Lack of space closes SAFEWALK

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

SAFEWALK, a UI nighttime escort program, is scheduled to be suspended for the 1994 fall semester due to lack of office space.

During the escort service's absence, coordinators and sponsors hope to rechannel the administrative and volunteer efforts that formed the service to develop a more efficient, campuswide riding service named SAFERIDE. However, SAFERIDE won't be started until next spring at the earliest.

"SAFEWALK is in a state of limbo," Michael Villari, SAFEWALK committee member, said. "We are in the process of changing its nature into a riding service that will allow us to offer more services to a larger amount of people around the campus. We hope to have a van that will safely transport not only students from Hillcrest, but from Burge to Mayflower — including faculty and staff members."

Despite SAFEWALK's committee members efforts to offer a more efficient, campuswide service, Lisa Rumack, a UI senior who utilized the program, believes SAFEWALK's disbandment will be an unfortunate loss.

"It's a shame that SAFEWALK will be discontinued, because it provided a necessary service to the UI community," she said. "I used the service and it definitely gave me a sense of safety to know that the escorts were constantly in communication with operators who knew our whereabouts at all times.

"Until the campus is safe enough for people — both men and women — to walk around in the dark without having to wonder if someone is going to jump out of the next bush and attack you, SAFEWALK is a necessary service," Rumack said.

Growing pains

SAFEWALK operated from 7 p.m. to midnight Sunday through Wednesday and from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Thursday through Saturday.

Any resident living in a west-side residence hall could be escorted to any campus building, the UI Hospitals and Clinics, sorority and fraternity houses, or Iowa City business located in the downtown area.

In its year and a half existence, SAFEWALK volunteers had a combined total of nearly 200 service hours serving approximately 450 residents.

SAFEWALK originally received funding from the Associated Resident-See SAFEWALK, Page 6.

Clinton, Dubuque streets blocked by derailed train

Three 120-ton train cars en route to Chicago derailed in Iowa City Monday night, blocking Clinton and Dubuque streets overnight. There were no injuries.

The derailment occurred at around 8:45 p.m. just before the Gilbert Street train bridge near the Kennedy Plaza.

Joel McCarty, a conductor on the Iowa Interstate Railroad train that derailed, said the train's wheels got caught on a switch causing the it to ride up the outside track.

"The worse thing that could have happened is if it went off the track and rolled on the street," McCarty said.

He said the track could be cleared by today.

Child dies following two liver transplants

An 11-month-old boy who underwent two liver transplant surgeries last week died Sunday at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Jaelin Green of East Moline, Ill., died around noon after developing a severely irregular heartbeat.

Dr. Maureen Martin performed the first transplant on Jaelin on Wednesday, but Jaelin's body rejected the liver.

A new liver was found and Martin performed the second surgery Saturday morning.

Jaelin developed heart arrhythmia Sunday.

Biliary atresia, a rare disease that prevents the development of bile ducts, afflicted Jaelin's original liver.

Bobbitt faces new charge of domestic battery

LAS VEGAS (AP) — John Wayne Bobbitt faces new charges of domestic battery after he, his fiancée and another man were arrested following a fight.

Bobbitt, who became famous last year when his wife cut off his penis, and his fiancée, Kristina Elliott, were arrested along with a friend, Todd Biro, following a fracas early Saturday.

Elliott, 21, said she was beaten by the two men, and Bobbitt told police he was struck and bitten on the chest by Elliott. They met in February while he was on a personal appearance tour.

TUTSI REFUGEES FREED

Fight for capital ends in Rwanda

Patrick McDowell
Associated Press

GISENYI, Rwanda — Tutsi rebels seized most of the capital, Kigali, and another key city on Monday, but were headed for a showdown with French troops who stand in their path in southern Rwanda.

After a three-month fight for Kigali, the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front freed more than 8,000 Tutsis who had been living in terror of government-trained Hutu militias.

A spokesman for the small U.N. peacekeeping mission in Rwanda said the rebels had overrun the Defense Ministry, army headquarters and Radio

Slain soccer player buried in Colombia

MEDELLIN, Colombia — Colombian soccer star Andres Escobar, the victim of "absurd violence," was buried in a hillside cemetery and mourned by thousands of his outraged compatriots.

Escobar, who accidentally kicked the ball into his own net during a 2-1 loss to the United States during the World Cup, was shot early Saturday in the parking lot of a bar in Medellin in apparent retaliation for his misplay.

The national police said a man arrested early Sunday confessed to shooting Escobar.

The man, Humberto Munoz, was the driver for another man whom police also arrested: rancher Santiago Gallon Henao. Gallon allegedly bet heavily on the Colombian team. Police were searching for two other suspects.

Judicial police subdirector Jairo Antonio Rodriguez said Escobar was shot six times, not 12 as previously reported.

Rodriguez said a gun was recovered and was being tested by ballistics experts. The national police

SOME WANT MORE FLEXIBILITY

Thesis requirements irk graduate students

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

Martin Olesen, a UI graduate student in mathematics, has been planning to graduate with a doctorate degree in August, 1994 since he came to the UI three years ago. Now he's not so sure he will.

After submitting his doctorate thesis to the Graduate College, he got back three pages of change requirements. The requirements included moving page numbers one-fourth of an inch to the left on all pages, changing the line spacing, and removing all italics from his more than 100-page thesis. They are changes he's not certain he'll have time to make before his final thesis deadline on July 21.

"It almost takes more time correcting all the format mistakes than it did writing the thesis," Olesen said.

Olesen is just one of many UI graduate students who struggle with the format requirements set up by the Graduate College in their Thesis Manual.

The manual was last revised in 1984 before personal computers became widespread tools. According to the manual, the "computer is viewed as an alternative to the typewriter, and all rules concerning format and style pertain."

A revised, more flexible version that will take into account the opportunities offered by a personal computer isn't scheduled to go into effect until 1995. This lack of consideration of modern technology is a major concern for many of the students who submit their theses.

George Hospodarsky, a doctorate student in physics, said the suggested changes are often useful. But he is concerned that the manual hasn't been updated recently.

"No one I know of uses a typewriter anyway — most theses are definitely written on computers," Hospodarsky said.

On the second floor of Gilmore Hall, three thesis checkers supervised by Caren Cox, graduate examiner, spend their days comparing the submissions with the requirements of the thesis manual.

Equipped with a ruler and a pencil to make notes, they usually spend anywhere from 15 minutes

TEACH BUT DON'T TOUCH

Sexual harassment forces teachers to alter methods

Carole Feldman
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — High-school teacher Malcolm Bailey no longer touches a student's hand to guide pen on paper for a classroom art project. He's afraid his motive might be misunderstood and he could be accused of sexual harassment.

The National Education Association says its advice to teachers now in many instances is "teach but don't touch."

It hurts to say that, said NEA President Keith Geiger, because often "what a kid most needs is a hug from a teacher because they surely don't get it from anybody else."

Sexual harassment has become one of the most difficult issues ever to confront the profession, the union leader said.

Geiger said he was not condoning sexual harassment, but contended there are dozens of false accusations for every instance in which a child was sexually abused or harassed by a teacher.

An accusation — true or false — destroys or seriously damages a teacher's career, he said.

Bailey and other teachers here attending the NEA's annual convention say it has forced them to change the way they do their jobs.

"You're careful about touching a student in any way, even an instructional way," said Bailey, a graphics arts teacher in Billings,

Airport explodes with festivities for the Fourth

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Municipal Airport was quiet early Monday afternoon, July Fourth. Fliers advertising the upcoming fireworks show created the only noise in the hangar.

with the inscription "Donations." Her tiny figure almost disappears behind boxes filled with M&Ms and Snickers, and empty sno-cone and popcorn machines. Next to her, a box full of multicolored flashlights and safety goggles teeters precariously.

It's already been quite a day. Alvarez started preparing for the Fourth of July fireworks show in late March. Since then, she's spent around 10 hours a week writing letters, making phone calls and raising funds.

"Today's the day I'm saying, 'Thank God it's over with and I hope it's not gonna rain.' It's starting to look like a nice day, though," Alvarez said.

Even though the fireworks start in less than eight hours and Alvarez seems relaxed as she stands in the deserted hangar, there is still plenty to do.

Alvarez needs to set up signs, call the vendors and rental firms that are sponsoring the event, rope off the runway and monitor the concession stands. Most importantly, she has to make sure the fireworks actually get set up.

Although she is responsible for the event, the Jaycees have hired pyrotechnics expert Monte Whitlock to set up the show. He will launch the fireworks electronically for maximum safety.

At 5 p.m. the entertainment is scheduled to start, featuring a hot air balloon launch at 7 p.m., music, gyro rides and everything from hot dogs to Heyn's ice cream. The fireworks show is scheduled for 9:15 p.m.

She and her husband weren't involved in arranging the event last year, but Alvarez said that they will probably be doing it again next year.

"We've learned a lot. We're thinking about doing it again next year, because we think it will be so much easier to do it when we know what's going on right from the beginning," Alvarez said.

It is the second consecutive year that the Fourth of July fireworks are being shot off from the airport. "It used to be held in City Park. Last year, we moved it here because of the flooding. When we started planning in March, we went to City Park, but it was looking so desolate that we decided to lay it out here," Alvarez said.

Altogether, the event has a budget of $9,000. While most of this money has been donated by sponsors, the Jaycees hope to earn the rest of the amount through concessions. Proceeds from the event will go to future Jaycees community service programs. More than 30 members are involved in the event, which is one of their largest of the year.

Finally, two men and a woman, all wearing Jaycees T-shirts, arrive at the hangar and Alvarez gets off the phone.

She points out to the runway, where five men are in the process of setting up fireworks. They have taken off their shirts in the heat.

"We need three persons out there," Alvarez yells. "One to shoot off the fireworks, one to pick up the pieces of the one who shot off the fireworks and one to push the wheelbarrow with the pieces."

Liam Neeson, Natasha Richardson wed in hush-hush ceremony

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Liam Neeson and actress Natasha Richardson, who met and fell in love while performing on Broadway, were married off-stage in a private ceremony at their upstate country home.

About 70 guests attended the hush-hush event Sunday, including Steven Spielberg and his wife, Kate Capshaw; Mia Farrow; Emma Thompson; and director Ron Shelton, the Daily News reported.

The 31-year-old bride wore a Donna Karan dress and was given away by her mother, Vanessa Redgrave, and Redgrave's former companion, actor Franco Nero, the News said. Richardson's father, Oscar-winning director Tony Richardson, died in 1991.

Neeson and Richardson met while performing in a revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie." Neeson, 42, who played the lead in the Oscar-winning picture "Schindler's List," just finished filming "Nell" with Jodie Foster.

Heterosexual, monogamous and happily married ...

NEW YORK (AP) — Supermodel Cindy Crawford says that running an ad in The Times of London about her marriage was husband Richard Gere's idea.

The ad, published in May, declared the couple to be heterosexual, monogamous and happily

"I think the main thing that Richard was really upset about was not that they were saying this stuff about us, but that they were saying we were lying about it, that

Crawford, 28, said she went along with the ad because Gere, 44, had "different things at stake" than she did.

But, she added, her attitude toward the gossip was different: Ignore it and "it would go away."

Naropa names library for Ginsberg

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The Boulder Naropa Institute has named its new library for poet Allen Ginsberg.

Ginsberg attended a Buddhist building blessing ceremony Sunday in his honor. Chanting monks blessed the library, and some of Ginsberg's colleagues followed by reading him cosmic odes.

City officials declared Sunday — the first day of a weeklong celebration commemorating Naropa's 20th anniversary — as "Allen Ginsberg Day." Naropa is a liberal arts college for Eastern and Western studies.

Lau to assist with Iowa Women's Archives

The Iowa Women's Archives at the UI has announced the appointment of a new assistant archivist to help process a growing collection of personal papers from Iowa women.

Tammy Lau, a native of Hawaii and a former curator and reference department staffer at Iowa State University, will be the first assistant archivist at the archives. Her duties will include training and overseeing student workers who process archives materials, creating descriptions of archives collections for the UI libraries' on-line catalog and assisting with donor relations.

Lau received her undergraduate degree in history from Yale University and completed her graduate work in library science at the University of Michigan's Bentley Historical Library.

Lau's position will be funded by private donations to the Iowa Women's Archives.

The archives, located in the Main Library on the UI campus, were established in 1992 to identify, collect, preserve and make available to the public a wide range of research material on the history of Iowa women.

Gradillas, Arbolino to visit UI campus

Henry Gradillas, principal of Birmingham High School, Los Angeles Unified School District, whose life and students at Garfield High School in Los Angeles were chronicled in the renowned movie "Stand and Deliver," will visit the UI's Connie Belin National Center for Gifted Education July 6-7.

The Belin Center also is hosting Phil Arbolino, New York's associate director of advanced placement, over those two days. Both will address gifted students from Chicago's inner city as well as teachers and community members.

In the 1980s, Gradillas served as principal of Garfield High School and worked with advanced placement advocate Jaime Escalante to improve math instruction and introduce advanced placement courses. "Stand and Deliver" was based upon the conflict which arose when the Educational Testing Service challenged the high scores of Garfield's advanced placement calculus students.

On July 6, Gradillas and Arbolino will address Chicago students participating in Project ACHIEVE, a program designed to prepare gifted and talented minority students for careers in the fields of science and engineering.

RHYTHM-BASED

Musical treatment explored

Amanda Morton
The Daily Iowan

A constant chant of names flows from the circle of people. As they clap in time to their instructors' commands, they hope to learn not how to make music, but how to use it to heal.

Although the scene may seem unusual, the 30 therapists gathered are part of a growing movement of healers who believe rhythm-based music therapy can help develop physical, psychological, cognitive and social skills in their patients.

Last week, they came from Iowa and Minnesota to listen to Barry Bernstein, a music therapist and clinical project director of Rhythm for Life, from Topeka, Kan. The event was funded by a grant through the Administration on Aging program, which strives to promote socialization and well-being among senior citizens, and was sponsored by West Music Co.

Bernstein came to the area to train therapist Kirsten Nelson for her study with the elderly. Although Bernstein's training with Nelson is designed for senior citizens, the workshop focused on rhythm-based therapy for a variety of people.

"What begins to happen when you do these activities in a group is that people's boundaries are expanded," Bernstein said. "It helps them develop skills that

Frank Miller/The Daily Iowan

A lifelong interest in music and a desire to help people led Barry Bernstein to study music therapy. Now he is a music therapist for the Veterans Administration Hospital in Topeka, Kan., and the mental and other illnesses debilitate."

He explained that rhythm techniques, such as chanting one another's names rhythmically before adding percussion and claps, are used to encourage personal integration and are facilitators of communication.

Bernstein showed videos and talked about his therapeutic success with Alzheimer's patients, alcoholics, "at risk" youth and drug addicts. He said he tells some patients to "use hitting to release any anger they have and when they come out of the room, they are zestful."

Bernstein's favorite aspect of rhythm-based music therapy is that anyone can participate. "It's accessible to people with little to no musical ability," he said.

He also spoke about dealing with patients who resist therapy and using visual aids.

clinical program director for Rhythm for Life, an organization devoted to applying musical rhythm to health and social needs. Bernstein was in Iowa City to train therapist Kirsten Nelson.

Tina Davis, music therapist at Children's Rehabilitation Center in Johnston, Iowa, said she attended the workshop because she uses rhythm-based ideas with her work and she wanted to learn how to better her use of rhythm.

"The workshop has helped me realize that rhythm is the focus of music and life," she said. "Rhythm is a part of our heart beating and how we breathe."

'OUTSTANDING SUCCESS' FROM UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCHERS

Minority research program works to make graduate school attainable

Liza Roche
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to heighten interest in graduate school among minority college students, 30 undergraduates from around the country have come to the UI this summer to get a taste of their possible futures.

The Student Research Opportunity Program links minority sophomore and junior undergraduates interested in graduate and professional school with professors for intensive, supervised research.

In its sixth year, the program is funded by the Commission of Institutional Cooperation, General Electric and Opportunity at Iowa.

"The main aim of the program is to increase the number of minorities in the pool of senior faculty members," said James Jacobsen, associate dean of the UI Graduate College.

This summer marks UI junior David Linn's second year in the program. Linn, who spends about 40 hours a week studying a mutant gene he believes causes a certain type of heart disease, said the program has been beneficial to him.

"It's going to expand my knowledge and show me how to deal with people in a lab environment," he said.

Diana Bryant, outreach counselor in the Graduate College, said funding like this is crucial to propel minorities on to the graduate level.

"I feel minority representation at universities could be a lot better," she said. "I haven't seen much of it here."

Students in the program are given a $2,500 stipend for summer research and are expected to present a paper at the end of the summer. The amount of funding for the program changes from year to year.

UI Assistant Professor of physiology Andrew Russo supervises two undergraduates. He said he talks with his researchers about 45 minutes a day and offers direction in their study.

"Sometimes I give them answers, and I often give them more questions," he said. "I like to tell them they work with me, not for me."

Russo said several of the undergraduate researchers under his direction have gone on to graduate or professional school.

"I've had outstanding success with undergraduates here," he said. "The first three or four papers from my lab were published by these students."

UI graduate to study Gypsies' oral history

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

When Michelle Kelso, a UI honors graduate in French, studied abroad in Orleans, France in her junior year, she went to Italy to make the usual tourist pilgrimage to the Colosseum in Rome.

In front of the historic monument, a group of filthy kids dressed in rags flashed pieces of white paper in the faces of the tourists. In the confusion, they stole jewelry and money. She found out later the kids were Gypsies, or Romanis, as they prefer to be called.

Kelso lost two brass bracelets. Although the jewelry wasn't important to her, she kept thinking about the episode.

"I thought, 'Who are these kids, why are they so poor and why aren't they in school?'" Kelso said.

When she tried to find an explanation for their poverty, she met great resistance. She found that people weren't interested in the Gypsies, so information was scarce.

Now she has received a $14,200 Fulbright Scholarship which will allow her to spend a year with in a Romani village to record the oral history of the women and compile an anthology. The research will be the first of its kind.

Kelso will record folk tales and hear the Romanis talk about who they are and where they come from.

"I want to know anything they're willing to share. I decided to interview women because they carry the oral history and preserve the tradition," Kelso said. "Since there is no written Romani language and most Romanis are illiterate, and they don't have a history in the same sense as we do."

Kelso said experiences like the one she had in front of the Colosseum contribute to conveying wrong perceptions of Gypsies.

"People usually think of Romani as fortunetellers or thieves. But there is a whole range of different people and you can't just stereotype them. They are too diverse," Kelso said.

She traveled to Transylvania, Romania, last summer to volunteer in an orphanage where 80 percent of the orphans are Romani.

"When the children were brought outside, they were just sitting in the grass in front of the playground. They didn't know how to play. Some of them started to cry," Kelso said.

While working at the orphanage she also had the chance to meet local Romani women who will serve as sources in her exploration of Romani oral history. She was invited to visit a Romani family, where she stayed in their yard because they were so poor that they were ashamed to show their house.

"The situation of the Romani is so grave, but I think the process of the family may be a key to solving the problem. I think women have so much power and can do so much; women make sure that the social structure stays intact," Kelso said.

"I can't come there as a foreigner with my own political agenda and follow through — it's just not possible. But I hope to find out what they're doing to rectify the situation."

So far, the interest for the history of the Romani has been very limited. Recent scholarship, some of it done by Paul Polansky, another UI scholar, has recovered information about the situation of the Romanis in Hitler's concentration camps.

"There is so little information about this problem. And there is so much poverty. Only if the women are educated, the children can become educated and the Romanis can escape poverty," Kelso said.

UI's Summer Rep has 2nd winner with sparkling, brash 'Firecracker'

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

Women have stolen Iowa Summer Rep '94 yet again, this time in "The Miss Firecracker Contest," the second Beth Henley work being performed during the two-month festival. At the play's opening night Thursday in E.C. Mabie Theatre, the packed audience roared with hysterical laughter at every turn, applauding endlessly and genuinely at curtain call. Believe it — every clap was well-deserved.

The audience's appreciation was due in no small part to the efforts of "Firecracker" s four female cast members — Liz Davis, Anne Fogarty, Wendi Weber and Mattie Kennedy — each of whom delivered a heartfelt, maniacally energetic performance.

Lots of credit should also go to guest director Meredith Alexander, who understands and masterfully balances Henley's hugely amusing southern comedy between zany slapstick and from-the-gut human drama.

Most, if not all, of Henley's plays revolve around complex female characters attempting to overcome seemingly impossible odds and attain true happiness. Actresses no doubt will play Henley's roles, simply because of the vast opportunities they offer for emotional and spiritual characterization.

Indeed, with the right actresses in the right Henley roles, the audience is putty in the hands of the cast, ready to be taken anywhere and believe anything. That's what happens here.

Davis, the talented recent UI graduate who also stars in "Crimes of the Heart," is dynamic as Carnelle Scott, the geeky main character who longs to escape her spicy reputation and the small Mississippi town she's trapped in. Her performance is brilliant and amusing, filled with sudden emotional crescendos and a jumpy quirkiness.

Davis also deftly portrays Carnelle's desperate longing to leave town "in a blaze of glory" by winning the "Miss Firecracker" beauty contest crown — which Carnelle hopes will win her the respect of the town and bolster her own long-

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Liz Davis stars as Carnelle Scott, a small-town woman hoping to win a local beauty pageant and leave her home and reputation behind in "The Miss Firecracker Contest," the second of four full productions in the Iowa Summer Rep's Beth Henley festival.

waning self-esteem.

Carnelle is assisted in her uphill struggle for glory by Popeye Jackson, a childlike seamstress who practices her art by designing clothes for bullfrogs. Jackson is played with delightful wackiness by Weber, who fills her performance with yelps, squeals and cat purrs.

Weber's Jackson is an outlandish nerd with a heart that thumps like a locomotive when she gets around the object of her obsession, Carnelle's cousin Delmount (Benjamin Schmidt). Weber's a scene-stealer, and a lot of fun to watch.

Fogarty, on the other hand, brings a quiet, ladylike charm to her performance as Elaine Rutledge, Carnelle's other cousin and former "Miss Firecracker" champion. Elaine is a disenchanted woman; she's considering abandoning her "perfect" marriage, and her classical "Southern belle" beauty and elegance isn't enough to combat her weariness with life.

Fogarty is as interesting to watch as Davis and Weber; she seems to have considered every angle of Elaine, from her airy Southern accent to the flip of her wrist as she lounges on a sofa seat.

Kennedy brings a lot of life to "Firecracker" as well, playing Tessy Mahoney, the snotty director of the beauty pageant. Though her role is a secondary one, Kennedy contributes a great sense of comedic timing to the play, spraying on quarts of hair spray, blowing her whistle in Carnelle's face and pinning after Delmount. The audience immediately connected with her character and refused to let go.

Dale F. Jordan's set and lighting design are definitely highlights of this production, which is decidedly more open than the confined area where "Crimes" takes place. The first act of the play takes place in the dark living room of Carnelle and Delmount's house, while the second takes place at the sunny Brookhaven County fairgrounds, the site of the contest.

Both sets seem meticulously constructed, and Jordan's lighting scheme hits a high point when he manages to reproduce the look and feel of fireworks going off above stage. It's a great effect, and it succeeds in Mabie, where the colored flashes rebound overhead like a strobe light in a disco.

If "Firecracker" is any indication of what to expect in the final month of Iowa Summer Rep '94, we've got some excellent, hilarious theater still on the way. Bravo.

"The Miss Firecracker Contest" will run through July 21. For ticket information, call 335-2700.

BOOK REVIEW

Dave Barry's latest touches on the serious with surprising success

Though he's best-known for the things he does make up, Dave Barry's latest best-seller concentrates on feature writing rather than his usual brand of goofiness.

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

The most remarkable passages in Dave Barry's new book have nothing to do with giant toilet snakes, exploding strawberry Pop Tarts or any of the other believe-it-or-not inanities he reports on. The real surprise comes when the perpetual funnyman actually makes an effort to wax serious — and succeeds.

This isn't to say that "Dave Barry Is Not Making This Up" isn't a funny book. On the contrary, humorist and 1992 presidential candidate Barry is at the top of his form in this collection. Over the course of the book's three-dozen essays, he uses his fine-tuned irreverence to skewer everyone from Billy Ray Cyrus (whose ballad "Achy Breaky Heart" makes a strong showing in Barry's "worst song of all time" survey) to Rush Limbaugh. Barry has a gift for staying just lowbrow enough to entertain his readers without offending them; this ability makes his columns perfect relaxing summer reading.

As if this wasn't enough, though, "Dave Barry Is Not Making This Up" also contains pieces which prove that Barry is an insightful features writer as well as a top-notch humorist. It turns out that his skill at creating accessible humor is part of a general talent for drawing readers into his stories. This talent is particularly apparent in "A Space Odyssey," a fun article that feels kind of like an "X-Files" episode.

"A Space Odyssey" is a carefully crafted, occasionally eerie piece about Barry's investigation of a spate of UFO sightings in Gulf Breeze, Fla. Barry shows remarkable restraint in reporting on a story that would have been very, very easy to spoof; the opening of the article is tongue-in-cheek, but the rest of it is almost totally free of the pointed heckling that he dishes out in his humor columns. Even his conclusion that the principal eyewitness is "a little crazy" is put forward gently, and only after substantial evidence of the man's mental instability has piled up. Barry doesn't attempt to give readers a concrete verdict on what's going on in Gulf Breeze, but he does leave them with a much better understanding of the story's human dimension.

While the Gulf Breeze story is probably the best of the feature articles, there are several others, all of them well-written. They include a nonjudgmental look at die-hard Elvis fans and a touching piece about his son's involvement in a serious car accident.

"Dave Barry Is Not Making This Up" is a pleasantly varied collection that includes dollops of depth and poignancy but never strays too far from the traditional biting Barry wit. It's a fun read, but it's also an interesting look at the breadth of talent behind Barry's success.

MOVIE REVIEW

Bijou's 'Brewster' shows Altman's roots

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Tinkering with the structure of Robert Altman's 1970 film "Brewster McCLOUD" is like playing with a set of Chinese boxes. Anyone who's seen Altman's recent effort "Short Cuts" knows he has a flair for challenging the accepted norms of narrative flow; "Brewster McCLOUD" does more than challenge an audience on those norms. It seals the levels of its own ideas inside ever-shrinking envelopes and then spits in the viewer's face.

Making sense out of the disjointed elements of "Brewster" s narrative chain proves nerve-wracking within the first 10 minutes of screen time. Run-of-the-mill Hollywood films normally use that interval to give the viewer just about all they need to know to interpret the film's idea base. Not so here.

"Brewster" jumps all over itself from the start, introducing us to the Lecturer (Rene Auberjonois, of TV's "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine"), who proceeds to drone on and on in apparently lunatic fashion about the evolutionary genius behind birds. That's intercut with scenes of Brewster ("Harold & Maude" s Bud Cort) chauffeuring around a crusty old neurotic moneygrubber (Stacy Keach in a whacked cameo) to apparently random destinations.

Those who panic at this point might as well eat their seat cushions, because it only gets weirder. Brewster's life ambition is to build a set of bird wings for himself and "fly away." He lives in the fallout shelter in the basement of the Houston Astrodome, which will be the venue for the wings' test flight. Given the curious nature of his work, he also has a sort of guardian angel (Sally Kellerman) who keeps track of nosy bystanders.

Altman's penchant for burdening his films with enormous casts of bizarre characters and then juggling their lives with superhuman dexterity achieves some degree of success in "Brewster." Not only do we have the cherubic, obsessive Brewster to contend with, there's also Frank Shaft (Michael Murphy), the hot-shot San Francisco cop called in to investigate a series of stranglings; there's Shelley Duvall as an Astrodome tour guide who got a free car out of a man who attempted to rape her; and, of course, the aforementioned Lecturer, whose appearance grows suspiciously more birdlike every time he intrudes on the narrative.

"Brewster" is no "Nashville" in its handling of a large set of narrative threads, nor does its loose plot warrant comparisons to something as fast-paced and controlled as Altman's "The Player." But what does shine through here is Altman's ever-firm commitment to the vehemently surreal as it relates to the individual. His characters often seem wrapped up in envelopes which never extend more than three feet beyond themselves. Thus, members of "Brewster McCLOUD" s legion of eccentrics always appear to be orbiting each other, a series of near-misses in the realm of personal perception and ideation.

Altman made his "breakthrough" film "M*A*S*H" the same year that he released "Brewster McCLOUD," so the latter is usually overshadowed by the former in the history books. But anyone wanting to study the apprentice work of a major talent in American cinema should give "McCLOUD" a fair shake; had he not made this film, it's difficult to see how Altman could have arrived at the decidedly remote plateau of individualism on which he now stands.

"Brewster McCLOUD" plays at the Bijou tonight at 6:45 and Wednesday at 9 p.m.

ART EXHIBIT

T. Scott Krenz/ The Daily Iowan

Jeff McDonald's found-object works "Holiday," "Relic II," "Lacinia" and "Aurelian" are part of mixed-media pieces, will run through this week-end. "Artifacts of Five," the current exhibit at the Summit Street Gallery.

Energy propels drab 'Artifacts' show

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

"The soul is dead, the primary casualty of the MTV age ... The painting is the carcass of the soul. We are collecting carcasses; we are collecting artifacts of meaning." — manifesto for "Artifacts of Five"

Morbid "death of the soul" themes aside, the Summit Street Gallery's "Artifacts of Five" is no artistic graveyard. In fact, "Artifacts" contains an energy and conviction that bring both the pieces and the artists themselves to life.

Admittedly, "Artifacts" is a fairly drab exhibit on the surface. Most of the pieces are composed largely of browns or blacks (Joe Prescher actually uses tar instead of oil or watercolor), and those that do incorporate other primary colors tend to be cast in bleached, subdued tones.

The liveliness of the works comes from the artists' use of materials and methods that call attention to themselves and to the act of creation. The thick gobs of tar on Prescher's canvases and the found objects that make up Jeff McDonald's sculpture / paintings are unorthodox enough to make viewers focus on the artists' intentions as well as their finished products. It's worth noting, however, that this added immediacy doesn't always translate into accessibility. Jeff Kinzel's and Gene Flores' works are straightforward, but the other three artists delve heavily into conceptual art. McDonald's geometric sculptures and Stacie Chappell's mixed-media works even have abstract titles ("Aure-lian," "Blue Mandala," etc.) which use terminology that will probably be meaningless to those not majoring in art. The technical strength of these pieces makes them worth studying, but their cryptic nature can be frustrating.

Each of the five artists has contributed a set of drawings as well as a group of featured, wall-mounted paintings. The drawings are priced to sell (they go as low as $15, in contrast to the $750 high set by the paintings), but that's probably because they don't reflect as much time and effort as the paintings; many of them appear to be simple sketchbook entries. They're worth glancing at, but anyone who's looking to buy should probably save their money for one of the featured pieces.

The final component of "Artifacts" is a computer-looped musical composition which is piped into the Gallery as background music. The compressed, distorted computer reps aren't particularly commanding by themselves — their extreme atonality make them sound self-consciously "arty" — but they also don't represent the complete piece. Composer David Roknich's score calls for a live flute accompaniment, to be provided by celebrated flutist Laura Koenig at the Saturday night closing reception.

"Artifacts of Five" will be on display at the Summit Street Gallery, 812 S. Summit St., through July 9. The gallery is open 4-6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday; 12-6 p.m. Thursday; 7-9 p.m. Saturday; and by appointment. Call 358-9627 for information.

LIVE MUSIC

I.C. native returns with new band, new sound

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

The slight twang resonating from Gabe's Wednesday night will be pleasant enough to draw more than a few listeners, but the familiar blond hair and blue eyes of former Iowa Citian Tom Kennedy will be an added incentive to Iowa City music fans.

Kennedy is back in town this week, ready to show off his three-year-old band Bananafish. He will be singing the tunes written by fellow music maker and California native Jay Pinto.

The acoustic duo from Seattle produce a unique and alluring sound; listeners may notice varying folk influences, yet Bananafish is able to create its own distinctive music. Bordering on folk and pop, Bananafish remains an alternative band, having recently signed a record publishing and promotional deal with Paget Records.

Kennedy describes the band's music as "high-energy." However, the songs retain a beat that cannot be called dance music.

Bananafish will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., Wednesday night at 9, and at The Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., at 9 on Thursday night.

Though their still-unnamed third album won't be released until September, Kennedy said anyone attending the shows will hear about 10 songs off the 12-song album.

Audiences can expect to hear songs from Bananafish's first two albums as well. Kennedy said a few covers will be played, but he refused to be more specific.

Bananafish has played with Heart and Queensryche in Seattle, and may be opening for Indigo Girls later this summer.

Although Kennedy describes Bananafish as a cross between Indigo Girls and Simon and Garfunkel, he said the music isn't folk. "It is mostly about people and the ups and downs of everyday life," he said. "They're not folk songs, but they are songs about folks."

A sense of longing in many Bananafish lyrics is sometimes hidden by the upbeat tempo of the music.

"One Step Closer To Nowhere," from their first album, There Must Be A Place, reveals that desire. "Hide in the places our souls feel the safest / But you can tell by the looks on our faces / We're one step closer to nowhere."

For now, though, Kennedy is content to be returning to Iowa City. He is looking forward to his stint here and to playing for friends.

"I haven't been there in two years. I am looking forward to seeing familiar faces more than anything else. It is nice to feel at home somewhere else," he said.

POLITICAL KILLINGS INCREASE

Slayings spur Haitian exodus on

David Beard
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The four gunmen stopped Michel Cadet's vegetable truck before dawn Monday, pumped him full of bullets, then took his wallet, watch and car radio.

Evert Cadet, who was in the passenger seat when his 26-year-old cousin was killed, laughed bitterly when asked if he would call the police.

"The zenglendo (army-tolerated hoodlums) did it," said Cadet, who had quickly surrendered his wallet and watch to the four men with automatic weapons.

He smoked the stub of a cigarette as he looked over the body of his cousin, one of three young men found slain on the streets of Port-au-Prince Monday.

President Clinton says military-backed repression is the main reason thousands of Haitians have fled their homeland since the United States liberalized its refugee policy on June 16.

More than 8,300 Haitians have been intercepted by the U.S. Coast Guard in the past 11 days, including 960 by mid-afternoon Monday. "It has been an intense pace," Coast Guard spokeswoman Toni Long-Gay told the Associated Press.

Critics say the exodus was set off by Clinton's new policy, which permits Haitian boat people to make a case for political asylum, and by intensified economic sanctions, pressures military coup leaders to give up power.

"Whole communities are terrorized," said Anne Fuller, of the National Coalition for Haitian Refugees, which is based in New York. "Under these circumstances, people are desperate to leave."

She places blame directly on the military and its allies. "There's only one sector that has automatic weapons," she told the AP in an interview Monday.

A U.N. human rights mission says 30 political killings occurred in June and the number of abductions rose. Eighty percent of those abducted never reappear, U.N. spokesman Eric Falt said.

Up to 3,000 political killings have occurred since Aristide was deposed in September 1991.

Bus tour to promote health care

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Heard a lot about health-care reform lately? Brace yourself, America.

The battle lines are sure to sharpen — and the decibel levels to rise — as all sides launch a final, all-out offensive to wring their particular kind of health reform out of Congress this year.

The White House and its allies are poised to unleash bus loads of "reform riders," celebrity salesmen, waves of advertising and the powerful one-two punch of Bill Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The opposition will respond with equal vigor and resources, after orchestrating a highly successful early attack on the original Clinton plan.

The battle for popular opinion is "going to make NAFTA look like a joke," predicted one White House official, recalling the hard-fought campaign over the North American Free Trade Agreement.

The Clintons are itching to fight.

Rodham Clinton, the architect of the administration's health-care plan, told the National Education Association convention in New Orleans Sunday. "This debate will come down to whether or not the Congress of the United States is able to hear and see the problems in front of their eyes ... or whether they will hear the well-organized voices of opposition."

Clinton, for his part, complained Thursday that because his plan has been largely "the only kid on the block," it has come under intense criticism that has raised doubts with the public. He predicted people will support "the real thing" once they understand the alternatives.

Ground zero in the debate should arrive late this summer when reform bills produced during months of committee wrangling reach the House and Senate.

The centerpiece of the summer campaign on Clinton's behalf will be a privately organized $2 million bus tour beginning in late July dubbed the "Health Security Express."

Unions, consumer groups, senior citizens organizations, churches, businesses and others will chip in $20,000 per vehicle to sponsor bus loads of people from around the country.

Associated Press

The body of a man who was killed by armed men, placed in the street, then run over by a truck is marked for passing traffic by branches in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, Monday. At least three young men, apparent political victims, were found dead Monday morning. Haiti remains the object of international sanctions for the refusal of top military leaders to step down and allow exiled Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to return.

SIMPSON HEARINGS CONTINUE

Motion to suppress evidence may hurt prosecutor's case

Jane E. Allen
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors could still make a case against O.J. Simpson without bloody evidence taken from his property and Ford Bronco, but would have to rely more on scientific tests, experts' testimony and crime-scene clues, attorneys say.

"It's clear they're developing other evidence, but certainly a major gaffe by the police which would result in the loss of the evidence at Mr. Simpson's home is something that the prosecution can ill afford," said Myrna Raeder, a professor of trial advocacy and evidence at Southwestern School of Law.

But Raeder cautioned against drawing conclusions just two days into what's expected to be a one-to-two-week preliminary hearing. The object of the hearing is to decide whether Simpson is to be tried for murder in the killings of Simpson's former wife Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and her friend Ronald Lyle

Goldman, 25.

"Until you really know the evidence, I don't think you can say the prosecution is going to be blown out of the water," Raeder said.

Defense attorney Robert Shapiro has asked Municipal Court Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell to throw out 34 pieces of evidence he says were improperly taken from Simpson's property the day after the killings.

Shapiro says police scaled a wall at Simpson's mansion without a warrant and later obtained a warrant by misrepresenting circumstances. He says police said Simpson had left unexpectedly on a flight to Chicago the night of the slayings, even though they knew Simpson had planned the business trip.

The law does allow police to enter a home or property without a warrant in some cases — for example, if they are pursuing a suspect or believe evidence will be destroyed.

Arguments on Shapiro's motion to suppress evidence are scheduled for today. Any ruling could be appealed by either side.

Also pending before the preliminary hearing judge is a decision on what will become of a mysterious manila envelope containing possible evidence gathered by the defense and sealed under supervision of a court special master.

The broadcast television networks plan continued live coverage of O.J. Simpson's preliminary hearing, scheduled to resume at noon EDT today, depending on its newsworthiness.

ABC, NBC and CBS said Monday they plan to begin coverage at noon and stay with the story depending on its news value.

CNN plans live gavel-to-gavel coverage of the hearing and begins its report at 11 a.m. EDT with recap and analysis.

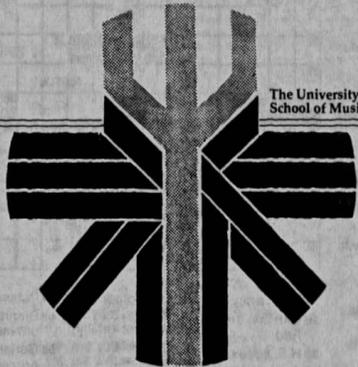

Courtroom Television Network also plans daily gavel-to-gavel coverage.

dent Halls, Hillcrest Association and the UISA. Therefore, Residence Services allowed the program to be housed in Hillcrest Residence Hall. However, as the volunteer program grew, coordinators recognized SAFEWALK would be more of an asset to the community if the program could offer its services to a greater number of students.

Last August, when the UISA took over all of SAFEWALK's funding, committee members were finally able to give serious consideration to expanding campuswide.

But efforts at expansion only helped to seal SAFEWALK's fate.

With talk of the escort service becoming campuswide, Residence Services made it clear they no longer considered it their responsibility to house SAFEWALK inside Hillcrest Residence Hall.

"We, along with many other organizations, supported the idea of SAFEWALK, but if the program is to be offered campuswide, the responsibility of housing the services should belong to some other facet of the university such as the student government or UISA," said David Coleman, Residence Services officer.

Planning for the future

Michelle Rivera, SAFEWALK adviser, said the task of keeping SAFEWALK running and trying to develop the SAFERIDE service was detrimental to both the volunteer workers and the program's ability to offer efficient services to residents. And so, left without office space, SAFEWALK committee members decided to take the semester off and plan for a more effective SAFERIDE.

"We recognized that trying to do both was inefficient," Rivera said. "It was like trying to do a juggling act."

"SAFERIDE is a possibility that does exist for the future, but in order to make its services more effective and assessable to students, we need to do a lot more planning and studying to see what resources we already have and what more the campus can offer to us," Rivera said.

As things are now, SAFEWALK committee members are doing their best to make arrangements for the future SAFERIDE program. Members such as Michael Patton believe the possibility of having paid coordinators and vans would help in ensuring students safety and a more efficient escort program.

Patton said if office space were provided now, SAFEWALK could be up and running a couple of months into the '94 fall semester.

"We need students who are concerned with campus safety to write letters to The Daily Iowan and to Dean Jones because we believe this is something the university should not be without," Patton said.

THESIS

to two hours with a thesis, measuring lines, looking up references and checking that the fonts are exactly right. The problem that appears most often is inappropriate line spacing, Cox said.

After finishing an examination, the thesis checkers write out reports which are then sent to the students. Most students find they need to make around 15 different types of format corrections in order to graduate.

Cox said the thesis checkers allow for flexibility. Poets have been allowed to put one poem on each page instead of continuing the text, as required in the manual. However, if the student wishes to deviate in any significant way from the format, an explanation from the thesis supervisor is required. In general, though, the rules are quite specific.

"We have requirements for pagination, spacing and spelling," Cox said. "We want to create a uniform product, so that all theses are readable."

Cox recalled the most unusual request for deviation from the standard style.

"Once an art student wanted to punch holes through all of the pages in her thesis," she said. "She felt that it was an intricate part of her artistic statement."

The art student had to get her adviser to write a letter to the Graduate College asking that the student be allowed to punch holes in her work. Cox said the thesis was eventually approved with the holes.

But Sangkee Rhee, a graduate student in biochemistry who just finished his doctoral thesis, said he hasn't experienced any of that flexibility. He finds the requirements too restrictive.

"They measure the spacing of each line. They pay attention to silly things," Rhee said.

He spent only four hours doing the required corrections, though.

Cox said most of people's dissatisfaction stems from their irritation with having to deal with details.

"For most people, it's the last exercise before receiving their degree, so some show a certain concern," Cox said.

Mont. Early in his career, he might have taken students' hands to help them properly use a pen. "Now what you do is take the pen, you don't touch her, you don't have any personal contact with her."

Bailey said the threat of a sexual harassment accusation drives a wedge between teacher and student. "You have to couch everything you say," he said.

Gilbert King, a special education aide at a Poydras, La., high school, said he tries to avoid being alone with a child. In the event that he can't, he'll take precautions.

"I open the doors wider. I sit more in the middle of the room. You tend to put more distance between you," he said.

He also is careful about his conversations with students. "I don't let them talk about any matters of the heart with me," he said.

Teachers say it is the student who suffers.

"It makes a very sterile environment," said Lorraine Arburr, a third-grade teacher in Terryville, Conn. "It doesn't give a teacher an opportunity to show you care."

not at war. "Today, the violence appears even more irrational," said Gaviria, urging Colombians to show greater tolerance in hopes of ending the cycle of violence.

Chants of "justice, justice" erupted from the crowds during eulogies for Escobar. His body lay in a wooden casket on the arena floor with a green-and-white flag from Atletico Nacional de Medellin, his club team, draped over it.

After the funeral, a cortege made its way slowly to a cemetery on the outskirts of the city. Fans, many weeping, threw bouquets at the black hearse containing the body, which was already heaped with flowers. A police honor guard walked alongside.

Some 15,000 mourners watched as Escobar's coffin was lowered into the ground. Colombian flags waved from the throng packed onto a cemetery hillside. Hundreds of onlookers climbed trees for a view, snapping branches under their weight as police and soldiers tried to maintain order.

The killing of the 27-year-old defender sent a quiver of fear through the Colombian team. Some players say they don't want to return, and the man who was to replace coach Francisco Maturana no longer wants the job.

Hernan Dario Gomez, who had been an assistant coach, announced his decision only 48 hours after agreeing to become head coach.

Maturana and his assistant received death threats during the World Cup, forcing them to scratch Gomez's brother, midfielder Gabriel Jaime Gomez, from the game against the United States.

Ivan Valenciano, a forward on the team, said, "I don't want to return to the squad if it means an error on the field will cost me my life."

Rwanda, which had incited massacres of Tutsis by civilian militiamen with its broadcasts of ethnic hate messages.

"They were jubilant," spokesman Maj. Jean-Guy Plante said of the Tutsi civilians freed from refuges in churches and a hotel.

The fate of government troops who had been holding out in Kigali was not immediately known, Plante said. An estimated 200,000 Rwandans, mostly Tutsi civilians, have been killed since the death of the Hutu president in a mysterious plane crash in April convulsed this country in ethnic bloodletting. The Hutu-led army and its militias are blamed for most of the slaughters.

Most of the victims are believed to have been massacred by the Hutu-led army and its militias, but President Juvenal Habyarimana's death also reignited a rebel war that had been stilled by an August cease-fire.

With the capital in its hands, the Rwandan Patriotic Front would be able to turn its forces toward the western swath where the self-proclaimed Rwandan government has taken refuge.

The rebels control two-thirds of the country, mainly in the north-east and southeast, and were advancing on the remaining government-held areas.

They appeared to have taken Butare, 80 miles southwest of the capital, said French military commanders from their post in the western town of Gisenyi.

But it was unclear how much farther the rebels could push their offensive without engaging the French in the west and southwest.

The French, in Rwanda since June 24 on a U.N.-authorized humanitarian mission to halt the massacres, have declared themselves neutral. But their presence has outraged the rebels because Paris supported the government against the guerrillas in the past.

The French have sworn to protect civilians in a safety zone in the west and southwest until a large U.N. mission can arrive. They vowed to fire on the rebels if the rebels threaten civilians.

BASEBALL

Tribe blazing Jacobs Field

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Dennis Martinez won his sixth straight decision and Candy Maldonado hit a tiebreaking two-run double Monday as the Cleveland Indians beat the Minnesota Twins 7-1 to complete a four-game sweep.

Cleveland has won five straight games and is 24-4 in its last 28 games at Jacobs Field. Minnesota has lost seven straight on the road.

The Indians outscored the Twins 32-12 in sweeping a four-game series from them for the first time since 1984.

Martinez (7-4) improved to 6-0 over 10 starts since his last loss on May 11 at New York.

Dave Winfield hit his ninth homer for Minnesota's run.

Two walks and Maldonado's double put the Indians ahead 3-1 in the fourth, and they finished Jim Deshaies (4-8) during a four-run seventh.

Red Sox 4, Angels 1

BOSTON — Roger Clemens allowed two hits and struck out 10 in seven shutout innings before leaving with tightness in his right groin.

Clemens (7-4) allowed a leadoff single by Chili Davis in the second and a one-out double by Chad Curtis in the fifth. It was the 59th time he has struck out 10 or more in a game.

The Red Sox scored all their runs in the second. Scott Cooper had a two-run double, and Damon Berryhill and John Valentin added RBI singles.

Boston won for just the third time in its last 17 home games. The Angels are 1-6 on a 13-game road trip that lasts until the All-Star break. The Red Sox have won 10 straight against California, including all seven this year.

Phil Leftwich (3-7) gave up four runs and seven hits in eight innings.

Athletics 4, Yankees 0

NEW YORK — Steve Ontiveros extended his scoreless streak to 24<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> innings and combined with four relievers to shut out the Yankees on four hits.

Ontiveros (5-2), who had missed his last start due to a tight right groin muscle, allowed four hits over the first 6<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> innings in winning his fourth straight decision. He has allowed 10 hits during the scoreless streak.

New York has lost four of its last five games after an eight-game winning streak while the A's have won 15 of their last 18.

Troy Neel's ninth homer, a two-run shot in the third off Scott Kamieniecki (5-4) gave the Athletics a 2-0 lead.

Mets 2, Giants 1, 10 innings

SAN FRANCISCO — Jim Lindeman's leadoff homer in the 10th inning gave the New York Mets a victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Lindeman hit a 1-1 pitch directly over the wall in center field for his fourth homer of the year. It came off Rod Beck (2-4), who has yielded nine homers in 29<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> innings.

Josias Manzanillo (2-1) worked a scoreless ninth for the victory, and John Franco pitched the 10th for his 18th save.

Blue Jays 9, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — John Olerud had a two-run double and Toronto, held hitless for five innings by Bob Milacki, broke loose for five runs in the sixth to beat Kansas City.

Joe Carter hit his 17th homer and drove in four runs for Toronto. Mike Macfarlane homered twice for the Royals.

Pat Hentgen (10-5) gave up nine hits and struck out six in eight innings. He is 5-0 lifetime against Kansas City, including a 1-0 victory May 3 in which he struck out 14.

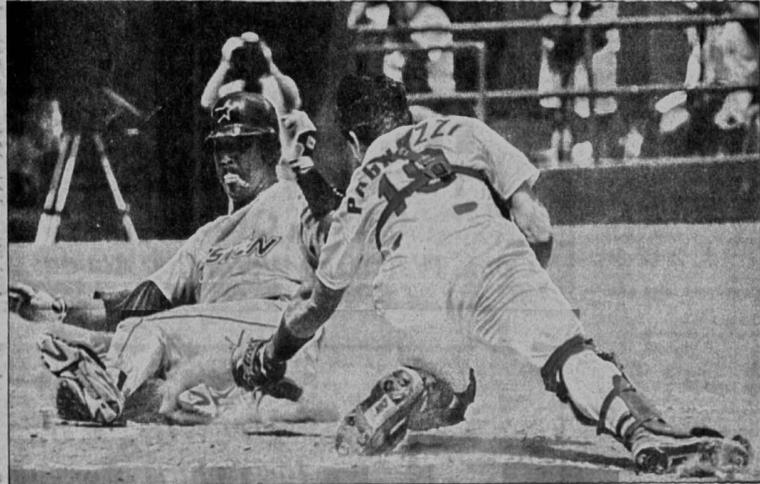

Milacki (0-3) allowed only two runners on a hit batsman and a walk through five innings.

White Sox 3, Brewers 2

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Norberto Martin doubled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning, lifting Chicago over Milwaukee.

Roberto Hernandez (3-3) went 1<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> innings and was the winner.

Bones, a first-time All-Star, gave up eight hits, walked one and struck out one.

Houston Astros' Tony Eusebio slides home safely past the tag of St. Louis Cardinals catcher Tom Pagnozzi during the fifth inning Monday in St. Louis.

Williams to play one weekend after being shot

NILES, Ohio (AP) — Golfer Kim Williams said Monday she will try not to let a bullet lodged near her collarbone keep her from this weekend's Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

Williams, who was wounded in the neck in an apparent accidental shooting, will rest for a couple of days and is not sure when she will begin practice for the tournament.

"I'm sore where the bullet is. I'm not sore where it went in very much," she told the Associated Press in a telephone interview from Toledo, where she traveled Monday after being released from Cleveland MetroHealth Medical Center.

Williams, of Boca Raton, Fla., was in Ohio for the LPGA Youngstown-Warren Classic. She was shot Saturday night in the parking lot of a Phar-Mor discount store.

She had gone to the store to buy baby oil, which she puts on her putter to prevent rust.

"It didn't even knock me down," Williams said of being hit. "It just felt like something hit me hard, like a baseball or a rock."

Police originally believed they were investigating a drive-by shooting.

But a man from Howland, Ohio, on Sunday told authorities he might have shot Williams as he and a friend were shooting old cars in woods about a mile west of the store, police Capt. Bruce Simeone said.

The man's name was being withheld, and Simeone said detectives and prosecutors would decide whether charges would be filed.

New line of trading cards features O.J. Simpson

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The latest O.J. Simpson trading cards show him running — from the law not on the football field.

The cards, introduced Sunday at a sports memorabilia show at the Anaheim Convention Center, show police pursuing the football Hall of Famer on the freeway and arresting him.

D&K Distributors sold thousands of the "In Pursuit of Justice" cards. The 10-card set costs $10 and it also includes mug shots of Simpson and his friend Al Cowlings, who drove the vehicle pursued by police.

Simpson has been charged with killing his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

D&K plans to issue a set of 50 cards that will include a picture of the blood-splattered walkway where the slayings occurred, said Lowell Katz, a sports card dealer.

"They weren't made in bad taste even though the whole subject is," Katz said.

Cubs' Roberson breaks hand after fight with wall

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cubs backup outfielder Kevin Roberson broke his hand Monday when he punched a clubhouse door during the second game of a doubleheader.

Roberson was placed on the 15-day disabled list, but team officials said he could miss four to six weeks.

Roberson was a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning of the second game and flied out. He also pinch hit in the first game and struck out. He is batting .218 this season with four homers and nine RBI.

The Cubs will replace him on the roster with reliever Blaise Isley, who was 5-0 with a 3.42 ERA at Triple-A Iowa.

Eliminated on Fourth of July

Ronald Blum

Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — Just when it seemed the United States actually could pull off one of the greatest upsets in soccer history, the Americans came up short.

The Americans held a one-man advantage for almost the entire second half. Brazil had clanked the ball off the post. It was the Fourth of July, so wasn't an American Revolution possible?

But then, in the 74th minute, Bebeto scored off a wonderful run by Romario and the Brazilians ended the Americans' World Cup ride with a 1-0 victory Monday.

"They came out and kept playing with 10 players," U.S. defender Marcelo Balboa said. "This is a sad thing for us, a very emotional thing and a hard thing to get over."

In the early going, the Americans controlled the ball for significant stretches.

Maybe the Americans would get lucky. Maybe they would go to penalty kicks.

But it wasn't to be. The three-time World Cup champions were just too good. Now they get to play the Netherlands in the quarterfinals Saturday in Dallas.

"I am very happy," U.S. coach Bora Milutinovic said. "If there is any time I was most proud of the team, it is today."

Leonardo, a Brazilian defender, was ejected in the final minute of the first half for elbowing Ramos in the left temple. Ramos sustained a slight skull fracture and was gone for the game. He was hospitalized overnight for observation.

The Americans, in the second round for the first time since 1930, already were missing John Harkes, one of their two top playmakers, because he was given two yellow cards in the first round. With Ramos out, the playmaking burden fell to Hugo Perez and Eric Wynalda, and there wasn't much offense in the second half.

There were 84,147 in Stanford Stadium for what was billed as the greatest game in the history of Brazilian forward Bebeto, center, kicks in the game-winning goal past United States goalkeeper Tony Meola, right, to put Brazil up 1-0 during the second round World Cup soccer championship match Monday.

American soccer. Samba drums of the Brazilian fans echoed through downtown Palo Alto before the game, and the stadium was nearly filled 75 minutes before kickoff.

Those fans gave both teams a loud ovation after the game, and players from both sides saluted the crowd as they left the field.

"We knew that we had to keep playing like we did the first half," Balboa said. "And it was just one of those things where we broke down in the middle of the field once and they capitalized on it."

Brazil, under enormous pressure from back home, dictated the second half despite its disadvantage. The goal came after Romario made a run up the center of the field.

FORMER HAWKEYES

Lohaus, Jepsen still chasing rings

Pat Regan

The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa basketball stars Bobby Hansen, B.J. Armstrong and Matt Bullard each have won at least one NBA championship ring in the last three seasons. Meanwhile, ex-Hawkeye centers Brad Lohaus and Les Jepsen have been leading less glamorous professional careers.

Both Lohaus and Jepsen were considered "projects" when they came to Iowa. After seeing little playing time and honing their skills in practice for a few years, they each flourished during their senior seasons enabling them to play professionally.

Lohaus was drafted by the Boston Celtics in 1987 and spent time with the Sacramento Kings before playing the last five seasons with the Milwaukee Bucks.

Lohaus has unique skills. In 1993, he was the only player in the NBA to lead his team in both 3-pointers and blocked shots. However, the 7-footer is modest in assessing his talents.

"I'm just working on everything," Lohaus said. "There is no aspect of my game that doesn't need work."

Lohaus is now a free agent, and said he would like to play for a winning team.

"It would be fun to be on a team that had a chance," Lohaus said. "Other than my rookie and my second year, I haven't been on a really good team. I would like to get back to playing some good basketball, being competitive and perhaps winning a division."

Despite being on one of the worst teams in the NBA the last few seasons, Lohaus said he would still be interested in playing for the Bucks.

"I would like to go back to Milwaukee and they have expressed some interest, but I don't know what's going to happen," he said.

While Lohaus has found his niche in the NBA, Jepsen is still searching for stability. After being selected by the Golden State Warriors in the 1990 draft, Jepsen has spent the last few seasons going from team to team at different professional levels.

"It's really hard to have a home anywhere because the job changes quite often," he said.

Jepsen spent this past season playing in the Continental Basketball Association with some of his former Hawkeye teammates in Fargo, N.D.

"I played with Roy Marble, Ed Horton and Ray Thompson, and we had a lot of fun," Jepsen said. "It was good seeing those guys again so it was a good experience."

Jepsen's future is up in the air as he is weighing his options for the upcoming season.

"I'm going to a summer league in Detroit and from there I could either take a job overseas, try an NBA camp or there's always the CBA," he said. "I'll just have to wait and see what happens."

Jepsen, who is trying to rehabilitate his knee after recent surgery, is playing in the Prime Time League this summer in Iowa City.

"Now that my knee is back mostly to full strength I can start working on quickness and rebounding. Those are things you need to

Cubs, Rockies split marathon at Wrigley

Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — Dante Bichette hit a misplayed two-run double in the top of the 15th inning Monday night to give the Colorado Rockies a 4-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs and a split of a rain-soaked, 10-hour and 10-minute doubleheader.

The Cubs won the opener 4-3 with two runs in the ninth, capped by Derrick May's two-out RBI single — his fourth hit of the game.

Some 7½ hours later, and after three rain delays, the holiday doubleheader finally ended when Greg Harris retired Sammy Sosa on a liner to center.

The Rockies blew ninth-inning leads in both games.

In the nightcap, Randy Myers (1-4) walked Nelson Liriano to open the 15th. Two outs later, Walt Weiss singled off Myers' glove. Bichette then lifted a high fly ball to right-center and outfielders Glennallen Hill and Eddie Zambrano let the ball drop between them at the base of the wall as two runs scored.

In the opener, the Cubs scored two in the ninth against Bruce Ruffin (3-4) as the Colorado closer blew his fifth save opportunity in 18 chances.

Only about 1,000 fans remained at the end from a crowd that numbered 37,167 earlier in the day.

Reds 5, Marlins 1

MIAMI — All-Star Jose Rijo pitched six scoreless innings and Reggie Sanders broke the game open with a two-run, eighth-inning homer, leading Cincinnati to its fourth straight victory.

Deion Sanders went 3-for-4 for the Reds, who got two runs in the first against Marlins starter Pat Rapp (4-5).

The Marlins had plenty of opportunities against Rijo (7-4), leaving runners in scoring position in five of the first six innings.

Astros 13, Cardinals 6

ST. LOUIS — Tony Eusebio had a career-high four hits and four RBI and Andujar Cedeno also drove in four runs, helping Houston beat St. Louis.

The Astros had 15 hits, 11 walks and a hit batsman to win for the sixth time in eight games. The Cardinals have dropped three in a row after a five-game winning streak.

Eusebio hit a three-run double to cap the Astros' four-run first inning against Allen Watson (5-4).

Strawberry returns to baseball with 2 hits

Mel Reisner

Associated Press

PEORIA, Ariz. — Darryl Strawberry took another step toward returning to the majors Monday night, hitting a home run and a single in his first two at-bats for the Triple-A Phoenix Firebirds.

Playing for the first time since signing with San Francisco June 19, Strawberry batted third and was in right field for the Giants' top farm team. He singled sharply in the first inning and hit a solo homer over the 355-foot mark in right in the third against Vancouver.

It was his first game since April 2, a day before he left the Los Angeles Dodgers without an explanation. On April 4, he admitted that he had a substance-abuse problem.

Strawberry spent four weeks at the Betty Ford Center, negotiated a settlement that released him from the Dodgers and later joined the Giants.

The Giants have had him on a conditioning program since they signed him. Although his schedule for returning to the major leagues hasn't been revealed, it is believed he will join the Giants after the All-Star break.

The 10,000-seat Peoria Sports Complex was sold out, but the stands were sparsely occupied until just before gametime, probably because of the 108-degree temperatures reached in the Phoenix area during before nightfall.

In the first inning, Strawberry took a ball and then singled up the middle. The crowd cheered him when he came to the plate and gave him a loud ovation after the hit.

Strawberry's batting practice went unnoticed, but fans on the first-base side of the grandstand crowded in when he began signing autographs about 30 minutes before the contest. Strawberry signed several dozen.

Umpire Ron Barnes cools off with a wet towel Monday in St. Louis. Temperatures on the field exceeded 110 degrees.
