Shalala eyes future of health care

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

If Americans are healthier in 30 years, then health-care reform will have been successful, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala told a standing-room-only audience in the Union Tuesday.

The future health of Americans will be the tool used to measure the success of current reform. Although other issues within the health-care bills inspire congressional debate, Shalala said the health of the nation is the key concern.

"What this is really about is not just fairness or equity," she said. "It's whether all these things make Americans healthier. Thirty years from now, this debate will be judged by whether Americans are healthier and whether every American had a chance to be healthier."

As the Clinton administration works toward a health-care reform, national debate about the policy continues.

"The debate is not finished yet,"

"This administration will always believe that every American ought to have health insurance and that it never be taken away."

Donna Shalala

said Shalala. "It will not be finished until every American has health care in this country, has it at an affordable price and has it no matter what happens to them or a member of their family."

Shalala said health care is currently out of reach for many Americans. Throughout the presidential campaign, health care was an issue of controversy and debate; the concerns discussed during the campaign continue to be of importance to the Clinton administration, she said.

Shalala said the administration remains committed to resolving health-care problems and providing universal coverage.

"This administration will always believe that every American ought to have health insurance and that it never be taken away," she said.

"The president argued that it was not fair for government to provide health care only to the poorest of poor, who were not working, and millions of working Americans didn't have access to health care."

"We have not changed our beliefs in any way," she said.

Shalala said research remains fundamental and must be considered in health-care reform. Shalala referred to research as an "extra investment" that must continue to be funded.

"We need to continue to invest in cutting-edge science," she said.

As a research institution, the UI is affected by the commitment to research and development. Henri Manasse, UI vice president for Health Sciences, said research needs to comply with the trends of health care.

"It is a very fundamental aspect of what we do as a university. It is important that we continue to innovate; on the other hand, we need to push the research agenda into health-care reform," Manasse said.

Manasse said the UI is affected by health-care reform on three fronts.

"We are a provider of health-care services, we are also a purchaser of See SHALALA, Page 12A

Husband of accident victim sues driver for negligence

A Coralville man is suing the driver of the car which crashed into his pregnant wife's automobile last summer, killing her and her 8-month-old fetus.

John Weihe, husband of the deceased woman, filed a suit on Aug. 29 at the Johnson County Courthouse against Mary Jane Waldie alleging negligent operation of her vehicle.

Waldie was driving north on Highway 1 ahead of Weihe's wife, Judith, on July 28, 1993. The petition claims that Waldie lost control of her vehicle, crossed the center line and collided with an oncoming semi tractor-trailer. The semi then crossed the center line and collided head-on with Judith Weihe's vehicle, killing her and her fetus.

Rosa Parks assaulted at home, later released

DETROIT (AP) — Rosa Parks, whose refusal to give up her bus seat to a white man sparked the modern civil rights movement, was assaulted at home Tuesday night and treated for facial injuries.

Parks, 81, was taken to Detroit Receiving Hospital, where she was initially listed in good condition with swelling on the right side of her face. She was released later Tuesday.

Parks was upstairs in her home between 8 p.m. and 8:20 p.m. when she heard a noise downstairs, said Police Chief Isaiah McKinnon. When she went downstairs to investigate, a man was inside her house, reeking of alcohol, the chief said.

Her back door had been knocked off its hinges. The man told her someone else had knocked down the door and he was there to protect her, and then he hit her, McKinnon said.

The assailant fled on foot with about $50, McKinnon said. No arrest had been made by late Tuesday.

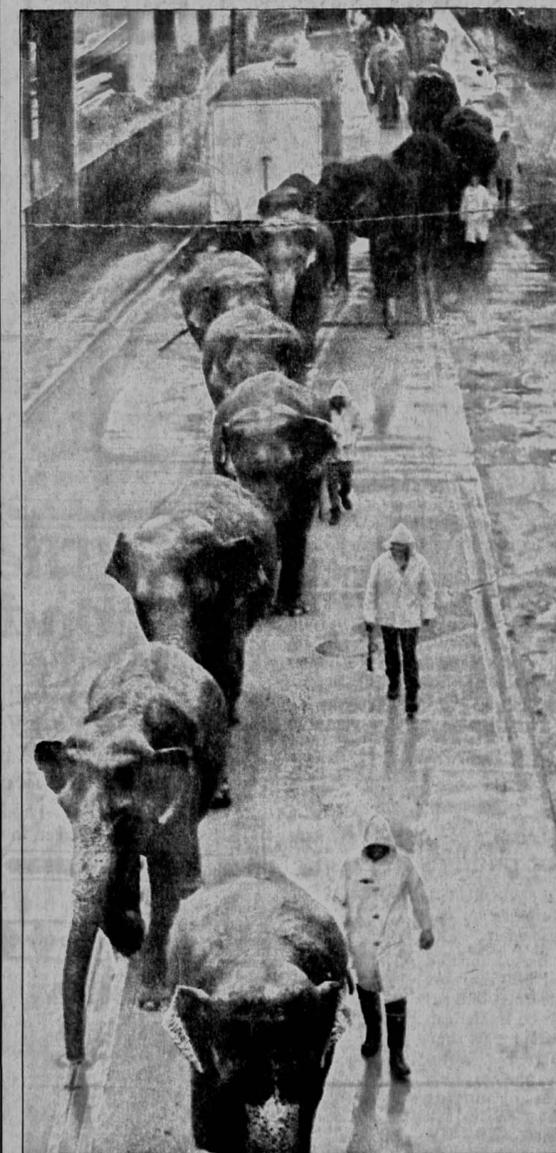

"You would hope that wouldn't happen to anyone," said Cliff Russell, a spokesman for Mayor Dennis Archer. "I don't know what to say about anyone who would do something like that to Rosa Parks."

Animal walk brightens rainy Iowa morning

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

Eighteen elephants ambled single file through a downpour in the streets of Cedar Rapids Tuesday morning from a train to where they're kept for the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Besides the elephants, people of all ages watched horses, llamas, camels and zebras participate in the "grand animal walk." The event began at Old Rock Island Yards around 9:30 a.m. and ended on Third Street outside of the Five Seasons Center.

The rain diluted the crowds, but Ryan Caldwell, 3, of Cedar Rapids, braved the weather and was excited to see the elephants. "I liked seeing the elephants," he said. "They were big. I've seen them on 'Dumbo.'"

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus last performed in Cedar Rapids in 1991.

Christy Hemmer, marketing assistant for the Five Seasons Center, said the walk is part of the circus's everyday routine. "The walk is not a parade," she said. "It is a means of getting the animals into the arena. It's really not a big show."

Hemmer said although the walk was not canceled, the weather did have its effects on the event.

"We usually get local people to ride on the elephants," she said. "We had it scheduled, but because of the weather we had to call it off. It would have been dangerous because elephants sway when it rains."

The elephants, part of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, strutted through the downtown area, leading a long line of camels, zebras and many other animals. Two shows were performed Tuesday and two more performances will be offered today at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. at the Five Seasons Center in Cedar Rapids. Ticket prices range from $9.50 to $17.50.

SENTENCING SCHEDULED FOR SEPT. 29

Former UI athlete convicted of assault

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

A former UI football player was convicted of eight counts of simple assault by the Johnson County Courts for groping women in Iowa City on Aug. 25.

Toney Bates, who left the UI at the end of last year's fall semester, was charged with nine counts of simple assault for grabbing women in public places, such as bus stops, restaurants, classrooms and sidewalks. Two of the seven women who charged him with sexual assault said he fondled them twice.

Between September and December of 1993, more than 21 similar complaints were made to the Iowa City Police Department and the UI Department of Public Safety.

Janet Lyness, an assistant Johnson County attorney, said at least two of the women were UI students.

On one count of simple assault, the court ruled not guilty after the witness misidentified Bates at the trial. The woman also gave a very different physical description of the alleged perpetrator.

Lyness said Bates could be sentenced to 30 days in jail or $100 for each count.

"He could potentially be given consecutive sentences, which would be 150 days maximum," she said. "We will be asking for jail time because of the nature of the offense."

Johnson County Prosecutor Emily Colby said the prosecution has not determined what punishment to seek.

"We feel jail time is warranted due to the number of charges," she said.

Two women filed a complaint with the Iowa City police, and five women reported Bates to UI campus security. Three women took less than three seconds to identify Bates and said they were 100 percent certain he had assaulted them. Another woman said she was 95 percent positive. A fifth witness spent 30 seconds identifying Bates and said she was 85 percent sure.

Bates' girlfriend said she could account for his whereabouts at all times and that he could not possibly have committed these offenses. Lyness said there was no doubt in her mind that Bates was the perpetrator.

"The women who identified Bates were very certain," Lyness said. "Two of them had lots of time and very good opportunities to see him and identify him. They gave very good descriptions, too."

Colby said the witnesses were very credible.

"There were daytime incidents and that very much enhances their credibility," she said.

Bates' attorney was not available for comment.

Bates pleaded not guilty in all cases and provided witnesses who alleged he was either at class, at weight training, at football practice or with his girlfriend.

The court ruled that although the evidence showed he should have been at certain places, none of it confirmed that he actually was at those locations. All offenses took place between noon and 3:30 p.m.

Because the contact was physical and at close range, the courts said there was no doubt of the women's conviction, and the way they identified Bates demonstrates the women are certain. Each person was independently shown a picture of Bates and recognized him.

Police thought there was more than one individual assaulting women. In some instances reported, Bates did not fit the physical description of the perpetrator. He was listed in the 1993 Hawkeye Football Guide as 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing 262 pounds.

A criminal justice major, Bates was a UI junior from California on athletic scholarship. UI assistant football coaches Ted Gill and John Austin refused to comment.

The trial was held June 23, 1994 and sentencing will be carried out Sept. 29, 1994.

PRIZE TO BE AWARDED SEPT. 16

Daily Iowan prevails in national contest

The Daily Iowan

The Daily Iowan was named College Newspaper of the Year by the Society of Professional Journalists Tuesday.

The newspaper was selected from 12 regional finalists on criteria including effectiveness of interpretation, accuracy and completeness, enterprise, style, interest and resourcefulness in overcoming obstacles.

"We are pleased to win this award," The Daily Iowan Publisher Bill Casey said. "We have worked for years to make this newspaper the best."

The judges praised the newspaper for its editorial balance, its story selection and clean layout.

"The paper is an attractive, easy to read package with an excellent story mix that serves readers well," the judges wrote. "Good work and very professional."

The Daily Iowan has not won this award since it triumphed consecutively in 1984 and 1985.

"We are constantly striving to improve The Daily Iowan, and the hard work has paid off," Casey said.

The award will be formally presented at the Society of Professional Journalists' national convention in Nashville, Tenn., on Sept. 16.

Personalities

Pageant winner loves being queen for a year

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

When UI senior and dance major Sabetha Clark began entering beauty pageants, she did it for the scholarships that were available. But now, after winning all three contests she has entered in Iowa, she said she has gained much more than money.

Clark said pageants have not only helped her grow as a person but have also helped her career as a dancer.

She got her start four years ago when a mass mailing was sent to her home about the 1990 Miss Teen of Iowa pageant. Although she had no experience, Clark entered the pageant and won.

"I didn't do anything to prepare,"

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

UI senior and dance major Sabetha Clark poses with years of beauty pageant competitions. Clark has some of the crowns and ribbons she has won in her won all three state pageants she's participated in.

Because of this, Clark did not enter her next pageant until 1993 - Miss Teen Des Moines, which she won. She currently holds the crown for the 1994 America's Cover

It was meant to be that way for a reason. If I had fun and met new people, it was worth it."

Besides the social aspect, Clark said there are other benefits of pageants.

"It's a good resume builder," she said. "I'm trying to get into the dance world, and anything you can add helps."

Clark has been able to add choreography experience to her resume. After winning her title, she was invited by the state directors of the Miss Teen of Iowa pageant to choreograph later pageants.

Other benefits Clark has received have been less tangible.

"I see the most inspirational things at pageants," she said. "Just seeing how much these women have worked - it's phenomenal. The obstacles they have overcome are incredible. Most people don't see that, which is why pageants are still struggling to get respect."

"These pageants aren't just about the face and body. It has really taught me you need to be beautiful on the inside."

Although she gets a lot out of pageants, Clark said she also tries to give a lot back after she wins.

"I really like to use my title," she said. "In my opinion, everywhere you go, every time you're wearing the crown, little kids idolize you. So in those situations it's important to act as a role model so the kids really have someone to look up to."

As for her future in pageants, Clark said she definitely wants to stay involved.

"I've been getting a lot of calls from Miss USA and Miss America," she said. "I foresee trying in the next couple years, but those are the biggies, and I really need to be ready for it. Once I decide to do something, I really like to dedicate myself to it."

DAY IN THE LIFE

she said. "I didn't know what I was getting involved in. My friend came over and told me, 'This is how a model walks.' But once I got out there, I just walked like myself."

After that first pageant, Clark said she got more serious about preparing for competitions. She now tries to keep herself informed about current events in case questions are asked about them during the pageants. She has also gotten sponsors to help with expenses.

Clark's evening gowns for the competitions are given to her by a woman in her hometown of Carroll, Iowa, and her portfolio was shot for free by Glamour Shots.

"If you're willing to get sponsors, it's a lot of fun and you don't have to spend a lot of money," she said. "You hear about people who go out, and each outfit is $2,000. That's fine if their parents can afford it, but mine can't."

"They say it's not what you wear, but the personality you project. And hopefully that's true; otherwise, the girl with the most expensive outfit would win."

After her win in Miss Teen of Iowa, Clark said the letters starting pouring in from pageants around the country. But her main concern was graduating from high school and starting college.

"These pageants aren't just about the face and body. It has really taught me you need to be beautiful on the inside."

Miss Iowa pageant.

Although she's won all three state pageants she's participated in, she's never made the top 10 in a national competition. Clark said she gets a little disappointed about this, but she tries to stay positive.

"I'm a very spiritual person," she said. "I think of it as if I don't win,

Eric Stoltz debunks 'sensitive' image

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actor Eric Stoltz isn't the sweet, vulnerable, tender lad from "Mask" and "Some Kind of Wonderful" after all.

"That's a lovely persona I have, but it's not something that I'm aware of or trying to develop," said Stoltz, who has recently been hanging out with the "Natural Born Killers" crowd on-screen.

"In fact, in my real life, I'm really tough. I'm a killer! It's the nice stuff that's all an act. Actually, I'm not trying to develop any persona. I think that might be limiting," he said in a recent interview.

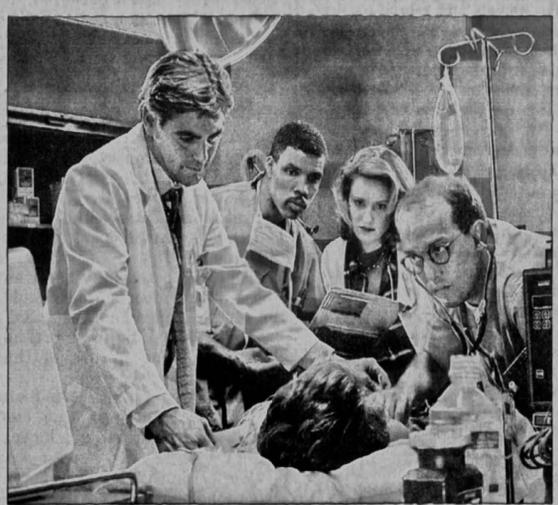

Stoltz plays a just-plain-nuts safecracker pulling a bank heist in the just-released movie "Killing Zoe," and he was in the Cannes Film Festival's best picture "Pulp Fiction." He recommends the films to those who "enjoy a certain amount of violence and darkness in movies."

Andy Garcia moves to producing music

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Andy Garcia has more on his mind than movies.

Monica Seles porks out after stabbing

NEW YORK (AP) - Eighteen months after she was stabbed at a tennis tournament, Monica Seles has packed on almost 30 pounds by binging on junk food, according to the New York Post.

The 20-year-old, once a top-ranked tennis star, was seen this week in Monte Carlo at the "Weight Watchers Celebrity Sports Festival," the Post reported Tuesday.

She has not played a professional match since she was stabbed in the shoulder by a deranged fan in Germany last year. The wound has healed, but Seles has declined to give a date for a comeback.

A friend of the athlete told the Post that the tennis player turned to food to comfort herself after the attack. The result: an extra 28 pounds on the once-svelte frame, according to the friend, who requested anonymity.

Willie Nelson plays for buddies in prison

LEWIS RUN, Pa. (AP) - Willie Nelson's on the road again.

He performed for 500 inmates at the federal prison in McKean on Monday, then signed autographs for fans waiting outside the chain-link fence.

"Let's get this jail moving," Nelson told prisoners. They shouted back, "We love you, Willie!"

After the show - 140 miles north-east of Pittsburgh, Nelson visited with nonprisoners who caught the show from beyond the grounds, telling them he had performed for "a couple of buddies in there."

EXPENSE TO TRICKLE DOWN TO RENTERS

City reveals plans for new water facility

Kirsten Scharnberg
The Daily Iowan

Student renters are likely to feel the pressure of the city's proposed $50 million water-treatment plant, as landlords may escalate rents to compensate for increased water rates.

The Iowa City City Council unveiled plans for the multimillion-dollar project Tuesday in an afternoon press conference.

Defraying the costs of the plant will hinge upon increasing rates for water usage, City Manager Steve Atkins said. Monthly water bills are expected to almost double by 1996. The cost of minimum water usage averaged $22.87 in 1993 and is estimated to soar to $42.01.

Atkins did not give much hope to the already-strapped student renter.

"Landlords are free to pass along whatever costs they pass along. They'll invariably just say the other guy did it," he said.

UI student Lon Sarver, a Lakeside Manor Apartments renter, said he already pays $424 for his two-bedroom town house and has mixed emotions about the new plant.

"My first reaction is, 'God that sucks,' because I can hardly afford rent now," Sarver said.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

City Manager Steve Atkins outlines location plans for the city's new water treatment plant Tuesday. The plant will be located north of Interstate 80 next to the Iowa River.

"But maybe it's necessary. I mean, you don't want to have to use a fork to drink your water."

The site has caused controversy. Complaints center upon the layout of the plant, which requires 230 acres.

Ralph Russell, a spokesman for Howard R. Green Co., of Cedar Rapids, contends that the space is necessary to preserve safety and water levels. The acreage ownership is essential in order to ensure a 1,000-foot diameter around each of the five wells because the porous ground is highly susceptible to contamination, Russell said.

Russell claimed a smaller site would place the wells too close together, as a result, the drawing of water from one well would compromise the supply of the other four wells.

Atkins said the plant has received undue bad press because the benefits of having a single site combining water treatment and supply have been ignored. The water will be blended from the site's five wells and the Iowa River, thus greatly increasing the quality of water.

The location of the site will minimize contamination because its planned location, north of Interstate 80, will help to alleviate problems posed by a potential chemical spill from the interstate's heavy traffic, Russell said.

Iowa City City Councilor Karen Kubby believes that conservation will play a key role in the new site. Kubby believes promoting conservation measures will help the public feel they have control over the skyrocketing rates.

"The unit price may go up, but if people are using less water, then it will even out," Kubby says.

The plant also has legal issues pending, including a lawsuit from Jim Glasgow, whose home and business are located on the site.

HIGH COST BLAMED ON SUPPLY SHORTAGE

Increase in gas prices exhausts student funds

Amy Biederman
The Daily Iowan

Skyrocketing gas prices may have UI students and local residents digging deeper into their pockets, but it hasn't stopped them from driving.

Iowa City and Coralville service stations' gas prices went from about 98 cents per gallon this summer to $1.19 per gallon for unleaded self-service gas, and as high as $1.40 for premium fuels, said Chris Akers, an employee at Doc's Riverside Standard, 801 S. Riverside Drive.

"A lot of it has to do with the price of crude oil, and problems at pipelines are making somewhat of a shortage," said John White, an employee at Hilltop 76 Car Wash and Service Center, 1123 N. Dodge St., about the rising prices. "Demand is one of the most common problems."

UI senior Steve Steine said he handles higher gas prices by not filling his tank and cutting back on actual driving.

"You can't put as much gas in your car and have to buy cheap gas instead of good gas," Steine said, adding that finding the cash to pay for more expensive gas is not easy. "It's tough to budget your money when you don't have any."

UI junior Aaron Foelske said he cuts down on his personal expenses to save for gas money to get home.

"It has forced me to stay in Iowa City a little longer than I want," he said.

Gas prices do not deter UI graduate student Karen Knox from filling up.

"I go places that I have to go," she said. "It's not like I cut back on driving. I haven't really adjusted my spending, it just takes three or four more dollars to fill up my tank."

UI freshman Deb Hanshaw said she didn't even bring her car to Iowa City because "it's too expensive to fill it."

White said customers are not paying for more expensive gasoline, but rather for higher taxes.

"Gasoline itself has stayed relatively constant and the government takes advantage of that to get a little extra money," White said. "So it all gets blamed on us retailers."

From 1990 to 1993 the federal and state gas tax was 34 cents per gallon, White said. Now, Iowa gas buyers pay 38.4 cents per gallon in Iowa and federal taxes, which White said is a "pretty big jump over the last several years."

He said Iowa has one of the highest gas taxes in the country.

OFFICIALS PROPOSE NO BACKUP

Officials not hung up on 911 rerouting plan

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

No plans for a 911 backup system have been made, despite the system's temporary shutdown Sunday night due to a technical failure.

The system's shutdown caused the Iowa City 911 number to become disconnected from 11:45 p.m. Sunday until 1:24 a.m. Monday. Residents of Iowa City who tried to call the system during its disconnection would have heard a fast busy signal, but no warning that the system was down.

A system that would reroute phone calls over a backup line is built into telephone systems as much as possible, said Lynn Gippel, spokeswoman for US West Communications in Iowa.

Iowa City's system has two separate phone lines, but they usually ride in the same cable. If the cable were cut, both lines would be severed, rendering the system useless.

Another system has lines in two separate cables, allowing for the rerouting of calls in the event one is cut. Gippel said a similar backup system was installed between Des Moines and Ames, which allowed them to retain long-distance service throughout the 1993 floods.

"During the flood, one cable became weighed down when a bridge collapsed, but residents did not lose their long distance because of the second cable," Gippel said.

However, Gippel said the 911 system shutdown Sunday night would not have been prevented by this sort of backup system. Most shutdowns are caused by cables being cut, but Sunday night's problem was a computer malfunction.

Although any computer-generated 911 system is apt to fail from time to time Gippel said a backup system could work if a central point is affected. Gippel said a system which transfers 911 calls to another county whenever there is a technical problem is a viable possibility.

The 911 system, as it stands, has no backup system alerting callers that the system is down. Both police and US West Communications rely on the media to alert the public during a system shutdown.

The 911 system operates from a public safety answering point located at the Iowa City police station.

Operation Rescue sued

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The woman who suffered a miscarriage and then got an anti-abortion letter is suing the group that sent the letter.

Karen Stewart received the letter from Operation Rescue last August, a few days after the anti-abortion group had spotted her visiting a Des Moines doctor who is a frequent target of protests.

Stewart said she had a troublesome pregnancy and was seeing Dr.

Herbert Remer in hopes of preventing the miscarriage. She said the letter caused her emotional distress.

Her lawsuit seeks compensatory and punitive damages against leaders of Operation Rescue, including Iowa president Judi Malki and communications director David Shedlock. They could not be reached for comment.

Operation Rescue officials sent the letter after noting Stewart's license plate and then using state records to find her name and address.

RESIDENT PENALIZED AFTER 20 YEARS

Delinquent water-user ordered to pay by Council

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City is going to collect $114,219 in unpaid sewer charges from David Baculis in the form of property taxes, the Iowa City City Council voted Tuesday night.

The matter was deferred for 60 days, from the June 14 Council meeting, in an attempt to settle for three-quarters of the payment. Those attempts failed, and the Council voted 6-1. Councilor Karen Kubby voted no.

Baculis received sewer service for 20 years without being charged, but the city only has records for 10 years. City policy usually asks for half the delinquent charges in similar cases. Kubby said she thought he should only be charged half of the amount the city has records for.

Councilor Bruno Pigott said,

"In essence, we are asking him to pay half because many of the years are not recorded. We may not be following by the letter of the policy, but by the spirit."

No one spoke at a public hearing that was held on the resolution before the vote on collecting the unpaid sewer charges.

In other business, a resolution was passed to approve plans for the 1994 Curb Ramps Project. This involves curbing-dyeing to help sight-impaired citizens know where a slope begins for entering a street.

The applications to the concrete may be rose-colored, city staff said. The solution is applied in the curing process, so it is part of the concrete and insures the color will never chip off or become slippery. The colors used may vary, but all create a contrast between light and dark.

COMPANIES' COOPERATION LIMITED

Alternative cable services discussed by supervisors

Mick Klemesrud
The Daily Iowan

Cable rates should be unaffected, but competition could get fierce if the Johnson County Board of Supervisors releases cable companies from paying franchise fees for doing business in Johnson County.

At an informal meeting Tuesday, the board discussed lifting restrictions and giving cable companies the freedom to fight for customers in a free market. Among the other options presented to the board, cable rate regulation was the least popular, barely nudging out the idea of an amended version of the current ordinance.

In an effort to improve service to cable customers, the board tried to investigate if there was a history of complaints but was met with little cooperation.

Kim Bengte, deputy administrative assistant to the Johnson County Broadband Telecommunications Commission, said, "I was unsuccessful in obtaining complaint history from either Vantage or TCI. Neither company felt they were obligated or had the responsibility of sharing that information with anyone. Mr. Bill Blough (of TCI cable) indicated to me that most of their complaints center around service."

The board planned to use complaints as a starting point for cable improvement; it also looked to improve in cable technology.

"Prime Star (a direct satellite company) has available a new three foot in diameter minisatellite dish which is available for lease or purchase," Bengte said.

Cost and convenience are the main factors of the new direct satellite service. Rural areas no longer have to wait for a cable company to install cable lines.

A dish is available for rent at $350 a year, or $500 to buy with a one-year maintenance agreement. The dish, which Bengte recommends, carries 30 channels for $31.45 a month, with the possibility of more channels in the future.

Bengte said the new system has no restrictions, but as the technology increases, so will rates.

PEACE ANTICIPATED

N. Ireland poised for cease-fire

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Reports that the IRA was about to call a cease-fire after a quarter-century of bloodshed put nerves on edge Tuesday in Northern Ireland's majority Protestant community.

Expectations of a breakthrough rose as the United States granted a visa to veteran IRA man Joseph Cahill. Arriving in New York, Cahill said it was a private visit, but the timing suggested it was part of a carefully choreographed buildup to an announcement.

In Dublin, Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds declared, "I believe we are poised for peace, and in a very short time we will be able to make an entirely new beginning on this island."

That enthusiasm was not shared in Protestant districts of Belfast, where any agreement acceptable to the IRA is automatically suspect.

"Sure the English want rid of us. They'll do a deal with the IRA if the loyalist people let them. But we won't let them," said Jimmy Creighton, a Protestant community worker in the pro-British Glencairn district.

Speculation became intense after Gerry Adams, leader of the Sinn Fein party, said Monday that he had met with IRA leaders and told them the time was right to "break the political, constitutional and military stalemate and create the underlying causes of conflict."

Adams, whose party is the main political ally of the Irish Republican Army, said the group's leaders promised a swift response.

In an interview with Ireland's RTE television Tuesday, Adams made three demands of Britain following a cease-fire.

"There must be immediate recognition in a meaningful way of our

Associated Press

A British soldier patrolling the Falls Road area of Belfast, Northern Ireland, passes one of many recent messages painted on walls as speculation intensified Tuesday that the IRA may declare a cease-fire. British forces have been deployed in Northern Ireland for 25 years, initially to protect the Roman Catholic minority.

democratic mandate," Adams said.

"There must be an immediate end to censorship and issues like demilitarization — all the issues of injustice, all immediate."

Adams did not elaborate, but he appeared to be seeking an early meeting between Sinn Fein and the British government, a reduction in British troop deployments in Catholic areas and an end to a ban on Sinn Fein-IRA supporters' voices being broadcast.

Many among the Protestant majority feared the IRA would not suspend its terror campaign to reunite the province with the largely Roman Catholic Irish republic unless it had won concessions from the British government.

The Ulster Defense Association, one of the two main Protestant-based paramilitary organizations, warned of civil war if the IRA had its way.

"Do you, the Irish, seriously believe we will sit back and allow ourselves to be coerced and persuaded into an all-Ireland?" the group, which also is outlawed, said in a statement to news media.

"The vast majority of people in Northern Ireland don't want civil war, but they are being compelled into a civil-war situation by what the government is doing," said the Rev. Ian Paisley, the hard-line Protestant leader of the Democratic Unionist Party.

The British and Irish governments agreed in December that there would be no change in Northern Ireland's status without the consent of a majority of its people.

266-MAN FORCE PLEDGED FOR INVASION

4 nations vow to assist in Haiti

Robert Burns
Associated Press

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Four Caribbean nations have agreed to join an American-led military coalition to remove Haiti's ruling junta if it resists pressure to quit, U.S. government officials said Tuesday.

Even as the Clinton administration worked at building a coalition, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and his cohorts in Port-au-Prince refused to meet with U.N. envoy Rolf Knutsson, who was in the Dominican Republic primed to negotiate the junta's departure.

"We have not been successful because the military people in Haiti refused to talk with my special representative," U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said in New York after briefing the Security Council. He said he would abandon the initiative "unless in the future I receive a mandate from the Security Council or if there is a drastic change in Haiti."

Foreign ministers of Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbados and Belize told U.S. officials meeting in Kingston they would contribute to a Caribbean force of 266 soldiers to participate in the military operation to remove Haiti's military leadership.

American troops would be in the first wave, with the Caribbean troops going in immediately afterward. A similar arrangement was used in the invasion of Grenada in 1983 to topple a leftist regime that had executed the prime minister.

Guyana, the Bahamas and Antigua did not make a final commitment to contribute to the 266-man force pending further internal consultations, the U.S. officials said. It was not immediately clear why the three balked. Earlier, U.S. officials said they had received assurances they would participate.

"We consider what happened here today in Kingston a watershed," said Strobe Talbott, deputy secretary of State, who attended the meeting with Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch. "We hope the military dictators in Haiti will get the message."

Deutch said the United States would immediately begin providing logistic support for the participating Caribbean military forces.

"The time for action has arrived," Deutch said at a news conference after the meeting. "There can be no doubt in anybody's mind that the multinational force is going to Haiti."

Argentina and Britain also will participate. Argentina has sent a staff officer to the Atlantic Command headquarters and British military personnel will assist in training the military force.

Deutch and other U.S. officials have said President Clinton is determined to act with military forces in Haiti — either to stabilize the government after a peaceful departure of its military regime or to forcibly remove the leaders.

GORILLAS MISSING

Rwandan warfare threatens primates

Tony Smith
Associated Press

KARISOKE RESEARCH CENTER, Rwanda — Shards of glass and torn files litter the forest floor, evidence that Rwanda's deadly civil war has reached high into the Virunga Forest, home to half the world's rare mountain gorillas.

In the forest that straddles Rwanda's border with Zaire and Uganda, the research camp featured in the movie "Gorillas in the Mist" stands ransacked and nearly deserted.

But what has happened to the shy primates themselves?

Only about 600 mountain gorillas remain on Earth. Some 320 lived in Virunga Forest before the civil war erupted anew in April.

A group of Rwandan trackers returned in early August and have traced the base's three gorilla groups used for research. But about 60 gorillas usually shown to tourists are still missing.

"There's no reason for major worry right now," said Jose Kalpers of the International Gorilla Conservation Program, which helps run Karisoke.

"As long as there's no disturbance in the forest, the gorillas have no reason to move — it's not as if they're listening to the radio. But there's no surveillance at all and the potential risks are quite high," he added.

In mid-July, Karisoke's 30 employees and another 80 Virunga Forest rangers fled advancing Rwandan Patriotic Front rebels and are now refugees in Zaire.

A "silverback" male mountain gorilla rests in the Virunga forest, which straddles the Zaire-Rwanda border near Butare, Zaire. Many of the endangered gorillas fled to Zaire during Rwanda's recent civil war. The forest is home to half of the world's remaining rare mountain gorillas.

mined. Without rangers, it is open to antelope and buffalo poachers, who can kill or ensnare gorillas on purpose or by mistake.

Up to 3,000 Rwandan villagers and their livestock fled through the forest in July, but Kalpers said gorillas probably took refuge up the slopes, only to return later to their home ranges.

Leonidas Munyatarama was equally confident as he stepped through the debris at the camp founded by Dian Fossey, the American naturalist.

"Even if they fled over the border, they'll be back. Gorillas don't need passports," he said.

Fossey, whose campaign to protect the gorillas was the basis for "Gorillas in the Mist," was murdered in 1985 and buried at the camp among the remains of some of the animals she loved.

Her grave was untouched by the latest upheaval, but her cabin, where her successors continued research work until July, was ripped apart: chairs and desks were overturned, files were scattered on the floor and windows were smashed.

"We don't know if it was soldiers or poachers," said Munyatarama, who returned to Karisoke last week, the first research student back since the staff's panicked flight.

HARKIN NAMED AS POSSIBLE CHALLENGER

Talk of Democratic primary battle may foretell of Clinton's downfall

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At a recent fund-raiser, the talk in one circle turned quickly to whether President Clinton would face a Democratic primary challenge in 1996. "Are you talking about the Harkin rumors or Kerrey rumors?" a Democratic senator in the group asked.

Clinton's political troubles and worries within the Democratic ranks have spawned persistent speculation that he might be challenged. Last week, two-time Democratic candidate Jesse Jackson said he was considering a primary challenge or even an independent candidacy.

"One of the ways to get the attention of this administration and the country is to challenge the direction and priorities of the leadership," Jackson said Friday.

Beyond Jackson, the rumors — and there is little evidence they are anything more — center most often on Democratic Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, who lost to Clinton in the 1992 primaries and has had a stormy relationship with him since.

"Certainly the Kerrey talk is everywhere," said former Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, another 1992 Clinton primary rival. For the record, Tsongas is happy to say unequivocally, "I would not run in '96."

So is Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, yet another of the 1992 Democratic candidates. His name recently surfaced in rumors that a Democratic senator was planning to challenge Clinton. Hogwash, says Harkin.

Kerrey, however, isn't so emphatic.

"There is unquestionably a break — we are not close," Kerrey says of his relationship with Clinton. "But the speculation that I am going to challenge him in the primaries is completely untrue."

"I can't imagine the circumstances, I really can't. But I have learned never to say never."

Sen. Bob Kerrey, on running for president

So, then he absolutely, positively won't run?

"I can't imagine the circumstances," Kerrey said. "I really can't. But I have learned never to say never."

According to one Democratic activist, a disgruntled party fundraiser recently approached Tsongas to see if he was interested in a 1996 challenge. According to the activist, who spoke on condition of anonymity, the fund-raiser, Chicago commodities broker Richard Dennis, said Kerrey was his second choice.

Asked if the account was accurate, Tsongas hesitated and said, "I would not recall one conversation from another."

Dennis gave $1,000 to Kerrey's 1992 presidential campaign and later gave Clinton $1,000 after Kerrey dropped out. He also contributed more than $200,000 to the Democratic National Committee for the 1992 election cycle. But he is said to be unhappy with Clinton and has not made any major contributions to the party this year; he has given $1,000 to Kerrey's 1994 Senate re-election bid.

Dennis did not return telephone calls seeking comment, and Kerrey says 1996 has never come up in his conversations with Dennis.

Beyond the intrigue of the rumors is a sober reality for the Clinton White House: Such talk would not exist, or at least not flourish, if the president was not viewed to be in serious political trouble.

As the Kerrey and Harkin rumors have made the rounds, Democratic Party officials have kept quiet. But Jackson's harsh public criticism of Clinton last week and his talk of running either in the primaries or in the general election as an independent brought a reminder of the toll of challenges past.

The last time a sitting president faced a primary fight was 1992, when Patrick Buchanan scored 37 percent against former President Bush in the New Hampshire primary. Buchanan never matched that in subsequent primaries, but his showing revealed Bush's weaknesses.

And for Democrats, the memory of 1980 lingers. "In 1980, when there was similar turbulence within the party, some of us, including myself, became involved in an attempt to unseat a Democratic president and we thereby handed the presidency to the Republicans for 12 years," said veteran party organizer Donald Sweitzer, who worked for Kennedy's campaign.

"We should not do it again."

FINAL DECISION MAY COME THIS FALL

Presidential campaign preparation already set into action by Quayle

Rita Beamish
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Vice President Dan Quayle has all but decided to seek the presidency in 1996 and is beginning to lay the groundwork for a campaign, a close associate said Monday.

He will begin to campaign for Republican congressional and gubernatorial candidates and is planning major speeches to try out possible themes for the 1996 campaign, according to the associate, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Quayle recently returned with his family from a long vacation, during which they discussed whether he should seek the Republican nomination. All indications are that the answer is yes, said the friend, who spoke to Quayle after the vacation.

Another associate said Quayle has made clear to friends that he would like to run and continues to evaluate the feasibility of a race by contacting potential campaign contributors.

Quayle's positive leaning was heavily influenced by the strong sales of his book, "Standing Firm." He had counted on the response to the book, which has sold more than 500,000 copies, to give him an indication of his support.

The book is largely a memoir of his vice presidency under President George Bush, four years during which he was dogged by ridicule and a lightweight image despite his substantial political role within the White House.

Quayle previously has said he would make a decision on running for president this fall. A spokesman at Quayle's office in Indianapolis had no comment Monday.

Scientists hone in on gene promoting femaleness

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have greatly narrowed the search for a gene that may help fetuses develop as girls. The work shows the gene lies within a tiny piece of the X chromosome. Normally, fetuses that get two X chromosomes develop as females, while fetuses with one X and one Y chromosome become males. Some people with one X chromosome and one Y chromosome who nevertheless developed as females were studied by researchers. The condition appears in about one in 20,000 women. The researchers found that if a tiny piece of the X chromosome is duplicated, the resulting double dose of a gene it contains can overcome instructions from the Y chromosome to develop as a male.

Man arrested for threatening to assassinate Clinton

FALMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A construction worker was charged with threatening to kill President Clinton after allegedly saying that's why he wanted to travel to Martha's Vineyard. Glenn R. Armstrong, 26, of Uxbridge, pleaded innocent Tuesday in Barnstable District Court and was ordered to undergo 20 days of psychiatric evaluation at Bridgewater State Hospital. Armstrong was taken into custody Monday at the Steamship Authority ferry terminal in Wood's Hole. Police said he told a ticket agent he needed to kill the president, who is vacationing at Martha's Vineyard. The agent alerted police, who made the arrest after Secret Service agents questioned Armstrong for several hours. Armstrong, who is self-employed, was charged with threatening to commit murder, said Secret Service agent Mike Johnston of Boston. Johnston refused to say whether Armstrong was armed.

Fraternity brothers plead guilty in death of pledge

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two fraternity brothers have pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter and hazing in the death of a pledge at Southeast Missouri University. Mikel Giles, 22, of Dallas, and Cedric Murphy, 22, of Memphis, Tenn., were sentenced on Monday to 30 days in jail, five years' probation and 500 hours of community service. Prosecutor Morley Swingle said they should speak out against hazing at other colleges. The family of the victim, Michael A. Davis, wants them to work in a morgue. "Maybe seeing bodies will make them remember what they did," said Marisa Hilliard, Davis' sister. Davis, 25, was left unconscious in his room after he and four other Kappa Alpha Psi pledges were repeatedly beaten last February. Fifteen hours later, a pledge discovered that Davis had stopped breathing. Giles and Murphy are among 16 defendants. Both agreed to testify against the others. Fraternity member Keith Allen, 22, of St. Louis, was convicted last week of five counts of hazing. Jurors recommended six months in jail on each count.

Boy Scout leader charged with shooting troops with BB gun

NARROWSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — A Boy Scout leader used six boys for BB gun target practice, and two other leaders who thought it was a game didn't try to stop him, according to court papers. Sean Turner, 24, pleaded innocent to seven counts of second-degree assault Monday and was jailed on $10,000 bail. "I didn't do anything," Turner tearfully told the judge. "I've got two daughters of my own. Why would I do something like this?" Scouts, however, told police Turner pointed the BB gun at them and made them "dance" several times at Camp Kernochan in Narrowsburg, about 80 miles northwest of New York City. None of the scouts were seriously injured. "He would point the gun at us and we would all run," one 16-year-old told police. "After a while I didn't want to play any more and told Sean. But he must not have heard me, 'cause he turned around and pointed the pistol at me and fired. The BB hit me between the eyes." Turner, of New York City, and the two other leaders were fired, a Boy Scouts of America spokesman said.

Woodstock '94 brings peace, love and pilfering

SAUGERTIES, N.Y. (AP) — Thieves posing as employees of the company that backed Woodstock '94 walked away with $28,000 in one-of-a-kind curtains decorated with the concert's dove and guitar logo. Promoters had planned to raise money for charity by selling the three curtains that covered the 50-foot-high speaker towers. After the Aug. 12-14 concert, promoters received a phone call from a man identifying himself as an executive with the PolyGram entertainment conglomerate. He asked where the curtains were stored and got the name of a warehouse outside Lancaster, Pa. This week, several men turned up at the warehouse, collected the curtains and drove off. Police said everyone thought the men were from PolyGram.

Accused Jordan killer seeks dropped charges

Estes Thompson
Associated Press
LUMBERTON, N.C. — Defense attorneys asked Tuesday that charges be dismissed against one of the two teen-agers charged with killing Michael Jordan's father, arguing the prosecutor has withheld crucial evidence. The evidence includes one reported sighting of James Jordan after the date he was supposed to have been killed and two reports indicating other people talking about committing a similar crime, said defense lawyer Woodberry Bowen. "Most of these reports would have been in the district attorney's hands way back in the fall," Bowen said. Bowen represents Daniel Andre Green, who, with Larry Martin Demery, is charged with first-degree murder, armed robbery and conspiracy to commit armed robbery in the elder Jordan's death last July. Demery and Green were charged Aug. 15, 1993.

A PREDICTABLE DREAM

Returning to Woodstock

Woodstock '94 gave new meaning to the term "Generation X" for the countless who never knew what it meant in the first place. It can be described in one disgustingly simple word: generic. The idea that Woodstock could be recreated is ridiculous but predictable, since almost everything Generation X has produced has been in some form a cheap, badly interpreted, carbon copy of the idyllic originals. What Generation X has developed as its trademark is its art of imitation.

The Generation X culture of badly remade songs and the blatant misuse and commercialism of tie-dye flocked in herds of more than 250,000 to mimic the iconic peace, love and freedom festival of 1969. Although the bands were meant to be the main attraction — a reflection of a society that is rap-saturated and full of overnight success bands — Woodstock-goers did their best to re-create the original. Despite the similarities of mud and music between the original and later events, all the other attempts at devising parallels between the two were just a pathetic sign that today's generation really has no commonality or unity among themselves.

The "generation of the future" was evident at Woodstock '94, where cash machines, overflowing port-o-potties, Pepsi, pizza and merchandising were all an integral part of the staged event (not to mention that tickets went for $135). It seems the great and once-monumental idea of Woodstock '69 and all the gross overconsumption of today met together in one gigantic mud-filled weekend in '94. As one would expect from a society whose strong social attachment is to movies of the week and Beavis and Butt-head, young people went in droves to be a part of another feigned, superficial, insincere representation of their generation's values. It must be truly difficult for genuine concern and mutuality to exist among today's generation of young people.

As the white middle-class fans, with cash cards in hand, strode around in retro-gear or naked through the mud, smoking dope or dropping acid, did any of them ask themselves, "What in the hell am I doing here?" 1969 is gone, and so is its political and social climate. Regardless of the way today's culture has idealized the events of the 60s, the cultlike way in which they are projected is misinterpreted. In today's culture, there is no free love; there is AIDS. Peace continues to be a struggle not only abroad but in communities and individual homes. Today's society is full of addictions of all kinds and the days exist no longer in which marijuana, acid and alcohol free minds. They exacerbate the diseased culture of young people who are violent, deal with AIDS and cocaine babies, and care more about the death of Kurt Cobain than they do about the classmate who was gunned down in a drive-by shooting.

It seems ironic to parade around naked after paying $135 just to cry freedom of expression. Those must have been the same people who stood in line to buy Two Live Crew albums.

While the music seemed to reflect different styles, it was the only aspect of Woodstock '94 that generated individuality in any way. The crowd was typically described in reviews as "muddy frat boys," predominantly white and loaded with enough cash to buy the ticket and transportation to get there, not to mention the plethora of hyped-up flower-power merchandise that had to be purchased.

Everybody wanted a piece of the Woodstock pie, in particular those who went so far as to strip and go naked in mockery of the Woodstock '69 attendees who expressed nudity as a sign of freedom of expression. They didn't see the human body in every television and magazine ad used to sell cologne or cars. In 1969, the freedom for a woman to show her breast was liberating; today it is a means by which cigarettes are sold. It seems ironic to parade around naked after paying $135 just to cry freedom of expression. Those must have been the same people who stood in line to buy Two Live Crew albums. Today's generation has trouble respecting that message because so rarely does a healthy portrayal of the body or sexuality exist.

If anything else, Woodstock '94 demonstrates the desperation of today's young people who don't want to claim responsibility for society's multitude of problems. The dream of being at Woodstock is just that — a dream — in every sense of the word.

Do not live a life of inaction and regret

To the Editor:

This is a response to the Aug. 25 article, "Considering relationships on a daily level," in which Julia Cibul wrote that living for the present would be too difficult.

It is Mother Nature's greatest injustice that people grow old and die. Rather, we should randomly and suddenly cease to exist. A life course that is predetermined (at least in our beliefs) shoulders persons with the burden of continually looking to the future. If this is not enough, we live this life in expectation of a future, better life. The consequence of these actions is a current meaningless life and old age with bitter memories of risks not taken, love not shared and dreams not pursued.

Imagine a world where nothing is promised. Life may be five minutes or 1000 years. How extraordinary the world would be. Projects would be accomplished with zeal and pride. Lovers would be frantic and alive, not bogged down in routine. Risks would be taken, feelings would be shared and dreams would not be shelved.

This is how life should be lived. Because nothing is promised. We can all die at anytime. And there may be a life after this, but there may not. There are no guarantees. Julia Cibul believes that living life for the present would be "too much of an obligation to live with." I believe that the alternative would be intolerable: a life of inaction and regret.

DJALAL "D.J." ARBABHA

Life's mysteries: ham and happiness

As I was walking on the dark and quiet beach, tears started to fill my eyes. They were neither tears of joy nor tears of happiness. They were tears of emptiness. Tears of being overwhelmed by having life's expectations thrust at me simply because I am a human. Tears that were long overdue. Tears that had to come. Tears that were coming from the darkness of my soul to the darkness of the night.

Through my tearful eyes, I saw the blurry vision of a building with its lights on. As I got closer, I could see a sign by the door with "Frank's Own" written on it. The building's darkness was in total harmony with the dark and secluded beach. The fading light from the old Spanish-style building faded even more as it reflected on the foamy water of the silent waves.

Without giving it a second thought, I opened the door of the restaurant. To my amazement, the place was empty. What caught my attention as I went into the restaurant was an elegantly dressed bartender who was casually reading a book. I told the extremely proper manager meeting me at the door that I wasn't particularly hungry but would like to have a few drinks at the bar.

I sat by the bartender, who by now had a big welcoming smile on his face. He was in his mid-50s and had a professional look about him.

"Welcome to Frank's. I am Frank, and frankly I am happy to have a customer at last," said the bartender in a cheerful voice with his hand extending to shake mine. I was taken aback by his friendly gesture, not knowing whether it was sincere or part of the job.

Anyway, I ordered a martini with a small ham sandwich. Frank quickly brought back my order and sat right in front of me. He was looking right into my eyes. I tried to ignore him and look at some blank point. I didn't want him to look at me, yet I wanted to see if he had stopped staring at me. So I moved my eyes rather casually in his direction. He wasn't looking at me anymore. Instead, he was preparing a ham sandwich for himself. He caught my eyes with a grin on his face and said, "I am going to close my restaurant in about 15 minutes and better have something to eat before I go home." I nodded without saying a word, fighting an uncontrollable smile on my face.

Frank had so much overflowing energy in his soul that I was bound to be affected by it. While eating his ham sandwich with great appetite, I could see Frank's eyes examining me. I could feel that he wanted to say something to break the silence and the one-sided conversation.

I couldn't stand being there anymore. I looked around and saw the waiters sweeping the floor. The restaurant was about to be closed. I paid my bill to Frank, grabbed my sandwich and gulped my martini while standing. I left the restaurant without saying a word to Frank.

Outside, I threw my sandwich into the ocean. I didn't want to eat anything. I hated Frank for his cheerfulness. What the hell was he so cheerful for anyway? Hate? Envy was the right word. Yes, I envied Frank for being so cheerful. My life's emptiness was not even comparable with Frank's.

"Forget about Frank," I said to myself. While trying to do just that, I felt a tap on my shoulder. I turned back. I saw the smile first, then the face.

"You want a lift?" asked Frank in his ever-cheerful voice.

"Sure, but I am going to stay here for a couple of hours to see the sunrise," I said, expecting that Frank would not want to wait that long.

"What a great idea!" cried Frank happily. I sat on the beach breathing the air, once again hearing the waves. The sky was about to be lit by the sun. The sun was slowly rising over the ocean. The sun and the ocean were so huge, yet harmonious. If the sun can fill the ocean so fully, why should I, so small in comparison, be empty of life? Why am I not filled with life even though I am surrounded by it everywhere?

From people to nature, there is life everywhere. Life simply waits to be picked up. Some do, some don't. Frank had picked life up. I could do the same, too. With all these thoughts, I turned back and gave a hug to Frank, thanking him for being so full of life.

His eyes were twinkling with the reflection from the glowing sun. As if he had forgotten something, Frank looked around and took out a ham sandwich from his pocket. He gave it to me with a sheepish look on his face.

"Have ham, have happiness!" he said jokingly.

"Thank you Frank. Thanks," I said with a smile — a smile full of life again.

The old college attempts to re-emerge

Last May, while we semester folk were pulling all-nighters cramming for exams, coaxing paper topics out of the back pockets of our Levi's, desperate for sleep and ready as Irene to go home, Newsweek slipped its idiocy right under our preoccupied noses.

In the "Focus on Your Money" section was an article by syndicated columnist Linda Stern titled "The Old College Try." The teaser? "Why the news from the bursar's office isn't nearly as troubling as you think." Illustrated on fully half of the article's two and a fourth pages is a serious young white man with a preppie, button-up shirt and a part in his hair so severe he can only be reminiscent of those prefree-love days of 1960.

Stern claims, in fact, that the costs of college aren't much more than they were in 1960, eating up only 1.1 percent more of the median family income, up from 14.7 percent to the recent 15.8 percent. At private universities, families put out "up to 40 percent," as opposed to the 27 percent spent in 1960, though Stern asserts this picture is not so disturbing when the "typical package at upscale Georgetown University" is taken into account. It seems that at the emblematic Georgetown University, typical parents contribute $10,000 a year to their child's education, while the student "works" off an additional $5,000, presumably from an incredibly generous work-study program or from three part-time jobs he or she holds down between classes and homework. Georgetown even "provides an average scholarship of $11,000."

Now that's a package deal. Made me want to be a little more average. That is, until common sense straightened out a few of those slanted statistics. Almost 16 percent doesn't seem like much more than that 1960 figure of 14.7 percent. But take a look at it this way: in 1960, the majority of college students were upper-class white males whose fathers were their families' sole breadwinners. To be a working mother then was to be considered "common." Now, with the explosion of middle- and upper-class women in the work force, that 16 percent comes from two incomes, essentially more than doubling the percent of family income spent on higher education.

And that "typical package" at typical Georgetown doesn't work out so prettily either. Last year, total costs for Georgetown ran about $26,000, this including any annual tuition increases and expenses for such luxuries as clothes, laundry, transportation and books. Then Stern prompts that the "average Georgetown student ... graduates with a debt of $10,000." So, where's that extra 10 grand going? To the "sybaritic spring breaks" the author chides us for? No! It's going to cover the realities of college life. It's going to cover that part of the $5,000 we can't earn because we simply haven't got 30 extra hours a week to spend groveling for a lousy $4.65 an hour. We have to do all we can to keep the stingy, stringent scholarships we have. It's going to cover that part of the $10,000 our parents either never kicked in or are less able to cover with each strangulating, suffocating tuition increase.

Stern grudgingly concedes the double-digit college inflation rates of the last decade. But, like American planes shot down by their own army's friendly fire, she gives us the numbers while trying to combat the bad news. This year, she soothes, "that figure dropped to 5.5 percent." She insists college inflation has been "flattening out or even dropping since 1990."

Despite what liberal arts requirements say, it doesn't take college math to figure out where Stern is shooting herself in the foot. If rates increased at 14 percent each of the first four years of this decade, as Stern quietly admits — and at what percent only God knows in each of the six years following — then 5.5 percent, in real dollars, is just as much or more than that original 14 percent. And that's not counting the late fees and additional assessments added to our U-bills if we choose the option of paying in three easy installments. The sick reality is tuition increases are growing at a rate double that of inflation.

I'm not sure if Stern is trying to justify her guilty avoidance of those irritating, insistent letters from her alma mater's alumni association, or even if she ever attended college. Either way, she and Newsweek are misleading their readership into believing there really aren't any problems with the financial futures of American universities, that we're all "fear-mongering," peddling the charts of "doomsday scenarios."

Unfortunately, for our futures and the future of higher education in America, whining is not all that's happening. At Ohio State University, for example, students are stacking up in overcrowded classrooms while able faculty and staff are being turned down for tenure and assistantships. Whole departments are being axed. Funding for the Young Scholars Program, a lauded pilot program that takes inner-city black and Hispanic junior-high and high-school kids six years to complete in order to earn a four-year tuition voucher at Ohio State University, was cut by more than 50 percent. Instead, "tough on welfare" Republican Governor George Voinovich is spending $6 million extra on more contracted-for-profit low-income housing, thus reinforcing that ugly welfare merry-go-round for yet another generation of Americans.

These few, quick examples are indicative of an emerging nationwide pattern of elitism and, eventually, of fatalism. Students whose parents have money can stay. Those of you enrolled in business, law or medicine can stay. If you're not a brilliant, Nobel-hopeful research scientist, hit the door. Maybe what Newsweek was really telling us is that college is regressing back to what it once was in 1960.

LETTERS

Letter's use of Christian history inaccurate

To the Editor:

In his Aug. 25 letter, Don Klotz wrote that America was "founded" on Christianity. He needs to go back to history class. It is just not true.

Most of our founding fathers, including Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, Thomas Paine and Ben Franklin were skeptics or deists. When they mentioned god or creator, they were referring to nature's god, a more open-minded and less dogmatic belief than even the most liberal Christians today.

One of the first treaties we ever concluded as a new nation was the Treaty of Tripoli with the Barbary pirates in 1797, and it says, "The government of the United States is not, in any sense, founded on the Christian religion." Congress unanimously passed it, and it was signed by John Adams.

For over 10 years prior to the writing of the Constitution, religious activists — the Christian Coalition types of their time — pressured their representatives to put references to God, Christianity and Jesus Christ into it. Not only were such references not put in, but safeguards against religious intrusion into government were made. The very first thing that was established was that there would be no religious test for public office. Even a proposal to open the Constitutional Convention with prayer was nixed by a huge majority.

Our founders were extremely concerned about keeping church and state separate because they had seen firsthand the consequences of mixing them. For example, laws enacted by Virginia Governor Thomas Dale in 1612 had included being whipped three times for saying anything disrespectful of a minister, six months in jail for not attending church, a knife through the tongue for cursing and compulsory tithes of 10 percent of one's income to the church.

Christians in other states enacted similar laws. New York law required baptism of all children under penalty of the arrest and imprisonment of their parents, and members of other religions (most notably Quakers) were sentenced to hard labor for the crime of preaching a religion other than the official one. Maryland, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania all had similar laws. Political privileges were limited to Christians, and this did not encompass Catholics or Jews.

'Bureaucratic bunglings' frustrating to UI student faced with tragedy

To the Editor:

I am in complete agreement with Jim Patterson's letter to The Daily Iowan on Aug. 25. Although I've seen the red tape of the university since my first day here, never did I think it would be so inflexible as it was when I dropped out of school in the spring of 1994 because of a tragedy.

My 16-year-old sister was involved in a car accident on Jan. 18, 1994 and died the following morning. Two weeks to the day after she died, I spent three and a half hours being bounced around Calvin, Jessup and Schaeffer halls, explaining my situation to a dozen or so bureaucrats that didn't have a clue how to help me with my school and financial aid situation.

semester. (All any administrator would have to have done to confirm my sister's death was make a phone call.) Now that I am enrolled for the fall semester, I am faced with mounds of paperwork, all treating me like a student who flunked out due to partying too much. In fact, there are bills I paid last December which the university hasn't straightened out to this day, and I'm afraid I'm going to hear the "there's nothing I can do" line again. Maybe that should be my response towards my next U-bill. (But oh yes, if I don't pay my U-bill in full and on time, the university has policies that will cut off all services to me instantly — no questions asked.)

I've never seen a more incompetent bunch of administrators than those at this university. It seems like people are simply hired off the street for these important positions. I do believe I'm getting a great education at a great price (the teachers are great though the administration is not), and the friends I've met at the UI have helped me immeasurably through my tragic experience. I know these things happen in life, but why was I made to feel like I was the only one? Doesn't the university have someone getting paid to help students with situations like mine, and if so, why wasn't I informed of their service? The bureaucratic bunglings of this university have put a severely bitter taste in my mouth about my college experience.

Handgun advocacy unrealistic for Iowa City

To the Editor:

The "Focal Point" articles on gun control this summer were disappointing. No one needs guns to protect themselves; they need intelligence. The op-ed writers, especially Kim Painter, were equivocal and basically not opposed to handgun ownership.

Painter and women's safety groups are seemingly accepted as part of the progressive agenda in Iowa City. This influential segment of the community is now accepting handgun ownership, especially by women; some also are advocating carrying them. Groups like RVAP and WRAC are backed by student funds and local taxes. They provide workshops and office space for people and groups who are advocating mayhem against men. Carrying guns is openly mentioned by RVAP self-defense instructors. In 25 years of following campus life, I have never seen a more ominous development.

Progressive politics and handguns do not mix in 1994 Iowa City. Good-time socializing and handguns do not mix either.

STUDENTS COME FROM AROUND THE WORLD

Circus tykes taught in traveling school

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

For about 45 young performers and children of employees who travel with Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, education won't be a high-wire act.

Instead of clowning around, the children attend "The Little Red Circus Schoolhouse," which includes kindergarten, elementary school, junior high and high school.

The schoolhouse is a trailer that has been converted into a mobile classroom. The traveling school accompanies "The Greatest Show on Earth" and has stopped in Cedar Rapids during the circus's four performances Tuesday and today. Desks, chairs, chalkboards, a pencil sharpener and computer equipment are all a part of the one-room class setting.

Gabrielle Johnson, a 6-year-old student at the schoolhouse, said she enjoys going to school. Her father works at the circus concession stands.

"School isn't that bad. I like it because I learn all kinds of things," she said. "Right now I'm learning to read 'Babar and the Ghost.' I like learning to read. I want to read so if my mom can't read me a bedtime story, I can read myself a bedtime story."

Stefan Fisher, a teacher at the schoolhouse, said the school's educational program is comparable to that found in nontraveling schools.

"The kids learn about the same things students in other schools learn," he said. "We focus on reading, math, social science and science, but we don't have recess, P.E. or art since we have limited time."

Nearly 65 students from Bulgaria, China, Moldova, Mongolia, Siberia, Russia and the United States attend classes for a minimum of three hours five days a week. Three professional teachers and two full-time translators, for Chinese and Russian, teach the students, Fisher said.

American students learn a regular school curriculum provided by correspondence schools, while the foreign students spend much of their time studying English as a second language.

Katie Boger, 8, a circus performer whose parents work with the lions, said she prefers the schoolhouse over traditional classes.

"School isn't hard," she said. "We do the same things regular schools do, but I like this school a lot better than regular schools. It's shorter and you don't have to wake up so early. But we don't really have time to mess around and get up or jump around because school is so short."

All students are graded on a letter scale. Student of the month and honor roll are some of the programs the schoolhouse offers, Boger said.

Boger, who is part of the buffalo act, said that though she is a performer, she does not think balancing school and the circus is difficult.

"My sister, brother and I work with the buffalo," she said. "It's not hard. I practice a lot, but the circus is fun because there are lots of kids on the show."

Coralville Burger King sued for discrimination

The Daily Iowan

A racial discrimination suit was filed Thursday by Glenda Glasgow against the former Coralville Burger King, alleging she was fired without warning or explanation on July 15, 1991.

Glasgow worked as a clerk for Burger King from Feb. 12, 1990 until June 1991, when she was promoted to an assistant manager position. Glasgow claims that when Vicky Duff became her supervisor, she was soon fired without any warnings or explanations.

Dennis Bjorklund, who is representing Glasgow, said, "It's our position that she was terminated from her employment because of her race."

Glasgow also claims that general manager Leroy Vick was negligent about investigating her termination. The plaintiff is seeking compensation for wages lost, distress endured, and attorney and court fees.

The suit, filed in Johnson County Courts, has five parties as defendants including Vick, Duff, Midwest Leasing Inc., Burger King Corp. and Larken Inc., which owns Burger King.

cus, however, had no problem controlling the swaying elephants.

Thomas Johhne, an animal handler and groomer, said, "We've never had any real problems with the elephants. I have had to work with uncooperative elephants, but I just raise my voice and they listen."

He also said the circus has never had problems like last week's incident in Hawaii, during which a stampeding elephant stomped its trainer and had to be shot.

Eight animal handlers and one trainer groom, dress, coach and prepare the 18 elephants for their performances. Steve Williams, an animal handler, said the elephants train for their act daily.

"They practice before every show and whenever they get the chance," Williams said. "Right now, they are learning a new act for the next show."

Johhne said the only real difficulty with the elephants is feeding them.

"We have to constantly keep the elephants fed," he said. "On average, we go through 14 to 18 tons of food per week. Half of this goes to the elephants."

Julie Simpson, of Cedar Rapids, said she brought her son to the walk so he can see how the circus is put together.

"We have front-row tickets for the show," she said. "I brought my son so he could understand what the circus is all about. He was really excited and enjoyed it."

The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus' train arrived in Cedar Rapids late Monday night. Two shows were completed Tuesday and two more performances are scheduled for today at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. at the Five Seasons Center. Ticket prices range from $9.50 to $17.50, depending on their location.

health-care services for employees and we're also an organization that prepares young professionals to go into these fields," he said. "We are concerned about all health-care reform."

Shalala said preventative measures are a key component of reform because the country has not put an emphasis on prevention, hasn't put investments into primary care, and needs to do these kinds of things if it's going to improve the quality of health care.

AIDS prevention also needs to be developed on a community level with federal government funding. She also spoke about other areas of prevention, such as mammograms, childhood immunizations and risky behaviors. She said smoking needs to be considered as well.

"Questions about smoking are important; all the bills talk about a cigarette tax," she said.

Increasing cigarette taxation is only a beginning, though, and reducing the number of people who start the habit is more important as a preventative measure, Shalala said.

Kay Leeper, a public-health nurse and an assistant in UI Center for Health Services Research, said she was interested to hear Shalala talk about prevention.

"The fact that she said we've won the debate on prevention is important," she said.

Shalala said reform goals must be kept in mind, despite the intense debates in Congress.

"It is important that we not lose our vision or our dream of access, opportunity, prevention, cost containment and fairness as we finish up this debate for this congressional session," she said.

Shalala said the bottom line of health-care reform is allowing consumers to make decisions.

"The proposals are attempts to get rules straight so the consumer is empowered," she said. "We are going to demand the highest quality we can."

GOLF

Daly pulls out of tourney

(AP) — John Daly withdrew from this weekend's European Masters on Tuesday with an ailing back his agent said was the direct result of a scuffle with a spectator after last weekend's World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio.

"He's in pain. He's out indefinitely," agent John Mascatello said Tuesday from his office in Herndon, Va., in confirming Daly's withdrawal from the tournament that runs Thursday-Saturday at Crans-sur-Sierre, Switzerland.

In a story published Tuesday in the Washington Post, Mascatello said X-rays taken in Akron showed no skeletal damage, but Daly intended to have more extensive X-rays taken this week near his home in Memphis, Tenn.

Mascatello also said he was considering legal action against Bob Roth, the 62-year-old who confronted Daly in the parking lot after Sunday's final round.

"We're weighing our options," Mascatello said.

"John has several commitments for the rest of the year, including business things that he may or may not be able to fulfill."

Daly, 28, has a pre-existing back condition and withdrew from at least one other tournament earlier this year after it flared up.

TRACK AND FIELD

Jackson, Powell cash in at ISTAF meet

BERLIN (AP) — Hurdler Colin Jackson and long jumper Mike Powell split a jackpot of about 44 pounds of gold Tuesday by winning their events at the ISTAF track and field meet.

Jackson ran the fastest 110-meter hurdles of the season, while Powell won the long jump by soaring 26 feet, 11 inches to claim the richest prize in track and field.

Jackson, the world champion and the world record holder from Britain, was clocked in 13.02 seconds, the fastest in the world this year after the 13.04 that he ran at the European Championships in Helsinki earlier this month.

He was challenged all the way by Mark Crear, but had enough power to finish half a step ahead of the American, who clocked 13.07.

"The gold was not that important. I wanted to have a good race," Jackson said.

QB remains a mystery

The battle for Iowa's starting quarterback position will move from the practice field to Kinnick Stadium Saturday when the Hawkeyes take on Central Michigan.

Kickoff is scheduled for 1:05 p.m. Iowa head coach Hayden Fry said that both sophomore Ryan Driscoll and freshman Matt Sherman will see action Saturday and potentially a third quarterback as well.

Hayden Fry

"The quarterback thing will be settled, in all probability, during the course of the game," Fry said Tuesday at his weekly press conference. "If we've got somebody with a hot hand, I'm sure that he'll play more than the other one. In fact, I wouldn't be surprised if we didn't have three quarterbacks play in the ball game this Saturday."

Driscoll and Sherman are both listed as No. 1 on the depth chart. Fry said senior Jefferson Bates and junior Mike Duprey are fighting for No. 3.

"It's such a close race that we need to see them under fire against quality opposition so we can really determine who's really No. 1 and who's really No. 2," Fry said.

"You never know how they're going to react, that's why the coaching staff is so anxious. Let's play a game, let's see what we got, let's see who can keep their poise and execute, who can make big plays. That's what it's going to take, of course, to win. I think this is the type of ball club where if we can gain some confidence, we could be pretty good."

Senior split end Harold Jasper said it didn't matter who comes out to take the opening snap.

"As long as they get it to us that's the main thing, but I think either one of the quarterbacks will get the job done," Jasper said. "Matt (Sherman) throws a little harder ball, but Driscoll still gets it there so you can't complain."

"The quarterback situation is a big factor, but once he gets a couple

Iowa field hockey coach Beth Beglin gets her point across during halftime of a game against Michigan State last season. Beglin led Iowa to an 18-4 record last season and a berth in the Final Four. The Hawkeyes will open the season at Ball State Sept. 3.

Beglin elevates field hockey program

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

In six seasons as Iowa's head field hockey coach, Beth Beglin has compiled a record that compares favorably with that of any coach of any sport in the country.

Under Beglin, the Hawkeyes have won four Big Ten Conference championships and been to the national semifinals five times, including two title game appearances. Beglin's career record speaks for itself at 113-19-3, an 84.8 winning percentage. She holds a Big Ten record of 52-5-1.

Last season the Hawkeyes compiled an 18-4 record and placed third nationally, however, Beglin has one of her most challenging seasons ahead of her this fall.

The young Hawkeye squad lost four all-Americans from last year's team to graduation, including Big Ten Female Athlete of the Year Kristy Gleason.

"I think it's going to be interesting to see who steps forward, who is going to provide leadership for the team, and what type of intensity level that we will see on the field," Beglin said. "We have lost a tremendous amount over the last two years in terms of talent and looking at (this) year, there are a lot of questions."

While Iowa has thrived in field hockey on the collegiate level, the rest of the state has yet to take part in the sport. Beglin's is the only program in the state on any level. As a result, a large part of Iowa's success can be traced to Beglin's ability to bring players from the field hockey rich East coast.

"This school has a very good reputation throughout a lot of the country and the only thing we really do is get people to know about it," Beglin said. "When kids always see a team that keeps on appearing in the Final Four year after year, it has an impact."

Unlike some coaches, Beglin is not interested in recruiting overseas.

"We don't go and recruit internationally and reason behind it is kids want to come over here for just one year," Beglin said. "If somebody is going to come into my program, I want them to make a commitment to the program and the university. I don't want to have to constantly deal with people coming in and out of my team."

Winning has followed Beglin, 37, her entire

Martin survives own errors to beat Raoux

Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Todd Martin punched the air with a right uppercut to punctuate his five-set victory Tuesday at the U.S. Open. He was lucky he didn't hit himself.

Martin did everything to knock himself out in the first round. He lost the first two sets and sprayed three unforced errors to set up match points in the fifth set against the bespectacled and decidedly unspectacular Guillaume Raoux.

Raoux, a squat, bookish Frenchman who turned the hard court match into a clay court baseline duel, took all the gifts Martin offered yet still couldn't quite win.

No matter how many chances Raoux had, there was a sense in watching the match that he would find a way to lose and that Martin would find a way to win.

That crystallized in the fifth set when Martin served, trailing 4-5, and he faced three match points after errors. On the first, he drilled a perfect backhand pass crosscourt to save the match; on the second, Raoux dumped a forehand into the net after a deep forehand by Martin; and on the third, Raoux slapped a forehand wide.

Both players looked exhausted as they wiped the sweat from their faces, but they persevered and pushed the match to the tiebreaker. Now they were in Martin's eleventh hour.

Head's admissions fiasco explained by Bowlsby

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Basketball recruit James Head was given every chance to attend the University of Iowa leading to a long delay in his admissions process, according to athletic director Bob Bowlsby.

Head was notified that he was not accepted Aug. 26.

Bowlsby explained the process that led to the decision at a press conference Tuesday.

"UI officials did not receive information about Head's learning disability until a week after the July 1 deadline for the UI preparatory summer program. The program is designed for people who are coming out of poor academic environments."

"At that point, there was a renewed opportunity to take those materials and try and work with the people on campus to turn that into a yes answer," Bowlsby said.

Head's final high school transcript arrived July 26.

"I think you need to take into consideration that July 26 was about a month before the final decision was made," Bowlsby said. "We worked from that point forward, in tandem with the clearinghouse on separate but similar paths to try and learn as much as we could about course content on the two math courses that were questioned and the English class."

Head was notified Aug. 26

ment, the time he seems to wait for to assert himself. Sure enough, he played his best tennis of the day and Raoux his worst. And when Martin slugged a forehand return to close out the match, 6-7 (7-4), 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 7-6 (7-1), he celebrated with a punch he should have thrown much earlier.

The crowd wanted Martin, an American, to win, but it also wanted an upset. Martin didn't think the crowd knew what it wanted or what it saw.

"It's quite a good feeling to play in front of people who yell every point and tell you you're terrible when you aren't, and tell you you're good when you aren't," said Martin, who was slightly bothered by a strained groin.

WASHINGTON

Turner picks Friesz to start

Associated Press

ASHBURN, Va. — Washington Redskins head coach Norv Turner ended weeks of speculation Tuesday and named John Friesz as the starting quarterback for Sunday's regular-season opener against the Seattle Seahawks.

Friesz, a four-year veteran who signed as a free agent during the off-season, got the nod over No. 3 overall draft pick Heath Shuler.

For the past few weeks, Turner has emphasized he wanted to choose whichever quarterback he felt gave the Redskins the best chance to defeat Seattle. And it turns out, experience was the deciding factor.

"It's not that I think that Heath can't handle it. He'd handle it fine," Turner said. "I think in terms of this football team ... I just feel more comfortable with John in that role, early in the game."

Shuler seemed neither surprised nor disappointed by the decision.

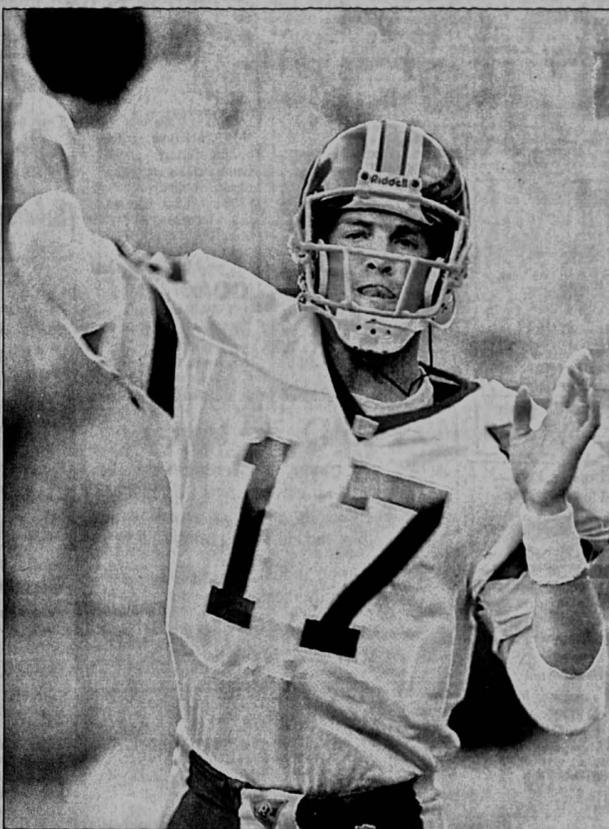

"It's pretty much what I expected when I came to camp," he said. "I knew what was expected of me in training camp, and I tried to work with that as best as I can."

Shuler also dismissed speculation that his reporting two weeks late to training camp significantly hurt his chances to be the opening-day starter.

"I don't think it's that big a deal," he said. "Starting would have been nice, but I plan to have a long career, so this might work out better for me in the long run. I'm not competing against John, anyway, just myself."

Friesz, who played for the San Diego Chargers, also didn't read much into the decision.

"The first goal of this organization and this team is to win, and Coach Turner recognizes that," he said. "My job is to do the best I can to make sure this team wins as many games as possible."

Associated Press

Redskin quarterback John Friesz will start Sunday's opener against Seattle.

Though Friesz will start, Turner plans to use Shuler for at least a few plays against the Seahawks. Exactly when that will happen, and for how long, Turner didn't say. "I think we're going to pick a spot where he (Shuler) can go in and play," Turner said.

Smaller offensive line challenges Irish coach

Ron Lesko
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Air Lou? Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said Tuesday he probably will throw more often this season, and the main reason he cited was not talented sophomore quarterback Ron Powlus.

Holtz, traditionally a run-oriented coach, is worried that his offensive line, depleted by graduation and injuries, will not be as productive as past units.

Holtz, of course, is a notorious worrier, but the line expected to open Saturday at Northwestern rarely has played together during preseason practice and lacks game experience.

"It isn't going to be awesome, it isn't going to be as dominating as any we've had in the past because we don't have the strength and the athletic talent based on what I've seen so far," Holtz said. "But I think, overall, it's a pretty good little unit."

In comparison to the 1993 front five, one of the best ever at Notre Dame, this year's line truly is a "little" unit. Aside from 300-pound center Mark Zataveski, a starting guard most of last season, the Irish are about 15 pounds lighter per man.

Gone to the NFL are left tackle Aaron Taylor, voted the best lineman in the nation, and center Tim Ruddy, a second-team all-American.

Right tackle Todd Norman, one of the final cuts of the Chicago Bears, also was at least a part-time starter for three seasons.

Zataveski and co-captain Ryan Leahy, the starting guard tandem most of '93, were expected to bolster this year's unit. But Zataveski slipped to second team before center Will Lyell was lost for two months with a back injury, and Leahy struggled through two-a-days with a bad knee.

At one point, Holtz even thought Leahy, the grandson of former Irish coach Frank Leahy, could be lost for the season. But Leahy is expected to start Saturday.

Jeremy Akers, a part-time starter at guard last year, will start at right tackle. Fifth-year senior Mike McGlinn, who nearly gave up his final year of eligibility to pursue a country music career, will open at left tackle. Dusty Ziegler is the left guard.

The unit lacks depth, but Holtz said it made good progress in two-a-days and even is better at this point than a year ago. Notre Dame gained more than 200 yards rushing just once in the first four weeks, but averaged 260 yards for the season.

"I think at this stage today, we're probably better in the offensive line than we were a year ago," Holtz said. "But I don't think we have the potential that we had last year."

But the Irish, who fell from No. 2 to No. 3 in this week's rankings, also are well-stocked at both running back positions.

The top five backs return, led by Heisman Trophy candidate Lee Becton, and Zataveski said the linemen know they must provide running room.

"Our backfield is going to be tremendous," Zataveski said. "I just hope we up front can do the things we have to do to let these guys do their thing."

Nebraska yields up talented trio

Mercy Rule is the best thing to come out of Lincoln, Neb. Period. The major label rerelease of God Protects Fools is a collection of 10 midtempo punk songs that grab on tight, only occasionally easing the grip to allow the listener to breathe.

The members of Mercy Rule — bassist and vocalist Heidi Ore, guitarist Jon Taylor and drummer Ron Albertson — originally played with guitarist Gregg Cosgrove in the Lincoln band 13 Nightmares. After only one record and much critical acclaim, Cosgrove left the band, leaving the other members in limbo.

Ore, Taylor, and Albertson decided to carry on, with Ore taking over the vocal responsibilities, and everyone making increased contributions toward songwriting. Taking their name from the 10-run rule in little league baseball which keeps one team from embarrassing the other, Mercy Rule was formed.

"When you're from Lincoln, you play music because you want to. There's not A&R people in every bar. You're in a band because you want to be," Ore said.

Mercy Rule's years of songwriting experience together shows through on God Protects Fools. Ore's rumbling bass guitar and Albertson's forceful drum beats drive all of Mercy Rule's songs, while Taylor's tension-filled guitar hooks fill them out. Songs such as "My Mouth" and "Hit Me" are bound to be classics in the Husker Du vein.

"Nobody has to explain what they want the bass line to sound like, or the drums. We just kind of know," Ore said.

Much of the attention on Mercy Rule focuses on the barely 5-foot Ore. Her powerful vocals determine the mood of many songs. She may be sweet and gentle or screaming so emotionally that it seems to be a warning to take cover. Ore cites X, the Replacements and the Lutheran hymnal as major musical influences.

"I write about things that are interesting. Things that cross my life, such as relationships," Ore said.

Mercy Rule recorded their second album, Providence, in March for an Oct. 11 release date. They worked with producer Brian Paulson, who has previously recorded such indie darlings as Superchunk, Tsunami and Uncle Tupelo. Ore says not to expect a reshuffle of the song styles from God Protects Fools.

"The music has evolved. It's more interesting," she said.

Despite having a freshly inked major-label contract, the members of Mercy Rule still have the do-it-yourself mentality they learned as a struggling Midwestern band. Maybe it has something to do with the fact that their record deal came about after a 3 a.m. show at CBGB's in New York, where they played an inspired set for a crowd of 12 people.

"The band has become a bigger time-consumer. Before, we put as much time into it as we wanted. Now I've dropped my job to half time, so has Jon, and Ron has never really had a job," Ore said.

Mercy Rule will play tonight at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St. Opening the show will be a solo performance by Todd Bartlett and the Iowa City band Big Window.

Rusted Root
When I Woke

Fans of acoustic rock / world-music synthesis often have to wait months at a time and dig hard in a field of dreck to find the occasional gem. Rusted Root's latest CD When I Woke not only fits the bill, it pays the tab in multinational currency.

An eclectic, multicolored group of consummate instrumentalists, Rusted Root dips into every corner of the musical spectrum on When I Woke, coming up with a jazzy, hypnotic collage of ambient sound.

The disc introduces itself with tracks like "Drum Trip" and "Ecstasy," a couple of the most friendly phrases a world-music enthusiast could imagine. Middle Eastern, Latino and African rhythms swirl around plucky acoustic riffs and Mike Glabicki's passionate, howling vocals; the result is some of the most exploratory and innovative music since Peter Gabriel discovered tabs.

But the disc runs a wide gamut. "Cruel Sun" is eight minutes of sheer improvisational bliss, with a jazz flute curled around punchy bass lines and a mean acoustic rhythm, while "Send Me On My Way" teams with a chorus of tin whistles and vocals by Glabicki which beg comparisons to some of David Byrne's best work.

In short, When I Woke is a well-cultivated, consciousness-expanding, cross-cultural mind warp. But be that as it may, through all of the virtuosity and musicianship, Rusted Root never gets too busy to simply have fun.

M.O.D.
Devolution

Billy Milano: devious metal bad boy or maladjusted loudmouth? Head bangers and mosh junkies once again get to judge for themselves with Devolution, the latest offering from M.O.D. (Method of Destruction).

Milano and company attempt to recast their image this time out, and they are more or less successful in that they manage to sound like virtually every other thrash-influenced metal band in the country. The "new" Milano's virtually monotone belling tackles such heavy subjects as urban decay, oppression, religion and, well, being angry.

His decision to abandon his position as metal's court jester is a mystery, if not a tragedy. M.O.D. has previously been known for short, loud and obnoxious songs with lyrics like "anally inflicted death sentence! A-I-D-S!" Most were under two minutes long and ruder than bratty 10-year-olds breaking wind in church. Tasteless as they were, though, they injected a bit of humor into a rather humorless genre. M.O.D.'s no-brainer jokes could have been a prototype for "Beavis and Butthead."

Abandoning his old formula for an even more insipid one isn't likely to net the band massive sales. As Milano will likely discover, sounding like everyone else is not only a bad idea, it's a bad career move as well.
