U.S. airdrop to Rwandans bungled

Refugees leave camps, head back across border

Michelle Faul
Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — Rwandan refugees, hoping that life in their war-ruined homeland will be better than in their wretched camps, started trickling home Sunday after Zaire reopened the border.

The first wave of an extensive U.S. food aid airlift arrived Sunday, but relief workers say it will be many days before the influx of aid can defeat the disease, hunger and exhaustion that have killed as many as 10,000 refugees in the past five days.

"Everybody is dying here," said farmer Jean de Dieu Kadogo as he led a small boy across the border. "We'd rather go home."

Cholera, which is spread by feces and can kill in a matter of hours, is moving rapidly through the area. Other diseases and malnutrition have swept through camps polluted by corpses, excrement and smoke from cooking fires.

Hundreds of refugees had massed at the Rwandan border, hoping to return home after days in the fetid camps. But Zairian troops stopped them for two days, apparently until the border area could be cleared of abandoned weapons.

Zairian Prime Minister Kengo wa Dondo reopened the border on Sunday, leading a procession of 20 carloads of officials and red-bereted soldiers to cheers and yells from the waiting refugees.

At least 2,000 streamed over in the first hour, then the flow slowed to a few people every five or 10 minutes. There was no indication that most of the 1 million refugees in the Goma area were preparing to leave.

The refugees are mostly members of the Hutu ethnic group who fled as rebels led by the Tutsi ethnic group advanced westward. They feared the rebels would retaliate for massacres of Tutsis by Hutu militias.

Between the massacres and the casualties in the war between the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front and the former government, an estimated 200,000 to 500,000 Rwandans have died since the slaughter began in early April.

The rebels defeated the government army last week and are urging the refugees to return home. U.N. officials say there have been no reports of rebels abusing civilians, and the new government says it will punish only those found guilty of perpetrating the massacres.

But the refugees are deeply suspicious.

"Have you heard anything? Are you sure they're not killing Hutus here?" said Janvier Nkurikiyimfura, who walked across the border carrying his mattress.

He walked along a road on the shore of Lake Kivu, looking at corpses rotting in the water, then reached the city of Gisenyi — deserted, looted by soldiers in their last stand and reeking of death.

Zairian villagers carry away U.S. aid in Katale, north of Goma, Zaire, that was erroneously airdropped away from the Rwandan refugees it was meant for Sunday. A U.S. airdrop criticized beforehand as a publicity stunt missed the target by a half-mile, scattering bundles over terrified Rwandan refugees who thought they were being bombed.

KATALE, Zaire — A U.S. aid airdrop criticized beforehand as a publicity stunt missed the target by a half-mile Sunday, scattering bundles over terrified Rwandan refugees who thought they were being bombed.

"I can't believe it," said British aid worker John Wallis as he slashed at wrappings with a bowie knife and flour spilled into a muddy cornfield. "This is criminal. I'm speechless."

Three C-130s dropped about 10 tons of corned beef and other food, half of the 20 tons they carried to the drop zone. One bundle narrowly missed a U.N. helicopter and another almost hit a school. Others fell deep among banana trees and workers said they expected to salvage only about half of it.

Because of the drop, U.N. and volunteer officials said, trucks needed for getting food and supplies to the more than 1 million refugees around Goma were held up much of the day.

Trucks with a total capacity of 40 tons — twice the airdrop amount — drove the 30 miles from Goma to the Katale camp empty because aid workers did not get enough advance notice to load them.

Oxfam rushed in a water purification plant for the Katale camp, already rife with cholera, but no trucks were available to carry it from the Goma airport.

Then the airdrop was 90 minutes late, holding up the trucks even longer. And in the end, the aid delivered amounted only to about 3 percent of the camp's daily need, equal to two truck loads.

Plane makes emergency landing near I.C.

The Iowa City pilot of a small experimental plane had to make an emergency landing near Highway 218 west of Iowa City after noticing engine problems.

Dick Pattschull, the only person in the plane, landed without injury in a grassy patch between Highway 218 and the southbound on-ramp of Highway 218.

No one on the highway was injured, but there was a small amount of damage to the plane, according to the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

Arson believed cause of Lucas School fire

Investigators suspect attempted arson was the cause of a small Thursday night fire at Robert Lucas School, 830 Southlawn Drive.

A smoldering fire near the playground area was extinguished. A flammable liquid had been thrown in a glass container and ignited.

According to reports, three young males, one on a moped, were seen in the immediate area.

The Iowa City Police Department is continuing their investigation.

Cease-fire ends in Bosnia-Herzegovina

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — After months of relative calm, war returned to the Bosnian capital Sunday as sniper fire closed the airport and fighting flared between Bosnian Serbs and government troops.

As fighting intensified in Sarajevo and in northern Bosnia, the Bosnian Serbs came under pressure to accept an international peace plan to end the 2-year-old civil war.

U.N. officials counted 314 cease-fire violations in Sarajevo between Saturday and Sunday, double the usual number, said Cmdr. Eric Chaperon, a U.N. spokesman.

Sniper fire prompted the U.N. command to close the airport indefinitely, Chaperon said. The United Nations already had suspended its humanitarian airlift after five planes were hit by gunfire in three days.

Above: Diver Cal Colony looks on as water is drained from a stolen Ford Escort found on the bottom of the Iowa River Sunday. The car, which had been reported stolen from the Wardway parking lot June 23, was found during a search for a pickup truck and boat trailer that went in after a mechanical failure Saturday afternoon.

Macal's trailer and his 1978 Ford F150 ended up at the bottom of the Iowa River after his brakes failed while launching his boat at Sturgis Ferry Park in Iowa City.

Search for truck leads to bevy of stolen cars

A Marion couple that temporarily lost their truck and boat trailer in the Iowa River Saturday at Sturgis Ferry Park may have stumbled across the final resting place of several stolen vehicles.

It all started when the brakes on Ron and Peg Macal's 1978

Ford pickup truck failed while they were trying to unload their boat.

"The motor was still running when it hit the water," said Peg Macal, who planned an afternoon on the river with her husband and dog. But after six hours of searching the murky river on Saturday, the Macals still hadn't found their truck.

The mystery heated up when the Macals and friends pulled in something other than their pickup.

What they found was a stolen Ford Escort — the keys still in the ignition.

"It's a pretty new experience for this area," Iowa City Police Officer Ralph Cox said.

Cox confirmed that the Escort was stolen and that the owner had been notified but said police weren't ready to release the owner's name.

He also had doubts about any future for the car now that it was back on dry land.

"It's very wet and smelly," he said.

The Macals eventually brought

BERLIN — A gang of 22 neo-Nazis went on a rampage at the site of the Buchenwald concentration camp, throwing stones, shouting Nazi slogans and threatening to burn a woman who works there, police said Sunday.

A tour bus carrying 21 young men and one woman pulled up Saturday evening at the former camp, now a national memorial to the 56,000 people who died there between 1937 and 1945.

They shouted "Sieg Heil" and gave the stiff-armed Hitler salute. They broke a window in a barracks building and pulled out a cart that was part of an exhibit on inmates' labor. And they threatened a staff member.

"One of them said to this woman, 'I'll burn you with my own hands,'"

Haitian graveyards plundered

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The main cemetery of this capital city has become a horror show.

Since an international trade embargo was clamped on Haiti, thieves desperate for money have crossed the line into doing the unspeakable, turning the beautiful landmark of mausoleums on a hill overlooking Port-au-Prince's bay into a ghoulish scene of plundered and desecrated tombs.

The thieves, trying to get at jewelry on the corpses and at the coffins' iron and bronze handles, have bashed holes into the above-ground tombs, pulled out caskets

Director inspires understanding through art

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

In the large open room of the UI Museum of Art, just beyond Robert Arneson's sculpture, "Gateway to Self-Realization," hang the modern works of Joan Mitchell, Philip Guston and Jackson Pollock.

The paintings are a mishmash of colors drawn in seemingly random strokes and may be solid evidence of why some people are skeptical of the talents of modern artists.

But for those who don't appreciate the paintings, Stephen Prokopoff suggests they spend more time studying them. Nearing his third year as the museum's director, Prokopoff is hoping that more people will do just that.

"Art is powerful because it is something endemic in the nature of human beings," he said. "If you don't make it, at least you have the capacity to understand it — or if not to understand it, at least to react to it."

The first step to understanding these modern works is to look at the brush strokes not individually, but rather as they relate to one another.

"If you can think of it as a dance company, you don't watch just one dancer, but his movement in relation to the other dancers on stage," Prokopoff said. "It's not just a gray spot but 'how does it relate to the red areas?' as well."

"Look at the mood of the picture — is it agitated, calm ... is it organic in caricature — and you get some sense of what is going on."

The biggest impediment to understanding art, then, may be taking the time to walk in and see it.

"Museums strangely enough are often intimidating," Prokopoff said. "People see the high ceilings and the guards — you could describe San Quentin in that way."

Prokopoff now sets aside several

Danny Frazier/The Daily Iowan

UI Museum of Art Director Stephen Prokopoff said the first step to understanding it is to look at wants more people to appreciate modern art. He how brush strokes relate to one another.

days a year to bring in area third-graders to see some of the 9,000 works in the museum's collection. The next step, he said, is to bring in seventh-graders and then 10th-graders. His objective is to give children the same opportunity he had when as a young child living in Chicago, he had the chance to wander around the city's Field Museum and look at the various dioramas.

"I thought, this is the most wonderful place to be," he said. "I saw these animals in settings that looked real and first discovered museums were wonderful."

With a master's degree in modern art, Prokopoff's tastes may have refined a bit since then, but the beauty he initially saw in museums as a child is largely the same.

Now much of Prokopoff's time is spent writing grant proposals that will enable the museum to bring in new exhibits that represent the various human experiences.

Besides Pollock's "Mural," the museum is filled with Hopi and Navajo kachinas, Alfred DeCredico's drawings of basic life and one of the world's best collections of African sculptures and masks.

"We try to present different things that will appeal to different tastes and hope along the way people will broaden theirs," he said. Prokopoff said his own tastes have broadened as he has helped to put together hundreds of exhibits over the years. In doing so, he learns about the various aspects of other types of art and, to some extent, people as well.

Just as the key to understanding Mitchell's "Red Painting" is to see how the strokes relate to one another so is it important to look at people in the same way, he said; the problem in America is that people too often see their differences before they see their similarities, he said.

"You may go to a ghetto, say, 'Let's go to a museum,' and get the reaction, 'What is a museum?' Bring them in, bus them in, do whatever you have to, just get them there because I believe it goes a long way to integrating people into the larger society."

Gene Kelly suffers mild stroke

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gene Kelly, the acrobatic dancer who starred in Hollywood musicals of the 1940s and '50s, was hospitalized after a mild stroke.

Kelly, 81, was in stable condition and "resting comfortably" at UCLA Medical Center after his stroke Saturday night, nursing supervisor Susan Davidson said Sunday.

Kelly's publicist, Warren Cowan, said doctors described the stroke as mild and "in such a ... minimal way that I don't believe that there was any permanent damage."

Kelly choreographed and danced in such musical hits as "An American in Paris," "Singin' in the Rain" and "On the Town." Kelly also had several serious acting roles and directed "Hello, Dolly!" and other films.

He attended a July 16 concert given by opera tenors Placido Domingo, Jose Carreras and Luciano Pavarotti at Dodger Stadium.

Kelly, seated in the audience, stood up and exchanged nods with the tenors after they sang his signature song, "Singin' in the Rain."

'Star Trek' telepathist boggled by card-playing scene

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Marina Sirtis, who played half-alien counselor Deanna Troi in "Star Trek: The Next Generation," expressed mock indignation toward the show's writers over the series' final scene.

In it, the crew is playing poker when the reserved Capt. Jean-Luc Picard uncharacteristically asks to join the game. (She joked that the cast referred to Patrick Stewart's character as "Pecan, wackiest nut of the galaxy.")

Sirtis, at a Star Trek convention through Sunday, quipped that she never understood how the writers allowed her character, who possesses telepathic powers, to play poker.

"How stupid can they be?" Sirtis said. "It's like I'd wait until a really good hand came up and say, 'No, Geordi, honey, I can't tell if you're bluffing.'" The "blind" Cmdr. Geordi LaForge was played by LeVar Burton.

Guest lists haven't been announced yet for the Las Vegas shows, which will be taped at the 680-seat Hollywood Theatre.

Musical brothers march to different tunes

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Wynton takes his jazz straight, unswayed by pop or rock influences. Branford likes to mix things around, maybe add a little Sting.

So don't confuse those Marsalis brothers.

Branford, 33, has been wielding his soprano saxophone for late-night viewers as the bandleader on "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" since 1992.

Meanwhile, 32-year-old Wynton, an acclaimed trumpeter and composer, has won eight Grammys and helped found the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra.

"I'm fiery, a trumpet player," Wynton says in the July 30 issue of TV Guide. "Branford was earnest, a nice guy."

Leno bets on Las Vegas as new venue

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Jay Leno took his late-night show from California to the sidewalks of New York. Now he's gambling on the glitz of Las Vegas.

"The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" plans to broadcast from Las Vegas for the week of Sept. 19-23, the MGM Grand hotel-casino announced Saturday.

The show, usually taped in Burbank, Calif., was taped in New York earlier this year. Last year, Leno took the show to Boston for a night to commemorate the last episode of "Cheers."

No word on whether "Late Show" host David Letterman will be there, too.

Actress makes gang connections for role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Growing up in a largely Hispanic neighborhood, Seidy Lopez avoided gang members. So she was apprehensive about meeting real gang members who acted with her in the movie "Mi Vida Loca."

Read before you sign First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton ought to know better — always read something before you sign it. After an hourlong meeting with the editorial board at The Oregonian on Friday, Rodham Clinton stopped to shake hands with a group of employees. One of the employees asked the first lady to sign his T-shirt. Rodham Clinton did without looking first. The shirt said, "The way to a man's heart is through his fly."

Lopez said, recalling a meeting with two women from the same neighborhood.

One of them said Lopez couldn't play her part because "You don't even talk like us. You're just a white girl," the 23-year-old native of Mexico said.

But while filming "Mi Vida Loca," the story of two childhood friends who join a gang and become enemies when they become pregnant by the same man, Lopez learned from her co-stars. The movie, which opened Friday, is Spanish for "my crazy life."

MALE RESPONSIBILITY TARGETED

Former domestic abusers participate in I.C. forum

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

The biggest impediment to ending domestic violence is that the abusers aren't forced to confront the personal problems behind their crimes, a man who has been prosecuted for domestic violence said at public meeting on Saturday.

"I don't hear too much about the solution of the perpetrators," Alan Martin, a former abuser, said. "They don't make them face themselves. I know that something needs to be done about it and can be done if we do it right."

More than 40 people attended the meeting, which was sponsored by the Committee to Elect Minnette, the organization in charge of state Rep. Minnette Doderer's re-election campaign.

Nine panelists from a variety of local agencies, including the Iowa City Police Department and the Domestic Violence Intervention Program as well as former abusers and victims of abuse, participated in the discussion.

Each of the panel members spoke on a different aspect of domestic violence.

Doderer opened the panel discussion. "We need to let those people know that there is help, protection and services to find in Johnson County," Doderer said. "Domestic violence is an epidemic in our society and we need to spend more money to fight it."

Steve Trefz, of the Mid-Eastern Iowa Community Mental Health Center, said the focal point of efforts to stop that epidemic should be the men who perpetuate it.

"Domestic violence is an issue that involves real people and real lives in our community. It's not about getting angry. It's not about substance abuse," Trefz said. "It's about men choosing to abuse power and control; it's premeditated. Ultimately, it's up to us men to say, 'We're going to stop beating women.'"

According to statistics from the Committee to Elect Minnette, more than 6,000 cases of domestic violence were reported in Iowa in 1993, and a woman is the victim of abuse in the United States every 15 seconds.

Reports from the Johnson County attorney's office indicate that 104 cases of domestic assault causing injury were reported in the past year in the county.

Tim Stockstill, also a former abuser, talked about the need for general education of the public.

"We've been living in the problem and not trying to talk about the problem," Stockstill said. "The next time you yell at your child and use anger, you're starting an abuser."

Mari Martin, Alan Martin's wife, said the victims of abuse can also make an active effort to end the violence.

"You have to stop being a victim. You have to get counseling," Mari Martin said. "You've got to quit hating yourself, start loving yourself and start helping yourself."

County fair offers diverse entertainment

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

As one of Iowa's few county fairs with no gate or grandstand fees, the Johnson County Fair promises to be a great time for all, Manager Richard Gay said.

"There is a lot of good entertainment coming in," Gay said. "We have some good shows arranged, and our livestock numbers are up so we're looking for a real good turnout."

Among the attractions at the fair this year will be 4-H exhibits, the midway and a variety of entertainment — including country bands Home Brew and Dixie Cadillacs.

Even though last year's fair was dampened some by rain, Gay said the flood of '93 did not damage the fairgrounds.

"There was a little water-related damage, but it was not flood related," he said.

Janet Martin, director of Johnson County 4-H, a youth development program for boys and girls ages 9 to 19, said fairgoers are sure to see a wide variety of projects on display.

"Four-H members select a project, work on it throughout the year and are able to exhibit it at the fair," she said. "And if their project is an animal, they can show it. We will have many different projects on display like woodworking, science and mechanics, sewing, baking and photography."

Because the fairgrounds and facilities are used for different events all year round, preparing them for the fair doesn't take much time.

"We have a groundskeeper who lives on the grounds so he keeps it in good shape all year long," Gay said.

The fair is scheduled to begin today at 9 a.m. and runs through Friday.

'TRUE LIES' FULL OF STEREOTYPES

Film misrepresents Arabs

The movie "True Lies," recently released by 20th Century Fox, contains many true lies about Arab culture.

The movie stars Arnold Schwarzenegger as a spy attempting to save America from a Middle Eastern terrorist ring while simultaneously trying to add some spice to his decaying marriage. Arabs are used throughout the film to represent danger and to provide comic relief.

The Arabs are portrayed, of course, as terrorists and incompetent ones at that. They fire rockets backwards and run out of batteries in their video camera when making a tape to release to the press. Nevertheless, Schwarzenegger and his cohorts find them to be a terribly ominous threat to national security, describing them as "fanatical" and "psycho." Such images of Arabs are not new to the big screen or to mass media in general.

It is interesting that such negative stereotypes of Arabs persist when negative depictions of other minorities have decreased. African-Americans and Jewish groups have had considerable success in fighting the prejudice against their communities, and Latinos and American Indians are beginning to do the same. But Arabs apparently are still fair game for blatant racism.

The relative silence on this issue is partly due to the nature of the Arab community in the United States. Many Arabs have understandably separated themselves from mainstream American culture. But because of this insulation, they are unlikely to be aware of the depth of prejudice against them and therefore are unlikely to fight it. Often they find Arab stereotypes so ridiculous they don't even bother to debate them.

Meanwhile, non-Arabs are not encouraged to learn more about the Middle East so they rarely have information about Arab culture beyond the mostly negative portrayals in the media.

Arabs must be more aggressive in confronting the racism against their community, just as non-Arabs must educate themselves about Middle Eastern culture. Without such an effort, the gap between the two groups will only become larger and anti-Arab discrimination will continue.

IOWA CITY WATER RATES AT ISSUE

Improved planning needed

Iowa City residents soon may find themselves in hot water, and City Council members and the federal government will be responsible for turning up the heat. Last year, Iowa City had more water than it could handle; suddenly, the current seems to have shifted.

At the Iowa City City Council meeting Thursday night, the Council members discussed limited options to finance the city's new $50 million water treatment plant and an additional $40 million worth of sewer improvements, including connecting the city's two existing plants. The expenses are a direct result of federal mandates handed down from Washington in the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act.

In short, the federal government expects localities to provide safe drinking water, but it doesn't explain how they are supposed to pay for it.

The time for gentle gradual increases is gone.

Regardless of how the base numbers are interpreted and manipulated, before they graduate, UI juniors living off-campus will probably see their average monthly charges for water and sewer double. Water rates could increase by 100 percent and sewer rates could increase by anywhere from 50 to 70 percent.

Council members have few options. They can't turn the clock back to create and implement a reasonable rate increase schedule in anticipation of future problems, expansion or federal requirements.

They can, with very imaginative number crunching, hope for a Federal Community Development Block Grant to finance some of the sewer improvement costs and offset the impending increase. In their application, city managers could downplay certain well-to-do areas of the city and emphasize the neighborhoods where students and other fixed- and low-income residents live. Capital improvements in these types of neighborhoods are almost always eligible and often receive CDBG funding.

The city could consider sharing resources and costs with other nearby municipalities and dedicate time to seeking other types of grants and low-cost loans to finance the project.

Students, unlike Council members, have a few more choices. They can, like city dwellers throughout history, flee the bright lights and high rates and move to the suburbs. They can look for lower rates in smaller cities like University Heights, North Liberty, Tiffin and Solon.

Iowa City residents, like the Council, aren't responsible for the necessity of building a new treatment facility, the Federal Government is. But the city and its past and present Council members are responsible for not increasing water and sewer rates in the past at a level commensurate with the costs imposed by new federal and state regulations. Just as the city should have expected federal requirements to necessitate a new water treatment plant and sewer improvements, so too should the city expect additional regulations in the future.

The exact structure of the increases has yet to be decided, but for the sake of city residents, the Council should agree to gradual increases over the course of several years rather than a massive increase in a single year. Regardless of how the Council chooses to finance the water and sewer projects, the only justice seems to be that Council members, just like other Iowa Citizens, will have to finally pay the bill.

KIM PAINTER

Contrasting Christianity and intolerance

My last effort on this page concerned a business. ServiceMaster is a corporate entity that has never been private about the religious attitude that brought it into existence ("Masters of service, in service to the Master"). My concern began when a recently acquired ServiceMaster subsidiary (GreenTree Childcare) was contracted to provide day care at a new UI facility.

The concern results from a pattern of workplace behavior that seems to keep landing ServiceMaster managers in the soup. It is not imaginary, it is documented. It is a pattern of disrespect toward the simple fact that others may believe differently or not at all.

The fact of ServiceMaster's connection to GreenTree may well be irrelevant to their ability to provide high-quality child care. Still, the connection — and ServiceMaster's troubling history — needed to come to light so parents would exercise greater watchfulness than they might otherwise. That much is certain, and I am happy to be criticized by those who feel I jumped to conclusions about GreenTree.

What I am not willing to tolerate is a more bothersome type of criticism I received. Since it has happened to many Americans, I will share with you that I was called a bigot after the piece appeared. It was claimed that I discriminate against Christians (with venom, no less).

Such discrimination on my part would run counter to my own best interests. As many of you know, I am a Christian. Like the majority of Americans, I believe in God. However, I do not believe the Bible contains 100 percent literal truth. Nor do I want the firm line that separates church and state erased. I want gays and lesbians to be accorded each and every right and privilege granted their heterosexual fellows. Pat Robertson is no friend of mine because on a polite day, he and the rest of the televangelist circuit are distressing, narrow-minded, cruel and utterly without scruple in pandering to lowest common denominator prejudice.

Too many people today assume that faith depends on naivete or ignorance to nurture its growth. Such assumptions insult faith and it is wise to reject them. Equally insulting is the claim that true Christian faith requires of us rigid uniformity of belief and action. The religious right's insistence on making this claim has only served to alienate them from their believing countrymen.

Fundamentalist Christian complainers make it clear they want the privilege of acting the part of bigots without being called bigots.

In a nation where people are increasingly suspicious of religious political action, it is fair to ask that we examine our suspicion for signs of bigotry. Investigation reveals no bigotry, only unwavering disapproval of the willful subordination of spiritual ideals to the temporal press for immediate and final judgment.

It is best to let the far-righters speak for themselves to prove where the bigotry truly lies. Sen. Bob Dole, a conservative stalwart, reportedly refers to extreme fundamentalists as the "full-mooners" in private. There are good reasons why Sen. Dole shows the same unease felt by more liberal Christian Americans.

In Colorado, the full-mooners got an initiative passed to restrict the civil rights of gays and lesbians, codifying the prejudice that forms an agonizing backdrop to many lives. One initiative backer, Bernhard Kupier (a pastor in Colorado Springs), said, "It should be made clear that in order to live a Christian life, any Christian must be able to discriminate and hate because that's what the Bible says."

On May 15-17, members of such full-mooner groups like Focus on the Family, the Eagle Forum, the Christian Coalition, Concerned Women for America and the Traditional Values Coalition met in Colorado. Their single topic was mapping the defeat of gay and lesbian civil rights. Their keynote speaker summed up the attitude: "The gay agenda has all the elements of that which is truly evil. It is deceptive at every turn. It deceives those who are drawn into it, who embrace it. It presents an extraordinarily deceptive face to the public at large." It's too bad nobody told this guy that "the gay agenda" is just the latest in a long line of outrageous misrepresentations put forth by the fundamentalist Christians.

Fundamentalist Christian complainers make it clear they want the privilege of acting the part of bigots without being called bigots. They raise one valid point: Far too many people think the words "Christian" and "bigot" go together as naturally as the words "dry" and "martini." But before donning the mantle of the persecuted themselves, full-mooners need to remember one thing. They came by our copious disrespect the old-fashioned way. They earned it.

Believing in intolerance is anyone's right in America, but practicing it is a crime against the law of God and frequently man. If you take your intolerance for a walk in public, it had better be on a leash. Even so, don't be surprised if it earns you a strong disapproval rating among those who are free, tolerant and Christian.

What's wrong with imperialism in Haiti?

In any discussion of a possible invasion of Haiti, someone always complains that leaving once we invade will be next to impossible. Why should we leave once we invest a fortune in taking the place over? The way Haitian society is now, a U.S.-installed Aristide government wouldn't last a year before being overthrown again. Perhaps the answer is a little old-fashioned imperialism.

I am afraid I can't understand what is wrong with imperialism. Sure, the way it was practiced was savage in the past, but dismissing imperialism because of past mistakes is like outlawing planes because their crashes are so spectacular.

In Puerto Rico, the residents held a referendum on independence. That choice got less than 5 percent of the vote. It was easily defeated by the choice to remain a territory. To the Puerto Ricans, imperialism doesn't seem to be such a bad deal.

The symptoms of the decolonialization of the last two centuries are everywhere to be seen by anyone with open eyes. Take a good look at Africa. In virtually every country, per capita GDP is falling like a rock and has been for some time. The vast majority of the governments are corrupt and even the democratically elected ones don't care much about civil rights. Africa's religious extremists make the most extreme elements of our religious right look like squishy moderates by comparison.

I am sure some would blame the condition of Africa on the legacy of colonialism and the proxy wars incited by the Cold War. To an extent they are right. The postcolonial borders don't make a lot of sense and have exacerbated many of the problems that already existed in Africa. However, neither colonialists, communists or capitalists create hate. They may have exploited it for a time, but consider Rwanda. It is suddenly at war not because of capitalism or imperialism, but rather sheer ethnic hatred and irrational distrust.

In other parts of the world, decolonialization has not resulted in economic disaster, starvation and tyranny. In places like the United States and Australia where decolonialization was successful, a relatively developed economy and strong internal political structures already existed.

Making Haiti a part of the United States is not simply an altruistic gesture — there would be real benefits for the American economy.

The problem in places where decolonialization has failed is that those countries lack basic economic development and strong internal political institutions. Without the stability generated by strong political institutions and basic economic development, markets don't develop and investment becomes too risky. Even the wealth owned by natives flees to more stable countries. The same conditions exist in Haiti, making a mockery of the Haitians' quest for economic growth.

The fastest and most sure method of creating the conditions for economic growth and basic human rights in Haiti would be an invasion followed by a change in the country's status to that of a U.S. territory, exactly the same as Puerto Rico.

I wouldn't have made this assertion except for a conversation I had last week. I was at a conference sitting next to a Nigerian journalist, and I threw out the idea of making Haiti a territory. His response was, "You know, there are just too many countries that have no reason for being." I was aghast at his response, but he convinced me that too many who have accepted the maxim that "those who don't know the past are doomed to repeat it" believe that it means we should never try anything that has failed in the past.

No other solution will work for one simple reason: the Tontons Macoutes. They are a 10,000 strong paramilitary group who have formed the backbone of several Haitian dictators' tyrannical rules. They were recently disbanded but were not disarmed, and they maintain their ties to the police and military as well as a loose command structure. The armed rabble on the docks in Port-au-Prince last fall that prevented American troops from landing were most likely Tontons Macoutes.

Making Haiti a part of the United States is not simply an altruistic gesture — there would be real benefits for the American economy. The best reasons for making Haiti part of the United States are the people. Estimates put the number of Haitians living in the United States somewhere between 300,000 and 1 million. They are among the most productive recent immigrants to our country. According to the 1990 census, they compare favorably to most Asian immigrants — they have among the highest work force participation rates of any community in the country and among the lowest rates of welfare participation.

A Washington Post story put it this way: "As a community, Haitians are praised by officials in Miami as industrious and law-abiding. It is not unusual for Haitian immigrants to work two or sometimes three jobs for minimum wage. Many attend school besides, either to learn English or a trade."

The bottom line about Haitians is that they are very similar to many past immigrant groups whose drive, thrift and strong families provided a firm base for economic growth. If those who still live in Haiti are anything like their countrymen who have immigrated here, they have a real chance to build a highly successful economy.

Haiti has an opportunity to become Taiwan on the Caribbean if we give them a little stability, access to our markets and protection from the legacy of their past rulers. We have a lot to gain by doing it.

CLASSMATES ENTHUSED

Clinton parleys at class reunion

James Jefferson
Associated Press

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — He mingled with old buddies, posed for pictures and cut a rug to '60s rock 'n' roll. By all accounts, President Clinton had a ball at his 30-year high-school class reunion.

Clinton and his fellow baby boomers from the Hot Springs High School Class of '64 partied from Saturday night into Sunday morning in the ballroom of the Arlington Hotel, scene of their senior prom.

Clinton stayed at the reunion until about 2:30 a.m. Sunday, then played cards in his hotel room until about 4 a.m. "It was a great reunion," he said Sunday before departing for Washington to prepare for a meeting between the leaders of Jordan and Israel.

"It's just like 1964 when we did it the first time," classmate David Leopoulos said as the private party rocked toward midnight. "He's dancing with friends, visiting with everyone. He's taking part in everything just as if there's nothing else going on in the world."

Security was tight but not stifling as Secret Service agents closed off the hotel's second floor.

The crowd of more than 300 began gathering before 7 p.m. Saturday. Clinton arrived around 8:30 p.m. and spent 20 minutes posing for pictures and exchanging hugs and slaps on the back from old classmates.

He eventually got into the swing of things, mingling with old friends and dancing occasionally as a disc jockey played "Twist and Shout" and other pop hits from the '60s.

"This is medicine to him," Leopoulos said. "They're people who love him, but they're also people who are honest with him so he can get a real feel for not only how they are and how he's doing."

In a short speech to the class, Clinton said how important it was for him to attend the reunions and how much it meant to him to be part of a group he had considered the pulse of the nation, according to Leopoulos.

Dwayne Chambers, a computer salesman from Columbus, Miss., described how Clinton never forgot his classmates as he rose in politics. He recalled that Clinton was Arkansas attorney general at the 10-year reunion, governor at the 15th and 25th, and now president.

"It's been exciting to be able to be with him," Chambers said. "They quoted tonight that only 15 presidents have graduated from public schools, and he's one of them."

Clinton planned to return to Washington on Sunday to prepare for a meeting today at the White House between King Hussein of Jordan and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. The session with the Mideast leaders could be a prelude to a landmark peace accord between the two nations.

BENTSEN DISPUTES REPORT

Whitewater gaps come to light

Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen's chief counsel drafted material that would have had Bentsen retract — before Congress — his statement that he had been unaware of Whitewater briefings given to White House officials, documents show.

Bentsen aides said Sunday the secretary stands by his original statement and disavows the explanations and facts provided in material prepared by the counsel, Jean Hanson.

The materials — proposed questions and answers — highlight a record of contradictory statements on Whitewater between Bentsen and Hanson. The disparities are certain to be explored by Republicans in Whitewater hearings beginning Tuesday in the House and three days later in the Senate.

The material was prepared for Bentsen's testimony before Congress March 8 on the department's budget.

Hanson's "answers" for Bentsen would have explained her participation in the White House briefings by saying not only that the secretary knew about them in advance, but that senior officials approved the contacts.

Reacting to news reports, Bentsen said publicly March 3 that he was unaware until then that Hanson and Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger Altman had briefed key White House officials about the investigation that involved the president and his wife.

In one Q and A prepared by Hanson for Bentsen, she posed the question: "Mr. Altman is the deputy secretary of the Treasury. He didn't tell you about the February meeting?"

The suggested answer: "I now believe that Ms. Hanson and Mr. Altman consulted with me in advance of the WH meeting on Feb. 2, 1994."

Hanson then suggested Bentsen explain the contradiction from his March 3 statement by saying he "had not previously recollected" discussions about the briefings.

Hanson's version was challenged in Bentsen's office on Sunday.

"The secretary's recollection is that no one brought to his attention the fact that there were meetings occurring at the White House on this subject until March 3," said Edward Knight, executive secretary in the Treasury Department and senior adviser to Bentsen. "The secretary's recollection is clear."

Knight characterized the question-and-answer document as "Jean Hanson trying to put words in the secretary's mouth which he did not recall."

"No one tells the secretary what to say," he added. A Clinton administration source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said top Bentsen aides "were troubled by this" and informed Bentsen of the Hanson materials. But the source said "we did not ascribe any motives" to Hanson and added the proposed questions' answers were not given to Bentsen.

Hanson has repeatedly been unwilling to comment on any aspect of the case and her attorney, Harvey Pitt, could not immediately be reached for comment on Sunday. Messages were left at his office and home.

Altman was serving a dual role when the contacts took place last fall and early this year. He was Treasury's No. 2 official and acting head of the Resolution Trust Corp., the savings and loan cleanup agency. The RTC was investigating the former Arkansas land venture of the Clintons and whether it caused losses at Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, a failed institution owned by the Clintons' Whitewater business partner.

PET RECOVERS FROM ATTEMPTED INCINERATION

Tortured pup turns 'spokesdog'

Janis L. Magin
Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. — Gucci was beaten, doused with lighter fluid and set ablaze. Now the puppy has two lawyers and a team of Auburn University veterinarians on his side.

He's been on television. He's been on the front page of the newspaper in Mobile, the city where he was tortured and rescued. He's been the featured guest of honor at a Mobile bar, which donated the money from its $2 admission charge to the local animal shelter.

"It would be great if we could use Gucci as the spokesdog for animal cruelty," said Doug James, a Spring Hill College professor who saved the pup. "He's big time down here. It's funny when I go places, people say, 'There's Gucci, there's Gucci.'"

James witnessed the May 20 burning of the little animal, then 3 months old, by a group of young males in a downtown Mobile neighborhood.

"Suddenly I saw this little guy burst into flame," James said.

The dog, a chow mix, ran under a house, where he continued to burn until James rescued him.

James said the youths were sending a message to the puppy's original owner, a 15-year-old runaway girl who gave the dog its designer name and has since returned home to her family. The boys wanted her out of the neighborhood, he said.

On July 6, three veterinary surgeons at Auburn's College of Veterinary Medicine moved the puppy's scarred eyelids so he can blink.

"We're trying to get the eyelids to where they'll work as normally as possible and protect the eyes," said Dr. David Whitley, who said the puppy will likely need another operation on each eyelid.

James was inundated with offers of help after a story about the puppy appeared in The Mobile Register.

Two juveniles accused of torturing the dog are scheduled for trial in August.

James' friend George Hardesty is one of the lawyers on Gucci's team. Hardesty, a former Mobile district attorney and assistant state attorney general, wants to act as a special prosecutor on the dog's behalf.

"With Gucci we intend to show that the government or a concerned citizen can step in where an animal is being abused," Hardesty said.

VIOLENT PAST RELATED

Teen awaits trial in death of 4-year-old

Ben Dobbin
Associated Press

SAVONA, N.Y. — Eric Smith, 14, used to ride his bike everywhere, play drums in the school band and crack the other kids up with his cackle of a laugh. Tuesday, he goes on trial for second-degree murder.

He is accused of bludgeoning 4-year-old Derrick Robie, whose body was found Aug. 2 in a vacant lot near his home in this sylvan village of 930 people.

A child psychiatrist hired by the defense says Smith has a "sadistic side" he cannot control due to developmental abnormalities brought on by trimethadione, a drug his mother took for epilepsy while pregnant.

Although the psychiatrist could not say with certainty that the drug had a direct bearing on Eric's behavior, he said the undersized teen "has suffered from pathological rage attacks as evidenced by abnormal temper tantrums, breath-holding spells and head banging."

In 1989, Eric strangled a neighbor's Siamese cat.

The court-appointed lawyer plans to claim he was not responsible for the murder by reason of mental disease or defect. If he is found to have a dangerous mental disorder, he would be committed. If the jury rejects that and finds him guilty, he would face a maximum sentence of nine years to life.

Derrick disappeared on his way to a recreation program at the bottom of his dead-end street. Police said he was sodomized with a stick, choked and fatally beaten with rocks amid brush and trees at the back of the empty lot, just 300 yards from his house.

SOME PERKS COME WITH PRISON

Simpson's cell has a few extras

Janine Zuniga Irvine
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The L.A. County Jail has its own version of the Hollywood Walk of Fame, where life is different for illustrious inmates like O.J. Simpson.

Simpson, inmate No. 4013970, doesn't endure communal showers, wait in long lines to use the pay phone or even spend as many hours a day locked in his cell. His jailers even wheel in an exercise bike he can use two hours a day.

His jailers insist Simpson is not getting special treatment. This is just the way things work for inmates assigned for their own protection to "7,000," a unit in the Los Angeles County Men's Central Jail.

Simpson

Others who have taken up temporary residence here: Christian Brando, son of Marlon Brando, after his arrest in the 1990 killing of his sister's boyfriend; "Diff'rent Strokes" star Todd Bridges after at least one of his publicized arrests; Charles Keating of the failed savings and loan; and serial killer Richard Ramirez, better known as the "Night Stalker."

Erik Menendez, awaiting a second trial with brother Lyle in the killings of their parents, was Simpson's next-cell neighbor for a day. Menendez was moved so the two would not overhear each other's phone conversations, leaving Simpson alone in a row of seven cells.

The jail's 6,500 other inmates bunk more than one to a cell, or even in dormitories; use communal shower rooms; wait in long lines to use the phone; and eat together in the cafeteria, 50 to 60 to a table.

Simpson has been here without bail since June 17, when he was arrested in the stabbing deaths of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. He pleaded innocent in Superior Court Friday.

Simpson has his own cell. He showers in private. He has exclusive use of a pay phone for up to two hours a day. His meals are brought to his cell. For one hour each morning and evening he can watch television or ride a stationary bicycle — both brought to the hall directly outside his cell.

Simpson and other inmates are allowed visitors only 20 minutes a day, four days a week during regular visiting hours. Simpson is taking advantage of a policy that allows inmates to see visitors — as long as an attorney is present — for up to 10 hours a day, four days a week during attorney-client visiting hours.

Jail life, however, is not exactly cushy for Simpson. He can shower only every other day. He sits alone on his bed while eating meals served on plastic plates with plastic utensils.

His meals are wheeled into his cell on a cart. A typical breakfast includes orange juice, milk, coffee, oatmeal, scrambled eggs, hash browns and white or wheat bread.

He has no choice about what to wear — the blue outfit is standard. The only occasional accessories are handcuffs and a metal waist chain.

There are no windows in Simpson's 9- by 7-foot cell. Lights come on at 6 a.m. to signal the start of his day; lights go out at 10 p.m.

RWANDA

Amid the suspicion and horror, there were moments of hope for the traumatized country. A camouflage-clad soldier of the deposed Rwandan government walked up to the border and asked if he, too, was welcome.

"I told him all our new government wants is unity — that's our policy," said Cmdr. John Murangwa after he gave the man a hug and let him in. President Clinton on Friday authorized more than $100 million for airlifts of medicine, food and water, bringing total U.S. aid for the Rwandan crisis to $250 million since April.

Other logistical problems plagued relief efforts. The Oxfam agency flew in a water purification plant for use at one of the camps, but no trucks were available to transport it.

And some relief agency officials were critical of the airlift, saying that food was less crucial than sanitation and water aid. Officials say tens of thousands of latrines are needed for the camps in order to control cholera, but no country has offered to supply or install them.

U.S. AID

"It was not the smoothest of starts for the American operation," said Ray Wilkenson, spokesman in Goma for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Mwami Ndeze, chief of the village of Rwankwi, where the bundles fell, looked sadly at smashed boxes reading, "Gift of the Netherlands," and piles of flour and milk powder in the mud.

"Maybe if they had sent this by vehicle, we would not have lost it," he said. "Still, all we can say is thank-you."

Theonest Nyandwi, 43, clutched his two sons tightly as he watched aid workers thrash through the fields. "We were afraid it was an attack by the Rwandan rebels," he said. Many people fled.

Before the drop, William McCoy, operation officer for humanitarian and refugee affairs of the U.S. Defense Department, said the idea was to deliver food without trucking it through congested refugee areas.

He acknowledged widespread criticism by U.N. specialists and voluntary agencies who argued that trucks could make the trip easily at a fraction of the cost.

The operation was worth trying, he said, and if it went wrong, it was American money that was lost.

Maj. Guy Shields, the U.S. spokesman, said he had no explanation for the missed target or why all the load was not dropped.

CARS

in Tiffin resident and diver Cal Colony to help in the search.

While looking for the truck, Colony said he found at least one more vehicle down there and thought there could be more.

The problem, Colony said, is that the 14-foot-deep area of the river where the vehicles are is "pitch black." He said almost no light penetrates deeper than 5 feet through the river's dirty waters.

Then around 2:30 p.m. Sunday, the group located and pulled out Macal's boat trailer, but the truck was no longer hooked up to it. To pull out the trailer, the Macals had to use a wrecker.

Finally, a few hours later the truck was found and reeled in — in decent condition, according to Colony. He said a third vehicle is still located about 40 feet downstream.

Ironically, this is the second time Rob Macal has lost a truck to the usually calm waters of the Iowa River. The first truck, also a Ford — that time with a faulty transmission — also had to be pulled out after sinking into the waters by Coralville.

"I'm not having any more Fords in my family," Macal said.

In the end, Macal said he's just glad he's not being a litterbug.

"I don't care about the car," Macal said. "But it's bad for the environment to just leave it down there with the gas and oil. I'm a good fisherman."

and dumped the bones, leaving grinning skulls lying next to the wreckage on the ground where the victims' loved ones once wept and prayed.

"This shocks me," Jacques Beloni, who owns a funeral home adjacent to the cemetery, said Saturday. "When someone dies, he is supposed to be in eternal peace. What's being done to the bodies is something terrible."

Beloni, director of the cemetery of Port-au-Prince for 25 years until 1986, said the thieves try to sell the casket handles to funeral homes. They're scarce because quality ones made abroad can't be imported under the embargo.

The sprawling 227-year-old cemetery was once a place where people would stroll, paying their respects and admiring the mausoleums. Some look like fancy cottages with tiled steps, ornate columns and sliding glass doors.

"I was proud of it," Beloni said in an interview in his Voice of God Funeral Home, standing next to a row of wooden coffins leaning against a wall. "It used to be a clean and nice place. People used to come and just sit."

Like much of Haiti, the Western hemisphere's poorest country and the target of a crippling embargo aimed at ousting its military rulers, the cemetery is now a wreck.

Inside the invaded tombs lie caskets half-pulled out with the lids smashed and lying ajar, the ripped silk linings ruffling in the breeze.

A cobweb is stretched across a hole bashed into one tomb. Beyond lies a wooden coffin, its lid destroyed. Leg and hip bones, gray and riddled with holes from age, are scattered inside.

Police patrols have been stepped up to curtail the grave robbing, which happens at night, officials say.

Preceded by a line of mourners singing hymns — men wearing suits in the oppressive heat and the women in dresses — a battered hearse with chipped grey paint moves slowly down a gravel road between the mausoleums.

As the mourners gather in knots, the coffin is slid into a tomb. Cemetery workers then seal the opening with cinder blocks and cover it with a coating of cement.

Surging Expos sweep reeling Dodgers

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Rookie Rondell White drove in all seven Montreal runs with a homer, double and two singles Sunday as the Expos beat the fading Los Angeles Dodgers 7-4 for their sixth straight victory.

The Expos swept the three-game series and improved to 60-37, the best record in the National League.

The Dodgers, leading the NL West, lost their fifth in a row. White went 4-for-5, striking out once with the bases loaded. The 22-year-old left fielder had made just 10 starts this season and was batting .255 with four RBI in 51 at-bats.

Kirk Rueter (6-2) was the winner and John Wetteland got his 18th save. Kevin Gross (7-7) was the loser.

Giants 8, Mets 6
NEW YORK — Barry Bonds celebrated his 30th birthday by driving in three runs, including a go-ahead single in the eighth inning that sent the San Francisco Giants over New York.

The Giants are 12-2 since the arrival of Darryl Strawberry, who went 1-for-3 and drove in a run.

The surge has pulled San Francisco within 1 1/2 games of NL West-leading Los Angeles, which begins a three-game series Monday night at Candlestick Park.

Bonds' two-out, two-run single off John Franco gave the Giants a 7-6 lead.

Monteleone (3-2) got two outs and picked up the win for the second straight game. Rod Beck got his 23rd save. Josias Manzanillo (3-2) took the loss.

Astros 13, Pirates 1
HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell homered twice and drove in five runs and Craig Biggio hit a grand slam as the Houston Astros routed Pittsburgh.

Houston pulled within one game of the NL Central-leading Reds, and begins a three-game series at Cincinnati on Monday.

Bagwell leads the majors with 98 RBI. He has hit 32 home runs, and his 20 homers this season at the Astrodome broke the team record of 18 set by Lee May in 1974.

Darryl Kile (7-5) bounced back from losses of 10-0 and 8-2 in his last two starts. Jon Lieber (5-5) gave up nine runs, just two of them earned, in five innings.

Phillies 5, Padres 3
PHILADELPHIA — Danny Jackson pitched seven strong innings and won his 13th game — his highest victory total in six years — as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated San Diego.

Jackson (13-4) allowed five hits and two runs. He struck out seven and walked none.

Jackson was 12-11 last season for the NL champion Phillies. The last time he won more than 13 or more games was 1988, when he was 23-8 for Cincinnati.

Doug Jones pitched 1 1/2 innings for his league-leading 26th save.

Lenny Dykstra, playing for the second time since missing 30 games because of an appendectomy, went 1-for-3 with a walk, stole a base and scored once for the Phillies. Andy Ashby (4-10) lost his fourth straight start.

White Sox 4, Indians 2
CLEVELAND — Julio Franco homered and drove in three runs and Alex Fernandez cooled off Cleveland, leading the Chicago White Sox to a victory over the Indians in the final meeting this season between the American League Central leaders.

The White Sox and Indians split their final four-game series, allowing first-place Chicago to remain two games ahead of Cleveland.

Fernandez (10-7) gave up two runs and six hits in eight innings, quieting a Cleveland team that had scored 25 runs over the previous three games.

Paul Assenmacher got one out in the ninth and Roberto Hernandez finished up for his 12th save.

Charles Nagy (8-7) allowed four runs and eight hits in eight innings.

Blue Jays 4, Rangers 2
TORONTO — The streaking Toronto Blue Jays won their eighth straight game despite getting just four hits to complete a four-game sweep.

Brad Cornett gave up five hits in six innings for his first major-league win for the two-time defending World Series champions, who are 7-0 at home since the All-Star break.

The AL West-leading Rangers have lost five of their last six.

Danny Cox pitched the ninth for his third save.

Roger Pavlik (1-5) gave up four hits in 7 1/2 innings.

Red Sox 8, Mariners 2
BOSTON — Mike Greenwell went 4-for-5 with a homer and John Valentin drove in three runs to lead Roger Clemens and the Red Sox.

Boston collected 16 hits to back Clemens (9-5), who allowed five hits and one run in seven innings. He struck out six and walked two, throwing 108 pitches before retiring after the Red Sox scored three runs in the seventh.

The Red Sox got six hits and scored three runs in the first inning off George Glinatsis (0-1).

Twins 10, Brewers 6
MILWAUKEE — Kirby Puckett's two-run homer highlighted a five-run, seventh-inning rally.

Puckett drove in four runs, Kent Hrbek hit a three-run homer, and Chuck Knoblauch scored four runs for the Twins.

Reliever Carl Willis (2-4) picked up the win with 1 1/2 innings of one-hit ball. Erik Schullstrom pitched two innings for his first save.

Cal Eldred (9-10) was tagged for six hits and eight runs in 6 1/2 innings.

Royals 6, Tigers 4
DETROIT — Jose DeJesus pitched five innings to gain his first major-league victory in nearly three years.

DeJesus, called up from Triple-A Omaha on July 16, won for the first time since Aug. 31, 1991 when he pitched for the Philadelphia Phillies.

Rookie Bob Hamelin homered and Brent Mayne singled in two runs as the Royals won for only the fourth time in their last 11 road games.

Marlins 6, Rockies 4
DENVER — Gary Sheffield went 5-for-5, and his two-run homer in the ninth inning sent the Florida Marlins past Colorado.

Sheffield's first five-hit game of his career tied the team record for hits set by Chuck Carr last year.

Carr led off the ninth with a walk from Willie Blair (0-5). Sheffield, who had four singles in his previous at-bats, followed his 22nd home run.

Robb Nen (4-4) pitched out of a one-out jam in the eighth and struck out the side in the ninth for the win.

Yankees 6, Angels 4
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Don Mattingly, making a rare appearance as a pinch-hitter, hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning as the Yankees concluded a 10-1 road trip.

The victory helped the Yankees complete their most successful West Coast trip in their history. New York, which rallied to win in the ninth inning in three games on the trip, scored four times in the ninth to win their fifth straight.

Mark Langston held the Yankees to six hits in eight innings.

Jim Abbott (8-7) batted his way through eight innings, allowing seven hits and four runs. Steve Howe pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

Athletics 7, Orioles 6
OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson scored on Mark Eichhorn's wild pitch with two outs in the ninth inning as the A's rallied from six runs down.

Baltimore led 6-0 after six innings before the A's began their comeback on Mark McGwire's two-run homer in the seventh. Oakland tied it in the eighth on Scott Hemond's three-run homer.

Dennis Eckersley (4-4), Oakland's seventh pitcher, escaped a bases-loaded jam in the ninth for the win.

Braves 8, Cardinals 5
ST. LOUIS — Charlie O'Brien and Jose Oliva hit three-run homers to lead the Braves to a victory over the Cardinals.

Tom Glavine (12-8) won for the fourth time in his last five starts, allowing five runs on 12 hits with five strikeouts and no walks in 7 1/2 innings. Gregg Olson pitched the ninth for his first save.

O'Brien's homer capped a four-run rally in the fourth inning against Bob Tewksbury (10-10).

GOODWILL GAMES

In other games, Puerto Rico beat Brazil 109-98 and Italy edged Croatia 79-77.

At the SKA pool, 20 races were packed into one day to make up for the one-day postponement caused by a faulty filtration system that left the water black a few days ago, gradually improving to green.

The Swedish team pulled out, refusing to swim in water that looked more akin to a country lake than a competition pool. The irony was that a Swedish company had been responsible for the renovation of the pool in the first place.

"They told us the water would be as good as a pool in the United States," said Swedish swimmer Daniel Lonnberg. "This is the worst I've ever seen, this is not good for health."

Members of the United States swim team took an informal poll — and not one member thought the competition would be held.

"You could only see about two feet in front of you," said American Nicole Haislett, who finished third in the 100 freestyle.

"I was able to write my name on the bottom of the pool," said Melvin

Stewart, who won the 200 butterfly, beating chief rival Russian Denis Pankratov in a slow 1:58.46. "Listen, I know the country's in dire straits, but all we wanted is water."

Stewart said swimmers nicknamed the pool the "Black Lagoon."

"I slowed at every turn, it was difficult to see the wall," he said. "The pool out here has been black, brown, green, brown — it's been an adventure. It looked like they filled the pool with Gatorade today, but it didn't taste like it."

The "Creature of the Black Lagoon" was Popov, the 22-year-old Russian Olympic champion who won gold medals in the 50-meter and 100-meter freestyle events.

He won the 50-meter showdown with world record-holder Tom Jager of the United States, but his winning time of 22.55 seconds was well off the American's record of 21.81. Popov's time of 50.58 in the 100 was also way off his world-record time of 48.21 set last month.

"I'm not like a world record-breaking machine," he said.

China's Ren Xing swept the 100 and 200 breaststroke. The Chinese won five of 10 women's events.

TOUR DE FRANCE

harder than usual due to hot weather, Indurain won by the biggest margin since 1988, crossing the line after the final 109-mile stage with an overall time 5 minutes, 39 seconds better than Piotr Ugrumov of Latvia. Marco Pantani of Italy was third, 7:19 back.

Among the crowds cheering Indurain on the Champs-Elysees were eight busloads of people from Villava, his Pyrenees hometown of 7,500. Back home, cycling fans rang church bells, shot off fireworks and uncorked champagne.

Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez sent a telegram praising Indurain's "capacity for sacrifice, class and healthy spirit of competition."

Indurain rode near the head of the pack most of the day on the final stage from Euro Disneyland to the Champs-Elysees.

The stage was won by France's Eddy Seigneur, who overtook Frankie Andreu of the United States in the last 200 yards. Andreu tried to break away in the final 1.2 miles, but failed.

Indurain finished in the pack with the other leaders Sunday, 29 seconds behind Seigneur. The Spaniard said he did not expect to win the final stage.

"It was difficult to win today because the Champs Elysees is reserved for the sprinters," he said. "Besides, everyone is just a little tired."

"My first victory was probably the best, but each additional one is a good reward," Indurain said.

Hawkeye punter named preseason all-conference

College Sports magazine has named Iowa football punter Nick Gallery to its preseason all-Big Ten Conference team.

The sophomore punter was named to the second-team all-Big Ten team last season and won the school's Outstanding Specialty Team Award. In his freshman campaign, the native of Masonville, Iowa, was second in the conference in punting, averaging 41.7 yards per punt.

Hall of Famer captures fifth major championship

LAKE ORION, Mich. (AP) — Patty Sheehan made a sensational birdie on the 16th hole Sunday and went on to win the U.S. Women's Open by a stroke over Tammie Green.

In capturing the Open for the second time in three years, the LPGA Hall of Famer won her fifth major championship.

Sheehan, wearing bright red knickers and white knee socks, and Green both closed with par-71s on the Old Course at Indianwood Golf and Country Club.

Sheehan finished at 277, sealing her triumph with a par on the final hole after Green's 10-foot try for a birdie and a tie rolled just outside the right edge of the cup.

Liselotte Neumann of Sweden shot a 69 and was third at 281. Spain's Tania Abitol and Peru's Alicia Dibos tied for fourth at 283. Those were the only golfers to break par as Indianwood came back to punish the field for the early liberties taken in the early rounds, right after the course had been softened by rain.

Graf notches another Pathmark Classic title

MAHWAH, N.J. (AP) — Steffi Graf's powerful forehand and patience wore down Lisa Raymond for a 4-6, 6-4, 6-1 victory in Sunday's Pathmark Classic final.

Raymond, a two-time NCAA champion, gave the women's top-ranked player all she could handle and led 4-3 in the second set before Graf took control and won nine of the final 10 games.

Graf had only compliments for Raymond.

"I give her a lot of credit," Graf said after winning this event for the fifth time. "She served extremely well. I kept waiting for her to make a mistake."

NFL

Saints top pick quits team

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — Lance Lundberg, the New Orleans Saints No. 7 draft pick, left training camp Sunday, saying he just didn't want to play football anymore.

"I like him, I tried to talk him out of it," Coach Jim Mora said. "I thought he had a chance to make it and tried to encourage him to stay."

Lundberg, an tackle from Nebraska, had trouble with the 1½ mile run on Thursday, failing to complete the full set of laps. Then Saturday he had to be helped from the field after becoming dehydrated.

Lundberg had been dieting to try to get his weight down to 307 pounds. He arrived at camp weighing 317, Mora said.

"I don't think it was that," Mora said. "I knew he was thinking about it last night, but after the meeting I thought I'd convinced him to stay. But he came in this morning and said 'I just don't have it in me.' This wasn't for him."

Mora told Lundberg if he changed his mind to call him. "My inclination would be to bring him back," Mora said.

See answer on Page 7.

Top seed holds serve

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

The Prime Time League playoffs opened Sunday night at City High and there were very few surprises.

No. 1-seeded Goodfellow Printing-Imprinted Sportswear (9-4) had little trouble with No. 8 Nike (2-11), winning 110-88.

Goodfellow led throughout the first half and was up 59-46 at the half. Nike made several runs at the lead in the second half, but could never get closer than 10.

Les Jepsen led Goodfellow with 31 points and 16 rebounds and Northern Alabama's Jermain Willform scored 30.

Nike's lineup was intact for the first time since the beginning of the season and Jepsen said Goodfellow was not looking past the bottom seed despite its record.

"On paper they're a good team, but they haven't played together as a team the whole season," Jepsen said. "They were obviously full strength today, but they hadn't played together very much and you could tell."

Nike got 32 points from James Winters and 21 points and 12 rebounds from Russ Millard.

Goodfellow's Mon'ter Glasper sat out Sunday's game with a tender ankle and Jepsen said winning without the Hawkeye point guard showed how deep Goodfellow's bench was.

"We missed (Glasper) a lot and we needed a lot of guys to step up," Jepsen said. "We play together as a team really well. We've just got to keep on playing hard."

Jepsen underwent arthroscopic surgery to remove cartilage from his left knee before Prime Time season began. He sat out the first few weeks but since has helped Goodfellow rebound from a 2-3 start to win the regular season. Jepsen likes Goodfellow's chances in the playoffs.

"If we get on a roll we've got as good a chance as anybody. It's just a matter of us coming out and playing good defense. Our shots will fall," Jepsen said. "We've had 12 guys here almost every night and we know what each other can do and what all our roles are."

Goodfellow advanced to Wednesday's semifinals when it faces No. 4 First National Bank (8-5). First National also rolled Sunday night with a 118-99 win over No. 5 Hills Bank (7-6).

Jess Settles scored 32 points and had 14 rebounds and Brian Westlake scored 27 for First National. Hawkeye guard Kevin Skillett led Hills with 34 points.

Les Jepsen of Goodfellow Printing-Imprinted Prime Time playoff action Sunday night. Jepsen Sportswear tangles with Nike's Russ Millard during had 31 points in Goodfellow's 110-88 victory.

Bullinger 'perfect' for Chicago

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Jim Bullinger is such a good backup, he may never make it in the Chicago Cubs' rotation.

"I would imagine you need a guy like me on a team," said Bullinger, a fill-in starter who combined with Randy Myers on a five-hitter Sunday that led the Cubs to a 3-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"We had absolutely zilch going for us," Reds manager Dave Johnson said. "It was just one of those days."

Just another start for Bullinger, too, who has made 17 relief appearances and seven starts so far.

"He's been absolutely perfect," Cubs manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "I don't think we have another Jim Bullinger (on the roster) who can do what he's done."

And with Anthony Young still questionable because of a sore elbow, and Steve Trachsel's blister not quite healed, Bullinger knows he's always on call.

"I always come to the park feeling like I'm going to get in a game somehow," said Bullinger, who pitched in place of Trachsel. "Usually I get at least a day's notice before a start. It makes it a little bit tougher mentally, but it's something I have to live with now."

Mark Grace went 2-for-3, hitting two doubles and driving in a run. He has hit in 10 straight games, batting .488 (21-for-43) in that stretch.

"That's when I know I'm swinging the bat well, when I get those extra base hits," Grace said. "Right now, I feel as good as I've ever felt at the plate."

Bullinger (5-2) went eight innings, allowing five hits. He struck out four and walked two.

In seven starts this season, Bullinger is 3-2 with a 2.66 ERA. Myers pitched the ninth for his 20th save.

Pete Schourek (5-2) struck out 10 in six innings, matching his career high. He gave up four hits and walked five.

The Reds have won three of their last six games and are 5-5 since the All-Star break. Johnson was worried.

"The guys have been playing their butts off," Johnson said. "You can't maintain that over 162 games."

Indurain rides away with record-setter

PARIS — Miguel Indurain answered his critics Sunday by riding into history with his fourth consecutive Tour de France victory.

"I'm not going downhill yet," the 30-year-old Spanish cyclist said. "After my third place (earlier this year) in the Tour of Italy, everyone started questioning things. I answered on the road, in the Tour."

He did it in convincing fashion, winning by the largest margin in six years in the world's premier cycling event.

No one has beaten Indurain after nearly 10,000 miles of racing over the last four Tours, which leads to an obvious question:

What about next year? "It's too early to talk about the future — not even a day has passed since winning this fourth Tour," Indurain said. "There's still a year to go before the fifth one and we have to train with hope and drive."

"Whether it's possible or not, only the road can say for sure."

If the answer is yes, Indurain would become the only rider ever to win the race five years in a row. Jacques Anquetil of France and Eddy Merckx of Belgium are the others to win four in a row, and five overall.

France's Bernard Hinault also won the race five times.

Indurain proved he had the stamina and strength needed to win the grueling three-week grind.

He just seemed to get stronger as the 21-stage Tour rolled along. Meanwhile, his biggest challengers of the past — Tony Rominger, Claudio Chiappucci and Gianni Bugno — were gone by the end of the second week, victims of illness or exhaustion.

"Rominger, Chiappucci and the others were sick," Indurain said. "I think a lot of riders enter the Tour tired after a lot of early-season races. The Tour doesn't pardon anyone. You have to begin with reserves."
