Iowa clinics bolster safety measures

Amanda Morton
The Daily Iowan

Abortion clinics across Iowa and the country are beefing up their security measures after the Friday murder of a Florida abortion clinic doctor and his bodyguard.

Debra Steilen, director of communications at Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa administrative headquarters in Des Moines, confirmed Monday that federal marshals had been stationed at the clinic since Saturday. She said federal marshals will be at the clinic on a 24-hour basis until further notice.

Although no marshals are scheduled to be stationed in Iowa City, Steilen said they could become available if needed.

"We've made sure they are aware the clinics are there," she said. "We've also been enhancing security programs and protocols in Iowa City because that clinic provides abortions."

While Steilen declined to comment about security measures in depth, she said the Planned Parenthood administration sent a memo to Iowa center managers on Monday, urging them to notify the headquar-

Survivor of shooting recalls attack

Robert Dvorchak

PENSACOLA, Fla. — As her husband and the doctor he was escorting arrived at the abortion clinic, June Barrett saw a familiar protester waving a pamphlet. Then she saw the recoil and heard the blast of a shotgun.

"Oh my God, he is shooting!" Barrett cried as she hit the floor of the pickup truck to duck the pellets and shards of glass zinging through the cab.

"And after things quieted down,

I said, 'Doc, are you OK?' And there was no answer. I opened my eyes and I could see the blood dripping between the seats, and I looked up again a little bit more. I saw a pool of blood there, and I glanced up. And I said, 'Oh, no. Doc is not OK,' she recalled on Monday, her strong voice breaking just briefly.

In her first interviews since Friday's slayings, Barrett recalled on NBC's "Today Show" and in a later phone call with the Associated Press the horror of discovering Dr. John Britton had been shot, then getting out of the truck to find the body of her husband, 74-year-old James Barrett.

"My husband died for the cause of a woman's right to choose," Barrett said, promising she would return to work as an abortion clinic escort. "I'm not going to sit back in a corner and not do anything. Somebody's got to stand."

Barrett, who was wounded in the forearm and breast, has known more than her fair share of grief. She was widowed in a first marriage, and her son died of unaffected by stronger security measures of abortion clinics because Right to Life only supports peaceful picketing in line with the First Amendment.

Regardless, Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic For Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., said the Florida killings have affected some of the employees of the clinic.

"It makes us think about our commitment for providing women health care in light of people being killed," she said. "And we are shocked that this happened again."

Sand said the the Emma Goldman Clinic has used private security in some instances but not on a permanent basis. She said there aren't plans for adding more security.

Sand said she felt divulging specific aspects of clinic security, such as whether doctors wear bulletproof vests or have escorts, would defeat the purpose of having such security.

"On Friday, we were in contact with the police and asking for more frequent surveillance. We have fairly extensive security measures," Sand said.

ters if their clinic is picketed or someone is harassed.

Steilen said such a formal request has not previously been made of managers.

"(The attack) serves to remind us that there is a radical element who are strongly opposed to what we do," said Maria Stewart, manager of the Iowa City Planned Parenthood,

2 S. Linn St. "The majority are not violent, but we need to be aware of those that are."

Stewart said bodyguards are not currently used for protection in Iowa City.

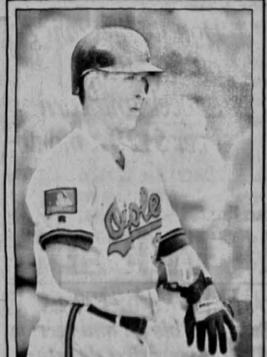

"We stay aware of what's going on around us," she said. "But Iowa City is a fairly tolerant community in terms of us being here."

Legislative director of the Iowa Right to Life Committee Samona Smit said her organization is opposed to "all violence — whether it be against an adult or unborn."

"Shooting someone is not pro-life," she said. "Iowa Right to Life is unequivocally opposed to violence in the name of pro-life."

Smit said her organization will be

Woodstock reunion canceled by lack of interest

ALBANY, N.Y. — The Woodstock Nation apparently has little interest in reclaiming its youth — at least the part about sitting in a field for a weekend in upstate New York. Generation X isn't crazy about the idea either.

The promoter of a nostalgia show planned for the same Bethel, N.Y., farm where the historic Woodstock rock concert took place 25 years ago pulled the plug Monday, forced to face the reality that almost no one was buying the $94.69 tickets.

"We quickly determined that people are just not interested in this event," said promoter Harry Rhulen of Shea Entertainment Inc. "If that was the case, why should we bother to put it on?"

Shea Entertainment said the 1,650 people who bought tickets would receive refunds. A crowd of 50,000 had been hoped for and Rhulen, a local insurance executive, said he expects to lose $2 million.

Meanwhile, promoters of the larger Woodstock '94 concert 60 miles away in Saugerties still had about 100,000 unsold tickets on Monday, the day sales were supposed to end. They planned to extend sales until at least Aug. 11 and relax parking rules to try to attract a crowd closer to the 250,000 they had hoped for.

The Saugerties show is scheduled for the weekend of Aug. 13-14, the same dates as the now-defunct Bethel show.

As students move out of their summer residences and into new housing, the trash in town multiplies. The heaps of trash, called "Colorados" by some, create extra work for trash collectors.

There's treasure to be found in students' moving-day trash

Mary Geraghty

Iowa City has been invaded by mountains of garbage. And although some are finding "gold" in the hills of discarded furniture, the unsightly mounds of cushions and plywood have also stacked up to be quite a job for Iowa City waste removal crews.

"There's just mountains of it out there," Floyd Pelkey, Iowa City solid waste superintendent, said. "Our biggest problem is that people put it out so far ahead."

Pelkey said his workers refer to the piles of junk as "Colorados" because they are so large they can be compared to Colorado's Rocky Mountains. And make no mistake, Pelkey and other collectors will be working overtime to clean up this town, too.

"When there's a mess, that's our job — to get it picked up as quick as we can," Dan Ramsey, Hawkeye Waste Systems Inc. office manager, said.

However, the gap between moving day and collection day leaves time for furnitureless students to scavenge the remnants.

Both Pelkey and Ramsey agreed that there are often treasures to be found in moving-day trash. Ramsey said his workers even found a working computer a few weeks ago.

UI senior Tracy Machovec said she and her roommates have found several useful items in the trash, but so far none have been good enough for the living room.

"Basically, we've furnished our porch with garbage," she said.

Machovec said she was not actively looking for either the couch or chair she now keeps on the porch, but in the last few days, she has been seeking a desk or table in the trash piles around town.

Pelkey said he knows there are valuable items to be found in the trash, but when people sift through and spread the piles around, the collection process is disrupted.

He said collection goes more smoothly when the trash is in containers.

"I wish the items thrown away were put into bags and cans," he said. "If everything was contained, that would make it easier

SECRET WEDDING CONFIRMED

Jackson's marriage proves to be truth

Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In a match made in tabloid heaven, the king of pop and the daughter of the king of rock confirmed Monday they were secretly married 11 weeks ago.

Michael Jackson, 35, and Lisa Marie Presley, 26, announced their union in a statement issued by Jackson's MJJ Productions.

"My married name is Mrs. Lisa Marie Presley-Jackson. My marriage to Michael Jackson took place in a private ceremony outside the United States weeks ago," Elvis' daughter said in the statement.

"I am very much in love with Michael; I dedicate my life to being his wife. I understand and support him; we both look forward to raising a family and living a happy, healthy life together. We hope friends and fans will understand and respect our privacy."

Rumors of the marriage were first reported July 10, after a judge in the Dominican Republic told the newspaper Listin Diario that he had married the two in a 15-minute ceremony on May 26.

The newspaper ran a photograph of what was purportedly the couple's wedding certificate, which included passport numbers for Jackson and Presley and listed L. Darling and Thomas Keough as witnesses.

The celebrities' publicists denied the report, but a Dominican immigration official said Jackson was in that country on May 26, and Donald Trump was rumored to have lent the newlyweds a New York "love nest" in his glitzy Trump Tower.

On Monday, the statement from MJJ Productions' Vice President Bob Jones was released to the Associated Press.

"It was not formally announced until now for several reasons; foremost being that we are both very private people living in the glare of

COUPLES RECOGNIZED BY COUNCIL

Same-sex partners permitted benefits

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

As of Monday, same-sex partners of Iowa City employees became eligible for health-care insurance benefits.

The new domestic partnership benefit policy will make long-term homosexual partners eligible to receive the same spousal health-care benefits as those in legally recognized heterosexual relationships. It's something some Iowa City residents see as long overdue.

"I've been with my partner for 23 years, and as far as the federal government is concerned, we are total strangers," Rick Graf, a member of the Iowa City Human Rights Commission, said. "It's something I've thought about for a long time."

Although policy instigators are optimistic about its future, some fear the benefits of the new plan may be lessened by federal programs that fail to legally recognize same-sex partnerships. Others worry whether the City Council's definition of domestic partnerships will be broad enough to offer coverage to all family members, including children.

However, Karen Kubby, Iowa City City Council member, said she is pleased the Council is finally recognizing domestic partners as a - Common or joint ownership of residence.

- At least two of — (1) joint ownership of a motor vehicle (2) joint credit accounts (3) joint checking accounts (4) lease for a residence with both partners listed as tenants.
- Domestic partner has been designated as a beneficiary of life insurance, a primary beneficiary in the employee's will or as beneficiary for retiring or death benefits.
- The partners have a relationship contract stating they are supporting each other and property is to be equally divided if the relationship ends.

Chess player makes move to become professional

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

Some people think it's boring, others are obsessed by it. Some do it with partners, others with books. Some people do it for fun, but for others chess is a profession. Martin Olesen belongs to the latter group. The only professional chess player in Iowa, he started playing chess 16 years ago.

DAY IN THE LIFE

"I really like chess. I like intellectual challenge to solve the problems on the board and the competitive element," Olesen said. "The person who solves the problems better in the long run is going to win."

Bending over the board and moving the pieces, Olesen scratches his head and corrects his glasses, occupied by the action on the board.

Olesen, who just defended his doctoral thesis in mathematics and is originally from Denmark, started his career as a professional chess player a few weeks ago.

He is one of the strongest chess players in Denmark and has achieved several high placings in international chess tournaments. In high school, he played the second board on the Scandinavian championship team.

Olesen also played first board for the Iowa chess team Fear Itself, which won the U.S. Amateur Team Championship in March.

He plans to return to Denmark in mid-August to play a tournament and is aiming for an international master title — the second-highest title in the chess world. The highest title, grand master, is accomplished by only 450 players.

"If you want to break through, you need to go to Europe," Olesen said.

Until then, he will stay in Iowa City. Although chess is widely perceived as a social game, most of his time is spent in solitude exploring the intricacies of the 32-piece game.

"When I'm home, most of what

Frank Miller/The Daily Iowan

Martin Olesen, the only professional chess player in Iowa, concentrates on a move. Originally from Denmark, he began playing chess 16 years ago and started his career as a professional a few weeks ago. He said an often overlooked aspect of professional chess playing is physical training. To prepare for tournaments, Olesen runs and rollerblades every day.

"I'm doing is preparation for a tournament," Olesen said.

Reading books and moving white and black wooden pieces on a checkered board may sound dull, but there is much creativity involved in the process.

"You need to keep up with the development in the game. Because there are fixed starting positions and the same rules always apply, it's possible to work out systems from the beginning," Olesen said.

He said most professional chess players invest the majority of their time studying the first few moves in the game, or the opening.

"You can only win if you study this part very carefully and maybe find a new move that has never been used," Olesen said.

He also studies the ways other strong chess players approach chess. He reads books about the end game, the part of the game when most pieces are off the board.

One overlooked aspect of professional chess playing is physical training. Preparing for a chess tournament, he runs and rollerblades daily.

"Oftentimes in a tournament, you play nine games in nine days and a game can take more than six hours," Olesen said. "The nervous energy you burn and the concentration is so tiring that if you're not in a good shape, it'd be difficult to get through a chess tournament. It's a bit like having a six-hour exam nine days in a row. High level competition is extremely stressful."

To inform and inspire his studies, Olesen has more than 500 chess books and a CD-ROM for his notebook computer with 350,000 games.

"I'm trying to find my own ideas, to understand what has been tried," he said.

Olesen plans to be a professional chess player for one year and then find a job related to his mathematics background. Professional chess is financed by the high prizes in tournaments, but even if you are successful in winning, it is hard to make a living because of the great travel and hotel expenses.

Actor: Working with Oliver Stone is torture

NEW YORK (AP) — What's it like working with director Oliver Stone? Torture, according to Robert Downey Jr.

"What's bearable to Oliver is excruciating to most," the actor told The New Yorker in its Aug. 8 issue. "I mean, it was like psychological warfare — loud music, these very hot sets and certain phrases from Oliver like, 'What are you doing? You're going to ruin my movie!'"

In "Natural Born Killers," Downey is a TV tabloid journalist pursuing a serial-slayer couple played by Woody Harrelson and Juliette Lewis. The film opens Friday.

Jane Fonda resorts to tears while traveling

ATLANTA (AP) — Jane Fonda, feminist icon, has this advice for tourists: When in trouble, cry.

"If you're ever in a situation where you're not getting served or you can't get what you need, just cry," said Fonda, who was at the Goodwill Games in Russia with her husband, Ted Turner.

The two-time Oscar winner told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution she came to this conclusion in 1962, during her first visit to Russia. She had stepped into a Moscow elevator, but the operator was reading a letter. She waited, but the operator wouldn't take her upstairs.

"I burst into tears," Fonda, 56, said, "and the minute I started crying, he was all, 'Can I do anything for you?' I think that's what he was saying."

TV's Superman plays mean game of hoops

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Dean Cain, Superman on ABC's "Lois & Clark," is also a super dunker.

Cain was the high scorer for his team at a celebrity basketball game Sunday. He racked up 13 points for the Blue team, coached by Billy Crystal. Tom Cruise scored only four points but played tenacious defense.

Mark Curry of ABC's "Hangin' With Mr. Cooper" led the White team with 18 points. Arsenio Hall was coach.

The Blues won, 80-65.

Of the 125 rapes reported to the Rape Victim Advocacy Program's Rape Crisis Line during the 1993-94 fiscal year, at least 30 involved UI students.

Because Iowa City is a college town, Ashley Sovern, education director of RVAP, said there are many more risk factors that increase the incidence of rape.

"A lot of people are away from home for the first time and are in an unfamiliar environment," she said. "They don't know many people and are having to make decisions to trust them or not."

While the total number of rapes reported slightly increased from the previous year, Sovern said this does not mean there has been an increase in the number of rapes committed.

"We have seen a big increase in crisis calls because of our POWER program," Sovern said. "There is a large underreporting rate. The 125 is actually much less than what occurred."

The program, People Out Working to End Rape, is a peer education group which strives to increase rape education, awareness and the services RVAP offers to the community.

During fiscal year 1993-94, program workers made 216 presentations to a total of 9,254 people.

"As our speaking engagements go up, more people hear about our services and are likely to go for counseling and confidential reporting," Sovern said.

According to RVAP's annual report, 50 of the 125 rapes reported were "present rapes," or those which occurred within six months of their being reported. This represents a 4.2 percent increase in the number of present rapes reported from fiscal year 1992-93.

UI student Courtney L. McCammond, 23, who was killed in a car crash Saturday, will be remembered as a lover of nature.

"She loved the outdoors; she liked to fish, hunt mushrooms, gather raspberries — anything with the outdoors," her father, Frank McCammond, said. "She was learning how to clean fish and said, 'I am going to meet some nice guy and teach him how to gut fish.'"

"She liked music; she played the guitar and sang. She also liked to cruise the Internet." McCammond, a graduate student in science, suffered from meningitis that she contracted when she was 5 years old. Since then, she has had recurring seizures. Her father said he suspects a seizure may have been the cause of the accident. "She thought she had them under control, but I think that may have been it," he said.

Frank McCammond said his daughter's license had a medication restriction.

McCammond was working toward her master's degree in science after completing her undergraduate work in anthropology at Iowa State University in 1992.

Her father said his daughter had hoped to work in a museum after completing her education.

Funeral services are scheduled for 1 p.m. today at Hamilton's Funeral Home in Des Moines. Burial will follow at Elmwood Cemetery in Minburn, Iowa. Memorial donations may be made to the American Epilepsy Foundation.

Also killed in the accident was Mark L. Mizerski, 41, of Lincoln, Neb.

GOALS OF PROGRAM QUESTIONED

Council carefully regards proposal for armed officers

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

A proposal to put armed police officers in Iowa City schools received a lukewarm welcome from several City Council members Monday night.

Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake said the program, which was proposed in May 1993, will consist of two full-time officers in the junior high schools and will cost the city between $3,000 and $7,700.

"This program is one of prevention," Winkelhake said. "The school sets the priorities, whether it's low-ahead with 8 a.m. parking meter enforcement. The ordinance to raise parking ramp fees 5 cents per hour will be addressed at tonight's formal meeting.

City staff were also directed to list options for traffic control around Willow Creek Park. The Council wants to develop a policy rather than decide traffic control issues on a case-by-case basis so that the city isn't left open to liability.

"You can't willy-nilly put traffic control in and then say, 'Well, this isn't working, take it out and try something else,' consistently," City Manager Steve Atkins said.

"This program is one of prevention. The school sets the priorities, whether it's lowering truancy or something else."

ering truancy or something else."

The city would contribute 10 to 15 percent of the program's budget and would have to replace two full-time officers on the street.

Council member Bruno Pigott questioned the need for officers in schools.

"What's the goal to be accomplished here?" he asked. "Is it to address problems that are in the school already, increase a friendly relationship or build a friendly respect between youngsters and police?"

"These are all things that we may want to do, but we have to ask if this is the correct way to go about reaching our goal," he said.

The school board will consider the proposal at its Aug. 9 meeting and the Council will discuss it again at its Aug. 30 meeting.

Branstad opts to allow press at ethics probe

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Monday changed his mind and said he would welcome reporters at his meeting with ethics investigators looking into the governor's ties to his former top aide.

Branstad

At his weekly news conference, the governor initially rejected suggestions that reporters be present when the ethics investigators question him about contacts he had with former aide Doug Gross.

"I'm not interested in a circus," Branstad said. "I am interested in giving you facts and information."

After his news conference, however, spokeswoman Christina Martin said the governor had asked that the meeting be open.

Kay Williams, executive director of the Iowa Ethics and Campaign Disclosure Board, said the questioning would be in private. "I don't want to O.J. Simpson this," said Williams, referring to the coverage of the investigation and court hearings into the death of the former NFL football player's ex-wife and her male friend.

The exchanges came as Branstad was once again peppered with questions about the board's investigation of Gross' role in pushing for a new prison at Clarinda.

Gross had repeated contacts with the governor about the prison project, though he wasn't registered to lobby for the project. Gross says he wasn't lobbying the governor, but merely keeping him posted about the project status.

The board last month voted to investigate Gross' role, and investigators Wednesday will question Branstad and aides about their actions.

The governor said he would have little news to offer the investigators.

"I'm going to give them all the information I've already given you," Branstad told reporters. "I had no discussions with Doug Gross on the merits of this issue.

I've already told you everything I'm going to tell them."

"You can compare notes with them and find out what questions they've asked," Branstad said.

Branstad then dispatched Martin to assure reporters he had asked that Wednesday's meeting be open.

Williams said investigations by her office are always conducted in private.

"I'm not interested in a circus. I am interested in giving you facts and information."

Gov. Terry Branstad

"We have always felt that confidentiality was necessary to protect the integrity of the investigation," Williams said.

She said interviews with participants should be private, in part so they don't hear what the other is saying.

"At some point in time, all this information will be public,"

Williams said.

On another topic, Branstad was receptive to suggestions by U.S. Sen. Charles Grassley that Gross should voluntarily agree to stay away from clients seeking to do business with the state.

Grassley said that would ease perceptions that Gross is trying to cash in on his ties to the governor's office.

"I think that's a thoughtful suggestion from Senator Grassley," Branstad said. "I don't think I can tell him what to do in his private law practice."

Seeking to regain the offensive, Branstad said Democrat Bonnie Campbell should release tax returns for her entire tenure as attorney general. She has released 1993 tax returns.

Campbell said she would make earlier tax returns available to reporters.

"Let's not see this for anything more than it is," she said. "It is a smoke screen on the part of Terry Branstad to change the subject."

MOVIE REVIEW

'It Could Happen': a small, surprising miracle

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

As modern urban fairy tales go, "It Could Happen to You" is surprisingly believable, halfway charming and at times downright captivating. What would appear to be a hackneyed "Cinderella" rehash with a twist of "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" thrown in for good measure is actually a warm, funny look at karma in the big city.

Nicholas Cage, whose nasal drone and incessant whining are usually enough to incite Buddhist monks to riot, turns in a gentle and subtly rendered performance as Charlie Lang, a Manhattan beat cop with a good heart and really bitchy wife. Chuck loves his job and he's good at it. Trouble is, Chuck's wife Muriel (Rosie Perez) has the social and financial ambitions of Donald Trump ... ambitions which are pretty hard to fulfill on a cop's meager paycheck.

But the happy face of karma smiles on those who wait. Chuck buys a lottery ticket and does his good deed for the day minutes later; short on change for a meal ticket, he tells his waitress Yvonne (Bridget Fonda) that if his ticket wins, he'll split the cash with her fifty-fifty. If not, he'll still come back and leave a tip.

Fortune turns her wheel in Chuck's favor, and he and his wife end up with a cool $4 million cash. Needless to say, Muriel finds it pretty tough to give up half of her hard-earned millions to a waitress, but Chuck is so damned nice (in a Jimmy Stewart sort of way) that he has to keep his promise.

All of this is fodder enough for a feature film, but screenwriter Jane Anderson smartly chooses to wind this portion of the story up during the first half-hour. She spends the remainder of her time on the relationship between Chuck, Muriel, Yvonne and the city which has showered them all in good luck.

The first half of the film, full of charm and warmth, would seem hard for Anderson to top. However, she and director Andrew Bergman ("Honeymoon in Vegas," "The Freshman") strike the mother lode during act two by showing how fate screws with people and how people screw fate. The requisite budding romance is handled with skill and restraint, and a test of Chuck's willingness to be swept along by the ebb and flow of life, which he passes with flying colors.

Truly likable characters in film come along about as often as annular eclipses, an axiom which turns "It Could Happen to You" into a small miracle. Even Muriel, Chuck's nagging, greedy ball and chain, wins a place in the heart, due in no small part to Rosie Perez's quirky style and spitfire nastiness.

Bridget Fonda, who is usually so unassuming one forgets that she's on-screen, has finally grown some presence thanks to a well-drawn role. Yvonne has been plagued by bad luck all her life, but instead of playing it sympathetically, Fonda makes a quiet joke of it. In describing her bad karma to Chuck, she says, "When I was a kid, my dog died of parvo. I still don't know what parvo is."

In lines like that, "It Could Happen to You" promises great things. From the very start, when Isaac Hayes appears in a cameo role as a narrator named "Angel," we are conditioned to expect that good and bad will come full circle with a little heavenly intervention, even in Manhattan.

All right, so New York may not be Nirvana ... but it's nice to be reminded that good things eventually do happen to the right people.

Comic cast can't bail out lame, outdated 'Airheads'

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

The movie "Airheads" contains more hair spray and seminaked women than a Bon Jovi video, but Brendan Fraser's mousseed-up mop is nowhere near enough to camouflage the pointy heads of the individuals who perpetrated this drooling mess.

With this film, screenwriter Rich Wilkes and director Michael Lehmann ("Heathers," "Hudson Hawk") had the perfect chance to ridicule at great length the world of major record-label power and chart busting that mainstream music in the '90s has become. The problem is that Wilkes seems to be trapped in some sort of bizarre culture warp, wherein everything that heads" is about. A trio of feeble-minded minstrels (played with true plebeian sensibilities by Fraser, Steve Buscemi and Adam Sandler) inadvertently take hostages at a radio station while attempting to get their demo tape played. Armed only with their decidedly thin wits and water pistols filled with pepper sauce, they demand to be heard; it's basically every high-school head-banger's wet dream.

That alone is not enough to carry a film which purports to have its finger on the pulse. What makes "Airheads" look so promising is a stellar cast of sharp comedic actors, the likes of which hasn't been glimpsed since the "Airplane" movies.

With Michael McKean (television's "Laverne & Shirley," "Spinal Tap"), Michael Richards (Kramer on television's "Seinfeld"), Buscemi ("Reservoir Dogs") and Joe Mantegna ("House of Games") as an aging rock disc jockey, "Airheads" would look to have the makings of a fine ensemble acting effort at the very least.

But the insurmountable obstacle here is the script. Devoid of any insight which couldn't be obtained from the latest episode of "Beavis and Butt-head," the writing turns out to be a granite life preserver, even to a cast of buoyant veterans. Some of the comic talents involved come off looking utterly bewildered; Chris Farley of "Saturday Night Live" looks constipated every time he appears, while Ernie Hudson (who was quietly hilarious in "Ghostbusters") is unwisely given a straight role as "the cop with a heart of platinum."

Like those mysterious record executives and higher-ups in the film, the decision-makers behind "Airheads" have their fingers on the pulse of a corpse. Rock 'n' roll as we knew it in the decade of Men at Work and Devo is dead or at least transmogrified beyond recognition (thank God). For people who think Quiet Riot is still the pinnacle of America's contribution to rock music, "Airheads" will be something to tell the spandex-clad grandkids about.

But until someone from this decade gets inspired to tell it like it is, the rest of us will have to get our laughs at pop music by renting "Spinal Tap" or tracking Whitney Houston's career.

should be satirized (with the possible exception of easy listening music) is held in nearly mystical reverence.

Translated into terms more readily understood by those of us who made the great leap into this decade without a hitch, "Airheads" holds up a model of pop music from way back in the dark ages known as the 1980s; brainless drivelt triumphs over substance, Def Leppard is a role model and Seattle is reduced to "that place where it rains a lot."

Wilkes' knowledge of what contemporary music has become is too heavily influenced by outdated thinking, and that cripples "Airheads" fatally. Even the plot itself, which is inherently amusing, can't slide out from under the weight of Wilkes' retrograde analysis of current affairs.

Anyone who ever dreamed of being a musician knows what "Air-

WEEKEND SHOW

Danny Frazier/The Daily Iowan
The UI's Summer Opera — a double-header presentation of "Dido and Aeneas" and "Venus and Adonis" — gave a strong showing this weekend despite some last-minute staff emergencies. The operas' three performances reportedly went off without a hitch.

Summer opera smoothly weathers crisis

Lisa Anne Taggart
The Daily Iowan

Despite last-minute replacements in two key orchestra positions, this summer's opera still managed to rock Clapp Recital Hall last weekend.

Due to a death in the family, University Symphony Orchestra conductor William Hatcher and his wife, harpsichordist and vocal coach Darlene Lawrence, were replaced on Tuesday by chorus master Lawrence Bach and faculty member Richard Bloesch. The audience heard no wavering, however, in the 20-piece orchestra.

Friday night's production showcased opera Iowa-style: musically impressive, but with an informal feel and with community participation from a part played by the university's president to dances by local schoolchildren.

Stage director Beaumont Glass said he chose the two one-act operas, "Venus and Adonis" and "Dido and Aeneas," particularly because of the intimacy of Clapp Hall. (The production was held in Clapp because of renovations in Hancher Auditorium.) They were wise choices; though not the typical large-scale opera theater extravaganza, the two short operas came across as musical and vocal powerhouses on Clapp's small stage.

Stand-in Bach, a conducting doctoral student at the UI, had three days to prepare for the conducting position. But he said he was pleased with all three of last weekend's performances.

"All three went really well," he said. "The orchestra did fantastic." Though he said he wasn't expecting the performance to boost him into fame, he said, "It will look good on my resume."

The performers also rose to the occasion. UI President Hunter Rawlings, despite his height, did not overshadow the singers in his first-ever Iowa opera role of King Charles II, for whom the opera was originally written in 1682. Rawlings' part as on-stage audience and royal womanizer consisted of much hand kissing of court ladies, which he played in a regal and understated manner.

But the stars of "Venus" were clearly the lead roles. From the moment Jennifer White (Venus) and Kyle Ketelsen (Adonis) took the stage to sing the praises of their doomed love, it was clear that the audience was in the hands of gifted performers. Erin Lytle and Jonathon Thull, respectively, took the lead roles in Saturday's show.

Cupid's role, played on Friday by Emily Truckenbrod, was sometimes stiff and could have profited from more imaginative stage direction, though her voice was lovely. Nancy Hagen took the role Saturday.

John Ector had a nice, though brief, solo during the hunting scene, just before Adonis received the fatal wound that is the great tragedy of the story.

Dancers Giovanna Rivera, Natasha Lesser, John Cowan, Jake Stigers and Marc Kotz, who also choreographed both productions, punctuated the scenes with charming though sometimes rough-edged numbers.

Child dancers added to the informality and cuteness of the shows, playing cupids in "Venus" and baby witches in "Dido." Very clever choreography in the latter gave their performance real panache.

The group numbers, particularly after the death of Aeneas, were all breathtaking; the powerful chorus left even the seats humming.

The second opera, "Dido," was also led by two strong voices with Lisa White as Queen Dido and Jeffrey Fields as Aeneas on Friday and Sunday. Barbara Buddin and Drew Poling took the roles Saturday.

Taken from Virgil's "Aeneid," where the Trojan hero Aeneas shipwrecks in Carthage and falls in love with Queen Dido, the story was supplemented by Henry Purcell in 1689 with a band of witches who trick Aeneas into leaving his love, the queen, so that she kills herself.

The final duet between White and Fields, whose costume did him a disservice, was probably the production's most beautiful moment.

The simple set designed by Margaret Wenk was put to more creative use in this opera with a tower and fire pit materializing from the backdrop.

LEADERS PROMISE A FIGHT

Haitians are on defensive toward impending invasion

Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Supporters of Haiti's military rulers declared their intention Monday to fight back — even if it means death — in the face of a U.N. resolution that paves the way for a U.S.-led invasion.

"To those who are preparing to invade, the Haitian people declare that they will fight them in the cities and in the countryside, they will fight them in the shacks and in the palaces, they will fight them day and night," said presidential aide Carl Denis.

"The blood will flow," said Frantz Robert Monde, president of the lower house of Parliament. "I know I am going to die."

"The foreigners who arrive will land on scorched earth. The world will see what the U.S. is responsible for," Monde said, alluding to the burning by Haitian insurgents of Cap Haitien, the second-largest city, during the war for independence against France in the early 19th century.

A resolution approved Sunday by the U.N. Security Council lays the legal groundwork for a U.S.-led invasion to oust the military and restore deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

In a radio and television address Monday, Haiti's de facto president, Emile Jonassaint, declared a state of siege and began preparing the population for "the battle of Haiti."

The mood was grim at the presidential palace Monday afternoon. Jonassaint canceled a scheduled interview with the Associated Press. Conversations with Jonassaint's aides and other officials disclosed a sense of resignation about eventual military intervention in this Caribbean nation.

"We waited for the sentence," said Gilles Hendrick, a politician. "It has been pronounced. It's the electric chair with no appeal. Haiti is on death row."

Jonassaint, 81, was installed as president in May by a minority of army-backed lawmakers. He assumed the prime minister's post and named a group of extreme rightists and nationalists to the Cabinet.

"The battle of Haiti is under way," he said in his 3 a.m. address. "We will fight it with all our might and means. It will be hard and implacable."

Despite the official stance, many Haitians, particularly the poor, would welcome a foreign invasion. Some diplomats feel that talk of resistance is bravado and that in a showdown, the average soldier would throw down his weapon and melt into the population.

Sen. Thomas Edy Dupiton, who was at Jonassaint's side during the early morning broadcast, was one of the few who thought violence could still be avoided.

"It's never too late," he said at the presidential palace. "We can bring our case before the International Court of Justice in the Hague. The letter Aristide sent is not clear."

Aristide wrote to the Security Council calling on the international community to "take prompt and decisive action" in Haiti, taken to mean approval of an invasion.

Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, has said 14 countries have offered troops but has not named them. Argentina's president said Monday he was requesting 600 troops for the force.

According to the 1987 constitution, a state of siege can be declared in case of civil war or invasion. The executive order must be signed by the president and the prime minister, followed by an immediate convening of the National Assembly. Jonassaint did not call the National Assembly into session.

MASSIVE EFFORTS PRESENTLY UNDER WAY

Official anticipates gains in Rwandan camps

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — French engineers bulldozed the dead into mass graves Monday as U.S. Air Force planes dropped more aid and equipment to Rwandan refugees.

Yet the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, on her first visit to two camps crowded with more than a million people, predicted "things are bad but they're going to get better."

Sadako Ogata saw Red Cross and Doctors Without Borders volunteers saving the lives of cholera sufferers with quick infusions of water and minerals. She saw U.S. Army bulldozers shoving aside volcanic rock to create roads for water tankers and French army engineers bulldozing the dead into mass graves.

Ogata said the monumental efforts impressed her but "will have to continue. This is just the first round."

She said doctors warned her that "cholera, which we were most worried about, is going to go down. But dysentery is going up. And for everything you need water."

The U.N. Children's Fund on Monday estimated 50,000 people have died in the camps in the last two weeks, twice as many as the UNHCR figure of 20,000.

Elizabeth Dole, president of the American Red Cross, visited refugee camps and an orphanage caring for about 4,000 children. The U.S. branch has donated $18 million toward an International Red Cross appeal for $100 million of Rwandan aid.

Clearly upset by what she had seen at the Kibumba camp about 20 miles north of Goma, Dole said, "When you see more than Elizabeth Dole, president of the American Red Cross, comforts two Rwandan Hutu refugee children during a visit to the SOS Orphanage Monday in Goma, Zaire. Tens of thousands of children became separated from their parents or orphaned during the flight of some 1.2 million refugees to Zaire. Monday, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees predicted things will improve.

300,000 people with not enough water or any quick way to get it in ... you don't know what to say."

U.S. Army and Air Force efforts to increase the flow of cholera-free water to Kibumba gained momentum Monday. One transport brought in the first of three U.S. water tankers able to carry 3,000 gallons each, while nine tankers donated from Finland were expected on a U.S. flight today.

Army engineers bulldozed two paths through Kibumba, where traffic has been slowed to a crawl by so many people. They hope the paths will make it easier for U.N. trucks carrying water from an American water-purification site in Goma to get to the camp, dump their loads and return for more.

COUNTRIES TRY TO OVERCOME DIFFERENCES

Poland commemorates historical uprising

Frank Bajak
Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — A nation free for only five years marked the 50th anniversary Monday of the Warsaw Uprising, a valiant struggle against the Nazis that might have succeeded had Stalin not held back the advancing Red Army.

Sirens sounded across the city at 5 p.m., the hour the order to attack came down on Aug. 1, 1944. Veterans all across the city stood silent, many from the very spots where they had fought and watched friends die.

With German President Roman Herzog at his side, President Lech Walesa said Germany, Russia and Poland must strive to overcome their bitter past.

"History has bound us. We have to overcome our past. We have to learn lessons from history," he said before lunch with dignitaries including Vice President Al Gore and Prime Minister John Major of Britain.

Historians have questioned whether the doomed 63-day revolt, World War II's biggest uprising on German-occupied soil, was a waste of 200,000 Polish lives — nine in 10 of them civilian.

A member of the military honor guard helps his commander combat the heat by mopping his brow during the ceremonies commemorating the 50th anniversary of the 1944 Warsaw Uprising at the tomb of the unknown soldier in Warsaw, Poland, Monday.

But the revolt's leaders in the underground Home Army, loyal to a London-based exile government, said they had no alternative. Home Army fighters had in previous weeks freed eastern cities only to wind up in Soviet shackles.

The uprising, a desperate attempt at self-liberation by 40,000 hopelessly outgunned fighters, became a symbol of national resistance through the 44 years of Soviet domination that followed.

Herzog expressed shame as he toured the capital that Nazi troops leveled.

"I ask forgiveness for what Germans did to you," he said in a speech to uprising survivors, Polish leaders and foreign dignitaries.

He had accepted Walesa's invitation to attend the anniversary, though surveys showed half the Polish people were opposed.

President Boris Yeltsin of Russia turned down a similar invitation, saying he was overloaded with work.

Poles took his absence as an indication of continued rocky relations with Russia, which has opposed Poland's fervent desire to join NATO.

Yeltsin sent his chief of staff, Sergei Filatov, who said Russia "has the power and determination to take account of the shameful mistakes of the past and not to let them be repeated."

Filatov read a letter from Yeltsin with a similar tone, but there was no apology for the Soviet domination that followed the uprising's failure.

The revolt's failure allowed Stalin to cement control over postwar Poland, which remained under Communist rule until 1989.

FIREFIGHTERS EXHAUSTED

Washington wildfires require aid of Marines

David Foster
Associated Press

ENTIAT, Wash. — The Marines joined the war against wildfires raging across the West Monday, filling a camp in a smoke-filled valley near this central Washington town to help battle the biggest blaze.

"It's kind of eerie," said Sgt. Mark Grebets, puffing a cigarette. "It reminds me of the gulf war with all the smoke."

The first of 1,100 Marines from California's Camp Pendleton arrived Sunday with more heading into the woods Monday and today.

After more training, they will be welcome relief to some of the 2,775 sleep-starved firefighters trying to choke off a 90,900-acre fire burning across pine-covered ridges and valleys in the eastern Cascade Range.

For the civilian crews already on the fire lines, the weather provided a break Monday with a temperature inversion keeping the wind down. But that also held smoke near the ground as fires in the area smoldered along the ground, said Stan Hinatsu, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman.

Bus loads of Marines traveled up a winding road to a ranch donated as a campsite. They searched for clear spots among the cow patties and rattlesnakes and pitched a city of green two-person tents as fire crept through the woods on either side of the broad meadow.

Marines rolling out of their tents Monday headed for on-the-job training near their camp, shoveling dirt onto lingering spot fires and performing other fire mop-up chores, said Staff Sgt. Nathan Portman.

They join the battle in earnest today, working 12-hour shifts, Portman said.

In addition to the Marines, 1,000 soldiers in two Army battalions are training at Fort Hood, Texas, and expected to join firefighters in Idaho and Montana on Wednesday, Army spokeswoman Dixie Porter said.

The military was called in by federal officials who have exhausted their supply of state and federal firefighters. More than 14,000 civilian firefighters are battling 26 major fires in eight Western states, according to the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho.

"With the sheer number of fires and the need for people, we just couldn't do it ourselves," fire center spokesman Joe Colwell said. It's the seventh summer in a decade that the military has been called in to help.

OPPOSITION GEARS UP FOR VOTE

Alternative health plan readied for Congress

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell labored over the details of his eagerly awaited health-reform plan Monday and said "those who don't want change" had waged an expensive effort to torpedo the top item on President Clinton's agenda.

After meeting with Clinton, Mitchell said the legislation he will unveil today would eventually provide "insurance for all Americans." He predicted the Democratic-controlled Congress will approve a health reform bill this year, despite vast differences between his measure and the one outlined Friday by House Democratic leaders.

Clinton, too, attacked those who criticize his program. Speaking in Jersey City, N.J., with the Statue of Liberty as a backdrop, the president said, "Don't let the fear mongers, don't let the dividers, don't let the people who disseminate false information frighten the United States Congress into walking away from the opportunity of a lifetime."

Votes are expected in both houses of Congress over the next two to three weeks on health reform, cli-maxing one of the most fiercely fought battles in recent memory. For his part, Clinton scheduled a Wednesday night prime-time news conference at which he is expected to appeal for support.

Mitchell has been working for weeks to craft legislation that can satisfy Clinton's demand for universal coverage and still win majority support in the Senate. The task is made vastly more complicated by strong opposition to Clinton's proposal, contained in the House measure, to require businesses to pay 80 percent of the cost of insuring workers and families.

Mitchell's bill is expected to rely on insurance reforms and subsidies for low-income pregnant women, children, people between jobs, small businesses and perhaps others in an attempt to spread coverage. He's expected to hold mandatory employer requirements in reserve until 2001 and employ them only if coverage hasn't reached 95 percent of the population.

Even then, businesses and employees would be called on to split the cost of insurance fifty-five, and small businesses would be exempt. States where 95 percent coverage had been reached would be exempt.

There were signs that Mitchell's careful work was paying dividends.

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., a strong supporter of Clinton's original bill, told reporters he was comfortable with the majority leader's approach.

Mitchell's task is to hold the liberals like Rockefeller in line while attracting enough moderate and conservative Democrats to amass a majority.

One moderate, Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., who helped craft a Finance Committee bill that shuns mandatory employer contributions, said Mitchell's approach was "entirely reasonable."

Another Finance Committee moderate Democrat, Sen. David Boren of Oklahoma, expressed opposition, while a third, John Breaux of Louisiana, said, "It has to be improved." Breaux said Mitchell was still working over the details, saying the majority leader had solicited his advice a few moments earlier about a detail of the legislation.

Speaking with reporters outside the White House, Mitchell said little on the specifics of his plan.

"I think a large expensive ... effort has been made by those who don't want reform, those who don't want change, those who want to continue the current disaster system to oppose the bill," he said.

Republicans in both houses of Congress generally oppose mandatory employer contributions in any form, meaning the Democratic leadership has less maneuvering room in its effort to find a majority.

Forty of the Senate's 44 Republican senators favor a measure drafted by GOP leader Bob Dole to rely on insurance changes and subsidies to spread coverage.

In the House, a bipartisan group is attempting to draft a measure along the same lines that can topple the measure unveiled Friday by the Democratic leadership.

While their bill is completed in outline form, House leaders are still struggling to resolve several sticking points, including whether a standard package of insurance benefits should cover abortion, and if so, whether any restrictions should be applied.

Crim, Cubs rolling, beat Florida 8-5

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Chuck Crim was victorious in his first start in seven years, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 8-5 victory Monday night over the Florida Marlins, who lost their seventh straight game.

Rick Wilkins and Rey Sanchez each drove in two runs in a five-run first inning as the Cubs won for the 10th game in their last 14 games. Crim (5-4), a last-minute replacement for the injured Mike Morgan, gave up six hits and two runs over 5 1/2 innings. He did not walk a batter and struck out four.

It was Crim's sixth major-league start and first since 1987 when he pitched for Milwaukee. His only other win as a starter was June 2, 1987, over Kansas City, in his first major-league start.

Crim's longest relief outing this season was three innings. His previous longest start was 6 1/2 innings on June 16, 1987, against Minnesota.

Randy Myers pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

Pat Rapp (6-7) took the loss, giving up four hits and six walks over four innings.

The Cubs loaded the bases with two outs in the first on walks to Mike Malsudian and Derrick May and a fielding error by shortstop Kurt Abbott on Glennallen Hill's grounder.

Wilkins' two-run single scored Malsudian and May. Hill then stole home on a double steal, with Wilkins advancing, to make it 3-0. Steve Buechele was hit by a pitch, and both he and Wilkins scored on Sanchez's double for a 5-0 lead.

Benito Santiago hit his 10th home run with one out in the second, and the Cubs regained a five-run lead in the fourth on May's sacrifice fly to make it 6-1.

Rockies 8, Astros 3
HOUSTON — Lance Painter pitched four-hit ball over five innings and Mike Kingery had four hits as the Rockies improved to 17-4 against Houston over the last two seasons.

It was Houston's fourth straight loss as the Astros dropped 3 1/2 games behind the Cincinnati Reds in the NL Central Division. The Astros led the division by a half game five days ago.

Jeff Bagwell hit his 37th homer for the Astros, a two-run shot in the fourth that tied Jimmy Wynn's club record. Bagwell pushed his major league-leading RBI total to 107.

Painter (4-5) struck out two and walked none.

Pete Harnisch (7-5) gave up nine hits, six runs and two walks through 5 1/2 innings.

Braves 4, Mets 2
NEW YORK — Greg Mad-

dux pitched an eight-hitter for his major-league leading ninth complete game for the Braves.

Maddux (14-6) struck out eight and walked one as the Braves won for the fourth time in five games.

Fred McGriff hit his 28th homer of the season off loser Jason Jacome (4-2) in the second.

Expos 3, Cardinals 2, 10 innings

MONTREAL — Marquis Grissom won it for the Expos with an inside-the-park homer off Rich Rodriguez in the bottom of the 10th inning.

Grissom's 10th homer hit the glove of Gerald Young in deep center field. Young tried to make an over-the-shoulder catch, but the ball glanced off his glove and caromed along the wall towards left field as Grissom, who never hesitated, raced around the bases and beat shortstop Ozzie Smith's relay home.

The National League East-leading Expos have won 12 of their last 13 games, while St. Louis lost for the eighth time in nine outings.

Orioles 1, Twins 0
MINNEAPOLIS — Cal Ripken became just the second major-leaguer to play in 2,000 straight games, reaching the mark Monday night in the Baltimore Orioles' win over the Minnesota Twins.

Ripken got a standing ovation from the 27,712 fans when he came to bat in the first inning after it was announced that he was playing No. 2,000. Always the reluctant hero, he waved to the crowd, then waited a moment before taking off his helmet to acknowledge the appreciation.

Ripken, trailing only Lou Gehrig's streak of 2,130 games, went 0-for-4.

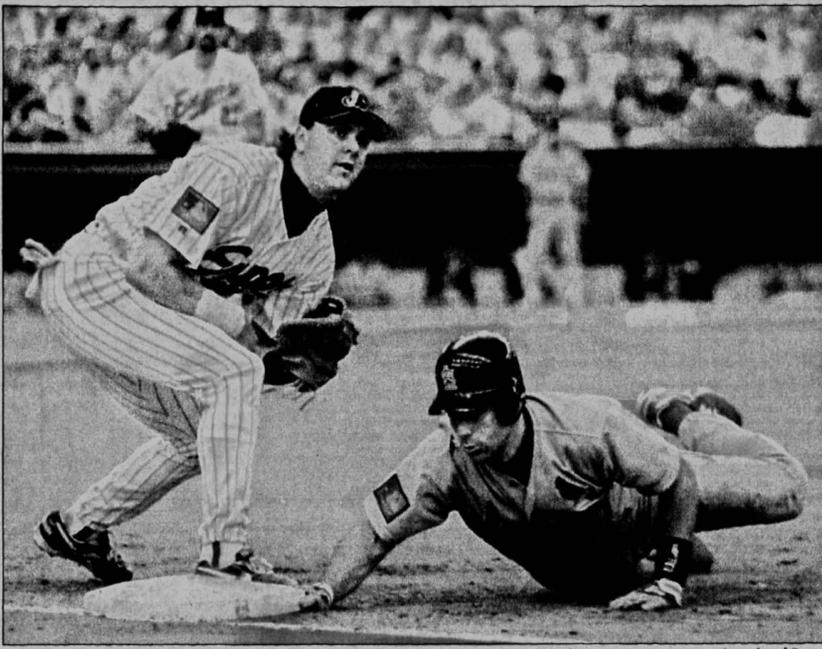

Arthur Rhodes (2-5) pitched a seven-hitter a day after being recalled from Triple-A Rochester. Baltimore scored an unearned run on Mark McLemore's single in the second off Pat Mahomes (8-5).

Blue Jays 6, Red Sox 2
Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 3

BOSTON — Mo Vaughn homered to cap a four-run first inning as the Boston gained a split. Toronto won the first game as Joe Carter hit his 300th career homer and Pat Hentgen pitched a six-hitter for his sixth complete game.

In the second game, Nate Minchey (2-3) — called up from the minors between games of the doubleheader — was helped by three double plays. He allowed eight hits in seven innings and Ken Ryan finished for his 12th save. Boston's first five batters all had hits against Brad Cornett (1-3).

Carter hit his 25th homer of the season off Steve Farr for the Blue Jays' final two runs in the opener, his 96th and 97th RBIs. Hentgen (13-7) struck out four and walked three as Toronto beat Boston for the first time this season after five losses. Aaron Sele (7-7) allowed seven hits, three unearned runs and five walks in seven innings.

Montreal Expos' Larry Walker looks to first base Cardinals' Todd Zeile off base during second inning action Monday in Montreal.

Yankees 8, Brewers 3
MILWAUKEE — Melido Perez (9-3) gave up five hits in eight innings and Mike Gallego hit a two-run homer.

Perez hit Kevin Seitzer just below the left eye with a pitch in the third. Seitzer left under his own power and was taken to a hospital. The Brewers said he sustained a sinus fracture.

Indians 6, Tigers 2
CLEVELAND — Paul Sorrento, Carlos Baerga and Manny Ramirez homered for Cleveland, playing without suspended Albert Belle.

Jason Grimsley (4-1) struck out eight in 7 2/3 innings to help stop the Indians' three-game losing streak. They pulled within 1 1/2 games of AL Central-leading Chicago, who were idle.

Lou Whitaker homered, doubled and scored twice for the Tigers, who are 0-4 at Jacobs Field. Mike Moore (10-10) was the loser.

Royals 4, Athletics 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mark Gubicza (7-8) allowed three hits in eight shutout innings as Kansas City extended its winning streak to 10 games, the club's longest in 16 years. Jeff Montgomery got his 24th save of the season.

don't exclude from the process any well-intentioned people who wish to become involved."

Orza said he wasn't sure how to interpret Sunday's remarks by Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf, who said he would be willing to have an agreement without a salary cap. Orza suggested that Reinsdorf communicate directly with the union or convey his views through Ravitch.

Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council, said Reinsdorf merely was trying to say his team was so well off it needed no change.

"If anybody thinks this is any crack in unity, they're sadly mistaken," Selig said. "Jerry, I think correctly, says there are 19 or 20 teams losing money and even though he's one of the fortunate ones now, he is part of a group that's determined we have change."

Meanwhile, a coalition on fan groups called for a fans' strike Aug. 11, the last day of games before the strike deadline.

inning, and played more than 99 percent of innings during that time.

All that at a time when players miss games for all sorts of reasons.

Ken Griffey Jr. sat out a day last week because he was in a slump. Dave Winfield missed a day because he was facing a tough pitcher. Andres Galarraga had his hand fractured by a pitch. Rick Sutcliffe was suspended for throwing at a hitter and Albert Belle was benched for using a corked bat.

In all, approximately 75 players were on the disabled list last week, about one-tenth of all major-leaguers. During Ripken's streak, more than 3,100 players have gone on the disabled list.

"That's incredibly impressive because around here, we've had times when we had to talk players into going out and playing one game,"

"Maybe the owners and players will know that there is some fan organization out there — I don't mean just our organization, but fans in general — and will listen," Frank Sullivan of Fans First in Cleveland.

He urged fans to chant "No strike, no strike," during the third inning of games this week and next.

"The fans are the only people with any idealism left in baseball," he said. "Perhaps these millionaires on both sides of the issue can resolve their problems a different way."

The operators of the "Field of Dreams" sent letters to Fehr and Ravitch Monday offering to lend the field in Dyersville, Iowa, for negotiating sessions. The playing area was carved from a cornfield for the 1989 movie "Field of Dreams."

Turner who hasn't been involved in the day-to-day operations of the Braves in recent years, also urged a settlement.

"I'm going to be devastated if there's a baseball strike," he said. "It looks like there's going to be one."

said Texas manager Kevin Kennedy, a teammate of Ripken's in the minors.

Going into Monday, by the way, the second-longest current playing streak was held by Florida's Jeff Conine. He had played a grand total of 266 games.

Through it, Ripken has fielded more questions about the streak than grounders. He's caught more criticism about it than popups.

"As soon as I stop hitting or go into a slump, the slump becomes more of a distraction," he said. "People are very opinionated. Anytime I don't hit, people say the answer is to take a day off."

Fortunately, he hasn't heard too much of that this season. He started his 11th straight All-Star game last month, and began Monday night's game batting .315 with 12 home runs and 70 RBI.

Irish athletic director announces retirement

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Dick Rosenthal, athletic director at Notre Dame since 1987, will retire next year and be succeeded by Canada's ambassador to Ireland.

Rosenthal announced his plans Monday, saying he wanted to spend more time with his family. The retirement becomes effective Aug. 1, 1995.

"One of things I'll look back on is the joy of assembling the coaches we have at the university. It didn't take me five minutes to figure out good teams are a product of good coaches."

Rosenthal also was responsible for an exclusive contract with NBC-TV for home football games, plans for an expansion of Notre Dame Stadium, the hiring of John MacLeod to replace Digger Phelps as basketball coach and, starting in September 1995, affiliation with the Big East Conference in all sports except football.

The school's next athletic director is a former Irish athlete: Michael A. Wadsworth, a 1966 Notre Dame graduate and Canadian ambassador to Ireland since 1989.

Wadsworth, 51, whose appointment as ambassador ends later this year, was in Europe on diplomatic business.

No video of Jordan homer

HOOVER, Ala. (AP) — Michael Jordan is looking for a videotape of his first professional home run.

The Birmingham Barons outfielder sent a ball over the fence at Hoover Metropolitan Stadium Saturday, but the local television photographers had already packed it in.

"It was the bottom of the eighth and a late night," said team spokesman Chris Pika. "We would like to have a copy of it, and I think Michael would, too."

So the Barons are trying to get out the word to anyone in the record crowd of 13,751 who might have had a camera running when Jordan got his homer.

No reward is being offered, but something might be worked out.

"We're just looking to see if anyone has a really good, complete tape," Pika said. "If they do, we'll go from there."

Lakers assistant arrested

CORRALES, N.M. (AP) — Michael Cooper, the former Los Angeles Lakers star and current assistant coach, was arrested for battery and assault after threatening his wife with a vase.

He was arrested the night of July 27 after police responded to a domestic disturbance call at Cooper's home.

According to a Corrales Police Department report released Monday, Cooper was arrested and taken to St. Joseph West Mesa Hospital for observation. He later was booked into the Sandoval County Jail and then released.

Cooper, 38, could not be immediately reached for comment Monday night. His wife, Wanda, said he was in Los Angeles.

"They make it sound as if the man was absolutely killing me," she said. "That's not the case at all."

She called her husband's conduct completely out of character.

"Michael has never expressed anger like that," she said. "This is a total aberration of who he is."

She said she was concerned people would look at this in a similar light as O.J. Simpson. She said she had been told a Los Angeles television station had led into a report Monday on the Simpson case with a story about Cooper's arrest.

"I don't even want this discussed in that arena," she said.

Braves' Turner wants Clinton to assist with strike

Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — Labor Secretary Robert Reich met separately last week with the lead negotiators for baseball players and owners, and the Clinton Administration said Monday it is willing to assist in the stalled talks.

Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner said Monday the government should become involved in the salary-cap dispute, which is threatening baseball's eighth work stoppage in 22 years. The sides said they will meet next on Wednesday, a day later than originally scheduled. The union has set an Aug. 12 deadline for a walkout.

"If a strike occurs, sometime over the winter or next spring, Clinton will have to step in and there will have to be government arbitration," Turner said in St. Petersburg, Russia, where he is attending the Goodwill Games. "Why not do it now, if you're going to do it then?"

Baseball fans ready to strike before players

CLEVELAND — Baseball fan organizations, angry over the threatened players' strike and promoting a one-day boycott of major-league baseball, moved up the day they hope fans will stay away in droves.

"Fans First" and a handful of allied groups are calling for a fans' strike Aug. 11, one day before the strike date set by the players' union.

"Maybe the owners and players will know that there is some fan organization out there — I don't mean just our organization, but fans in general — and will listen," said Frank Sullivan of Fans First.

"The fans are the only people with any idealism left in baseball," he said. "Perhaps these millionaires on both sides of the issue can resolve their problems a different way."

Fans First initially planned an Aug. 13 fans' strike, but that date was set before the players' union scheduled its date.

"We'll quit on them before they quit on us," Sullivan said.

Sullivan, a Cleveland Indians season-ticket holder, formed Fans First with the help of his brother-in-law, Patrick O'Rourke of Greensboro, N.C., and friend Ron

"As an owner, I might get slapped on the knuckles by even suggesting that because we hate arbitration and the players like it. That particular arbitration, salary arbitration, and arbitration of the Fans with season tickets to Aug. 11 games are being urged to stay home. Fans with single-game tickets are being urged to at least miss the first couple of innings.

Between now and then, fans are being urged to chant "No strike, no strike," during the third inning of major-league games.

Sullivan said neither the players nor the owners have "taken the time to understand the concerns of their customers."

"In any other business, that would be a death knell," said Sullivan, chief financial officer of a corporation in Medina, about 30 miles southwest of Cleveland.

Steve Rosenthal, an associate deputy secretary of labor, said Reich had met with union head Donald Fehr and management negotiator Richard Ravitch last week in New York.

"I hate to say the ball is in their court, because it's the wrong metaphor, but the ball is in their court," Rosenthal said in Washington. "It's a bad situation now. We're just trying to make sure we have a line of communication open to both sides so we know where they are, and they know we're here if they get to a point where we might be able to help."

Eugene Orza, the associate general counsel of the Major League Baseball Players Association, said the union was willing to talk with the Labor Department but not let any outside party impose a settlement.

"We're not interested in submitting to binding arbitration the issue of a salary cap," he said. "We

LOU GEHRIG CHASE

Milestone for Ripken, 2000th consecutive

MINNEAPOLIS — Cal Ripken played his 2,000th straight game Monday night, marching closer toward one of sports' most remarkable and respected records.

Ripken tried to make like it was just another day on the job — the way Lou Gehrig always did it — but the crowd at the Metrodome wouldn't let him.

When he came to bat in the first inning for the Baltimore Orioles, the public-address announcer proclaimed the achievement. The crowd responded with a standing ovation, and Ripken waved to the fans, then took off his helmet in salute.

Ripken popped out with a runner on third base, ending the first inning against Minnesota.

With the appearance, Ripken became only the second major-leaguer to play in 2,000 consecutive games. Gehrig played in 2,130 in a row and that, like Cy Young's record of 511 wins, was once thought to be one of baseball's unbreakable records.

At this rate — as in, if there's no strike — Ripken would match Gehrig's mark in the 71st game next year. The Orioles requested they be home for Ripken's record, and the tentative 1995 schedule has accommodated him.

As it stands, Ripken would be at home on June 20 for game No. 2,130 when the Orioles, fittingly, play the New York Yankees, Gehrig's old team. On June 21, Ripken would set the mark against New York at Camden Yards.

"This is not something I ever set out to do," Ripken said before the Orioles played the Twins. "This is just a by-product my desire to go out and play everyday."

"I don't know what this accomplishment means. I'm just glad it means that my teammates can count on me. Beyond that, I don't know."

It started on May 30, 1982, when Ripken was a fresh-faced, rookie third baseman for the Orioles. It has turned into the second-longest streak in history, trailing only Gehrig's string.

Along the way, Ripken has hit the most home runs of any shortstop and also set a single-season record for fewest errors at the position. He's also turned a bit gray around the temples, and his hair on top is now thin, three weeks before his 34th birthday.

"The luck of staying away from injuries . . . all of a sudden, there was a streak," he said.

There have been close calls — he twisted his right knee during a brawl between the Orioles and Seattle in June 1993 and almost had to sit. But he has managed to start every game during the streak, including two games in which he was ejected in the first

BRICKYARD 400

Penske 'stocking' up for Indy

Mike Harris
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Since 1972, when Mark Donohue gave Roger Penske the first of his team's 10 victories in the Indianapolis 500, the Penske name has become synonymous with success at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

No other team has dominated the historic 2½-mile track the way Penske's has. But now there's a new challenge at Indy — the Brickyard 400 NASCAR stock car race.

It's obvious how important Saturday's inaugural race is to the stock car community, with more than 80 entries for what is expected to be a 44-car field.

But Penske, the head of a multi-billion dollar business empire, says he isn't putting any extra pressure on Rusty Wallace, his Winston Cup driver, to win the 400-mile race.

"I don't put pressure on the team or the drivers," Penske said. "That's not my style. In fact, I would rather relieve some pressure because the guys know how to do it. I feel good about our chances."

Penske, who first saw the sprawling Indianapolis speedway as a 14-year-old racing fan in 1951 and first brought his Indy-car team here in 1969, says the new event — expected by many to be the biggest in NASCAR's history — will not be a disappointment.

"I don't think anybody realizes what it's going to be like when they say 'Gentlemen, start your engines,' and the whole place is filled with people," Penske said.

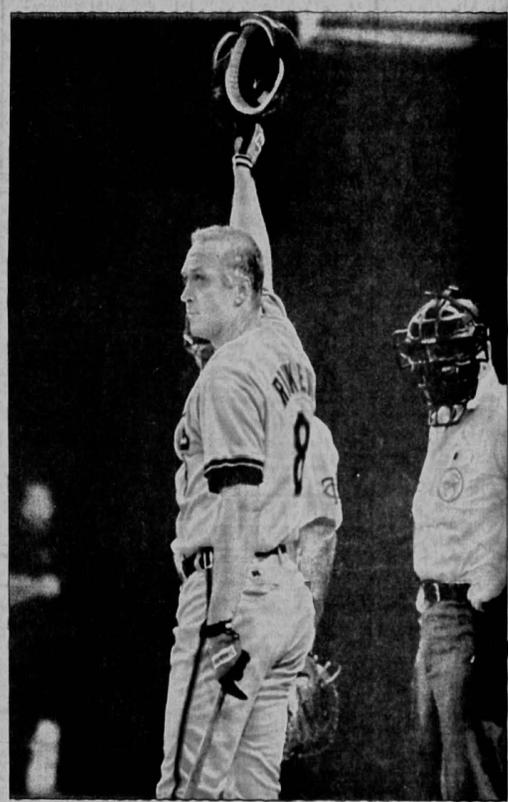

"Typically, at a normal Winston

Cup track, the stands are way away from the track. At Indy, everybody sits on top of each other. The notoriety from the press, the electronic media, is so outstanding that the drivers and sponsors will realize that this will take NASCAR another step toward the top of overall racing.

"Winning is going to be a great credential to have as a team owner and driver. We weren't at the first Masters or the first Super Bowl, but, to go to the first Indy for stock cars, it's going to be unique for everybody that goes, even if you don't do well."

Penske admits his Indy-car team's success at the speedway has been a major catalyst in his overall success.

"I think when you can say you've won the Indianapolis 500 — and we did that the fourth year we went there — it really helps," Penske said. "It puts you in a class apart from others because not everybody's won that race."

Carr trying to resuscitate Celtics

Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics made it official Monday, introducing free agent center/forward Pervis Ellison as the newest acquisition in M.L. Carr's drive to revive the NBA's most successful franchise.

Ellison is the third player Carr has added since he took over as the team's director of player personnel. He got forward Blue Edwards in a draft-day trade with Milwaukee and signed high-scoring forward Dominique Wilkins on July 22.

Ellison, a 6-foot-10 shot-blocker who has battled injuries throughout his career, thinks Carr has the Celtics pointed in the right direction.

"Boston's had a hard few years," Ellison said. "But now with Dominique Wilkins, Blue Edwards and myself on the team, I feel we have the nucleus to become better quickly."

Last season, Boston finished 32-50, 25 games behind the Atlantic Division champion New York Knicks. They missed the playoffs by 10 games.

Carr thinks the trio of newcomers, along with No. 1 draft choice Eric Montross, a 7-foot center from North Carolina, already make the Celtics better.

"With the quality talent we now have, we'll be able to compete every day in practice and on into the regular season and the playoffs," Carr said. "People may think I'm joking, but we are changing things and now regard ourselves as a championship contender."

Ellison could help a great deal by shaking the injury bug. His latest ailment was a bum knee that required surgery in 1993.

"I've had injury problems," he said, "but I'll spend the rest of the summer in rehabilitation. I don't see myself as being injury-prone. When you count it, I've only had three injuries my entire career."

Since his freshman year at Louisville, when "Never Nervous" Pervis led the Cardinals to the NCAA title and was the most valuable player of the Final Four, Ellison has always been considered a potentially dominant talent.
