Strangers attack man, severing penis

McDONOUGH, Ga. (AP) — A man whose penis was nearly cut off told police that two strangers attacked him early Tuesday, hopping out of a truck to knock him to the ground and mutilate his genitalia.

After two-hour penis reattachment surgery, Robert Jones, 32, was in stable condition at Henry General Hospital, spokeswoman Angie Strickland said.

Doctors "thought he did real well, considering," she said, but it could take a year to determine if the penis, which was about 75 percent severed, will function normally.

Madonna files restraining order against stalker

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Madonna is seeking a restraining order against a man accused of stalking her and calling himself her husband.

The pop star claims that since about July 8, Todd Michael Lawrence has been coming to the gate of her Hollywood home, ringing the buzzer and saying he was "coming home," according to court papers filed by her attorney, Gerard Fox.

Lawrence was arrested outside the home July 19 after hopping a fence, police Lt. John Dunkin said Monday.

Lawrence has been jailed on $13,000 bail since his arrest.

Husband hires skating hitman to kill wife

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A man is on trial for allegedly hiring a hit man to skate past his wife and prick her with a poisonous needle outside a church on Easter Sunday.

James A. McClelland, 48, is charged with murder for hire in the alleged hit, which never took place.

McClelland was arrested at his home in Tonasket, about 120 miles northwest of here, after arranging to have a former employee travel to Kansas and kill his wife, the FBI said.

The man was to be paid $10,000 to glide past Marjorie McClelland on skates and prick her with the end of a hypodermic needle filled with poison, the prosecution said.

Hearing aids impaired in Pappajohn

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

For the past year, Olga Sassine, director of the President's Club at the UI Alumni Association, has worked on the dedication of various rooms at the Pappajohn Business Administration Building. In this capacity, she often attended meetings there.

Yet she can hardly stand to be in the UI's largest and most expensive exercise in modern architecture because of how it affects her hearing aids. Every time she steps through Pappajohn's glass doors, Sassine feels a sudden pain in her ears and head and hears a screeching sound coming from her hearing aids.

"It was very difficult for me to enter the building — it's almost like a nightmare to go through this pain," Sassine said.

Sassine, like many other hearing-aid wearers, has difficulty using the new building because of problems with the high-tech sensor system used to monitor lights, temperature and alarms. She once had to leave a meeting in the $36 million building because the pain became too intense.

Several times she has experienced temporary hearing loss after staying in the building.

"I couldn't hear much, and I also had to remove my hearing aids completely," Sassine said. "My hearing came back the next day."

Charlie Anderson, an associate professor of audiology, is presently involved in efforts to find sensors that will not cause the problem, which occurs because sensors in the building and hearing aids interact. This causes hearing aids to shut off or make fluttering and screeching sounds.

"Interaction occurs between some sensor systems, and sometimes they will generate a separate signal which may cause certain kinds of hearing aids to malfunction," Anderson said.

It's a problem to which Anderson thinks the solution may be elusive.

"It's not going to be easily solved, but there certainly are solutions," Anderson said. "The university is to be praised for its efforts on this — it began to do something about this immediately."

George Khal, UIHC senior project analyst and founder of Self Help for Hard of Hearing, a support group for the hearing impaired that presently has 35 members, said his hearing aid shut down when he visited Pappajohn.

ANESTHESIOLOGIST TO REMAIN ON DUTY

UIHC physician put on 4 years' probation

Liza Roche
The Daily Iowan

A UI Hospitals and Clinics anesthesiologist who was placed on four years of probation Friday for irresponsibly using and prescribing drugs will continue practicing at UIHC.

According to an Iowa state Board of Medical Examiners investigation, Martin D. Sokoll, 61, allegedly prescribed drugs to various patients between 1989 and 1993 without examination. The drugs included APAP hydrocodone and injectable meperidine, both narcotic analgesics, or painkillers.

Sokoll is also accused of excessively using drugs and alcohol during those same dates, according to the report released Friday. The investigation stemmed from a June 1993 complaint.

"There are problems with drug abuse nationwide, and the medical community is certainly no exception," said Dean Borg, public information director for UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Borg said Sokoll was continuing

Woman loses child due to day-care use

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. — A judge's order taking a 3-year-old girl away from her college-student mother because the woman had put the child in day care has outraged feminists and day-care advocates.

"It illustrates an attitude toward women about where they should be — the bedroom, kitchen and those kind of places — not at college," Jacquie Steingold, a board member of the National Organization for Women, said Tuesday.

Circuit Judge Raymond Cashen said Monday the girl's father, Steve Smith, deserves custody because his own mother, a homemaker, has promised to take care of the child full time.

Living with her mother, the girl would be "in essence raised and supervised a great part of the time by strangers," the judge wrote.

"A child gains the feeling of security, a safe place by virtue of permanency," he said.

Smith, 20, and the girl's mother, Jennifer Ireland, 19, never married.

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN SPIED

14 wounded in blast at embassy in London

Audrey Woods
Associated Press

LONDON — She was smartly dressed, carried a shopping bag from Harrods and packed enough high explosives in the trunk of her Audi to leave part of the Israeli Embassy in shambles Tuesday.

Police said although the woman did not appear unusual, she attracted the attention of two security men when she left the car in a parking lot near the embassy. As they approached, the gray Audi blew up and she disappeared in the confusion.

At least 14 people were injured by the bombing, which also broke windows at nearby Kensington Palace. No group claimed responsibility, but Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel blamed Islamic extremists opposed to peace in the Middle East.

The woman was "a middle-aged lady, well dressed, carrying a Harrods bag, who would blend in and not attract very much attention in Kensington High Street," said Cmdr. David Tucker, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist branch.

Tucker said the woman was 55 to 60 years old, had light brown curly hair halfway down her back and appeared to be of Middle Eastern origin. The bomb went off within three minutes of her car's arrival, he said.

The bombing came a day after Israel and Jordan formally ended their long animosity and eight days after terrorists killed 95 people by bombing a Jewish community center in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Cure prescribed for 'dog breath'

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

When Dr. Valerie Gaeth tells her clients they have dog breath, she's not kidding.

"I'm finding many dogs and cats do have tartar buildup on their teeth and have problems with bad breath," said Gaeth, a veterinarian at the Animal Clinic, 408 Highland Ave. "As veterinarians we can clean teeth, but we need the help of owners to continue dental care."

Although it may sound wacky to some, caring for their pet's teeth is an important step many owners overlook. And since Rover probably won't be remembering to brush before bedtime, Gaeth said it's an area that many veterinarians are trying to tell people more about.

"We try to teach people how to clean the teeth when their pets are young," Gaeth said.

The dental problem which many pets experience is periodontal disease, a buildup of tartar which leads to irritation and inflamma-

Stomach of iron required to groom animals

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

To be a pet groomer, you must have a strong stomach, keep your mouth closed and chew lots of gum, said Michelle Woodburn, an eight-year grooming veteran.

"I've come across dogs with maggots in their ears, matted hair covering their eyes and tapeworms," she said. "Plus you always have to be prepared to get bit or attacked." In a typical day, Woodburn grooms eight dogs and cats, each taking from one to two hours depending on the breed. A small dog, such as a pug, takes an hour or less, while the standard poodle takes nearly four hours.

Woodburn begins by "taking care of the basics" — things like cleaning the ears and clipping the animal's toenails. Then they go in the tub where they are shampooed and dried. The "finish work" (clipping the hair) comes last.

"All dogs are pretty much the same, except that some breeds have different patterns," Woodburn said. "But in Iowa City, I've noticed a lot of people just want it cut short."

Cats, however, are a different story. "They usually don't like a bath and do not like to be blown-dry," she said. "I usually clip long-haired cats like Persians, who have so much hair they can't take care of themselves. Sometimes I shave them entirely or just where the hair is matted."

Woodburn began grooming pets in 1986 and opened her own shop, Michelle's Clip and Curl, in 1989. Currently she has about 200 regular clients, which keeps her on her toes year-round. Sometimes she is so busy that owners must book an appointment almost two weeks in advance.

Most of the animals, she said, are very well-behaved.

"If they're not, I tell the owners," Woodburn said. "It's just like with kids — you have to tell their parents they've been bad."

Woodburn enjoys grooming Yorkies the most because she "can give them so many different looks." "Of the big dogs, I like golden retrievers," she said. "Scotties are the hardest because of their short legs that don't bend."

While the barking, the smell and the clipped hair flying through the air might be enough to make some people give it up, Woodburn said there is not a chance of that happening to her.

"There might be a day that you have a dog that's trying to kill you and is going to the bathroom all over the table, but that's OK," she said. "Most days, I just get tired of eating hair."

Connery picks up intellectual role again

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — It's back to the books for Sean Connery.

He played Harrison Ford's scholar-father in "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" and a cancer researcher in "Medicine Man." Now he's a Harvard law professor in the movie "Just Cause," directed by Arne Glimcher.

In the movie, Connery is enlisted by a woman to help get her son off death row.

But don't look for him in Cambridge. The Harvard scenes are being filmed at the University of Florida.

Also in the film are Ruby Dee, Kate Capshaw, Laurence Fishburne, Blair Underwood, Daniel J. Travanti and George Plimpton.

Another side of Tonya Harding about to be exposed

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Nude photos of Tonya Harding from a home video of her honeymoon will appear in next month's Penthouse, the magazine said Tuesday.

Penthouse said the 44-photo layout will include shots of Harding and her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly.

Harding's agent said the former Olympic athlete will probably sue.

Gillooly pleaded guilty to racketeering for his role in the knee-clubbing attack on Nancy Kerrigan and drew two years in prison.

Harding was placed on three years' probation for conspiring to cover up the attack. She must pay $160,000 and complete 500 hours of community service.

Despite divorce, Tom and Rosanne's Eldon house undergoes construction

ELDON, Iowa (AP) — Roseanne and Tom Arnold have split, but that doesn't mean the walls will come tumbling down with them.

The Victorian mansion on their 2,000-acre estate — designed to be the largest in the state — still has no roof or siding. Construction stopped in June.

"Believe me, it won't be left half-finished," Tom Arnold said in a recent interview with the Des Moines Register.

While the house is on hold, Tom Arnold said some of their other ventures are thriving, including Roseanne and Tom's Big Food Diner in Eldon.

But according to the divorce papers, Roseanne wants the cattle breeding operation on their estate.

Givens understands Tyson's nonboxing punches

CHICAGO (AP) — Robin Givens says she's coming to understand the violence that Mike Tyson brought home from the ring.

"As the heavyweight champion of the world, he was exempt from the rules of civilized behavior. He had been condemned for his brutality in his early life, but then he found his way into the boxing arena, where brutality was not only condoned but expected and richly rewarded," Givens writes in the September issue of Playboy magazine.

One of their many fights ended when Tyson knocked Givens across the room with what he later called "the best punch I've ever thrown in my life."

Tyson and Givens divorced in 1988 after eight months of marriage. He was later convicted of rape and is serving a six-year sentence.

7th Farm Aid concert in the works

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They've got the money, honey, and Willie Nelson's got the time.

Gov. Edwin Edwards and Jefferson Parish Sheriff Harry Lee have each pledged $10,000 for the seventh Farm Aid benefit concert, scheduled for Sept. 18 in the Louisiana Superdome. A company from Louisiana and another from Mississippi have tossed another $55,000 into the pot.

"This is the best kickoff we've ever had," Nelson said Monday at a news conference. "We haven't spent any money yet and we're already making money."

Scheduled performers include John Mellencamp, Kris Kristofferson, Neil Young, John Conley, Julio Iglesias and David Alan Coe.

Farm Aid, Inc. has raised about $11.5 million for farm support groups around the country since 1985.

David Geffen feels authors don't know everything

CHICAGO (AP) — Writers? Don't ask David Geffen about writers.

"The fact that someone writes a good book doesn't mean their ideas for the movie are good," said Geffen, whose company is producing the film version of "Interview with the Vampire."

Author Anne Rice and many of her fans have complained about the casting of wholesome Tom Cruise as the vampire Lestat. But Geffen says in an interview in the September issue of Playboy magazine that the critics are just batty.

"People were outraged when Vivien Leigh was cast in the role of Scarlett O'Hara. Today, it is unthinkable that anybody else could have played it," he said.

CORALVILLE CONSTRUCTION CONTINUES

Highway modified to repel floods

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

Although the waters receded from Coralville almost one year ago, some area residents still fear the last summer's horrors will be repeated.

But many believe there is a solution to the problem: the new highway improvement project planned by Coralville, which is scheduled to be finished before the spring of 1995.

The project includes raising the highway level 1 foot above the highest elevation the flooding water reached last year, the construction of a new storm sewer system that will make it easier to control high water levels and the addition of a center turn lane.

"We can't stop all flooding, but we'll do what we can do to control the majority of flood situations in the future," said Dan Holderness, Coralville city engineer. "It's a drastic improvement in the character of the highway area and a real positive thing for the city and people who come to the area." Coralville Mayor Allan Axen stressed the fact that the improvement plan, apart from including flood-prevention measures, also will create sidewalks with lighting and trees next to the highway.

"It's a drastic improvement in the character of the highway area and a real positive thing for the city and people who come to the area."

Dan Holderness,
Coralville city engineer

"There's been a push to upgrade it for many years. There are advantages we can develop into the project for flood control. But the impetus of the program was aesthetic consideration and safety more than anything else," said Axen. "We worked pretty hard on the plan for three years." The project, partly financed by a $250,000 allocation from the city of Coralville, is supported by a $1 million grant from the U.S. Department of Labor.

At the Sinclair Marketing service station in Coralville, the employees are looking forward to the improvements. Their plastic dinosaur mascot made national news last summer with an orange life jacket tied around its long green neck as the flood waters rose. Now, Denise McNair, manager of the station, welcomes the project even though she thinks it is unlikely for a similar flood to occur in the future.

"I'm all for it — just in case. But I think we had such a disastrous flood, we might not have another flood like that in a million years," she said.

McNair also said the project will make the area more accessible, particularly during the lunch hour.

"It's hard to get in and out of the highway, and it will improve the looks. It might be beneficial for the businesses," she said.

The Coralville section of Highway 6, which carries a daily load of 32,000 cars, has the second-highest accident rate in Iowa, according to statistics from the Department of Transportation.

The flooding of last year, however, meant flood-prevention measures were added to the project.

The Solid Rock Christian Church had 18 inches of water in the building for more than a month and had to be reconstructed because the walls were falling in from mold and humidity.

"We were flooded, and I don't want to be flooded again. But with all the improvement of the road, I'm not worried that it'll happen again," said Carol Sherman, wife of the pastor at Solid Rock Christian Church.

REGISTRATION MEANS RECORD EXAMINATION

Check ensures vehicle insurance

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — Problem drivers beware. If you don't have proof of insurance, your name will likely be flagged when you visit the county treasurer's office to register your car or truck.

A state computer crackdown on such drivers is now available in 21 Iowa counties. Without proof of insurance, you can't renew your license plates.

"The system has been written so that registration renewal cannot take place unless the driver has what it takes to override the system," said Dennis Ehler of the Iowa Department of Transportation.

"If proof is not provided, then renewal cannot take place," he said Tuesday.

Ehler is the director of IDOT's drivers' services. Under the program, county treasurers can tap into the transportation department's computer files to determine whether individuals are required to have proof of insurance. Ehler said 60,000 to 80,000 Iowans with poor driving records are required to have proof of insurance.

"In the past, the driver's license files basically haven't talked to the registration files," Ehler said. "This file contains the names of people who can't register unless they have proof of insurance."

Proof of insurance, he explained, is a form that is issued by the transportation department when a driver violates the law and the person's driver's license is suspended. Problem drivers — those convicted of drunk driving or who have a history of traffic violations, for example — must carry the form in their cars and submit it to the county treasurer's office when registering vehicles.

"It's basically something we came up with in discussions with the county treasurers," Ehler said. "They were concerned about renewing registrations for those who shouldn't have it done."

The program started last month in Black Hawk, Dubuque, Allamakee, Bremer, Buchanan, Butler, Clayton, Clinton, Delaware, Fayette, Grundy, Jackson and Winneshiek counties. It was expanded last week to Linn, Johnson, Benton, Cedar, Iowa, Jones and Washington counties.

All of Iowa's 99 counties eventually will be connected to the system, Ehler said.

NEW POLL PUBLISHED

Clinton's approval drops in Iowa

Associated Press

DES MOINES — President Clinton's approval rating in Iowa has slipped, but he's still getting higher marks at the 18-month mark of his term than Presidents Carter and Reagan received at the same point, a new poll indicates.

According to a copyright poll in Tuesday editions of the Des Moines Register, 49 percent of Iowa adults approve of the job Clinton is doing as president. Forty-one percent disapprove and the rest are undecided.

Clinton's latest approval rating is the lowest among the four polls the Register has conducted since Clinton became president 18 months ago. The new reading is down 15 points from the 64 percent approval rating that Clinton received from Iowans in February.

However, with more than a third of his term behind him, Clinton's rating isn't too bad when compared to recent presidents' readings.

At the 18-month mark, President Jimmy Carter got a 39 percent approval rating. President Ronald Reagan was at 46 percent at the same point in his presidency. And President George Bush, who lost to Clinton in the 1992 election, got a 66 percent approval rating at the same point in his presidency.

In the latest poll, 53 percent of women approve of Clinton's job in office, compared to 44 percent of men. Fifty-seven percent of Iowans who say they favor abortion rights favor his performance. Among income groups, Clinton is weakest with Iowans whose annual family incomes exceed $50,000. Just 44 percent of that group say they favor the president's job performance.

Four-fifths of Democrats approve of Clinton, compared to one-fourth of Republicans and 49 percent of independents.

Only 40 percent of Iowans approve of the president's handling of foreign affairs, and only 41 percent approve of his handling of health-care reform.

Most Iowans think Clinton won't be re-elected, according to the poll. Sixty percent say Clinton isn't likely to win another term.

NOT JUST A PERSONAL MATTER

Maintain current ban on drugs

Advocates of drug legalization claim that the issue is nothing more than a matter of personal liberty. They couldn't be further from the truth. Illegal drug use is rampant in American society. Marijuana may be the largest cash crop in the country, worth up to 50 percent more than the $16 billion in corn grown annually. Over 17 million people smoked it last year. One in four high-school seniors admit to use of harder drugs.

The physical effects of drugs are unquestioned. Drugs destroy the body and tear down the mind.

If drugs are in such high demand — more so given the legal barriers and penalties associated with the product — shouldn't America just accept reality? Proponents of legalization convincingly argue that the anti-drug effort is hopeless. More importantly, is it wrong-headed? In a society founded on personal liberty, the government must think long and hard before interfering in the personal activities of its citizens — much less completely banning a product so widely popular. Granted, there is ample evidence that drug laws were passed in response to public hysteria. There are nevertheless good reasons for them. The nature of the product limits the applicability of the American ideal of personal freedom to the question of legalization. The fact is that drugs are not like other consumer goods.

The physical effects of drugs are unquestioned. Drugs destroy the body and tear down the mind. Products carrying less risk (asbestos, FDA red No. 5) have been prohibited with much less protest. Those physical effects of drugs are harder to escape. A consumer who tries saccharin but fears its health dangers is free to quit without difficulty. A first-time drug user can be hopelessly hooked — or die. Drug treatment programs, political promotion notwithstanding, are notorious for their ineffectiveness. And legalization offers trouble-free access for kids: What high-school student can't get a 12-pack?

Besides, drugs are not a purely personal matter. Drug users are more likely to commit other crimes and be unemployed than other Americans. Those who do have jobs are less productive in them. Heroin addicts spread HIV. Society ends up with the bill. With this litany of dangers, drugs are one of the rare products which actually necessitate government intervention. If America can ban driving over 65, apples with alar and the Corvair, it should certainly ban drugs.

Focal point: Should drugs be legalized?

The question of whether or not drugs should be legalized has been debated extensively in public since the late 1960s. In recent years, governments around the globe have vigorously tried to halt the drug trade, achieving mixed results at best. Once again, the possibility of legalization is on the national agenda. Today, four DI Viewpoints writers examine the issues involved with unique styles and varied perspectives.

RESTRICTIONS MAKE LITTLE SENSE

Marijuana has medicinal uses

Drug legalization is a delicate subject: Adopting a pro approach carries the stigma of actual drug use. But one does not need to be a strung-out pot head to recognize the medical benefits that may be gained by the controlled use of some drugs, marijuana in particular.

Marijuana can be utilized in a manner referred to as "compassionate use." Compassionate use is still very rare — special permission must be obtained and careful supervision is employed. If cannabis — the botanical name for plants which produce tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), a psychoactive ingredient — were legalized, compassionate use could be increased without the hassles of acquiring consent.

Many afflictions are relieved through the use of marijuana. Glaucoma sufferers could use the drug to preserve their sight, while asthmatics employ it to remove chest constriction. Used in small doses, cannabis is an anticonvulsant that lessens epileptic seizures.

Marijuana has also been shown to have antianxiety and hypnotic effects as well as pain-killing and calming results. The drug even reduces depression.

Perhaps the most significant results of cannabis use lie in cancer and AIDS research. Cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy have found that the nausea and vomiting accompanying the treatment are significantly reduced when the drug is used; growth of cancerous tumors is also retarded. Marijuana helps AIDS patients gain weight and because no needle is used when administering the drug, spread of the virus is eliminated.

Cannabis is safer than many prescription medicines and often works for patients who have no tolerance for the side effects of other drugs. It does not damage bodily organs when given in "therapeutic" amounts; it has not been proven to be addictive, nor has it been established as a carcinogen.

There is the fear that if the drug were made readily available, abuse and misuse would occur. One would hope, however, that users would begin to treat it in a responsible fashion like any other drug that alleviates pain.

As long as cannabis remains illegal, a prohibition-type atmosphere will be maintained with users obtaining the drug through covert means — abusing it in the process. With legality comes responsibility; once the "sensational" aspects are eliminated, fun and excitement wear off.

Unfortunately, marijuana is grouped with such drugs as heroin and LSD, drugs which have reputations of dangerous misuse. Rather, it should be considered on par with cocaine and morphine, drugs which are also illegal but used medically. When there are positive therapeutic aspects to a drug, it should be implemented in the medical world rather than shunned and made illegal.

Damned are those you dream for

When my shattered lips laugh,
I will still cry
In silence
From without,
Not
From within.

Yet
You make me dream.
I am flowing lately
In the flows of falls.
Fearing of the last fall,
Waiting for me
To end it all.
Fearing of fearless sights,
Dreaming in dreamless nights,
Falling from the unfallable,
Denying of the undeniable.
Unfolding my mind,
Attempting to end
My endless dreams.
Facing the last fall.
Falling from the unfallable.
At last,
Facing the undeniable.

Yet
You make me dream.
The light is knocking
On the lids of
My eyes
To open
My eyes.
Yet
You make me not to open them.
Whenever
I have opened my eyes,
I have been disappointed
With myself,

My people,
My surroundings.
So you make me dream.
Dreams that do nothing
To the pain of reality.
Yet I hope
Today is the day when
My dreams,
Your dreams,
Our dreams
And
The reality of today
Will be the same.
But
Isn't it another hopeless dream?
I wonder,
While closing my eyes again,
Hoping and dreaming again.

So caring,
So kind,
So flawless a place
From the flaws of life
To be found nowhere
But in my mind,
In my dream,
In my hope,
In my wish
For a life
I haven't had.
For a life
I have wanted to have
For far too long.
Am I on my way to
Where I wanted to be?
Only in my dreams?
Only in your dreams?
Only in our dreams?
Dreams that have blinded me
For far too long.
Dreams
That are just dreams.
Dreams
That will take me nowhere
From here
Where I am.
From here
Where I have

Wanted to leave
For far too long.
Yet
You make me dream.
Wherever
I go
I reach nowhere.
Whatever
I do,
I get nowhere.
Will I reach,
Will I get
Somewhere,
Sometimes,
Somehow
By opening my eyes
And leaving my dreams?
I shall know it
When I reach,
When I get
Somewhere,
Sometimes,
Somehow ...

Yet
You make me dream.
Somewhere,
In my mind,
I dream of places.
Sometimes,
In my mind,
I dream of futures.
Somehow,
In my mind,
I want to leave your dreams
For me.
Dreams
Damning the dreamers.
Tears of fear fill my eyes
When I leave your dreams
For me.
Dreams of a future
That is not to come.
Dreams of a place
That is not to be found.
My future might be bleak,
My place might be unchangeable,
And my fate inevitable.
But the warmth of life and hope
Never gets cold,
As I leave your dreams,
For me
The way my tears do
As they leave my eyes

Moral character and legalizing drugs

Because I view this country's moral character to be out of shape and gasping for air, I immediately say no to the legalization of drugs. Our principles and conduct at this stage in America's history do not warrant us any opportunities for the potential problems that the legalization of drugs could manifest.

Because I view this country's moral character to be out of shape and gasping for air, I immediately say no to the legalization of drugs. Our principles and conduct at this stage in America's history do not warrant us any opportunities for the potential problems that the legalization of drugs could manifest. I understand that the materialization of drug problems is already stressing this society; however, this could become more widespread if the legalization of drugs occurred. For example, I believe that upon the legalization of drugs, there would initially be a larger population of people experimenting with various drugs. Of that population, there would be the potential for many to possibly become addicts or habitual users and possibly lose their lives from overdose or toxicity.

In other words, in America's current state it cannot handle the pressures that the legalization of drugs will produce.

Add these potentialities to the choices and challenges we already deal with on a daily basis, and they suggest a state of total chaos. In other words, in America's current state it cannot handle the pressures that the legalization of drugs will produce. Therefore, I say no to the legalization of drugs.

On the other hand, if we are disciplined enough to exercise our moral character back into shape, then I have no problem with the legalization of drugs. I strongly believe in the wisdom of Solomon as he wrote in Proverbs 22:6: "Train up a child in the way he (she) should go; and when he (she) is old, he (she) will not depart from it." Therefore, when we educate our children with sound doctrines and teach them proper principles of conduct, it does not matter what is legalized — they will adhere to this education. The availability of drugs would not matter because the children will not only have an awareness, but a good understanding of the negative factors associated with drug use, and they will know who they are and what they are capable of being as creations of God — thus they will have no need or desire to engage in drug activities.

This may sound like an utopian society, but it could be obtained within this society today. Every institution (education, political, religious, recreational, etc.) must strive to emanate a healthy moral character, be committed to practicing an ethical behavior and educate the public on living a moral life. Individually we must adhere to sound doctrines and moral principles. We must insist that the moral characters of our state, national and international leaders be impeccable. If they cannot live up to an irreproachable moral character, we need to replace them with someone who can. We cannot continue to tolerate the crooks, murderers and thieves we have in leadership positions — especially when we speak of legalizing drugs.

It would be suicidal to our existence if we think of legalizing drugs within this immoral society. However, with a healthy moral character upheld throughout America, the legalization of drugs will have no bearing on our progression toward human and spiritual excellency.

RABIN, HUSSEIN SPEAK BEFORE CONGRESS

Leaders of Jordan, Israel denounce terrorist acts

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jordan's King Hussein and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin followed a dramatic joint pledge of friendship Tuesday with sharp condemnation of terrorist attacks that threaten the historic march to Middle East peace.

Hussein said Arabs and Israelis must "live as members of one family" and denounced as "enemies of hope, enemies of security" those responsible for the bombing of the Israeli embassy in London. "I condemn this recent attack."

Rabin lashed out at "radical Islamic terrorists" who were waging an "all-out war" to stop peace, including the London bombing and another last week in Argentina.

Rabin said he was committed to "open a new chapter" in the region but suggested "somebody from the outside" — an unmistakable reference to Syria — was using its influence to keep Lebanon from negotiating peace with Israel.

Standing between the leaders at a White House news conference, President Clinton also denounced the bombings as the likely work of terrorists opposed to Middle East peace.

"We will not, we must not, allow them to disrupt the peace process," Clinton said. "We cannot allow the enemies of peace to prevail."

Rabin also said Israel believed Syria has helped supply terrorists bent on derailing the peace process.

Clinton promised that U.S. economic and military support for Israel would be unyielding as Israel tried to turn its framework with Jordan into an actual treaty and then negotiate with Lebanon and Syria. Clinton said Secretary of State Warren Christopher would head to the region soon in hopes of spurring further progress.

Hours after the leaders' unprecedented back-to-back speeches to a joint session of Congress, Clinton saluted Hussein and Rabin as "two heroes of peace" and promised, "America will stand by those who take risks for peace."

Rabin and Hussein pledged to use their accord ending 46 years of hostility as a vehicle for a lasting peace.

"We want normality and humanity to become the prevailing order," Hussein told a Capitol audience that included ambassadors from around the world. Beaming with joy, the king told Congress that the prospects for lasting peace in the region were "growing before our eyes."

Rabin, a decorated war veteran and former Israeli defense minister, then described himself as "a soldier in the army of peace."

For all their warmth and rapport a day after signing the landmark accord, the speeches did not disguise that their political goals are not entirely parallel.

"For our part, we will never forget Palestine," the Hashemite king said while also asserting only God could exercise sovereignty over the Muslim, Christian and Jewish holy sites in Jerusalem.

Rabin, for his part, offered an emotional reminder of Israel's struggle for Jerusalem and that the city is "the heart of the Jewish people."

He donned a yarmulke, the Jewish prayer cap, and intoned in a husky baritone the ancient Hebrew blessing to "our Lord who has preserved us and sustained us and enabled us to reach this time."

In the galleries sat Israelis who have lost family members in wars with the Arabs. Rabin read their names and they stood and were applauded.

Participants were overcome by the sense of history.

DEMOCRATS LIMIT SCOPE OF PROCEEDINGS

Congressional probe dredges up few insights

Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — White House counsel Lloyd Cutler conceded Tuesday that "too many discussions about too many sensitive matters" involving Whitewater had taken place among the president's aides. But on the opening day of politically charged congressional hearings, he insisted no cover-up or unethical actions had occurred.

Republicans countered that far more than simply inappropriate conversations had taken place as a fearful White House gathered information about a burgeoning investigation into an Arkansas savings and loan with ties to President and Hillary Clinton.

Rep. James Leach of Iowa, the White House's chief antagonist, said an "arrogance of power" had been on display in an attempt to learn whether the Resolution Trust Corp. investigation was likely to embarrass the Clintons.

"This thing smells to high heaven," added a Republican colleague, Toby Roth of Wisconsin.

But the GOP's persistent questioning at the House Banking Committee hearing did little to elicit new information or force concessions from the White House counsel.

Cutler, showing a flash of temper, sharply dismissed any comparison of Whitewater with Watergate, which he called the "granddaddy" of cover-ups.

"If this White House had been in the business of trying to affect what the RTC was doing, certainly we could have done a better job than we did," Cutler said.

"I found no evidence of any attempt to cover up anything at all," he added. On a scale of one to 10, if the Watergate scandal were a 10 Whitewater would be "maybe a one or two."

One onlooker in the jammed

Cutler hearing room had a special interest.

James McDougal, one-time Clinton political backer and a former partner with the Clintons in the Whitewater land venture, sat in the back of the room.

The failure of McDougal's Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, at a heavy cost to the taxpayers, was the focus of the RTC investigation. But until special counsel Robert Fiske completes a broad Little Rock, Ark.-based investigation, the House committee is limited to looking into only White House "contacts" about the investigation.

Clinton spent the day focusing on foreign affairs without making any comments about the hearings.

Cutler said the contacts among administration officials "violated no ethical standards."

But, he added, in his only substantial concession of the day, "I found there were too many people having too many discussions about too many sensitive matters — matters which were properly the province of the office of the White House counsel."

"We did not meet as high a performance standard as we should have set for ourselves."

Still, he said, these contacts were nothing worse than "heads-up" warnings among high-echelon Clinton aides about the existence of the investigation.

Partisanship prevails at Whitewater hearing

Jill Lawrence
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — His voice dripped with skepticism as Democratic Rep. Henry Gonzalez convened congressional hearings Tuesday into "the so-called Whitewater affair."

Leach

Rep. Jim Leach, playing the Republican lead, countered with a righteous lecture on ethics and candor.

Bald-faced partisanship dominated from the start at this political Rorschach test of a proceeding.

Republicans look at Whitewater and see proof of arrogance and deception in the Clinton White House. Democrats see much ado about a few bad judgment calls. The make-or-break question for both parties is what the public will see as the hearings unfold.

White House counsel Lloyd Cutler, the leadoff witness, quickly advanced the administration view of what was really important.

He noted that President Clinton had presided Monday over the signing of a historic peace declaration between Israel and Jordan and the leaders of the two nations were addressing a joint session of Congress "the very same day" as the first Whitewater hearing.

"In our system, the president and the Congress must cooperate on smaller as well as larger matters," Cutler said, leaving no doubt as to which he thought was which.

Whitewater, shorthand for a collection of failed Arkansas banking and real estate deals, first came up during the 1992 presidential campaign and has been enmeshed in politics ever since.

Republicans saw cronyism, undue influence and conflicts of interest in the Clintons' behavior while the president was Arkansas governor and his wife was a leading Little Rock attorney.

After the election, as the Clintons and their aides dealt with various Whitewater investigations, the GOP accused them of trying to influence federal agencies, withhold information and mislead the public.

Meanwhile, the Clinton forces are depicting Whitewater as a distraction from the real work of the nation and Clinton as an effective, hard-driving chief executive fully engaged in health-care reform and other ways to make life better for Americans.

As political scandals go, even Leach, R-Iowa, conceded Whitewater may be a mere bump on the landscape. The opening session did nothing to change that impression.

The setting was a routine House hearing room. The House Banking Committee also bypassed the traditional opening display of rhetorical fireworks; statements from its 51 members might well have taken up the entire day.

The preliminaries had already left Republicans fuming. The controlling Democrats had sharply limited the scope of the inquiry, banned questioning by any special counsels or aides and had denied GOP requests to let some members ask questions for longer than the traditional five minutes.

U.N. APPROVAL SOUGHT

Haitian officials daunted by U.S. invasion proposal

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haitian politicians expressed alarm Tuesday at a possible invasion as the United States sought U.N. approval to restore democracy by force in the Caribbean nation.

The U.N. Security Council postponed until today consideration of the U.S. request to authorize a possible invasion to restore elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was deposed by a coup in September 1991.

"If the Security Council passes the resolution, I fear the worst, not only for Haiti but also for the world," said conservative politician Hubert de Ronceray, a frequent critic of Aristide.

U.N.-imposed trade and travel embargoes on impoverished Haiti have failed to dislodge its military rulers.

Under the draft Security Council resolution proposed by Washington, an international force — commanded by the United States and monitored by U.N. observers — would remove Haiti's army rulers. International administrators would then prepare for elections in 1996.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said last week that a force to take over after the Haitian army leaders depart could require as many as 16,000 people, including more than 5,000 combat troops.

De Ronceray called the resolution "one of those sparks which announced a great fire" and said it would mean "a new period of neocolonialism was opening" in the Caribbean.

But Sen. Turneb Delpé, a leader of the National Front for Change and Democracy, the left-wing coalition that nominated Aristide for president in 1990, said army leaders would have to take responsibility for an invasion.

"If there is an intervention, the army leaders — who have refused to take the road of negotiation — will have to take the blame," he said.

Coup leader Lt. Gen. Raul Cedras last year reneged on an agreement for Aristide to return to power by last Oct. 30.

The National Front opposes foreign intervention, but Delpé declined to comment on the proposed U.N. resolution until it was approved or rejected.

Fifteen pro-Aristide groups earlier this month argued against an invasion, saying it would only reinforce American domination of Haiti.

Aristide has made contradictory statements, sometimes seeming to call for military force while also saying he wouldn't return to the presidency if it resulted from foreign intervention.

On Tuesday, he didn't respond directly to the draft U.N. resolution, but called for a deadline for his usurpers to leave.

U.N. CONSIDERS BURNING BODIES

Clean water worked for in Zaire

Shawn Pogatchnik

GOMA, Zaire — With refugees dying faster than mass graves could be dug, American soldiers started setting up the first water purification systems Tuesday for a million Rwandan refugees threatened by cholera.

Some 11,000 refugees have died and thousands more will die from drinking the slimy water of nearby Lake Kivu, fouled by floating bodies and excrement.

The water purification mission is "day one of our life-saving operation," the American commander in Goma said.

"Our top priority is clean water because without it, more people are going to die in droves," Brig. Gen. Jack Nix said after landing at Goma's single-strip airport.

C-5 Galaxy cargo planes bearing American water purification gear arrived Monday. Another C-5 Galaxy landed Tuesday with water treatment equipment from California capable of sterilizing 2 quarts of water a day for each refugee. The U.N. estimates each Rwandan needs 5 quarts.

Rotting bodies piled up along Goma's main thoroughfare, victims of cholera and other diseases thriving in the camps scarring Zaire's eastern border with Rwanda.

The United Nations said it was having trouble finding space for mass graves to bury the hundreds perishing each day from cholera and other diseases and was considering burning bodies.

"The burning issue, as it were, is a last resort," said Ray Wilkinson, chief spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Goma. "One problem, as you may guess, is that it's hard to find anyone willing to undertake that grisly task."

The Hutu refugees in Goma fled from victorious Tutsi rebels, fearing retribution for the massacre of 200,000 to 500,000 people, mostly Tutsis, by Hutu militias from April to July.

OFFER FOUND UNSURPRISING

Simpson reward ploy anticipated

Niko Price
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — From a hand-lettered sign offering $20 for the return of a lost cat to the $13.5 million bounty for the capture of drug lord Pablo Escobar, rewards are as much a part of life as crime itself.

So many were not surprised when O.J. Simpson offered $500,000 for information leading to the conviction of someone else in the slaying of his ex-wife and her friend.

People who study rewards, however, say the money rarely helps catch criminals — and often is put up by the perpetrators. But for those tips that do lead to convictions, legal experts say the promise of a reward is as good as a contract.

Paulette Cooper, co-author of the book "Reward" about reward offers in 60 crimes, said it's common for the accused to offer a reward to project an air of innocence. That's why she and her husband and co-author, Paul Noble, were surprised it took Simpson more than a month to make his offer.

"Every day we were looking at each other and saying, 'Why hasn't this man posted a reward?'" Cooper said Monday.

She said rewards often involve more posturing than crime-solving. After all, "anybody can set up a reward," she pointed out.

Anybody, indeed. New Jersey real estate magnate Bernard Gimbel traveled to Los Angeles last weekend to add a $250,000 check to the Simpson pot. Gimbel, 54, said he was a friend of Simpson.

Gimbel hoped others would pitch in. "With 3 or 4 million, someone would come forward and squeal on their mother," he said.

Simpson lawyer Robert Shapiro called the reward "very generous" but declined to endorse it. "We're not working with him," Shapiro said.

Another offer is from the Globe tabloid magazine, which peppered the nation's supermarket checkout lines with the headline: "Who Framed O.J.? $1 Million Reward."

The proposition is simple: Tell the magazine whodunit, and as long as it isn't Simpson, the magazine will pay $1 million.

The catch? The money will be paid, the article says, "provided the informant grants Globe exclusive broadcast, screen and print rights to their story."

Law Professor Peter Arenella of the University of California, Los Angeles, doubted whether the main goal of the Simpson reward is finding a new suspect.

"The likelihood that they'll turn up usable material for a criminal investigation are probably pretty small," Arenella said. "The reward press conference was just that — a press conference designed to portray Mr. Simpson as a factually innocent person."

SUDDEN MOVE THREATENS PEACE PLAN

Serbs will reprise Sarajevo cutoff

David Cray
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — In a harsh blow to peace prospects, Bosnian Serbs said Tuesday they would re-establish their stranglehold on Sarajevo, closing the only route civilians can use to enter and leave the city.

The surprise action, to take effect today, will deprive the Bosnian capital of a major food-supply route at a time when the U.N. airlift is indefinitely suspended.

It will also end a four-month period of near normalcy for Sarajevo, the first since Serbs began a bombardment and siege in April 1992.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic called the Serb move a "senseless decision" intended to sabotage already faltering efforts to bring peace.

In a letter to the U.N. peacekeeping force, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said the road was being closed because the Muslim-led government had violated the March agreement that opened the route.

He accused the government of using the road to smuggle arms and ammunition into Sarajevo. He also complained that government troops had been firing into Serb territory and that the government had not honored agreements on prisoner exchanges.

The Bosnian Serb news agency Srna later quoted Karadzic as saying the tightened siege was only temporary. The agency did not give details.

Izetbegovic, after an emergency meeting with U.N. officials, said the claims of arms smuggling were "absolutely incorrect."

Viktor Andreyev, the top U.N. political officer in Sarajevo, said the U.N. contingent had no evidence weapons were smuggled over the route, and he protested the Serb action.

Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said the Bosnian government expected U.N. officials to persuade the Serbs to backtrack.

vo, it's crucial for the peace process," he said. "The Serbs want to start a major problem here in order to avoid a peace process."

The Serbs' action followed their refusal last week to accept an accord worked out by the United States, Britain, France, Russia and Germany to end the 27-month-old war.

Bonds joins elite group

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams hit his major league-leading 38th homer and Todd Benzinger drove in three runs Tuesday, giving the San Francisco Giants a 12-5 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Barry Bonds stole the 300th base of his career, joining his father, godfather and three other major-leaguers to hit 250 homers and steal 300 bases.

Bonds, the three-time MVP of the San Francisco Giants, has 253 career home runs. He joined his godfather, Willie Mays (600 homers, 338 steals), and his father, Giants hitting coach Bobby Bonds (332, 461), in the 250-300 club. The others to reach the milestone are Joe Morgan, Andre Dawson and Vada Pinson.

Bonds stole second base in the first inning against the Los Angeles Dodgers and immediately pulled up the bag so it could be taken to the clubhouse.

The Giants moved within 1 1/2 games of the first-place Dodgers in the National League West.

Orioles 10-2, Indians 4-10
BALTIMORE — Dennis Martinez pitched eight innings of two-hit ball and Albert Belle had three hits, including his 32nd homer, as the Indians gained a split of a day-night doubleheader.

Belle, who has appealed a pending 10-game suspension for using a corked bat, has six homers in his last eight games. He had three RBI for 93 on the season and hit a solo homer off Mike Quist (3-3) in the third.

Martinez (10-5), who had a no-hitter until Brady Anderson's two-out, RBI single in the sixth, 11, walked two and struck out six.

Tigers 9, Mariners 1
DETROIT — Travis Fryman broke a 0-for-26 slump with two doubles, two triples and four RBI to lead Detroit over Seattle.

David Wells (4-6) allowed just one run on five hits in his fourth complete game of the season. He struck out five and walked his first batter in 3 1/3 innings, a span of 156 batters.

Seattle's Jim Converse (0-3) continued to struggle, allowing six runs on nine hits in 5 1/3 innings.

Brewers 7, Blue Jays 5
TORONTO — Jody Reed celebrated his 32nd birthday by hitting a pair of singles, scoring a run and driving in two more in the Brewers' seven-run first inning.

Reed later hit a two-run single, making the score 7-0 and chasing Toronto's Juan Guzman (10-10).

Ricky Bones (10-7) went eight innings to win his third straight start, allowing five runs on 10 hits while striking out four and walking two.

Mike Fetters pitched the ninth for his 13th save.

Red Sox 10, Yankees 7
NEW YORK — Tim Lincecum and Mo Vaughn hit two-run home runs in the sixth inning as the Red Sox

Associated Press

San Francisco Giants' Barry Bonds clutches second base after stealing his 300th career stolen base during the first inning against the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday in San Francisco. Bonds now joins the 250 homerun, 300 stolen base club, of which his father, Bobby Bonds, his godfather Willie Mays, and three other major-leaguers belong.

Sox ended the Yankees' five-game winning streak.

Naehring's seventh homer of the year came off Jimmy Key (15-3) and capped a Red Sox comeback that began after the Yankees scored five runs in the first inning off Chris Nabholz (3-3).

Nabholz allowed seven hits and five runs, walked four and struck out six in five innings but held the Yankees to four hits after the first inning.

Royals 3, White Sox 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wally Joyner had a pair of RBI singles as Kansas City won its fourth straight.

Tom Gordon (10-6) improved to 7-1 lifetime against the White Sox, allowing two runs and six hits in 7 1/3 innings. He walked five and struck out four.

Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

Wilson Alvarez (11-6) gave up six hits and three runs in seven innings.

Expos 5, Braves 3
ATLANTA — The Montreal Expos took advantage of Atlanta's fumbling fielders for four unearned runs, beating Greg Maddux and the Braves for their eighth straight win.

Maddux (13-6) lowered his ERA to 1.68, best in the majors, despite the loss. He had retired 13 consecutive batters until the seventh when leadoff hitter Wil Cordero reached on Blausler's error.

Henry (7-2) allowed three hits and two runs in seven innings. He struck out five and walked one. Mel Rojas pitched a scoreless eighth and gave up David Justice's 16th homer leading off the ninth.

Cubs 8, Pirates 4
PITTSBURGH — Mark Grace and Rick Wilkins greeted Pittsburgh relievers with eighth-inning homers and the Chicago Cubs overcame Anthony Young's injury-shortened start to beat the Pirates.

Young, activated off the disabled list just before gametime, lasted four innings before leaving with fatigue in his right elbow and forearm. Young had been on the disabled list since July 10 because of a strained elbow.

Bautista (4-4) got the victory.

Astros 6, Reds 5
CINCINNATI — Jeff Bagwell hit his 33rd homer and the Houston Astros bounced back to beat the Cincinnati Reds.

The teams conclude their final series at Riverfront Stadium on Wednesday afternoon.

Todd Jones (4-2) struck out Reggie Sanders to keep the score tied in the sixth and held the Reds hitless the rest of the way. Jones pitched 3 1/3 hitless innings, struck out five and an allowed only an intentional walk.

Bagwell also doubled in the second and scored on Ken Caminiti's single for a 5-0 lead that seemed safe in Harnisch's hands. The right-hander had won all five of his starts since returning from a partially torn bicep tendon.

Phillies 10, Marlins 8

MIAMI — Ricky Jordan hit a tie-breaking single in the 12th inning as the Philadelphia Phillies blew a six-run lead but still beat Florida.

Jim Eisenreich led off the 12th inning with a single and took second when right fielder Gary Sheffield overran the ball for an error. Jordan then singled off Robb Nen (4-5) and later scored on an infield single by Kim Batiste, who had four hits and three RBI.

about staleness and getting tired." Tuesday the Hawkeyes held a recreational 3-point shooting contest at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Mon'ter Glasper edged Jim Bartels in the finals.

Bartels said the trip will be good for more than just basketball.

"We're going to work hard in every game that we play, but I'm sure we're also going to look around (at the sites)," Bartels said. "Most of us have never been overseas. It will be chance to get out and do a little of what we normally wouldn't be able to do."

Joyner-Kersey said she never used those javelins. But afterwards referee Albert Kalin of Russia accused her of wetting the javelins herself to improve the grip. He also said she used them in the competition.

"The official wrongfully accused her of doing something wrong," Kersey said. "I'm not going to have Jackie accused of any wrongdoing."

Joyner-Kersey was one of four world record-holders to win gold medals in track and field competition Tuesday. Mike Powell captured the long jump on his last attempt, Nouredine Morelci ran away with the mile and Moses Kiptanui won the 5,000.

The controversy surrounding Joyner-Kersey began when her two javelins became soaked with beer before the event. She told officials what happened and the javelins were inspected, approved and put into a pool with others for use by any of the athletes.

Iowa to face Pepperdine in first round of invitational

The Iowa men's basketball team will face Pepperdine in the first round of the 1994 Hawkkey Invitational tournament, which will be held at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Dec. 2 and 3.

The Hawkeyes and the Waves, a team that qualified for the NCAA tournament in 1993, will meet in Friday's (Dec. 2) second game at 8 p.m. Ohio University and Cal-Irvine will play in the tournament's first game.

Pepperdine, 42-19 in its last two seasons, played Michigan to a 78-74 overtime loss in last year's NCAA tournament. Seven-foot Gavin Vanderputten, returns to lead the Waves.

Ohio, also a tournament qualifier last season, is the defending Mid-American Conference champion. Junior forward Gary Trent is one of four returning starters to the Bobcat lineup. Trent averaged 25.4 points and 11.4 rebounds per game.

Cal-Irvine will be led by Chris Brown, the nation's leading 3-point shooter last season. Brown made a school-record 122 3-pointers for the Anteater club that posted a 10-20 record.

Cal-Irvine defeated the Hawkeyes 86-78 last December.

"This is, without question, the best overall field I've been part of in this tournament," said Iowa coach Tom Davis. "I think all four teams have a good chance of making it into a postseason tournament."

Iowa was 11-16 overall last season and 5-13 in the Big Ten Conference. The only letterman not returning to the team is James Winters, who was lost to graduation.

Hawkeyes named to all-academic team

The Iowa men's swimming team and Krzysztof Cwalina have been named to the College Swimming Coaches Association of America's all-academic team, the athletic department has announced.

The Hawkeyes earned national honors with a cumulative grade-point average of 2.873. Thirteen of the swimmers received marks of 3.0 or higher.

Cwalina posted a 3.63 average for the 1993-94 school year.

COLLEGE

Iowa State in no hurry to name new associate AD

AMES — Iowa State athletic director Gene Smith wasn't kidding when he said, "You can't replace Dave Cox."

Cox, an associate athletic director, has accepted the athletic director's job at Nebraska-Omaha.

Smith and other cost-conscious ISU officials see Cox's move as way to save money. Iowa State's athletic department is faced with a more than $350,000 deficit.

"I'm very happy for Dave," Smith said Monday. "He was a big man here at Iowa State, and it would be hard to fill his shoes. And, at this time, we're not going to try to fill the position."

BASEBALL

Mattingly considering retirement after '95 season

NEW YORK — New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly is thinking about retiring when his contract expires at the end of the 1995 season.

The 33-year-old first baseman says he's discouraged by back problems and tendinitis in his right wrist, according to an interview published in Tuesday's editions of the Gannett Suburban Newspapers.

"I realize as I've gotten older I can't do things I used to do, and I will probably never do them again," Mattingly said.

Hawks to get 'jump-start' on season

Pat Regan

The Daily Iowan

Iowa head coach Tom Davis will get a sneak preview of what to expect from the Hawkkey basketball team this fall when they travel to Europe for a nine-game tour.

The Hawkeyes will leave August 6 for 14 days with games in Switzerland, Italy and France.

Davis said the upcoming trip will give his team an advantage when practice officially begins in October.

"It helps a coach in terms of decisions because I'll be able to give everybody a lot of playing time and experiment with different positions," Davis said. "It helps the player because he knows clearly what he's got to do if he wants to be a good, solid Big Ten player or all-Big Ten or whatever his goals are this year."

The Iowa European roster will include 12 players. Every player from the 1993-94 squad is eligible to go, enabling James Winters, who graduated, to practice and compete. Incoming freshmen will not be allowed to make the trip. Davis said he will select a two or three of six walk-ons to round out the team.

"There's going to be some tough basketball games," Davis said. "You might see a great variety of scores. You might see some scores where we win easily and you might see some scores where we get blown out."

Junior forward Kenyon Murray said he thinks the Hawkeyes will become a more cohesive group during tour.

"Primarily what we're trying to do with this trip is help jump-start a lot of the learning process going into next year," Murray said. "We had a really young team last year, so hopefully this trip will help our maturity and also show how much everybody has developed since the end of last season."

Davis said defense will be one point of emphasis on the trip, in which they will go primarily with a man-to-man set because of good overall team quickness.

Danny Frazier/The Daily Iowan

Iowa junior forward Russ Millard floats through the lane for a dunk during a practice session Tuesday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawkeyes leave Aug. 6 for a 14-day European tour where they will play in Switzerland, Italy and France.

"Kenyon Murray is close to being an outstanding defensive guard and we're trying to get him up to that level," Davis said. "I think Jess (Settles) demonstrated to everybody that he's a pretty solid Big Ten defender. We need to get more of the other guys to join them, and I don't see any reason why they can't. They've got a great attitude."

The Hawkeyes are making sure they are not overworked or become burned out in preparation for their trip.

"We're trying to have some fun with practice," Davis said. "We still have work to do, but we try to have some fun contests at the end of every practice so it's not like the regular season. You have to relax and take a little different approach to it; otherwise, I would worry

Jackie Joyner-Kersey of the United States flies through the air in the long jump portion of the Goodwill Games heptathlon in St. Petersburg, Russia, Tuesday.

GOODWILL GAMES

Joyner-Kersey beats asthma, officiating

Stephen Wilson

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — She was driven to tears by accusations of cheating. She could hardly breathe because of an asthma attack. She finished with her lowest score in 10 years.

Somehow, Jackie Joyner-Kersey managed to win her third straight heptathlon title at the Goodwill Games.

Joyner-Kersey, who has won every heptathlon which she has completed since 1984, almost had her streak broken due to a bizarre series of events.

A spectator apparently spilled beer over her javelins, leading a meet official to accuse her of cheating and threaten to disqualify her.

"I was so upset because this has never happened to me before," Joyner-Kersey said. "I was so upset I was shedding tears."

She regained her composure and ran the final event, the 800 meters, but she barely made it to the finish line. Gasping for breath, she

SWITZERLAND

Cowboys' Switzer tired of hearing about Johnson talk

Denne H. Freeman

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Barry Switzer is 56, but his first pro football camp with long days and long nights sometimes makes him feel 10 years older.

"I've got bone spurs in my neck and right shoulder and it bothers me," said the Dallas Cowboys new coach. "Sometimes it starts tingling. Sometimes I have a lot of pain."

So much pain that Switzer woke up at 4 a.m. Tuesday so he could adjust a cervical collar that shoots electrical impulses into the damaged areas.

"I guess I had too many board drills when I was a player at Arkansas sticking my head in there," said the former Razorback defensive lineman. "I even put on that collar when I'm watching film at night."

Switzer also is bothered by nerve pressure in his spinal area.

He called his neurosurgeon in Oklahoma City Monday night to tell him about his problems.

"I'll have to have it operated on sometime, maybe after the season," Switzer said. "That's why you see me walk funny sometimes, kind of leaning forward."

Switzer said if it wasn't for the pain in his back, neck, and shoulder, he would be cavorting about like a young colt.

"I'm in good shape, but the grind of two-a-days has taken its toll with these bone spurs," he said, rubbing his shoulder. "I woke up at 4 a.m. today and put on the collar and went back to sleep and felt great when I woke up."

"I'm supposed to be some kind of wild man, but I've been in bed almost every night by 10:30."

Fighting through the pain has been the toughest thing for Switzer in his first 10 days of training camp. Replacing Jimmy Johnson and facing the daily horde of media have been easy.

"I think things have gone well," Switzer said.

"The players are tired of hearing about the Jimmy thing and I'm tired of it, but that stuff is pretty well dying out. It's kind of like the jock itch. Pretty soon it goes away."

"The players have been great. They've been working very hard and I feel comfortable being back in the game again."

"The players are tired of hearing about the Jimmy thing and I'm tired of it, but that stuff is pretty well dying out. It's kind of like the jock itch. Pretty soon it goes away."

Barry Switzer, Dallas Cowboys head coach

Switzer said all the controversy that surrounded his hiring by owner Jerry Jones will go away if the team wins. Switzer hasn't coached in five years since he was forced to retire at Oklahoma, where he won three national championships.

"Winning takes care of everything," Switzer said. "I know I've really missed the game, being around the players. It's good to be back."

Switzer spent the first part of training camp evaluating the players, particularly the defensive line, where some youngsters must come through. "I've been making some opinions of the talent," Switzer said. "We lost some veterans on defense and I want to know what it looks like at that position. Otherwise, I'm letting my assistants coach like I did at Oklahoma. I've got some great assistants here."

Probably the only thing that has surprised Switzer so far as coach of the defending Super Bowl champions is discovering that he's in as much pain as some of his players.
