to weather and scheduling problems. The group, National Public Radio has expressed interest in recording Berne's set at the festival for airplay on Branford Marsalis' "Jazz Set" program; it's a great chance to get a cutting-edge act some wider exposure.

Mahlatini and the Mahotella Queens is perhaps the most left-of-center and fortunate choice for this year's festival, heavily reinforcing the diversity element. The group plays a form of South African music called Mbaqanga, which received wide exposure in America via Paul Simon's use of the form on his album Graceland. It's best described as a blend of male and female vocals, guitars, saxophone, penny whistles and heavy rhythm. The Makgona Tsohle Band ("the band that knows everything") is responsible for the spicy background music.

The day ends with a mammoth bang, an explosion produced by the T.S. Monk Jr. sextet, led by the drumming son of legendary jazz pianist Thelonious Monk. Because of his father's standing in the jazz world, the younger Monk has always been surrounded by greatness, a good deal of which appears to have rubbed off on him. Max Roach gave Monk Jr. his first pair of sticks, and Art Blakely is said to have provided his first drum kit.

Monk's sextet fuses hard bebop jazz from the '50s with a modern attitude in the context of classic acoustic jazz. Backed by piano, bass, trumpet and two saxophone players who double on flute, Monk's set promises to put a divinely textured crown on a day of distinct musical styles.

So all we need to do is pray. Pray for clear skies, some bright sunshine and a citywide supply of canoes should last year's weather repeat itself. But in the face of this year's amazing talent lineup, even the forces of nature may be required to let the Jazz Festival go ahead and spend a momentum that's been building up for two years.

The 1994 Iowa City Jazz Festival, located at the corner of Washington and Dubuque streets, will begin at noon on Monday, July 4 and run through the Jaycee-sponsored fireworks at 9:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Harding lands role in independent film

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Tonya Harding is coming to the big screen with a starring role as a feisty waitress running from the mob.

"Tonya is really looking forward to being in the movie, and she's really happy that she'll be able to kill her manager," joked her manager, Merrill Eichenberger.

Harding's character in the independent production "Breakaway" accidentally receives a cache of money from the Mafia.

The film's writers, Sean Dash and Eric Gardner, are from Harding's hometown of Beaver Creek, Ore.

"I've looked at several movie offers and parts, but I liked the script on 'Breakaway' and the role they've offered me," Harding said in a recent statement.

THEATER

Summer Rep continues with witty, edgy 'Firecracker'

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

"The Miss Firecracker Contest," the second play of the UI's 1994 all-Beth Henley summer season, is one seriously hilarious, feisty slice of theater. Revolving around one of the great mysteries of our nation — the beauty pageant — the play twinkles with a lively, jiggery wit and startlingly profound human insight.

In typical Henley fashion, "Firecracker" s razor-edged dialogue breathes energetic life into the lost oddball people who populate its scenes. The Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright recognizes their endless yearnings as identical to our own.

"Firecracker" debuts tonight at 8 in Mabie Theatre at the UI Theatre Building. Still to come in the summerlong festival are "The Lucky Spot," "Abundance" and a reading of one of Henley's latest works, "Revelers."

The production is directed by guest artist Meredith Alexander, a seasoned theater professional whose résumé includes stints on the dramatic arts faculties of the University of Wisconsin, San Diego State University and the University of California at San Diego. Alexander has also directed professionally in Chicago, Cincinnati and Kansas City.

"Firecracker" is the most recent of several UI plays Alexander has directed during her stay in Iowa City.

"The challenge and delight as a director is in walking the line of Henley's humor, which is almost maudlin," Alexander said. "This is an actor's play; it has many, many layers to it."

Set in fictive Yazoo City, Miss., "Firecracker" follows a few weeks in the life of Carnelle Scott, a nerdy catfish factory worker. Carnelle (played in the Henley-scripted film adaptation by Holly "The Piano" Hunter, who also originated the role on-stage) has a decidedly peppered past; to compensate for her lack of self-worth, she slept with legions of young dudes in her younger years. For her scandalous debauchery, she's known locally as "Miss Hot Tamale."

Carnelle yearns to escape her dead-end small-town life — but not before showing everybody her hot stuff and winning the annual Fourth of July "Miss Firecracker"

Elain Rutledge (Anne Fogarty) visits her cousin Carnelle (Liz Davis, background) just in time for a small-town Fourth of July beauty contest. She enlists the stitchery skill of quirky seamstress Popeye Jackson (who learned her trade by designing clothes for bullfrogs) to make her glitzy dresses for the pageant.

Carnelle's ambition is a joke to everybody in Yazoo City except Mac Sam, a carnival worker with a lot of empathy and love for Carnelle. In an attempt to allay her doubts, he evokes "eternal" grace as one sure thing she can bet on.

As the pageant draws near, Carnelle is paid a visit by her pointedly opposite-natured cousins, Elain Rutledge and Delmont Williams, in whose mother's house Carnelle resides. Elain, a former "Miss Firecracker" champion and the epitome of the "Southern belle," has returned home to deliver the opening speech of the contest and escape a disenchantingly "perfect" marriage.

"Elain ran out of belief in the myth ... some impulse for life in her is deep in dissatisfaction," Alexander said. "She's the one person in the play who doesn't find hope and possibility."

Delmont, on the other hand, is a recently released convict looking to sell his mother's house and become a philosopher.

"He's involved in an equivalent struggle to find out who he is. His eruptions of violence occur because he's the flip side to this beauty aspect. But he's also the one who really cares for Carnelle," Alexander said.

pageant in "The Miss Firecracker Contest," the second play of the UI's 1994 summer season. "Firecracker" opens tonight.

Beauty is obviously one of the larger subjects Henley expounds upon in "Firecracker"; she deftly explores society's oddly skewed perception of what defines female beauty — and its effect on the self-esteem and dignity of women.

"Henley's play says, 'This is how we have value and worth, how we know who we are and who we can be,'" Alexander said. "It's about the notion that if we have beauty, then people will like us better."

Along with "Crimes of the Heart," "Firecracker" is one of Henley's earliest, best-known plays. Like "Crimes," it has a kind of wondrous faith in the ability of a person to rise above frustrating shortcomings and find soul freedom. Carnelle's desperate desire to win the pageant's top honors may seem exaggerated and ridiculous, but it's also viscerally affecting — and relevant to the struggles that life, as a universal rule, seems to be composed of.

"Crimes of the Heart" and "Firecracker" present the most hope, optimism and redemption," Alexander said. "They extend a kind of humor — almost farcical in nature — that pushes the edge of when you can be crying and laughing at the same time."

"The Miss Firecracker Contest" will continue its run in Mabie Theatre at the UI Theatre Building through July 21. For ticket information, call 335-2700.

BODIES FOUND IN IOWA, MISSOURI

4 charged in deaths of 2 elderly women

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The four people charged with kidnapping and killing two elderly Des Moines women have admitted their parts in the slayings, police said Wednesday.

"All four have told us what we believe to be their part in the incident. I suppose you could consider those confessions," police Lt. Clarence Jobe said at a news conference.

Garland Shaffer, 68; Steven Bradley, 32; and Angel Stewart, 21, all of Des Moines, appeared in court earlier and were ordered held on $750,000 bond each. All are charged with two counts of first-degree kidnapping and one count of first-degree murder. Officials said Angel Chamberline, 17, was being held by juvenile authorities on the same charges and officials will ask that she be tried as an adult.

The body of Clara Baker, 79, was found in Madison County near Patterson and the body of Phyllis King, 82, was found in Clark County, Mo., on Tuesday after officers questioned the four.

"We are sure from the evidence found in Missouri that Phyllis met her death in Missouri," Jobe said.

Jobe said Missouri is also expected to file charges against the four.

"They'll work with us," Jobe said of Missouri authorities. "They're going to use the information we have seized."

Jobe said authorities have not decided which state would prosecute first. Unlike Iowa, Missouri has a death penalty in murder cases.

An autopsy showed that Baker was strangled. Missouri authorities had not released autopsy reports on King late Wednesday.

Jobe said the only motive known for the slaying was that Shaffer was upset because King had been complaining about Shaffer and Stewart living together and "they came over to talk to her about that."

Baker was a neighbor and friend of King, police said.

"We believe that she saw Phyllis in an argumentative situation with these people," Jobe said. "She also knew these people and probably felt she was in no danger when she went across the street to help this friend out."

Murders prompt Branstad to review death penalty

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Wednesday sought to reignite a debate over restoring the death sentence after the bodies of two Des Moines women were found and four people charged in their deaths.

The governor issued a statement saying he intended to convene a group of police and prosecutors to "review the criminal laws and practices currently on the books here in Iowa."

"Reinstatement of the death penalty will be included in items reviewed," spokeswoman Christina Martin said.

Branstad favors reinstating the death sentence while Democratic rival Bonnie Campbell is opposed.

Clara Baker, 79, and Phyllis King, 82, disappeared Friday, and their bodies were found Tuesday, one in Madison County and one in Missouri.

Four Des Moines residents, including one juvenile, have been charged with murder and kidnapping.

Police have said King was killed in Missouri, and that raises the potential that the death sentence could apply in one of the killings but not the other.

Missouri has a death penalty; Iowa does not. Police have said Baker was killed in Iowa.

Martin said Branstad's group would number about 10 and include police, prosecutors and legislators.

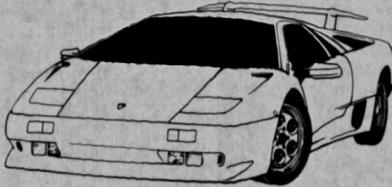

"Among other items, I believe the time has come to review sentencing procedures for violent criminals, trying juveniles who commit violent crimes as adults, as well as publication of the names of juveniles committing violent crimes," Branstad said.

Martin made it clear that a push for restoring the death sentence is a priority.

"I would not be surprised if that is one of the items that comes from this group," she said.

HUNDREDS DETAINED

Haitians redirected to Cuba

David Beard
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The United States diverted hundreds of Haitian boat people Wednesday to a new tent city at the U.S. Navy base in Cuba, and hundreds more poured out of their troubled nation.

In six long days, Coast Guard cutters and Navy warships have intercepted more than 3,300 Haitians fleeing economic collapse and political repression in their army-run country. Some of those intercepted said they would try again soon.

The exodus, including at least 521 Haitians intercepted aboard 28 vessels Wednesday, has swamped U.S. refugee processing centers. The Clinton administration was forced to open a tent city at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where three Coast Guard cutters docked Wednesday with hundreds of refugees, said Coast Guard spokesman Jeff Hall.

During a previous flood of refugees in early 1992, Guantanamo held nearly 12,000 Haitians at one point, prompting criticism by human rights activists of unsanitary, overcrowded conditions. That exodus led former President Bush in May 1992 to order the direct repatriation of all Haitian boat people without determining whether they were fleeing persecution.

President Clinton changed the policy, opening a refugee center aboard a ship off Jamaica on June 16 and promising hearings for all refugees to determine if they qualified for asylum.

The surge in refugees since then has dealt a strong challenge to the Clinton administration's policy. It

Associated Press

About 40 Haitians work to launch the 35-foot cargo boat Souvenir in the Port-au-Prince slum of Cite Soleil's wharf. The ship was built to transport cargo, although its owners are having to hide the sails to prevent the ship from being pirated by Haitians seeking escape. In six days, U.S. Coast Guard cutters and Navy warships have intercepted more than 3,300 Haitians fleeing by sea from economic collapse or political repression in their military-dominated homeland.

puts more pressure on Washington to take swift action, perhaps even military intervention, to restore Haiti's elected civilian government, which was ousted by the military in 1991.

Some of the 168 boat people repatriated Wednesday said they would take to the sea again soon.

"Maybe next week," said Fritz Pierre, 24, as he sat aboard a Haitian Red Cross minibus. Pierre is from the ship-building island of La Gonave, a launching point for many of the voyages.

A mushrooming of refugee voyages could swamp Guantanamo's capacity, and diplomats say enough boats exist in Haiti to carry up to 100,000 away from the country. Most are too small or rickety to make the 600-mile voyage to Florida but good enough to reach the 25

Coast Guard vessels and U.S. warships offshore.

Maritime workers said they were hiding sails and adding security guards to prevent their vessels from being pirated by Haitians bent on escape.

"They (pirates) did it before, and now with this they're going to do it again," said Maurice Lovan, 52, who supervises the 35-foot Souvenir, launched Wednesday afternoon after nearly three years of rebuilding.

About 40 workers, up to their hips in water, sang voodoo chants as they pushed the Souvenir out of dry dock at Port-au-Prince's Cite Soleil wharf.

Clinton urged Haitians to stay home. He asserted — as did White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers on Wednesday — that Haitians had just as good a chance achieving political asylum through a U.S. consular program inside Haiti as by heading to the sea.

But percentages show otherwise. About 30 percent of those reaching a U.S. refugee processing center off Jamaica have proven their cases merit political asylum. As of June 21, only 1,370 cases of Haitians attempting in-country processing were approved for asylum, little over 2 percent of the 58,000 who had filled out written petitions.

Only 14,000 of them even got interviews, said Alf Cooley, director of the U.S. asylum program in Haiti, who relayed the statistics. Hundreds of Haitians wait hours each day for the applications, but only 60 a day are distributed and that many people often are waiting in line by 4:30 a.m.

SUDDEN DECISION A SURPRISE

Arafat to tour Palestinian region

Nicolas B. Tatro
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat made a surprise decision Wednesday to make his historic return to Palestinian territory this weekend — his first visit since Palestinian autonomy began in May.

A senior Israeli official said Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's government had approved a three-day visit beginning Saturday.

"The prime minister decided tonight to allow this visit after considering all security considerations, and the visit will take place this Saturday," Environment Minister Yossi Sarid said Wednesday night.

The declaration, which came after weeks of speculation and repeated delays, exemplified Arafat's flair for the dramatic, catching top Palestine Liberation Organization figures and Israeli officials alike off guard.

It also electrified Jewish settlers and right-wing Israeli groups who vowed to stage mass protests against a man they called a "master terrorist" and "modern-day Hitler."

Given threats to Arafat's life and the challenge of a huge, emotional turnout by Palestinians, Rabin's initial reaction to the announcement was that a visit might not be possible on such short notice. But Sarid said Rabin gave the go-ahead after studying the matter.

"It will be a three-day visit. He will be in Gaza Saturday, Sunday and Monday," Sarid said.

Nabil Shaath, the PLO's top negotiator, said Arafat gave him the news late Tuesday. Shaath, who is in Cairo, Egypt, notified Israel's government on Wednesday that Arafat planned to visit the self-rule zones in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

"He told me, 'I'm coming. I'm going back home,'" said Shaath.

Senior aides and PLO officials at Arafat's headquarters in Tunis, Tunisia, said they were not aware of his plans to travel to Gaza, only to Cairo, and were very surprised by the announcement.

Firing of officer in King beating reaffirmed by L.A. police chief

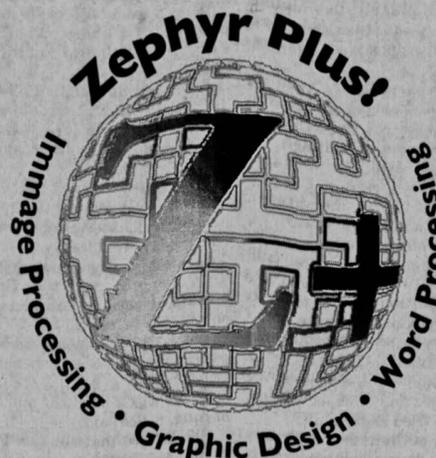

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The police chief upheld the firing of one of four officers charged with beating Rodney King, despite a recommendation that the officer, who was never convicted of any wrongdoing, be reinstated.

Chief Willie Williams on Tuesday refused to reverse his department's firing of Timothy Wind, who was dismissed in May 1991, two months after King's videotaped beating.

Wind was not entitled to appeal to the Board of Rights because he was a rookie, but had the right to try to prove at a police hearing that he was not guilty of misconduct when he kicked King, a black motorist, as police tried to arrest him following a high-speed chase.

Small victory scored in Rwanda

Karin Davies
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — A U.N. convoy Wednesday delivered food to 9,000 refugees living in squalor near Kigali's front line, where salvos of mortar shells and bursts of machine-gun fire reverberated throughout the day.

The battles raged in central and eastern parts of the capital, already devastated by nearly three months of bloodshed. Fighting between the government and rebels has blocked past attempts to bring aid to thousands of refugees.

The lightly armed U.N. force crossed the front line at midday into government-held territory in downtown Kigali. The U.N. trucks visited three camps, which had provided shelter to the refugees for weeks.

Hundreds there already have been killed either by Hutu militiamen, who have invaded the camp periodically looking for members of Rwanda's Tutsi minority, or in the cross fire between government and rebel forces.

Others have died of hunger and disease.

The trucks first brought food to 700 refugees at the abandoned Tanzanian Embassy, then made their way to 8,000 refugees at the St. Famille Roman Catholic Church complex and 300 at the Milles Collines Hotel.

It was the first food delivered in more than a week.

"There was shelling and fighting downtown ... but for us, it was a good day because we could distribute so much food to the needy," said Maj. Jean-Guy Plante, a U.N. military spokesman in Kigali.

It was a small humanitarian victory in the midst of a slaughter that has killed some 200,000 people, mainly Tutsi civilians and Hutu sympathizers. The killing mostly has been orchestrated by government-trained militias.

The bloodshed began April 6 when the president, a Hutu, died in a mysterious plane crash.

Since then, rebels of the Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front have seized about two-thirds of the country. The momentum apparently remains on their side, despite their fears that France's recent intervention would bolster the government.

The French have traditionally supported the Hutu government, and French military intervention in 1990 helped thwart the rebels' first offensive.

In western Rwanda, French forces continued their sweep through the countryside in search of refugees threatened by the Hutu militias.

The French say they have identified about 800,000 refugees. Their forces began Tuesday to evacuate the first groups by helicopter to safety in Zaire, among them 35 Roman Catholic nuns.

French Defense Minister Francois Leotard visited the French command posts in Goma and Bukavu, Zaire, then crossed the border by helicopter to inspect three refugee camps in central and southern Rwanda.

He said France's expeditionary force is far too small for the task it has and again appealed to European and African countries to help out. He said the operation was costing France nearly $14 million a month.

Documentary details prince's marital woes

Robert Barr
Associated Press

LONDON — Prince Charles says he tried to be a good husband, it didn't work, so butt out.

"Just look at the level of intrusion, persistent endless carping, pontificating, criticizing, examining, inventing," the prince said in a television documentary broadcast Wednesday night.

While complaining about media intrusion in private matters,

Charles did suggest that he had an affair after his marriage with Princess Diana broke down.

Asked specifically whether his relationship with Camilla Parker Bowles wrecked his marriage, Charles didn't flatly deny that they might be more than friends.

"All I can say is that, I mean, there is no truth in so much of this speculation and Mrs. Parker Bowles is a great friend of mine and I have a large number of friends," he said.

Britain's Prince Charles

A divorce from Diana, he said, "is very much in the future."

"At the moment it's not a consideration in my mind," he said. Charles and Diana, who married in 1981, separated in 1992.

Hill's double bails out Cubs

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Glenallen Hill's two-run bases-loaded double with two outs in the ninth led the Chicago Cubs past the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5.

Hill, who homered to give Chicago a 4-0 lead in the fifth, doubled off Mark Dewey and drove in Rey Sanchez and Shawn Dunston with the winning runs.

Orlando Merced's three-run homer had ignited a four-run seventh inning to tie the game and his sacrifice fly put the Pirates ahead 5-4 in the eighth.

The Cubs loaded the bases in the ninth off reliever Ravelo Manzanillo (2-2). Sanchez doubled and advanced to third on Jose Hernandez's sacrifice. After Dunston and Mark Grace walked, Dewey replaced Manzanillo and struck out Sammy Sosa swinging before allowing Hill's double into the left-center field gap.

Chuck Crim (3-1), who pitched the ninth for the Cubs, got the win.

Cubs starter Anthony Young retired 16 straight batters after a rocky first inning, but the Chicago bullpen prevented him from snapping a personal three-game losing streak by blowing a four-run lead.

Young left with stiffness in his right elbow after six innings, allowing two hits.

Phillies 5, Marlins 2
PHILADELPHIA — Danny Jackson allowed four hits over eight innings and Doug Jones gained his league-leading 20th save in leading the Philadelphia Phillies over the Florida Marlins.

Jackson (10-2) struck out seven, walked none and didn't allow a baserunner until Gary Sheffield singled with two outs in the fourth. Jones pitched a perfect ninth, extending his streak of scoreless innings to 21½.

Loser Pat Rapp (4-4) allowed six hits, struck out four and walked five in seven innings.

Astros 3, Reds 1
HOUSTON — Kevin Bass and

Jeff Bagwell both homered in the eighth as the Houston Astros defeated the Cincinnati Reds.

Bagwell broke an 0-for-7 slump by hitting his 25th home run with one out. Ken Caminiti singled to center, and Bass followed with his third home run of the year.

Reds reliever Chuck McElroy (1-2) took the loss. Jose Rijo had pitched a five-hit shutout through seven innings with seven strikeouts.

Padres 10, Rockies 4
DENVER — Pinch hitters Billy Bean and Craig Shipley each delivered run-scoring hits in the seventh inning, rallying San Diego to a victory over the Colorado Rockies.

Trailing 3-1, Bean tied it with a pinch-hit triple off Willie Blair (0-4), and Shipley followed one out later with a tie-breaking single.

Donnie Elliott (1-1) pitched one-plus innings of relief for his first major-league win.

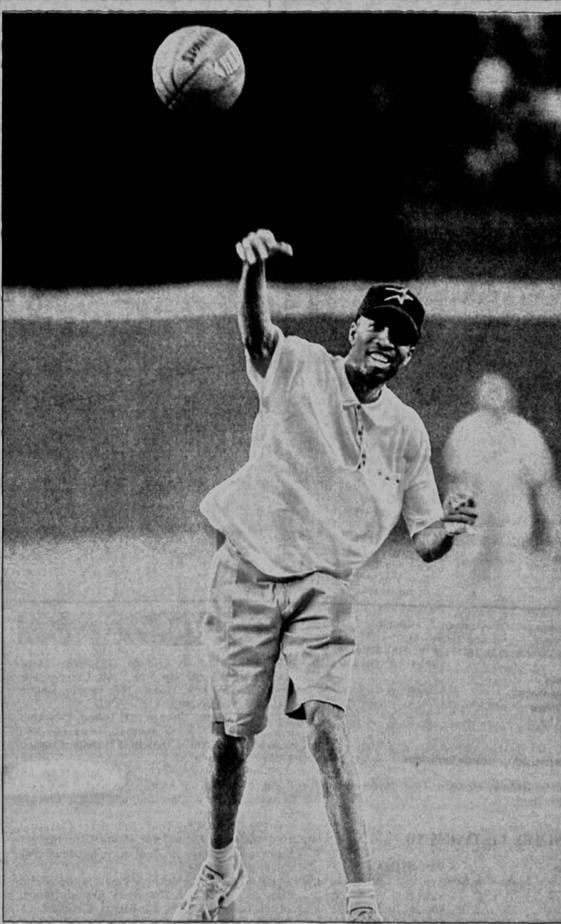

Braves 6, Expos 2
MONTREAL — John Smoltz allowed three hits over eight innings and homered and Bill Pecota knocked in three runs as the Atlanta Braves ended a four-game losing streak with a victory over the Montreal Expos.

Atlanta regained a 1½-game lead over Montreal in the National League East.

Smoltz (6-7), coming off an eight-game suspension for hitting New York's John Cangelosi on May 14, gave up only a leadoff single to Marquis Grissom, pitcher Butch Henry's one-out single in the fifth and Sean Berry's pinch-double in the eighth.

Smoltz, who struck out seven and allowed one unearned run, hit his third career homer, and first since 1992, leading off the third against Henry (4-1).

Athletics 1, Angels 0
OAKLAND, Calif. — Scott Brosius' ninth-inning home run, the first hit off Chuck Finley since the second inning, gave Oakland a victory over the California Angels and extended the Athletics' winning streak to seven.

Finley (5-8) allowed four hits, struck out five and walked three. He has given up only one run and seven hits in 17½ innings in two starts against the A's this season.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 0
MILWAUKEE — Pat Hentgen pitched a three-hitter and Randy Knorr homered as the Blue Jays snapped a 10-game losing streak.

Hentgen (9-5) allowed a double and single to No. 9 hitter Jose Valentin and a ninth-inning single to Jody Reed in posting his third career shutout and second this season.

Hentgen walked three and struck out three in halting the Blue Jays' longest losing skid since 1981, when they dropped 12 straight. It was Hentgen's fifth complete game.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 3, 10 innings
BOSTON — Danny Tartabull, who had struck out in his three previous at-bats, homered leading off the 10th inning as the Yankees won their eighth straight.

Tartabull hit the third pitch from reliever Jeff Russell (0-5) into the Red Sox bullpen in right field for his 14th homer, sending Boston to its 12th straight home loss.

Pinch-hitter Wes Chamberlain had driven in the tying run in the ninth with a groundout as the Red Sox sent the game into extra innings.

But Steve Howe (1-0) got out of a jam in the ninth when left fielder Luis Polonia ran down Scott Fletcher's drive to deep left with two outs and a runner on second.

Jim Leyritz had a two-run homer and three RBI for the Yankees.

White Sox 7, Royals 6
CHICAGO — Tim Lincecum drove in Ozzie Guillen with a single in the ninth inning for the White Sox.

Guillen walked on four pitches to open the ninth against Billy Brewer (3-1) and Norberto Martin sacrificed. Raines followed by lining a single to center, easily scoring Guillen.

Roberto Hernandez (2-3) pitched one perfect inning for the win.

Chicago tied it 6-6 in the fifth on Julio Franco's 12th home run off Mike Magnante into the right field bleachers.

Reliever Jose Mesa (7-4) took the loss. Terry Shumpert led off the Royals' fourth with a walk and stole second.

Orioles 7, Indians 6, 10 innings
CLEVELAND — Chris Sabo singled home the winning run in the 10th inning as the Orioles strung together three straight two-out hits for the win.

Winner Mark Eichhorn (5-1) pitched 4½ scoreless innings in relief of Mike Oquist. Lee Smith pitched the 10th for his major league-leading 27th save.

prediction that he'll make the majors, his drawing power has been big league. The Barons lead the 10-team league in attendance with more than 244,000 — only 24,000 less than all of last season.

"They have a chance to draw 500,000 this year," said Bragan, who has little doubt — if Jordan remains the entire season as he keeps insisting — that the league as a whole will eclipse its all-time record of 2.4 million set last season. "He's had the single biggest effect on attendance of any player to grace the Southern League."

Jordan's presence wasn't needed to guarantee a big crowd for the fourth annual Double-A All-Star Game, which comprises players from the Southern, Texas and Eastern leagues. Jordan would have been on the American League team since the Barons are affiliated with the Chicago White Sox.

"We sold out the game in two hours," said Binghamton general manager R.C. Reuteman, whose Eastern League team is hosting the game at 6,064-seat Binghamton Municipal Stadium. "That was far before there was any speculation he was coming."

Bragan brushed off the prospect of being criticized for his desire to place a weak-hitting outfielder on the all-star team. He recalled that Hank Aaron took part in the major league all-star game in 1976 despite a dismal final season to his brilliant career.

Of course, Aaron already had broken Babe Ruth's home run record and was recognized as one of the greats in his sport.

10 double faults to win his fourth five-setter of the tournament, 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 5-7, 7-5, against Wayne Ferreira. Martin, who beat Sampras in the final of the Queen's Cup tuneup tournament on grass three weeks ago, isn't worried about being worn down by his grueling path to the semis.

"I'm disappointed with myself for not putting the first four or five matches away," said Martin, the only man to win four five-setters in a single year at Wimbledon in the Open era. "I'm not going to be tired when it comes to Friday. I'm going to be ready to play. But I don't think it's an advantage to be on court an obscene amount of time."

"I'm going to be playing the defending champion here, who is number one in the world, and on Centre Court at Wimbledon. That's like my second favorite dream come true. Maybe a few days after that I'll have my first one come true."

Three-time champion Boris Becker, embroiled in controversy over whether he cheated in one match and displayed excessive gamesmanship in two others, also advanced to the semifinals, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 6-3, over Christian Bergstrom. Becker will play 1992 finalist Goran Ivanisevic, who beat Guy Forget, 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (7-3), 6-4.

Bergstrom leveled the latest charge against Becker, accusing him of waging "psychological warfare" in their match. At set point in the first set, Bergstrom smashed an overhead to the baseline that Becker flicked back while raising his left hand to indicate that Bergstrom's shot was long. Bergstrom, rattled, then sprayed an easy volley wide to lose the set.

"He stopped play," Bergstrom complained to the umpire. But the point and score stood.

"That disturbed me," Bergstrom said after the match. "He put up his hand and I missed the volley completely, because I stopped play too...."

"I wouldn't go as far as 'cheating,' but in every match there is a little psychological warfare. I mean, you do what you have to do and what is best for you to win a match."

WORLD CUP

Reports say Maradona tested positive for drugs

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Argentine superstar Diego Maradona reportedly is the player who tested positive for using the banned drug ephedrine during the World Cup.

FIFA said Wednesday that a player tested positive for drugs, but would not identify him, pending an examination of a second urine sample.

But Radio Continental of Buenos Aires said the player was Maradona. And Noticias Argentinas, a national news service in Argentina, reported the drug was ephedrine, a common nasal decongestant used to treat asthma, hay fever and allergies.

Radio Continental also quoted Julio Grondona, president of the Argentine Football Association as saying "the player is Diego Maradona."

"An AFA delegation headed by our lawyer is in Los Angeles awaiting the results of the second test," Grondona was quoted as saying.

Noticias Argentinas also reported that coach Alfio Basile included Maradona in his lineup for Thursday night's game against Bulgaria.

Guido Tognoni, spokesman for soccer's world governing body, said the result of the second test would be announced today. That test was made Wednesday in Los Angeles.

"There has been a positive test," Tognoni said. "The results are still pending. We will disclose the results at 3 p.m. tomorrow."

"We are not going to name the player at this stage. The test came from one of the recent games, but not from today's games."

Under FIFA's rules, any player tested positive must undergo a followup test, which is analyzed in the presence of his national soccer federation.

NBA

Charlotte's Johnson acknowledges fatherhood

BALTIMORE (AP) — Charlotte Hornets forward Larry Johnson, who last year signed the most lucrative contract in NBA history, has acknowledged he is the father of a Baltimore infant and agreed to pay child support.

In documents filed last week in Baltimore Circuit Court, Johnson admitted paternity of 8-month-old Gabrielle Johnson, the daughter of Angela L. Jeffress of Baltimore.

Johnson said he arranged to cover the child under his health insurance and would pay expenses for her birth as well as child support. He asked Jeffress to come up with specific figures.

GOLF

Sandberg switches from second base to golf caddy

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Mark Calcavecchia's caddy is the biggest celebrity in the Western Open this weekend.

The bag carrier is no less than Ryne Sandberg.

The All-Star second baseman, who stunned the baseball world by retiring from the Chicago Cubs two weeks ago, is doing a neighborly thing.

Sandberg, who lives near Calcavecchia in the Phoenix area, showed up on Wednesday for the pro-am carrying Calcavecchia's clubs.

The retired baseball player must know what he's doing: Calcavecchia shot a nifty 4-under-par 68.

Calcavecchia ranks 76th on the money list this year with $142,768 in prize money. His best showing was a ninth-place tie in the Buick Open last March.

His caddy, on the other hand, made $7 million a year.

SPORTS QUIZ

Q Who was the No. 1 pick in last year's NBA Draft?

See answer on Page 9.

Milwaukee makes Robinson top dog

Mike Nadel

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Glenn Robinson knows the pressure is on. To nobody's surprise, he was the No. 1 pick in the NBA Draft Wednesday night, and now he's expected to be both a superstar player and a Jordanesque personality.

"Everybody wants to be like Mike, but I'm not going to try to be like him," said Robinson, who takes his tremendous all-around game to the Milwaukee Bucks.

"I'm going to try to be myself. A lot of people say that the number one player is one of the best, and I want to be considered one of the best."

The 6-foot-8 forward from Purdue was unquestionably THE best player in the nation last season, when he led NCAA Division I with a 30.3-point scoring average.

The Big Dog, as he's known, downplayed the big contract he will receive — possibly the first nine-digit deal in sports history.

"I don't think the millions have anything to do with playing," said Robinson, who scored at least 20 points in 52 of his 62 college games. "People are going to expect me to do more than I can. I'm not going to let that worry me."

Just as the Bucks' selection of Robinson was expected, the next several picks also went according to form.

The Dallas Mavericks, drafting second, went with California point guard Jason Kidd and the Detroit Pistons took Duke's do-everything forward, Grant Hill.

The Minnesota Timberwolves then selected Connecticut forward Donyell Marshall, the Washington Bullets drafted Michigan forward Juwan Howard, the Philadelphia 76ers picked Clemson forward/center Sharone Wright and the Los Angeles Clippers chose Kidd's Cal teammate, forward Lamond Murray.

Hill was the only senior among the first seven players selected. Three other underclassmen also went in the first round; the total of nine tied the record set in 1982.

Much of the night's excitement was devoted to rumors of a big trade involving the best players on the Chicago Bulls and Seattle SuperSonics — Scottie Pippen and Shawn Kemp. The trade didn't materialize, however.

Florida State's Charlie Ward, the Heisman Trophy quarterback who was passed over in April's NFL draft, was chosen by the New York Knicks with the second-to-last pick of the first round.

But Kidd was unquestionably the best point guard available. Kidd, 6-4, led the nation in assists, holds California's record for steals and should start next to Jimmy Jackson in the Mavericks' backcourt.

"I want to be in the top five in the league in steals and assists and for the team to double its number of victories," Kidd said. "I think we can be a playoff team. That's a bold prediction, but I'm going to stick with it."

Dallas will need to more than double last year's 13 wins to make the playoffs. It has been the NBA's worst team two years running.

PRIME TIME

Murray takes leader's role

Doug Alden

The Daily Iowan

Kenyon Murray is making the most of his Prime Time League games this summer.

Since returning from a tour of South America with the Big Ten Conference All-Stars, Murray has helped Lepic Kroeger Realtors — Active Endeavors improve to 4-2, including Wednesday night's 114-102 win over second-place First National Bank.

The Iowa forward is averaging over 27 points per game in four appearances this summer. He had 29 points and 16 rebounds Wednesday night, but said his point totals are not the team's priority.

"We're going to make some noise in the conference... We don't want to get accustomed to losing."

Kenyon Murray, Iowa forward

"They get me the ball a lot so I can score a lot of points, but it doesn't really matter how many I score," Murray said. "Scoring isn't the main thing — winning is."

The junior from Battle Creek, Mich., said his main focus in the league this summer is to stay in shape, work on his outside game and help the Hawkeyes rebound from their last-place Big Ten finish last season.

Iowa coach Tom Davis led the All-Stars in South America and said Murray is showing improvement.

"He showed real good progress. He was just under 50 percent from outside 3-point range, which is a real improvement from his percentage last year and his defense and rebounding were better, too," Davis said. "I think that's what you look for — somebody that's improving in all areas, not just one facet of the game."

Murray said the South American tour was a great experience, and it gave him an opportunity to play with incoming Hawkeye point guard Andre Woolridge.

"I got a chance to play with Andre in a game situation," Murray said. "I think it gave us a chance to get to know each other as players. Andre really got to know me and how I play."

Murray expects Woolridge, a transfer from Nebraska, to make an impact in his first season as a Hawkeye.

"He's going to bring a lot of things to this team. He's going to take our team to another level," Murray said. "We're going to make some noise in the conference. We'll be one of the more experienced teams in the conference as far as returning players go. People are going to step up because we want to win. We don't want to get accustomed to losing."

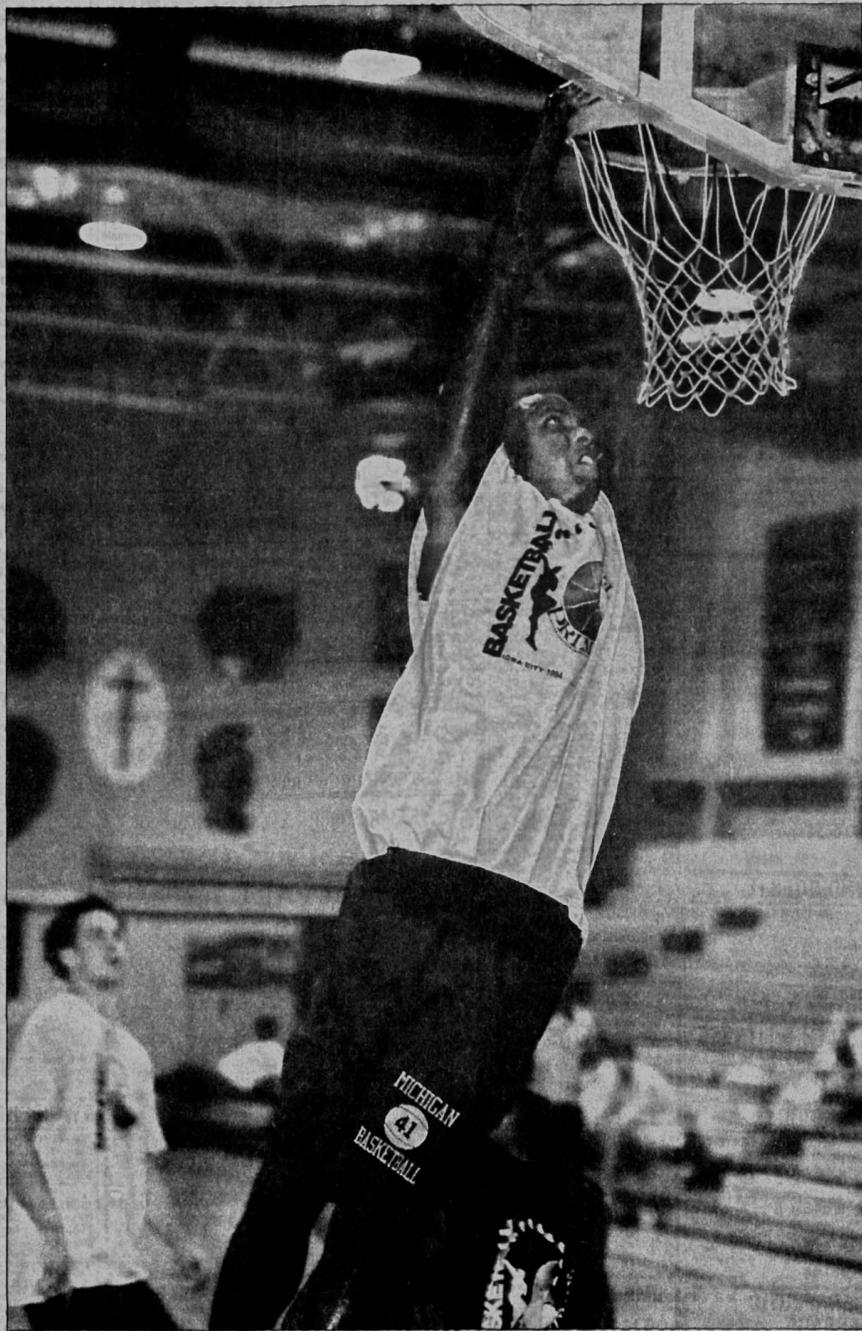

In other Prime Time action Wednesday night Fitzpatrick's overcame a 35-point night by Jim Bartels and remained undefeated with a 112-111 win over Gatens Realty-Mitchell Phipps Molini Builders. John Carter led Fitzpatrick's with 25 points and 12 rebounds, and Ryan Bowen contributed 16 points and 12 rebounds.

Hills Bank and Trust Co.'s three-game winning streak came to an end at the hands of Goodfellow Printing-Imprinted Sportswear. Goodfellow won 124-109, getting 31 points from former Hawkeye Val Barnes and 25 from Mon'ter Glasper. Both teams are tied at 3-3.

Nike played with only five players and could not get its first win of the season, falling to the University of Iowa Community Credit Union, 108-96.

Russ Millard had 32 points and 16 rebounds in the losing effort while former Hawkeye football player Dwight Sistrunk had 33 points for UICCU.

The Prime Time League is off for the holiday weekend and will resume play next Wednesday at 6 p.m. at City High.

Iowa's Kenyon Murray heats it up Wednesday night during Prime Time League action. Murray's 29 points guided Lepic Kroeger Realtors-Active Endeavors in a 114-102 win over First National Bank.

Jordan turns down All-Star Game offer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Michael Jordan hardly has all-star numbers: a batting average hovering around the .200 mark with nary a homer, not to mention eight errors in right field.

But there was another number that caught Jimmy Bragan's eye: a 30 percent jump in Southern League attendance, due mostly to the presence of the world's most famous minor-leaguer.

So Bragan, the league president, offered Jordan, a nine-time NBA all-star, a chance to play in the Double-A All-Star Game July 11 in Binghamton, N.Y.

"I told him, 'The game's already a sellout, so you won't be there to sell tickets,'" Bragan said Wednesday from the league office in Trussville. "I told him, 'With the influence you've had on Southern League attendance, you've earned it.' And he had."

But Jordan — perhaps embarrassed at the prospect of earning an all-star berth with a .202 average heading into Wednesday night's game at Memphis — turned down Bragan's invitation.

"He told me he wanted to talk it over with his wife," Bragan said. "I think she vetoed it. He said he wanted to spend time with his wife and children. That was good enough for me."

The Barons will be idle July 11-12 for the all-star break. With only 12 off days during the 140-game season, it's easy to understand why Jordan would want to enjoy the longest break of the season with his family rather than fly to New York for an exhibition game.

"I guess when you're making 30 or 40 million dollars a year, your time is more important than that," Bragan said.

While Jordan's performance on the field has shown little indication

Sampras punishes Chang in 3 sets

WIMBLEDON, England — After futilely chasing Pete Sampras' full repertoire of shots, after watching him bludgeon overheads ruthlessly and drop volleys effortlessly, after losing to him and praising him, Michael Chang considered whether his longtime friend has any flaws.

"He doesn't cook well, I can tell you that," Chang said.

Fortunately for Sampras, cooking doesn't count in tennis, and there are plenty of fine restaurants near Wimbledon.

What does count is the way Sampras is punishing balls on serves and in rallies, and the way he had Boris Becker, dives as he makes a backhand return to Christian Bergstrom during their quarterfinal at Wimbledon Wednesday.

Chang scrambling from corner to corner and baseline to net in a 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 victory Wednesday to reach the semifinals in defense of his title.

Sampras next faces fellow American Todd Martin, who overcame the semifinals in defense of his title.
