Bentsen admonished by Congress

Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In Whitewater hearings on both sides of the Capitol, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen got a stern lecture Wednesday from old Senate colleagues about the evasiveness of his top officials while his understudy withstood a grilling in the House.

Bentsen's right-hand man, Roger Altman, under sharp Republican attack and without many Democratic defenders, told congressmen he had no intention of resigning.

Altman got a guarded boost from President Clinton at a White House news conference. The president said Bentsen has confidence in Altman "and so do I."

Still, Clinton said he could not "countenance anybody not being forthright with the Congress" — the chief charge against Altman.

The deputy secretary got a more enthusiastic backing from House Banking Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas. "I think you should be awarded the equivalent of a congressional Purple Heart," Gonzalez told Altman.

But one conservative Democrat — Sen. Richard Shelby of Alabama — joined the handful of Republicans who have called on Altman to resign as deputy treasury secretary.

Altman and Joan Hanson, the Treasury's general counsel, have contradicted each other at this week's hearings, and Clinton told his news conference Bentsen would have to settle "the management question" — whether the two could continue to work together.

On another point — a White House aide's diary entry saying Clinton was "furious" when Altman decided to withdraw from handling the Arkansas savings and loan case at the heart of Whitewater — Clinton said it wasn't so.

"The only thing that upset me was I didn't want to see him stampeded into it if it wasn't the right thing to do," the president said.

The hearings brought out, however, that if there was any White House pressure on Altman, it was to not withdraw from the Whitewater case. He ultimately did, three weeks after the issue arose.

In their testimonies, Altman and Hanson have given contradicting accounts regarding each other. Specifically, Altman accused her of allowing him to give incomplete testimony to the Senate last February.

The dispute got personal Wednesday when Hanson was asked if she thought Altman had sought to make her the victim of his mistakes.

"I understand in Mr. Altman's situation that he would be inclined to blame me," she replied, "but I won't return the favor."

Triple execution performed despite last-minute appeals

VARNER, Ark. (AP) — Three men who killed a man in front of his family were executed one by one Wednesday as the Supreme Court rejected arguments they were treated like "hogs at a slaughter." It was the nation's first triple execution in 32 years.

Hoyt Clines, 37, James Holmes, 37, and Darryl Richley, 43, each declined to make final statements as they were led into the execution chamber.

Clines was strapped to a gurney at 7 p.m. and injected with a lethal dose of drugs. Asked if he had any last words, he replied, "Nope." He was pronounced dead at 7:11 p.m.

Fifty-eight minutes later, Richley died on the same gurney. Asked if he had any last words, he said, "No."

James Holmes followed Richley into the prison death chamber within an hour and was pronounced dead at 9:24 p.m. He also said "no" when asked if he had any last words.

A three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had stayed Holmes' execution earlier Wednesday, but three hours later the full 8th Circuit voted 8-3 to lift the stay.

Businessman Don Lehman was beaten with a motorcycle chain and shot in the chest and head by four masked men who forced their way into his home, chased him down and held him on a bed. His wife was on the bedroom floor at the time.

Local relief efforts aid Rwandan refugees

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

As news of widespread violence and disease in Rwanda continues to shock the world, some concerned members of the local community may be suffering pangs of hopeless frustration.

Fearing they are too far away to effectively offer aid to the more than 2 million displaced and traumatized Rwandan refugees, people throughout the Johnson County area have searched for ways to personally become involved in the Rwanda Emergency Fund.

Several area churches believe they've found the best way to do it.

Willingly breaking denominational boundaries to cooperate in a united front, local churches are sending offerings and special contributions from nonmembers to Rwanda through a national organization division called Church World Service.

The Rev. Bruce Fischer of the Congregational United Church of Christ, 30 N. Clinton St., believes directly channeling funds through an established body such as CWS will change the way donations are made.

"Church World Service is the quickest, most cost effective way to get your contributions to the Rwandans," Fischer said, "because this division has already established stations that know exactly what type and amount of funds are needed and where they are needed."

Fischer said although Church World Service is not as widely known as services such as the Red Cross, he believes it is more efficient. Instead of spending portions of contributed funds to pay for costly advertisements, he said the organization keeps the highest percentage of each contributed dollar to buy needed materials such as blankets and water purification pills.

A branch of the National Council of Churches of Christ, Church World Services responds to disaster in areas both within and outside of the United States.

Domestic abuse laws help curtail violence

Ann Swartzendruber
Special to The Daily Iowan

When Alan Martin was arrested in 1993 for domestic assault, he was fingerprinted, photographed and visually strip searched in a sterile hospital-like booking room. After climbing into an orange prison jumpsuit, he was escorted through the door that took him to the overnight block, where he remained until 8 the following morning.

It's a scenario that has become standard procedure once an offender is arrested for domestic assault. Since July 1, 1986, when Iowa's domestic abuse mandatory arrest laws went into effect, if there is an injury police officers are required to make an arrest.

In Martin's case, he was arrested after officers responded to a call from his wife. He reportedly decided to take a ring away from his wife, an alcoholic, after he learned she had resumed drinking. In a rage, he tried to pull the ring off her finger and poked her in the eye.

Before 1986, domestic assault was not acknowledged under the law, and police officers could only order the offender to leave the house for a 12-hour "cooling off" period.

Now police officers say the domestic abuse mandatory arrest law has played a major role in helping them to deal more effectively with this ongoing problem.

"It was against the law before to hit somebody, but we'd say, 'Well, just go away and come back later.' It seems like other people don't take it seriously really — it's against the law, but it's OK," Deb Petersen, a police officer with the

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

PART TWO OF THREE

Iowa City Police Department for nine years, said. "This way (with mandatory arrest) it does have more of an impact I think."

Petersen said the law has forced people to face their problems by making them accountable to the legal system.

"A lot of the people that get to this point where they're having physical conflict with their partner — obviously there's some dysfunction in their relationship. It gets them into the system, going through the court, the trial and if they plead guilty or are found guilty, going to batterers' education classes," she said. "It just gets these people into a level of aware-

CITY PUSHING SALE

Man may be forced to sell land for plant

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

A local business man is suing the city of Iowa City in an attempt to stop plans to force him from his home of the last 25 years.

Jim Glasgow may be kicked out of his home and business so the city can build a new water treatment plant on the property.

The city is attempting to acquire 228.43 acres of land north of Iowa City for the construction of the water plant. On Aug. 3, Glasgow filed a lawsuit against the city to stop them from condemning his land.

Glasgow said he has been informed by experts that the city needs no more than 50 acres of land for its facility. He said he has also learned that the land on which his home and business are located will be turned into a park consisting of pedestrian trails and an ice-skating rink.

Glasgow believes the park will be funded by the citizens of Iowa City through an increase in water rates.

"The whole thing is bogus. There's no mandate from the people saying they want a park out there," Glasgow said. "They're thinking if they want the land, they can have it and the people can pay for it."

"To me they're acting irresponsibly and are trying to pull the wool over everyone's eyes about what's going on," he said. "Everyone in Iowa City is going to get stuck paying the bill."

Iowa City City Attorney Linda Gentry said the city selected the site under recommendation from

SITUATION ASSESSED

Marshals will not be installed at I.C. clinics

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

A spokesman for the U.S. Department of Justice said Wednesday that the federal government will not be posting federal marshals at Iowa City abortion clinics unless there is a significant threat that cannot be handled by local law enforcement agencies.

Carl Stern, director of public affairs for the Department of Justice, said with more than 3,100 abortion clinics across the country and only 2,600 federal marshals who could be assigned to the task, this solution would not be practical.

This comes nearly a week after the killing of a doctor who provided abortions and his escort in Pensacola, Fla., and one day after Gayle Sand, an associate director at the Emma Goldman Clinic For Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., said the clinic is considering requesting protection from federal marshals.

"We are considering it and it's a very real possibility," Sand told the Associated Press Tuesday. "We're trying to assess the need. We're not taking this lightly in any way."

Sand was not available for comment Wednesday, but other local women's groups say the threat of violence is very real in Iowa City. "It's been a couple of years since there was any huge rally, but it only takes one person," Laurie Haag, acting director of the Women's Resource and Action Center, said. "Any legal business that could clearly be the target of violence deserves all the protection they can get."

Ashley Govern, director of education for the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said although protection may be needed, calling in federal marshals can only be a temporary solution.

"If they want them, then by all means I think it's necessary, but it feels like a short-sighted solution to the problem," she said. "It's not going to be enough."

Stern acknowledged the short-

UI professor imparts tea, tranquility, Zen

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

When most people are fast asleep, UI psychology Professor Stephen Fox balances kitchen utensils in the tea room of his house. He teaches and practices tea ceremonies as a part of Zen meditations.

Rising at 5 a.m. every day to prepare for the tea ceremony, Fox offers tea classes on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 8 a.m. and usually has four students.

"Instead of imposing values and prejudices on other people, the tea ceremony is about appreciation; it has a focus on creating things beautiful," Fox said. "If the real world were like that, there would be no struggles — no one would let a child starve."

The tea room, lit by large windows, is dominated by a large woven reed mat, a tatami, Fox explained. It is on this mat that the tea ceremonies are conducted. Over the tatami mat hangs a scroll with a Zen saying: "One branch, one blossom is all that is needed," written in Japanese.

The tea ceremony is built on the four cornerstones of harmony, respect, purity and tranquility that recur in Zen teachings and pervade every act in the ceremony.

Tea becomes more than a drink,

"Instead of imposing values and prejudices on other people, the tea ceremony is about appreciation; it has a focus on creating things beautiful."

Stephen Fox, UI psychology professor

it becomes an ongoing process that contains a core of rigid prescriptions unchanged for 500 years, since Sen. Rikyu, a 16th-century monk, created the tea ceremony in its present form, Fox explained.

Appreciation and respect are subtly incorporated into all parts of the tea ceremony down to the tiniest detail of how the bowl is held, which comments are made about it and the artist who made it.

"It makes you think about the environment, think about offering to another human being," Fox said. "In Japanese, there is a sign, kokoro. It means heart, mind, spirit. In order to do tea successfully, you have to give heart, mind, spirit to the ceremony," he adds.

For people who regularly engage in tea ceremonies, the way of life advocated has an influence that goes beyond the boundaries of the tatami. According to Fox, the Zen saying "If you walk in the mist, you will get soaked," applies to tea ceremonies: The values expressed eventually permeate into the consciousness.

"It insinuates itself into your life; you begin to see life more as in service of others," Fox said.

As Fox begins the tea ceremony, the teapot pops with a crisp and pleasant sound. Fox, practicing the simplest form of the tea ceremony, moves as swiftly and confidently as a ballerina.

He bows quickly as his hands graciously take hold of the bowl and the bamboo whisk. Moving the whisk in the bowl, he mixes the green tea powder and boiling water from the pot. He taps the whisk three times on the side of the bowl.

With the fast and mysterious movements of a magician, he folds the purple napkin used to wipe the utensils. He closes his eyes for a brief moment. It all looks very easy.

Noriko Ikeida, an Iowa City housewife originally from Japan, sometimes helps Fox teaching tea ceremony.

"I started doing tea in high school because I enjoyed the silence and the atmosphere — even if my feet were sleeping from sitting on the tatami. Time stops in the minutes it takes to make tea," Ikeida said. "It's slow. I like making tea and drinking tea because I don't think of anything else when I do it."

Stalker of Jerry Lewis judged competent to stand trial

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A man accused of stalking "Nutty Professor" Jerry Lewis for years has been ruled competent to stand trial.

Lewis

District Judge Dell Guy announced the findings of the psychiatric evaluation on Tuesday. No trial date was set.

Lewis claims that 50-year-old Gary Benson began harassing him after the comic fired his housekeeper five years ago for letting Benson into his Las Vegas home. Benson is charged with stalking and violating a protective order.

Lewis didn't notify police until earlier this year, when he told authorities that Benson had shown up at his home and office and warned he had a gun.

'Home Improvement' star set to hand out Emmy awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emmy nominee Patricia Richardson may not win one of the awards, but she'll get her hands on one anyway.

The "Home Improvement" star is one of the hosts of next month's Emmy Awards.

Richardson will share the podium with Ellen DeGeneres of "Ellen" at the Sept. 11 ceremony, ABC announced Tuesday.

Richardson is up for her first Emmy as best actress in a comedy series. Her co-star, Tim Allen, missed out on a nomination because his name wasn't submitted by the deadline.

Boxleitner takes role in 'Babylon 5' series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The space station Babylon 5 has a former government agent as its new commander: Bruce Boxleitner.

Boxleitner joins the cast of "Babylon 5" when the syndicated science-fiction drama returns for its second season at the end of October.

Boxleitner played a secret agent in "The Scarecrow and Mrs. King," a 1980s series that also starred Kate Jackson.

He will play Capt. John Sheridan, a war hero turned diplomat who takes command of the station when its current commander, played by Michael O'Hare, is reassigned. Warner Bros., which produces the show, said O'Hare won't return this season.

Boxleitner has starred in miniseries and TV films including "Till We Meet Again" and "Gambler III." He also appeared in the movies "The Babe" and "Kuffs."

2 Live Crew allows audience to decide show's content

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — 2 Live Crew will let the crowd decide how nasty they want the music to be.

The rap group that successfully battled obscenity charges all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court said it will let the audience decide if it wants Saturday's concert in Savannah to be G-rated or hard-core.

"We don't want to come in anybody's city and upset anybody," the group's leader, Luther Campbell, told the Savannah News-Press on Tuesday. "We just go and do what will please the masses. We could do a performance better than Barney could do for kids."

A federal judge in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., ruled in 1990 that the group's references to oral and anal sex in its As Nasty as They Wanna Be album were obscene. The ruling was overturned on appeal.

The benefit concert would help raise money to buy 1,000 acres Ernest Krikava lost last year in bankruptcy proceedings, Paul Richey of the Richey Music Group in Nashville, Tenn., told The Lincoln Star on Tuesday.

Organizers hope to announce a place and date for the concert by the weekend, Richey said.

Krikava, 70, is serving a five-month prison sentence for perjury. Because of a bank lien on the farm, the family sold $35,000 worth of hogs under a relative's name to buy food for themselves and feed for the animals.

Bill Cosby served with assault lawsuit

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cosby says he felt "invaded" by a photographer who snapped his picture in a dark auditorium. The photographer says he was assaulted when Cosby led him from the room.

Dick Corkery is suing Cosby for $3 million for the June 1992 incident at a ceremony honoring Cosby's wife, Camille.

In federal court Tuesday, Cosby testified that he held Corkery's elbow to lead him outside, and they had a heated argument. But he said he never assaulted the New York Daily News photographer.

"I didn't like what he had done. I felt I had been invaded," Cosby said.

Cosby said he posed for photographs before entering the Metropolitan Museum of Art and taking his seat at the ceremony.

He said the flash was "sort of like a laser" hitting him in both eyes and breaking his concentration.

Author tries to save N.Y. insane asylum

NEW YORK (AP) — In his best-selling novel "The Waterworks," E.L. Doctorow describes harrowing scenes inside the city's first insane asylum.

Now he's trying to save the place.

The building, known as "The Octagon" because of its shape, is in ruins. It was designed by Alexander Jackson Davis and built a century and a half ago on Roosevelt Island in the East River, between the boroughs of Manhattan and Queens. It's best known for its spiral "flying staircase," which rises in the rotunda without visible support.

To raise support for the city's plan to fix up the asylum and open it to the public, Doctorow and his publisher invited reporters and other guests to the island for lunch on Tuesday.

The author read accounts of life at the asylum from his novel as well as from the writings of Charles Dickens and Nellie Bly.

Stern reluctant to disclose finances

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Howard Stern usually is willing to say anything. Now a judge says if Stern really wants to be governor, he can't clam up about his finances.

Stern is running for governor on the Libertarian ticket. By law, he has until Aug. 30 to file a detailed financial disclosure form.

The state uses the forms to identify possible conflicts of interest and is prohibited from disclosing a candidate's income or financial holdings.

Stern sued, saying the law is unconstitutional because it requires disclosure before someone is elected. "It is especially Stern invasive to someone like me who lives a highly visible life," he said in court papers.

State Supreme Court Justice Harold Hughes refused Tuesday to grant Stern a preliminary injunction, which would have prevented the Ethics Commission from enforcing the law while Stern challenges it.

Hughes said it "appears very unlikely" Stern's lawsuit will succeed.

Stern had no immediate comment. "He makes all his comments on the radio," said his agent, Don Buchwald.

DENOUNCEMENT OF PLATFORM QUESTIONED

I.C. activists berate Campbell at fund-raiser

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bonnie Campbell was greeted by more than 75 supporters Wednesday night when she came to Iowa City for a fund-raiser and speech.

But by night's end she also met with a handful of disgruntled state platform committee members and gay rights activists ready to confront her about her recent campaign strategies and denouncement of same-sex marriages.

Pat Jensen and her husband Dwight Jensen, coordinators of the Johnson County Campaign for Bonnie Campbell, arranged for the state attorney general to appear at the fund-raiser geared toward drawing support for Campbell's campaign effort.

However, immediately after she finished her speech, Mona Shaw, a member of the Coalition for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Equal Rights, approached Jensen and asked permission to speak to Campbell. Though Jensen originally refused to grant Shaw access to Campbell, Shaw managed to share brief words with the attorney general.

Shaking and visibly distressed, Shaw repeatedly asked why Campbell had chosen to denounce the issue of same-sex marriage and why Campbell had refused to respond to earlier letters sent by Mona Shaw, a gay rights activist, hands a letter to Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bonnie Campbell. The letter states Shaw's concerns dealing with Campbell's change in political stance on gay issues. Campbell attended a fund-raiser at the residence of Jim Hayes of Iowa City.

Shaw. Onlookers began to crowd around Campbell and Shaw.

Shaw presented Campbell with a letter in which she personally asked Campbell to stop claiming that her opposition to same-sex marriages was for the best wishes of the majority of Iowans.

"What we don't know is why (other than you think it's good political strategy) you are opposed to same-sex marriage, nor why you chose our people as an acceptable sacrifice in your campaign," Shaw said in her letter to Campbell.

"It would be pathological for lesbian, gay, bisexual Iowans or their allies to vote for you now," Shaw continued in the letter. "Instead the Coalition for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Equal Rights and I will urge those who care about our oppression to vote neither for Branstad nor Campbell, but to vote for justice."

Shaw left the fund-raiser event saying, "They won't let us speak because we don't count."

Dennis Smith, a member of the Democratic State Platform Committee, and Molly Smith, a platform supporter, also questioned Campbell about her decision to denounce the party's platform.

They tried to convince Campbell she was committing a disservice to Democratic voters by refusing to run her campaign on essential Democratic party issues.

"We are trying to think and move forward in making this platform better suit the needs of Democrats around this state," Smith said.

Campbell responded by saying she did not feel the platform represented her campaign's goals. On June 20, Campbell stated her refusal to run her campaign on the state Democratic platform in a letter she sent to Eric Tabor, chairman of the Iowa Democratic Party.

"This state is in need of changing its attitudes," she said. "I never meant to offend anyone, but you have to speak to the broadest group of Iowans."

FARLEY, Iowa — Called "Cowboy" by those who knew him, Dale Tauke wore a cowboy hat, boots and spurs and had been drinking when he engaged police marksmen in a 24-hour standoff that ended in his death, authorities said Wednesday.

Authorities said it will be a few more days before they know if Tauke, 53, shot himself or was hit by gunfire from police during the standoff that also injured a state trooper at Tauke's farm home just south of Farley.

"Tauke appeared armed with a handgun and rifle; then he raised the rifle up in the general direction of (the officer) and informed him that this matter was going to have to end in a shootout."

Court documents

"We don't expect an answer to that question until our investigation and the laboratory analysis is complete. I'm not sure when that's going to be. We're not going to rush it," said Bob Pontious, assistant director in charge of field operations for the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation.

Dubuque County Attorney Fred McCaw said the gunbattle lasted about 20 minutes starting at about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and that at least 20 shots were fired.

When authorities found Tauke, who had left the house and taken cover in a corral, he was wearing cowboy boots, spurs, a cowboy hat and a holster holding a "big Western style revolver," McCaw said.

"It looked like a scene from a Western movie," he said. The trooper, David C. Shinker, 37, of Davenport was shot in the hand and wrist by a high-powered rifle. He underwent surgery at UI Hospitals and Clinics and was in fair condition Wednesday.

Tauke's body, meanwhile, was taken to Des Moines for an autopsy, Pontious said.

According to an affidavit filed with the Dubuque County clerk's office, the standoff began Monday afternoon after Tauke, who lived alone, "suddenly became enraged and threw a chair at his mother," Frances Tauke, 79, and his girlfriend, Connie Weber. The two women were eating lunch with him at the time.

McCaw said Tauke had been drinking.

"He had a known drinking problem. They (authorities) believe he was drinking throughout the day," McCaw said.

Tauke ordered the women from his house and as they approached their cars, "Mr. Tauke began shooting a handgun," the affidavit said.

Tauke fired five shots, which struck both cars around the front tires, the court document said.

The women notified the sheriff's department and officers were dispatched to Tauke's home.

As one officer approached, "Tauke appeared armed with a handgun and rifle; then he raised the rifle up in the general direction of (the officer) and informed him that this matter was going to have to end in a shootout," the affidavit said.

TESTING NOT INFALLIBLE

DNA 'fingerprinting' plays important role

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

As the Sept. 19 trial date for O.J. Simpson approaches, both sides are scrambling to prepare their cases.

Currently, blood samples are being DNA "fingerprinted" in efforts to identify whose blood was found in various places during the course of investigation.

UI law Professor Michael Saks said such forensic evidence plays an important role in many trials. Saks studies the role forensic science plays in the courtroom. In the Simpson case, forensics are especially important because there are no eyewitnesses.

"It looks like a case that relies on circumstantial evidence," Saks said. "It will rest fairly heavily on what the information seems to imply."

The accuracy of the tests will almost undoubtedly be questioned.

"Assuming the DNA testing does imply O.J., although it may not, it is quite clear the defense will try to demonstrate all the possible weaknesses of the testing," he said. "It is clearly a good, helpful technique, but it has its limits. It will be interesting to see the two sides debating how good or valid the tests are."

The testing currently being performed is elemental to the prosecution's case because it can directly connect Simpson to the crime scene, Saks said.

"It is very important for the prosecution. If they can't, it is hard to imagine they can win. If they can, it is hard to imagine they can lose," he said.

However, Saks said the prosecution will be able to recuperate from the absence of a match.

"The defense will make a great deal out of the absence of a match. The match will help to the prosecution, but the absence won't be completely devastating," he said.

The test results will probably have a strong impact on the jury, Saks said.

Rolling Stones Voodoo Lounge

Voodoo Lounge is without question the best record the Rolling Stones have kicked out in a long time. Rubbed raw and full of the gruff magic and adroit sexuality which have characterized Mick and the boys from the start, this album is a dramatic return to form that's long overdue.

Announcing itself with the growling swagger and shrieking harmonica of the first track "Love is Strong," the Stones' 22nd studio album proceeds to give the band a large transfusion of hot blood and boiling insight tainted with the wisdom of age. A bit nebulous and obscure as a whole, Lounge's various parts constitute a virtual encyclopedia of rough rhythm and blues done to perfection.

Musically, the best tracks are the major curve balls. A harpsichord lends the bitter "New Faces" a sweet undertone, while "Moon is Up" makes use of some odd vocal effects and a wah-wah pedal steel guitar to create a heated, oily atmosphere.

And yes, the old Stones are there as well. There's the bottom heavy, full-on funk of "Suck on the Jugular," which showcases the chunky bass playing of Daryl Jones. And "Brand New Car" oozes good cheer with Jagger panting lines like "I want to check if her oil smells good / Mmmm - smells like caviar."

This is one instance where a band has returned to its roots and emerged born again. Hands down, the Rolling Stones' Lounge is voodoo magic from the hip.

The Orb Pomme Fritz

The Orb's latest release, the "little album" Pomme Fritz, is a complete disappointment, lacking many of the core elements which made The Orb so influential. Instead of the broad, sweeping soundscapes of "Little Fluffy Clouds" and "The Blue Room," Pomme Fritz ends up sounding like Monty Python doing ambient sound, a far cry from a healthy combination of musical approaches. Silly, carnival-like keyboard lines whir about to misplaced lackluster samples.

As ambient music goes, Pomme Fritz lacks the visionary quality of previous Orb releases, leaving only the empty husk of Orb song structure to provide any guidepost to the past. Regardless of whether Pomme Fritz is a legitimate attempt to explore new directions, an indication of a fierce case of writer's block or, as seems most likely, an attempt to sneak a sub-standard project past The Orb's ardent fan base, it ultimately serves only to undermine Alex Paterson's already substantial musical legacy.

Tripmaster Monkey Goodbye Race

Local clubgoers waiting to see how well Tripmaster Monkey will hold up on a major label shouldn't find Goodbye Race a disappointment. From the opening chords of the jittery, unpredictable "Albert's Twisted Memory Bank" to the more somber neighborhoods of "Shutter's Closed" and "Roman Catholic Haircut," Tripmaster sustains its balance of noise and pop rhythms quite respectably.

The biggest problem with Goodbye Race is that its terrain, like that of the band's home state, is relentlessly consistent. The big crunchy sound that has made their shows so popular starts to drag after a few tracks, despite frequent flashes of creative genius. The songs are also difficult to place emotionally, like those of numerous other bands spawned by college towns, and even the more depressing songs come off as merely moody. Nonetheless, Tripmaster probably has a brilliant album lurking somewhere in its collective subconscious, even if this isn't it.

Judybats Full Empty

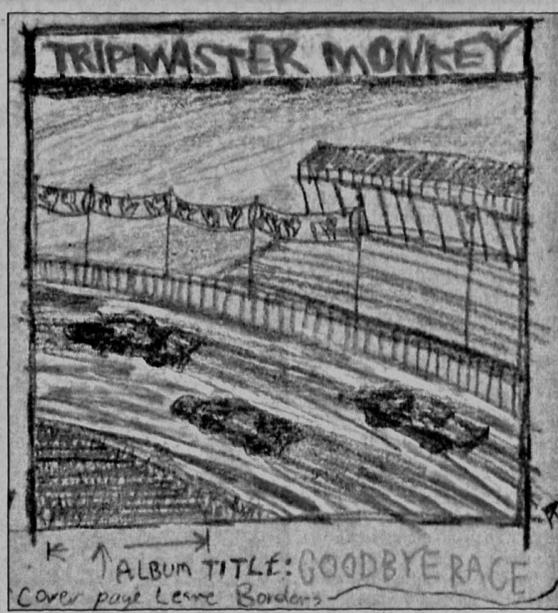

The Judybats' shambling lack of rhythm on their new CD, Full Empty, is a strong indication that not all musicians out of Tennessee can be the next Elvis. Having mastered that alternapop sound so recently profitable for big record-label executives, the Judybats epit-omize the lucrativeness of political correctness.

There is a certain unrecognizability to the bubbly not quite folk, not quite rock of Full Empty. In a strangely two-dimensional manner, the Judybats have created songs that do not soothe, offend, threaten, cajole or groove the listener. In a tired cover of The Bee Gees' "Jive Talkin'," it becomes apparent that surprisingly the Bee Gees had more soul.

The CD's other songs, all written by lead singer Jeff Heiskell, are innocuous radio-ready ditties. "Sorry Counts" and "Stupid-Cute" ponderously deal with relationships and the torment of love. With more ingenious lyrics in "Liquid," Heiskell sings that we're "furniture of blood and clay, barely holding together."

In the case of the Judybats, playing safe and sound is not necessarily the best route to go, and one wonders if Full Empty is half-empty or entirely empty.

The Auteurs

Now I'm A Cowboy

A bizarre cast of modern-day "Canterbury Tales" characters stumbles through the songs on the Auteurs' second CD, Now I'm A Cowboy. While critics likened the sound of this British band's debut CD, New Wave, to that of the Kinks, the amalgamated sound of the Auteurs is distinctively their own.

Lead singer Luke Haines, who wrote all the songs on Cowboy, weaves tales of the follies and foibles of rich brats slumming with the street kids, cut-rate Valentinos and drama queens with the studied detachment of a biologist examining bug specimens. Haines takes acerbic delight in drawing his embarrassingly acute portrayals. "She's going downtown / but she comes from uptown / she's going downtown / 'Cos she's a poet," he sings in "Chinese Bakery," and just about anyone can think of some poseur acquaintance they know who bought Doc Martens a decade or so after they were truly radical.

The lambasting of class distinctions continues in "I'm a Rich Man's Toy" and "The Upper Classes"; songs which start politely roar into heady guitar as Haines' voice progresses from proper elocution into a heated stage whisper.

Things turn spooky in "Life Classes / Life Model," in which domestic abuse is discussed in terms of the black and blue of an artist's palette. "Lenny Valentino," the first single of the CD, is a beautiful textural melding of sound. Subtle and concise, all the songs on Cowboy are like some sweet IV feed of remorse and whimsy to which you'll want to stay hooked.

ROGER RABBIT, STEP ASIDE

New Line Cinema

Hot new star Jim Carrey, last seen in "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective," stars in the special-effects spectacular "Mask."

'Mask' sure to annihilate competition

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

Outta the way, Forrest Gump — here comes Stanley Ipkiss, a.k.a. "The Mask," poised to bazooka to Mandalay any box-office competition for the remainder of this gory summer movie season. And hallelujah, for that matter. Finally, we've got a film worth a thousand "Flintstones," a billion "True Lies," a gazillion "Blown Away."

Starring rubbery-faced comedian Jim Carrey (best known as a cast member of "In Living Color" and star of the awful yet phenomenally successful "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective"), "The Mask" is assuredly the most entertaining, visually stunning film to hit the silver screen yet this year. It's an exhilarating, gut-busting joy ride, bursting with jiggery energy, enormously fun to watch and sure to paste a silly grin on the face of anyone who sees it for hours afterward.

"The Mask" is special effects — and the mind-bending, surreal fashion in which they're employed — easily blow away pioneering megahits like "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?" and "Terminator 2: Judgment Day." Carrey himself can seem like a live cartoon at times, his face contorting and twitching like an animated plate of Silly Putty. But with the help of Industrial Light and Magic (George "Star Wars" Lucas' standard-setting effects facility), the actor's demented superhero character seems to have been lifted right out of a Chuck Jones cartoon.

Carrey plays Ipkiss, a wimpy pushover working long, boring hours at the Edge City Bank, weathering constant ribbing and lousy one-liners about his nice-guy naïveté from best friend Charlie (Richard Jeni in a Tom Arnold-Jim Belushi role). His landlord hates him, his boss harasses him and auto shop workers overcharge him. In fact, Ipkiss' only supporter seems to be his Jack Russell terrier, Milo, who can leap 7 feet vertically to catch a frisbee.

The Mask

Rating:	PG-13
One word:	Ssssssssmokin'!!!

Ipkiss is a hopeless romantic, and his lower palate drops to his desk (a bit of foreshadowing) when sexy blond bombshell Tina Carlyle (newcomer Cameron Diaz) strolls in one day to "open an account" and bats her eyelashes in the dumbfounded wimp's face. As it turns out, Tina's actually casing the bank for her greasy gangster boyfriend, Dorian Tyrel (Peter Greene of "Judgement Night").

Meeting Charlie later at Tyrel's '40s-style Coco Bongo Club, Ipkiss is thrown into the gutter by bouncers and winds up walking forlornly along a deserted bridge. Seeing what he thinks is a body floating in the river, he dives in, only to find a bunch of garbage and a mysterious ancient-looking mask.

Of course, this is no ordinary mask. It turns mild-mannered Stanley Ipkiss into a green-faced, spastic, wise-cracking Lothario — in other words, a reflection of what, inside, he'd really like to be. All of a sudden he's suave, debonair, superhumanly powerful and, most importantly, the apple of Tina's eye.

To give any more of "The Mask" is plot away would be a sin (the previews already reveal far too many of the film's best moments). Suffice it to say there are several rip-roaring dance-and-music numbers and a few other characters who manage to get their hands (and faces) on the mask and its powers.

Carrey's reputation as the newest comedic superstar is sealed with this exciting film. His performance is so manic, so varied and wonderful in its flavors that he almost resembles a younger Robin Williams, full of fresh life and zesty enthusiasm. It's simply impossible to take one's eyes off of him — even the subtlest jerk of his facial muscles suggests some facet or emotion of Ipkiss. He's the perfect choice for the role of The Riddler in the next "Batman" installment, and if past memory of the series serves right, he should get oodles of screen time.

All the other actors in the film are rightfully upstaged by Carrey (it couldn't and shouldn't have been any other way), but one performer does manage to keep up with the star's lunacy throughout most of the movie — the dog Max, who plays Milo. Admittedly, dog movie performances usually serve to either up the sappy quotient or to overshadow bad human performances (see Dana Carvey's "Clean Slate"). But this is a dog that will have audiences rolling in the aisles; he and Carrey have an almost scary on-screen chemistry.

A deserving slice of credit for "The Mask" should obviously go to director Charles Russell and screenplay writer Mike Werb, who have adapted a well-known series of graphic novels to the silver screen in a more successful, enduring fashion than any other animation to live action effort yet.

It's good that New Line Cinema saved "The Mask" until late in the summer; it's sure to blow away any lingering competition from the sleeper "Forrest Gump," and everybody's already sick of "The Lion King." Even the fire of the upcoming "Clear and Present Danger" has been somewhat dampened by the overwrought explosions of "Blown Away" and "Trus Lies."

But the real reason "The Mask" will destroy any and all competition is because of one tiny element that's been sadly missing from this summer's big-budget cinematic entertainment thus far — originality. This spirited human cartoon is a gem that will glimmer when all those others have faded. See it now and enjoy the aftertaste while it lasts.

BOOK REVIEW

Carr's best-selling 'Alienist' fascinates with vivid detail

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

Caleb Carr's "The Alienist" has lingered mysteriously near the top of national best-seller lists for almost three and a half months now, sandwiched quietly in between household names like Grisham and Steele. It sits perplexingly near the front of the bookstores, its drab, murky overleaf and its quasi-sci-fi title suggesting nothing of the tasty reading leaping about inside.

The hidden hook is that "The Alienist," like so many novels in the last half-decade, chooses as its subject America's favorite in-the-closet pastime: serial killers and what makes them tick. What's more, Carr has produced gracefully what some novelists strive their whole careers for — a literate, eloquent, feverish nail-biting page-turner.

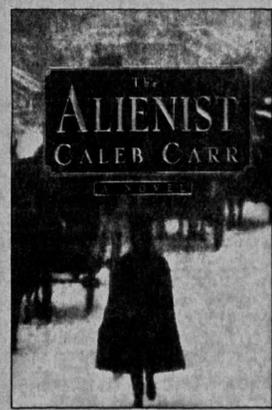

This is a thriller that will frustrate the myriad hurried, browsing literati because it forces a slow read. Carr unravels his intricate plot at a leisurely pace, leading his audience along like a donkey following a dangling carrot, teasing with ominous clues. It's a brilliantly conceptualized, compulsively readable book; the plot is well thought-out with every detail colored in. And while the young author is prone to overly dramatic foreshadowing, the payoff is always aces.

The narrator of Carr's tale is one John Moore, a street-smart cop-beat reporter for the New York Times, circa 1896. One stormy night he's rushed to the scene of a ghastly murder — one of the many boy prostitutes working the city's seedy brothels has been found slashed to ribbons, his body savagely mutilated.

Furtively overseeing the investigation is Teddy Roosevelt (yes, the Teddy Roosevelt), the gruff president of the board of police commissioners. Outraged by the crime, Roosevelt secretly enlists the assistance of college buddies Moore and the eccentric Dr. Lazlo Kreizler to solve the crime quickly and quietly.

It is within Kreizler that the heart of Carr's novel is realized. The doctor is scorned universally — by the public, the government, the church, even his own colleagues — for his unorthodox theories on psychosis and its origins (in his opinion) in the traumatic childhood experiences and environments of its victims. His ideas are starkly new, almost revolutionary and therefore a challenging affront to the stability and authority of those in positions of power and moral turpitude.

Kreizler's opponents label those of his profession (mental pathology) as "alienists" treating pathetic souls "alienated" from society and their own true natures. They refuse as well to acknowledge the social malaise represented in the unfortunate young victims of the killer — making the search that much more difficult and necessarily incognito.

Assisted by Moore, Roosevelt and several other fiercely determined detectives, Kreizler starts with a faint psychological and physical outline of his prey. Through spirited debate, footwork and the process of elimination, they fill in the fine details as the investigation grows more harried and dangerous.

Indeed, some of the best scenes in "The Alienist" involve Kreizler and company sweating out hypothesis after hypothesis, desperately weighing options, clues and leads as the killer's clock of carnage swings toward the slaughter of another victim.

In addition to providing riveting suspense, Carr's novel is a thoughtful historical commentary, drawing a clear-cut picture of an American culture living in denial of its darker sordid underbelly — and paying for its ignorance with the blood of its children. His characters are more or less staples in books of this genre, but they are infused with an exciting new life, fueled by Carr's vivid, obvious interest in his book's subject.

"The Alienist" is only fault lies, surprisingly, in Carr's vast research — and his reluctance to omit even one whit of its yield. Long-winded passages of historical filler on 1896 New York sometimes slow down the narrative and distract from the action. These sections are admittedly necessary to setting the scene, but Carr sounds at times like he's lecturing to a class rather than adding meat to the book's bones.

This is a minor flaw, however, and shouldn't deter readers from scooping up a copy of "The Alienist" before the busy fall rush begins. It's an addictive read, perfect for poolside reading or break-time respites in the smoking lounge.

PILOT HURLED OBSCENITIES, BULLETS ON HOUSE

Charges filed in fly-by shooting

Associated Press

FAIRFIELD, Iowa — A rural Fairfield man is charged with stalking and aggravated assault after he allegedly flew a small plane over another man's house and fired rifle shots, police said.

"This is possibly one of the first fly-by shootings in the U.S.," Jefferson County Sheriff Frank Bell said.

Ronald Warren Switzer is accused of harassing Mike Parsons. Both men live northwest of Fairfield in Jefferson County.

Switzer, 39, is accused of circling Parsons' house on July 23, yelling as he dipped the plane as low as 50 feet.

"He was shouting obscenities and showed a gun," Bell said. "As he started flying away, he started shooting."

No one was injured. Switzer was charged with aggravated assault after a woman on the ground said he pointed the gun at her, Bell said.

Switzer was arrested July 29 after police acting on a warrant found a Chinese assault rifle and the paraplane in Switzer's house.

Paraplanes, which are also called paragliders, have a small three-wheeled body — a seat, engine and propeller — suspended by a parachute.

Switzer and Parsons have had a long-running feud, Bell said. There have been several less serious incidents over the past nine years.

"We've admonished everyone involved that they have to quit this, and this will put an end to it," Bell said.

A court appearance for Switzer has not been set. He is free on bond.

EACH CHARGED WITH KIDNAPPING, MURDER

4 face trial in DM woman's death

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Four people accused of killing a 79-year-old Des Moines woman are scheduled to stand trial this fall.

A Polk County judge on Wednesday set an Oct. 10 trial date for Garland Shaffer, 68; Steven Bradley, 32; Angel Stewart, 21; and Angel Chamberline, 16, all of Des Moines.

Judge Matthew McEniry also denied a request to lower bond for the four, who remain in the Polk County jail.

They are charged in Iowa with two counts each of first-degree kidnapping and one count each of first-degree murder.

They are accused of abducting Clara Baker, 79, and her longtime friend and neighbor, Phyllis King, 82.

The two women disappeared June 24. Baker's body was found June 28 in central Iowa. King's body was found the same day in northeast Missouri.

Officials believe Baker was killed in Des Moines the day after she vanished and her body was dumped in Madison County. An autopsy showed she had been strangled.

Investigators believe King was still alive when Baker was killed and was taken to Missouri where she was killed June 26.

ROEDERER HOSPITALIZED

State aide survives heart attack

Associated Press

DES MOINES — David Roederer, Gov. Terry Branstad's chief of staff, suffered a heart attack and was taken to a Des Moines hospital Wednesday shortly after being interviewed by ethics investigators, officials said.

Branstad spokeswoman Christina Martin said a main artery in Roederer's heart was 100 percent blocked and initially said surgery was planned Wednesday night or today. He was listed in fair condition by the hospital.

The procedure planned was an angioplasty, which is a way to clear blocked arteries. Martin later said doctors decided to monitor Roederer's condition and would make a decision today on whether the surgical procedure was needed.

While hospital officials said Roederer was still being evaluated, Martin said Roederer, 43, had been treated recently for a heart condition.

"About a month ago, Dave did go into the hospital with a heart problem," said Martin. "He has a blocked artery and since that time he has been on medication."

CRACKDOWN DEMANDED BY U.N.

Bested Hutu army disrupting aid

Paul Ames
Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — Thousands of soldiers from the defeated Rwandan army are pillaging aid intended for their fellow Hutu refugees in camps along the Zaire border, aid workers said Wednesday.

"It's a huge problem and it's not getting any better," said Ray Wilkinson, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

The United Nations wants Zaire to crack down on the theft of food, medicine, blankets and plastic sheeting from Rwandan refugees clinging to life in Goma's disease-ridden camps. It also wants the soldiers moved away from civilian camps.

The local government has said it will help, but so far it has failed to stop the thefts by the estimated 15,000 to 20,000 Rwandan soldiers camped in the Goma area.

At a meeting with the United Nations on Wednesday, Zairian officials agreed to tighten security at Goma airport to prevent relief shipments from being stolen off the runway.

The 290-strong U.S. military force helping with the humanitarian effort will be asked to install barbed wire around the runway, U.N. spokesman Panos Moutzisz said.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs George Moose, speaking at the reopening of the U.S. Embassy in the Rwandan capital of Kigali, said he was concerned that Rwanda's defeated government might try to return.

Aid workers in Goma say the former soldiers are talking about retaking the country.

But Maj. Gen. Romeo Dallaire, the Canadian who heads the U.N. peacekeeping force, said he doubts the defeated army has the leadership and logistical support to regroup anytime soon.

"There could be harassing attacks, but I don't think that militarily they're ready to take on anything major," Dallaire told reporters. "The bulk of the weapons systems they were able to save have been taken by the Zairian soldiers."

The United States and other countries have recognized the government installed by the victorious Tutsi-led rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front.

The U.S. Embassy was closed April 10 and most foreigners evacuated after Rwanda's Hutu president died in a suspicious plane crash and Rwandan soldiers and civilian militias went on a deadly rampage. Most of the estimated 300,000 to 500,000 victims belonged to the Tutsi ethnic minority.

Most of the estimated 900,000 refugees in the Zaire camps are Hutus, who fled Rwanda in fear that the victorious rebels would carry out revenge killings for the massacres. Cholera, dysentery and other illnesses have claimed the lives of more than 20,000 people in the squalid camps.

U.N. spokesman Moutzisz said the number of deaths had dropped to 700 to 800 a day, less than half the rate at the height of the cholera epidemic a week ago. But he said the number of deaths was likely to increase as dysentery spreads.

Aid workers say the only long-term solution to the refugee tragedy is for people to go home.

CLOUD DISPERSAL ENSURED SUNNY DAYS

Goodwill Games weather rigged

Maxim Korzhov
Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — The secret behind the unseasonably balmy weather at the Goodwill Games is out: The authorities have been toying with Mother Nature.

It was probably too much to believe that St. Petersburg's warmest July in 22 years just happened to coincide with the two-week competition. It turns out that, unlike the problems confronting some of the sports venues, the weather was one thing the organizers had planned for.

Vladimir Kozlov, head of the flying service of the city's Geophysical Observatory, said the city government signed a $17,000 contract with the observatory to disperse clouds.

When a cloud approaches, a plane is dispatched to pour silver salts over it, forcing it to start raining immediately.

Kozlov said that two planes had been sent to prevent storm clouds from coming to St. Petersburg over the weekend, and they each broke into rain about 30 miles southwest of the city.

"On another occasion, we were a bit late and it was raining over the Pulkovo Heights three miles from the city," he said.

Kozlov denied a rumor circulating among many St. Petersburg residents that the authorities have been firing cannons at the clouds, thus preventing rain and making it warmer at the same time.

"That's a public error — we don't fire any flak," Kozlov said, adding that the weather would likely have been good without any outside interference.

In fact, the weather has almost been too good. While the fans loved basking in 90-degree temperatures at the beach volleyball competition, it gave organizers headaches when it came to making ice for figure-skating and speed-skating events.

There's also the risk of fire.

"So far, we have registered three forest fires on the borders of our region, and they may spread closer to us if the hot weather lasts," said Viktor Balabushkin, deputy head of the city's fire service.

Early August in St. Petersburg is typically cold and rainy. Piercing winds blow from the Gulf of Finland, making the water too cold for swimming.

But this year, the water in the gulf remained a warm 72-75 degrees, and the lakes around the city have reached 79 degrees. The streets are almost deserted during the day as hundreds of thousands of people flock to the beaches.

Others only come out to enjoy the late hours — it doesn't get dark until around midnight.

Hundreds of people fill street cafes along the Neva River, watching as replica ships from Peter the Great's times slowly glide by.

"I used the Goodwill Games as a pretext to flee from Rome," Italian movie star Gina Lollobrigida told the local daily Neuskoye Vremya. "I envy you — you have these beautiful white nights when you can stop sleeping at night and enjoy life."

SIMPSON DEFENSE DUPED

Witness identified as con man

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The mystery witness in the O.J. Simpson murder case who reportedly said he saw two white men running from the crime scene is a con man who has given police false leads in other cases, the San Francisco Examiner reported Wednesday.

The newspaper identified the witness as Frank Chiuchiolo. The identity was confirmed by the Los Angeles Police Department, the Examiner said.

Chiuchiolo claimed in an interview with the Examiner a year ago that he could clear Mafia boss John Gotti. Chiuchiolo said he, not Gotti, had murdered mob boss "Big Paul" Castellano. Gotti was convicted of the 1985 slaying.

Chiuchiolo also contacted police in the case of Polly Klaas, the girl who was abducted from her bedroom in Petaluma, Calif., and murdered last year.

Files at the Polly Klaas Foundation indicate he reported he had seen the youngster about a month after she was slain.

He also approached authorities in Siskiyou County several years ago with information about a murder case there.

"He had people up here digging in an area looking for bodies, but none were ever found," an unidentified law enforcement source told the Examiner. "He apparently is just a nut. He's a con man."

He has served time in prison for forgery, grand theft, escape, auto theft and burglary, the newspaper said.

Simpson is charged with murdering his former wife Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and a friend of hers, Ronald Lyle Goldman, 25.

Political murders add up in Haiti

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The bodies of two men were found in a busy street Wednesday, the apparent victims of rising political violence as Haiti braces for a U.S. invasion.

The men, who appeared to be in their 20s, had been shot and their necks cinched with straps.

Their bodies had been dumped near Port-au-Prince's principal black market for gasoline, a major passage point between the Cite Soleil slum and the city center.

Since the 1991 army coup that overthrew President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, many of his supporters have been slain and their bodies left lying in public as a warning against dissent.

The latest killings followed the shooting Monday of opposition politician Reynold Georges, who has urged army commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras to step down to avoid U.S. military intervention.

Georges survived gunshot wounds in the back and arm and went into hiding at a private medical clinic.

Marie-Helene Georges said her husband told her a truckload of uniformed soldiers and armed civilians "machine-gunned his car." The metropolitan police issued a statement calling her accusation a provocation and demanding an explanation.

A statement by the army-installed government expressed sympathy for Georges and accused "subversive elements" of trying to create a "pretext for invasion."

Derailed train tests Boy Scouts

David Germain

BATAVIA, N.Y. — Ever prepared, the Boy Scouts aboard an Amtrak train did their duty after it plunged down an embankment in the dark Wednesday. They pulled out their flashlights and helped passengers from the wreckage.

About 110 people were injured in the wreck, at least two seriously.

The Lake Shore Limited, bound for Chicago with 340 passengers and 20 crew members, screeched off its rails and whipsawed its rear nine passenger cars down the 20-foot embankment into the woods at about 3:45 a.m.

Members of Boy Scout Troop 114 from Southwick, Mass., helped injured passengers off the train, carried luggage for elderly people and carted a baby carriage down the tracks. One scout crawled back into a derailed car to retrieve diapers for a woman traveling with her baby.

"These boys lived up to all the scout oaths and every scout law," Scoutmaster Bob Davis said. "Sometimes they look like a motley bunch. But when it gets down to it, they're ready for anything." calm as the train derailed on a straight stretch of heavily traveled Conrail track 30 miles east of Buffalo.

UPSURGE OF VIOLENCE EXPECTED

Another plan for peace rebuffed by Serb officials

Misha Savic
Associated Press

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The top Bosnian Serb leadership defied their patrons in Serbia and again rejected an international peace plan Wednesday, setting the stage for intensified warfare.

An assembly of Bosnian Serbs was expected to follow suit Wednesday night when it votes in Pale, a Bosnian Serb stronghold outside Sarajevo, on what is to be its final position on the plan to end 28 months of war. The 81-member assembly has rejected the plan previously but decided to reconsider it under pressure from Serbia and Russia.

The plan would require the Serbs, who now hold 70 percent of the country, to withdraw to 49 percent and give up their dream of uniting their lands with Serb-held territory in Croatia and Serbia proper. The rest of Bosnia would go to a federation of Muslims and Croats.

In a statement issued by SRNA, the Bosnian Serb news agency, the top leaders charged that the plan "has been deliberately compiled in such a way as to be unacceptable for the Serb side."

Final rejection of the plan could put Bosnian Serbs on a collision course with Serbia, which threatened Tuesday to cut off all aid to its proxies in Bosnia.

Serbia, the dominant republic in Yugoslavia, is widely blamed for inciting the Serb rebellion in Bosnia but has been suffering under U.N.-imposed economic sanctions for its role in the conflict.

The United States, Russia, Germany, Britain and France, authors of the peace plan, have said if the Bosnian Serbs continue to reject the proposal, trade sanctions against Serbia will be toughened.

Royals whirl off 12th straight win

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Royals extended baseball's longest winning streak this season to 12 games Wednesday night with a 9-5 victory over the Oakland Athletics.

The Royals haven't lost since dropping a 5-2 decision to Detroit on July 22.

Bob Hamelin broke Bo Jackson's club rookie record with his 23rd homer for the Royals, whose only longer winning streak was a 16-game run in 1977.

Hamelin's two-run homer chased Bobby Witt (8-10) in the fifth and broke the record Jackson set in 1987.

Troy Neel homered for Oakland, which has lost five straight.

Jose DeJesus (3-0) pitched five innings, allowing three runs and eight hits. DeJesus and David Cone each have three wins during the Royals' win streak.

Stan Belinda pitched 1 1/2 innings for his first American League start.

Reds 17, Giants 4

SAN FRANCISCO — Kevin Mitchell had a career-high five hits and drove in five runs as Cincinnati completed a three-game sweep with.

The Reds, who had 23 hits, won their sixth straight game, all on the road.

Bret Boone had four hits and scored five times, Brian Hunter had four RBI, and John Roper (6-1) allowed two runs on two hits in six innings.

Three of the first four batters Cincinnati sent to the plate, including Mitchell, hit home runs. Before the first out was recorded, Dave Burba was warming up in the Giants bullpen.

Jacob Brumfield and Boone started the game with back-to-back homers off Bud Black (4-2).

Rangers 11, White Sox 8

ARLINGTON, Texas — Jose Canseco homered twice and Rusty Greer brought in the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning, rallying the Texas Rangers past the Chicago White Sox.

Canseco's 31st homer tied it 8-8 in the seventh for the Rangers, who battled back from a 7-2 deficit. Canseco added a two-run double in the eighth.

The loss trimmed Chicago's lead in the AL Central to 1 1/2 games over Cleveland, and three games over surging Kansas City.

Frank Thomas hit his 37th homer for the White Sox.

Following Canseco's second homer, Will Clark singled, went to third on Juan Gonzalez's hit-and-run single, and scored run on Greer's fly to left off Kirk McCaskill (1-4).

Darren Oliver (4-0), the Rangers' fifth pitcher, got the win, and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

Yankees 2, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — The New York Yankees became the first team to assure themselves of being in first place on the Aug. 12 players strike deadline, defeating the Milwaukee Brewers in a rain-shortened game.

Sterling Hitchcock pitched a five-inning over seven innings and Jim Leyritz and Randy Velarde each hit home runs as the Yankees won their sixth straight.

Since the All-Star Game, the Yankees are 17-3 and have opened a nine-game lead over second-place Baltimore in the American League East. The Orioles lost 4-3 at Minnesota.

Hitchcock (4-1) won his third consecutive start. The game was called after a 1-hour, eight-minute delay in the eighth inning.

Twins 4, Orioles 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Leius capped a two-run rally in the bottom of the ninth with a two-out RBI single against reliever Lee Smith as the Twins snapped a six-game losing streak.

Alex Cole led off the ninth with a pinch single against Smith (1-4) and moved to second when Kirby Puckett walked on four pitches. After Shane Mack sacrificed, pinch hitter Chip Hale followed with a sacrifice fly to tie it. Kent Hrbek was walked intentionally and Leius followed with a single to left-center, scoring Puckett with the winning run.

It was the sixth blown save in 38 opportunities for Smith.

Kevin Tapani (10-7) pitched his fourth complete game of the season, allowing seven hits.

Red Sox 7, Blue Jays 2

BOSTON — Tom Brunansky's two-run homer capped a six-run fifth and Tim VanEgmond pitched 7 1/2 strong innings for his second major-league win.

Tim Lincecum had three RBI for the Red Sox, who sent 10 batters to the plate in the fifth. The victory allowed Boston to break a third-place tie with Toronto in the AL East.

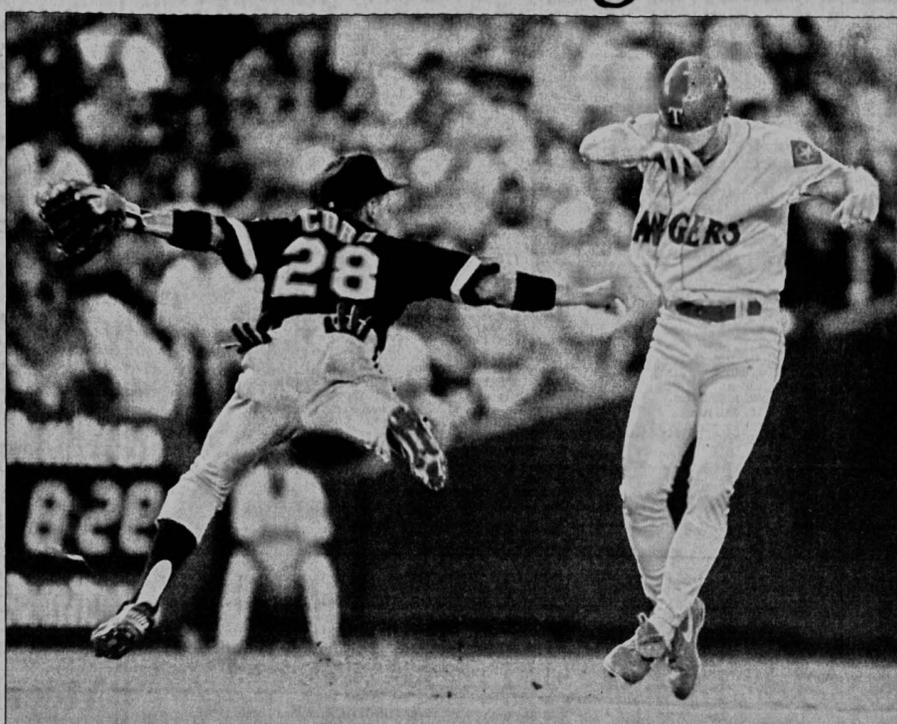

VanEgmond (2-3) allowed two runs and eight hits in his seventh major-league start. The rookie, who has split this season between the Red Sox and their Triple-A affiliate in Pawtucket, lost his first three major-league decisions, twice failing to get out of the first inning.

VanEgmond beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-2 last Friday for his first win.

Al Leiter (6-6) allowed six runs and six hits in four-plus innings.

Phillies 7, Pirates 0

PHILADELPHIA — Danny Jackson pitched a six-hitter and Kevin Stocker drove in three runs, leading Philadelphia past Pittsburgh.

Jackson (14-5) struck out seven and did not walk a batter in becoming the first Phillie to pitch a shutout this season. It was Jackson's 14th career shutout and his first since June 12, 1993.

Ricky Jordan homered and drove in three runs for the Phillies and Stocker, who also homered in Tuesday's game, hit his second homer of the year in the second inning off Steve Cooke (4-10).

Mets 3, Braves 2

NEW YORK — Jose Vizcaino's two-out, bases-loaded single brought home the winning run in the ninth inning as Atlanta's bullpen blew another save.

It was the 13th blown save for Atlanta this season and the 10th for Greg McMichael (3-6) in 30 chances.

Jeff Kent walked to open the ninth and went to third on David Segui's hit-and-run single. Rico Brogna then hit a one-hop single up the middle, tying the score 2-2.

After Mark Wohlers relieved McMichael, Ryan Thompson sacrificed, Joe Orsulak walked and Todd Hundley struck out before Vizcaino, pinch-hitting for Kelly Stinnett, lined a single over the shortstop's head to end the game.

Roger Mason (3-5) pitched one hitless inning for the victory.

Expos 3, Cardinals 3

MONTREAL — Montreal won its sixth straight game and opened up the biggest divisional lead of the season in the NL East.

Lenny Webster, Sean Berry and Moises Alou had solo home runs, Larry Walker had three doubles — increasing his NL-lead to 43 — and Gil Heredia allowed only four hits in seven innings.

Montreal, which has won 14 of its last 15 games, has a 5 1/2-game lead over Atlanta — a half-game larger than the Braves' largest divisional lead on April 18.

Heredia (5-3), making his second start of the season, allowed only one hit after Mark Whiten hit a leadoff single in the second. He struck out six and walked one.

Montreal scored four runs off Rheel Cormier (2-2) in the first inning.

Astros 2, Rockies 1

HOUSTON — Andujar Cedeno drove in the winning run with a two-out single in the ninth inning, giving Houston the victory.

Luis Gonzalez singled off Bruce Ruffin (3-5) with one out. Another out and one walk later, Cedeno lined a single to left and Gonzalez scored as Mike Kingery's throw to the plate was wide.

Colorado, which was a half-game out of first place exactly one week ago, lost for the fifth time in six games and dropped four games behind Los Angeles in the NL West. The Dodgers played later Wednesday.

Indians 7, Tigers 4

CLEVELAND — The Indians, aided by an error on Detroit pitcher Tim Lincecum, scratched out four runs in the fourth inning before Sandy Alomar's eighth-inning homer clinched it.

Belcher was charged with an error for missing the bag with his foot while covering first on Paul Sorrento's grounder to Cecil Fielder in the fourth inning.

The error loaded the bases, and the Indians added three more runs when Alomar was hit, Wayne Kirby grounded to second and Omar Vizquel hit a sacrifice fly for a 5-1 lead.

Fehr also said "there was considerable pressure within the union to consider not playing the All-Star Game" but that the players went ahead because they wanted to benefit the host Pittsburgh Pirates and management's new joint television venture with ABC and NBC.

He said the union concluded that owners had the attitude: "Players are suckers. Boy are they

Grunke had to be a "very good" trainer to get this position, Crowley said.

Grunke is in the top quarter of her class. She also has received academic honors in both years she has been in the program and holds a 3.2 grade-point average.

"Laura is intense and knowledgeable," said Dan Sovers, a senior in the athletic training program. "She is very concerned with the quality of her work."

Grunke is a perfectionist and when she gets frustrated or excited her cheeks turn bright red, said Sovers. Grunke worked with the field hockey team twice last semester. The first time she worked under senior trainer, Nicole Ross, at a regular season game.

stupid. We got to keep their money." "Maybe Dick will tell a judge and jury he didn't know what the players would do if they keep the money," Fehr said.

Ravitch said both sides knew there were dangers during collective bargaining, and said the clubs' benefited players by agreeing not to lock them out during spring training.

"They assumed a tremendous risk that the players could strike on any day and cause a massive disruption to the game," he said.

The second time Grunke was the only student trainer at a postseason tournament. She quickly found out what it would be like to be the trainer for the field hockey team. Two athletes were injured during the tournament and Grunke was called to evaluate them.

"I felt that Faye (Thompson) trusted me. I wanted to show her early on that I was capable and could make my own decisions," Grunke said. "It meant a lot to me that she trusted me."

Grunke is anxiously anticipating her first game as the senior trainer.

"I think I'll be nervous, but no one will be able to tell," Grunke said. "If you don't exude confidence, no one else will be confident in you either."

But will her cheeks be red? "No," Grunke said. Then she smiles. "Maybe from the cold."

BASEBALL

Videotape owner turns profit on Jordan's homer

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A San Jose advertising executive has a videotape of Michael Jordan's first professional home run.

And, like a second baseman turning a double play, the ad executive quickly turned a profit on his taping, negotiating an exclusive deal with the television show "Hard Copy."

Local television crews had already packed up when the former basketball star smacked the ball out of the park Saturday for the first time as a member of the Birmingham Barons.

Two local boys returned the ball to Jordan in exchange for autographed baseballs and a visit. But the Double-A team wanted more, pleading with spectators for a videotaped memento.

One is in the hands of Stu Ganz, the account executive who was visiting relatives in Alabama last weekend and decided to see Jordan play.

"I came home Sunday, and my wife told me that our niece in Birmingham had heard on the radio there was an all-points bulletin out for the tape," said Ganz.

He initially offered it to the team, but later signed a contract with "Hard Copy" that prevents airing the tape elsewhere until after Aug. 19. He refused to reveal the price.

"Hard Copy" announced Wednesday it will show the video for the first time Thursday night.

Now, Ganz is playing, well, hardball with the team.

"If this thing progresses the way it has been, they better think about something more than an autographed baseball," Ganz said.

But Barons spokesman Chris Pika said Ganz is not the only player in the videotape game.

The team has seen one tape already, and several others will be viewed this week. Unlike Ganz, however, most fans have modest expectations.

"We had some out-of-town people call and offer their tape, and said they'd be thrilled to have a couple of autographed balls," said Pika.

The team is in no hurry to decide which tape to present to Jordan, he added.

Pirates' board puts team up for sale

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates' board of directors voted Wednesday to put the team up for sale.

The vote means the city has six months to find a buyer that will keep the team in the city. The team has discussed a possible sale to groups headed by former Baltimore Orioles president Larry Lucchino and John J. Rigas, chairman of Adelphia Communications, a cable TV company.

The Pirates have lost about $60 million since the group bought the team in late 1985.

BIG TEN

Conference files lawsuit against chili parlor ad

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Big Ten Conference has sued Gold Star Chili Inc. to allege that the fast-food restaurant's "Big Ten" ad campaign infringed on the conference's trademark.

The Big Ten Conference Inc., based in Park Ridge, Ill., sued late Tuesday in U.S. District Court to accuse Gold Star Chili of Cincinnati of deceptive trade practices, unfair competition and infringing on the "Big Ten" trademark that appears on sporting goods.

The conference's lawsuit said Gold Star Chili began a radio advertising and billboard campaign June 1 to promote the company's offer of 10 cheese cones for $8.99. The billboard ads were headlined: "The Big Ten."

The conference said it asked Gold Star on July 11 to stop using "Big Ten" in the ads, but the company refused.

Sessions turn heated, Fehr threatens suit

Ronald Blum

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baseball owners and players waged an angry bargaining session Wednesday, driving the sides farther apart and dimming hopes of a settlement before the union's Aug. 12 strike deadline.

Union head Donald Fehr threatened a lawsuit over the owners' failure to pay about $7.8 million to the players' benefit plan on Aug. 1. He called owners "silly," chided them for their "cavalier attitude" and labeled the pension decision "a cheap shot" that was "below the belt."

He said players might even consider striking earlier, but said there were no plans to reconvene the union's executive board, which set the strike date last week.

The sides spent little time discussing management's insistence on a salary cap, which Fehr said players will never accept.

"There's a better chance of the United States returning to a monarchy," Tom Reich, an agent for many players, said at a news conference in Pittsburgh.

Another bargaining session is scheduled for Thursday, when the union presents its economic analysis of revenue sharing. Fehr said it didn't appear there was a way to avoid the sport's eighth work stoppage in 22 years.

"If it keeps up like this, there's no place to go," Fehr said.

Management negotiator Richard Ravitch insisted that owners would never accept an agreement that doesn't give them cost certainty.

"We have a right, a fundamental right, to bargain for our cost of labor," he said.

Players believe a salary cap would slow the increase in salaries, and Fehr says they'll strike "as long as it takes" to defeat management's plan and maintain a free market.

"The owners simply believe they should be entitled to operate from different rules than everyone else does," Fehr said.

"Of course," he said sarcastically. "They're owners."

Executive council chairman Bud Selig and Ravitch say 19 clubs project they will lose money this year. The Los Angeles Times, quoting a lawyer close to the talks, reported Wednesday that two of the clubs are the Los Angeles Dodgers and Chicago White Sox.

Fehr said owners won't release the list of projected money losers because of public reaction.

"No one would take the notion of poverty seriously," he said. "You all would fall on the floor laughing."

He also criticized owners for failing to attend bargaining sessions and pointed out that clubs can require a player to be present for at least one meeting when negotiating their individual contracts. Fehr said the union Wednesday asked owners to delete that provision, and Ravitch refused.

"Owners must get it both ways," he said.

Fehr also belittled Ravitch, who became the management's labor negotiator three years ago. Fehr said the owners' pension decision was "based on his wide experience in baseball that Dick waxed eloquently about."

Ravitch said the union should have expected that owners wouldn't make the pension payment since the benefit agreement expired March 19.

"I'm unaware of any situation where an employer makes a payment and he's not contractually obligated to do so during the course of collective bargaining," he said.

Fehr, in a letter to Ravitch that the union made public, told owners their decision was "in contravention of all custom or practice."

"This was a cheap shot, and a blind one, and was intended that way," he wrote. "Why the players would want to be 'partners' with people who do that is beyond imagination."

Fehr said owners were obligated to make the payment — one-seventh of the $57 million yearly contribution under the expired agreement — because players appeared in the All-Star Game last month.

"Do you think the players would have played the All-Star Game if they knew this?" Fehr said he asked Ravitch. "He said, 'I don't know.'"

ATHLETIC TRAINING

Senior pushes through ranks

Tracie Alt
Special to The Daily Iowan

When a field hockey player goes down in the middle of a game, fans wait anxiously to see if she can resume playing. The person who makes this decision is an important part of both an athlete's life and how the rest of the game is played.

Next fall, Laura Grunke will make these decisions.

Grunke, a senior in the athletic training program, will be the senior trainer for the field hockey team starting this season. Her duties include evaluating an injured player within mere seconds to see if she can continue playing. While Grunke will be on the field, she also is under supervision of the head field hockey trainer, Faye Thompson, as well as a physician from the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Grunke will attest that becoming a senior trainer takes time and hard work.

A student must go through a rigorous application process get accepted into the athletic training program. Once accepted, the student faces a three-year program with a schedule that includes clinical training and an academic course entailing the full-dissection of a cadaver.

"Cadaver was really hard, really challenging, and a pain in the butt sometimes. But it was worth it because I got a lot out of it," Grunke said.

There is more to athletic training than taping ankles.

By the time Grunke completes the program in May 1995, she will have put in more than 800 hours at the training room, a requirement by the state of Iowa to receive state licensing.

As a sophomore, Grunke spent about 10 hours a week in one of the four training rooms on campus. Taping tables, modalities — machines in nonathlete terminology — and equipment engineered to help various parts of an injured athlete's body.

"I walked into the program totally blind. I had no idea what was involved," Grunke said. "I was overwhelmed at first, but things got easier."

During her sophomore year she learned the basics: how to tape, how to run equipment — such as whirlpools — and how to interact with coaches and athletes.

"At first you're the go-for, get this and go stock that, but as time passes you acquire more responsibility," Grunke said.

"I walked into the program totally blind. I had no idea what was involved. I was overwhelmed at first, but things got easier."

Laura Grunke, Iowa senior athletic trainer

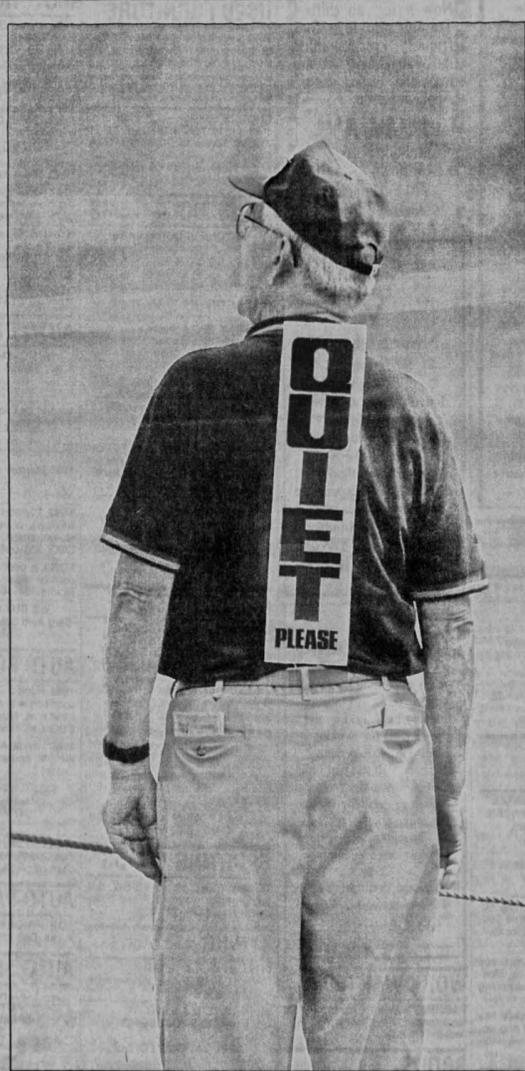

The third-year Grunke was matched up with a sport, according to her preference of sports and where a committee — made up of associate staff — felt she would get the most out of the program.

"Field hockey is not played in the Midwest," Grunke said. "I wanted to put myself in an unfamiliar situation and see how I handled it."

Generally, students who need less supervision and can make decisions on their own, are assigned to teams of their own; otherwise, they are assigned under additional supervision by trained personnel or where there is more than one student trainer, according to Ed Crowley, director of athletic training services.

The responsibilities of a senior trainer are numerous. They include evaluating and initiating treatments on athletes, establishing and maintaining rosters, and checking athletes before and after practices and games.

CHICAGO — The Big Ten Conference has no plans for further expansion, won't change the conference name and will probably participate in a new bowl alliance, commissioner Jim Delany said Wednesday.

"Unless we are able to duplicate that kind of addition (Penn State), I don't think we would move toward expansion simply for the sake of an even number of teams or a structure that would require divisions," Delany said on the second day of the Big Ten kickoff meetings.

"I do not expect expansion any time in the future."

Neither, he said, will the Big Ten become the Big Eleven to reflect the addition of Penn State, which played football in the league for the first time last season.

"If we were going to change our name, I think we would have done it four years ago. There are 3 million people who call themselves Big Ten people and institutions, Delany said.

He said an effort is under way to develop a new logo that would recognize all 11 members without changing the name.

The Big Ten has a contract for its champion to play the Pac-10 champion through 2001. The conference also has a contract for its second-, third- and fourth-place teams to play in the Florida Citrus, Holiday and Hall of Fame bowls.

Officials are studying a proposal for an alliance that would rotate a national championship game.

CHICAGO — With three hits already under his belt, there wasn't as much pressure on Benito Santiago in the ninth inning.

"It was beautiful, all I had to do was hit a fly ball," Santiago said after his sacrifice fly scored Jeff Conine with the go-ahead run as the Florida Marlins beat the Chicago Cubs 9-8 Wednesday.

Florida was ahead 6-2, then behind 7-6, before pulling it out.

"These games are never over when the wind is blowing out," Marlins manager Rene Lachemann said. "We only had one base-on-balls and that's good. You try not to walk anybody unless you want trouble here."

Santiago went 3-for-3 with two doubles and Conine and Gary Sheffield hit two-run homers for Florida, which won its second straight game following a seven-game losing streak.

Each team had three homers with a wind blowing out at 15 to 20 mph.

Conine doubled to open the ninth and went to third on Greg Colbrunn's single. Santiago then hit a medium-range fly ball, and left-fielder Derrick May did not make a throw home.

Kurt Abbott added a pinch-hit, RBI-double later in the inning, giving the Marlins an insurance run they ended up needing.

Rich Scheid (1-2) pitched 1½ innings for the victory, giving up just one hit. Robb Nen got his 13th save in 13 opportunities, striking out three in the ninth as well as allowing a solo homer to Sammy Sosa with two outs.

Randy Veres (1-1), the third of four pitchers for Chicago, took the loss.

Chicago went ahead 7-6 in the seventh on Glenallen Hill's two-run single and May's infield RBI single, but Jerry Browne tied it in the eighth with a solo homer, his third.

Jim Bullinger was tagged for six runs and nine hits in five-plus innings. He gave up homers to Conine in the fourth and Sheffield in the fifth.

Chris Hammond started for Florida only hours after being activated from the disabled list, but left the game in the fourth inning when he was hit on the lower leg by a liner off May's bat.

"I feel for the guy. He just came back from the DL. It's just something that happens," said May, who went 4-for-4, with three RBI. "I'm happy but I'm not, because the team lost. When that happens, you feel empty."

Hammond, who suffered a contusion, did not return to the stadium after X-rays at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Reliever John Johnstone retired the first eight batters he faced, four on strikeouts, then gave up back-to-back homers to May, his seventh, and Steve Buechele, his 14th, in the sixth.
