Reform plan sets stage for struggle

David Jepsen
WASHINGTON — Setting the stage for a contentious debate, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell outlined a "voluntary system" for health care insurance reform to keep spending increases to 14 percent of gross domestic product by the year 2001.

"I know that organized labor and the insurance industry would not want to do this, but I think it's time to deal with the problem," Mitchell said in a speech to the Associated Press.

"It is an effort to give the voluntary system a chance," Mitchell said. "For the next few years, our health care system has to be allowed to continue to operate as the system has been operating..." Mitchell added.

The subsidies at roughly $25 billion are expected to be the key to the bill's success, with the rest of the money to be spent on insurance programs and the rest to be spent on health care reform programs.

The bill would increase the cost of health care reform to $15 trillion over 10 years, a figure about 10 percent of gross domestic product.

"We've moved in a number of directions," Mitchell said. "We're going to the insurance industry and we're going to the medical community and we're going to the consumers and we're going to the providers who are going to be affected by this legislation." Mitchell added.

The bill is expected to be debated in the Senate later this month, with a vote expected in early November. Mitchell said he expected the bill to be passed by the end of the year, with a vote expected in the House by the end of the month.

Mitchell's bill has been described as "the most important health care reform legislation in this century." Mitchell said he expected the bill to be "the most important health care reform legislation in this century." Mitchell added.

Thomas Wiel, the University of Iowa's custodian of flags, says there are 136 steps one must take to lower the Old Capitol flag. The process, he says, has not changed in the years he has been a custodian. Wiel says the process has been in place for more than 50 years since Johnston was inducted Monday into the Iowa Hall of Fame.

And today, for the 20th time this year, those hands will make the flag lower on the flagpole by a foot and a half. Lina Bartholomew, Christine McConnell, Arvid M. Reddy and William Nash have been doing this for 30 years with the same hands, but the flag has remained the same.

"Some families come to take a photograph of the flag at half-staff," Bettie Thompson, administrator of the Old Capitol, said.

"One year, Arvind Bette Thompson, administrator of the Old Capitol said. "One father even requested to keep the flag that had been at half-staff."

Transplant patients receive new lease on life

Joel Reinhart

Although she won't turn 21 until June 30, Amanda Potthoff has already celebrated a notable birthday. She turned 7 years old.

"It's a little early for us, but I guess the doctors decided it was time," said Amanda's mother, Joni Potthoff. "She had a three-week-old liver transplant, and it didn't end well.

Doctors were considering her a total loss, but they decided to try a heart transplant. It was a bold move, but it paid off. Amanda is doing well now, and her mother is overjoyed.

Amanda's transplant operation was a success, and she is expected to make a full recovery. Her family is thankful for the medical team that saved her life. For Joni Potthoff, the day is a reminder of the importance of organ donation.

In the past year and a half, a number of organ donors in Iowa have come from just 75 people. One person has donated an organ every 2.5 months.

In Iowa, 2 of 5 people who die with functional organs have donated their organs. This number is significantly lower than the national average of 5 of 5 people.

Amanda's transplant is a testament to the dedication of the medical community and the importance of organ donation.

Baseball is all about money

The holy trinity of popular culture in Norman Rockwell's Baseball is all about money. Women Get Addicted to Food," Attractiveness and Eating Disorders," its worst perpetrator of all. It does not need to tune in to "Melrose Place," when she was a teenager, I didn't really know what to do next. I thought that I was not so different. My two friends and I went into town. We panicked. We approached them. "Are you girls in trouble?" I asked. "No, we're just hangin' out," they answered. Later, I realized that that claim is disingenuous. With a more complete knowledge, I would have been able to use this to my advantage. As a result, many women develop eating disorders — harmful obsessions with body shape and weight. Hopes shattered in Zaire refugee camps

She pointed to a tent that she used to have a group of lost boys, some of the more than 35,000 children without parents in the refugee camps of eastern Zaire. There she lived until they were captured by the rebels in the area, and returned to her tent.

The family says the children are safe, and that they are finding food and water.

But Nyankesha says the family has been forced to leave their home.

“We are very scared, scared of the fighting,” she says.

“We have no food, no water, no place to sleep,” she adds.

Nyankesha said she had hoped to return to her home in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, but that hope is now shattered.

“Our dream is to return to our home, to rebuild our lives,” she says.

But she is not alone.

The United Nations has estimated there are about three children for every adult in the camps.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Quenel shot and wounded an outdoor opposition politician in an attack that pushed the United States and Haiti closer to conflict.

The U.S. Embassy said the shooting was the latest in a series of the military’s determination to silence dissent, even if it means more of the United States will be drawn into an internal political showdown.

The embassy posted guards Tuesday at a refuge processing center where militants regrouped to launch an additional political showdown.

The embassy also confirmed a new threat by the military regime to some radio stations that broadcast what the government called "disruptive and inflammatory news."

The regime began resuming to what the United States denounced as Sunday’s efforts to oust the Caribbean nation’s 37-year-almighty state of siege. The measure is aimed at ending the military leaders’ efforts to stage a coup and restore power.

The embassy showed the United States and Haiti are heading toward confrontation, said Stanley Shore, a U.S. embassy spokesman.

"It’s sort of like two trains on a collision course. And I think these two trains are getting closer and closer together." he said.

DOLE'S HEALTH PLAN

Dole has drafted 40 of 44 Senate Republicans to join him in an alternative that eliminates the employer mandate, potentially stripping millions of workers of their health coverage.

"I think he's put together the critical mass, which is 51 votes," said Sen. Joe Lieberman, D-Conn., who is expected to support the proposal. "And, Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., who is a moderate Democrat facing a difficult re-election race, could be pivotal.

Mitchell said he had yet to begin talking with Bingaman to determine his position, but he is expected to face a tough re-election battle in 2012. Liberal groups, including SEIU, are pressuring Bingaman not to support the plan, fearing it would make cuts to Medicare.

But Bingaman said he is open to the idea and that "an opportunity for a change that could make a big difference for Medicare" is worth considering. "This is a more balanced approach than the Senate bill," he said.

Mitchell suggested that Bingaman might be willing to support the plan if it included a provision for private insurance. "We thought it was important to try to give them their insurance back," he said.

Dole's proposal for expanding the private insurance market would provide federal subsidies beginning in 1997 for up to 90% of the cost of insurance for families, 70% for children, and 50% for individuals. The subsidies would be available to families with income up to 185% of the federal poverty level.

The plans would be obliged to offer three choices of insurance, each with a separate premium. The premium would be determined by the individual's age, pre-existing conditions, and other factors.

Mitchell said the proposal would provide more choice and flexibility than the Senate bill, which requires everyone to have health insurance and imposes a penalty on individuals who do not.

Mitchell said the proposal would also provide more choice and flexibility than the Senate bill, which requires everyone to have health insurance and imposes a penalty on individuals who do not.
