Iowa City groups will gather to view Jupiter

The UI Museum of Natural History and the Iowa City Astronomy Club will sponsor a program Saturday to observe the planet Jupiter and learn about its impending collision with the Shoemaker-Levy 9 comet.

Because the comet fragments will collide with Jupiter on the side of the planet facing away from Earth, astronomers will attempt to view any flashes of light from the explosion in their reflection on some of Jupiter's 16 moons.

The program will be held at 8 p.m. in Wetherby Park in Iowa City and is free and open to the public. In the event of overcast skies, participants are invited to return to the park on Sunday night at the same time.

Teen acquitted in knifing to better video score

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A teen-ager who confused video game fantasy with reality was found innocent by reason of insanity in a stabbing and committed to a state psychiatric hospital for at least six months.

Paul Van Schaik, 16, spent hours playing the violent video game Mortal Kombat, evidence showed. He nearly stabbed a classmate to death in the belief he would advance to the game's next level, his attorney, Chris Roberts, said Thursday.

Van Schaik was accused of stabbing Christopher Hill, 16, a total of 22 times during class at Coconut Creek High School on Feb. 7. Hill spent several weeks in a hospital.

"He knew it was wrong ... but he was unable to appreciate the consequences," Roberts said. "Paul felt that the world we live in was not real, that ... demons were tormenting him."

"If he could commit an act of horror, these demons would take him away from this world and accept him as one of them," he added. The attorney said the boy planned to cannibalize his victim and told his mother not to bother making him lunch that day.

Legality of Simpson search probed

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A videotape purportedly showing prosecutor Marcia Clark at O.J. Simpson's estate before police had a warrant raised new questions Thursday about whether the search by homicide investigators was legal.

The district attorney's office disputed KCBS-TV's report that the station's time-marked videotape showed the prosecutor on Simpson's property at least 17 minutes before the warrant was signed.

A source close to the investigation told the Associated Press that by the time Clark got to the Simpson residence, the search warrant had already been served by police officers.

Prosecutors, meanwhile, said they were still investigating the role of Simpson friend Al "A.C." Cowlings in helping the football legend flee arrest on June 17 and would ask for a delay in a hearing for Cowlings that had been scheduled for today.

In other developments:

• Robert Kardashian, Simpson's friend, said he no longer had Simpson's suitcase, which a KCOP-TV

videotape showed him carrying away that same morning. Kardashian said the bag contained Simpson's clothes and nothing incriminating, and that the police wouldn't let him return it to the mansion and made no effort then to recover it from him.

• DNA specialist Barry Scheck of the Cardozo Law School in New York City told the AP on Thursday that he had joined Simpson's defense team. Scheck heads a group of Cardozo law students called the Innocence Project that reviews convictions based on DNA fingerprinting for possible appeal. So far, the group has been responsible for overturning eight such convictions, he said.

The videotape raised new questions about the search of Simpson's estate the day after his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman, were stabbed to death outside Brown Simpson's condo.

The AP's source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Clark got to the mansion at 12:30 p.m., stayed there for about an hour to observe the search and returned to the district attorney's office at about 2 p.m.

Bob Jordan, news director at KCBS, said the station stood by its story.

The time of the video transmission was recorded automatically as it was fed to the station. A technician also recorded the time independently, writing it on the label of the video box, Jordan said.

The video was received at 10:28 a.m., KCBS reported. The time written on the warrant cover sheet was 10:45 a.m. on June 13.

Legal experts said Clark's presence at Simpson's estate before a warrant was issued would be significant if defense attorneys could show that she was directing or participating in a search.

In that case, the videotape could be used to help make the case that police knowingly collected evidence illegally and that prosecutors should not be allowed to use it at trial. The defense can renew an

PUBLIC CONCERNS VOICED

Partnership registry discussed in forum

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Approximately 20 Iowa City residents attended a public forum Thursday night to voice their opinions about a new Iowa City Human Rights Commission proposal that would grant couples in domestic partnerships the ability to document their relationships in order to gain equal treatment in employment benefits.

All eight members of the committee were present to hear public concerns that might lead to further revisions of the ordinance before the commission takes it before the City Council in August. The forum fostered a great deal of discussion

Refugee sites in Zaire swamped by Hutus

GOMA, Zaire — Zairean soldiers confiscated machetes and knives but could do little more than watch the tidal wave of Hutu refugees flooding across the border Thursday in full flight from Rwanda's civil war.

Relief organizations and Zairean authorities were swamped by the exodus, one of the greatest in history.

Little evidence emerged that the advancing Tutsi rebels in Rwanda were pursuing the fleeing Hutus or trying to attack them. But Hutu radio stations were warning of Tutsi

UI driving simulator engaged until '95

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

Experiments at the UI driving simulator are booked solid until well into 1995, according to Jon Kuhl, deputy director for the Center for Computer-Aided Design, and requests just keep coming in.

Already this year, 500 people have participated in 10 separate studies costing nearly $4.5 million. Six more studies are scheduled to be completed by the end of the year.

"We have been amazed by the range of experimental applications, and they are expanding all the time," Kuhl said. "We feel very positive and gratified by the way this thing has taken off."

POLLS SHOW AMERICANS OPPOSED

Administration pleads case for Haiti invasion

Rita Beamish
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wary of public opposition, the Clinton administration is carefully making a case for a potential invasion of Haiti, citing political killings and kidnappings and U.S. regional interests as justification.

Cedras

Aides to President Clinton insist he has not made a decision whether to launch a military operation to topple Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and coup leaders in Port-au-Prince. But the president on more than one occasion has cited a laundry list of American interests in Haiti when asked about an invasion. By extension, those interests would become the underpinning for a decision to use force.

An invasion would meet an uphill battle in public opinion.

In recent polls, two-thirds of Americans surveyed opposed sending U.S. troops to oust military leaders who seized power nearly three years ago from democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Congressional opposition also is strong, despite efforts by some Congressional Black Caucus members to drum up support.

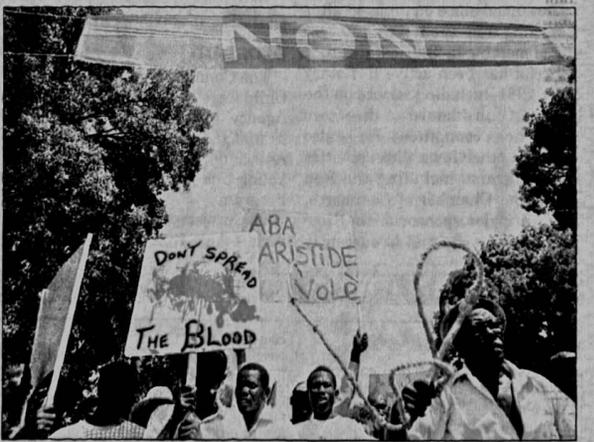

Pressure from caucus members, along with a high-profile hunger strike by TransAfrica leader Randall Robinson, prodded Clinton to change his approach to the refugee issue. He subsequently reversed the practice of automatically repatriating Haitian boat people.

The resulting flood of refugees now may be driving U.S. policy as much as any other factor.

The refugee issue is "the bottom line of U.S. interests there when you strip away the platitudes and rhetoric. We have to do something about it," said Donald Schulz, a Haiti expert at the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pa.

Clinton this week called the refugee situation "a significant problem" but said, "We have very clear and significant interests in addition to the massive outflow of people seeking refugee status in our country."

In a recent explanation, Clinton

Staff guides students through library labyrinth

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Sitting at the north checkout desk of the Main Library like some sentry from a J.R.R. Tolkien novel, Amy Fuls could be called a guardian of knowledge.

But other than stopping people from taking unauthorized materials out, the UI sophomore doesn't have to be too threatening or judgmental.

DAY IN THE LIFE

"I try not to be too nosy and look at what people are checking out, but there are some interesting choices," she said. "Like some people check out books on pornography. I know they're probably doing some sort of project on it, but I still wonder sometimes."

With figures from both the real and fictional world at her side — Tolkien's "The Two Towers" and a watch with a picture of the first Russian cosmonaut on the band — Fuls makes an appropriate sentinel at the building's north entrance.

Downstairs is the library dungeon, or maybe the hobbit hole is a better analogy, considering the library comic strips, posters, plants and post cards decorating the room. There, circulation personnel Kathy Penick and Kim Carr stand behind a counter filled with checkout cards.

Staff members maintain records, prepare overdue and recall notices, help with book searches, keep track of fines and ready books for reshelving. A chute slopes down from a conveyor belt that spans the length of the basement, gathering books from the four corners — OK, drop slots — of the library.

Many UI students never even make it to these depths.

"I went through my whole undergraduate education here without even knowing about this place," Penick said.

But for students who do journey down the flight of stairs to the circulation room, the compelling reason

Frank Miller/The Daily Iowan

Library assistant Jane Carlson stands in the Map Collection at the UI Main Library. The collection, which was begun in the mid-1960s, now contains more than 150,000 sheet maps as well as aerial photographs and atlases. The main focus of the collection is on Iowa and there are a large number of maps from the 19th century, including rare insurance maps. There are also maps from all over the world as well as captured German and Japanese maps from World War II.

might be money, as it is so often in life. Library fines, that is.

At 25 cents a day, the UI charges a maximum of $5 for a regular overdue book, but some people still manage to rack up charges in the $300 to $400 range. Penick said one fine amounted to more than $700.

Most accept the fine, but some of the highest-paid people on the campus are the biggest complainers about small fines, Carr said.

"Some people get angry," she said. "One guy didn't want us to fine him because he said it was too much money. The fine was only $5."

Three floors up is the Map Collection — a kind of Rivendell or Lothlorien — a peaceful forest of map drawers and cabinets. Map librarians Becky Albitz and Jane Carlson stand watch over thousands of maps, atlases, reference books and aerial photographs.

Most people come here for fairly mundane reasons — Human Geography class members doing research, builders or surveyors.

One person came in to trace the actual, rather than the official, route of his regiment during World War II, Albitz said. Another woman stops by to look at maps of Japan. She'll be driving a car while there and wants to find an alternate route from one city to another — one that doesn't cost $150 in tolls.

"We had one man come in who was looking for a mountain peak. He said his son was a mountain climber who had died, but there was supposed to be a peak named after him in Argentina," Carlson said. "We weren't able to find it."

Houston optimistic after miscarriage

NEW YORK (AP) — Whitney Houston and Bobby Brown still are hoping for another baby after the pop diva suffered a miscarriage.

Houston announced last week that she was pregnant with the couple's second child. But she miscarried days later while on tour in Houston, her spokeswoman said Wednesday.

"She's sad, but they hope to have more children," spokeswoman Emily Bear said.

Actor triumphs against typecast roles

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Ron Palillo has found that there is life after "Welcome Back, Kotter."

The actor who played lovable nerd Arnold Horshack — with a wheezing laugh that is still his trademark — recalls a terrifying realization he had about five weeks after the sitcom began on ABC.

"I thought, 'My God, I'm going to be Don Knotts or Jim Nabors for the rest of my life,'" Palillo said. Those actors became typecast as Barney Fife and Gomer Pyle.

After the show left the air, "the offers that I did get were for Arnold Horshack all over again," Palillo said. So he returned to his first love — theater.

"All of a sudden, people were starting to say, 'My God, he can act. Who knew?'" Palillo said.

He also launched a second career as an artist, illustrating two children's books. He appears in the soap opera "One Life to Live" and is playing a villain in the musical "Oliver!" at Birmingham's Summerfest '94.

"Most people now are coming up and saying, 'You're Ron Palillo,'" he said. "I can't tell you how surprised I am by that."

Dice Clay to play closed-in ballroom

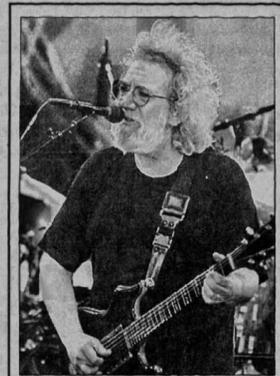

HAMPTON, N.H. (AP) — It's going to be hotter than usual when Andrew Dice Clay performs here.

The venue — an club without air conditioning — will keep doors and windows closed so Clay's profane routine doesn't reach young ears.

Hampton selectmen said Clay's routine, which has offended gay and women's groups, is "offensive and disturbing." The board asked the Hampton Beach Casino Ballroom to close doors and windows when Clay appears July 23.

"We don't want to do anything to upset anybody," manager Jake Fleming said. "We'll do what we can to prevent that."

Town Manager Hunter Rieseberg said selectmen based their request on the town's noise ordinance.

The Iowa City Neon Rotary Club, chartered in 1915 with 27 members, today has a membership of nearly 300 people.

Grant awarded for children's diversity program

The Community Coordinated Child Care Resource and Referral Agency (4Cs) has been awarded a $1,350 grant from the Midwest Association for the Education of Young Children Special Projects Program.

The project titled "The Multicultural / Anti Bias Resource Project for Young Children and Their Providers" was one of five projects funded out of 30 grant proposals from 11 states.

The project will establish the basis for coherent, appropriate and enjoyable exposure to diversity. It will provide hands-on materials for children, families, child-care providers, students and educators.

Money allotted for octagonal farmhouse

The farmhouse associated with the Secret 1883 Octagonal Barn has received a $17,000 grant from the State Historical Society of Iowa.

The oldest part of the house was built in the 1860s and was recently determined eligible for the National Register of Historic Places. The wooden balloon-frame house is largely unchanged since about 1893.

The house was originally built by D.C. and Mary Kelly. They sold it to Isaac Heald in 1873, who later sold it to Joshua Hunt and Esther Secret in 1875. In 1883, the Secrets built the large octagonal barn on the property.

The grant will partially fund critical restoration of the brick foundation of the house. The restoration of the farmhouse is part of a larger plan to restore the entire farmstead to its 19th-century splendor, when the farm extended more than 500 acres.

UI STUDENTS REACT TO LEADER'S DEATH

Korea's volatile state felt locally

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

While North Korea mourns the death of longtime leader Kim Il Sung, many local South Koreans fear political instability.

Although they have been taught to hate Sung in their education and mass media, some have grown to fear the alternatives.

Jay Choi, a UI senior in business administration who is from South Korea, often meets with Korean friends to discuss the tension between the two Koreas and the possibility for negotiation and reunification.

Choi said the situation has made him fear escalation of the conflict.

"I thought Kim would never die," he said. "I'm worried — we were going to have a peace talk and now he's dead," Choi said. "I don't like his son. He is known in South Korea to be more in favor of war than peace."

Choi is also afraid Sung's son, Kim Jong Il, who succeeded his father, will start a war because he fears being overthrown in a coup d'etat.

"He might do something crazy if he realizes that he won't last long, and it won't be a happy ending for him," he said.

Meengeon Kim, a UI doctorate student in political science, is also afraid of political complications because Sung's death has meant plans for negotiation between the two Koreas have been postponed.

"Either the conference will be delayed, or it might be the end of it," Kim said. "South Koreans prayed for Kim to die, but after all he adopted a moderate policy and engaged in conversation."

Local experts on the Korean peninsula emphasize that little is known about the North Korean situation, but that Sung's death could mean an improvement in the relationship between the two Koreas.

"His death came at a critical moment. I was fearing succession problems in the North, but now it's not a real issue," said Jae-On Kim, a UI professor in sociology from South Korea.

Jae-On Kim said Kim Jong Il will have to start negotiations because of the North's poor economy.

"No matter what they do in North Korea, they are at this point quite isolated. Therefore they have to open up and new people in leadership participate in the beginning is better in the long run," he said.

Gerald Sorokin, a UI assistant-professor in political science who studies international relations, said negotiations between the two Koreas will begin and war is highly unlikely.

"The North Korean leaders seem to know they have more to gain by re-entering the world community and try to comply than using very meager nuclear resources to build a few bombs," he said.

Snipes targeted in town's festival

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

Grab yer gunny sacks, it's snipe hunting season.

That most elusive of all birds is on the run again, this time in Knoxville, Iowa, during the town's first International Snipe Hunting Festival tonight from 6 to midnight.

"It'll be an evening of family fun," Nancy Niday, assistant program manager of the event, said. She promised everything from snipeburgers to three-legged snipe bag races to pin the tail on the snipe to "snipes cream."

"We'll have the town square closed off, and we'll have a big snipe scavenger hunt," Niday said.

With all the dancing, prizes and fun, Niday was sure even die-hard animal rights activists would have fun. So how about the poor snipes?

Carol Thompson, a geologist with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources, said she thinks the real capella gallinago will probably be just fine.

"They like wet wooded areas — like along wooded creeks," Thompson said. "They're very hard to see."

She said they have very long bills for their size and very striking streaked heads.

This is the second year in a row Knoxville has renamed its annual July festival. "Last year it was called Main Street Magic," Niday said. The turnout was all right, she said, but the flooding put a damper on most people's spirits.

"But this year we expect thousands," Niday said. "I have a boss with a very creative imagination."

RUMBLE STRIPS SET FOR INSTALLATION

Board OKs intersection remedy

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to install rumble strips at the intersection of North Liberty Road and Dubuque Street Thursday.

Some residents living near the intersection expressed concerns about the installation, commenting on the noise they produce, before the vote was taken.

"The board has gone for safety over inconvenience," Chairman Steve Lacina said.

Three sets of rumble strips will be installed at a cost of $400.

A petition expressing concerns about the safety of the intersection was presented to the board in May. Of the six accidents at the intersection since 1990, five were caused by motorists running the stop sign.

The Iowa Department of Transportation recommended the strips as the appropriate measure to take.

Supervisor Joe Bolcom's motion to defer voting for six months, which would allow further investigation into the issue, was denied. Bolcom then joined the other four members and voted in favor of the rumble strips.

NO NEED TO FEAR GERMANY

Wise decision from court

The German Federal Constitutional Court ruled Tuesday that the German military could participate in operations outside the nation's boundaries. This ruling is quite significant because it allows Germany to participate in the United Nations' peacekeeping efforts and NATO "out of area" missions. While many nations fear the German military, remembering the tragic days of World War II, these fears are unfounded; present-day Germany is not the same as Nazi Germany. German military as well as economic muscle is needed to help establish a stable international environment for the 21st century.

The success of the Federal Republic of Germany is a validation of German liberalism. The brief reign of the liberal Kaiser Frederick III and the weakness of the Weimar Republic pushed Germany down the path of reactionary authoritarian government, spurred by Bismarck and later, Hitler. However, the success of the German constitution, known as The Basic Law, and the "economic miracle" of the postwar era have proven the efficacy of the liberal constitutional concept.

According to The Basic Law, the German parliament — the Bundestag — has firm control over government affairs and the military establishment. A strong executive cannot wield military power at his whim like the Kaiser or Hitler. By a simple majority, the Bundestag must authorize all German military missions.

While the court ruled that the military could now be sent abroad, it also judged that Chancellor Kohl violated this rule by participating in the Somalia peacekeeping operation and Bosnian air operations without parliamentary authorization. The opposition Social Democrats praised this aspect of the court's ruling, leaving the political implications for the Kohl government unclear. However, it is evident the parliament will not allow the executive a free reign in the use of force.

Although German economic power is being used to help Eastern Europe, Russia and the Ukraine recover from the economic ruin inflicted by communism, Germany's NATO partners have been urging the nation to play a more proactive role militarily for some time. When the German military was barred from participating in the 1991 Persian Gulf War, the United States and Britain were annoyed by the constitutional excuse cited at the time. Germany was the nation most dependent on Kuwaiti oil, yet no troops were deployed to aid the allied coalition.

This week's ruling should help allay these concerns by allowing the dominant power in Europe to play an active role politically and militarily in the resolution of future international crises.

EMPHASIZE RESPONSIBLE PARENTING

Welfare as a weapon

Although fighting for different reasons, abortion rights supporters and opponents are now working together to face down a White House proposal that would deny benefits to women who continue to have several children while on welfare. Abortion supporters view the proposal as an infringement on choice, while abortion opponents consider the plan to be just another incentive for women to obtain abortions. While this cooperation is laudable, the focus of their unification suggests they are speaking for all women. They are not.

This reform would not fundamentally perpetuate abortions or infringe upon choice. Because choice exists today, women still have access to abortions and can plan families the way they choose. Instead, this proposal might serve as an incentive for women and their partners to think more carefully about getting pregnant and using birth control more effectively.

Welfare mothers have just as much right as any woman to have babies or to have abortions, but if they want to improve their lives and the lives of the children they do decide to have, then birth control — prevention — is the best decision. Several forms of effective birth control are available from medical and Planned Parenthood clinics across the country, which give free birth control to women and ask only for small donations.

Potential parents should use birth control when appropriate, but they also must have the freedom to have children without fear that they might lose benefits at some point in the future if they cross an arbitrary government regulatory line. Having a baby should be about love and support within some sort of family structure and not primarily about finances. These choices should not be made by the government and women but between partners.

Welfare in the past may have included money for "extra" children, but it wasn't really giving enough for extra books, food and clothes. It hasn't included enough to pay for an extra bedroom in an apartment or even necessarily an extra bed. These things were considered luxuries.

Acting responsibly used to be a luxury, too. But with readily available birth control, women and men on welfare should take responsibility on their own instead being prodded by the government.

Women should never have to be without a choice — any choice. The people in favor of limiting benefits have the right idea in protecting the best interest of these women, but their best interest isn't to have their family choices dictated to them by the government. Instead of threatening families with financial weapons, the better choice is to let parents decide their futures while keeping birth control as a responsible option.

The varied life cycle of the human being

The other day on TV there was a commercial for an upcoming episode of the Oprah Winfrey show. They were doing one on women who blame their mothers for the fact that they (the daughters) are overweight. The clip showed a stage sprinkled with 250-pound women glaring resentfully at their overly made-up mothers. A quick close-up of one of the moms revealed a startled expression as though she were just then, on stage, realizing that all the neighbors would be watching.

This sounds like a standard TV talk show, where the guests get progressively weepier and the host oozes compassion and talks about "food issues."

But it dawned on me that the "Oprah" producers weren't playing fair: The daughters get to accuse the mothers of ruining their lives by making them eat too much. But what about the mothers' mothers? Whose fault is it that these women were so injudiciously forcing second helpings on their children in the first place? Why, their own mothers, of course. Oprah should get the grannies on TV, too, for their share of abuse.

Or so I thought. But ultimately, I realized, this scenario would also be flawed. Imagine all the food issues the grandmothers might have grown up with during the Great Depression ("My mother let my brothers eat all the gruel they wanted, and I was only allowed discarded apple cores and fish bones!") The chain of blame for this and other such physical/emotional problems might lead all the way back to the Stone Age, when the cavemen with the genes for retaining fat were living through famines, getting all the women and causing future generations of humans endless grief in the form of clogged arteries and unattractive thighs.

You couldn't possibly get all those ancestors on "Oprah." They are mostly dead; also the stage would be too small. Still, it is emerging as a truth of modern times (through countless talk shows, self-help books and women's magazines) that whatever your problems are, your parents caused them.

This is no news to the Freudians among you, but whereas Freud was dealing with gender anxieties and identity crises, we can now apply the philosophy to everyday activities like snacking and yelling at people.

We now know that all kinds of difficulties we face as adults, such as the inability to pick out a rental movie in less than two and a half hours, are things we picked up from our parents. The talk-show psychologists will say that it is natural, even instinctive, to imitate the behavior of the people with whom we socialize at a young age.

It is at this point that the talk-show psychologists begin to sound like the narrators of those educational films they had in grade school with titles like "The Life Cycle of the Tapeworm," explaining how a microscopic intestinal parasite becomes a highly visible 20-foot-long intestinal parasite.

Those films were always lacking the element of personal drama that might have made them Oscar material: The baby animals always grew up to look just like the mommy and/or daddy animals. One tree frog was the same as the rest. All the liver flukes looked alike.

Given the prevalence of this behavior in the animal kingdom, it seems unnatural that humans would do anything but grow up to be just like their parents. Look at the old people you know. As they advance through the years, they become more and more like one another until at full maturity they are as alike as two peas in a pod or two flukes in a liver. We're all working toward the same goals here — creaky joints and golf course memberships, for starters.

Looking at the big picture, it seems pointless to try to fight destiny. What do talk-show psychologists know compared to biologists? Don't spend all your time worrying about how to overcome the insecurity, defensiveness or hair loss that you inherited from your parents. These things are just part of the life cycle. Clearly, the shift from colored contacts and 501s to reading glasses and pantsuits is in the cards for us all. Rather than straining to be unlike our parents, we should await this change, prepare for it and eventually come peacefully to a Zenlike oneness with all things polyester.

By practicing a bit now, you can make the transition from the youthful grublike state to that of a fully aged person much more smoothly. It won't be long before you'll be a flawless replica of your older relatives.

Start by investing in a few classic pieces of timeless fashion: wingtip shoes (they go with everything, including Bermuda shorts), hair curlers (ever so stylish peeking out from under a plastic rain cap). You can never have too many cardigans.

Next, practice behaving like an old person. Convince yourself that potted plants make good conversation partners. Try adding a can of cream of mushroom soup to whatever you happen to be having for dinner — it enhances any recipe as does Jell-O pudding mix. Keep strict tabs on the prices of everything so you can complain when they go up. Vote Republican. Drool on people. In the years to come, you'll be glad you started all this early.

My own life is much easier since I came to grips with my own destiny. I no longer need Oprah to tell me how to break away from the destructive behavior patterns instilled by my family. I cherish those patterns. I have seen the future and it looks just like Mom.

U.S. drug policies: Have they made a difference?

America has been fighting the drug war for years. Our government has some of the toughest drug policies in the world, yet their implementation has been as effective as the slogan "Just say no!" Still, millions of dollars continue to be thrown into a bottomless bureaucratic abyss, which does little more than sway America's attention away from the real issues. While the government paraded countless couriers and low-level dealers to illustrate "drug war victories," few significant victories were actually achieved.

The bottom line in the illicit drug industry centers around the almighty dollar. Opium poppies and marijuana are cash crops just like corn, pork bellies and oranges. Consequently, the people making money from this trade don't want to see it legalized because the profits would be taken out of their hands.

However, it doesn't seem as if the policy-makers up in Washington, D.C., have considered this fact. Instead of tapping the source — crushing international multibillion-dollar drug lords — they've focused their attention on the pawns in the game.

The creation of anti-drug abuse acts and mandatory minimum sentences which inflict swift and harsh punishment for drug-related crimes is almost laughable. That's until you look at the strain it is causing on America's economy and the repercussions occurring within the state and federal prison systems due to overpopulation.

In order to better grasp the situation of illegal drugs in the United States, it's necessary to bring it closer to home. For instance, each day in Des Moines, 100 to 150 drug-related crimes are committed against persons and property. In the past year, 2,500 to 5,000 inmates have passed through Iowa's two major prisons. The average stay of an inmate is about three years with a cost of $30,000 per inmate. Of the new adult inmate population, 1,150 have been juvenile offenders and 85 percent have dropped out of school. It should come as no surprise that the majority of the crimes committed are drug-related and tend to involve African-American males and other male minorities.

The anti-drug abuse acts, such as the ones implemented in 1986 and 1988, incorporate the idea of mandatory minimums to ensure swift and harsh punishment and to help deter crime. Instead, some minorities and others on the lower level of the economic triangle have been caught up in a cycle of prison and crime.

"In general, there has been some overkill as far as mandatory sentences are concerned," said Iowa City attorney Randy Larson. "In Johnson County if you're caught with cocaine it's a $250 fine, but if you sell it that's 10 years."

Unfortunately, during incarceration inmates receive virtually no treatment or job training. They're just thrown into a cell. Although preventive methods and programs could be implemented into urban school districts where lack of funding, high crime rates and a depressed environment rob children of their future potential, little serious thought is being put toward the idea. This only assists in perpetuating a cycle of violence and drugs that seem to go hand and hand.

In the words of former DEA group supervisor Michael Levine, in the dedication to his book "Deep Cover": "(Lives) are being sacrificed for this war of lies, hypocrisy, and self-interest, which, like the Vietnam War, is being fought with no intention of winning."

According to 1993 estimates published in the Dec. 16 edition of Insight magazine, 90 percent of the mandatory minimum sentences handed out were drug and gun related. This has led to a huge increase in state and federal prison populations, resulting in eight to 10 inmates (violent and nonviolent) being paroled per day in order to make room for drug-related convictions.

Although I hate to say it, I sometimes wonder if crime helps the economy. Just think about it: If there were no crime, there would be no need for neighborhood watches, security systems, gun manufacturing (except for hunting), undercover cops, prison staff or large police forces such as the DEA, CIA and FBI. In short, the unemployment rate would be significantly higher.

Most economists estimate that drugs are sold for 200 to 400 times the price they would receive if they were legal taxable commodities like liquor and tobacco. However, we've been led to believe that to legalize such substances would create the 20th-century version of Sodom and Gomorrah. This just isn't true.

In the final analysis, keeping drugs illegal only helps organized crime, and mandatory sentences treat superficial symptoms instead of examining the system in place which created them. So now that the "land of the free" has an incarceration rate three times higher than those of South Africa and the former Soviet Union, do you feel any safer?

2-minute piano composition begets 24-hour concert

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

After several years of planning a concert and weeks of determined scheduling and organization, music history Professor Fred Crane doesn't actually plan to sit through the show.

"I'm not going to stay for the whole thing — I need my sleep," Crane says.

It's unlikely that many people will sit through this weekend's performance of Eric Satie's "Vexations." The piece is expected to take between 21 and 24 hours to play.

Crane, who organized a team of 25 pianists to play "Vexations" in one-hour shifts, says it's "probably the longest legitimate musical piece in the world." The work consists of a single page of sheet music — with instructions that it should be played 840 times in succession.

The show will start at 7 p.m. Saturday and should wind up somewhere between 4 and 7 p.m. Sunday, depending on how quickly each repetition is played. Crane says audience members should feel free to wander in and out of the concert at will; admission is free.

The "Vexations" melody takes around a minute and a half to play — meaning each performer is in for about 35-40 repetitions. But Crane says they've made sure no one will lose count. The pianists will have 840 copies of the piece, each of which will be played once, then put aside. "In theory, this is foolproof," he says.

Crane's roster of pianists ranges across a variety of students, community members, music faculty and UI staff, including UI opera director Beaumont Glass (11 a.m.-noon Sunday), Information Arcade graduate assistant Paul Soderdahl (7-8 a.m. Sunday) and Arts Center Relations director Peter Alexander (midnight Saturday-1 a.m. Sunday).

Alexander says he's not sure what kind of interpretation he'll bring to the work. "I'm not going in with a specific plan in mind that I'll do it delicately for 10 minutes and then change to a different kind of style," he said. "I try to have a consistency of tempo, which is difficult. When I first started to play the piece, I timed myself at about two minutes. I timed it recently and found myself down to about one minute 40 seconds. It's harder to keep a slow tempo once you get more familiar with the piece. ... I'll just do it to a certain extent as I feel like doing it."

Soderdahl emphasizes variety over consistency. "I wouldn't play it exactly the same way twice. As with any piece of music that repeats itself, the going thing is not to play it the exact same way twice. I think I'll play it at least with enough emotion to keep myself interested."

Interpretations may vary, as Satie left no instructions on playing the piece except for a tempo instruction — "very slow" — and the suggestion, "In order to play this motive 840 times in succession, it will be good to prepare one's self in advance, and in the greatest silence, with some serious immobilities."

Crane says Satie, an early 20th-century French composer, is famous for odd titles, like "Three Pieces in the Form of a Pear," and for odd performance instructions. "Vexations" is probably his most eccentric work. He cultivated eccentricity ... he liked his notoriety. No one else would call this piece a 'motive'; it's a sheet of music."

But he and Alexander both emphasize that the one constant throughout the evening is that all the performers should take the piece seriously.

"There have been performances where there was an element of slapstick injected into the performance," Alexander says. "That overtakes whatever satirical intent the composer has. You're just doing your own slapstick humor. While Satie might not have objected to that, in a sense, you're not performing the piece that he composed."

Assistant piano Professor Rene Lecuona likes the "silence and immobility" concept and says she plans to meditate before performing. One of the first to sign up, Lecuona went straight for an odd time: "I picked 3 in the morning because I thought it was the absolute worst time, and nobody else would do it. ... I have a feeling I may be playing to a ghostly audience at 3 a.m."

Similarly, Alexander says he doesn't know how many people will be around to see him perform. Nonetheless, he deliberately chose the midnight time slot because it would be exciting — he had to alert Campus Security to make sure concertgoers and performers alike wouldn't be kicked out of the building in the middle of the night.

"I think Satie should always be fun," he says. "I just thought it would be fun ... to come in at a time when the hall is normally shut up and dark and silent and play the piano."

(No, it's not upside down or backwards.)

Moonshake
Big Good Angel

Big Good Angel, the 1993 Moonshake EP recently released in the United States, covers a lot of ground over the course of its six tracks. The sound of these London art punks / Can revivalists is an unmistakable collage of disparate elements all competing for the foreground, often all succeeding at once.

The band's intermingling of swatches of funk and jazz with sampled noise and odd guitar passages is seamless, if a bit unnerving. Moonshake doesn't leave behind the traditions of rock, it just rips them apart and wears the carcass as a disguise for the more alien things underneath.

But the alien in Moonshake's music is really a reflection of ourselves. The eerily clever lyrics, trading off between singers Margaret Fiedler and David Callahan in both vocals and viewpoint, abound with streetwise images of lust, greed and cynicism. Fiedler's songs overflow with visceral eroticism, while Callahan's deal with urban decay, loss of loved ones and baby stealing, respectively. Their ability to make these things amusing and ironic is part of what makes Angel great.

Fiedler has since left the band, but Moonshake has a new lineup and a new album, currently available only as an import. Cross your fingers for a domestic release soon.

SO MANY SUMMER MONTHS, SO FEW BARS

Break hits its peak with extra-strange weekend musical lineups

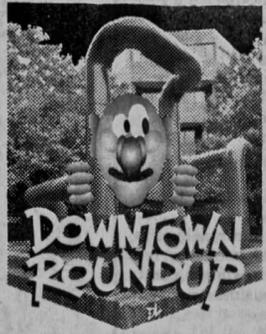

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

"Most people take two hours to peak, then ride the crest of the wave for an hour or so. My boss started in 1962. He's been surfing ever since." — Frenesy Z. Biggleswade, Timothy Leary's personal secretary and psychic.

Mid-July. The waveforms of summer are at their peak for most of us, carrying all of their strange days and nutty nights on to crash against the beaches of August. And it's up to us, as loyal denizens of these truly freaky months, to do everything we can to ensure that things remain as odd as possible for as long as strangeness can be sustained.

True, we've got a lot of help right now from the life pulse of our great nation. The media alone is spoon-feeding America enough weirdness to make Rwanda look like Eden on the insanity scale.

Right here in I.C., life is becoming stranger than fiction. Last weekend, a tribe of religious fanatics camped outside on the Pedestrian Mall and offered up their own version of Jim Jones to preach the Apocalypse. Eventually they were chased away by a crack squad of Ped Mall bicycle cops, so we can't really expect a repeat performance.

And so it falls to each of us to make things strange again with a little help from the local music scene:

- Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., earns weirdness points just for the posters around town advertising this weekend's lineup. The spread for Funkfarm's return engagement tonight (with original funky drummer Marc Gratama) features the usual farm animals cresting a hill, with one saying to the other, "Pass me that lotion, Norton." Slick, man, slick. The posters for Saturday night's show, with the Bent Scepters and Cedar Rapids' Clockwerk Orange, advertise it as "The Battle for the Planet of the Apes." Give a monkey a pen and a Xerox machine ...

- Local groove-grinders Sheltering Sky are going to do The Metro, 121 Iowa Ave., tonight. If they still play that live instrumental jam with whale songs as background noise, it could get surreal. Saturday night, Cobalt Blue rolls in to shake things up. There's a new name with a little touch of the strange.

- The Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., hosts local guitar acrobat Bo Ramsey tonight and Saturday. This one may need a little help in the freak show category, although I'm not sure the Sanctuary is the place for dancing on tables or goosing the staff.

Apart from these wonderfully wacky sideshows, Susan Shore will perform on the Pedestrian Mall tonight at 6 with Marty Christensen and B.J. Fleming.

And that's where the weekend love shack closes its doors, kids. Let's go catch some tasty waves.

MANY INTERESTS COMPETING

Problems crop up against health-care plan

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Raise tobacco taxes too high and risk losing two dozen or so House Democrats. Require businesses to cover their workers and court rejection by moderate Senate Democrats, to say nothing of virtually all Republicans.

Extend abortion coverage to all and watch 35 House Democrats defect. Deny it and another 68 might peel away. Stray too far from demands of single-payer advocates and watch dozens more vote no.

With top Democrats in Congress drafting health reform bills for votes in the House and Senate, the maneuvering room is limited.

"It really does take the wisdom of Solomon to put it all together," says Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

Not to mention a distinctly non-biblical skill: counting votes.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt and Democratic Whip

David Bonior assume they will get no Republican support. Thus, they can lose the votes of no more than 39 from their own caucus if they are to assemble the 218 votes needed for passage.

If anything, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's problem is more pronounced. Democrats hold 56 seats, short of the 60 needed to overcome any filibuster. Several of the 56 favor a bipartisan bill that rules out requiring employers to pay for insurance — the "employer mandates" that are the linchpin of any scheme for meeting President Clinton's goal of universal coverage. To date only one Republican, James Jeffords of Vermont, has indicated support for mandates.

While the list of issues seems without end — from cost controls to the scope of benefits to complicated questions of insurance ratings — the question of mandates is an overarching concern for the leaders.

Legislation approved by the House Ways and Means Committee requires large businesses to pay 80 percent of the cost of health coverage for their workers by 1996. Smaller firms would follow by 1998, the burden for some eased by federal subsidies.

Gephardt is likely to propose a longer phase-in period and give added protection to small firms with low-wage workers.

In an attempt to recover lost political momentum, Democratic aides describe this approach as a "shared responsibility" between businesses and individuals, rather than an "employer mandate."

But efforts to draft a bill in the House Energy and Commerce Committee foundered earlier this year on this issue, when supporters of mandates couldn't find common ground with Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., and others who oppose them. The precise size of this group is unknown.

In the Senate, Mitchell is seeking reaction to setting the employers' contribution at 50 percent initially, rising to 80 percent after several years. Whether this would attract the votes of moderate Democrats who helped draft the no-mandates bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee is unclear. But Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., says it would not. "Mandates are dead," he said Thursday. "The Finance Committee bill takes me as far and a little bit farther than I want to go."

But in the House, Bonior notes that the alternative to employer mandates is higher taxes.

And already, the tobacco tax increase in Clinton's bill is shrinking.

The House Ways and Means bill cut a proposed 75 cent tobacco tax increase to 45 cents over five years as part of an effort to prevent wholesale defections on the floor by the two dozen to 30 Democrats from tobacco-producing regions.

Bonior says that 45 cents is not likely to rise when Gephardt finally produces his bill.

Cute koala

The Australian Koala Foundation has used this picture to illustrate its appeal to help save the koala. This 5-month-old is slightly more than 5 inches long and weighs in at 1 pound. The baby sits in another Australian icon, the jar of Vegemite, which Aussies spread on their toast. This little survivor faces a big threat as there are now fewer than 50,000 koalas left in Australia. Their habitat is being invaded by suburban sprawl, while thousands each year are killed by dogs, cars and disease.

DEATH TOLL RISES TO 30

Flood in Georgia claims another victim

Michael A. Giarrusso
Associated Press

ALBANY, Ga. — David Brantley and his wife, Pearl Mae, spent five days trapped in their flooded home until she toppled off the refrigerator and drowned.

Police and rescue workers patrolling the area in a boat rescued Brantley on Wednesday.

The rest of the neighborhood had been evacuated a week earlier on July 7 because of rising flood water.

Brantley told The Albany Herald that after the flood began last week, they climbed atop their refrigerator and watched the water rise "slowly but surely" to a height of 7 feet.

"My wife — she was a big woman;

she was 200 pounds," the paper quoted him as saying.

He said after two nights of helping his wife maintain her balance on a floating refrigerator and using television cable to make contraptions for her to hold on to, Pearl Mae Brantley went under on the third night, slipping into the murky water. Brantley said he was guessing at the number of nights. "I lost track of the time."

"I told her to just hold on with me, they'll get us tomorrow. I had faith; I told my wife, 'We'll be out of here tomorrow' — she drowned that night," Brantley said.

By Brantley's accounting, it was Saturday night that his wife of 38 years died. The neighborhood was still blocked off to all but rescue boats on Thursday, said rescue worker Mike Rowell.

"It looks like a river," he said. "Once the water got that high, they probably got too scared to try and leave."

Pearlie Brantley was the 30th confirmed death in the flooding since last week in Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

Albany police Lt. Bill Osborne said the Brantleys had no candles or flashlights and just a small stream of sunlight entered the tiny attic.

Brantley attracted the attention of the rescuers by kicking out a vent on the side of the house and screaming for help, Rowell said.

He was treated at a hospital and sent to a Red Cross shelter.

A grief-stricken Brantley remained in the shelter Thursday. "He's been crying a lot and he's real tired," said Joan Phillips, a nurse volunteering at the First United Methodist Church shelter.

Brantley told workers at the shelter that his closest relatives lived in Pennsylvania. He was worried about arranging his wife's funeral, said Becky Boyd, business manager of the church.

Increase in pulp fiction spawned by leader's death

Sang-Hun Choe
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — It has all the ingredients of a good thriller: a secret weapons program, dark clouds of war, a dictator's sudden demise.

It's a novel — but fact and fiction are tough to distinguish these days on the Korean peninsula.

The sudden death last week of North Korea's longtime leader, Kim Il Sung, is creating a rash of best sellers in a loose genre known as nuclear fiction or "Kim Il Sung novels."

Customers are snapping up books with plots that turn on diplomatic double-crossing and hard-line coups in a place that sounds a lot like North Korea.

"These books offer wild imaginings about how Kim died and what would happen after his death," said Ka Ji-hyon of Seoul's large Kyobo Bookstore. "We sell hundreds of copies a day."

Bookstores are opening special corners for North-related works and newspaper ads tout titles such as "The Ultimate Prophecy on the Korean Peninsula" and "Korea Unifies!"

The award-winning "Sea of Fire" leaped onto the best-seller list the day after Kim's death was announced. In it, a fictional leader is terminally ill and his son and the defense minister plan a surprise attack on the South.

On the eve of the attack, the plot goes, the leader dies, the defense minister is assassinated and a power struggle ensues.

A power struggle in the North was one of the real-life fears of South Korean officials, but those fears have eased with the apparent ascension of Kim's son and hand-picked heir, Kim Jong Il.

"Sea of Fire" ends on a grimmer note: with the new leader launching nuclear missiles at U.S. military facilities in Seoul and a U.S. aircraft carrier responding in kind.

also became an instant best seller because it predicted Kim's death would occur on Sept. 14 of this year. Off by two months — but that's still pretty close.

APOCALYPSE SET FOR SEPTEMBER

Prophet, flock await world's end

David Briggs
Associated Press

When Harold Camping says the world is going to end in September, people listen.

In two books and a nightly national radio talk show, Camping has convinced thousands that one day this September the "saved" will be raised up and the "unsaved" living and dead condemned to everlasting damnation.

"The judgment throne is coming. In a few days it will be here," Camping said in a telephone interview from his office in Oakland, Calif.

For thousands of years, prophets have tried to predict the end of the world. What distinguishes Camping is the media forum offered by the 40 radio stations owned by his company, Family Radio.

As the time for his prophecy to unfold nears and his influence grows, even evangelical scholars who have dismissed Camping's claims as "screwball" have taken him seriously enough to publicly rebut him in debates and a new book.

When September comes and goes with no apocalyptic event there will be a lot of disillusioned Christians, these scholars say.

"I'm a little bit afraid of what's going to happen in October 1994 — what psychologically is going to happen," said Tremper Longman III of Westminster Theological Seminary in Philadelphia. Camping, whose background is in engineering, has devised his own system for dating biblical events that fits into a plan of salvation history in which key events occur in 1,000-year periods.

For example, he says Jesus Christ was born 2,000 years ago and David ascended the throne of Israel 3,000 years ago, two events that point to this year as the time for another major event along the millennial time line.

According to Camping's date line, the period of tribulation forecast in biblical books as leading up to the end began in May 1988, 13,000 years after the world was created in 11,013 B.C. It was in 1988 that Satan was turned loose on the Earth, and churches have been teaching what he calls "false gospels" that ignore the concepts of hell and damnation.

Not coincidentally, in May 1988, Camping was relieved of his duties teaching an adult Bible class in his former church in Alameda, Calif., because of his apocalyptic predictions.

Working from the May 1988 date, he arrived at September 1994 as the date of the end of the world by taking literally a reference in the eighth chapter of the book of Daniel to a vision of a sanctuary being rebuilt 2,300 days after it was desecrated.

Evangelical scholars say Camping's theory is groundless, that his dating system is his own invention and he has manipulated a Bible that consistently teaches no one will know the hour of the final judgment.

"He totally misuses virtually every biblical text that he comes across," claims Longman, who says Camping is not even able to read the earliest texts in Hebrew and Greek.

John Walvoord, a prophecy expert and former president of Dallas Theological Seminary, takes a harsher view.

"It's just another screwball interpretation," Walvoord said. "Nobody has ever guessed the date right. You'd think they'd learn."

But if scholars dismiss Camping's theory, they do not dismiss the influence of the religious broadcaster, who reports annual donations to the 40 stations owned by his company are up 20 percent this year to $12 million. Camping also has written two books predicting the end times — "1994" and "Are You Ready?"

Walvoord has debated Camping on radio and has written the foreword to a new book, "Shockwave 2000: The Harold Camping Debate." Longman says around a thousand of the broadcaster's followers attended a seven-hour debate he had with Camping at a Delaware church in May.

FORMER WRESTLING CHAMP FINGERS PROMOTER

Hogan admits slamming steroids

Pat Milton
Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Hulk Hogan admitted publicly for the first time Thursday that he used steroids for 13 years "to get big" and that wrestling promoter Vincent McMahon Jr.'s secretary sometimes placed orders for him to get the drug.

Testifying under immunity in McMahon's trial, Hogan also said he discussed steroids with the promoter and on occasion ordered some from doctors for McMahon's personal use.

But McMahon, who transformed the professional wrestler into a multimillion-dollar marketing phenomenon, never directed him to use steroids, Hogan said.

Hogan, whose real name is Terry Bollea, said about 80 percent of the wrestlers he knew during the 1980s used steroids, commonly known as "juice" or "gas."

In front of a courtroom packed with teen-age fans and autograph hounds, Hogan said he took steroids by injection and orally from 1976

Associated Press

Professional wrestling star Hulk Hogan leaves a U.S. District Court in Uniondale, N.Y., after testifying for the prosecution at the federal trial of promoter Vincent McMahon Jr. Thursday.

"I would go by the office and pick up the steroids along with my paycheck and fan mail," said Hogan, known for his bleached-blond shoulder-length hair and droopy moustache.

"I used steroids to get big," he said. In the past, the aspiring actor and co-star of the syndicated TV show "Thunder in Paradise" said that he used steroids only to treat injuries.

During televised World Wrestling Federation matches, Hogan was presented as a role model and often urged his young fans to eat vitamins and say prayers.

McMahon, 48, promoter for some of the biggest names in the business and owner of the WWF, is charged with conspiracy to distribute steroids and possession with intent to distribute.

Prosecutors have said McMahon "urged and cajoled wrestlers to take steroids," which were distributed "like candy" to the pumped-up athletes.

McMahon, who has denied the charges, faces up to 11 years in prison if convicted. On Monday, wrestler Kevin Patrick Wacholz — better known as the convict-villain "Nailz" — testified that McMahon told him in January 1992, "I strongly suggest you go on the gas."

Jim Stoner, associate director for the Center for Computer-Aided Design, sits in front of the driving simulator housed in the Engineering Research Facility. This simulator can be used to test all manners of land vehicles from sports cars to bulldozers to armored military transports.

SIMULATOR

Kuhl said the U.S. Department of Transportation is spending a lot of money developing highway systems for the next century and research, and the driving simulator has had "a very small but increasingly important role in that."

Another major thrust in simulator research projects is virtual prototyping, which Kuhl said will drastically shorten the time it takes to make a new vehicle.

"This will allow us to bring in the human performance much earlier," Kuhl said. "It gives us a chance to fine tune and highly optimize designs."

Instead of actually building a physical prototype for a new design, virtual prototyping allows Kuhl to feed information about the new design into the simulator so tests can be run before design concepts are locked in.

"Theoretically we can model anything, but the real advantage is that you can model things that don't exist," Kuhl said. "There is also tremendous potential for using this kind of device for medical-related projects."

Currently there are tests being run on an ocular implant device for cataract patients for FDA approval. Kuhl said this is the first time the simulator is being used in the FDA approval process.

"We think we're going to see a lot more of this," Kuhl said. "Certainly these are things which a simulator is well-suited to look at."

All funding for simulator research projects comes from external sources, Kuhl said, including salaries for the six faculty members, 19 full-time advanced-degree specialists and more than 50 graduate and undergraduate students.

"The work is rewarding, but you constantly realize that there's still a ways to go," said associate director Jim Stoner.

He said the work done in the simulator is of interest to a variety of people with different interests and goals.

"We have had hundreds of visitors from all over the world and that opens up a lot of new opportunities," Stoner said. "The question is, now, what do you do with them."

"In some cases, there is an advantage in dealing with foreign companies," he said. "In the U.S., Iowa is seen as being remote, but if you go to Europe, they don't see any difference between a university in California or one on the East Coast."

However, there is one drawback to this widespread interest in simulator experiments.

"One thing I've felt bad about is that a number of student groups and others have asked for tours and visits, but we just can't do it like we used to," Stoner said.

si attacks and many refugees apparently believed they were in imminent danger.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali urged an immediate cease-fire in Rwanda, saying, "Unless this exodus ... ceases, the stability of the whole region will be endangered."

There was fear of trouble with Goma residents, members of a Bantu group, who lined streets to watch the procession. Some shouted obscenities at the newcomers. Goma is also home to a Tutsi refugee camp of about 8,500 people.

An estimated 200,000 to 250,000 people poured past three overwhelmed checkpoints along the border by late afternoon. They balanced bundles of possessions and mattresses on their heads, carried babies on their backs and herded along reluctant goats and cattle.

The refugees filled four fields and a soccer stadium set aside for them, then started laying down mattresses, mats and tattered blankets anywhere they could find space. Smoke from cooking fires obscured the sky. A U.N. jeep led a column of refugees north toward open fields near the airport 2 1/2 miles outside town.

The refugees had to fend for themselves in the open with not even tents to shield them from Thursday's light drizzle.

Up to 1 million Hutus have been reported on the road to Zaire. They fear the rebels want to avenge widespread massacres of minority Tutsis by extremist supporters of Rwanda's Hutu-dominated government, blamed for most of the estimated 200,000 to 500,000 deaths in the past three months.

No evidence of reprisals has surfaced.

Goma was a dusty city of 20,000 people before Rwanda's war resumed in April but now is home to more than 150,000 with scant water supplies despite being on the shore of Lake Kivu. Sanitation has become a problem.

At the peak of the flood Thursday, 600 refugees crossed into Goma each minute, relief officials said. In the next few days, the number of refugees around Goma alone could reach 900,000, they said.

Officials are considering vaccinating all refugees against major diseases.

An estimated 3 million people — out of a prewar population of about 7.5 million — have fled their homes in Rwanda, a mountainous central African nation about twice the size of Connecticut.

U.N. officials estimate 1.5 million to 2 million refugees are in western Rwanda alone. More than 500,000 have fled east into Tanzania, south into Burundi and north into Uganda.

France said Thursday that 1 million refugees are crowded in southwestern Rwanda, where its troops set up a sanctuary for civilians. It repeated its plea for urgent international help in caring for them.

But France also said it would not protect the Hutu government, whose troops have been pushed into a stretch of territory along Rwanda's western border.

The Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front has said its troops will stop fighting once a new multiethnic government is set up and the leaders responsible for the massacres are captured.

and statements of approval centered around the commission's efforts to define a family by creating a registry for domestic partnerships.

This registry would allow domestic partners to publicly document their relationship, enabling employers to voluntarily provide equal treatment in employment benefits for same-sex partners and their dependents.

"I am touched and overwhelmed by the group's effort to recognize the need," Linda Kroon, an Iowa City resident said. "I want to give a big thanks. It was long overdue."

Rick Graf, a commission member, said the registry would provide the means for the city to eventually offer benefits for domestic partnerships because the ordinance will help in defining what a domestic partnership is. Graf said the registry will encourage domestic partners of the les-bi-gay community to form stronger, longer lasting relationships.

"This registry allows for public acknowledgement of our relationships," Graf said. "I think it will help couples form a public commitment, which will cause them to seriously think about themselves as couples and will help lead to longer lasting relationships."

David Murga, an Iowa City resident who works as a UI Admissions counselor, believes the attempt the commission is making to create the registry will help in recognizing unions of all forms.

"Not having a domestic partnership policy is blatant discrimination," Murga said. "It's good to know that we live in a city that would take the steps necessary in initiating the ordinance. It shows the city is trying to offer a layer of support, and if one should ever encounter discrimination, there is a place where one can go to voice their concerns."

Commission member Pat Harvey was pleased that members of the community were willing to attend the forum.

"It's their ordinance to use and take advantage of," she said. "If the outcome is what the community needs and wants, then that's what we're here for."

evidence suppression request in Superior Court although it was turned down during Simpson's preliminary hearing last week in Municipal Court.

Clark's role as prosecutor also could be jeopardized because she could potentially be called as a witness in a hearing to suppress evidence, said Erwin Chemerinsky, a law professor at the University of Southern California.

Sandi Gibbons, a spokeswoman for the district attorney's office, said prosecutors often are called to a crime scene before a warrant arrives to advise police on legal issues.

"The prosecutor goes only as an observer. The prosecutor is not involved in searching or picking up anything," she said.

Cowlings, a longtime friend of Simpson's, had been scheduled to appear in court today. He was arrested on charges of aiding and abetting Simpson's flight and has been free on $250,000 bail.

Cowlings' lawyer, Donald Re, said he was told that Clark had made a recommendation on Cowlings to her superiors, but he did not know what it was.

Sources told the AP on Wednesday that it was unlikely that charges would be filed.

Meanwhile, Re said Cowlings had no knowledge of a passport or $10,000 in cash allegedly found in the Ford Bronco that Cowlings drove with Simpson in the back. KNBC-TV and The Los Angeles Times reported that police seized nearly $10,000 and Simpson's passport from the Bronco after the nationally televised chase that led to Simpson's arrest.

Re suggested the notion that Simpson was going to use the passport to flee made no sense because "when the police picked them up on the freeway, they were on their way back to the house."

surely be answered by U.S. military action.

Reports that Haitian rulers are cooperating in illegal drug smuggling.

Aristide said last month that 46 to 48 tons of cocaine have passed through Haiti annually to the United States since he was deposed in September 1991. The Justice Department is investigating the charge. The State Department's assessment in April was that drug-related activity through Haiti was relatively low compared with the Bahamas or Mexico. It also said the U.S. government does not have evidence directly linking Haitian officials to drug trafficking. A former U.S. diplomat called drug trafficking a poor justification for invasion, wryly noting, "If you invaded every drug transit country, you'd invade them all" in Latin America.

Dealing with the refugee flood, with more than 15,000 boat people picked up by the Coast Guard this month and 23,000 so far this year.

Clinton blames the refugee flood on repression by Haiti's military. He has decreed in the face of American resistance to absorbing the Haitians that the boat people can no longer come to the United States for asylum.

Strawberry's first homer a big one

Associated Press
MONTREAL — Darryl Strawberry hit his first homer in over a year, a grand slam, and drove in five runs Thursday night as the San Francisco Giants won their fifth straight game, 8-3 over the Montreal Expos.

Strawberry's two-out home run off Pedro Martinez (6-5) in the fifth was his first since June 8, 1993, for the Los Angeles Dodgers. He was placed on the disabled list 10 days later because of back problems and missed the rest of the season.

The grand slam, over the right-field fence, was the sixth of Strawberry's career and his first since Aug. 21, 1991, as a member of the New York Mets.

Bud Black (3-0) worked six innings as the Giants won their season-high fifth straight since Strawberry joined them last Thursday.

Black, making his fifth start after off-season elbow and knee surgery, allowed three runs on five hits, struck out one and hit two batters.

Strawberry, who had managed just an infield single in 11 at-bats in his four previous games, also had an RBI single in the first and a leadoff double in the eighth off Tim Scott.

White Sox 6, Indians 3
CHICAGO — Robin Ventura's RBI single capped a two-run rally in the seventh inning as the Chicago White Sox moved back into first in the American League Central for the first time in a month, beating the Cleveland Indians.

The White Sox were last in first when tied for the top with Cleveland on June 13. They now lead the Indians by one game, and the teams will meet seven more times in the next 10 days and then not again in the regular season. Chicago is 4-1 against Cleveland this year.

Alex Fernandez (8-7), who gave up three runs in the first two innings, settled down and retired 13 straight at one point before Carlos Baerga singled in the eighth. Fernandez finished with a seven-hitter, walked one and a career-high 12 strikeouts. It was his fourth complete game.

Ventura's third hit on his 27th birthday was a blooper over short off reliever Derek Lilliquist as the Sox rallied from a 3-0 deficit for their seventh straight victory.

Trailing 3-2 in the seventh against Charles Nagy (7-6), the White Sox loaded the bases on singles by Norberto Martin and Tim Raines and a walk to Frank Thomas. Julio Franco then hit a tying sacrifice fly to finish Nagy, and Ventura punched an 0-2 pitch over short to score Raines.

Ron Karkovice hit his 11th homer in the eighth off Eric Plunk for a two-run cushion. Raines, who had three hits, added an RBI single in the inning.

Albert Belle hit his 25th homer, a 427-foot, two-out, two-run shot in the first following a single by Baerga.

The Indians got another run in the second as Sandy Alomar singled with one away and Wayne Kirby and Kenny Lofton had two-out singles.

Nagy lost his control in the fifth, throwing 11 straight balls and walking two batters before Raines hit an RBI single on a 3-2 pitch. With runners at first and third, Lofton then made a nice running catch at the center field fence to rob Thomas of extra bases, but the sacrifice fly made it 3-2.

After Raines stole second, Nagy saved a run by snagging Franco's hard hopper through the box before retiring Ventura on a fly ball.

Pirates 8, Astros 2
PITTSBURGH — Houston pitchers threw two run-scoring wild pitches and the Astros' usually reliable defense broke down in a five-run fifth inning as the Pirates won.

Jon Lieber (5-4) bounced back after a pair of rough starts against Cincinnati to pitch his first major-league complete game, strike out a career-high eight and walk nobody.

Lieber, a rookie right-hander who had allowed 10 runs over 10 innings in a pair of losses to the Reds, spaced eight hits.

Darryl Kile (6-4) took the loss. Kevin Bass hit his fifth homer in the second and Ken Caminiti hit his 18th in the fourth for Houston.

Don Slaught singled in the fifth for his 11th hit in 13 at-bats for Pittsburgh.

Marlins 5, Braves 3
ATLANTA — The Florida Marlins scored four times in the first inning and held off the slumping Atlanta Braves for their fourth consecutive victory.

The Braves lost their second straight, fifth in seven games and 10th in 16 games.

Jerry Browne keyed Florida's first inning with his first home run of the season and Benito Santiago capped it with a two-run homer off Steve Avery (6-3), his seventh of the year.

Mark Gardner (3-2) gave up six hits, three runs, walked two and struck out two in 5 2-3 innings for the win. Robb Nen recorded the final five outs for his 11th save in 11 chances.

Royals 5, Tigers 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin Appier allowed two hits in the first inning and nothing else through eight as he continued his domination of the Tigers.

Appier (6-6) allowed a leadoff single by Tony Phillips and a two-run home run by Travis Fryman in the first, but did not give up another hit. He struck out eight to improve his career mark against Detroit to 9-1. He also snapped a career-long five-start winless stretch.

Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

Wally Joyner, who missed 16 games with a sore shoulder, went 3-for-4 with two doubles and two RBI in his first game since coming off the disabled list.

Tim Belcher (8-9), who had won seven of his last nine decisions, fell to 0-4 in his career against Kansas City.

Rangers 7, Blue Jays 3
ARLINGTON, Texas — Dean Palmer doubled in a run and Manuel Lee brought in two with a double in a four-run second inning for the Rangers.

Palmer, who also hit his 18th homer, is 24-for-64 (.375) in his last 17 games, with 10 homers and 20 RBI.

The first-place Rangers have won eight of their last 12.

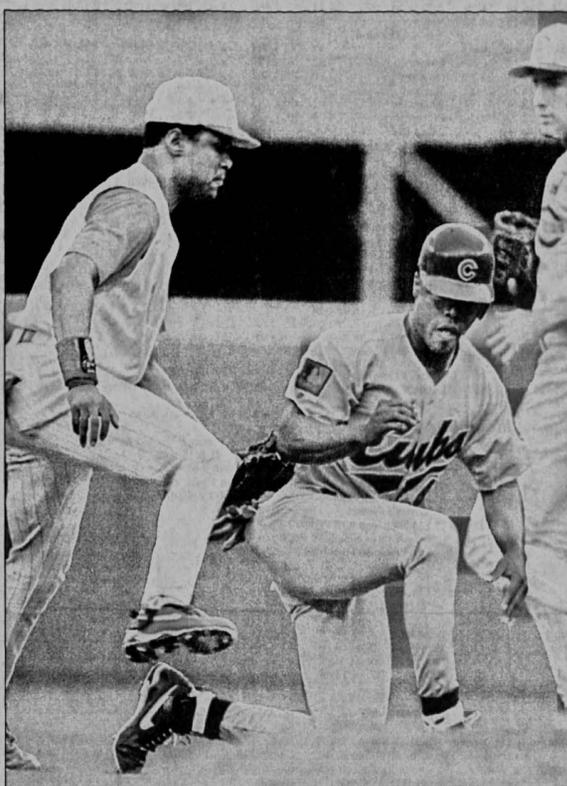

Hector Fajardo (5-5) gave the Rangers an effective start, allowing three runs and four hits in six innings.

Juan Gonzalez started the second-inning rally with a one-out single off Todd Stottlemyre (5-7), who has dropped his last four decisions.

Brewers 6, Twins 4
MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie pinch hitter Jeff Cirillo, batting just .107, hit a two-run double with one out in the ninth inning for the Brewers.

Turner Ward and Matt Mieske both hit one-out singles off Carl Willis (1-4) before Cirillo greeted reliever Mark Guthrie with a double to left-center.

Michael Ignasiak (3-1) pitched two innings for the victory.

Cincinnati Red shortstop Barry Larkin (11) tags out Chicago Cubs' Glenallen Hill (4) after he was picked off first and caught in a run-down in the second inning in Cincinnati Thursday night. Reds first baseman Hal Morris is at right.

Graduate assistant takes related job at Tennessee

Kirk Sampson, a graduate student assistant in the UI women's sports information office, recently was named graduate assistant at the University of Tennessee sports information office.

Sampson will assist with seven Lady Volunteer sports including the three-time NCAA champion women's basketball team. The Lady Vols have been tabbed as preseason No. 1 picks by U.S. Basketball Writers Association.

At Iowa, Sampson had been responsible for media relations for the UI women's swimming and diving team this past season. A 1992 Iowa graduate, Sampson served a one-year promotions internship at the Minnesota women's athletic department. He also spent three years as a student intern in the UI sports promotions office.

The Marshalltown native will complete his master's degree at Tennessee in sports administration.

Pippen says he wants to stay with Bulls

AURORA, Ill. (AP) — Scottie Pippen, the subject of numerous trade rumors before and after last month's NBA Draft, said Thursday he would like to remain with the Chicago Bulls.

"I know that as a professional, I can be traded at any time," Pippen said during a news conference to announce a September charity basketball game that could be the final event at Chicago Stadium.

Pippen said he might invite retired teammate Michael Jordan to play in the game.

A rumored trade of Pippen to the Seattle SuperSonics for the Shawn Kemp was called off on draft night. His name has been mentioned recently in a deal with Miami, a rumor team officials denied.

"I was shocked during the draft when my name was banded about as to a possible trade," Pippen said. "I have not, however, scheduled any meeting with Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf. I plan to spend the rest of the summer on vacation. Hopefully, I'll be back with the Bulls."

Pippen also said he would like to keep playing with fellow forward Horace Grant, an unrestricted free agent who expressed his unhappiness with the Bulls last season.

Yankees' Showalter offers Griffey no apologies

SEATTLE (AP) — New York Yankees manager Buck Showalter didn't seek Ken Griffey Jr. out and apologize Thursday night.

Nor will he. "It would be pretty hypocritical for me to apologize for something I feel," Showalter said before the Yankees' game with the Seattle Mariners.

Showalter created a major-league furor when he told the New York Times magazine in a story that was published Sunday that the 24-year-old Griffey acts as if he's bored on the field by wearing his baseball hat backward and letting his shirttail hang out during warmups.

In a show of solidarity for what they perceived as an insult against their five-time All-Star center fielder, the entire Mariners' team wore their hats on backward during their stretching exercises. Some Mariners' players wore their hats backward during batting practice, too.

Griffey, who leads the American League with 33 home runs, reacted heatedly to Showalter's critique of his dressing style earlier this week and said he would answer Showalter's criticism on the field.

"I'm happy," he said. "I'm not going to change for one person. I've had my hat on this way since I was a kid."

Daly muscles up near leaders

Ron Sirak
Associated Press

TURNBERRY, Scotland — Tom Watson and John Daly, two very different golfers, played two very different golf courses in Thursday's first round of the British Open. And it came out the same for them.

Both played the Ailsa Course at Turnberry and both shot 2-under-par 68s, three strokes behind leader Gregory Turner of New Zealand.

But Watson, precise and methodical, was among those lucky enough to play early in the day, getting some sun, little wind — by Scottish standards — and no rain.

By afternoon, when the free-swinging Daly teed off, all 1,100 feet of the Ailsa Craig was lost in the clouds and a cold rain was carried on biting gusts off the Firth of Clyde.

It was truly a round of almost two completely different courses — with the wind and against it — and almost two completely different days — before the wind and rain rolled in and after. That combination conspired to produce a bizarre leaderboard.

One stroke behind Turner was Jonathan Lomas of England with a 66 and two back was Andrew Magee at 67.

For the 44-year-old Watson, who teed off at 7:30 a.m., it was a flashback to 1977 when he won at Turnberry in a classic duel with Jack Nicklaus.

"That's the same score I shot in '77 in the first round," said Watson, whose only bogey was a 3-putt on No. 6. "I'm having fun playing golf right now. Sixty-eight is right on track to win the tournament."

If he does, it would be his sixth British Open championship but his first major title since winning the British Open in 1983 and his first victory of any kind since 1987.

"I'm not giving up hope, that's for sure," Watson said.

Daly, who had a 1 p.m. tee time, saw the weather at its worst, but just overpowered it.

"The wind favors the long hitters," he said. "I don't even have to think twice. I just hit my driver."

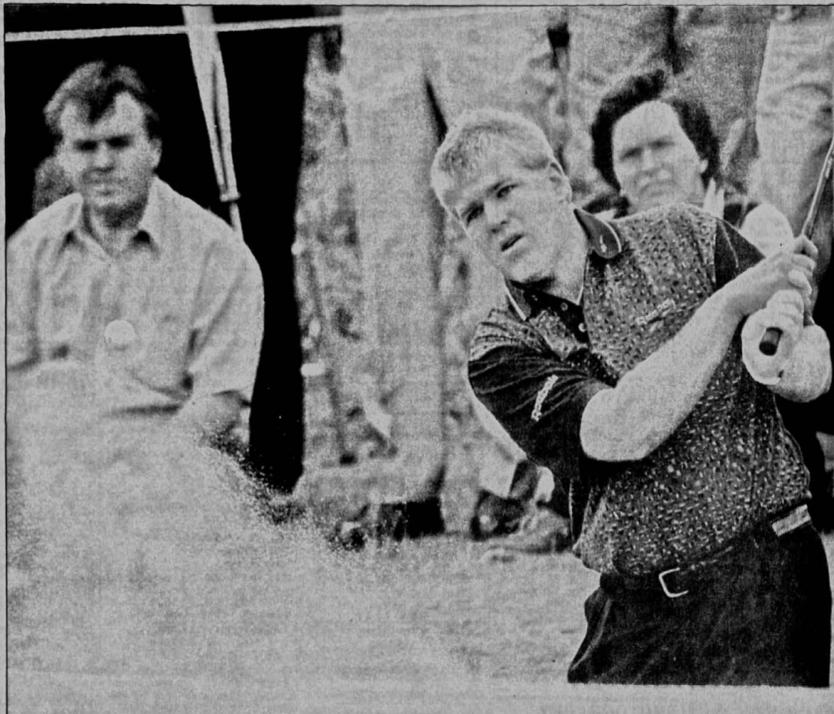

On the 528-yard 7th, Daly hit the green with a drive and an 8-iron. In practice, without the wind, he needed a 2-iron.

As the weather worsened, play slowed to a crawl and scores soared as players puzzled over club selection and pondered the wind-blown fate of their shots.

One of the few late starters to conquer the elements was Turner, a 10-year pro with just two victories on the European Tour.

He moved into a tie for the lead with an eagle on the par-4 16th when his 178-yard 2-iron second shot cut through the bitter wind and found the hole on the second bounce.

"I read it quite well," joked Turner, who also eagled the par-5 7th.

He followed the eagle at 16 with a birdie on the par-5 17th to move into first by himself, finishing at 5-under 65.

Daly's 8-iron on No. 7 and Turner's 2-iron on No. 16 best displayed the difference between playing this course in the wind. On a calm day those club selections would be exactly reversed.

Lomas, winless in five years as a pro, was another early starter and made four birdies for a 66.

"I'm delighted," he said. "I struggled a bit towards the end. It was because of being up there. I was nervous a little bit."

And Magee, who earned his third victory in nine years as a pro in the Northern Telecom Open in January, got to three under with an eagle on the par-5 17th and finished at 67.

Loren Roberts three-putted 17 from 10 feet and also finished at 68.

WORLD CUP FINAL

Baggio hurt, Brazil awaiting Cup

Piero Valsecchi
Associated Press

MARTINSVILLE, N.J. — Shocked by an injury to its scoring superstar, Italy's World Cup team wasted no time in celebration Thursday.

Sure, it had a berth in Sunday's final against Brazil, setting the stage for the first four-time champion of soccer's biggest show.

But the 2-1 victory over Bulgaria on Wednesday that brought the championship spot also contained a darker element — an injury to the right leg of striker Roberto Baggio.

Baggio, who scored five of Italy's eight goals in the World Cup, is nursing a light hamstring strain and team doctors said he's a questionable starter.

"At the moment, his chances to play are 50 percent. He will be rested for 48 hours. We hope for a positive solution," said Dr. Andrea Ferretti.

Coach Arrigo Sacchi, tense over Baggio's injury and apparently annoyed with the quick switch of Italian media from bitter criticism to redundant praise, said Thursday it was not time for celebrations because the team must concentrate on the final against an extremely tough opponent.

"The less you speak, the less you praise before the World Cup final, the better. We have won nothing. We are in the running for the title and must not lose our determination, our winning charge," Sacchi said.

No decision on Baggio would be taken until hours before the kickoff, Sacchi said. He said he was not thinking about a replacement.

But Sacchi admitted the absence of Italy's top striker in the final would be a hard blow.

Gianfranco Zola, who has served a two-game suspension, is Baggio's most likely substitute.

"We risk to lose Roberto in the moment we had just recovered him, in the moment he had reached his peak condition," Sacchi said before the team departure for Los Angeles.

Baggio, shut out in the first three games of the tournament and bitterly criticized for his performances, tallied two goals against Nigeria in the second round, one against Spain in the quarterfinals and two against Bulgaria in the semifinals.

All his goals were decisive, and some thrilling — two in the dying minutes and one in overtime.

"Even in the worst games Roberto can come out with something extraordinary. He was extraordinary yesterday. But all players were very, very good," Sacchi said.

He said the team "was humiliated" by some critics following its difficult qualification in the preliminary round.

"Italy feels as good as Brazil and will play for victory. We start from the same level," he said. "We think we can control their impressive offense. But there is a major difference between strategy and its accomplishment on the field. Certainly it will be another exhausting game for us."

In Sunday's final, Italy will miss two key defenders — suspended Mauro Tassotti and Alessandro Costacurta.

Tassotti was given an eight-

WHERE'S THE 'D'?

Defense goes on summer vacation

Take one look at a Prime Time League stat sheet and the numbers jump out at you.

Games have the look of high-scoring NBA contests with point totals consistently over 100. Wednesday night, Good-fellow Printing-Imprinted Sportswear poured in 130 points. In another game, Hills Bank and Trust Co. lit up the scoreboard with 125 points.

The astronomical numbers are not limited to the teams. In fact, any of the seven current Hawkeyes competing in the league are capable of putting up Jordan-esque point totals.

On July 6, Russ Millard scored 51 of his team's 104 points. On the same night, Kevin Skillett had 42 points and followed that with 44 one week later. Meanwhile, Jim Bartels has been scoring in the mid 30s consistently.

Follow these games for an extended period of time and it's easy to become desensitized to these statistics. If a Hawkeye scores less than 30 in a game, it's a mediocre night.

Based on these numbers, one might expect to see a team full of Glenn Robinsons at Carver-Hawkeye Arena this season.

All of this begs the question: Where's the defense?

The answer may be a combination of lack of talent and effort.

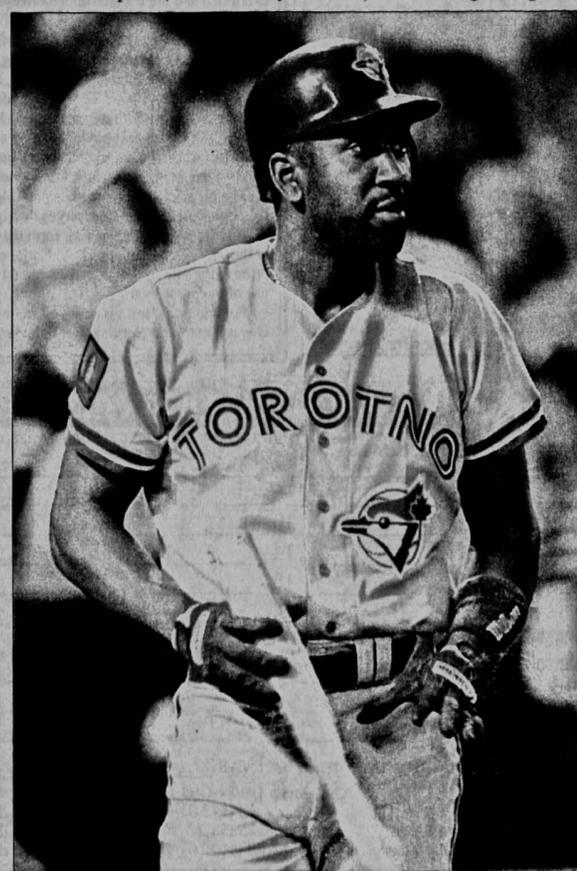

Skillett believes that some teams get complacent with big leads, giving the appearance of poor defense.

"It isn't the Big Ten. A lot of teams get up by 10 or 15 points and the defense cuts down some," Skillett said.

So some players may get lackadaisical on the defensive end, but that still doesn't account for all the scoring going on.

"A lot of times I have good

All-Star break does Cubbies some good

Terry Kinney

CINCINNATI — Mark Parent guessed inside slider. John Smiley obliged.

"I just took a chance that he was going to throw something in, so I cheated a little bit," said Parent, whose two-run homer in the seventh inning gave the Chicago Cubs the lead en route to a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds on Thursday night.

"If you're looking at how the game was going and who should have won, it should have been John," Parent said. "I don't know what my numbers are against Smiley, but they aren't that good."

Parent's third homer of the season came after Smiley (9-9) had walked Steve Buechele. Todd Haney went in to run for Buechele, and Parent hit Smiley's first pitch over the left-field wall for a 3-2 Cubs lead.

"I let the team down a little bit," Smiley said. "I was a little displeased with my pitch selection. I should have given him a changeup or a curveball. I kicked myself after that."

Steve Trachsel (8-6) scattered five hits over six innings, walked five and struck out four. He is unbeaten on the road, where he improved to 7-0. Randy Myers got the final four outs for his 18th save.

"We did some things in a clutch way," Cubs manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "Our pitchers did some good work in some pretty tight spots."

"It was a good win. I hope it's a trend. I want it to become a routine so it can become a habit."

Cincinnati manager Dave Johnson, noting that the Reds had scored at least four runs in 10 of their previous 11 games, said his team just got off to a slow start after the All-Star break.

"The offense is a little sluggish right now," Johnson said. "They held us to three runs, which is unusual."

The Reds scored first, getting a run in the second inning on a single by Bret Boone and a double by Thomas Howard, who was starting in left field in place of Kevin Mitchell.

Mitchell missed a flight from his home in San Diego, where he spent the All-Star break, and was not in uniform when the game started. He arrived in the middle of the game, pinch-hit in the eighth and drew a walk.

Chicago tied the game in the third on a groundout by Rey Sanchez after Smiley had walked the first two batters.
