U.S. may deploy additional troops

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of U.S. troops assisting Rwandan refugees will soon grow from 750 to 4,000 in the coming days and could go higher if a "way station" system is set up to help refugees return home, Defense Secretary William Perry said Wednesday.

Perry said at a Pentagon briefing that no decisions had been made about establishing such a system, and he called reports that up to 2,000 U.S. soldiers would be sent to the capital of Kigali to set it up "premature."

"It's a proposal. We have not made a final decision to execute that plan," the defense secretary said.

For now, Perry said, U.S. forces would focus their operations in Entebbe, Uganda and at the relief camp in Goma, Zaire.

Perry said he will fly to Africa over the weekend to inspect the U.S. operations on behalf of President Clinton.

The way stations would provide food, water and medical care along routes back into Rwanda to encourage people to return home and harvest their crops — thereby averting a potential famine down the road, U.S. officials have said.

A small team of scouts in Kigali is taking a look at security and infrastructure conditions, and a second team is to follow as soon as today.

They are trying to determine if food, water and other supplies could be delivered faster using facilities inside Rwanda.

Defending the increasing U.S. military role in the relief operation,

Perry said the refugee crisis has become "a tragedy of unprecedented proportions."

"The United States military has the only capabilities in the world ... of responding adequately to that need," he said.

Perry said the mission was confined to humanitarian assistance and that the United States would not participate in a U.N. peacekeeping force envisioned for Rwanda.

He did not say how long the deployment would last. But when a reporter suggested perhaps a year, Perry said he did not believe it would take that long.

At present, there are 750 U.S. troops in the region, and that number is expected to reach 4,000 "in the next week or so," Perry said.

2nd submerged car found to be stolen

A stolen car was pulled out of the Iowa River at Sturgis Ferry Park Tuesday, the second stolen vehicle recovered there since Sunday.

Iowa City Police Department Capt. Donald Strand said the latest car, a 1986 Ford Escort, was reported stolen in November 1991 from the parking lot at Maxie's Bar, 1920 Keokuk St.

Another stolen Ford Escort was recovered from the river Sunday.

Strand doubted police would search the area for more cars without new reason to believe there are more cars in the river.

Fire, police departments examine homemade bomb

Iowa City fire and police officials responded to a fire and an incident involving a homemade bomb Tuesday morning. The incidents occurred within six minutes of each other and were a few blocks apart on East Washington Street.

At 9:11 a.m. Tuesday, the fire department responded to a fire behind the maintenance shed at St. Mark's Church, 2675 E. Washington St., where a stack of newspapers was set on fire.

At 9:17 a.m. the fire and police departments were dispatched to investigate a homemade explosive device that was found behind Lemme Elementary School, 3100 E. Washington St.

Iowa City Police Department Capt. Donald Strand said the device was made with a mixture of common household chemicals and could be related to a series of incidents involving Molotov cocktails being tossed at area schools in the last few weeks.

Strand said all incidents are still under investigation.

4 injured by lightning strike at Disney's Magic Kingdom

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Lightning struck a tram unloading passengers at Walt Disney World's Magic Kingdom on Wednesday, slightly injuring four people.

No one was hit directly by the lightning bolt that struck the "Happy" parking lot near the ticket and transportation center.

Seven people were stunned by the strike, but three did not require treatment. Four people were treated at a hospital and released.

Eating disorder complications claim gymnast

Craig Horst

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Christy Henrich was a fierce competitor — a "bull," a "tank" whose nickname was E.T., for Extra Tough. But by 1990, the 4-foot-10-inch gymnast was so weak from eating disorders, she withdrew from competition.

On Tuesday, she died at age 22. A victim of anorexia nervosa and bulimia, Henrich died of multiple organ system failure after more than two weeks in the hospital. Research Medical Center wouldn't say how much she weighed at her death, but she had wasted away to 60 pounds a year ago.

"She was an extremely strong person. She was a bull, just a tank," said her former coach, Al Fong, who became estranged from the Henrich family after confronting the teen-ager in 1989 about her eating problems.

"I kicked her out of the gym for her own good," he said. "I said, 'You're going to kill yourself.' She was throwing herself into the equipment because she couldn't do the routines. I set up all these appointments with the nutritionists, and then I found out she wasn't attending those sessions."

Henrich had missed making the 1988 Olympic team by 0.118 of a point. Acutely disappointed, she aimed for the 1992 trials. But in between, the vicious cycle of anorexia and bulimia — starvation and vomiting whatever food is eaten — took over.

She withdrew from a competition in the fall of 1990 and retired from gymnastics in January 1991. She was among the top 10 of U.S. gymnasts at the time but was too weak to compete.

"My life is a horrifying nightmare," she said then. "It feels like there's a beast inside of me, like a monster. It feels evil."

The dieting frenzy began after a judge in an international competition in 1988 told Henrich — who weighed 93 pounds at the height of her career — that she needed to

PLAQUE'S FATE UNCERTAIN

Memorable tree falls after flooding of '93

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

A maple tree which inspired a UI student 12 years ago to place a commemorative plaque in front of it was cut down Wednesday morning and will soon be mere firewood.

Former UI student John Salvest was so moved by a maple tree outside the Music Building on Oct. 25, 1982 that he had the plaque placed next to it so he and others could remember the moment forever.

However, the tree died after spending most of last summer underwater and was cut down.

Now the plaque, which reads in part, "I do not know when or by whom this tree was planted, nor do I know how or when it will fall, but on this particular day in its life and mine, this tree compelled me to commemorate its peculiar beauty and strength," is now surrounded by dead branches and sawdust.

Soon only the stump of the tree which once stirred such an emotional response will remain.

UI senior John Rosenberg walks by the tree every day but never noticed the plaque until just recently.

He said he was shocked to discover the plaque in the first place and even more shocked Wednesday when he saw the tree in pieces.

See TREE, Page 7

Carl Bennett/The Daily Iowan

It was not quite the tree that launched a thousand ships, but in 1982, it inspired a UI master's student named John Salvest so much that he had a plaque placed at its base commemorating the tree. Unfortunately it died in last year's floods.

Israel ups security following bombings

JERUSALEM — Fearful that bombings in Britain and Latin America could multiply into a deadly wave of terrorism against Middle East peacemaking, Israel demanded tighter security at Jewish sites around the globe on Wednesday.

In New York, police put 10 sand-filled garbage trucks around the Israeli Consulate and 10 sand-filled trash bins outside an Israeli office elsewhere in Manhattan. Police Commissioner William Bratton said his office acted Wednesday morning after getting information that both locations had been threatened. He didn't elaborate.

Police said they eventually would replace the trucks and dumpsters with concrete barriers.

In Jerusalem, officials accused Britain of ignoring warnings before two car bombs went off outside the Israeli Embassy and a Jewish charity building on Tuesday and Wednesday. Nineteen people were injured in all.

The violence in London comes only eight days after an explosion at a Jewish cultural center in Argentina killed at least 95 people and the bombing of a commuter

FIRST SUIT FILED

Simpson slapped with civil lawsuit

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — For the first time in the O.J. Simpson case, a victim's relative branded Simpson a murderer in a lawsuit accusing him of "willfully, wantonly and maliciously" killing Ronald Goldman.

In the wrongful death lawsuit disclosed Wednesday, Goldman's mother, Sharon Rufo, seeks unspecified damages for the loss of her 25-year-old son's companionship and support.

Rufo, who lives in St. Louis, had not seen her son in the five years prior to his death. She is divorced from Goldman's father, Fred.

At a court hearing, meanwhile, Judge Lance Ito resolved a last-minute snag in testing of blood samples set to begin today.

Prosecutors hope the evidence will link Simpson to the June 12 stabbings of Simpson's ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and Goldman, a friend of hers.

Officials at Cellmark Diagnostics, the Germantown, Md., laboratory hired by the prosecution to conduct the delicate tests, had objected to Ito's order allowing defense scientists to cut blood samples for possible independent testing. It will decide later whether the defense may use 10 percent of the samples for those tests.

Cellmark officials had written to the judge explaining that the lab preferred to use its own technicians. But Ito reaffirmed a ruling handed down Monday, saying the cuts by defense experts could proceed as scheduled.

However, the judge said the defense would have to use the lab's

Public access offers creative vent for I.C. area

Liza Roche
The Daily Iowan

When Rene Paine graduated from the UI with a degree in English, she knew virtually nothing about video production.

After working at a public television station in Indiana and another public access station in Iowa City, she's learned quite a bit. Now, Paine is director of Public Access

DAY IN THE LIFE

Television in Iowa City.

"I learned everything about video just because I had to," she said. "If I can do it, you can do it."

In fact, teaching the public how to access nearly 16,000 homes in the Iowa City area is one of the foundations of PATV — and it's surprisingly easy to learn the equipment and get your own show, Paine said.

She said the station attempts to make things as uncomplicated as possible so the "average Joe" in the community can take advantage of participating in dialogue usually controlled by mass media.

"PATV is the only uncensored free avenue that can reach a lot of people."

"Our society is becoming more passive, letting big business and large news groups give out information," she said. "PATV is the only uncensored free avenue that can reach a lot of people."

Actually, there are a few rules in broadcasting things over the channel. The show must meet technical standards and cannot sell anything or ask for money. Obscenity is not allowed either, although Paine said that's harder to define.

Carl Bonnett/The Daily Iowan

Bob Kinney has been producing a series of fictional narratives relating to gay and lesbian issues with his brother on Iowa City Public Access Television since 1987. Kinney said the the work produced on PATV fills an important niche in people's viewing options.

Besides letting the public create service announcements for free and hosts an open mike show where people can come in and say whatever they want. Paine said they get anything from meeting announcements to lies about Barbara Streisand.

She admits the quarters at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., are pretty modest. There's one studio with a small stage covered by a slightly worn tan carpet. Backdrops are virtually limitless, though, with the use of a chroma key — the same device used by television meteorologists.

It's also true that most of the shows aren't all that visually flashy, but that's not a big deal, Paine said.

"Why should everything look like network television," she said. "A lot of times you sacrifice visual design for quality content. Not everything has to look slick."

One of her personal favorites is a comedy show called "Naughty Poo Pie," created by a group of students at City High School.

She said it looks like high-school kids made it, but the humor is worth it. In one episode, the kids went through an Iowa City neighborhood searching for "the last hippie."

"It's sort of a Monty Python thing. The greatest part is at the end of the show when they make apologies to everyone they made fun out of," Paine said.

The types of shows vary greatly as well as how much help is needed by staff to produce the show. She said one thing is common with all of the shows — a lot of time goes into them.

"I always apply the pi theory to video work," she said. "It always takes 3.14 more time than originally expected."

Chelsea Clinton declines Woodstock '94 invitation

NEW YORK — Woodstock '94 will apparently go on without Chelsea Clinton in the crowd, despite an invitation from the promoter's 14-year-old daughter.

Molly Rosenman, the daughter of Woodstock producer Joel Rosenman, asked Chelsea to join her in Saugerties Aug. 12-14.

"Dear Chelsea," the letter reads, "If you like rock & roll, this should be great! Why don't you join my family and me at Woodstock? Best Wishes, Molly."

Asked if Chelsea would accept, White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said, "As far as I know, I've seen no plans to that effect."

The 25th anniversary show will feature such performers as Bob Dylan and the Spin Doctors.

New York mayor repairs pothole after complaint by Letterman

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman's got real pull at City Hall. Mayor Rudolph Giuliani donned a hard hat to shovel asphalt into a pothole during an appearance on the "Late Show With David Letterman."

Letterman, who had complained about the craterlike hole on 53rd Street, thanked Giuliani for his hard work Tuesday.

The mayor had the last word. "We're trying to bury some bad jokes, I understand," he said.

"It's kind of like Farrah Fawcett quitting 'Charlie's Angels,' he joked in the Aug. 23 issue of The Advocate, a gay magazine. "But I'm at a point where I want to explore different parts of myself."

"In the past, I've never felt sexy or appealing as a male. But I do now. And I want to make myself known in the public eye — out of drag."

Step one for the disco singer was growing a goatee and modeling men's clothing Tuesday at a fashion show.

But Ru said he will never entirely give up cross-dressing.

Ford to don Indiana Jones role once again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six years after vowing the third Indiana Jones movie would be his last, Harrison Ford has agreed to play the thrill-seeking archaeologist one more time.

"We're wrestling with a script right now. Hopefully we'll get it together soon," Ford said on "Entertainment Tonight" in an interview to be broadcast today.

He said he loves working with Steven Spielberg and George Lucas and "the character's very fun to play; the movies are great entertainment so I have no resistance."

Cab Calloway recuperates after stroke

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Cab Calloway is hi-de-hi-de-hiding away to recover from his recent stroke.

"Everything is stable. He's resting comfortably. That's about all I can say right now," said his agent, Stan Scotland.

Calloway, 86, had a massive stroke on June 12.

A White Plains Hospital spokeswoman said Calloway checked out Monday for an undisclosed location. "He is recuperating near the home of one of his daughters," Melissa Weisstuch said Tuesday.

The bandleader's rendition of "Minnie the Moocher" helped make him a scat-singing legend.

L.A. landlord can sue '90210' star for breaking contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — She might break a contract or a $9,769 sofa, but don't accuse Shannen Doherty of bad faith.

A judge ruled Tuesday that the unruly actress's ex-landlord can sue her for breach of contract but not for bad faith because they did not have the "special relationship" necessary to make the claim.

That means Mark Nishimura may not be able to recover punitive damages from the former "Beverly Hills 90210" star.

Nishimura is suing for $136,300, claiming Doherty trashed his furnished apartment, failed to pay $14,000 in rent and cost him $44,000 in potential income while he repaired the apartment after evicting her. He claims the damaged furnishings included a $9,769 sofa, $2,696 ottoman, $6,029 coffee table and $4,790 alarm system.

GROUP CHALLENGES ATTORNEY GENERAL

Campbell rejects gay marriages

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Members of the UI Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association condemned gubernatorial candidate Bonnie Campbell's recent denouncement of same-sex marriages as malicious, anti-family and un-American.

Association member Mona Shaw said Campbell's comment pandered to the homophobia in society that members of the gay community believed Campbell opposed.

"As employees of the state, we cannot let remarks go unchallenged by an officer of the state that denigrates and gives consent to the oppression of valued and innocent members of our community," Shaw said.

The association's executive committee recently issued a statement expressing their disappointment and disillusionment to the attorney general's opposition to the legalization of same-sex marriages.

Phil Roeder, Campbell's campaign manager, said the attorney general believes there are a number of other more important basic civil rights issues which need to be addressed first. Campbell was in Washington and could not be contacted.

Roeder said voters probably thought Campbell would wholeheartedly agree with the Democratic Party's state platform. However, the attorney general wanted to make it clear she was against the platform's stance on many issues — including the legalization of same-sex marriages — because it did not represent the mainstream of Iowa, Roeder said.

"The Christian Coalition and other conservative groups were going to exploit issues (such as same-sex marriages legalization) to beat Bonnie," Roeder said. "Rather than having the platform drag us down, we decided we were not going to allow the platform to hurt this campaign. Iowa is not a state which supported the Equal Rights Amendment for women, and it is still not a state that would support same-sex marriages."

Shaw disagrees. She said legalizing same-sex marriage is essential in realizing equal rights for lesbian, gay and bisexual citizens.

"Hatred of our relationships is the catalyst of every form of homophobic discrimination," Shaw said. "Ms. Campbell's position panders to the myth that our love for our spouses and families is less profound or sacred than that of heterosexual couples. Most Iowans value all loving families and understand this."

Linda Kroon, association member, believed Campbell originally led people to think she would be supportive of the gay community and their concerns.

"To have someone reach out a hand and say, 'I want to be your friend,' is a show of support," Kroon said, "but it is disappointing when that hand is withdrawn. I think it's fair to say Bonnie Campbell sought the support of gay, lesbian and bisexual voters, but it's a strange strategy to want your voters to support you and then say something that would hurt them. You can't have it both ways."

As attorney general, Campbell supported the hate-crimes law which made violence against persons due to race or sexual orientation differences a more serious criminal offense. She also created a policy within the attorney general's office against job discrimination due to sexual orientation differences.

However, Kroon said Campbell is being inconsistent.

"Issues like the hate-crime law and job discrimination are important issues, but these are not the only issues," Kroon said. "I don't understand why Campbell would oppose one form of discrimination and then not oppose other forms of discrimination. Her stance is analogous with the statement that one would oppose racism and then not oppose sexism."

UI association members are calling on Campbell to reconsider and publicly reverse her position on the legalization of same-sex marriages.

"We are Iowans and the attorney general of Iowa is also the attorney general of gay, lesbian and bisexual Iowans," the executive committee wrote in the statement. "It is reasonable to expect our public officials to portray us in the light of truth as the public assets we are, not in the darkness of courting ignorance and suspicion."

STRATEGY INCLUDES ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERNS

Oakdale development plan OK'd

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

The UI Campus Planning Committee approved a preliminary master plan for Oakdale Research Campus Wednesday that will attempt to serve the expansion needs of the campus while retaining the area's natural environment.

Larry Wilson, UI associate director of Planning and Administrative Services, presented the committee with a comprehensive plan for future expansion at Oakdale that will allow the campus to retain its current conditions.

"The campus has its own unique environment and atmosphere," he said.

Wilson also said simplifying Oakdale's currently confusing road system is an issue.

"We need to simplify it. I suggest we eliminate some and establish one major road system," he said.

The northern half of the research campus will be developed before further development is approved in the southern half, Wilson said.

The plan will allow for expansion but take into consideration the environmental aspects and aesthetic values of the campus.

"It is a master plan and a framework for the future," Wilson said.

The committee also approved changes to the Dental Building parking lot. Currently there are 277 parking spaces in the lot; that number will be expanded to 322 spaces. Thirty of those will be parking spaces for the disabled.

PARADE ANTICS EMBARRASS OFFICIALS

Clown's prank irks Iowa mayor

Associated Press

SIOUX CITY, Iowa — Somehow, everyone figured it out.

The man with the frightful hair and big nose riding in the parade convertible wasn't Sioux City Mayor Bob Scott.

What started out as a prank by a Shrine clown during the annual parade at Sioux City's River-Cade festival Monday night has turned into a city scandal.

River-Cade officials issued an apology to Scott on Tuesday.

A Shrine clown named "Patches" rode in a parade convertible meant for Scott, which carried the sign, "Mayor Bob Scott, Sioux City."

Scott said he did not ride in the parade because he had to attend a meeting.

Patches, who is known on nonparade days as Greg Hoffing of Sioux City, said he was walking with other Shrine clowns along the parade route when he spotted the convertible with no one waving from it. He couldn't resist and jumped in.

"I thought it looked better to have someone in the car until Bob showed up. I was just doing my civic duty filling in as mayor pro tem," Patches said.

Dressed in a clown outfit, he waved to the cameras, joked with spectators and generally did what clowns do — clowned around.

At one point, Patches responded to questions about whether he was the mayor.

"The real clowns are behind me!" he said, gesturing to the bright red fire truck carrying members of the City Council.

"A lot of people commented we looked alike," Patches quipped.

Scott said his family was offended by the incident. He called Sioux City businessman Barry Goodwin, a River-Cade official, to complain.

This year's UI Summer Opera is a matched set: "Venus and Adonis" and "Dido and Aeneas." UI President Hunter Rawlings makes his opera debut as King Charles II in the former. The operas will be performed Friday-Sunday in Clapp Recital Hall.

Rawlings takes role in opera double-header

Lisa Anne Taggart
The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings says he will have butterflies in his belly this Friday as he steps out of his executive role and into a royal one, making his Iowa opera debut as King Charles II in the UI opera theater production of "Venus and Adonis."

The opera is one of two English baroque one acts to be performed this weekend in Clapp Recital Hall. The second, "Dido and Aeneas," will complete the operatic double-header.

Opera theater director Beaumont Glass, who added the role of King Charles II to the script, says he is delighted that the UI's president will be participating. "We wanted somebody very recognizable," Glass says.

Rawlings, whose only previous theatrical experience is an appearance in a musical at the University of Colorado when he was vice president there, says he is "nervous" about the performance and "tremendously relieved" that he has a nonsinging role.

Rawlings will appear Friday and Sunday in an on-stage audience to the opera, written by former Westminster Abbey organist John Blow to entertain King Charles II. Rawlings says he has been reading up on the English king to prepare for

"He was quite a character. He had many escapades, many mistresses. I have been trying to adopt an appropriate demeanor," Rawlings says, adding that the type is "not natural for me."

Rawlings says that working with the opera cast impressed him. "The production is so multidisciplinary. The cast really worked hard." But he says he has no additional theatrical plans "for the near future."

School of Music director David Nelson will portray the king in Saturday's performance.

Stage directed by Glass and conducted by William Hatcher, the two operas share many qualities: Both tell the story of two mythical lovers, both were written in the

"We always have more female singers than male in our opera program," explains Glass. "There are several very good roles for women in both operas."

Students will portray the major roles in the two productions with one cast for Friday and Sunday's performance and another for Saturday's.

Glass says he has always wanted to perform "Dido and Aeneas" at the UI and this summer's closing of Hancher Auditorium gave him the opportunity.

"We knew we couldn't put on one of our big extravaganzas this summer," he says. "We needed something that would profit from an intimate theater."

Glass says the 20-piece chamber orchestra required for the one acts are the right size for Clapp. "The harpsichord would be lost in Hancher. In Clapp, it sounds fine."

Tickets to the UI Summer Opera are $12, $7 for students, seniors and those 12 and under. For more information, call the Hancher box office at 335-1160.

Marilyn Manson

Portrait of an American Family

From a burning lake of fire has risen Marilyn Manson's writhing debut LP release, Portrait of an American Family. Executive produced by Nine Inch Nails' black angel, Trent Reznor, Portrait is a lashingly abrasive collection of songs liable to leave listeners licking their wounds.

Lead singer Manson, guitarist Daisy Berkowitz, bassist Twiggy Ramirez, drummer Sara Lee Lucas, and organist / sampler Madonna Wayne Gacy (all apparently male) tend to be loud most of the time while failing to move the head-banger sound into fabulously new territories. Reminiscent of the death metal / gothic / hard-core / post-punk sound savored at Bones Brigade skater gatherings, some of the CD's tracks are great big yawns that lack the sticking power of bubble gum, even after many playings.

The truly memorable gems of Portrait are bilious models of perversity. "Dope Hat" conjures the "Great Hoodoo" like something from a modern-day Mad Hatter's tea party. "Cake and Sodomy" urges that "white trash get down on your knees" in an acidic commentary on religion in America. "Dogma" is a frenetic metallic grind and might even be the dance music of legions in more progressive venues.

In rare instances, Manson has successfully summoned up a unique sound. But for those of us spoiled on the uncut purity of Reznor's other production work, the pyrotechnics seem surprisingly tame.

Echobelly

I Can't Imagine the World Without Me

There are two predominant interpretations of Echobelly. Either they're amazingly mature songwriters, well-deserving of their rising star due both to the songs themselves and Sonya Madan's unique impassioned vocals, or they're merely a formalized pastiche of hip '90s influences who should have their royalty checks immediately turned over to The Smiths and Suede.

While I Can't Imagine the World Without Me is unlikely to resolve the debate, it is surely the most ambitious of Echobelly's three EPs to date. The title track itself ranges from straightforward indie rocker through Beatlesque orchestral pop into over-the-top lounge lizardry all within the space of five minutes. The addition of second guitarist Debbie Smith, formerly of the now-defunct Curve, adds some much-needed punch to the latest Echobelly release.

"Sober" is a more predictable Morrissey whine-a-thon, while "Venues Wheel" is a far more impressive track, featuring Glenn Johansson's deceptively simple guitar work along with an insistent and memorable structure.

In the end, even if Echobelly are mere plagiarists, they copy from the best and with enough flair to justify the high hopes they carry. Well recommended.

CLARIFICATION

In the Tuesday, July 26 issue of The Daily Iowan, a quote in the "International students speak out on U.S. life through video project" story may have been misconstrued. Video project coordinator LeAnn Erickson was not implying that the students participating in the video project are not representative of their culture or country, she was simply saying that the videos are a personal diary and not meant to represent the entire nation of the students.

Suit claims 'Flintstones' filmmakers stole Dino's voice from Mel Blanc

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Mel Blanc, the man behind Porky Pig's stutter and Sylvester the Cat's splutter, was also the voice of Dino in "The Flintstones," but you'd never know it from the hit movie's credits.

They attribute the purple snorkasaurus's voice to "Dino."

Blanc's widow and son are suing for at least $1 million, claiming the moviemakers cribbed recordings of Blanc's voice from the TV version of the cartoon without paying or giving credit to his heirs. Blanc died in 1989.

MCA Inc. sent the family a letter apologizing for its mistake in not crediting Blanc and offered to pay $500 for the use of his voice, but Blanc family lawyer Jonathan Weiss called that a ridiculous offer.

That's not even close to what Blanc's voice is worth, he said Tuesday.

Messages left for MCA lawyer Lynn Fleisher were not returned. McDonald's spokesman Chuck Ebeling said he wasn't familiar with the lawsuit and couldn't comment. The lawsuit named McDonald's, which launched an ad campaign associated with the movie.

MOVIE REVIEW

Disney's 'Angels in the Outfield' no heavy hitter

Tasha Robinson

The Daily Iowan

"Angels in the Outfield" isn't terrible. It isn't great either. It's semistandard mediocre kiddie fare, generally inoffensive and generally unremarkable. Its only remotely unique quality is its carefully timed release: It bears the Disney name so it's the film people are most likely to drag their movie-demanding children to after discovering the day's "Lion King" matinee has sold out.

"Angels" stars Danny Glover (of the "Lethal Weapon" films, past and doubtless future) as George Knox, the coach of the incompetent, last-ranked baseball team the California Angels. Knox used to be a big-league catcher before his knee was spiked in a probably deliberate vicious slide by the obnoxious Ranch Wilder (Jay O. Sanders, "JFK" and "Glory.") Now a brash radio announcer and full-time bastard, Wilder spends his time doing play by play for the Angels and needling Knox on the air.

The Angels themselves are a typically mixed group familiar from every cinematic bad-to-good sports team ever. There's the jolly fat guy, the bright-eyed hopeful up-and-comer, the gung-ho team boy, the grim heavy hitter. And they're all surprisingly terrible at the game for a bunch of professionals.

Enter Roger (Joseph Gordon-Levitt of "A River Runs Through It"), a young boy recently relinquished to the state by his irresponsible young father. In the by-the-numbers traumatic parting scene, which features about as much real emotion as a bug spray commercial, Roger asks his dad, "When will we be a real family again?" The answer, and the film's only real plot complication: "Around the time the Angels win the pennant."

So Roger prays for a little help from above, and lo and behold, God comes through with some flashy special effects. In the original 1951 version of "Angels," the angels were invisible; here, they're the No. 1 reason for the film. The obligatory life-lessons-learned scenes, the plodding dialogue and the thoroughly predictable

"Knox becomes a good guy" plot are all treated as filler by comparison — "Angels" is, at heart, simply a vehicle for flapping, shimmering, glowing computer effects.

There are a few casting surprises along the way. Christopher Lloyd puts in a few appearances as the googly-eyed head angel, who, thanks to that ever-present morph technology, shows up in soda, a soap bubble and assorted flashes of light. And his "Taxi" co-star Tony Danza is also along for the ride as out-to-pasture pitcher Mel Clark. Lloyd predictably brightens up the film a tad, but Danza's basically a pathos device — once a successful big-leaguer, he was traded away by Knox after he overextended himself by following Knox's advice. And now Knox won't even let him play.

Either the relationship between Knox and Clark or the rivalry between Knox and Wilder could have been a meaty plot line with some real power to it. But the latter is played for laughs — Knox punches Wilder on camera, ho ho ho — and the former is a throwaway point that goes nowhere. Instead, the movie focuses on the most predictable and least interesting characters — Roger and his ward-of-the-state buddy JP (Milton Davis Jr. in his debut role). There's just not much to watch there — Gordon-Levitt is from the Macaulay Culkin School of Staring Wooden Plank Acting, while Davis' wide-eyed lipping antics belong in a "Little Rascals" short. Add on the fact that neither kid has much in the way of believable dialogue ("Come on, it looks like the game is over for us!") and you have a recipe for boredom.

There's plenty of flash and sparkle for the younger crowd in "Angels in the Outfield," and the film's liberally fleshed out with slapstick comedy, crotch gags and collisions. But if Disney was trying for a wide-appeal "Field of Dreams"-type magic, they're a long way off. "Angels" is dull rather than agonizing, but that's hardly a recommendation. Rent the kids "Bad News Bears" instead — it's cheaper, and you'll need the money when they start demanding to see "Lion King" for the sixth time.

Montessori school's methods spur debate

Amanda Morton
The Daily Iowan

When Julia Zalenski goes to school, she has a lot of responsibilities. Her teachers don't hover over her, she has to pick up after herself and she has to do her own dishes. Julia's not a UI freshman, though; she's in preschool.

Julia, 5, and her sister Grace, 4, are students at the Montessori School of Iowa City. Similar schools across the country, which use unconventional teaching methods to teach independence and responsibility as well as reading and writing, have become so popular that the U.S. government has agreed to hire certified Montessori school teachers for the nationwide Head Start program.

However, the school's critics say they are turning out maladjusted, introverted children due to the free-form classrooms that try to avoid using the teacher as the center of attention.

Not like other schools

Anne Zalenski decided to send her daughters, Julia and Grace, to the school after she visited other preschools.

"I had visited all the area preschools and thought it had the best environment for children," she said. "I feel that they've really learned to love school because they really respect children there."

She said she even sent her children to Montessori summer school because they kept asking to go back. She thinks Montessori has helped her daughters substantially and she plans to send her son when he is old enough.

"Julia was really reserved before, and now she is able to make friends easily. Her teachers didn't try to change her, they worked with her," she said.

Lack of strict classroom structure, blended age groups and inventive practical exercises are aspects of Montessori school that are not common in most other schools, according to Patricia Hanick, business director of the Montessori School of Iowa City Inc.

Upon entering a classroom at the Montessori School in Iowa City, one may see some children watching an ant farm, part of a science enrichment program on insects; others doing water pouring exercises; and others spreading number cards out on floor rugs.

Hanick said the government plans to hire certified Montessori school teachers for Head Start, a government preschool program.

But while some studies show the positive results of Montessori schools, others have led people to question whether the methods are better than those used in traditional schools.

Montessori controversy

A 1988 study in Houston demonstrated that Montessori class mean scores for achievement tests were above district norms, according to "The Montessori Controversy" written by John Chattin-McNichols, an associate professor of education at Seattle University.

In 1989, researchers in Portland, Ore., concluded from interviews conducted with Montessori graduates that the graduates preferred investigative occupation positions, such as scientists, instead of social jobs, such as teachers.

However, the same study found that Montessori graduates were "more guarded in response, more critical of others and less freely expressive," although all scores were within the normal range.

"Teachers are not the center of the classroom here. At a beautiful moment, you can't find the teacher."

Patricia Hanick, business director of the Montessori School of Iowa City

And according to a Washingtonian, November 1990, article, "Eager to Learn," criticism comes both from people who think the environment is too unstructured and others who think it is too structured, depending on the educational philosophy of the critic.

Some people also question whether Montessori students would be able to adjust if they later entered a "traditional" school.

However, Chattin-McNichols said he only knows of one instance when a child returned to Montessori after attempting to go to "traditional" school, and that was because she was an overachiever.

"She finished her workbook and wanted the next one, but the teacher wouldn't give it to her," he said. "When she couldn't go on, she felt it was a gyp."

Beautiful moment, no teacher

The Montessori philosophy was developed by Italian physician and teacher Maria Montessori in the early 1900s. Montessori's teachings first received widespread attention in the United States in 1911, and there are currently Montessori schools serving preschool to high-school aged students internationally.

The Montessori classrooms are "prepared environments" in which numbers of individual activities are set up before children arrive. Unlike many schools, children are allowed to choose which activities they want to do and teachers rarely intervene. In this setting, children can concentrate on a chosen task for a duration of time, eat a snack when hungry and go get a pencil when they need to without asking for permission as in most classrooms.

According to Hanick, the children can ask for help but often do an activity until they get a correct answer and this fosters a sense of accomplishment as well as independence. "Teachers are not the center of the classroom here. At a beautiful moment, you can't find the teacher," she said.

After teachers give a demonstration, the children choose what they want to learn. Many of the activities are self-correcting, meaning the children can understand if they've made a mistake and correct themselves from there.

Despite the freedom, classes are not chaotic because the teachers enforce respectful behavior. Children are expected to hang up their coats, put away their toys and do dishes.

"We use glass dishes on purpose, and the kids take it very seriously when you give them something delicate," Hanick said.

Growing enrollment

Hanick said in the five years she has been business director, only two children have left because they didn't feel comfortable there; in fact, enrollment is growing.

In Iowa City, enrollment is first come, first served, and tuition for classes ranges from $155 to $415 per month depending on the hours a child spends at the school, while eligible children receive financial aid.

Comparatively, other local preschool tuition ranges from $118 to $380 per month, again depending on the amount of time the student is at the school.

The 32-year-old Montessori School of Iowa City Inc. is moving next fall to accommodate the student enrollment of 140. The classes previously had been meeting in two buildings.

Chattin-McNichols said Montessori education is becoming more and more popular across the country.

"Montessori appeals to public and private schools because of research attention. What's hot in education, like mixing age groups, mirrors Montessori," he said. "People are coming up with ideas about what people should try, and Montessori is already doing it and knows how to do it."

RWANDAN TUTSIS STILL IMPERILED

Hutu threat to refugees endures

CONVOY MISTAKEN FOR BOSNIAN OUTFIT

Serbs waylay U.N. aid mission

David Crary
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs, claiming they mistook their target, ambushed a U.N. convoy Wednesday as it approached a road into Sarajevo that Serbs had just closed. Two British soldiers were wounded in one of the worst attacks on peacekeepers in recent months.

The attack came the day the Serbs re-established their stranglehold on Sarajevo by closing off the only route open to commercial trucks. It came three days before talks on a faltering peace plan that the Serbs refuse to accept.

Maj. Rob Annink, a peacekeepers' spokesman, said the Bosnian Serb army sent a letter of apology to the U.N. command several hours after the attack, saying their soldiers mistook the British convoy for a Bosnian government convoy.

Annink said one Bosnian truck was stuck on the stretch of road where the British trucks were.

Col. Hugh Dourtivron, deputy chief of staff for peacekeepers in Sarajevo, said one of the 5,200-gallon British tanker trucks burst into flames when the ambush began in midafternoon. Several of the nine other trucks were damaged.

"They were obviously aiming at the oil truck," said Lt. Johnny Mitchell, a British soldier in the convoy. "The vehicles were clearly marked so it was a direct attack. I was scared."

The tanker, which was hit with heavy machine-gun and small arms fire, was still burning hours after the crash.

Once peacekeepers' headquarters were alerted, French armored vehicles raced to the scene. U.N. officials said NATO airplanes were called in to make overflights but were not asked to counterattack.

GOMA, Zaire — The 4,000 refugees at Kituku Camp, with sturdy tents, medical care, and plenty of water and food, fear a killer other than cholera.

They are Tutsis, surrounded by the remnants of a vengeful Hutu army. From within their compound, some shout in frustrated fury at the same men they watched butcher their families back home.

Rwanda is only a few hours' walk from the camp, which at the edge of Goma, Zaire. But to get back to Rwanda alive, the Tutsis say they need a ride with neutral armed troops riding shotgun.

"I want to go home ... today," said Bernard Mbwigaba, 24, who no longer ventures beyond the barbed wire surrounding the camp. Last week, he and Xavier Kakari left to cut wood. A woman yelled and Hutu soldiers came.

"They took us to their camp and beat Xavier to death," he said. "I got away by lying, saying I was Hutu." Like many Rwandans, he has a parent from each tribe. Nothing is simple in this drama.

The little camp is a telling vignette from the big picture here, that explains why what has happened since April is not likely to be smoothed over any time soon.

Dutch Doctors Without Borders and the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees built the tidy compound — a paradise compared to the new makeshift camps — in June to house Tutsi refugees from the massacres in Rwanda.

As many as 500,000 people, mostly Tutsis, were killed by Hutu militias in Rwanda from April to mid-July.

But after Tutsi-led rebels won control of Rwanda earlier this month, sending more than a million Hutus fleeing to Zaire, the defeated Hutu army ended up camped less than a mile from the Tutsi compound. All around the compound in every direction are Hutus still in the mood to murder.

Edouard Rutaganira, a primary school teacher, also wants to leave immediately. He is frightened and homesick. But after the cataclysm, he does not know where home is.

He was teaching at Gisenyi, just across the border from Goma, when Hutu militias began a systematic slaughter of the Tutsi minority, which had ruled the mountains of Rwanda and Burundi for centuries.

Although Hutus had held political power in Rwanda since 1962, Tutsis loomed in the shadows. The spark that ignited the latest bloodletting came after peace accords between Hutu leaders and Tutsi rebels brought new power to the old masters, and it was fanned by the death of the Hutu president in a suspicious plane crash in April.

"My wife and three kids were home with my family for school vacation when the killing started," Rutaganira said. "I wanted to run, but first I waited for news of my family."

News came from a friend. "My parents were exterminated," Rutaganira said. "My brother and sister were exterminated. And my wife and children, they were exterminated. I was the only one left. So I came here."

Now the Tutsi rebels have taken over the government, Rutaganira wants to find a new home with no memories somewhere in Rwanda.

In recent days, about 1,500 Tutsis have risked the trip back to Rwanda, mostly leaving on foot, said Josias Ntazinda, the camp's elected chief.

French troops trucked out some, but most Tutsis are suspicious of France, which armed and trained the Hutu army. Ntazinda asked the United Nations to provide safe transport, but officials say they are overwhelmed for the moment.

IDENTITY OF PEER REMAINS HIDDEN

Rockefeller lab attendants plagued by 'mad scientist'

Tom Hays
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The great minds at Rockefeller University work mainly to unlock the mysteries of science and medicine. But now they're caught in another mystery: Who is the potential killer among them?

During one week in early June, someone spiked the coffee with a potentially lethal chemical, turned on valves releasing deadly gas, set a fire and made anonymous death threats to two scientists. All of the incidents took place in the school's 15th-floor lab, which is headed by world-renowned scientist Robert Roeder.

After June 10, the incidents stopped. No one, including the threatened scientists, Luz Matsumoto and Magda Carvalho, was seriously hurt.

University employees have declined to discuss the matter, saying they were advised to keep quiet.

Police believe the culprit is a scientist engaged in the lab's highly competitive genetic research.

The person is smart and apparently insanely jealous of the women's work, said a police source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"This is not the work of a janitor," the source said. "It's the work of a mad scientist."

An investigation including lie detector and DNA tests has pointed detectives to a "peer" of the women, said John Hill, chief of detectives for the city's borough of Manhattan. But police don't have enough evidence to make an arrest, Hill said.

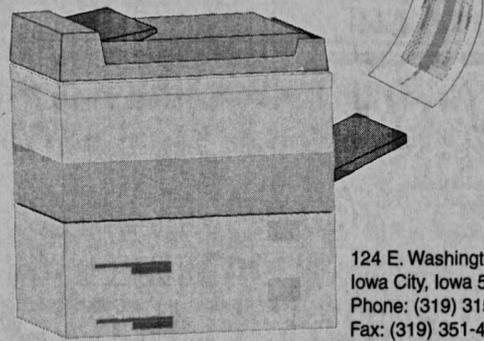

Hill said none of the incidents so far constitute attempted murder, only felony harassment.

But he added, "I think if this person was out to kill someone, he or she would have the expertise to do it."

Treasure of Atocha

SILVER JEWELRY HANDCAST FROM SILVER INGOTS RECOVERED FROM A SPANISH GALLEON SHIPWRECKED IN 1622

In September, 1622, during a hurricane off the Florida Keys, the Spanish galleon "Nuestra Senora de Atocha" sank to the ocean floor. She took down with her a most generous cargo of silver and gold not to be seen again for more than three centuries. On July 20, 1985, after fifteen years of heartache, hard work and frustration, the resting place of the lower hull of the Atocha was located by Mel Fisher's Treasure Salvors, Inc. They painstakingly retrieved the fabulous Treasure that had been destined for King Phillip IV of Spain.

Part of the 365 year old bounty, in the form of silver ingots, has been skillfully wrought into exquisite jewelry depicting the period of its disappearance; tall ships, anchors, crucifixes, Spanish crowns and sand dollar earrings, rings, pendants, chains, medallions and more. Each piece bears the stamp "Atocha 1622" and comes with a certificate of authenticity.

This precious cargo has reached a new destination, JCPenney...and the ultimate destination: YOU.

A sick Rwandan refugee gets water at the Mugunga camp in Zaire. The United Nations estimates that more than 1,800 people are dying of cholera and other diseases every day in the squalid refugee camps around Goma, which house 1.2 million Rwandan refugees.

at the Goma refugee camp are producing 100,000 gallons of water a day, far short of the need. Within a day or two, the volume will increase to more than 1 million gallons a day, Perry said, adding, "That will be adequate."

But for all the water being produced, Perry acknowledged problems with delivery capabilities and said the United States was rushing trucks and other delivery systems into the region along with additional food and medical supplies.

A major problem, he said, is poor conditions at the airport in Goma near the greatest concentration of refugees. He said U.S. forces have made some improvements there, doubling the daily landing capacity to 20 planes.

Perry will visit Goma and Entebbe, accompanied by Gen. George Joulwan, who is in charge of the African operation.

At the White House, spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers confirmed that a team headed by a U.S. general "will look at the Kigali airport with an eye toward deciding whether it can be used effectively as a staging area" for delivering relief supplies.

Administration officials have rebutted criticism that the U.S. response to the Rwandan refugee crisis was too little and too late, pointing to the military's flow of food and water-purification equipment.

However, officials have acknowledged that Washington was caught off guard by the magnitude of the crisis and speed with which it developed.

More than 2 million Rwandans have fled since Tutsi-led forces won a civil war over their Hutu rivals. Some 11,000 have died in the border town of Goma alone, where more than 1 million refugees are stranded.

equipment to divide the samples of blood found on Simpson's Bronco, at his estate and at the scene of the slayings.

It wasn't immediately clear whether the defense planned to cut the samples or even show at the lab. Defense attorney Robert Shapiro objected vigorously to the ground rules under which his experts would have to work.

During the hearing, Simpson smiled while talking to his attorneys and at one point looked at the spectators. No family members of victims were present.

Outside the courtroom, Shapiro declined to answer questions about the wrongful death lawsuit. Fred Goldman wasn't immediately available for comment.

The lawsuit was filed in Superior Court in Santa Monica on July 20 but wasn't discovered by most news media until Wednesday. It is the first civil action filed against Simpson in the slayings.

Meanwhile, Sheriff Sherman Block agreed to let the 47-year-old Simpson fulfill a contract with a football trading card company while in jail.

Simpson will sign about 1,000 trading cards — but only a limited number of cards each day.

"These could become a contraband item within the jail system," Block said.

watch her weight.

Fong described the judge in Budapest, Hungary, as a "nice old lady" who had made an offhand remark. "It was perceived by her as 'You're too fat to be an Olympic gymnast,'" the coach said.

Over the past three years, local TV interviews had shown the Olympic hopeful wasting away, often with her mother, Sandy, by her side vowing to help her daughter through the ordeal.

A year ago, Henrich was briefly hospitalized and began seeing a psychiatrist. Recently, she had stopped seeing the psychiatrist, Dr. Gail Vaughn.

"I worked with her for about three months, and she seemed to be doing pretty good when she let me go," Vaughn said. "She was getting better there for a while."

Ultimately, no one could help Henrich, not her fiancé or family members, who had nurtured her dream since she began training at age 4.

"She was always hopping around, hanging onto things," her mother recalled in a 1989 interview with The Kansas City Star. "She couldn't get enough of it."

No one answered the telephone at Henrich's home Wednesday.

Henrich had won six international championships by the time she left junior high school in 1987. She made the decision then to work full time on gymnastics, taking her high-school classes with a tutor.

Wife of Lobster Boy found guilty by jury

James Martinez
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Jurors convicted a woman on a reduced charge of manslaughter Wednesday in the contract slaying of her husband — the claw-handed sideshow performer known as Lobster Boy.

Mary Stiles, 56, claimed she was a battered spouse acting in self-defense. She showed no emotion when the jury returned its verdict.

The jury deliberated about 10 hours over two days before finding her guilty of second-degree manslaughter with a firearm and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder. She had been charged with first-degree murder.

A teen-age neighbor who had been paid $1,500 shot her husband, Grady Stiles Jr., twice in the back of the head as he sat in his trailer, watching television in his underwear.

Stiles, 55, was a sideshow veteran who got his nickname for a genetic deformity that left him with two-fingered hands and stunted footless legs.

Throughout the two-week trial, Stiles portrayed her husband as a powerful drunken brute who routinely swatted her with his pincer hands, butted her with his head, sexually abused her and threatened to kill her.

plane in Panama killed 21, including 12 Jews.

All four explosions had Jews concerned that they were facing the worst wave of terror attacks since the mid-1980s, when bombs hit several synagogues and airlines in Europe.

There were no claims of responsibility for Tuesday's bombs. A group called Ansarallah, which is allied with Shiite Muslim Hezbollah guerrillas, said it was responsible for the attacks in Latin America.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has blamed Iran and Hezbollah, its satellite guerrilla group in Lebanon, for the attacks in Argentina and London, calling them attempts to derail peace efforts. The bombings in Britain seemed timed to sour the atmosphere as Israel and Jordan ended a 46-year state of war.

"If the world will not join in coping with these terrible international Islamic extremist movements, we might see attacks not only against Israelis," Rabin said Wednesday. "The world will find itself living under a threat of ... terror."

Yehuda Milo, a deputy director-general at the Israeli Foreign Ministry, said Israeli diplomats would ask governments worldwide for better protection for Israeli and Jewish offices.

"It must be made clear to local authorities everywhere that the peace process has enemies and brutal ones ... who out of a distorted vision will try to sabotage it," Milo said on Israel radio.

TREE

"I was surprised to see the tree just chopped up like that," he said. "It seems like if someone went through that much effort to put something like that there, it should have been recognized."

UI grounds maintenance supervisor Shawn Fitzpatrick said he never knew such a plaque existed, and he would have to look into an appropriate way to maintain it.

"We'll try to do a replacement and plant a tree as close as we can to the same spot, but I don't know if that will maintain the spirit of the original plaque," he said.

It might be possible to leave the stump with the plaque, Fitzpatrick said, but other alternatives will be considered as well.

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said she never knew about the plaque and is not sure what to do now that the tree is dead.

"Since it seems to be something to commemorate this particular tree, it doesn't quite seem appropriate to move it," she said. "This is not something we deal with every day."

Rhodes said she would work with Fitzpatrick to determine the best course of action.

Rosenberg said the plaque is "an exceptional detail on our campus," and should not be ignored. Salvest now lives in State University, Ark., but could not be reached.

DREAM TEAM II

Shaq at point guard?

Rick Gano

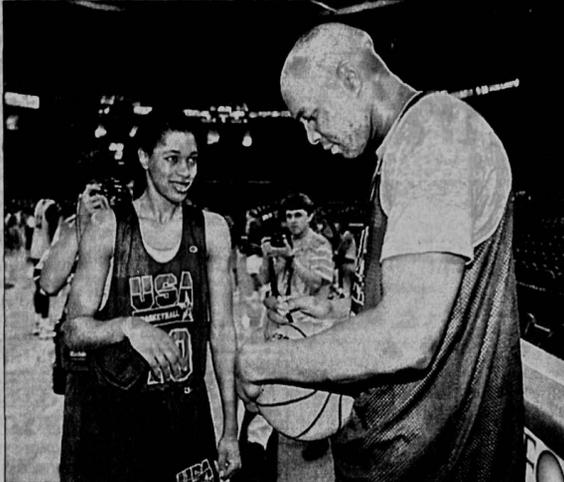

Associated Press

CHICAGO — He dived over a bench for a loose ball and dominated inside. He scored 14 points and grabbed five rebounds.

Shaquille O'Neal didn't need to be rewarded for his play in Dream Team II's exhibition opener, a 114-81 rout Tuesday night of the German national team. But Wednesday, as Coach Don Nelson ran his team through a shorter-than-usual practice, the 7-foot-1, 300-pound center was allowed to take his game outside.

"I was out there just messing around," said O'Neal, who got to play point guard during some of the drills.

"He can handle the ball, he can dribble," Nelson said. "He ran the point guard in our break just to fool around and he was pretty darn good. We let him do some things and we want him to have some fun, too."

"The reason he is a star is not because he's big," Nelson said. "I always thought that was the reason. He is a star because he has a great feel and he's smart. He thinks ahead. It's not just his size, that's the third or fourth ingredient. He has great hands and you tell him something once, he understands."

Notes: The team has two more practices in Chicago and then heads to Oakland, Calif., where Sunday it will play the U.S. Goodwill Games team that was eliminated from gold medal competition Wednesday by Italy.

PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES

Kruk: 'It ain't cancer'

John Bonfatti

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — An upbeat John Kruk left a Philadelphia hospital Wednesday night after learning lumps on his body are apparently not connected to his testicular cancer earlier this year.

John Kruk

"It ain't cancer," the Philadelphia Phillies' star said as he walked between buildings at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital.

Dr. Carl Mansfield, chairman of the department of radiation oncology and nuclear medicine, said there was a "99 to 100 percent likelihood that John does not have a recurrence of cancer." Mansfield said Kruk apparently has a "minor medical problem unrelated to his cancer."

Hospital spokeswoman Kellyann McDonnell said she had no further details about the problem.

McDonnell said Kruk, who arrived at the hospital about 5 p.m. and left about an hour later, would return Thursday morning for further evaluation.

After Philadelphia's 10-8 victory over the Florida Marlins Tuesday night, Kruk said he would have doctors examine two lumps he discovered recently on his body. He left the game in the seventh inning with what the Phillies called abdominal pain.

The hospital report confirmed the opinion of a specialist on testicular tumors, Dr. Ray Stutzman of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Stutzman called the lumps "bizarre" and said there was a "very, very slim chance" they would be related to the seminoma doctors found on Kruk's right testicle.

That testicle was removed March 8 and Kruk underwent radiation treatments designed to make sure the cancer hadn't spread to his lymph nodes. Stutzman said removal of the testicle and radiation treatments have "an almost 100 percent cure rate."

The 33-year-old first baseman said he noticed the first lump, on his rib, within the past few days and had it checked Tuesday by Dr. Gerald Kuykendall in Fort Lauderdale. Kruk discovered another lump on his stomach and was examined by the Marlins team physician, Dr. Dan Kanell.

Stutzman said doctors most likely would conduct a biopsy on the lumps to determine whether they pose a threat to Kruk's health.

A preliminary result could be obtained within an hour of the biopsy, he said, but a more detailed report would not be expected for 24 to 48 hours.

BASEBALL

Bagwell, Astros knot NL Central

Associated Press
CINCINNATI — Jeff Bagwell hit his 34th homer and singled home the go-ahead run in the 12th inning Wednesday, leading the Houston Astros to a 7-1 victory over Cincinnati that forged a first-place tie in the National League Central.

Bagwell's 12th-inning single off Scott Service (0-2) — his major league-leading 103rd RBI in 102 games — started a six-run rally that let the Astros catch the Reds for the first time since June 15. The teams are scheduled to finish the regular season with three games in Houston.

The Astros got a sensational start from Doug Drabek and Bagwell's fourth homer in four games, but had to go extra innings because of two errors by Andujar Cedeno. The shortstop muffed routine grounders with two outs in the third to let in an unearned run.

In the 12th, Bagwell singled in Steve Finley before Cedeno hit a two-run double. Tony Eusebio had a pinch three-run homer, his fifth, off Tim Lincecum.

Brian Williams (6-5) pitched one inning and Todd Jones got the last three outs in the Astros' second win in the three-game series.

Braves 4, Expos 1

ATLANTA — Kent Mercker pitched seven strong innings and Jeff Blauser hit a two-run homer as the Braves averted a three-game sweep and moved within 2½ games of the Expos in the NL East.

Atlanta's win, only its fourth in 11 games, ended the Expos' eight-game winning streak, their longest this season. The NL East leaders will next meet in Montreal from Sept. 30-Oct. 2.

The start of the game was delayed three hours and 19 minutes by rain.

Mercker (9-3) allowed one run and five hits, striking out six. Greg McMichael pitched two innings for his 20th save.

The Braves broke through against Ken Hill (14-5) in the sixth on Blauser's two-run homer to right-center, his fifth.

Athletics 11, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Bordick had three hits, including an RBI single during a six-run outburst in the first inning, as the Oakland Athletics beat the struggling California Angels.

Geronimo Berroa hit a three-run homer in the third inning for the A's, who collected 15 hits off five Angel pitchers.

The Angels, who were shut out by Oakland Tuesday night, have lost six straight.

Ron Darling (10-9) won his sixth straight decision, giving up three runs and eight hits in five innings.

The A's ripped Phil Leftwich (5-9) for six runs and six hits in just one-third of an inning.

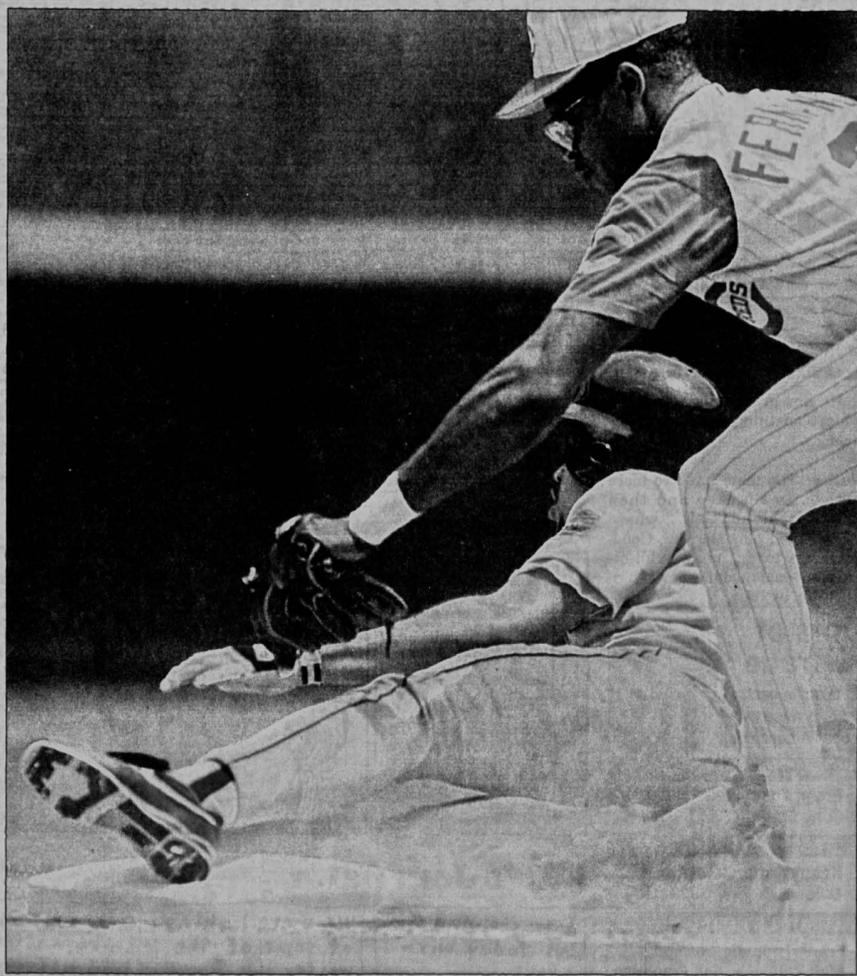

Tigers 3, Mariners 1

DETROIT — Mike Moore allowed only two hits in eight innings and Travis Fryman hit a two-run homer off Randy Johnson.

The victory enabled Detroit manager Sparky Anderson to move into a tie for fourth place on the career managerial win list with Joe McCarthy. Anderson has 2,126 career victories.

Moore (10-9) walked four and struck out four, outdueling Randy Johnson (11-6).

Johnson struck out 13 and walked five but dropped to 0-5 in his career at Tiger Stadium.

Johnson struck out nine in the first four innings, but trailed 2-0 after one bad pitch in the first. After Alan Trammell lined a one-out single to right, Fryman hit his 17th homer.

Brewers 5, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Dave Nilsson hit his second three-run home run in as many games and drove in four runs.

Bill Wegman (8-3) allowed four hits in seven-plus innings for the Brewers, who have won five of their last six road games. Mike Ignasiak completed the five-hit shutout with two innings of relief.

Pat Hentgen (12-7) gave up five runs and seven hits in seven innings. He struck out four and walked five.

Nilsson, who went 3-for-4, hit his 12th homer in the seventh inning off Hentgen to put the Brewers up 5-0.

Phillies 3, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Bobby Munoz pitched a two-hitter for his first career complete game to lead Philadelphia to a three-game sweep of the Florida Marlins.

Munoz (7-3) did not allow a walk and didn't give up a hit after Benito Santiago's homer with one out in the second inning. The other hit by Florida was Chuck Carr's single in the first inning.

Munoz, who retired the final 23 batters and struck out three, has allowed only one walk in his last four starts covering 28½ innings.

Pat Rapp (6-6) took the loss, allowing eight hits and three earned runs in eight innings.

Mets 7, Cardinals 4

ST. LOUIS — Bobby Bonilla hit a pair of two-run home runs, including the tie-breaking shot in a four-run eighth, as New York completed a three-game sweep.

Bonilla, who also had a two-run homer in the fourth inning, had his 16th career two-homer game and his second this season. Tim Lincecum added a two-run homer in the eighth and Ryan Thompson had a solo shot in the ninth, his 17th, as the Mets sent the Cardinals to their fifth straight loss.

Rookie Jason Jacone (4-1) won his fourth straight start, working seven innings and allowing four runs on seven hits. John Franco pitched the ninth for his 25th save.

St. Louis starter Tom Urbani (2-6) carried a three-hitter into the eighth before the Mets rallied.

Twins 1, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON, Texas — Pat Mahomes pitched six solid innings and the Minnesota bullpen bailed him out of a jam in the seventh, making a first-inning RBI groundout by Kirby Puckett hold up for a victory over Texas.

It was only the third time this season the Rangers have been blanked and it was pretty surprising considering the Twins entered the game with the worst ERA in the majors at 5.79.

Texas, which has been alone in first place in the AL West since May 30, now leads surging Oakland by just 1½ games.

Puckett's one-out grounder scored Chuck Knoblauch, who opened the game with a double.

Knoblauch also doubled in the fifth, upping his major league-leading total to 41.

Mahomes (8-4) wasn't dominant, but in 6½ innings he only allowed three hits and three walks. He had two strikeouts, the second of which got Jose Canseco thrown out for arguing the third strike.

Royals 4, White Sox 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brian McRae scored the go-ahead run when third baseman Robin Ventura bobbled Wally Joyner's grounder in the eighth inning, sending the Kansas City Royals to a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

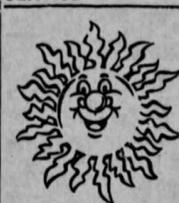

The loss trimmed Chicago's lead in the American League Central to one-half game over the Cleveland Indians, who were rained out in Baltimore.

Jason Bere held the Royals to three hits over seven innings before he was replaced by Kirk McCaskill (1-3) after giving up a leadoff double to Chico Lind.

Lind, who went to third on McRae's single, was thrown out at the plate by shortstop Ozzie Guillen while attempting to score on Dave Henderson's grounder. McRae took third and Henderson went to second on the play.

Dennis Cook relieved McCaskill and got Wally Joyner to hit an easy grounder to Ventura, who failed to field the ball as McRae scored.

row and being the No. 2 seed we felt we had a good chance of winning it," Murray said. "We knew if we could run on them then we'd be fine. We thought their big men were slow so we just tried to get the ball out and run, and that's what we did to keep the lead."

Lepic-Kroeger capitalized on Fitzpatrick's turnovers and held on with defense. Bowen, with 21 points, was the only Fitzpatrick's player with more than 20.

Goodfellow and Lepic-

Kroeger's faced each other only once during the season and Goodfellow came back from a 12-point halftime deficit to win the game 109-104.

Murray said losing to Goodfellow earlier in the season should not be a factor.

"They didn't beat us by much. So right now we think we can win it," Murray said. "We're in the finals which is where we wanted to be and hopefully we can put together another win on Sunday."

Sunday's game begins at 7 p.m. at City High's new gym.

Tarkanian drops lawsuits, litigation over with UNLV

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Former UNLV basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian and the university ended three years of litigation Monday, announcing Tarkanian will drop his lawsuits against the school and UNLV will pay his legal costs.

"This brings a conclusion to the litigation between the university and the individual defendants and the Tarkanians," interim UNLV president Kenny Guinn said. "After today, I will not be speaking about this matter."

Guinn said Tarkanian and his wife, Lois, agreed to drop their lawsuit so the financially troubled school could spend as much money as possible on students, rather than continued legal fees and possible damages.

"They were willing to forego the merits for the university," Guinn said.

In the deal, UNLV agreed not to appeal a District Court order that it pay Tarkanian $250,000 in legal fees for 13 years of battles with the NCAA.

"I feel good," Tarkanian said. "I'm glad this is over. We loved the university, we always have. I'd like to be part of the university, to help any way I can."

Schott steamed over non-smoking regulations

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott is resisting progress nationwide as she tries to overturn smoking restrictions at Riverfront Stadium, an anti-smoking activist said.

Joe Cherner, president of New York-based Smokefree Educational Services Inc., said the trend in major-league stadiums is toward stricter smoking limitations, not more relaxed standards as Schott advocates.

Twenty of the 28 major-league teams play in stadiums where, like Riverfront, smoking is banned in seating areas. Seven other stadiums have special no-smoking sections.

Shea Stadium, where the New York Mets play, is the only major-league stadium where unrestricted smoking still is permitted.

"Stadiums have been moving in that direction for the past several years and there's no reason to think that's going to change," Cherner said. "By next season, I doubt there will be any teams that allow smoking in the seating areas."

Schott, a smoker, did not return a call to her office to comment Wednesday.

Carlton denies parents invitation to Hall induction

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joseph Carlton won't be joining the celebration in Cooperstown, N.Y., Sunday when his only son, Steve, is inducted into the baseball Hall of Fame.

The elder Carlton, estranged from his son for years, said he wasn't invited. Steve Carlton's ailing mother and two sisters were excluded, too, he said.

"I am proud and fond of Steve. I love him," the 87-year-old Joseph Carlton told the Philadelphia Daily News in his Miami, Fla., home. "But I am also disappointed in him."

The elder Carlton, legally blind but with some peripheral vision, said he plans to angle himself near the television set so he can watch the ceremony from the corner of his eye on a delayed broadcast at midnight Sunday.

Meanwhile, the newspaper reported, Steve Carlton set aside 30 tickets for former teammates at North Miami High School. The Hall of Fame said Wednesday his wife, Beverly, and at least one of two grown sons are scheduled to attend the ceremony.

Session prompts players to set strike date today

Ronald Blum

Associated Press

NEW YORK — After another non-productive bargaining session with owners, baseball players prepared to set a strike date today when their union's executive board meets.

On a day of escalating rhetoric, owners rejected the union's proposals Wednesday and players said they couldn't conceive of agreeing to management's demand for a salary cap. The union appears to be focusing on a mid-August strike, with Aug. 19 the most-mentioned date.

"We're really quite far apart at this point," management negotiator Richard Ravitch said after the three-hour meeting.

Players voted nearly unanimously to give their executive board the authority to set a strike date and call a walkout. Mark Belanger, an assistant to union head Donald Fehr, said Wednesday there were only six votes, and said "the majority of the dissenters, if not all, was for (wanting) the ability to be involved in setting the date."

Belanger said the union didn't count all the votes in favor of allowing the executive board to call a strike, which would be the sport's eighth work stoppage in 22 years. Based on an average of 28 players per team, including the disabled list, the total in favor probably was about 780.

"If the players set a strike date, it is because they believe it is helpful in reaching an agreement," Fehr said.

Ravitch said the union's proposal to raise the minimum salary from $109,000 to $175,000-$200,000 and to restore salary arbitration to players with two years of major league service would cost clubs $660 million to $700 million over four years and $1.57 billion to $1.65 billion over seven seasons.

He said the proposals would add $236,000 to the average salary and would increase the percentage of revenue going to players from 58 percent in 1994 to 70-74 percent by 1998.

"The players proposals were rejected out of hand. The magnitude of the cost increases are irrelevant," Fehr said.

"The cost is too high," Ravitch said. "Indeed, it moves in the opposite direction this game has to go in. The small-market clubs will be the ones most burdened by the problem. It will force their costs way above their capacities."

Fehr disputed Ravitch's calculations, saying the union's proposals would instead shift money from veterans to younger players. Ravitch in turn criticized the union for refusing to consider salary limits.

"I regret the fact that we have had no response whatsoever to our concerns of fixing the costs of this game," Ravitch said. "Until we hear another idea on how we can fix the costs of playing ball, we're not going to change our proposal."

Players want to maintain the current system of salary arbitration and free agency, which has allowed the average salary to rise from $51,501 in 1976 to $1.19 million on opening day this year. Owners are insisting on a salary cap, and proposed splitting revenue 50-50 with the players.

PRIME TIME

Top seeds to square off in final

The Prime Time League's top two teams prevailed in Wednesday night's semifinals and will face off Sunday for the league title.

No. 1 seed Goodfellow Printing-Imprinted Sportswear opened the semis with an 85-76 win over First National Bank and No. 2 Lepic Kroeger Realtors-Active Endeavors followed with a 109-101 win over Fitzpatrick's.

Goodfellow got off to a slow start and was down by as many as nine in the first half, but battled back to a 45-45 halftime tie.

First National and Goodfellow traded the lead throughout the first 10 minutes of the second half, but Goodfellow was too strong inside and built a 13-point lead with 6:25 remaining. First National made several runs but Goodfellow never let up and held on for the win.

Hawkeye point guard Mont'el Glasper had 19 points and seven assists for Goodfellow and said the team was tight early in the game.

"Most of the guys were kind of sluggish in the first half," Glasper said. "We knew we just had to concentrate more in the second half and get loose."

Jess Settles led First National with 20 points and 14 rebounds and Glasper said shutting down the Hawkeye forward was the key for Goodfellow going into the game.

"Basically we were concentrating on stopping Jess. He's the main man on their team. If we stopped him and shut him down, we thought we had a better chance to win and that's what we did," Glasper said.

Lepic-Kroeger also held off several late runs in its semifinal win and kept Fitzpatrick's from getting a chance at its fifth Prime Time title in eight seasons.

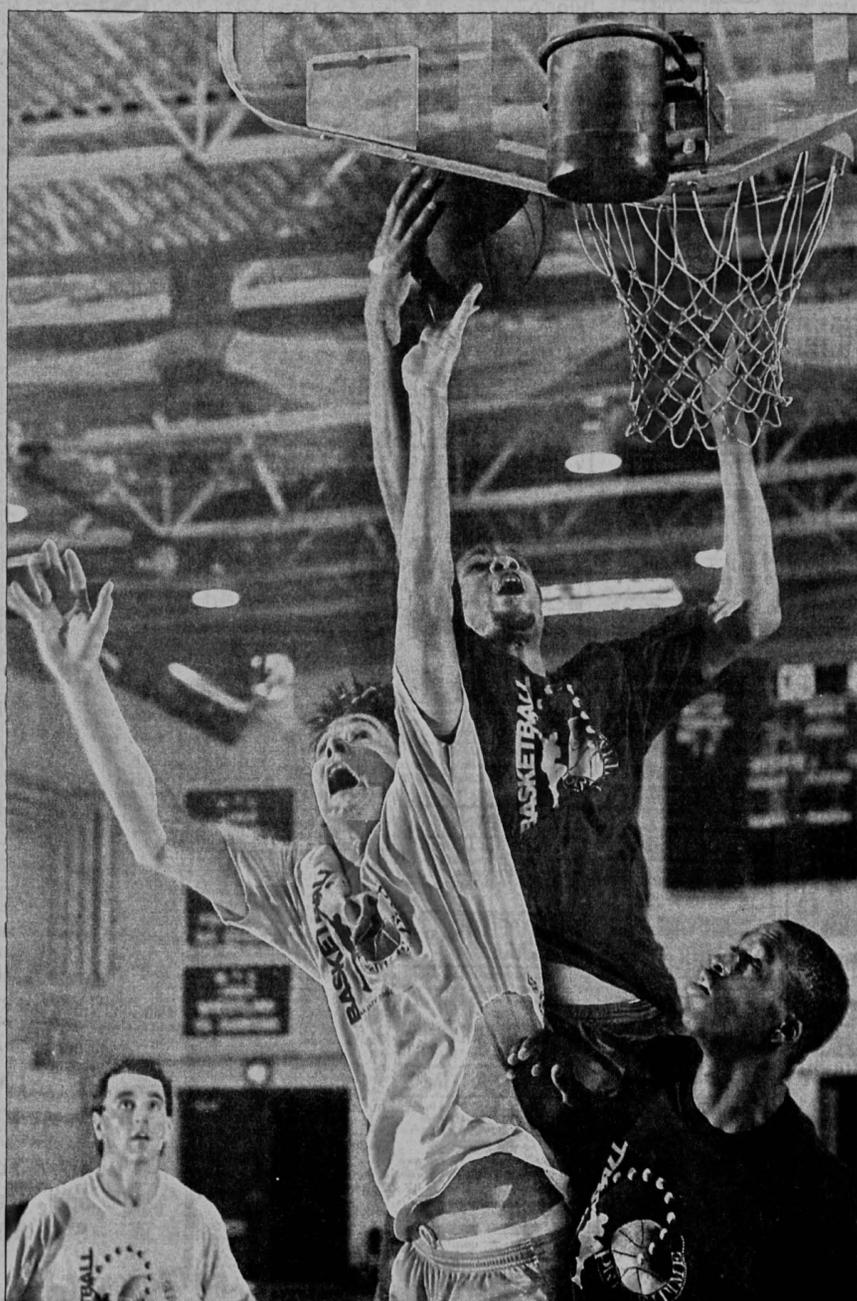

Iowa State's Klay Edwards paced Lepic-Kroeger with 35 points and 21 rebounds, while Hawkeye forward Kenyon Murray had 25 points and 14 rebounds.

Lepic-Kroeger led by five at the half and built the lead up to nine points in the second half. Fitzpatrick's remained within reach and incoming Iowa freshman Ryan Bowen's steal and ensuing layup brought the score to 91-88, but that was as close as Fitzpatrick's came.

Murray said Lepic-Kroeger was confident going into the game.

"We felt good. We'd won six in a row."

White washes out Cubs

Alan Robinson

PITTSBURGH — It was an ugly game on an ugly night — bad weather, bad defense, bad pitching and perhaps some bad umpiring.

Rick White won for the first time as a major-league starter by limiting the Cubs to two hits over six innings and Tom Foley drove in four runs in the Pirates' 9-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs on a rainy Wednesday night.

Foley had three of the Pirates' 16 hits, giving him 11 hits in his last 18 at-bats, and Don Slaught was 3-for-4 with two RBIs as the Pirates won despite committing four errors. The Cubs made three that led to six Pittsburgh runs.

"Yeah, but we made some good plays, too," said White, who didn't last past the fifth inning in his first two starts. "It was wet and sloppy out there, but we didn't play bad defense."

The Cubs were done in by White, who just became a starter, and Foley, a utilityman who rarely starts.

White (3-5) allowed an unearned run, struck out five and walked none in his third start. He began the season as the Pirates' closer before moving into the rotation 10 days ago when Paul Wagner was demoted to the bullpen.

"Starting allows me to use all four of my pitches — heck, when I was in the bullpen, I couldn't even use my curveball, and I used it a lot to set up the hitters," White said. "Right now, I think starting's better for me."

Foley, temporarily filling in at second base for the slumping Carlos Garcia, had a run-scoring double in the second, an RBI single in the third and a two-run single in the eighth when Pittsburgh broke the game open with five runs.

"We didn't have a real good day — really, both sides didn't defensively," Cubs manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "But I was impressed with White. He got his breaking ball over for strike one and he showed me he could pitch."

Trebelhorn wasn't so impressed with the umpiring, especially after home plate umpire Greg Bonin tossed Mark Grace for arguing a called third strike in the fourth. Grace was playing with a 12-game hitting streak.

"Greg ought to be embarrassed to throw me out. I didn't say anything," Grace said. "I didn't show anybody up. The (umpires) had a terrible night. It wasn't just with me, either. Tom Trebelhorn has to ice his hamstrings for all the trips he made out there and every one was justified."

The Pirates had six hits off Mike Morgan (2-10) in the first three innings. Morgan, 0-3 against the Pirates this season and 3-13 against them in his career, lasted five innings and allowed nine hits and three earned runs.

Problems abound for OSU athletics

COLUMBUS, Ohio — An Ohio State football player charged with shoplifting $445 from a discount store has become the latest university athlete to run into trouble with the law.

Punter Mike Malfatt, 19, of Dublin, was released on his own recognizance Wednesday. He was charged with a felony theft charge. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Aug. 9 in Franklin County Municipal Court.

Malfatt was picked up Tuesday by security guards at a Meijer store on the city's northwest side, police said.

Police said Malfatt was carrying a cooler full of beer and other alcoholic beverages, a camera and flowers when security guards spotted him trying to leave through the garden department.

Police said he tried to run and scuffled with the guards, one of whom suffered a split lip.

A theft is a felony in Ohio when the item stolen is worth more than $300 or the suspect has a prior theft conviction.

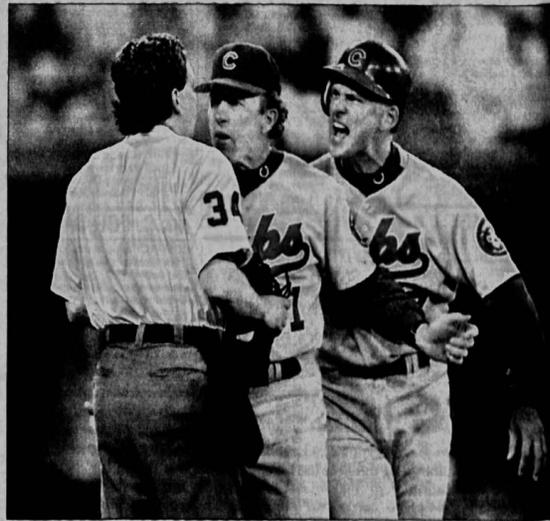

Bryan Pohlman, store manager, said he could not comment.

Head coach John Cooper on Wednesday said he suspended Malfatt indefinitely.

"Mike will remain a member of this team as long as he follows some very strict guidelines that we have set down for him. If he fails to meet those guidelines, he will give up that privilege," Cooper said.

"We work constantly with our athletes to stress the importance of being good role models and making sound decisions in all that they do. We will keep on emphasizing those points in hopes of eliminating these kinds of incidents in the future," Cooper said.

Malfatt is the fourth football player to get in trouble with the law in recent months.

Chicago Cubs batter Mark Grace, right, and manager Tom Trebelhorn, center, make their points to home plate umpire Greg Bonin following a called third strike on Grace in the fourth inning Wednesday in Pittsburgh. Grace was tossed from the game by Bonin for his protest. The Cubs lost 9-4 to the Pirates.
