Firework complaints kept to a minimum this year

The Iowa City Police Department responded to more than 30 calls regarding the use of illegal fireworks during the July Fourth weekend.

Police Lt. Ron Fort said the number of calls regarding the fireworks was relatively low compared to earlier years.

"The city was quiet and peaceful," he said.

Three people were admitted to the UI Hospitals and Clinics with fireworks-related injuries; they were listed in fair condition on Tuesday.

Though no illegal fireworks were found, Fort said all complaints were investigated.

"Once we've received a phone call citing the fireworks, we'd go and listen for explosives or look for the telltale signs of gray smoke," Fort said.

"If any fireworks were found, we'd simply confiscate the fireworks, put them out in a bucket of water and call the state fire marshal to come and destroy the device."

Illegal possession of fireworks such as bottle rockets and lady-finger firecrackers carries a simple misdemeanor charge. Possession of larger explosives such as M-80s could result in a one-year jail sentence.

UI student faces lawsuit after apartment blaze

UI student Ben J. Wallace Jr. is facing a lawsuit filed by Westwood Apartments Inc. as a result of a May 21 fire that did more than $500,000 in damages to the apartment complex that he was living in.

Westwood Apartments Inc. filed the lawsuit Friday in which Wallace, their tenant, is accused of breaking the lease agreement when he allegedly misused the stove and electrical appliances on May 21.

The lawsuit claims that Wallace broke the lease he signed, which provides that he could "not deliberately or negligently destroy, deface, impair or remove a part of the premises or knowingly permit a person to do so."

The fire, which took firefighters 90 minutes to control, affected six apartments, causing $500,000 of damage.

Simpson's whereabouts scrutinized

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A limousine driver and a guest at O.J. Simpson's estate told a tale of thumps in the night and a shadowy figure hurrying into the mansion as prosecutors Tuesday sought to establish that Simpson had as much as 75 minutes to commit murder.

Limo driver Allan Park testified he arrived early at Simpson's mansion for a 10:45 p.m. pickup the night of the murders and no one answered the intercom until after he saw a black person slip into the house close to 11 p.m.

"He told me he overslept, that he just got out of the shower and he'd be down in a minute," Park said of the voice over the intercom that he believed to be Simpson's.

And Brian "Kato" Kaelin, who lives in a guest house on the estate, said he and Simpson returned from a McDonald's dinner at about 9:45 p.m., and he didn't see him again until he went out to investigate thumps he heard at 10:40 p.m. and saw Simpson a short time later getting into the limousine.

Earlier testimony at the preliminary hearing has suggested that Simpson's ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and Ronald Goldman, a friend of hers, were killed between 10 and 11 p.m. June 12.

Howard Weitzman, one of Simpson's previous attorneys, said he was told by police that the slayings happened about 11 p.m. and that Simpson was at home at that time waiting for his ride to the airport. Simpson's lawyers have not disclosed his whereabouts in the hour or two leading up to 11 p.m.

Simpson, 46, is charged with stabbing to death Brown Simpson, 35, and Goldman, 25.

So far, testimony at the hearing, which began Thursday and will determine whether there is enough evidence to go to trial, has shown only that Simpson had the opportunity to kill. There has been no evidence presented directly linking him to the murders.

And Municipal Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell hasn't yet revealed the contents of a bulky yellow envelope that Simpson's attorneys turned over last week. The appearance of the envelope gave rise to speculation that it could contain the 15-inch stiletto that Simpson allegedly bought several weeks before the murder.

CROWDS OVERESTIMATED

Arafat greeted warmly in Jericho

Mort Rosenblum
Associated Press

JERICHO, West Bank — It was eerie déjà vu: Young Palestinians stared blankly behind chain link and barbed wire. Armed police strutted back and forth, ordering them to stay in place.

Then Yasser Arafat appeared. With a riotous surge, they trampled everything in their way — fences, security guards, TV crews and decades of history — to declare themselves free.

Saleh Nimir, 27, got close enough to catch the bouquet Arafat threw to the crowd. Only tough cops stopped him from barreling on to give his beloved "Abu Ammar" a bear hug.

"We love him," he explained. It was symbolism at its highest, a combined prison break and rock concert to witness Arafat take control of an inchoate state which hardly anyone dreamed would exist a year ago.

In terms of hard reality, however, it must have shaken the durable chairman who claims to speak for all Palestinians and peppers each speech with the buzz words, "National Unity!"

Nimir's fervor propelled him to the front, but only a few thousand people were in his way. For all of its historical moment, the long-awaited homecoming was far from a sellout performance.

To a sizable number of Jericho's 15,000 inhabitants, Arafat's whole peace agreement with Israel was a sellout, pure and simple.

"What did Arafat achieve? Nothing," said Samir Oseileh, a 24-year-

"Soon I hope all the wires everywhere are taken down, and we can all live free."

Ahmed Nasser, on the idea of a free Palestine old mechanic and Muslim zealot in the Hamas movement, who stayed home. "Israel made him a puppet." Arafat blamed Israeli authorities and hostile settlers for sabotaging his homecoming by blocking the roads to Jericho. But all evidence suggests another reason: Few people bothered to come.

Although a lot of Israelis tried to cut off Jericho, the hearty faithful got through.

Nimir was delayed en route from Jerusalem because settlers slashed a bus tire. Police cleared the way and he made it on time.

It took brothers Rajai and Rabai Sharif seven hours to come from Hebron, normally a two-hour trip.

After four police checkpoints and two settlers' demonstrations, they walked the last three miles.

In the end, only scant thousands came in from elsewhere in the West Bank — hardly the hundreds of thousands that Arafat aides predicted — but that was enough for a party.

By sundown, it was a carnival. Long past midnight, they were still dancing in the streets, making more noise than Jericho has heard since Joshua's trumpet recital 3,000 years ago.

At a sidewalk cassette stand, someone put on one of the dozen songs written for the homecoming, which goes something like: "With love, Arafat will unite us all."

At the first bars, an old woman in a plum satin dress and blue blazer began a belly dance.

This was still the West Bank, peace or not, but some changes were obvious.

An Israeli military jeep happened into the traffic jam around the main square. Soon enough, a kid threw a bottle at it. The men in uniform ran to the driver, not the kid, and bellowed, "Beat it!"

One American visitor felt a gun barrel in his ribs and turned to see a combat paratrooper's uniform and assault rifle. Both belonged to Mohammed Abu Monshar, aged 4.

EXODUS PROMPTS POLICY CHANGE

Haitian boat people denied entry to U.S.

Susanne Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In an attempt to halt a surge of fleeing Haitian boat people, the Clinton administration announced Tuesday that Haitians who take to the sea won't be allowed into the United States.

And in a new show of military force, the administration ordered four more warships and 2,000 Marines to sail toward Haiti and prepare for a potential evacuation of U.S. citizens.

The latest shift in policy on the boat people came after a weekend in which thousands of Haitians ignored the administration's pleas not to flee their country by boat. In response, the White House announced that Haitians picked up at sea who are found eligible for refugee status will be sent to camps in Panama instead of being brought to the United States.

"Those who are not political refugees will be returned. Those who are refugees will be given safe haven — those that are picked up on the sea — in Panama," William Gray, President Clinton's special adviser on Haiti, said at a White

PERMITS REQUIRED

'Archaic' dance laws still plague I.C. bars

Heather Pitzel

Restrictions on dancing in the '90s might sound like the theme from "Footloose," but in Iowa City, bars are still required to obtain permits if customers will be dancing on the premises.

Prohibitions on dancing were common around the country in the early 1900s, when towns feared that dancing would bring undesirable elements into their communities, but city officials and bar owners alike are confused as to why such a regulation still exists.

"We've forgotten why this is on the books," City Attorney Linda Gentry said. "It does seem rather archaic. Why should we care whether we regulate dancing?"

Bar owners must pay 50 cents per square foot of dance floor. The city receives 10 to 12 applications a year for permits and collects approximately $1,500 to $2,500 annually. Persons violating the ordinance could be fined up to $100 or be imprisoned for up to 30 days. Mark Eggleston, former owner of The Field House bar, is taking over the business again and said he pays about $200 per year.

"I've been paying it for so long — of course I think it's stupid. They charge businesses with dance floors for letting kids have a good time," Eggleston said.

The origins of the law date back to at least 1925, when it was unlawful for people under 16 years of age to attend any public dance without a parent or guardian. Liquor or intoxicated persons weren't allowed and chaperones, one male and one female, were appointed by the mayor.

The law went on to state it was illegal for "any indecent act to be committed, or any disorder or conduct of a gross violent or vulgar character, or to permit in or at any such dance hall any known prostitute, pimp, or procurer, any person known to be of bad moral character or any person awaiting trial upon charges of moral turpitude."

Don't drink the water — life of the Iowa River

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

A crow caws from the highest block of the laser building, its raucous cry echoing over the rippling waters of the Iowa River before it flies off. The building stands like a modern-day version of a medieval fortress, the river forming its extensive moat.

The rushing noise of water in

the treatment plant, sounding like some smaller, less dangerous version of Niagara Falls, can be heard in the background. Other sounds from the manmade world, like the traffic on nearby Riverside Drive, also filter through. But before long, these other noises fade away, and you can almost believe you're getting away from it all — from the campus, the city and the stresses of everyday life.

It's early evening and you're enjoying the calm and peacefulness of the Iowa River.

In front of the Art Building on the west bank, a pair of ducks — one male, one female — begin paddling upstream from the bank. They approach the middle of the river, then let the current bear them downstream as they dip their heads underwater, probing for food.

A piece of white debris speeds down the center of the river, bound for destinations unknown.

Three skaters in line skim across the sidewalk on the east bank, then three more appear on the bridge leading to the Music Building. The first three briefly disappear behind the giant crane that stands lifeless on the shore, set like some neglected fishing pole abandoned by a giant angler.

A splashing sound breaks the silence — a leaping fish? A diving duck? A thrown rock?

and navy shorts. She glances back to urge on her dog, which has stopped to investigate the weeds by the shore. "Come on!" The dog takes one final sniff, then lopes ahead to receive its pat on the head.

Suddenly the reporter feels a small stinging pain. A fly or mosquito has struck again.

Three Asian students pause on the Hancher bridge. One points at a mother and her ducklings as they drift toward the bridge. The trio watches until the ducks vanish from sight beneath the bridge.

A duck call breaks the silence as another fowl skims over the water, quacking away. Minutes later, a different kind of call breaks the silence as a train lumbers across the bridge.

On the bank in front of Hancher Auditorium, a red-winged blackbird trills from its perch in a flood-ravaged tree, its branches barren of the lush greenery of summer. Adding life to a tree that no longer has any, the bird's call is answered by another.

Seen from the east bank of the river, the sun becomes cruel, a pillar of fire glaring off the rippling waves. A pecking sound descends from the tree heights as a woodpecker defies gravity on the underside of a maple tree branch.

Near the Union the evening is less tranquil. A woman and two children throw grain to a small flock of ducks, which scatter as a walker disperses them. The woman cautions the boy and the girl, "Don't scare them away. Say, 'Come back here, ducks!'" The boy yells, "Come back here, ducks!" and they obey. Word about this free food spreads, and more of the plump waterfowl waddle up as fast as their webbed feet will allow.

Another family — six this time — strolls along the river. One of the children pushes a stroller, and the father issues a warning. "Don't run over any ducks!" They set up shop at the other end of the Union bank to open up their own restaurant for ducks, this one serving pieces of bread, and soon business is booming.

Rivalry attributed mainly to male TV anchors

NEW YORK (AP) — Male TV anchors are more competitive than female anchors. So say Barbara Walters and Diane Sawyer.

"If you're talking about elbows, you shouldn't be talking to the women, really," Sawyer said in the August issue of Vanity Fair.

Gulf war prisoner collects award for patriotism

Durant, an Army helicopter pilot, spent 11 days as a prisoner of Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah

Guardian Angel years to be tops in eating hot dogs

Derailment of 3 cars found minor

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Three 120-ton Iowa Interstate Railroad cars derailed in Iowa City Monday night resulting in more than $6,000 in damages and blocking streets for most of the night.

Iowa Interstate is continuing its investigation to determine the cause of the derailment. Mark Sandler, director of claims and special services for the station, said the incident was not major, the cars sustained minor damage and there were no injuries.

"At this time, we know for sure the derailment was the result of a track-related problem," Sandler said. "But we are not sure what the specific problem is. We have indications that the cause was some type of track failure, but we won't be certain until some time in the end of the week."

Fred Yocum, president of the railroad, said all damages will be paid with money taken directly from the railroad's operating funds.

The derailment occurred at 8:45 p.m. at the west end of the train yard near the Gilbert Street overpass. The cars blocked Clinton and Dubuque streets overnight for 11 hours. Both Clinton and Dubuque streets were reopened at 8 a.m. Tuesday morning.

Off-track machinery got the three rail cars back onto the tracks in about four hours. The main line or principle track which runs through town and the lead line which comes off the main line and goes into the switching gear are now fully operable.

Sandler said the $6,000 cost in damages was not high considering the cost of a $300,000 derailment that occurred earlier in the year. "It's not uncommon for rail cars in normal operation to sustain damages," Sandler said. "Causes of the damages could be anything from vandalism to incompetence."

TEMPORARY VACANCY FILLED

Alumni director job taken over by Rhodes

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

As if her job as vice president for University Relations wasn't enough to keep one person busy, Ann Rhodes has now put on a second hat at the university — that of interim director of the Alumni Association.

Rhodes has been performing this job since late spring, when former director D. Richard Emerson resigned as head of the association.

"I've got a lot of affinity for it because I'm an alumnus and so many of my family are, too," she said. "I think this will be a good opportunity for me to learn more about the organization. I'm excited about it. I think it will be a lot of fun."

Emerson, who has been executive director of the Alumni Association since 1987, said he resigned because he wanted a career change.

"I've been doing the same thing for 21 years, seven of them at the University of Iowa," said Emerson, who was director of the alumni organization of the University of Colorado at Boulder before joining the UI. "There comes a time when you can do something too long. I needed a change."

The search for a new director will begin in September or October and will not be completed until the spring semester. The nonprofit organization has a membership of 46,000 UI alumni and a budget of approximately $1.8 million. It oversees more than 60 Iowa clubs across the country, which sponsored 500 events last year. The association also assists the admissions office, organizes parents' weekends and provides career-services networks.

Although Rhodes is performing the director's duties, she said she will not be receiving the $89,836 yearly salary Emerson earned at the UI. Rhodes earned $109,675 for the 1993-94 year.

"Let the record show that I laughed hysterically at that question," she said. "It's not definite yet, but I'll probably get some increment in pay for the extra work. But that will just be temporary."

"I certainly won't be picking up his salary in addition to mine," she said.

Rhodes said she doesn't have any changes or new ideas for the association right now.

"At this point I'm still learning a lot," she said. "I have to respond to the fact that budgets are tight across the university. I'll have to make sure we have a good strategic plan."

Rhodes said the UI will use this time to look at the job description, examine the bylaws of the organization and study other issues so it knows what to look for in a new director.

Meanwhile, the former director is doing his own search for employment. Emerson said he would like to use his experiences to get into an education-related field, but he isn't set on that.

Although such a change can be "foreboding," Emerson said he is also very excited about it.

"I'm very proud of the work I did here, but there comes a time in your life when you have to ask if you want to do what you're doing for the rest of your life," he said. "I decided it's important for me to move in a different direction."

NEW PRISONS PUSHED FOR

Campbell introduces plan to fight crime

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Democratic gubernatorial nominee Bonnie Campbell on Tuesday proposed significantly longer jail terms for violent criminals and a prison construction program to make room for the inmates such a crackdown would create.

Campbell endorsed a new medium-security prison for 800 inmates at Newton and a 250-inmate maximum-security facility, probably at Fort Madison. That's in addition to a 750-bed medium-security prison being built at Clarinda.

At a news conference, Campbell said, "The very first proposal that the Legislature receives from me will be a comprehensive crime package."

In her sentencing plan — much of which had been outlined before — Campbell said she would increase sentences for violent crimes such as rape, lengthen terms for repeat offenders and push a "three strikes, you're out" plan where a third major felony conviction brings a life term.

Campbell said her sentencing plan would cause only a small increase in inmate numbers immediately but conceded it would increase the number of inmates over the long term.

That led to her push for new prisons.

"As we implement tougher sentences in Iowa, we must also make the investment in our correctional facilities," Campbell said. "My plan will make sure that this state is prepared before the end of this decade."

Campbell put no price tag on the prison construction program. The Legislature this year asked prison officials to develop proposals for the facilities Campbell endorsed.

Currently attorney general, Campbell has pushed for new prisons for years. In the past, she's suggested the potential of borrowing the money to pay for prisons, but her proposal Tuesday called for funding the new prisons directly over four years.

Under the sentencing proposal, Campbell would:

- Increase penalties for violent crimes that are often repeated. For instance, she said, rape now brings a 10-year term and she would lengthen that to 25 years.

- Require those committing a second violent crime to serve at least 85 percent of their sentence.

- Giving automatic life terms to those who commit a third violent felony.

Those sentencing proposals make sense, Campbell said, because they target the most violent criminals who are responsible for most crime.

Campbell described her sentencing and prison construction proposals as a short-term approach to crime. She promised to release details of a long-term approach later this summer.

MANY CLAIM THEY ARE GUILTY-FREE

Hutus wary of Tutsi reprisals following massacres in Rwanda

Patrick McDowell
Associated Press

KIBUYE, Rwanda — The choral rhythms of African hymns sung during Mass seemed so close to God. But the stench of the mass grave just outside the church was overpowering.

After the suspicious death of Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana touched off a wave of ethnic massacres April 6, tens of thousands of minority Tutsis sought refuge in churches like the idyllic Roman Catholic stone edifice in Kibuye, overlooking scenic Lake Kivu from a shady hilltop in western Rwanda.

On April 17, the killers came. An estimated 3,000 people in the church were butchered. Those in the sanctuary fell to machine-gun fire. Others barricaded in a small building in back were cut down with machetes. Their bloody palm prints still stain the walls; the machete marks still scar the doors where the killers forced their way in.

"It was a crime against humanity," said one Kibuye resident who didn't give his name for fear of reprisals from his neighbors.

For most of the others: No one saw or heard anything.

In Kibuye, the churchgoers generally say that "outside Hutus" came to kill the Tutsis — soldiers, militia, police. Only under insistent questioning do they admit that perhaps a few of the local Hutus took part.

A few of the uniformed government soldiers carry their Kalash-nikovs as they pray this sunny Sunday. A few of the others in their pressed Sunday best smile and chat as they leave the church, walking over the freshly bulldozed mass grave that emits such an incriminating odor.

In the eyes of those who would talk, the Tutsis deserved it — men, women and children. Ask the kids who try to cadge rations from the French soldiers now setting up camp in Kibuye, and they laugh like they've been caught stealing cookies.

Cynianque Brisengimana, 44, a veterinarian, recounts the kind of story you hear all over Rwanda when one asks about massacres at churches. He says the church was a hotbed of activity by the Rwandan Patriotic Front, the Tutsi-led rebels who have seized about two-thirds of the country and are advancing on government-held Kibuye.

"The priest was a Tutsi," says Brisengimana. "There were armed Tutsis in the church. They had arms. Where did those arms come from? Why did they have them?"

Maybe they had arms because they wanted to defend themselves.

Maybe they had no arms at all. What is certain is that they're all dead. Brisengimana admits that some of the dead Tutsis were just seeking shelter but were unfortunate enough to be caught in a cross fire.

"The forces were not equal," he says.

Those who managed to flee from the church didn't get far. Their rotting corpses, gnawed by animals, litter the hill around the church, lacking the dignity of even a mass grave. The people say they couldn't bury them all.

There are a few local Hutus who said they had hidden some Tutsi children and their parents and handed them over to the French when they arrived.

But the grave can't hide the smell of those who could not hide, and the Hutu-dominated government army hasn't been able to stop the rebel advance. The population lives in fear of reprisal killings if the RPF takes the strategic town, which would cut what remains of government-controlled Rwanda in half.

Saying the push on Kibuye is creating thousands of refugees, the French are setting up what amounts to a security zone in a 20-square-mile region around the town. Four hundred of the French intervention troops have been rushed here, along with heavy mortars and at least 10 light tanks.

It would require the approval of the U.N. Security Council and the warring parties themselves to create any kind of a truly functioning safe haven.

For now, the worshippers fill the church on Sunday and breathe the air of massacre.

"I'm a Catholic," said Brisengimana, who fears RPF revenge massacres. "I believe that reconciliation is possible."

BALTIC STATE MAKES READY

Latvians anticipate Clinton visit

Michael Tarm
Associated Press

RIGA, Latvia — Sounds of hammers and clanging steel echoed through Riga's old town on Tuesday as workmen made final preparations for President Clinton's visit — the first by a U.S. president to a Baltic state.

Scores of American and Latvian flags waved in the breeze along the Vansu bridge, which Clinton will cross on his way into town, passing under a huge banner that reads "Welcome President Clinton."

A dozen school children raked leaves and swept sidewalks by the towering Freedom Monument, where Clinton will speak during his one-day stay today.

"It's a great honor that an American president comes here," said 11-year-old Yuri Chahov, holding a red baseball cap in one hand and a broom in the other.

"I'm helping to clean because I want President Clinton to see that Latvians aren't just sitting around on their hands," he said. "We're trying to make our country a better place."

Nearby, workmen fitted together heavy beams that are part of a makeshift stage for Clinton.

"We've been working day and night," said one of the men, gasping for breath in the summer heat.

Since the former Soviet Baltic republics broke with Moscow in 1991, residents have grown accustomed to a steady stream of visits by Western heads of state. But Latvians say Clinton's visit is different.

"He's more important than the others," said Rubenis Laimonis, a 59-year-old pensioner, standing outside Riga's Little Johnny's American Pizza restaurant.

Brushing his hand through thick gray hair, Laimonis said he was especially thankful for the wholesale repair of otherwise bumpy city roads, completed in one week for Clinton's visit. "American presidents should come more often," he said.

As a security precaution, Latvian police finished batten down manhole covers and removing flower pots along the president's motorcade route.

An old biplane, one of a few aircraft in Latvia's tiny air force, flew overhead to make a security check.

On cobblestone streets around the capital, Latvians said they hoped Clinton's visit would bring long-lasting benefits.

"His visit could really help open us up to the West, as far as trade and foreign investment," said Alberts Berzuks, a 70-year-old retiree in this country of 2.6 million.

Outside the American Embassy in Riga, 30 elderly Latvians carried placards urging Washington to stand firm against Russia, a country many Latvians see as a threat to their independence.

Latvians are particularly worried about the presence of Russian troops, who number fewer than 10,000 and, according to officials, are withdrawing fast. There are also 2,000 Russian soldiers in neighboring Estonia.

"Russia's occupation of Latvia continues!" read one sign at the demonstration. "Clinton: Don't sell us out to the Russians!" read another. Both were written in English, though with a K rather than a C in the president's name.

Some Latvians said they were concerned that, in a crisis, the United States would leave them at the mercy of Russia. "Big countries always disregard the interests of small countries," said Vita Velmere, a 41-year-old office worker. "Clinton should be trying to find ways of protecting us from the East, from Russia."

Members of Latvia's large Russian-speaking community said they hoped they wouldn't be overlooked, either.

Russian speakers make up 47 percent of the Latvian population, and have complained about discrimination at the hands of a government dominated by Latvians. "Clinton should help us, too," said Valitina, a 68-year-old Russian pensioner. "He should try to solve the problems between Russians and Latvians."

Clinton is expected to address this issue, as well as Baltic security concerns, at a summit meeting with all three Baltic presidents today.

After the meeting, Clinton will lay flowers at the Freedom Monument, a 50-foot-high stone column with a sculpture of a woman at the top, her arms outstretched to the sky. He'll then deliver his address.

While many Latvians hope for big things from the president, others say they're just happy Latvia will be the focus of world attention, if only for the six hours of Clinton's stay.

Pilots asked for answers to jet crash

Paul Nowell

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Investigators on Tuesday began interviewing the two pilots on USAir Flight 1016, saying they provide the best chance for determining why the jet crashed in a rainstorm, killing 37 passengers.

John Hammerschmidt, one of five members of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the interviews were being conducted at an undisclosed location.

"We have excellent information in this investigation," Hammerschmidt said. "Of prime importance is the fact that we have a flight crew that survived."

Hammerschmidt said the interviews would focus in part on the weather and wind conditions before the crash as the plane was trying to land Saturday night at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport. Twenty of the 57 people on board survived, including all the crew members.

Capt. Michael Greenlee and 1st Officer James Hayes were released from a hospital Monday. Fifteen people remained hospitalized. Hayes was at the controls when the plane crashed.

One survivor, Stanley Williams, an Army air traffic controller, said the pilot, blinded by the driving rain, fought the wind for control.

"He did the best he could do — he just didn't make it," Williams said. "If he hadn't, there would not have been any survivors."

Hammerschmidt said a commuter plane that landed just before the crash reported smooth wind conditions. But rain was so heavy that an air traffic controller never even saw the USAir jet until it went down, he said.

Less than two minutes before the crash, the control tower warned pilots of dangerous wind shear, a sudden shift in wind speed and direction due to a rapid downward rush of cooled air.

The plane had a wind-shear alert system, but investigators have not yet determined if its warning signal sounded before the crash, Hammerschmidt said.

Williams, who suffered burns and lacerations to his face, chest and arms, described the crash from a wheelchair in a hospital. His wife, Lori, who also survived the crash, did not join him. They were in good condition Tuesday.

The couple had been visiting her family in South Carolina and were on their way to visit his family in Dallas.

"The wind was playing havoc with the aircraft," Williams recalled. "When a DC-9 is being tossed around, you're not fooling around."

An air traffic controller for six years, Williams knew exactly what the pilot was facing. "He couldn't see anything because it was raining hard," Williams said. "All he could see was his instruments."

As the jet heaved, Williams put his hands before his face.

"I remember feeling intense heat for a few seconds and then the plane came to rest," he said.

From his window seat in the 16th row, Williams heard other passengers gasping for air and saw that his wife was no longer at his side.

"I knew they needed help, but I was most interested in my wife," he said, choking back tears. "She was somewhere in the rear of the aircraft, but I couldn't get to her."

Williams climbed through the torn fuselage, stepped over downed power lines and passed out.

"It's awfully strange that God drew the line where he did," Williams said. "The people behind me died. I count my blessings."

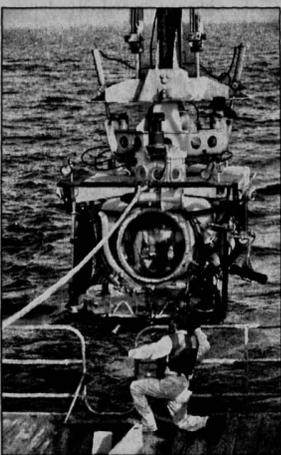

EXPERTS MAKE FIRST EXTENSIVE SURVEY

Edmund Fitzgerald's hull viewed for clues to wreck sections lie 180 feet apart, tons of taconite ore pellets from the cargo hold strewn between them on the gray silt bottom. Jagged rips in the hull, twisted steel plates and the bow's crumpled nose bear witness to the catastrophic force of the shipwreck.

The windows of the pilot house are gone, blown away by the explosive rush of water. The crow's nest atop the bridge is surprisingly intact.

The ship's bell, engraved with the name of the legendary ship, dangles silently from its frame. The scenes were visible from the miniature submarine Clelia on Tuesday as scientists and marine historians concluded a three-day mission to probe the mystery of the Fitzgerald's sinking Nov. 10, 1975. All 29 crew members died. No distress signal was sent.

The explorers, led by Canadian marine scientist Joe MacInnis, conducted the first extensive manned survey of the wreckage. Colleagues of Jacques Cousteau made brief dives in 1980 and unmanned robots have photographed the scene.

"We still can't say why the ship went down, but we've found things that have never been seen before," MacInnis said.

The explorers concluded that the Fitzgerald did not break up on the water's surface as some have speculated.

NEW AIR STRIKES THREATENED

Demand for peace proffered to clashing tribes in Bosnia

Clare Nullis
Associated Press

GENEVA — The United States, Russia and three European powers issued an ultimatum Tuesday to the warring factions in Bosnia: Agree to a new peace package or face international reprisals.

Their foreign ministers approved a plan to give the new Bosnian-Croat federation roughly 51 percent of Bosnia's territory and the Serbs 49 percent. The Serbs now hold about 70 percent and are seen as the most likely to reject the demand.

"It would be a mistake of truly historic proportions for either party to feel they can serve their people well if they reject the proposal," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said after the three-hour meeting.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev described the plan as "the only possible alternative" to war.

"We have mapped out a peaceful ultimatum. This is the first such effort to force a compromise and peace," he said.

Kozyrev, who was host for the meeting for the envoys from the United States, Russia, Germany, France and Britain, said the Croat-Muslim federation and the Bosnian Serbs had two weeks to respond. Leaders of the Bosnian factions will be given a copy of the new map today.

The ministers aimed their ultimatum primarily at the Serbs, who would have to give up land they consider strategically important.

Christopher said U.N. sanctions against the Serbs would be gradually lifted if they withdrew to the areas designated under the proposal. He said that if they did not agree, enforcement of the sanctions would be tightened.

British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd and his French counterpart, Alain Juppe, both warned their countries might be forced to pull their troops out of the U.N. peacekeeping mission in

Bosnia if that happened. The two provide the biggest peacekeeper contingents.

Christopher also held out the possibility of more air strikes on Serb targets.

He said as an incentive for the Muslim-Croat federation to accept the plan, the international community would give aid to rebuild the shattered land. He indicated the U.S. would be willing to send military support to enforce the peace settlement, but he declined to provide details.

If Bosnia's Muslim-led government does not cooperate, then little financial help will be forthcoming and it will likely lose support from its most important ally, the United States.

A number of peace plans have been proposed in unsuccessful efforts to end the conflict. This one may carry more weight because the United States and Russia have been fully involved rather than just the United Nations and European Union.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic told a meeting of ambassadors from Muslim countries that his government would not reject the plan out of hand, despite reservations it would not return enough land seized by Serbs.

The leader of the Bosnian Serbs, Radovan Karadzic, slammed the envisaged territorial divisions last week as "humiliating for the winning side."

His arrival in Geneva was delayed, apparently by negotiations with President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, the dominant state in what is left of the Yugoslav federation. Milosevic is accused of fomenting the war but is desperate to have sanctions on Yugoslavia lifted.

STATES REFUSE TO COMPLY

Federal drug program falls short

Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The goal was to crack down on drug use by coercing states into yanking driver's licenses from all drug offenders, no matter how minor the infraction. The stick wielded by Congress was a threatened loss of federal highway funds.

But it hasn't worked out that way.

Thirty states have defied that pressure, opting for a congressionally sanctioned alternative: Their legislatures passed resolutions declaring opposition to mandatory six-month license suspensions for drug offenders and governors of these states supported that position, the Federal Highway Administration says.

Only 14 states have complied by requiring the license suspensions.

Federal action is pending for another six states, putting at risk a portion of their federal highway funds this year. These states, including four that have moved to suspend licenses, can still get their full allotment if they comply by Oct. 1, said Mila Plosky, a highway administration official.

"It's turned out much better than I expected," said Kevin Zeese of the Drug Policy Foundation, which opposed the legislation and advocates treating drug abuse as a medical problem, not a crime.

"Back in 1990 when it was passed, I would have bet that less than five states would pass resolutions saying, 'No, thank-you,'" Zeese said in a recent interview.

But the legislation's sponsor is also happy with the results.

"It's worked out very, very well," said Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y.

The 14 states that imposed mandatory suspensions, he said, "are major population states." They include six of the 10 most populous states: New York, Texas, Florida, Pennsylvania, Ohio and New Jersey.

Even though 30 states rejected his plan, Solomon said, "We have made our point. We have gotten every state in the union to focus in on this terrible problem."

Although the legislation passed in 1990, at the height of then-President Bush's war on drugs, states did not risk losing money until the current fiscal year, which began last Oct. 1. States not in compliance were to lose 5 percent of their share of the four biggest highway programs. After Oct. 1, 1995, non-complying states are to lose 10 percent.

Associated Press

The following is a list of states complying with legislation regarding mandatory driver's license suspensions for drug offenders — either by passing such laws or by approving resolutions that they would not do so — and those out of compliance as compiled by the Federal Highway Administration:

• Fourteen states have passed laws requiring license suspensions: Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Iowa, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas and Virginia. The District of Columbia and Puerto Rico also passed such laws.

• Thirty states complied by means of legislative resolutions and gubernatorial certifications opposing mandatory license suspensions: Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

• Four states are not yet in compliance, but have a law under federal review: Georgia, Indiana, South Carolina and Wisconsin.

• Michigan is not in compliance, but passed a resolution which is under review.

• California is not in compliance and has not completed state action.

• Money now being withheld from states out of compliance: California, $51.8 million; Georgia, $17.1 million; Indiana, $11.9 million; Michigan, $14.4 million; South Carolina, $8.8 million.

As for Wisconsin, the FHWA originally thought it was in compliance. The state later said it needed to amend a law to carry out the new legislation. None of Wisconsin's highway money has been withheld.

FBI extends offices to E. Europe

Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

VIENNA — FBI Director Louis Freeh's Eastern European tour signals a new post-Cold War era that will see greater weight given to law enforcement in the conduct of foreign policy, the State Department's incoming European affairs chief says.

Nearing the conclusion of an unprecedented trip to Eastern Europe by an American FBI chief, Freeh has harvested new law enforcement compacts with police in Germany, Slovakia, the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Ukraine and Russia.

"We went to a completely new theater in Eastern Europe. No U.S. law enforcement has ever operated there," Freeh said as he flew to Vienna Tuesday from Moscow. "That's significant."

The aim of Freeh's 10-day tour was to set up a mechanism by which U.S. and Eastern European law enforcement agencies could work more closely together to combat international organized crime, drug smuggling, money laundering, hate crimes and trafficking in radioactive materials.

During his trip, the 44-year-old Freeh opened the FBI's first office in Moscow, its 22nd foreign location.

PATIENCE NEEDED ON TRADE TALKS

Wait before pressing Japan

The most recent upheaval in the Japanese government has many in Washington, D.C., anxious about the future of economic deregulation in and trade with Japan. Despite this flailing in search of a new course of action, the best thing for the United States to do is remain calm.

When the Liberal Democratic Party lost its 38-year hold on the Japanese parliament last year, shouts of joy resounded in the U.S. capital. The new prime minister's reformist coalition had been elected on promises to reduce political corruption and the bureaucratic vise grip on private business. The White House and others believe those reforms will help the United States export to Japan.

With somewhat foolish impatience, the administration continued trade talks, putting severe pressure on the new government to force Japanese business to buy American goods when it should have offered them breathing room in which to operate. The Clinton team has begun to wise up lately — the most recent round of negotiations has been lower profile and less demanding.

But last week, the second reform coalition in the Japanese Diet collapsed, replaced by an odd marriage of the still-strong LDP and their longtime archenemies, the Socialist Party. The reputation of the new Socialist prime minister, Tomiichi Murayama, is anti-American, protectionist and pro-North Korean.

Trade talks have vaporized swiftly into a state of limbo. The study on bureaucratic reform commissioned by the last government has ended up being written by the bureaucracy itself and (not surprisingly) makes no promises. The White House is understandably concerned about the immediate future of American relations with Japan, especially regarding trade.

What to do? The trade talks should probably be eliminated entirely. Scores of prominent economists argue that Japan's high trade surplus has to do more with domestic factors, like Japan's much higher private savings rate, than any regulatory barriers. Unfortunately, pressure from American industries hoping to gain from trade quotas will not allow the cessation of talks so they must be kept low-key and small-stakes. Mickey Kantor, the U.S. trade representative, has already hinted as much.

More pressure from the United States would only drive a potentially rogue Prime Minister Murayama further from the United States at a key point in the international environment. America needs Japan as a strong ally and intercessor in the Orient. Their help will be crucial to resolving the nuclear dilemma in North Korea.

Patience is necessary because this latest shock to Japan's political structure is an event of purely domestic politics on which the United States has (and should have) little influence. This is the last gasp of the old Japanese political order before the birth of a truly multiparty democracy. It is only a matter of time before a more secure reformist group obtains power. At that point the United States can press its deregulatory demands — if those demands still seem necessary.

NEED TO WORK TOGETHER

Don't abandon SAFEWALK

In response to student concerns about safety at the UI, an escort service called SAFEWALK was originally jointly sponsored by the Associated Residence Halls, the Hillcrest Association, the UI Student Assembly and the Department of Resident Services.

Students could call SAFEWALK for assistance and two trained volunteers would escort them between various campus buildings and the downtown area. Since its inception, nearly 450 people called and many judged the program a success.

Despite this success, the program will not be available in the fall. After UISA began providing all of SAFEWALK's funding a year ago, the Department of Resident Services felt that it was no longer their responsibility to provide office space for SAFEWALK in Hillcrest Residence Hall. As of yet, the UISA has not been able to find office space for the organization at the times needed for the program.

As a result of this decision, the SAFEWALK service will not be available again until spring 1995 unless office space can be found. The organization's planners hope to replace SAFEWALK next January with a new service called SAFERIDE that will transport students by van. While this may be a laudable goal, the program's sponsors need to re-evaluate all facets of the service and focus on student needs.

The first step should be to revive the original SAFEWALK. No expansion is needed — just maintain the original service. This program did well on its own and should not be eliminated.

The second step would be to create a separate program titled SAFERIDE using all the techniques SAFEWALK perfected. These two programs could work together when possible but have separate leaderships and divided responsibilities.

The characteristics of each group differ enough to make this a plausible suggestion. For example, one set of volunteers may need to be more familiar with off-campus housing whereas the other may need more experience in dealing with younger women. Some volunteers would need cars and clean driving records while others would need to be quick on their feet. These two services may accomplish the same goal — getting people home safely — but they are providing them for distinct target audiences.

The Associated Residence Halls, the Hillcrest Association, UISA and the Department of Resident Services should get their priorities in order and work together again. Take the best of all ideas, share them and divide the work.

As it stands there is more talk than action. Now at least 450 students will be worried about getting home this fall while the training SAFEWALK volunteers have received in the past goes to waste. These students should not be abandoned just because the Associated Residence Halls, the Hillcrest Association, UISA and Department of Resident Services can't get their acts together.

Moving on from being a hooker in Iowa

One year after I moved to Iowa, I became a hooker. I was really scared at first, scared of getting hurt and of being so close to all those people I did not know. After one season of trying it, I decided to move on to other similar activities.

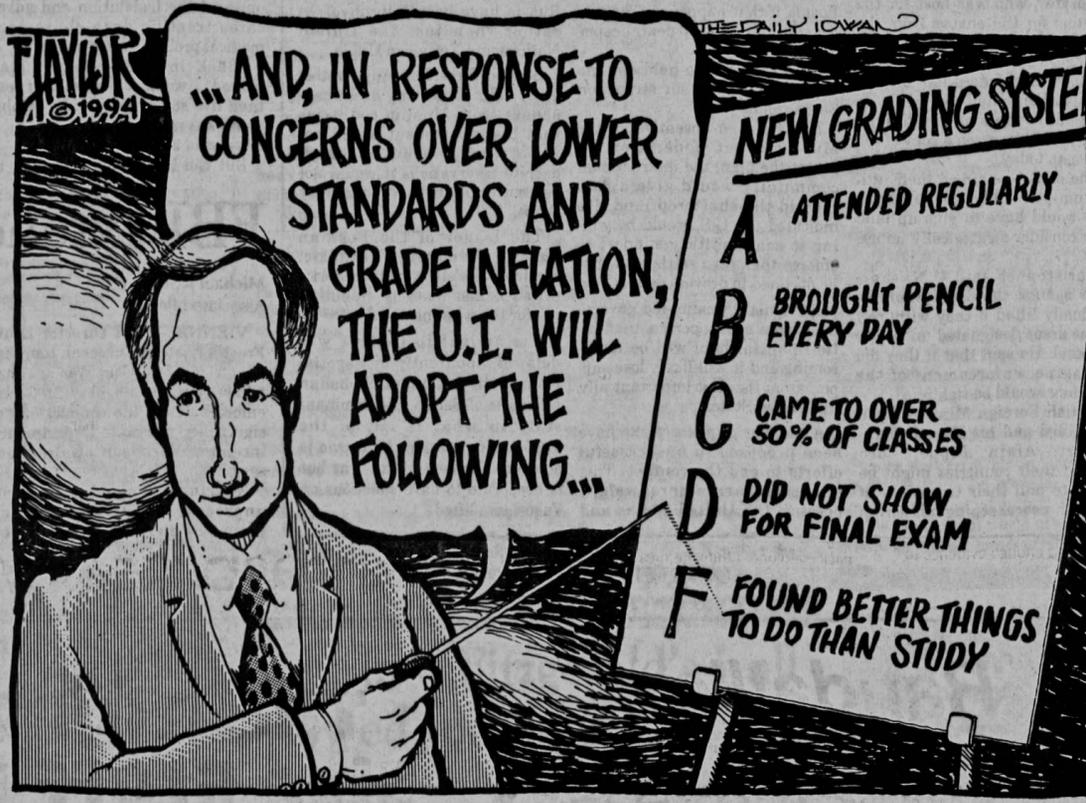

I am talking, of course, about rugby. For those of you who were thinking of a different extracurricular activity, a hooker in rugby is the person whose job it is to hook the ball with her foot from the middle of a scrum, which is basically a big pile of people who converge upon one another on the field.

While I did not enjoy the sport enough to continue playing, I gained something invaluable from my rugby season. Not getting buried under a bunch of hot sweaty women, not watching them drink to oblivion after the game, but experiencing my body in a new, exciting, subversive way.

I had always been afraid of team sports, was the last one picked in everything except spelling bees and did not feel comfortable in my body. A lot of this had to do with growing up as a girl. Never given the opportunity or the encouragement to play the way the boys did (joining Little League, hurling balls of all sizes, taking up space), I voluntarily remained on the borders of the world of physical activity. While I may never have verbalized it, I somehow understood that there was a way of being physical that was foreign to me. I wanted no part of it and it wanted none of me.

I was told I would be a good rugby player because I was short and stocky. I figured that if being short was an advantage somewhere, I wanted to go there. I got a glimpse of the foreign country of sport and physicality by joining this team. While for some boys, getting dirty and bruised, sliding on wet grass and tackling cleated runners may be a usual occurrence, for me it was a completely new way of being in my body. I learned that I could move this way despite the social constraints that both live within me and are systemic to our culture. I resented that it had taken me 25 years to realize that I, too, could have (some limited) access to the domain of sport.

GUEST OPINION • CHANG-SHIN KWACK

Reply to controversial views on North Korea

Recently The Daily Iowan carried two writings about U.S. policy on North Korea's nuclear development: a guest opinion by Jian Wang on June 22 and a June 27 letter by Darrell W. Yeaney in agreement with Wang. I believe these two writings have misled many readers of the DI and created misunderstanding about the situation in Korea.

First, it has been reported that school books in China state that the Korean War was started by a South Korean attack with the help of so-called American imperialists. However, recently the Russian government disclosed their secret documents about the Korean War and apologized to the South Korean government for their prior approval to North Korea for an attack. In that sense, Kim Il Sung of North Korea should be held accountable for the killing and destruction of the war.

Wang said, "It is difficult to demonize Kim Il Sung." Then Wang described Kim Il Sung as "a man of sense, of kindness and security of a grandfather next door." How could such a man order the killing of 115 people aboard a Korean Air Lines flight from Baghdad to Arab Emirate in 1987 with a time bomb? How could such a man have intended to kill President Chun Du-Whan of South Korea on a state visit to Burma in 1983 with time bombs that missed Chun but sacrificed 17 innocent people instead? How could such a man dig underground tunnels from north of the DMZ deep into South Korea in order to aid in a surprise attack against South Korea? All of these facts have been investigated and reported by impartial third parties.

Kim Il Sung has tried to have a dialogue with the United States in order to have the American army withdrawn from the Korean peninsula.

There have been many hints by North Korea in the region that it wanted to unify North and South Korea under a communist system by 1995. This would clearly be aided by an American withdrawal, and North Korea is willing to use the "nuclear development card" if necessary to force the U.S. forces out.

Second, Wang asserted that South Korea spends more on defense than North Korea and that the military might of South Korea — aided by the United States — is superior to that of North Korea. I don't know where Wang obtained that material or data. According to third-party statistics, North Korea has forces of a million soldiers while South Korea has only 655,000 troops. Around 33,000 U.S. forces are stationed in South Korea now. North Korea is much stronger than South Korea in every aspect of military power, such as tanks (South-1,650; North-3,700), fighter planes (South-520; North-850), submarines (South-0; North-25), etc. Instead of feeding their people, North Korea has developed a missile which can hit the entire Korean peninsula and some parts of Japan.

Third, Wang wrote, "North Korea attempted to open its door in economic fields and political areas such as the United Nations. North Korea also produced some positive agreement through South-North Korean dialogues." In fact, efforts were made by South Korea to continue dialogues and persuade North Korea to enter the United Nations simultaneously. In addition, North Korea has refused South Korea's offer to confirm what happened to tens of millions of dispersed families. North Korea has also disregarded the offer of South Korea to allow mutual visits and exchange of letters between dispersed families.

There will be a presidential summit between South and North Korea July 25-27 at the North Korean capital for the first time since the Korean peninsula was divided in 1945. However, many people in South Korea are doubtful that it will solve the nuclear crisis. It is uncertain when the second meeting will be held in Seoul, South Korea.

Fourth, Wang cited as an important political change that North Korea deleted Marxist-Leninist ideology from its constitution in 1992. However, this was done only in the hope that South Korea would in exchange abolish the 'Anti-Communist Law' of the country that prohibits the free activities of pro-North Korean communists in South Korea.

Fifth, Wang and Yeaney were wrong to ignore the grave consequences if North Korea were to develop nuclear weapons. If they did, countries in the region would be forced to develop nuclear weapons in response. China must make a stand against North Korean development of nuclear weapons if it is to be worthy of 'big-power' status in the world as a permanent member of the U.N. Security Council.

Sixth, Yeaney referred to Wang's article as an "editorial opinion." According to the editor of the DI, it is not the opinion of the DI, but the personal opinion of Wang. I want Yeaney to confirm this fact in order not to misguide the readers.

Seventh, it seems that Yeaney tried to collect many periodicals covering the Korean peninsula. However, I want to recommend to him to consider more unbiased materials from now on. People's Korea could well be pro-North Korean propaganda media. Yeaney asserted that North Korea announced its decision to withdraw from the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and rejected the IAEA inspection of its nuclear facilities because of "Team Spirit" military exercises of South Korea and the United States. In fact, South Korea and the United States conducted "Team Spirit" military exercises because of the increasing threat from North Korea. It is an exercise not for an attack, but for a defense. In addition, military experts of all neighboring countries were invited to check the character of those exercises.

Finally, I want to ask Wang and Yeaney not to forget this earnest request: Korean problems may be trivial and transient interests for foreigners, but they are life and death problems for 70 million Koreans. So when one wants to express opinions regarding Korean problems, one should try to gather information from impartial sources.

I hope that the nuclear problems of North Korea will be solved in the upcoming summit meeting of South and North Korea. I also hope that this summit meeting will be not only the historical cornerstone for a peaceful unification of the Korean peninsula, but also the opportunity to lessen the suffering of tens of millions of separated families in South and North Korea. The result of the summit meeting will entirely depend upon North Korea's attitudes. So long as North Korea does not abandon its unification strategy through military attack against South Korea, meetings and dialogues of any type will prove to be a waste of time, just as we witnessed in the past.

Paulson review flawed

To the Editor:
I am puzzled by Tad Paulson's review of the opening night of "Crimes of the Heart" that appeared in the June 24 edition. I am puzzled by his approach to the review and by some of his conclusions. Granted, I did not see the opening night show, but I did see the Thursday night show. I agree with Mr. Paulson in that it is a wonderful production worth seeing. I would add that I feel the community is very fortunate to have a local theater with such a strong tradition and consistently high-quality productions as it has with the University Theatres.
The show Thursday night was another example of rock solid production. I disagree with Mr. Paulson's assessment of the acting performances. While Liz Davis and Shelby Brammer were excellent, the performance I saw on Thursday night from Susan Lynskey was truly special. The play revolves around Babe Magrath and her situation and Ms. Lynskey's performance in the critical role captured the audience like none of the other performers. Half the audience, including myself, were in tears by the end, emotionally spent after closely following Babe's emotional plight that included scenes where she was a fancy, free little girl to scenes with suicidal tendencies. Ms. Lynskey's performance gripped the audience and made this particular evening at the theater a very special one.

But again, kudos to the entire cast. Excellent performances simply bowled over somewhat muddled direction. More than anything else, "Crimes of the Heart" is a play of characters; the plot and action are almost secondary to the change and discoveries that the characters experience. And in the most essential role, Susan Lynskey was right on with an honest and powerful performance that challenges the audience and stares the theatergoer right in the face.
I guess Mr. Paulson blinked.

Reader likes DI editorial decisions

To the Editor:
I was recently concerned about a letter from Douglas S. Russell published in the June 27 DI. He criticized the selection of certain national and world events being printed on the front page. According to his letter, it seems Mr. Russell would like to see more local news on the cover of The Daily Iowan. It is my opinion, though, that The Daily Iowan should not print more local news on the front page. In fact, I think the paper should print less local news in the top priority spot. Just because The Daily Iowan is an Iowa City-based newspaper does not mean it should devote itself primarily to Iowa City news. There are much more important and interesting events occurring outside of Iowa City on a daily basis. Let's be honest, 360 days out of the year, the most excitement here is a shoplifting or public intoxication arrest. If you want to know what's going on in Iowa City, Mr. Russell, just step out of your house and open your eyes. So keep up the good work, Daily Iowan, and inform us of the interesting and important news in the world.

Improve dam safety

To the Editor:
We read about another death by drowning at the roller dam, unfortunately something like an annual event in eastern Iowa. We read that one bystander called it "stupid." Maybe so, but how smart is this design? They have the same type of dams in Cedar Rapids and the same types of problems. Even the rescue workers are at a grave risk.
I'll bet you a dollar to a doughnut hole that somebody out here can solve the problem with a redesign, a safety retrofit. And the only reason the problem doesn't get solved is the average person doesn't know who's in charge of the river and who owns those dam dams. So there's no pressure for a solution, and the construction money is long since spent and the experts on to other things.

If you kept something like this in your back yard, you'd be in big trouble the first time some neighbor kid drowned and disappeared for days.

Yet the state, or the city, or the university or whoever can go blithely on as if nothing happened here. I suggest that Tom Riley find out who the owners are in a hurry and sue big time for maintaining a hazard.

Therefore, may we propose that The Daily Iowan sponsor a contest to improve on these killer dams which needlessly take the lives of hapless river users. If you can't get a federal grant to reward the winners, then give them a dollar or a doughnut hole. Who is going to do it?

More on Simpson story

To the Editor:
The events of the past few days concerning the O.J. Simpson debacle have left me dazed and confused as well as more than just a little sad, mad and disgusted.

The fact that "the Juice" is a has-been pro football jock and is currently a "larger-than-life" public figure seems to have clouded the judgment of America.

O.J. Simpson is accused of murder. After LA authorities were absolutely sure they had enough evidence to arrest, try and convict him, they issued a warrant for his arrest.

The LA Police Department then requested that the accused please turn himself in. O.J. Simpson acted like someone guilty and fled. Our dauntless law enforcement officials escorted him on a 5 1/2-hour-long driving tour of the greater LA metro area.

If this in itself were not laughable enough, to add insult to many injuries, every "news" team in the country forced everyone to sit by and watch idiot cops "chase" O.J. and company at 35-60 mph while moronic spectators lined the route and tried to wave to the cameras and yell "Hi Mom!" on national TV.

This saga is a page right out of Mel Brooks' "Blazing Saddles," where the "good people" of Rock Ridge were about to mob lynch the (black) star of the movie. Thinking on his feet he whips out his gun, grabs himself by the collar, shoves the gun in his throat and yells, "Stand back or the nigger gets it!" whereupon everyone in the room freezes. The mayor yells back, "Get back everyone; I think he means it!" The star then backs out of the room, looks over and deadpans into the camera, "Boy, are these guys dumb!"

Bravo, O.J.! In one fell swoop, you have given credence to the epithets of "There's a sucker born every minute," "The whole world is a stage" and "This could only happen in America." The most irritating part is that people in other parts of the country like to think themselves as intellectually and morally superior to the "backwood hicks" in the Midwest. Well, this one will give us

P.S. Against the grief of this young man's untimely death, let's put our honest effort at solving the problem or at least reducing the risk.

"backwood hicks" enough ammunition to combat the fallacy for a good number of years to come, providing, of course, that we life forms known as the human race are intelligent enough to last a good number of years.

Kind of makes you wonder, doesn't it?

GUEST OPINION • KARLINE MCLAIN

Disagreement on animal rights

Jim Meisner's editorial in the June 27 issue of The Daily Iowan, "A Dog's Life," addresses two separate issues. The first issue is the UI's new policy to purchase dogs only from dealers that have been approved by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Meisner justifies animal experimentation by citing an overabundance of animals: "There are enough dogs and other common animals for every common purpose, and animal testing and experiments serve a purpose." In response to this statement, I would like to make a couple of points.

First, if there is an overpopulation of animals within an area, then there is an obvious need for education in that area. Pet owners should be taught how to take proper care of their pets, which includes having them neutered or spayed. However, the overpopulation of animals in an area does by no means justify animal vivisection.

Secondly, according to In Defense of Animals (IDA), approximately 5 million pets were reported missing in 1993. Of that 5 million, they estimate that half of those pets were stolen. Nearly 2.5 million animals stolen means a lot of broken hearts and lonely people. This figure is correlated by Action 81, an anti-pet-theft group. The UI's new policy is a victory, albeit small, for animal rights activists and pet owners alike because it will help prevent pets from the unnecessary pain and suffering experienced in animal experimentation.

The second issue that Meisner addresses is animal experimentation because he sees it as a safety device for testing new products and resulting in medical breakthroughs. In these beliefs, Meisner shows himself to be both uninformed and out-of-date. Again, I would like to make a couple of points in response to these beliefs.

"One thousand cuddly rabbits should die before a single human goes blind because a brand of eye drops wasn't completely tested." This statement is evidence of Meisner's uninformed belief that animal experimentation serves as a thorough safety device with which to test products before they are introduced into the market. In fact, technology has turned up several alternatives to the cruel and insensitive tests often performed on lab animals. One such alternative, Eytex, replaces the Draize eye irritancy test which Meisner mentioned.

According to "Animal Liberation," by Peter Singer, "In April 1989, Avon announced that it had validated tests using a specially developed synthetic material called Eytex as a replacement for the Draize test. As a result ... Avon ceased to use the Draize test." After Avon, several companies followed suit in replacing Draize with Eytex. Some of these are Mary Kay Cosmetics, Amway and Faberge, and Revlon is currently working to eliminate all animal testing as well. It is not necessary for one rabbit to die, nor for one human being to be blinded, in order to introduce a new product into the market.

"If a UI grad student can cure cancer tomorrow by experimenting on dogs today, then it will have been worth the price." This statement displays Meisner's out-of-date view of animal experimentation. Animal experimentation is progressively being seen as an inaccurate and unrepresentative means of testing new products and searching for medical breakthroughs. Today, cell cultures, computer technology and chemical tests — to name just a few alternatives — are proving much more accurate than animal experimentation and much more humane.

I urge Jim Meisner and all other advocates of animal vivisection to rethink their ingrained beliefs — it could mean a better life for the animals as well as for ourselves.

Don't try to 'cure' homosexuality

To the Editor:
Conservative columnist and former assistant to Jerry Falwell Cal Thomas recently wrote a column extolling those organizations which promise to change gays into ex-gays.

The idea of "curing" homosexuality has a long and unpleasant history. In this century, doctors and moralists (the Cal Thomas' of earlier times) have tried castration, lobotomy, hormone injection and aversion therapy. Virtually everyone now agrees that any effort to reverse sexual orientation is not only futile, it is psychologically harmful. In 1990, the American Psychological Association condemned efforts to change sexual orientation.

The fundamentalist-run ex-gay organizations do a real disservice. They get people to suppress their sexual feelings and needs. With enough pressure, you can change almost any behavior superficially. Certain people can change their sexual behavior, but no data supports the idea that you can change sexual orientation. These ex-gays continue to have same-sex dreams, fantasies and arousal.

There is research that supports the idea that most people who try to change their orientation feel worse about themselves. There are people who say they feel better because of the social acceptance, or because they are making their parents happy or their religion, but they carry a lot of guilt for their homosexual feelings.

The whole motivation behind the movement to change gays is a political one. It's fundamentalist religion and conservative politics dressed up in a lab coat.

After the lunch break, attorneys argued a defense motion to throw out all evidence seized at Simpson's house. The defense contends detectives illegally scaled the wall of Simpson's estate without a warrant the morning after the slayings and that when they obtained a warrant a few hours later, they did so by misrepresenting the situation.

In court papers filed to counter that argument, prosecutors revealed for the first time that there was a path of bloody shoe prints from the dead bodies to an alley behind Brown Simpson's condo.

Detective Mark Fuhrman, who scaled the wall, testified that police, who had just come from the bloody crime scene, spotted blood on a Bronco outside the estate and feared there might be trouble.

"I said, 'We've got an emergency. We've got a problem. We don't know if we have people inside that are in danger, dying, bleeding to death. We have to do something. I don't care whose house it is, we have to do something,'" Fuhrman said.

Once inside, Fuhrman testified, he found a glove on a walkway next to a guest house that matched one found at the crime scene, and Kaelin told him he had heard a loud thump the night before coming from the area where the glove was found.

The hearing adjourned until today with Fuhrman still on the stand.

In morning testimony, Park told of arriving early at Simpson's mansion on June 12 for a previously arranged 10:45 p.m. pickup, set to take Simpson to the airport.

Park said he repeatedly buzzed Simpson's intercom by the front gate from around 10:40 to 10:50 p.m. but didn't get an answer until around 11 p.m. Moments before, he said he saw a tall black person slip into the front door of the estate.

Park said the mystery figure was black, about 6 feet and 200 pounds, dressed in dark clothes and "was walking pretty fast." He couldn't tell if it was a man or woman but acknowledged the build was probably that of a man.

Asked by Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark about Simpson's behavior when he came down, Park said, "I never met him before, and everything seemed OK to me." He said he saw no sign of injury to Simpson.

During the ride to the airport, Simpson complained two or three times of being hot and put his window down and turned the air conditioning on, Park testified.

Under cross-examination, defense attorney Robert Shapiro pointed out that Park had described the black person as a black male at the grand jury. He also quizzed him on apparent discrepancies in his testimony on the time that events happened.

Kaelin testified he chatted with Simpson at least four times the day of the murders.

After returning from a golf game that midafternoon, Simpson spoke of his failed marriage, and after returning from his daughter's dance recital, he mentioned the tight dresses that his ex-wife and her friends were wearing, Kaelin said.

Later in the evening, Kaelin testified, Simpson came to his room and asked to borrow some small bills because he had only $100 bills and he wanted to tip a skycap at the airport.

When Simpson said he was going to McDonald's for a hamburger, Kaelin said he asked to go along. Simpson drove his Rolls-Royce through the drive-through and ate his hamburger behind the wheel.

Kaelin said they returned home about 9:45 p.m.

House news conference.

Gray said Haitians who apply at U.S. offices inside Haiti will be allowed to come to the United States if they are granted refugee status based on a well-founded fear of persecution.

In an earlier change of a policy that he had adopted from the previous administration, Clinton announced on May 8 that Haitians with a well-founded fear of persecution would be allowed to come to the United States to pursue their asylum claims or go to a third country.

But a surge in refugees turned into a tidal wave Monday with the U.S. Coast Guard intercepting 3,247 Haitians in 70 boats, doubling the previous single-day high set in May 1992. More than 100 Haitians died when a boat capsized. Nearly 700 had been picked up by midday Tuesday and hundreds more were expected, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The flow has surged as the Clinton administration has tightened economic sanctions against Haiti in an effort to force out the military leaders who ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September 1991.

Gray said the first safe-haven site would be in Panama and that agreement in principle also had been reached with the Caribbean nations of Dominica and Antigua. He said the agreement with Panama was for a six-month period.

In Barbados, Antigua Prime Minister Lester Bird said Tuesday his country will allow the United States to process 2,000 Haitians during six months. The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees will operate the center, he said.

Gray noted that any "safe haven" will be temporary and that the Haitians will be repatriated when the crisis in their country is over. Asked about the possibility of an invasion of Haiti, Gray said, "There is no military invasion imminent." He defined imminent as the next several days.

Nevertheless, he said that a military option "is on the table."

Gray said the sudden deployment of the warships was necessary because of "an increasing deterioration" in the situation in Haiti "that potentially poses a threat to the safety of Americans."

Gray made the announcement after President Clinton discussed Haiti on Tuesday morning with his top foreign policy advisers, including Defense Secretary William Perry and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Pentagon spokesman Dennis Boxx said the new deployment will bring the number of U.S. warships in the region to about a dozen and would enable the military force "to deal with any contingency."

The 2,000 Marines on board the four ships are specially trained to conduct emergency evacuations under hostile conditions.

The sailors and warships headed for Haiti had just returned to the United States on June 24, having just completed a six-month deployment in the Mediterranean Sea, in the Adriatic Sea off Yugoslavia and in the waters off Somalia.

Gray argued that the new "safe haven" policy was a continuation of Clinton's announcement on May 8 that Haitian boat people would no longer be forcibly repatriated to Haiti.

The new policy came less than three weeks after the hospital ship USNS Comfort, anchored near Kingston, Jamaica, began to carry out the asylum interviews called for under Clinton's May 8 plan.

DANCE LAW

Anyone found guilty of breaking the dance hall laws would be fined up to $25 or put in jail for up to 30 days if they didn't pay the fine.

In 1972, the dancing laws were connected with liquor licenses, although the intent of the law was not stated. City codes were revamped this year, but the dancing permits are still on the books.

"I can't remember any controversy over it in my 11 years as city attorney," Jay Honohan, city attorney in 1972, said. "Everyone just took it for granted, both the bar owners and City Council."

Gentry said there haven't been any dance permit violations in her 17 years as city attorney. Council member Naomi Novick said she doesn't know why the city requires dance permits.

Honohan speculated the law could be tied to fire regulations, but Iowa City Fire Department Chief Jim Pumfrey said occupancy checks by the fire department follow the same routine for all liquor establishments regardless of whether they have dance floors.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White was a City Council member in 1972 and said he couldn't remember why dancing permits weren't repealed.

"It's a bit of an anachronism in modern society," White said. "It grew out of a time when cities used dance permits as a vehicle for regulating liquor establishments before there were liquor laws."

ARAFAT

and neither was real.

Crowds surged and roared as Arafat's motorcade moved through Jericho. But with security bordering on paranoia, only the most motivated turned out to hear his speech.

Since self-rule began on May 4, Jericho prepared for Arafat to speak from the city hall balcony, over the square. On Monday night, the venue was changed to the bus terminal at the edge of town.

The crowds who came were herded into a compound built by Israel for processing travelers coming from Jordan. It was surrounded by barbed wire and backed with a second fence.

It stirred images of the Negev Desert prison, where many Palestinians have spent time.

Ahmed Nasser, 38, an electrical engineer, did not miss the connection. A U.S. citizen with a home in Warren, Ohio, he now works in Nablus.

"This does remind us of jail," he said, "and it hurts us a little. Soon I hope all the wires everywhere are taken down, and we can all live free."

In an instant, his wish came true. Arafat's helicopter arrived from Gaza, and young men rushed forward.

Barbed wire slashed at clothes and flesh. Children passed out in heat and panic. Security police threw up their hands in frustration.

The acoustics were awful. The overly enthusiastic made a lot of noise. And it was hot. Before long, the sparse crowd seemed more interested in the ice cream vendors — and the exits.

Buster Douglas reportedly in diabetic coma

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Former heavyweight champion James "Buster" Douglas was reportedly hospitalized Tuesday in a diabetic coma.

WBNS-TV, citing no sources, said Douglas, 34, was upgraded from poor to stable condition at Grant Medical Center Tuesday afternoon.

The hospital refused comment and hospital spokeswoman Karen Waldbillig said the family asked that no information be released.

Unidentified relatives of the former boxer had told the station Douglas was taken to the hospital Monday and had slipped in and out of a coma since then. They said Tuesday afternoon that his condition was improving.

It was not known whether Douglas previously had been diagnosed as a diabetic or which form of the disease he might have. In some cases, if diabetes goes untreated, the victim may go into a diabetic coma, which can lead to death.

Douglas' father, Bill Douglas, could not be reached for comment. A man who answered the phone at Bill Douglas' home Tuesday morning identified himself as a friend of the family and said he knew nothing of Douglas' condition. He would not confirm that Douglas was in the hospital. There was no answer at the home Tuesday afternoon.

Messages seeking comment from the fighter's business manager, Lawrence Nallie, were not returned.

Douglas took home a $24.1 million purse from the Holyfield fight. He finished his career with a record of 30-5-1. He used some of his winnings to build a community center near the east side neighborhood where he grew up.

ABC's ratings hit record high for American soccer

The United States' 1-0 loss to Brazil in the World Cup Monday drew a 10.4 overnight rating and ABC estimated 32 million people watched the game in the United States, a record for an American soccer game.

Nielsen Media Research said Tuesday that the game got a 27 percent share in the 31 major markets surveyed for the overnight ratings. The rating is the percentage of televisions tuned to a program; the share is the percentage watching among those televisions on at the time.

The Fourth of July game at Stanford Stadium, the first beyond the opening round for the Americans in 64 years, is on track to break the U.S. rating record for soccer, set June 26 when the United States lost to Romania 1-0 in the first round of the World Cup.

Bargaining agreement talks to resume today

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball players are expected to present their opening contract demands when negotiations for a new collective bargaining agreement resume today.

At the session, the Major League Baseball Players Association is expected to ask that the threshold for salary arbitration be lowered to two years, the level from 1974 through 1985. It then was raised to three years, but the top 17 percent by service in the 2-to-3 year group have been eligible since after the 1990 season.

The union also is expected to ask for raises in the minimum salary, currently $109,000.

Management is demanding a salary cap from the players' association, and the union's executive board will consider setting a strike date when it meets Monday in Pittsburgh.

Three arrested in Escobar murder

Javier Baena
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Three people involved in a confrontation with soccer star Andres Escobar shortly before he was murdered face drug and weapons charges, police said Tuesday.

Escobar was shot to death because he scored an own-goal in Colombia's World Cup loss to the United States.

Police initially said the two men and a woman were suspected of participating in the murder. But the three, who had harangued Escobar before he was shot, were cleared of responsibility after questioning, police said.

They remained in custody because police said they found 55 pounds of cocaine, two revolvers and a submachine gun in the two Medellin homes where they were arrested on Monday.

Escobar was shot early Saturday in the parking lot of a bar in Medellin, Colombia's third-largest city. Police arrested two suspects over the weekend, one of whom confessed to shooting Escobar, said Gen. Octavio Vargas Silva, director of the national police.

At an emotional funeral Sunday, thousands of mourners chanted "Justice! Justice!" and listened to eulogies from President Cesar Gaviria, among others. Despite Colombia's history of violence, Escobar's death shocked a nation that reveres its sports stars.

The three suspects arrested in Medellin on Monday were at the scene of Escobar's death with Humberto Munoz, who confessed to shooting the soccer star, police said. They were identified as brothers Humberto and Hernan Dario Velez Correa and their cousin, Luz Mila Correa.

Munoz worked as a driver for another suspect, rancher Santiago Gallon Henao, who allegedly bet heavily on the Colombian team and was upset at having lost.

Police said they were investigating whether drug traffickers planned Escobar's death.

Police said earlier that the murder was not premeditated and was not linked to drug cartels or death threats against other members of the Colombian soccer team.

DANA POINT, Calif. — For the U.S. World Cup team, Tuesday was like the last day of summer camp.

By midday, equipment bags were piled on the sidewalk outside the entrance of the Dana Point Resort. Less than 24 hours after their elimination by Brazil, players were scattering to resume their lives.

Alexi Lalas was off to New York to tape "Late Show with David Letterman." Tony Meola was getting ready for a tryout with the Kansas City Chiefs and a movie reading as a pirate in a film with Geena Davis and Michael Douglas.

Some were off to Las Vegas for a few days of relaxation. Others were talking contracts with European clubs.

"Yesterday, going home on the plane, guys were asking, 'What are you going to do now?' That's the difficult part," Meola was saying as players gathered for one last meal together. "We were together so long."

DARRYL STRAWBERRY

Strawberry feeding off fan support

Mel Reisner

PEORIA, Ariz. — In his first game since admitting to a substance abuse problem three months ago, Darryl Strawberry seemed to enjoy the cheers more than anything else.

"To have the fans support someone like myself who has been through a lot, it's nice to know that there are people who care," Strawberry said after going 2-for-4 with a home run for the Triple-A Phoenix Firebirds in Monday night's 9-7 loss to Vancouver.

Strawberry, an eight-time All-Star trying to come back a second time from substance abuse, spent four weeks at the Betty Ford Center after admitting on April 4 he still had a problem. He was later released by the Los Angeles Dodgers after a negotiated settlement, then signed with the San Francisco Giants June 19.

His first game since the end of spring training showed he can still hit like the Strawberry of old.

"It's there," Strawberry said of the swing that has produced 290 home runs and 869 RBI in an 11-year career with the New York Mets and Dodgers. "It's there, but I would like to continue to work on it."

Strawberry is scheduled to stay with the Firebirds through the major-league All-Star game July 12. The Giants will then decide when he'll be ready to return to the majors.

"We're encouraged by the whole attitude and enthusiasm Darryl has shown," Giants baseball operations vice president Tony Siegle said. "This is a good training ground."

In his first at-bat, he singled before hitting a 410-foot homer in front of a huge crowd of 11,438 at Peoria Sports Complex. He struck out his next time up and popped out to shortstop in the sixth.

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Howard Johnson tied the game with a three-run, home run and Andres Galarraga hit his 23rd homer to cap a six-run seventh inning Tuesday night as Colorado rocked the Chicago Cubs 9-6.

The Cubs led 5-2 when Joe Girardi singled and Vinny Castilla walked off Chuck Crim (3-3) before Johnson hit his 10th homer and fourth as a pinch-hitter this season.

Eric Young's subsequent single produced thunderous boos for Crim and Cubs manager Tom Trebelhorn, who called in Dan Plesac from the bullpen.

Young stole second as Mike Kingery struck out and Dante Bichette punched a double into the right field corner for his 77th RBI to make it 6-5.

Galarraga then launched a towering two-run shot to left that landed against a house across the street from Wrigley Field for an 8-5 lead.

Blaise Ilesley, just called up from the minors, wild pitched in another Rockies run in the eighth.

Chicago's Mark Grace hit a three-run homer in the first off Kevin Ritz (2-4) and Sammy Sosa had a solo shot in the third.

Colorado scored twice against Kevin Foster in the second as Galarraga walked, stole second and scored on Girardi's single. Nelson Liriano doubled in Girardi.

Steve Buechele doubled in the sixth to give Chicago a 5-2 lead.

Ritz went six innings, allowing six hits and five runs with four walks and six strikeouts.

Willie Blair pitched the last three innings for his third save. He was touched in the ninth for a run-scoring double by Jose Hernandez.

Astros 3, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Pete Harnisch and two relievers combined on a four-hitter and Steve Finley had a home run and two RBI as the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

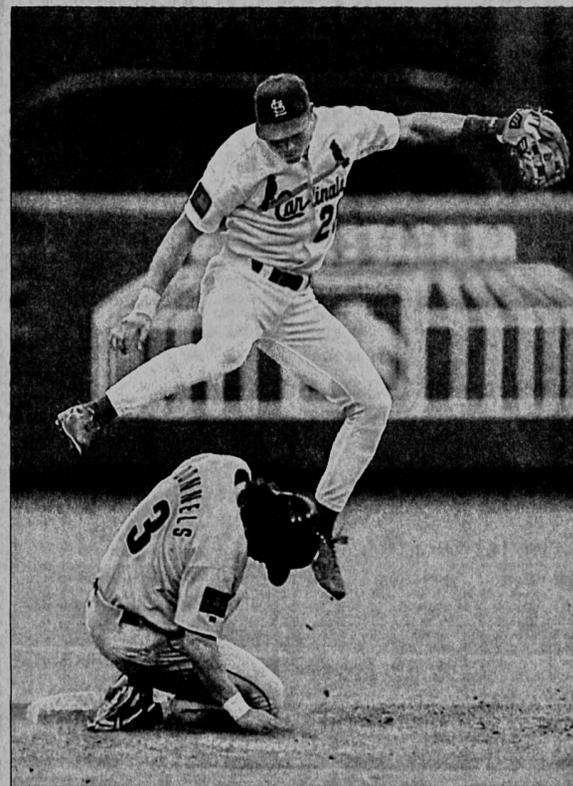

Craig Biggio led off the game with his fifth home run for the Astros, who have won four in a row and six of seven. The Cardinals lost their fourth straight game to fall to .500 and eight games back of the National League Central-leading Cincinnati Reds, their largest deficit of the season.

Harnisch (4-4) allowed only a fluke run in the second inning to win on the road for the first time this season. Harnisch, who entered the game 0-2 away from the Astrodome with 14 earned runs allowed in 11 innings, gave up a run on four hits with three strikeouts and a walk in six innings.

Todd Jones pitched two hitless innings and John Hudek pitched the ninth for his 13th save as three Astros pitchers combined on a four-hitter, retiring the last 12 Cardinals hitters.

Cardinals starter Vicente Palacios (1-7) is 0-5 in his last seven starts despite pitching effectively in five of them. In eight innings, Palacios allowed three runs on six hits, with five strikeouts and two walks.

Biggio homered on Palacios' fourth pitch of the game and Finley led off the fourth with his ninth home run, tying his career high. Houston added a run in the sixth when Harnisch doubled over the head of center fielder Ray Lankford and scored on Finley's sacrifice fly two batters later.

St. Louis Cardinals' Geronimo Pena leaps over a sliding Houston Astros' Chris Donnels as he completes the first half of a double play Tuesday in St. Louis. Houston won er.

The Cardinals got their only run when Lankford's pop fly fell between shortstop Andy Stankiewicz and left fielder Luis Gonzalez for a triple to start the second. Stankiewicz did a somersault on the play after a near-collision, sprained a ligament in his right knee, and was taken out of the game.

The next batter, Todd Zeile, delivered a sacrifice fly for his 13th RBI against Houston pitching. Zeile has 41 RBI overall.

WORLD CUP

last meal together. "We were together so long."

"The last time, the situation was we were together for two weeks and would go home for a week. Everybody was used to going their own way. We've built relationships that go far beyond soccer and far beyond sports."

Because they'll be with clubs in different parts of the globe, the core group isn't likely to gather again until next summer for the regional championship, the CONCACAF Gold Cup, or possibly the South American championship, the America Cup.

This team won't play another all-important game until 1996 or

'97, when qualifying for the 1998 World Cup begins. This time, the Americans had an automatic berth as the host nation. In 1998, when the tournament expands to 32 teams, the North and Central American and Caribbean region probably will get three spots.

"I'm excited," John Harkes said. "I think about it already."

Of the six veterans of 1990, five are still under 30: Meola, Harkes, Tab Ramos, Eric Wynalda and Marcelo Balboa. Alexi Lalas, Mike Sorber and Cobi Jones are under 25. Claudio Reyna, regarded as the best young player in the country, is just 20.

"The nucleus here on this side is brilliant," Harkes said. "There's a lot of players coming up through the ranks as well."

General manager Bill Nuttall said Tuesday he's received offers from European clubs for five players under contract to the U.S. Soccer Federation: Paul Caligiuri, Lalas, Sorber, Jones and Joe-Max Moore. Eight players already are with European clubs. Reyna and Frank Klopas, who are free to make their own deals, are negotiating, too.

"I'd like to have all the players over in Europe now," Harkes said. "It made me a better player the last four years."

"If they want to be competitive, if they want to be the best in this sport, they have to play with the best," Harkes said.

Baggio lifts Italy with penalty kick

Barry Wilner
Associated Press

Ninety minutes weren't enough to decide either World Cup second-round game on Tuesday. Italian superstar Roberto Baggio scored in the 89th minute to lift his team into a tie, then connected on a penalty kick in the 102nd minute, giving Italy a 2-1 overtime victory against Nigeria. Mexico and Bulgaria needed even more time to settle their match, with Bulgaria winning 3-1 on penalty kicks after a 1-1 tie.

"We have recovered the real Roberto Baggio, the player we always wanted to have on our team," Italian soccer chief Antonio Matarrese said after his team rallied despite playing down a man for 44 minutes.

"I'd like to kiss the entire nation of Bulgaria," goalie Borislav Mihaylov said after stopping three shots in the penalty kick shootout. "This is the happiest I have been in my life."

Italy plays Spain at Foxboro Stadium in the quarterfinals on Saturday. Bulgaria takes on defending champion Germany on Sunday at Giants Stadium.

Also on Saturday, Brazil meets the Netherlands at Dallas and Romania faces Sweden at Stanford, Calif.

Baggio, the 1993 player of the year, was invisible for most of the tournament. He surfaced in Italy's direst moment.

"We already were at the airport, we were mentally prepared to return home," Baggio said after his heroics. "I took them all down from the plane."

Saberhagen flirts with perfect game

SAN FRANCISCO — All-Star Bret Saberhagen allowed two hits over eight innings and hit a run-scoring double as the New York Mets beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2.

Saberhagen (9-4) struck out eight and walked none while pitching a perfect game for six innings. Darren Lewis led off the seventh with his second home run of the season, and Dave Martinez led off the eighth with his third homer, making it 3-2.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead in the first on Jeff Kent's RBI single, and knocked out starter John Burkett (5-7) with a two-run sixth on consecutive two-out doubles by Ryan Thompson, Saberhagen and Jose Vizcaino. It was Saberhagen's first career RBI.

John Franco pitched the ninth for his 19th save.

Dodgers 2, Expos 1, 10 innings
LOS ANGELES — Raul Mondesi homered in the 10th inning off John Wetteland after Montreal starter Jeff Fassero had retired 22 consecutive Dodgers hitters.

Wetteland (2-6) started the 10th and got Tim Wallach on a fly to right before Mondesi drove a 2-1 pitch to right field for his 14th home run and fifth in his last 13 games.

Rookie Ismael Valdes (1-0) earned his first major league victory in his seventh appearance. The right-hander pitched two perfect innings and has allowed only one hit over his first 9 1/3 innings.

Brett Butler scored from second on a wild pitch in the first inning by the left-handed Fassero, who retired 22 in a row after a bloop single by Rafael Bourgnal with two outs in the second.

Pedro Astacio held the Expos hitless through 4 1/3 innings before Lenny Webster drove a 3-1 pitch to left field for his fourth home run, tying the score 1-1.

Pirates 3, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Jay Bell had a two-run triple and the Pittsburgh Pirates held off the Atlanta Braves in a game delayed three times by rain for nearly four hours before being called after 6 1/2 innings in the opener of a scheduled doubleheader Tuesday night.

The Pirates, 39-41 overall, beat the Braves for the sixth time in seven meetings this season. Atlanta has the best record in the majors at 50-30.

The second game was postponed because of the inclement weather and the two clubs were scheduled to play a doubleheader on Wednesday beginning at 4:05 p.m. EDT.

Bell had one of only two hits off John Smoltz (6-8), who went seven innings. The Atlanta right-hander gave up three runs — two earned — walked four and struck out six.

Pittsburgh starter Denny Neagle (8-8) gave up four hits — three to David Justice — one run, three walks, and struck out five in six innings as the Pirates snapped a three-game losing streak.

The game was delayed by rain for a total of three hours and 55 minutes. The first delay was for one hour and 53 minutes before the first pitch, the second of one hour and 15 minutes came after the Pirates batted in the second inning. The third delay of 47 minutes resulted in the umpires calling the game. It came with the Braves coming to bat in the seventh inning.

Rangers 4, Indians 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Kevin Brown, who spent the morning with his ailing father in Georgia, tied a career high with 10 strikeouts Tuesday night and pitched the Texas Rangers past the Cleveland Indians.

Brown left the team Monday to be with his father, Gerald, who had a heart attack at home. There were doubts that Brown would make it back for his start, but he took an afternoon flight to Texas to take his regular turn in the rotation.

Brown (6-8) gave up seven hits and walked one in his second complete game of the season. It was his first win since June 10.

Texas overcame three errors by third baseman Dean Palmer and won for the fifth time in six games. The Rangers ended Cleveland's five-game winning streak.

The first five Rangers in the sixth inning singled off Mark Clark (9-3), who was 7-1 in his previous 10 starts. Palmer singled home a run and Rusty Greer's RBI single broke a 3-3 tie.

The Indians broke a 2-2 tie in the fourth. Jim Thome walked with out, went to third on Palmer's throwing error and scored on Wayne Kirby's single.

The Rangers took a 2-0 lead in the first. Jeff Frye and David Hulse led off with singles, Jose Canseco had an RBI grounder and Will Clark had a sacrifice fly on a ball that replays showed center fielder Kenny Lofton actually trapped.

Reds 9, Marlins 4
MIAMI — Kevin Mitchell hit two of Cincinnati's five home runs as the Reds won their fifth straight game and sent the Marlins to their fourth straight loss.

Pete Schourek (4-1) pitched six scoreless innings, striking out four and scattering six hits.

Cincinnati jumped ahead 2-0 in the first as Barry Larkin and Hal Morris hit back-to-back homers off Florida starter Charlie Hough (5-8).

Hough also allowed home runs in the second inning to Tony Fernandez and in the fourth to Mitchell. The four homers were the most allowed by a Marlins pitcher this season.

Hough (5-8), who completed only four innings, has lost his last four starts and has not pitched more than 4 1/3 innings since June 14.

Blue Jays 14, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Seldom-used Darnell Coles hit three home runs a day after dislocating his finger and the Toronto Blue Jays routed the Minnesota Twins.

Coles hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning and solo shots in the eighth and ninth. Coles had the second three-homer game of his career, having done it in 1987 with Pittsburgh. He became the sixth player this season to homer three times in a game.

Coles dislocated the little finger on his left hand Monday night in Kansas City. He began the game batting just .145 (8-for-55) with one home run and six RBI.

Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston checked before the game and Coles said he was OK to play. Coles started at third base while Ed Sprague, Toronto's regular third baseman, was in California with his wife, who gave birth Monday.

Royals 10, Brewers 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bob Hamelin drove in three runs with a homer and one of Kansas City's four doubles as the Royals beat Milwaukee and handed Bill Wegman his first loss of the season.

Wegman (6-1) was stopped one victory short of the Brewers' record for consecutive wins to open a season. Milwaukee hit six doubles, and the combined 10 doubles were one short of the Royals' record for one game.

Rusty Meacham (1-1) got the victory in relief of Mark Gubicza, his first victory since beating the Brewers 8-7 on June 6, 1993. Meacham went two innings and gave up one hit, striking out four and walking none.

Billy Brewer went 1 2/3 innings for his third save.

Wegman, who has already surpassed his 1993 victory total by one, went six innings, giving up 11 hits, seven runs, with no walks and six strikeouts.

Athletics 8, Yankees 7

NEW YORK — Geronimo Berroa hit a go-ahead, two-run homer off Greg Harris in the seventh inning Tuesday night, rallying the Oakland Athletics over the New York Yankees.

Ruben Sierra also homered for the Athletics, who won for the 10th time in 11 games. Matt Nokes homered twice and Danny Tartabull also connected for the Yankees, who have lost five of six.

Berroa's 10th homer of the season helped Oakland overcome a 7-6 deficit. Harris (3-5) was making his second appearance since signing with the Yankees.

Bob Welch (2-5) allowed one hit in 2 1/3 innings. Dennis Eckersley relieved with runners on first and second and one out in the eighth, and got Wade Boggs and Paul O'Neill on called third strikes.

O'Neill, who went 4-for-5 and raised his average .373, was ejected for arguing the called third strike. Eckersley pitched the ninth for his 12th save in 17 chances.

Angels 10, Red Sox 3

BOSTON — Chris Turner, who came in batting just .138, went 5-for-5 and became the first California catcher ever to steal home, leading the Angels past the Boston Red Sox.

Turner doubled twice, drove in two runs and scored two. The Angels broke a 10-game losing streak against Boston, including seven defeats this season.

Chuck Finley (6-8), who had pitched three complete games in the last three weeks, went eight innings. He gave up three runs and six hits.

The Angels, who scored a total of three runs as Finley went 1-3 in his previous four starts, got three in the seventh after Boston had cut a 3-0 deficit to 3-2.

Chili Davis drove in three runs. He hit a two-run homer, his 16th, and Turner had a two-run double in the ninth.

It was an unusual outburst for the Angels on their current road trip. They were 1-6 with just 14 runs and a .162 batting average until the victory.

Joe Hesketh (4-5) gave up five runs in 6 1/3 innings, but was hurt by poor defense.

Tigers 6, White Sox 2

DETROIT — Frank Thomas hit his 30th home run and Jack McDowell struck out a career-high 11 as the Chicago White Sox beat the Detroit Tigers for a split of their doubleheader Tuesday night.

The Tigers won the opener as Cecil Fielder and Tony Phillips homered in a four-run first inning.

McDowell (6-7) set a career best for strikeouts despite pitching only six innings.

McDowell gave up four runs, two of them earned, on six hits. He is 4-0 in his last seven starts.

Three relievers finished up, with Roberto Hernandez pitching 1 1/3 innings for his ninth save. Chicago pitchers combined for 15 strikeouts.

Greg Gohr (2-1) lost for the first time in five starts this season, giving up four runs and seven hits in four innings.

The Tigers scored twice in first inning. Third baseman Robin Ventura's throwing error set up Fielder's RBI double and Kirk Gibson's RBI single.

Warren Newson singled home a run in the Chicago fourth, and the White Sox scored four times in the fifth for a 5-2 lead. Tim Raines, who drove in three runs, hit a two-run single and Thomas hit a two-run homer off Joe Boever.

Chad Kreuter hit a two-run single in the Detroit sixth. Chicago added a run in the seventh on third baseman Travis Fryman's error and Raines' double.

The win in the opener was just Detroit's third in 13 games, and broke Chicago's four-game road winning streak.

David Wells (2-5), who threw his second complete game of the season, won for the first time since April 10, a span of six starts. He gave up eight hits, walked none and struck out two.
