131 killed in airplane disaster

Michael Haddigan
Associated Press

ALIQUPPA, Pa. — A USAir jetliner nosedived into a field while trying to land near Pittsburgh on Thursday, killing all 131 people on board. It was the deadliest crash in the United States in seven years.

Flight 427 originated at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport and was to stop in Pittsburgh before continuing to West Palm Beach, Fla.

"I looked up and there it was," said Tom Michel, who was at a gas station near the crash site. "It was just coming straight down. I was screaming for everybody to run. It looked like it was under full power, and he just went straight in."

Air traffic controllers said they lost contact with the plane when it was about seven miles from the airport, said Pat Boyle, a spokesman for the Allegheny County Department of Aviation. He said a report of an explosion before the crash could not be confirmed.

Michel said there was a "big boom, and the sky lit up. There was black smoke everywhere and that was it."

Witnesses reported a gruesome carnage in a clearing on a heavily-wooded ravine.

"All we saw was body parts hanging from the trees," said Denise Godich, a nurse who was one of the first at the scene. "There were people everywhere. You could just see parts of them."

Another eyewitness said pieces of the plane and baggage were scattered throughout the area.

The plane's black box, which records cockpit conversations and flight data, was recovered, said Jim Eichenlaub, manager of Hopewell Township and coordinator of emergency services at the scene.

"We have done a fairly extensive search of the area and there are no survivors," he said.

The Boeing 737 was carrying 126 passengers and a crew of five, said Dave Shipley, a spokesman for the airline.

The plane went down shortly after 7 p.m. in a field about seven miles from the airport, which is 20 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

"The engines just went dead," eyewitness Sandra Zuback told CNN. "It just blew up." See CRASH, Page 7A

James Taylor to entertain at Carver-Hawkeye

UI students can get a $2 discount on tickets to see James Taylor, winner of 11 gold and four platinum albums, when he performs at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Thursday, Oct. 27 at 8 p.m.

To get the discount, students must have a valid student ID; the discount is good for up to four tickets per student.

Reserved seat tickets for the performance are $25, $22.50 and $20 and are available through the University Box Office in the Union and through all Ticket Master locations. Tickets may also be charged by phone by calling 1-800-346-4401.

The tour that brings Taylor to Iowa City follows the release of his newest work, New Moon Shine, which features saxophonist Branford Marsalis among other world-class musicians.

Taylor's concert is sponsored by SCOPE.

Accused man pleads innocent in Emry slaying

FORT MADISON, Iowa (AP) — Lary Lane Morgan has pleaded innocent to charges in the abduction and death of 9-year-old Anna Marie Emry.

Morgan pleaded innocent to first-degree murder, first-degree kidnapping and first-degree sexual abuse in his arraignment Wednesday in Lee County District Court in Fort Madison. His trial is scheduled for Jan. 3 in Fort Madison.

Lee County District Attorney David Andrusyk said charges were filed in his county because the killing is believed to have occurred there.

Morgan was charged with first-degree murder and first-degree kidnapping Aug. 18 after Emry's body was found in a Lee County cornfield. Emry had been missing from her uncle's home in Brighton for five days.

Authorities later charged Morgan with first-degree sexual abuse.

Morgan, 33, of St. Francisville, Mo., remains in the Washington County jail on $1 million bond. Andrusyk said Morgan will continue to be held in the Washington jail.

Protesters crowd CAF rally at Phillips

A protest against the UI's classroom materials policy outside Phillips Hall was filled with speeches and chanting Thursday, but it ended peacefully under the watchful eye of two campus security guards 45 minutes after it started.

The Campaign for Academic Freedom sponsored the rally, which was attended by more than 100 people. Phillips Hall was chosen as the site of the rally because UI President Hunter Rawlings and College of Liberal Arts Dean Judith Aikin were there to dedicate the building to the College of Liberal Arts.

Protesters saw neither Rawlings nor Aikin, however, and both officials were unfazed by the presence of the rally. Neither dwelled on the topic, but both made brief comic references to the movement in their dedication ceremony speeches.

Aikin's short comment centered on the bright pink "policy-free zone" posters around the building, while Rawlings directed his remark toward the CAF petition.

"You can see the results of the foreign language and literature departments being in the same building together already," Rawlings said.

The protest evoked different reactions from the onlookers.

Kristen Bakken, a Teaching Assistant in the German department who teaches in Phillips Hall, said she never saw the "policy-free zone" petition that was circulated around the building. Protesters claim the petition was signed by 80 percent of faculty and 70 percent of Teaching Assistants in Phillips. Bakken said she doesn't see the UI policy as censorship.

"I think it's OK to tell students beforehand if some of them may find material offensive," she said. "If they want to watch, they can. If not, that's their decision. If my adviser said, 'You can't show that,' then I would take that as censorship."

Bakken said it's difficult for TAs to tell what's allowable and what's not. She said there needs to be some sort of definition.

REGENTS RECEPTIVE

Lohmans scorn tuition increase

Kirsten Scharnberg
The Daily Iowan

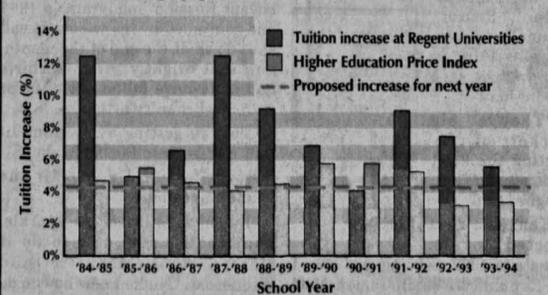

CEDAR FALLS — UI student officials implored the Iowa state Board of Regents to "keep the dream of education within reach for students" and vote against tuition increases.

In Thursday morning's meeting, the regents were receptive to student opinion regarding a 4.2 percent tuition increase for Iowa residents. All three state universities were represented by students who addressed specific student concerns, complaints and demands.

UI Student Association President John Lohman was one of three UI students who spoke against the increase. He said that allowing student involvement in regent decisions would cure the

"we versus they" attitude which is developing as a common student sentiment.

"I feel that students should have a vote in the general university budgeting process, which includes a say in when a tuition increase — if any — should be allotted," Lohman said.

Board of regents President Marvin Berenstein made no promises that such a vote would be given to students. He was, however, very active in questioning students and thanked them for their input on the issue.

"Your comments will not go unheeded," Berenstein said. "But by the same token, please understand the cost of running these institutions does not diminish every year."

Gretchen Lohman, vice president of UISA, took an equally rigid stand with the board. She addressed a general student concern that money raised from tuition increases never seems to be spent in the way the administration promises.

The UI has apportioned funds from the tuition increase into four categories: modernization of classrooms and labs; library operations; faculty personal computing, including replacing outdated personal computers; and the purchase of instructional equipment.

ROLLING STONES WIN ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

MTV awards upstaged by outlandish conduct

Larry McShane

NEW YORK — And the award for upstaging its own award program: Once again, it's MTV!

Sure, the music channel was handing out its 11th annual MTV Video Music Awards on Thursday night with lots of big-name nominees. But the preparty focus was on "newlyweds" Michael Jackson and Lisa Marie Presley-Jackson, who opened the show with their first live television appearance as husband and wife.

"Please welcome Mr. and Mrs. Michael Jackson," the announcer intoned as the program went on the air.

"I'm very happy to be here. And just think, nobody thought this would last," Jackson said, then planted a big kiss on his wife to the squealing delight of the crowd.

They kept it in the family for the first award. Jackson's sister, Janet, snagged the female video prize for "If." She resisted any temptation she may have had to comment on her brother and new sister-in-law's kickoff to the show, just offering the usual thanks instead.

Football devotees welcome ISU rivals

As the Cyclones whirl into town Friday afternoon, Iowa City will twist from a peaceful college town into a party hell-bent on tradition.

"We'll be partying from Friday night until game time on Saturday," said Greg Strom, UI senior and Beta Theta Pi fraternity member.

Strom said the annual Iowa / Iowa State game is a tradition for his fraternity because it is when his chapter faces off against Iowa State's Beta Theta Pi chapter in what is known as the "Beta Bowl." "Every year our pledges play State's pledges in a game of flag football," he said. "It's a tradition which has been going on for at least eight years."

Strom said the Beta Bowl usually begins around 8 a.m. and is filled with plenty of competition and rivalry.

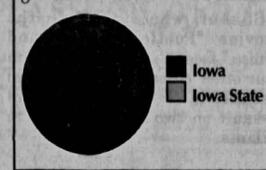

"We usually take them every year, but it's a good time," he said.

Early rising on game day is nothing new to many tailgaters. Most of the downtown bars will open at 10 a.m. Saturday, even though the game does not begin until 2:30 p.m.

Several lovers of the outdoors, like UI freshman Preeti Sahai, said studying in buildings such as the library or the Union isn't their style.

"I'm just not the kind of person who studies on a desk and chair," Sahai said. "I don't like the library either because it's just too quiet. I like to study outside because it's more pleasant."

UI freshman Shaly Seecharran said she will study in some quiet corner of the Union when it gets cold, but as long as the weather's

UI sophomore Chris Lundquist said he likes studying on the steps of the Old Capitol because it gives him an opportunity to get some fresh air and to watch girls.

"Well, I don't go out of my way to look, because I usually just keep my head in a book," Lundquist said. "But it is hard not to notice them."

Other students said studying near the Pentacrest gives them a chance to observe facets of student life.

UI senior Ann Ring said she enjoys studying high up on the stairs in front of the Old Capitol.

"I especially enjoy it in the fall because of the view," Ring said. "I love having the luxury of seeing all the fall colors. Studying up here also gives me a way to watch people from above without actually being in the crowd."

UI junior Shannon McKeller said she studies near the Old Capitol almost daily. Sitting on the grass with the wind blowing her hair in her eyes, McKeller took time in between her classes to read "The Client."

"I come here to study basically every day because it's closer to my classes," McKeller said. "The best times to study around here are in the midmorning and early afternoon because it's peaceful and it makes it easy to get away from things."

UI junior Jason Moeller said Thursday was the first time he had ever studied on the steps of the Old Capitol. But in order for him to study near the building in the afternoon, he must be on the side facing Clinton Street.

"This is my first time at the Capitol and it's been really quiet," Moeller said. "But I have to study on the shady side because I can't concentrate on this stuff with the sun beating down on me."

Rapper Shakur faces more trials

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Tupac Shakur, the rapper with a rap sheet, goes on trial next week on charges of trying to hit a fellow performer with a baseball bat.

Shakur, 23, is charged with assault, which carries up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

He is accused of trying to hit rapper Chauncey Wynn at a Michigan State University concert in 1993 after Wynn complained that Shakur threw a microphone on stage.

Shakur, who starred in the movies "Poetic Justice" and "Juice," faces a string of charges in four other cities, including sexual assault in New York City and assault on two police officers in Atlanta.

Stanford beats all with Allen Ginsberg collection

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Stanford won't be beat when it comes to Beat Generation memorabilia with 300,000 bits of Allen Ginsberg's life.

The university wouldn't say Wednesday how much it paid for the poet's exhaustive and eclectic collection of everything from original manuscripts to old electric bills.

"Allen saved everything," said New York archivist Bill Morgan, who has cataloged Ginsberg's possessions for 15 years. "He's never sold anything, he's never disposed of anything."

Rocker cancels tour to clear blocked artery

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — John Mellencamp canceled the rest of his concert tour Thursday after doctors discovered a clogged artery in his heart.

"The doctors are coming up with a course of treatment. The prognosis is extremely good for a full recovery," said Lauren Murphy, a spokeswoman for Mercury Records in New York.

Mellencamp, 42, checked into Bloomington Hospital because of fatigue.

Mellencamp's tour began July 29. He had 14 dates left and won't make up the canceled shows, Murphy said.

Ginsberg, 68, gained fame in 1955 with his poem "Howl," which expressed the anxieties and ideals of a generation alienated from mainstream society.

Five years ago, the collection was appraised at $1.2 million.

NEW OPPORTUNITIES ANTICIPATED

UI junior triumphs in Miss Iowa pageant

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Don't be surprised to see a familiar face in this year's Miss USA pageant. UI junior Angela Hearne won the title of Miss Iowa on Sunday.

Hearne, a psychology major, said she ended up in the competition almost by accident, and this was the first pageant she had ever entered. The Miss Iowa competition is judged on interviews and swimsuit and evening gown competitions; each area counts for one-third of the final score.

"The pageant director saw me and asked if I'd be interested in the pageant," she said. "He basically discovered me."

Even with the added responsibilities that come with being Miss Iowa, Hearne said she'll be able to handle all the work in stride.

"I'm good at managing my time," she said. "It'll be a lot more work than I'm used to, but I'm looking forward to it."

Jannette Conrad, Hearne's friend and roommate of two years, said Hearne is very organized. "She's constantly making lists," Conrad said. "She's very organized and is really good about managing her time. She'll do fine."

Hearne's new title won't go to her head, Conrad said.

"I don't think she'll change at all," she said. "She's not one who's stuck on her appearance."

Conrad went to the Miss Iowa pageant and said she had her roommate picked as the winner from the start.

"I had her picked lookwise," she said. "She was definitely the prettiest. She was also more poised than the other contestants."

Hearne said keeping her grades up is one of her first priorities. She said she plans to use her psychology degree and doctorate to become a clinical psychologist.

Chuck Hauck, Hearne's former UI academic adviser, said he remembers Hearne for her performance in the classroom.

"She was an excellent student," Hauck said. "She was very concerned about her academic performance. She really stood out among the students I advised."

Hauck said he wasn't surprised Hearne won the title.

"She struck me as very well-rounded - the kind of student who was a memorable advisee," he said.

The new Miss Iowa said she thinks this experience will offer many opportunities.

"I think the main thing about the title is the doors it can open for you. I'm really looking forward to meeting a lot of new people," Hearne said.

Hearne, who was raised in Mississippi but moved to Iowa three years ago, must make a number of personal appearances and speaking engagements. Monday, the day after she won her title, she made her first public appearance as Miss Iowa on the Jerry Lewis telethon.

Hearne said getting ready for the Miss USA pageant will be mostly psychological.

"It's a lot of mental preparation," she said. "There will be 50 other girls there, and they'll all be beautiful."

She'll also be working out a lot more for the pageant's swimsuit contest, Hearne said. That shouldn't be a problem for her, since one of her prizes for winning the title was a membership to a gym. She also received $500, a fur coat and a custom-made gown for the Miss USA pageant, along with the traditional crown and sash.

State director for the Miss USA pageant Jim Klingman said Hearne will represent Iowa very well.

"I think she has a chance at Miss USA," Klingman said.

Hearne will appear on CBS when she competes for the Miss USA title in February. The last Miss Iowa to win Miss USA was in 1956, Klingman said.

LAUNDRY FACILITIES FAIL TO FUNCTION

Residence hall woes try students' patience

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

Old washers and dryers from UI residence halls are slated to be replaced next summer, but for now students are struggling with laundry and other maintenance problems.

UI freshman Siri Knutson lives in Stanley Residence Hall and has discovered the frequency of laundry room breakdowns.

"It's kind of frustrating," she said. "I thought I was doing it wrong. It was the first time I was washing clothes, and it didn't work. I ended up moving my clothes to a different washer. I wasted a cup of soap."

Joel Rand is a freshman living in Hillcrest Residence Hall. When he went to do laundry one Sunday morning, there were three or four washers and three or four dryers with out-of-order signs on them.

"It's a pretty busy time," Rand said. "You'd think in a residence hall this size they'd know it's important to have the convenience and essential things to get laundry done."

Knutson said she wished there had been an out-of-order sign on the machine she attempted to use.

Facilities engineer John Josten said the washers and dryers are checked every day by maintenance staff. The problem often lies with the users, not the equipment.

"The most typical problem is overloading by students," Jane Dorman, assistant to the director of the Department of Residence Services said. "They're putting too much in the washer."

Steve Fausch, supervisor of Residence Systems Facilities Administration, said the washers and dryers in the dorms are past due for replacement, having been purchased seven to 10 years ago.

"They'll probably be replaced this summer," he said. "We're looking at perhaps remodeling the laundry facilities." Fausch said the machines will be purchased over a period of time, not in bulk.

Despite the varying ages of the machines, Fausch said they are all in about the same condition.

"Some may look a little worse," he said. "But basically they're all the same quality mechanically." He said a few work orders are placed each day for problems with washers or dryers and that they try to get to the problem the day it is reported.

Washers and dryers are not the only things that have malfunctioned. UI freshman Sam Martin, who lives in Rienow Residence Hall, said his air conditioner stopped working. He put in a work order to get it fixed.

"My books are under my air conditioner. They (maintenance workers) never moved them. I think they rinsed it out and my books got all wet," he said. "I was mad. They could have moved my books. It only takes two seconds."

Dorman said that if there is a problem, students should go to their residence hall's 24-hour information desk to fill out a work order.

"If indeed the maintenance people are responsible for damage, the student will be reimbursed," she said.

UI freshman Matt Peck, who lives in Stanley Residence Hall, said his air conditioner didn't circulate any air when he moved into his room. He put in a work order the first day, but it took a second request a week later to get action. He thinks the first order may have been misplaced.

"I'm kind of irritated," he said. "Eight days should be plenty of time to get here. The weather is all right now, but the first week it was hot."

Fausch said that if there is a problem, the maintenance staff would like to hear about it as soon as possible.

"Generally, a routine work order we try to address in 24 hours," he said. "If it requires parts, it may take longer." Fausch added that an emergency like an overflowing toilet may receive priority over a jammed window.

200 POUNDS HARVESTED LOCALLY

Police not fazed by wild marijuana growth

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

A police seizure of more than 200 pounds of marijuana would normally be a huge bust, but that's not necessarily the case for Iowa City police officers. It's not unusual to find the plant growing in rural parts of town, and that's what happened last week.

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, police were notified about wild marijuana plants growing along Rohret Road near the newly opened Irving B. Weber Elementary School.

The following day, police sent out officers and members of the Parks and Recreation Department to help remove the illegal plants.

"We mowed the area, loaded it up and hauled it away to a landfill," parks maintenance supervisor Bob Howell said. "We loaded around 60 pounds of it the first day and 160 pounds the second day."

To Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department, finding more than 200 pounds of marijuana is nothing new.

"We get several calls a year about marijuana growing on Iowa City property," Lihs said. "It grows wild in many ditches or cornfields where people don't trim the weeds."

Lihs said wild marijuana is of low quality and smoking it might produce a slight buzz, but it is more likely to produce a headache. He said harvesting or smoking it is illegal.

"We've caught teen-age kids in the past trying to harvest it, and we've arrested them for possession," he said.

Lihs said it is not difficult to distinguish between wild marijuana and homegrown marijuana.

"We've dealt with enough marijuana cases to know when someone is intentionally growing the plant," he said. "The professional grower will trim the ends of the plant and build dams around the base of the stem."

Lihs said marijuana has grown on the western outskirts of Iowa City for years and that its presence in Iowa has a lot to do with people planting it after World War II to make rope.

EMRY-RELATED COMMERCIAL WITHDRAWN

Branstad burned in ad debacle

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Thursday opened his television blitz with a slashing death penalty ad that had to be hastily revised because the mother of a 9-year-old slaying victim complained her child's death was being exploited.

Branstad campaign aides said it was a breakdown in communications that resulted in the wrong commercial being briefly aired.

"It upset me that it occurred," said Brian Kennedy, Branstad's campaign manager.

The first commercial featured newspaper clippings about the slaying of Anna Marie Emry, a Grinnell youngster kidnapped and killed last month. It attacked Democrat Bonnie Campbell for not favoring the death penalty.

Earlier this week, the child's parents delivered to Branstad petitions calling for reinstatement of the death sentence but also issued a statement saying "further use of our loss for personal gain will not be tolerated."

When the initial commercial aired, Peggy Emry, the child's mother, called to complain, said Branstad spokeswoman Christina Martin.

Kennedy said Branstad's staffers had not seen the original commercial until earlier this week and had ordered it revised after seeing the references to the Emry case.

"We took a look at the ad and immediately flags go up," Kennedy said. "We were not aware of what clips were in them."

A revised spot with newspaper clippings referring more generally to crime was ordered, Kennedy said.

SPEECH BROADCAST

Absent pope urges unity for Bosnia

Clare Nullis
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Tearful and angry faithful gathered at Sarajevo's cathedral Thursday for a Mass left hollow by the cancellation of the pope's scheduled visit, as John Paul II, grounded in Italy by security fears, called on Serbs, Croats and Muslims to forgive.

The Vatican this week called off a one-day visit to the Bosnian capital planned for Thursday, saying the pope feared for the safety of the crowds that would have turned out to see him and worried that his pilgrimage could aggravate tensions in the besieged city.

The pope addressed the people of Sarajevo on radio and television and delivered the same sermon he had planned to give if he had been present in the Bosnian capital.

"The spiral of 'wrongs' and 'punishments' will never stop if forgiveness does not come at a certain point," he said. "To forgive does not mean to forget. If memory is the law of history, forgiveness is the power of God."

Matilda Sagolj said she cried when she heard the pope's words in Serbo-Croatian, broadcast from the courtyard of his summer residence in Castel Gandolfo, near Rome.

"I am sorry, I am so sorry," she said, breaking into tears again. "His arrival meant almost everything to me, and now I feel terrible."

A papal envoy, Monsignor Francesco Monterisi, said in Sarajevo that the pope still hoped to visit "in one of the next few days in the near future." But with security still a nightmare, it was unclear what would make the pontiff change his mind.

Sarajevo has been under Serb siege since April 1992, when Bosnia's Serb minority rebelled against a decision by the republic's Muslims and Croats to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. In the weeks preceding the pope's planned visit, shelling and gunfire around the capital intensified.

As if to underscore the danger, United Nations planes approaching the Sarajevo airport were fired upon Thursday, and two British NATO warplanes were targeted by surface-to-air missiles, apparently fired by Serbs. None of the planes was hit.

Sarajevo residents of all faiths, who had looked forward to the pope's visit as affirmation that they had not been forgotten by the world after 29 months of war, were angry over its cancellation. Most of their wrath was directed at the Serbs, who had said they could not guarantee the pope's safety, and the United Nations, whose security concerns contributed to the cancellation.

"Foes and the international community prevented his pilgrimage, but we will ... remain strong in our hopes," said Nada Coric, among the 500 people crowding the cathedral Thursday for a celebration of the birth of the Virgin Mary. Outside, small statues of Mary were for sale, and a group of Italian pilgrims sang and danced.

Archbishop Vinko Puljic, co-celebrant of the Mass, alluded to the pope's absence and the pain it had caused.

"The Holy Father was already in our minds, in our feelings, in our prayers," he told worshippers. "We are begging the powerful ones ... who prevented the Holy Father's visit ... don't allow the evil to spread further. Stop the evil so we could live like human beings."

Saying he was praying to God as the first Slavic pope, the Polish pontiff called for forgiveness on all sides in the conflict in former Yugoslavia, and offered a spiritual embrace to the city's Serbs and a wish of peace to Orthodox hierarchy.

Some Bosnian Serb leaders had objected to the pope's planned visit, saying any violence during the trip would be blamed on the Serbs. Tensions are high between the Vatican and Orthodox Serbs who have accused the Catholic church of siding with predominantly Roman Catholic Croatia and Croats in their wars against rebel Serbs in Croatia and Bosnia.

On Saturday, the pope leaves for a two-day visit to Zagreb, Croatia's capital. That city became the only stop in the pope's pilgrimage to former Yugoslavia after the Sarajevo trip was scratched and after the Vatican reportedly met with resistance from Orthodox Serbs to a stop in Serbia's capital, Belgrade.

The Vatican released a copy of the pope's speech to Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, whom he would have met had he come to Sarajevo.

CHILDREN MAY BE RETURNED AFTER TRIAL

Simpson yields custody of kids to parents of murdered ex-wife

Larry Gerber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson is giving up custody of his two children to the parents of his slain ex-wife. If he is acquitted in her slaying he can seek their return, according to court papers obtained by the Associated Press.

Simpson agreed last month to turn over guardianship of Sydney Brooke Simpson, 8, and Justin Ryan Simpson, 6, to their grandparents, according to documents obtained Wednesday.

William Walker, lawyer for the parents of Nicole Brown Simpson, said the court is expected to approve the guardianship in a few days.

Simpson has pleaded innocent in the slaying deaths of Brown Simpson and friend Ronald Goldman. Trial is set for Sept. 26.

Brown Simpson's parents filed a petition July 27, asking to be made legal guardians of Sydney and Justin. Simpson filed his on Aug. 31.

"Simpson is entitled to seek termination of this guardianship and a resumption of his status as a parent having legal and physical custody upon his release from incarceration," said the papers signed by Simpson, the Browns and their lawyers.

Also Thursday, a man jailed for refusing to testify before a grand jury in the case told authorities a private eye, Anthony Pellicano, witnessed the slayings of Simpson's ex-wife and her friend, the investigator said Thursday. He denied he was there.

and Roseanne, said he wasn't shadowing Nicole Brown Simpson and wasn't outside her condo the night of the killings.

"This is untrue," Pellicano told the Associated Press, adding he has now been subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury investigating Al Cowlings' role in Simpson's flight from police June 17. Pellicano was fingered by John Dunton, a convicted forger who was jailed for contempt Wednesday after he refused to testify.

Dunton told police he saw the sleuth in a car outside Brown Simpson's Brentwood home on June 12, the night of the murders, Pellicano said.

Dunton's lawyer, Robert Rentzer, was unavailable for comment Thursday.

Pellicano said Dunton gave police several scenarios about what he saw the night of the slayings.

"I don't think police believe him," he said. "I think he made the whole thing up to police and when he was called before a grand jury and was put under oath, his attorney told him to shut up."

Rentzer has said Dunton won't testify because he fears for his life but declined to say who Dunton fears.

Meanwhile, Cowlings' friend, porn actress Jennifer Peace, 23, met with prosecutors Thursday.

Her attorney, Elliot Abelson, said they asked her to talk with them after she testified before the grand jury last week.

Abelson confirmed investigators executed a search warrant at her home and seized audio tapes and phone records. He didn't know whether any of the tapes were conversations between Peace and Cowlings or Simpson.

AIR FORCE BLUNDER INVESTIGATED

Officers charged in helicopter shutdown

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force has brought 26 charges of negligent homicide against an F-15 fighter pilot involved in last spring's shutdown of two U.S. helicopters over Iraq, the Pentagon announced Thursday.

In addition, five officers on board the AWACS radar plane that oversaw the action will face dereliction of duty charges, the announcement said. Twenty-six people were killed April 14 in one of the military's deadliest "friendly fire" incidents.

Lt. Col. Randy W. May, of the 53rd Fighter Squadron, based in Spangdahlem, Germany, was charged with dereliction of duty in addition to the negligent homicide charges. If he is found guilty of the negligent homicide counts, he could be sent to prison for up to 26 years, a Pentagon spokesman said.

May was the most senior of the two fighter pilots involved in the incident. No announcement of charges was made against the other pilot, nor against more-senior officers who were in charge of the operation in northern Iraq. The second pilot has not been identified by the Air Force.

Officials said more charges still could be brought.

Gen. John Shalikashvili, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in July there were "a shocking number of instances where individuals failed to do their jobs properly."

Still, the number of charges and their severity shocked many inside the Pentagon. Officials said they could not recall any fratricide cases with more charges against officers.

Fifteen U.S. citizens were killed in the downing of the two Army Black Hawk helicopters. In addition, military officers from Britain, France and Turkey and five Kurdish workers employed by the United States were killed.

The aircraft were ferrying members of an international group that had been working with the Kurds in northern Iraq since the end of the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

The identities of those on board the AWACS and their charges include:

- Maj. Douglas L. Martin of the Air Combat Command Air Operations Squadron at Langley Air Force Base, Va., who was on board representing the senior general officer in the region. It was his duty to interpret the "rules of engagement" that govern activities in a potentially hostile area. He faces three counts of dereliction of duty, officials said.

of duty, officials said.

- Capt. Jim Wang, the senior director of the mission crew, is charged with five counts of dereliction of duty. The senior director is in charge of the crew working a certain shift on the radar plane.

- Maj. Lawrence M. Tracey, the mission crew commander, is charged with four counts of dereliction of duty. The mission crew commander has overall responsibility for the officers conducting the radar mission on the plane.

- First Lt. Joseph M. Halci, an en route controller, is charged with four counts of dereliction of duty. An en route controller directs certain aircraft that the AWACS can see, such as the F-15s or the Black Hawks.

- Second Lt. Ricky L. Wilson, the tactical area of responsibility controller, is charged with four counts of dereliction of duty. The tactical area controller finds and then identifies aircraft in a certain portion of the area the AWACS can see.

The last four are attached to the 963rd Airborne Control Squadron at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla.

This marked the first time the Pentagon has released any of the names of the pilots and crew members involved in the shutdown. Pentagon spokesman Col. Doug Kennett said May was the squadron commander, but he said he did not know if May was the pilot who shot first during the incident or if he was the pilot who misidentified the choppers as being Iraqi.

The maximum punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice for negligent homicide is dismissal, forfeiture of pay and allowances and confinement for one year for each charge, the spokesman said.

For dereliction of duty, the maximum punishment is dismissal, forfeiture of two-thirds of pay for three months and confinement for up to three months.

Kennett said that the charges against the individuals means that they will face proceedings equivalent to a grand jury, known as an "Article 32."

Information from those proceedings will be presented to two senior Air Force generals — one in the United States and one in Europe, since that is where the men are based — who will decide whether courts-martial should be held. The process could take months, officials said.

All individuals charged will be given military lawyers, but they may choose civilian attorneys at their own expense.

FBI examines Napoleon's hairs

CHICAGO — Was Napoleon murdered in exile? More than 170 years after the emperor's death, the FBI is on the case.

Using a few strands of Napoleon's hair, the feds are trying to determine whether his body was full of poison.

The history books say Napoleon died of stomach cancer. Some say the British murdered the deposed French emperor; others contend French royalists did him in. Some historians believe Napoleon's love of licorice killed him.

FAMILY DEFENDED BY SPOKESMAN

British beseech royals to reduce expenses

Maureen Johnson
Associated Press

LONDON — If it's not love, it's money that troubles the royal family.

This time around, a parliamentary committee wants closer scrutiny of the 20 million pounds — the equivalent of $31 million — it cost British taxpayers last year to keep five royal palaces going.

Newspapers carried outraged headlines Thursday and splashed sections of the committee report across their pages, including the news that Queen Elizabeth II ran up a phone bill of nearly $1.2 million last year.

"A Right Royal Ripoff" blared the Today newspaper.

Angry aides at Buckingham Palace accused newspapers, the bane of the royals' troubled lives, of distorting the report issued by the all-party Committee of Public Accounts.

For starters, said a palace spokesman, only about one-fourth of the phone bill was actual talking time. The rest went to pay 11 operators to take calls from the public at the palaces and for rents for special lines and maintenance. Members of the family and royal household paid back $31,000 for their private calls.

Michael Shersby, a member of the governing Conservative Party, described the report as "straightforward" and simply seeking more "public visibility" on the way the money is spent.

"We now have a situation where the royal family, which are billionaires and have two palaces of their own, require another five palaces at our expense."

Alan Williams, member of the Labor Party

But the committee's leading member from the main opposition Labor Party, Alan Williams, got most of the air time, grumbling about the queen's "pampered court" and suggesting it was time she got by with just one palace.

The report covered expenditure on Buckingham Palace; Windsor Castle, the queen's weekend retreat west of London; St. James's Palace, where Prince Charles lives; Kensington Palace, where Princess Diana and a clutch of other royals live in separate lavish apartments; and Clarence House, home of the queen's 94-year-old mother, Elizabeth, the Queen Mother.

The queen also has a Scottish castle, Balmoral, and Sandringham House estate in eastern England. She maintains those as her personal property.

"We now have a situation where the royal family, which are billionaires and have two palaces of their own, require another five palaces at our expense," Williams said in a BBC interview.

"We should say, now look, the president has the White House, you have Buckingham Palace. ... Tell us in detail exactly why all the extra accommodation is needed."

The legislators reported that half of the nearly $7.8 million raised by throwing open Buckingham Palace to visitors had gone toward the restoration fund for fire-damaged Windsor Castle.

Royal aides accused newspapers of making it sound as if the queen or her staff had stolen the rest of the money, which they said was spent on staffing, setting up the public viewing and sales of souvenirs and was all publicly accounted for.

"They are suggesting that the money has been misappropriated," said a royal spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity in keeping with palace practice. "They are also implying we have lied to the 600,000 people who have so far paid to visit the palace."

The report said that only eight of the 280 apartments and carriage houses tied to the palaces are occupied by members of the queen's family. Most of the rest are "grace and favor" apartments allocated at low rentals to staff or old royal retainers.

Williams said, "There is no justification for continuing to support the whole royal entourage."

The palace spokesman said the apartments, far from palatial, were mainly small service flats or farm workers' cottages and that staff paid their own utility bills.

U.N. ENVOY WARNS OF CIVIL WAR IN RWANDA

Covert activity suspected as Hutus return

Elizabeth D. Wise
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Defeated Hutu soldiers and militiamen are sneaking back into Rwanda from neighboring countries in what a U.N. document calls "classic preparations for a guerrilla war."

The report by U.N. envoy Sharhaya Khan warned of a resurgence of the massacres in which an estimated 500,000 civilians were slaughtered by Hutu-backed militias. Most of those killed were Tutsis, the Hutus' ethnic rivals.

"Military-aged males, along with large supplies of rations, water and arms have been observed coming across the borders of Zaire and Burundi," it said.

"These are classic preparations for guerrilla war," it added.

A copy of Khan's report was obtained Thursday by the Associated Press.

Paul Kagame, the general who led Tutsis to victory in July, said there has been evidence of fighters loyal to the defeated Hutu regime crossing back into Rwanda.

"There have been signs of intentions of causing problems from Zaire, from Burundi, from Tanzania," said Kagame, vice president and defense minister of the new Tutsi-led government.

"It hasn't really gone to high levels of threat, but we've been seeing such activities and we're concerned," Kagame said.

Kagame said Hutu soldiers and militiamen "have been moving freely around" the southwestern corner of Rwanda, an area his government began moving gradually this week to control.

French troops occupied the southwestern area in June, providing a safe haven for Hutus fleeing Tutsi-led rebels. U.N. peacekeepers took over from the French on Aug.

22. Much of the area is covered by dense undergrowth.

"If you wanted to hide in there it would be very, very easy," said Maj. Jean-Guy Plante, spokesman for the 4,000 U.N. troops in Rwanda.

About 150 government troops are in the southwest, with twice that many to arrive as early as the weekend, Kagame said.

"It's the beginning of our advances into the area," Kagame said.

The new government previously said it would send soldiers to the southwest only after establishing a civilian administration.

Vito's, 118 E. College St., said, "We're planning to be hit with computers from 10 a.m. until 3 a.m."

The game will be televised on ABC, so those without tickets will have the option of watching the game either at home or in a bar.

"We anticipate a lot of people from Ames stopping in and watching the game," said Tom Pate, manager of the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St.

While many will tailgate at the bars, others will attend game parties.

"We're having a big ol' keg here all day," UI senior Chris Jones said. "The first person who gets out of bed Saturday morning in this apartment is responsible for getting it."

The Magic Bus will also be ready to party while parked at its usual spot on Melrose Avenue.

"We'll be having a disc jockey and a few beers," said Brian DeCoster, Magic Bus owner and official party ambassador. "I am very much looking forward to this game."

Although many Hawkeye fans classify the game against ISU as the biggest game of the year, police say they are treating it like any other football weekend.

"We expect it to be busier considering how close Ames is and because of the rivalry, but we haven't added any extra personnel to patrol this weekend," Iowa City police Sgt. Craig Lihs said.

Jones speaks for the majority of Hawkeye fans when it comes to speculating on the outcome of the game.

"It's our responsibility to whup their ass on a yearly basis," he said.

Shipleigh said the weather was clear. "There's no indication at all as to what caused the accident," he said.

Linda Jones said she was standing on her porch when she saw the plane turn to the right, turn over once or twice and go down behind some trees.

The plane was at 6,000 feet when it went off the radar, Boyle said. He said the plane went down at 7:19 p.m., 10 minutes after it was due in at the airport.

Several doctors who were first told to go to the scene were later told not to bother hospitals said.

There were 20 emergency vehicles on top of the hill, and a medical helicopter hovered above. Fire hoses snaked through the trees in an attempt to douse the area.

Because the terrain near the wreckage is so rugged, rescue crews were having to build a road to the crash site. No attempts to remove debris were expected before today.

A temporary morgue was being set up at the airport, said Arthur Gilkes of the Allegheny County Coroner's Office. "We were told the prospect of survivors is very slim," he said.

People who had been waiting at Pittsburgh International Airport to meet passengers were taken into a private area and counselors were being brought in.

The crash was the worst in the United States since Aug. 16, 1987, when a Northwest Airlines MD-80 went down while taking off from Detroit Metropolitan Airport, killing 156 people. A 4-year-old girl was the sole survivor.

It was the fourth fatal USAir crash in the past five years.

On July 2, a USAir jetliner crashed in a thunderstorm near the Charlotte-Douglas International Airport in North Carolina, killing 37 of the 57 people on board.

A USAir plane crashed March 22, 1992 on takeoff in a snowstorm at La Guardia Airport in New York. Twenty-seven people were killed.

On Feb. 1, 1991, a USAir plane and a commuter plane collided on Los Angeles airport runway; 34 were killed.

Pittsburgh International Airport has had only one previous fatal accident. In 1956, a TWA Martin 404 propeller airplane went down, killing 22 people and injuring 14.

Jerry Johnson, a spokesman for Boeing Commercial Airplane Plant in Renton, Wash., said the plane that went down was a 737-300 that was delivered to USAir in October 1987.

ta Man" by Salt-N-Pepa, featuring En Vogue. Aerosmith won the group citation for "Cryin'." And the Counting Crows were selected best new artist for "Mr. Jones."

The presenters of the rap prize — which went to Snoop Doggy Dogg's "Doggystyle" — injected some politics into the affair. Chuck D, with Flavor Flav's help, averred that rap was no fad, as some suspected, and that it offers a political forum.

Chuck D said the United States had its own political prisoners and they should be freed. Among those he named was former heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson, who's serving time in an Indiana prison for rape.

More boos than cheers arose from the audience.

In presenting a lifetime achievement award to the Rolling Stones, Rolling Stone magazine publisher Jann Wenner talked about how much the enduring rock band had meant to him throughout his life.

"They've inspired me in word and deed. I took their name for my magazine. And they mean more to me now than ever. I'm a total stone-cold Stones fan and proud of it," Wenner said.

That provoked Rolling Stones lead singer Mick Jagger to joke, "Without us, Jann, the magazine might have been called the Herman's Hermits Monthly."

He then offered heartfelt thanks, concluding, "We've been doing this now for 30 years. It's a good way of making of living. I think we'll just keep on doing it."

Performing between the acceptance speeches was a musical smorgasbord: the Stones, Bruce Springsteen, Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, the Beastie Boys, Snoop Doggy Dogg, Stone Temple Pilots, Boyz II Men, Salt-N-Pepa, Green Day and Smashing Pumpkins.

Another big name — so big she needs no last name — was the master of ceremonies for the whole shebang: Roseanne (formerly Barr, formerly Arnold). The awards were back at Radio City Music Hall after eight years in Los Angeles.

Virtually all the performers were nominees. After winning the Academy Award for "Streets of Philadelphia," Springsteen collected a kitschy statue of an astronaut — which is what the MTV video award looks like — for best video from a film to put alongside that Oscar.

The awards have become almost an afterthought recently, with arrests and other antics stealing the spotlight.

Hours after he appeared at the 1993 bash in Los Angeles, rapper Snoop Doggy Dogg was picked up on a murder rap. The charge against Snoop — real name: Calvin Broadus — is still pending, and he's appearing this year while out on bail.

Andrew "Dice" Clay was banned from MTV after his scatological performance five years ago, while the artist formerly known as Prince bared the backside formerly known as Prince's during a 1991 performance.

Howard Stern showed a considerably flabbier butt in 1992, while Pee Wee Herman — handling the show's introduction — joked about his 1991 arrest in a Florida porn theater.

Families gather at airports for news of plane crash

Rosemarie Buchanan

Associated Press

CHICAGO — People gathered in airports at Chicago and West Palm Beach, Fla., waited with concern Thursday for word of friends and relatives after a plane went down Thursday, killing all 131 people on board.

Flight 427 originated in Chicago, and was to continue to West Palm Beach, Fla., as Flight 8961 after a stop in Pittsburgh. It crashed on approach to Pittsburgh.

There was little information released, and passengers and personnel traded what scant information they had.

At West Palm Beach, concerned relatives and friends began to gather at the airport.

Lou and Fran Renzie were expecting their nephew from Chicago on USAir and they panicked when they heard the news on TV.

"I was so scared I started shaking," Lou Renzie said. "How many flights from Chicago come in this time of night?"

"Then we found out he came through Charlotte, not Pittsburgh," he said.

"We're relieved for us but heartbroken for the others," Fran Renzie said.

Susan Young, a USAir spokeswoman at company headquarters in Arlington, Va., said the airline would not release a passenger list until the victims' next of kin had been notified.

Passengers arriving at O'Hare were shocked to hear of the crash.

"We didn't know anything about this until we landed," said Greg Carone, 35, who arrived on a USAir flight from Pittsburgh. "I'm relieved and glad to be in Chicago."

guide," she said.

UI freshman Josh Becker was on his way to class in Phillips Hall during the protest.

"I can't say I agree with the policy, but they're obviously trying to make an issue of it," he said. "I can see their point, but I don't think this demonstration is really necessary."

Robert Ketterer, an associate professor in the classics department, said he thinks Rawlings is stuck between the guidelines of the regents and the concerns of students. He thought Rawlings would have listened to the protesters just because they were there.

"He will have to take note of the event," he said. "The question is in the underlying message."

TUITION

these projects, I want to see proof that it went there," Gretchen Lohman said. "The students need to see whether the money is going where promised, and if not, why."

UI President Hunter Rawlings twice called attention to the fact that the UI is the lowest priced institution in the Big Ten. He cited Money magazine, which ranked the UI as one of the "best bargains in university education."

"I think this indicates that on a national level UI tuition is consistently been appropriate," Rawlings said.

John Lohman argued that the reason the UI has the lowest tuition is because the state also has the lowest disposable personal income.

The student speakers were prepared to fight the board with practical considerations and concerns. Several pointed out that as tuition continues to increase, students must spend more time working to pay off loan debts and therefore spend less time studying.

The representatives said students often end up spending more than four years in college, accumulating more of the debts they are working to pay off, and the result is a vicious circle.

University of Northern Iowa student body President Bethany Krueger said the increase may seem small to the board, but it will be detrimental to students.

"For students, the actual rate of tuition increases may be more accurately defined not in terms of dollars, but in terms of Domino's pizzas," said Krueger. "Students will, as they have in the past, find means to come up with money. But more and more, those means are taking away from educational time and driving students further into debt."

GUEST OPINION • ANNIE R. SCHOTT

Sisterhood main aspect of system

Writing in response to Lea Haravon's article "Presenting a challenge to sororities" (The Daily Iowan, Aug. 30) is not an easy one as I normally would not find it necessary to explain to anyone the lifestyle which I have chosen. The reason I have not invited Haravon to dinner at my house as she requested in her article is because I do not think my lifestyle needs explaining or justification in any way as it is a personal choice with which I am not imposing upon Haravon nor anyone else. I respect those who are not greek and those who disagree with greek life, and I hope to be given the same respect. I would not deem it appropriate to challenge anyone about their lifestyle.

However, the article in question was insightful and deserves response. As an avid post-structural feminist, I understand how the greek community can cause questions. I am not trying to justify greek life in any way as I personally don't care if people agree with me and my choices or not. I am, however, concerned that the greek community has not been given fair treatment by the DI over the past weeks, and I feel members of the student body have a right to hear both sides of the story. Their reaction is not my concern. It is a matter of personal choice.

I am a senior this year at the university, and I have been involved with a sorority since freshman year. I signed up for rush because I wanted to move into the residence halls early, planning to drop out of it. Yet within the group of women which comprise the greek community, I found a tremendous amount of support, friendship and mutual respect, and I also found a place to call my home for four years — something I had never had before high school as my family and I moved twelve times during my teen years. I now know I would have a family I could always find. I was amazed and astounded at the incredible power of the sisterhood within the fraternal organization.

I now knew I would have a family I could always find. I was amazed and astounded at the incredible power of the sisterhood within the fraternal organization.

In the Aug. 22 article in the DI, a young woman made a comment that she joined a sorority to find "M-E-N." Yes, the social aspect of greek life could be a reason some women would want to join a sorority. It is personally not the reason I joined one, yet she is an individual with her opinions and that is the one she expressed, which I respect. However, it should be kept in mind that she had not yet learned what it is like to be actively involved in a sorority — she had not experienced the sisterhood, the friendship and the support a group of women can provide to one another. I would also be interested in learning the exact context from which that quote was taken.

In response to Haravon's specific questions, "wannabes" do not "have" to wear formal dresses; they chose to do so. Criteria for membership changes from sorority to sorority, and I am not at liberty to disclose the mutual selection process. (I'm sure many readers will deem this a cop-out answer, but it is a private matter within each individual sorority.) I find Haravon's questions — "What if someone does not look good in a black dress?" "What if she cannot afford one?" and "Do you accept fat women?" — repulsive and ignorant; weight and finance have nothing to do with a woman's personality, character and soul. Of course there are women who play guitars in sororities, just as there are those who sing, dance, produce television shows, work with the elderly, etc. (It is not some massive identical race; just as with every group of women, there are many talents, many ideas, many opinions and many interests.) I know of many members of the gay community who are also members of the greek community, and it adds yet another piece of diversity and choice. My parents could have cared less if I joined a house. And what does the word rush mean? I have no idea. I also have no idea how an onion got the name onion, and I really don't care.

It is important to me that I respect the individual right to personal choice, whether that be as trivial as joining a sorority in college to the rights of women in the arts and sciences. It is important and necessary to judge not only women but all human beings as individuals no matter what race, gender, nationality and, yes, no matter if they choose to become a member of the greek community or not.

To Haravon's final question — "What, really, is important to you?" — I answer this: There must be a level of respect among women to be open-minded and understanding of the different choices which are available to us. What is important to me personally is my sisters — those who are affiliated with the greek community and those who are not. It is important to me that I respect the individual right to personal choice, whether that be as trivial as joining a sorority in college to the rights of women in the arts and sciences. It is important and necessary to judge not only women but all human beings as individuals no matter what race, gender, nationality and, yes, no matter if they choose to become a member of the greek community or not. The greek community has added diversity and understanding in my life, has given me a place to call my home and has opened up a world of opportunity. That is what is really important to me.

Annie R. Schott, a UI senior, is a television production management major.

Florida State goes to court

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State would violate NCAA rules if several suspended football players are allowed to play while the group's legal challenge of a state law remains unresolved, the NCAA told the school.

A federal court hearing is scheduled Tuesday in the NCAA's lawsuit to overturn the state's so-called "due process" law that has prevented the NCAA from acting on the eligibility of a handful of Florida State players who took part in an illegal shopping spree in November 1993.

NCAA enforcement chief David Berst acknowledged the school has attempted to comply with eligibility rules by suspending the players. But Berst wouldn't say the penalties were adequate until the legal challenge has been decided.

The school suspended five players for their actions related to the shopping spree at a Foot Locker store in Tallahassee.

All-American linebacker Derrick Brooks, tailback Tiger McMillon and guard Marcus Long were suspended for two games, guard Patrick McNeil for three games and offensive tackle Forrest Conoly for four games.

NFL

Judge makes Rams' cornerback pay

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A judge increased Darryl Henley's bail Thursday to $600,000 while the Los Angeles Rams cornerback awaits trial on cocaine trafficking charges.

U.S. District Court Judge Gary Taylor's decision was a compromise between a plea by Henley's attorney to keep the bail at $200,000 and a motion by a federal prosecutor to boost the bail to $1 million.

Rams officials are expected to sign an additional $2 million bail agreement, which will allow Henley to travel with the team — bringing the total bail amount to $2.6 million.

Team officials said Henley, who was dropped from the team in August, was re-signed Wednesday for $350,000 for this season.

Coach Chuck Knox said Wednesday he didn't know whether Henley would be ready to play Sunday.

Attorney Gerald Chaleff told Taylor that Henley's salary will be held in an escrow account against the $2 million travel bail bond. Henley has until Sept. 16 to post the $600,000 bail bond.

At a hearing Wednesday, Chaleff bristled at Assistant U.S. Attorney John Rayburn's request to increase the amount of his client's original bail, saying Henley is even less of a flight risk now that he has his job back.

Coaches challenge academic standards

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Coach Hayden Fry says Iowa's academic standards are hurting Iowa football.

Fry's outrage has elevated the conflict between academics and athletics at the UI. He first voiced his anger at a press conference following a Sept. 3 game against Central Michigan.

"Hell, I had seven kids that couldn't practice spring ball that were eligible," Fry said, referring to players who met standards set by the NCAA but didn't meet those set by UI. "They don't do that at Ohio State, Michigan and those places, but we're still supposed to beat them. I can't be a good coach if I don't have my players at practice. It's utterly ridiculous."

Four student-athletes are not able to compete in their sports this semester.

James Head, a basketball recruit from Canton, Mich., was notified Aug. 26 that he was denied admission for academic reasons. Head's father, James Head Sr., said his son had been cleared by the NCAA clearinghouse, which reviews high school transcripts and test scores and certifies freshman student-athletes for initial eligibility to compete. There were questions raised about two math courses and an English course Head had taken in high school.

Russ Millard, a center on the basketball team, did not enroll for the fall semester. Iowa coach Tom Davis said he will not be on the team first semester, but he could return in January.

Tex Montgomery, a junior linebacker on the football team, was declared ineligible Sept. 3 by the NCAA because he was two credit hours short of NCAA progress standards. He had not been approved by the Clearinghouse on Thursday night.

Vernon Rollins, a freshman linebacker on the football team, also was declared ineligible Sept. 3 because of academic reasons. He will redshirt this season.

Fry says he wants the same academic requirements at Iowa as the majority of the other schools have. "We just want to be equal with everybody else," Fry said. "And when it gets out of line, we've got to try to correct it."

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for university relations, said the academic admission standards for student-athletes are the same as for regular students.

She said most freshmen student-athletes apply to the College of Liberal Arts which generally admits students from Iowa high schools who are in the upper half of their class, and out-of-state students who are in the upper third. ACT and SAT scores are used to help determine admission if a student does not meet class rank criteria.

Rhodes said Iowa's admissions standards are similar to those of other schools.

"What we don't have are mechanisms some other schools have to get student-athletes admitted," she said. "Some schools have systems where administrators can approve admission or faculty members can sponsor admission for a student."

Iowa basketball coach Tom Davis shares Fry's disappointment in the UI admissions policy.

"It would seem to me in a university of this state, the university would be committed to diversity," Davis said. "It would seem to me, the university should be committed to take a chance — I'm not just talking athletes. If an athlete meets NCAA standards and has positive qualities that someone at the university sees, we should take

Iowa State coach Jim Walden and Iowa coach Hayden Fry have different ideas about who will be favored in Saturday's game at Kinnick Stadium.

"They're going to be a tough team for us," Walden said. "I think they're going to be a 35-point favorite and they should be."

Fry disagreed. "I don't know that we'll realistically be favored against anybody this year," he said.

It appears Fry will lose this debate. Iowa is favored after its big 52-21 win last Saturday over Central Michigan. Meanwhile, Iowa State lost to division I-AA Northern Iowa in Ames.

Walden said the Cyclones will have to fix their own problems before they can worry about Iowa.

"I've spent more time looking at us than what Iowa is doing and I think that's a good philosophy," Walden said. "It doesn't do me any good to spend a lot of time with Iowa until I know for sure what we didn't do well has been corrected."

Iowa State was without two starters against the Panthers, running back Calvin Branch and split end James Brooks, who were suspended for a fraudulent check-writing scandal. Both players will be back for this week's game although

NFL ticket prices soar 8.2 percent

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A day at an NFL game for a family of four remains the most expensive outing in pro sports, averaging $184.19, according to Team Marketing Report, a Chicago-based newsletter.

The cost represents a 6.3 percent increase from last season, when the average was $173.37, and includes four average-priced tickets, two small beers, four small sodas, four hot dogs, parking for one car, two game programs and two twill caps.

The biggest contributor to the NFL's increase was an 8.2 percent rise in average ticket prices to $31.05, the largest one-year boost since 1981, when Team Marketing Report began tracking such statistics.

STRIKE UPDATE

New plan awaits owners' approval

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — With the World Series just a day away from being wiped out, striking baseball players delivered a "taxation" plan to owners Thursday and hoped it would be accepted in place of a salary cap.

Owners said they will study the plan and respond today, the deadline for canceling the rest of the season.

The plan calls for a 2 percent payroll tax and for clubs to split 25 percent of gate receipts, according to sources, speaking on the condition that they not be identified.

Sixteen clubs would contribute revenue to the other 12, sources said. The union suggested that clubs be required to maintain minimum payroll levels and that teams be prohibited from receiving money for more than three consecutive years.

Union head Donald Fehr said players wouldn't agree to any large tax that might be "inhibiting" in the free agent market. He said the plan didn't alter the basic structure of free agency and salary arbitration, making it unlikely a deal can be agreed to on Friday.

Acting commissioner Bud Selig said his deadline for calling off the remainder of the season "still

The UI men's cross-country team will have to rely on experience to defeat a talented field of cross-country teams visiting Iowa City's Finkbine Golf Course for Saturday's Iowa Invitational.

Arizona is the favorite to win this weekend. The Wildcats feature Bob and Martin Keino who are the sons of two-time Olympian and gold-medalist Kip Keino. The Wildcats are ranked eighth in Harrier's national preseason rankings. The Invitational field also will include Illinois, Loyola and Michigan State.

Coach Larry Wiecek said this weekend's Invitational will be a difficult test, but the Hawkeyes are experienced with four of their top six runners returning from last season. He also said that running at Finkbine will be an added advantage for the Hawkeyes.

"The meet is a little tougher than we would like to open up with, but we are glad to have the opportunity to promote cross-country and have these quality teams come to Iowa City," Wiecek said.

a risk. If the student can't do the work, we don't want them here."

Some of Iowa's coaches met with UI administrators last week to discuss the issue.

"We're ruining a kid's life," Fry said at a press conference Tuesday.

Fry implied the academic standards make it more difficult to recruit.

"I'm trying to recruit you a blue-chipper and you can go to any school in the country and play as a freshman, but you can't do it at Iowa, you think you're going to come here?"

Greg Toal, Rollins' high school coach in Hackensack, said Rollins was a recruit who could have gone to any college in the nation. Rollins was a first team all-American during his senior year. Toal said Michigan was Rollins' No. 2 choice.

"If the kid wasn't so loyal, he could have jumped on a plane and enrolled in Michigan or another school the next day," Toal said.

"The kid did everything they asked him to do."

Toal said Rollins is disappointed he can't play, but he will get through his redshirt season.

"I think the kid's down," Toal said. "I think he's big enough to get by this. It's going to hurt Iowa in recruiting. The word gets out. It's definitely going to hurt them down the road."

Rollins said he doesn't like to talk about the issue.

"I told everything to my coach (Toal) so he pretty much said it best," Rollins said. "It hurts."

Former Iowa football player Lew Montgomery, who is now the Director of College Recruiting and Diversity Training at Kelly Services, said he doesn't remember academic eligibility being such an issue when he finished his Hawkeye career in 1992.

"I don't think it's been a problem in the past, not on a consistent basis," Montgomery said. "This isn't something that happens on a yearly basis. On a wide-range scale, it's a new problem. I think it needs to be addressed immediately before it gets out of hand."

"It's not only going to hurt recruiting, it makes the university look bad, hurts the team's morale, hurts the youngster's morale and hurts Fry and his staff's reputation."

Associate athletic director Fred Mims is in charge of Student Services, which offers tutors for student-athletes and helps them prepare for the future with workshops on how to write resumes or how to interview for a job. He said many universities are committed to reforming their policies regarding academic eligibility.

"There's a commitment across the board nationally to increase the standards, not at just the college level, but at the secondary level too," Mims said. "This is a time of transition."

Walden said neither of them will start.

Fry is concerned about the Cyclone option offense led by quarterback Todd Doxon.

"It's always a very difficult preparation for Iowa State," Fry said. "Then you throw in the in-state factor in. I think that's why the game has been very interesting throughout the years."

The Hawkeyes have taken 11 straight from the Cyclones, but Iowa claims it is not overconfident.

"If I have anything to say about it, there won't be any letdowns," senior running back Ryan Terry said. "We've got to keep rolling. We can't think we got a big win and we can just relax."

Iowa appeared to relax in last year's game with the Cyclones after building a 24-point second half lead. Iowa State's came back, but fell short 31-28.

Sophomore Ryan Driscoll will start at quarterback for the second straight week although Fry said redshirt freshman Matt Sherman will see action as well.

Driscoll thinks both teams will put a lot of points on the board.

"We're going to try to light it up," Driscoll said. "Their offense is always capable with that option of breaking one here or there. I expect a high-scoring game."

Defensive lineman and Chicago native Lloyd Bickham said players who grew up in Iowa know the meaning of the rivalry.

"It feels like another game to me, but a lot of the guys from Iowa, you ought to see them in practice. It's like they're ready to kill somebody when we get ready to play Iowa State," Bickham said.

earned their first national ranking during Wiecezorek's seven-year tenure as the head coach of the UI men's cross-country team. However, they faltered at the Big Ten Championships and finished a disappointing seventh.

Wiecezorek said that this year the team is trying to earn some recog-ognition.

"While we have a runner to replace with so many veterans returning the total group has the potential to be better than last year," Wiecezorek said.

The runner designated to take over in the No. 1 spot this season is fifth-year senior and team captain Matt Gerard. Wiecezorek said Gerard appears to be ready after a successful track season.

The rest of the top five will consist of a group of Hawkeye veterans. Junior letterman Rod Kerko will take over Gerard's old position. Fifth year-seniors Pete McDowell, Mark Roehl, and Troy Hollatz will round out the top five positions.

Freshmen Chad Feeldy and Jared Pittman lead a talented group of newcomers. Wiecezorek said he also is anxious to see how Mike Bakker performs after red-shirting last season. These newcomers will blend with other veteran runners to provide depth.

"They're quality runners and you hope that they have the burning desire to make this the best season of their life."

The meet will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Finkbine Golf Course.

applies." If so, it would cancel the World Series for the first time since 1904.

"Everything is as it's been all along," Selig said in a telephone interview from his Milwaukee office.

However, if there is a deal Friday, players probably would return to the field on Sept. 16 or Sept. 19, depending on how many days of workouts the sides agree to.

"We'll be in touch with the union in the morning," management negotiator Richard Ravitch said.

Boston Red Sox chief executive officer John Harrington said after the players' 30-minute presentation that he hopes the proposal "will lead to more progress."

Players hoped Selig would reconsider Friday's deadline and allow talks to continue.

"If there's a settlement within reach, or a possibility of that coming, I don't think there's a time frame on this," Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder Brett Butler said.

NEW YORK — CBS insists it is not in the business of rooting for one player or another at the U.S. Open.

Still, the network couldn't have been thrilled at the flood of upsets that littered the men's side of the draw and took out heavyweights like Pete Sampras, Goran Ivanisevic, Boris Becker and Jim Courier.

That left unseeded Andre Agassi as the marquee name and the network wouldn't mind finding him at center court Sunday when the men's championship is decided.

Agassi breathed some much needed life into the Open with his five-set victory over Michael Chang and then charged into the semifinals with a three-set sweep of Thomas Muster.

"He's been in Grand Slam finals. He's been in the limelight here. He appeals to a wider sports crowd."

had a 2.9 rating and 11 share this year.

In 1993 Sampras and Jim Courier, two Americans, had a 4.9 rating and 17 share. In 1992, Agassi and Ivanisevic had a 5.6 rating and 21 share.

"He's been in Grand Slam finals. He's been in the limelight here. He appeals to a wider sports crowd."

That takes nothing away from Martin, Mansbach said. "Knowledgeable tennis fans like Todd Martin. They know how good he is. He was in the finals at the Australian and the semifinals at Wimbledon.

"The average guy clicks with Agassi, though. I don't know if he does with Todd Martin."

The party of the second part in the championship won't matter much, Mansbach said.

"How close the match is will be the most important thing."

Agassi brings one other asset for CBS, a plus located in his rooting section.

Was CBS pulling for him against Muster? What do you think?

Next for Agassi is Todd Martin on Saturday. Both are young Americans with solid credentials. They are not the same attraction, though.

Martin is low key and reserved. Agassi is neon lights and pizzazz. It's like comparing a violin and a trumpet.

"Andre will bring in more than Todd in the ratings," CBS producer Bob Mansbach said. "He will bring in a broader audience. He might bring in Generation X and some teeny boppers."

For evidence, Mansbach offered the last three Wimbledon finals.

"I'll bet Agassi had better numbers in 1992 than Pete Sampras had the last two years," he said.

He is right. Sampras and Goran Ivanisevic

Chiefs to give QB revenge

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

People in San Francisco may still prefer Joe to Steve.

But the money goes with Steve Young and the 49ers when they go to Kansas City in their first meeting against Joe Montana since he was traded.

Impressive as Montana and the Chiefs were in winning at New Orleans Sunday, San Francisco and Young were even better in their 44-14 win over the Los Angeles Raiders Monday night.

So the 49ers are 2 1/2-point favorites over Montana and the Chiefs, whose secondary gave up 326 yards to Jim Everett at New Orleans.

"Being realistic about it, I want to win the game as bad as they want to win it," Montana said. "But it's one of 16 games on the schedule. I haven't seen a team in a long time go undefeated and win the Super Bowl."

A hunch: Don't believe him. Yes, after a week, the 49ers and Cowboys seem to be way above everyone else in the NFL.

Yes, San Francisco's defense has been seriously upgraded.

But ... This is a special game to Montana, and Montana is special in special games. If the Kansas City defense doesn't give Young the time to pass that the Raiders allowed ...

CHIEFS-49ERS

Montana, Young go head-to-head

Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Joe Montana and Steve Young both insist there's nothing personal at stake in their first on-the-field confrontation.

The history and duration of their quarterback rivalry tells a different tale.

So with Sunday's game between the San Francisco 49ers and Kansas City Chiefs providing a compelling backdrop, look for Montana to throw a right and Young to respond with a left.

It's their first — and possibly only — chance to play out years of simmering competitive tensions on the field.

"I know they're both fired up but

"It's big, really big. People want to try to downplay it, but it's important for both teams and it's a big thing in the NFL."

Marcus Allen, Kansas City Chiefs running back

they can't let themselves be consumed about playing each other as opposed to running their teams," San Francisco tight end Brent Jones said.

"It's big, really big," Kansas City running back Marcus Allen added. "People want to try to downplay it, but it's important for both teams and it's a big thing in the NFL."

Sunday's showdown has been a long time coming and one that never could have taken place while they were on the same team. But, Montana and Young insist, it's just one game, early in the year at that, and certainly won't make or break either team, regardless of the outcome.

"It should be a fun and interesting experience," said Montana, downplaying any revenge factor. "I never imagined I would ever have to (play against the 49ers) but that's the way of the league now. The league is changing and I was part of those changes."

Young said he's approaching the game like he would any other.

"This week, as with all the weeks I've been here, I have to go out and perform," Young said.

"I have a standard that has been set for me. It's not an easy standard."

That's because Montana set it. In 10 years as the 49ers' starter, Montana led the club to four Super Bowl titles in the 1980s. In the process, he also established himself as one of the region's best-loved sports figures.

But he was knocked off stride by elbow problems and, in his mind, usurped by Young. Before the 1993 season, Montana was traded to Kansas City.

Forty-Niners president Carmen Policy likened the move to an emotional earthquake but also believed that the Montana-Young controversy had become so divisive and pronounced that the move had to be made.

Besides, the relationship between Montana and Young had deteriorated from professional but strained to downright icy. The two barely spoke to each other during Montana's last season in San Francisco.

"Their relationship was doomed from the beginning," Policy said. "Steve Young hadn't come in as a draft choice to be an understudy. He came to the 49ers in a significant (1987) trade with the obvious intent of him becoming the starting quarterback."

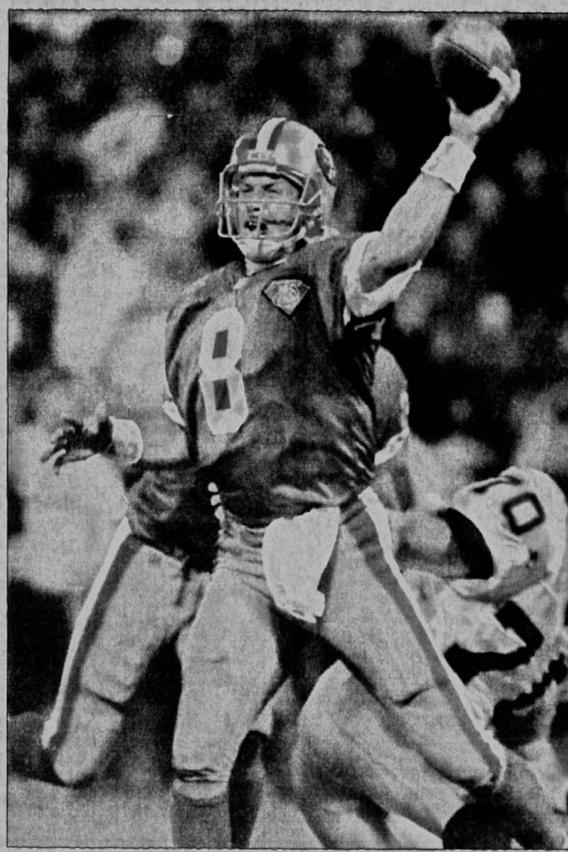

"It wasn't a case where Steve was going to learn from the master. Joe saw him as a competitor for the starting position."

Young, who chafed for more playing time in four years as Montana's understudy, has three straight passing titles since taking over his job.

But that championship season, the kind his predecessor accomplished with elegance and flair, has eluded him.

Young took the 49ers to the brink of the Super Bowl only to lose NFC title games to Dallas in the past two years.

"I don't know if any quarterback can really say, 'You did it all,' unless you take a team to the Super Bowl," Young said.

Associated Press

"There's no doubt as I line up this year, that's the No. 1 thing I hope to do."

Montana grudgingly admits Young has performed well, but that's all he'll concede.

"I think he's proved that he's a good player in his own right," Montana said.

Still, Montana, who once said he regarded Young as the "opposition" while both played for the 49ers, made clear he was rankled by the way his career in San Francisco came to an end.

"All I ever asked for was a fair shot at competing for the job," he said. "But they weren't going to open it up for competition. Everyone wants that opportunity, but I don't think I was in their plans. The big thing is that's over with now and I have to look to my future. I look back as little as I can."

Young said if there was tension between himself and Montana it wasn't anything personal.

"We've always been very professional," Young said. "In any competitive situation it's just what it is. I don't think there's ever been an argument or harsh words or anything like that."

In fact, Young said, he hopes to visit with Montana after the game. He figures he owes him.

"If I'm a great quarterback or a good quarterback or a decent quarterback, a lot of it's because of Joe," Young said.

NBA

Suns ink Manning to one-year deal

Mel Reisner
Associated Press

PHOENIX — Danny Manning signed a one-year, $1 million contract with the Phoenix Suns, accepting 20 percent of his market value to join one of the NBA's highest-profile organizations.

Suns president Jerry Colangelo announced the acquisition Thursday and said the action by an established star like the former Atlanta Hawks forward was unprecedented in his experience.

"The speculation is that he was offered $5 million a year for seven years," Colangelo said. "This is so unique and so refreshing, and I'll repeat what I said earlier — I think it's something that should be championed by the league. Here's a classic case of a player who yearns to be with a winner, with an organization that he's respected."

"And this is an opportunity that comes once in a lifetime for a player, so he can make his pick and put the financial consideration aside for a year."

He said Manning, who did not attend the news conference, signed the contract Wednesday.

Manning fits into the salary slot of Mark West, who was traded to the Detroit Pistons for a second-round draft choice.

Manning had said this summer that he wanted to play in Phoenix and would not talk to any other teams. He said he would sign for whatever the Suns could offer under the salary cap.

Manning made $3.5 million last year, ending the season with Atlanta after a trade that sent Dominique Wilkins to the Los Angeles Clippers.

Ron Grinker, Manning's agent, told The Phoenix Gazette the signing was done quietly in the hope that it would not attract the interest of NBA commissioner David Stern. But Colangelo said because Manning was signed for just one season, the NBA will not take exception to the contract.

The league has rejected long-term several contracts, including that of Green, saying they attempted to circumvent the salary cap. The contracts have in common that a player is underpaid the first season and then is allowed to become an unrestricted free agent.

A U.S. District Court judge in New Jersey will hear arguments on those cases Monday.

Colangelo also said he was a week away from being able to sign Wayman Tisdale, who played for the Sacramento Kings last season. He did not say if he would match Detroit's four-year, $10 million offer for problem-ridden center Oliver Miller, but everything Colangelo has said indicated Miller is out of Phoenix.

"I was not a happy guy last year with the problems surrounding our team, in any connotation, regarding any of our players, with off-the-court problems, and I just vowed to myself that come this year it's going to be gone," Colangelo said.

Colangelo has until Sept. 21 to match the offer for Miller, a restricted free agent whose departure would leave Phoenix with one true center, Joe Kleine.

Colangelo said that was no concern, especially in a lineup with inside players like Charles Barkley, Manning, Tisdale and A.C. Green, who can play a number of positions.

"When you blend all of these skills together, it gives you so many options," Colangelo said. "Who are you going to double-team? You post up a couple of guys, and when Kleine's on the floor, as long as he can hit the 15-footer, you can have a field day."

In two seasons with the Suns, the 6-foot-9 Miller has not been able to keep his weight below 300 pounds.

CHARLOTTE HORNETS

Giminski leaves court for booth

Paul Nowell
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Mike Giminski officially retired as an NBA player Thursday to take a job as a color commentator on the Charlotte Hornets' radio broadcasts.

"As a player you don't think this day will ever come," the 14-year NBA veteran said at a news conference at the team's offices. "The bad news is you can't do it forever."

"The good news is that I get to embark on a second career. Sometimes an opportunity comes along you can't pass by."

An All-America selection at Duke, Giminski was drafted in the first round in 1980 by the New Jersey Nets. After seven seasons, he was traded to the Philadelphia 76ers. He spent parts of four seasons with the Sixers, leading them to the Atlantic Division title in 1989-90.

The 6-foot-11 center came to the Hornets in 1991 in a trade for forward Armon Gilliam and center Dave Hoppen. Hampered by injuries, he averaged 6.7 points and 4.6 rebounds in four seasons in Charlotte.

"My only regret is that the people down here never saw my best basketball," he said. "I was never as effective as I was in the past. I would have liked to have played better for them."

Giminski, who was traded last season to Milwaukee for Frank Brickowski, settled in Charlotte with his family.

He had considered going back to graduate school and possibly venturing into politics.

When the Hornets approached him about the radio job, he took it. "I'm nervous about this but I'm confident I'll do well," Giminski said. "I've played basketball the last 25 years of my life. It's not only my first love but it's been a safety net."

Giminski will team up with play-by-play men Steve Martin and Matt Pinto.

"I know I'll work as hard at this as I did on the basketball court," he said.

"This seems to be a natural fit. I hope the listeners learn a little from my broadcasts. And there will be some humor, because after all this is a game and you should have fun."

In his 14-year career, Giminski scored 10,953 points and averaged 6.9 rebounds in 938 games. His best season was 1988-89, when he averaged 17.2 points and 9.4 rebounds for the Sixers.

"We are ecstatic to have Mike back as part of our family," Hornets president Spencer Stolpen said.

"He's an outstanding person who made a profound impact both on and off the court during his four years in Charlotte and his 14 years in the league."

Phillips sparks Huskers

Jean Page
Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — Tommie Frazier ran for two touchdowns and threw for one as No. 1 Nebraska broke open a close game in the second half and beat Texas Tech 42-16 Thursday night.

Lawrence Phillips helped Nebraska (2-0) pull away, running for two touchdowns and most of his 175 yards in the third quarter. Tech got as close as 14-9 before Phillips took control.

The Cornhuskers ran for 524 yards using Phillips, Cory Schlesinger and Clinton Childs. Frazier rushed for 84 yards and threw for 88.

It was defense that kept Texas Tech (1-1) within reach of Nebraska until midway through the third quarter. The unit, led by linebacker Zach Thomas, sacked Frazier once and had four tackles for losses.

Frazier gave Nebraska a 7-0 lead just 2:01 into the game when he sprinted 58 yards down the right sideline.

U.S. OPEN

Stich stumbles, advances to face Novacek

Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Michael Stich served with all the consistency of a once-a-week hacker, double-faulting 15 times Thursday night in his worst match of the U.S. Open as he stutter-stepped into the semifinals.

The highest-seeded man left in the tournament, the No. 4 Stich created trouble for himself and got plenty from young Swede Jonas Bjorkman before escaping with a 6-4, 6-4, 6-7 (7-9), 6-4 victory.

Stich's next opponent is Karel Novacek, the quintessential journeyman of tennis, who served 28 aces to beat Jaime Yzaga 6-2, 6-7 (7-9), 6-1, 5-7, 6-3 and reach his first Grand Slam semifinal after 30 early exits.

Andre Agassi and Todd Martin will play in the other semifinal Saturday.

Stich, the 1991 Wimbledon champion, had never gone past the quarters at the U.S. Open. There were times in this match when it seemed he wouldn't make it this time.

"I was serving very, very badly," said Stich, whose double-faults more than offset his 13 aces against the player who knocked out Stefan Edberg. "Right now I'm really, really tired. All the credit to Bjorkman, the way he kept fighting. He never gave up. Not many guys are doing that."

"Today I played my worst match of the Open. But it's very important to me that I made it into the semis, that I stayed in there."

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Iowa gunning for NCAA championships

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

UI women's Cross-Country coach Jerry Hassard is very proud of his team's tradition of strong finishes in the Big Ten and he doesn't expect anything less in a rebuilding year.

"I think this team is as talented as any of the teams I've coached," Hassard said.

The Hawkeyes have finished in the upper division of the Big Ten for the last eight seasons and has competed in the NCAA championship in five of the last eight seasons. It will be no easy task for Iowa to match these high standards.

The Hawkeyes were hit hard by graduation losing most of their top runners. Hassard said the team does not have as many strong individual runners this season, and must compensate by working together as a team.

The top returning runner for Iowa will be senior Erin Boland. Boland has run in several national meets and Hassard said her experience will be a key factor.

Experience is one of the key concerns for Hassard this season. The team is dominated by freshmen and sophomores with limited race experience.

Hassard stressed that the team has talent, but will have to develop it over the season.

"We are going to have to improve a lot, but I think we are capable of that," Hassard said.

Hassard is also trying to avoid injuries, which contributed to inconsistent performances last season. Hassard has lowered the intensity of his practices this year in an effort to prevent another round of injuries.

"We can't afford to lose anybody because every team member is valuable this season," Hassard said.

The Hawkeyes open their season at 10 a.m. this Saturday in the Iowa Invitational at the Finkbine Golf Course.

Anderson expects improvement

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa - Iowa State football game this weekend isn't the only intrastate rivalry unfolding.

Under direction of new head coach Terry Anderson, the men's golf team opens play Saturday at the Midwest Championship in Ames. Anderson took over last spring following the departure of Lynn Blevins.

The Hawks finished sixth in the Big Ten Championships last spring.

"We're improving. We finished tenth two years ago, but there's still lots of room for improvement," Anderson said.

This year the team elected to go with tri-captains. Two seniors earned the honors, Sean McCartney and David Sharp. The last third of the responsibility is given to Laine Brantner, who remains a junior under the rules of NCAA eligibility.

According to Anderson, five men will compete as a team for Iowa in an overall competition. Two others will also be making the trek to Ames competing solely on an individual level.

Steady improvement over the past couple of years gives promise to the '94 season. As far as the outlook on this fall, Anderson remains optimistic.

"I'm excited about this year. I think we've gotten better. We have good leadership out of our cap-

Hawks slip past VCU, 4-3

Chris Snider

The Iowa field hockey team pulled out their second victory of the year last night with a 4-3 win over Virginia Commonwealth. The win moves UI to 2-1 on the season.

Junior Kristen Holmes scored the first goal of the game for Iowa, and added another marker in the second half. Senior Debbie Humpage and junior Ann Pare each added goals for the Hawkeyes.

Jessica Krochmal and Rachel Smith shared time in goal for Iowa. Krochmal saved four shots in the first half and Smith saved two in the second.

Kelly Yoder kept VCU in the game, scoring one of her two goals with 27-seconds left in the first half, to cut Iowa's lead to 2-1, and give Virginia Commonwealth some momentum going into intermission.

According to Coach Beth Beglin, "I am not happy with our defense. We had opportunities to put VCU away and didn't. You never want to give up a goal with under two minutes left in the half."

Beglin was pleased with her teams effort in the first half, but didn't see that same effort in the second.

"They're not learning from their mistakes," said Beglin. "We take one step forward and then we take one step back."

Beglin was happy with 27 shots on goal, compared to 14 for Virginia Commonwealth, as well as out cornering VCU 11-3.

UNI suffers letdown

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Terry Allen worried that a Thursday night game would throw his staff off. He worried that his Northern Iowa Panthers would be riding just a little too high after their victory over Iowa State. He worried that his team wouldn't have enough time to get ready.

His worst fears came true when Southwest Texas State blocked a Panthers' punt and field goal to take a 20-19 win in Division I-AA.

"They absolutely deserved to win," Allen said. "We were basically pathetic."

The Panthers (1-1) had a chance to win Thursday night's game on a last-second field goal. But Vicente Reid blocked Matt Waller's 50-yard try and the Bobcats recovered the ball with 1 second left for the win.

Allen said he was most upset with his special teams.

"Northern Iowa prides itself on being good on special teams."

HERE WE GO AGAIN

Fleeing the bee people: a weekend tour guide for the football-impaired

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

"Yin and Yang. Shiva and Shakti. Iowa and Iowa State. Opposite natures that just ... belong together!" — Dr. Pandit Harappa, Iowa's only Tantric guru, who also happens to handle 90 percent of the state's beer distribution and the sale of black-and-gold nylon stretch pants.

It's truly a tale of two cities. But this tale's even more boring than Dickens' was.

This weekend, Iowa City will undergo a dangerous polarization process. Drunken students and alumni from two of the state's major universities will converge on our hapless burg, bringing gaudy sports paraphernalia, 190-proof spirits and enough bratwurst to choke Pavarotti.

"What the hell is this?" we will scream, snatching our children off the streets and covering our homes with grease-proof paper to prevent permanent stains.

"This" is the Iowa / Iowa State football rivalry, and unfortunately there isn't a damn thing we can do about it. For the next two days, those of us who don't really give a rat's ass about who takes of hop and hemp. We're going to need some tasty, sticky buds to prevent us from squashing all those screaming bumble bee-looking freaks.

The Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., goes short on the dope this weekend, but they're long on superlative jazz. Tonight and Saturday, jazz guitarist Jim Yanda and his trio from New York provide the perfect seasoning for the Sanctuary's killer pizza (sorry we didn't rate you guys in the weekend section, but you don't deliver — you beat most pizzerias to a pulp as far as I'm concerned).

The folks at The Metro, 121 Iowa Ave., win this week's prize for booking solid alternatives to football mania. Tonight (despite the erroneous listing in Thursday's Arts section Calendar), one can chill at the Met with the cool tunes of Shade of Blue. And Saturday, Dagobah and opening act Kind offer a funky retreat for fans of hop and hemp.

Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., always offers alternative mayhem to comfort those who experience cramps when confronted with pigskin. Tonight sees the hard-core rock-a-billy of the Bent Scepters and the Vibro Champs; as I've previously mentioned, these are bands, not items from the Adam and Eve Pleasure Catalog. Saturday, the Sundogs turn loose a reggae barrage to bring us all down comfortably from the weekend-football high. Bring your roach clips, kids.

The newly reworked stage at The Mill, 120 E. Burlington St., offers folk from Big Wooden Radio tonight, with local band Heavy Boots taking over on Saturday. Perhaps some of the playwrights who work at The Mill will beat the football fans senseless with their manuscripts-in-progress. We can only hope.

That's all, folks. The weekend love shack will have bars on its windows for the next couple of days, so knock really loud. I'll be in the back room, listening to Mel Tillis records and throwing darts at a picture of Herky's ass.

Riveting movie examines Nazi filmmaker

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

Ray Müller's "The Wonderful, Horrible Life of Leni Riefenstahl" is a cleverly, maddeningly ambiguous film. It opens with the straightforward question — Was Leni Riefenstahl a feminist pioneer or a woman of evil? — and proceeds to demonstrate that she may have been both, or neither. By the end of the documentary, one has to wonder if even Riefenstahl herself is sure of the answer.

Riefenstahl is generally considered one of the most technically innovative directors in cinematic history. She also has the distinction of having been Adolf Hitler's pet filmmaker during the Third Reich. At his request, she made "Triumph of the Will," a Nazi "documentary" that may be the most effective propaganda film ever. Riefenstahl claims to have been an apolitical artist forced into an unsavory job; the worst of the rumors, however, paint her as the Nazi mistress of Hitler and Joseph Goebbels. Müller's documentary is framed as an attempt to sort out fact from innuendo and decide what Leni Riefenstahl is really guilty of.

Regardless of its title, the film isn't about Riefenstahl's life. Rather, it's a leisurely three-hour examination of her career. Müller actually leads the 90-year-old Riefenstahl through recreations of important points in her professional life — all in an apparent attempt to make her confront her past. However, he quickly discovers that it isn't easy to get this strong-willed, opinionated woman to assume a reflective stance, and she remains stubbornly defensive throughout the process.

For his part, Müller has put together a visually appealing, well-paced film. The scripted narration is weak in places and "Life" is a little longer than it needs to be, but such foibles are outweighed by the film's excellent production values. Müller's own cinematography is sparkling, and he has liberally sprinkled the film with breathtaking clips from Riefenstahl's work.

"Life" has almost no trace of didacticism; in fact, it may be a little more evenhanded than Müller had intended. Müller strongly hints that he considers Riefenstahl guilty of incorporating fascist imagery in her art, and that, by extension, she may be harboring Nazi allegiances. However, the pointed questions which suggest this theory don't come until the end, which means his own suspicions don't poison the viewers' opinions.

It is clear that Riefenstahl's work changed dramatically after she met the Führer. Until about 1935, she gravitated toward strongly atmospheric pieces set against spectacular natural backdrops. Between 1935 and the 1980s, however, her major projects focused obsessively Filmmaker Leni Riefenstahl — director of "Triumph of the Will" — was photographed with Adolf Hitler in 1934. Ray Müller's documentary "The Wonderful, Horrible Life of Leni Riefenstahl" takes her on a tour of her life and examines her motivations and mindset. The film plays at the Bijou this weekend.

on body imagery that seemed to endorse fascist values of human strength, beauty and physical prowess. (An interesting counter-dark impressionism favored by "Jewish art critics" and "effete intellectuals.")

All the same, Riefenstahl's formal complaint over mistreatment of citizens in occupied Poland makes it difficult to believe she was an enthusiastic Nazi supporter. A more likely explanation is that a combination of self-interest, superficiality and apathy allowed her to turn a blind eye to the Reich's abuses of power. Riefenstahl's qualified acceptance of some of the charges, coupled with her overfrequent insistence that she regrets nothing, suggest she doesn't want to confront her own suspicions that she's guilty of complicity in crimes against humanity.

The real value of "The Wonderful, Horrible Life of Leni Riefenstahl" lies in its exploration of Riefenstahl's self-delusions and in the fact that many other Germans offered similar excuses. If someone as talented and intelligent as Riefenstahl could be persuaded to go along with Hitler, it's no wonder so many of her countrymen were also fooled. Müller's most impressive accomplishment is his exploration of the mindset that allowed so many basically good people to be swept up in the ravings of a charismatic madman.

"The Wonderful, Horrible Life of Leni Riefenstahl" plays at the Bijou, tonight and Saturday at 7 p.m. Admission is $3.50. Tickets are available at the Union Box Office.

Or perhaps we could do little things to make it more fun for ourselves and the fans, he said, giggling nefariously. Perhaps we could pump our systems full of live music and reclaim our city from these bozos:

Pale Saints
Slow Buildings

Fading back into view after two years, Britain's Pale Saints have sharpened their typically blurry focus on their new album, Slow Buildings. Having replaced guitarist / vocalist Ian Masters with newcomer Colleen Browne, the band is now fronted by Meriel Barham, and it shows. Whether or not the change in personnel is responsible, Pale Saints has emerged from the hazy, lazy demeanor of In Ribbons with new confidence and a sound more like their grittier early work. The band concentrates more on the integrity of the songs than the atmosphere this time, moving more in the direction of bands like the Darling Buds and Throwing Muses instead of 4AD labelmates Lush or Cocteau Twins.

What's not missing under the album's remodeled rock exterior is the Saints' characteristic tweaking of convention. While more of the songs actually have a single time signature, it's still often not 4/4. These songs shuffle about in unusual ways and lash out unexpectedly, only to lurch back again. All told, it's a varied collection that may appeal more to new fans than old ones, if only because they have left behind some of the consistency and ethereality many expect from 4AD bands. To some fans, and probably the band, this is more than likely a step forward.

Ground attack

The Hawkeyes' backfield looks as strong this season as it ever has under Hayden Fry

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

With former stars like Ronnie Harmon, Owen Gill, Rick Bayless, Tony Stewart and Nick Bell in the backfield, Hayden Fry has produced some great running teams.

However, the '94 Hawkeyes, with a mix of youth and experience, may be Fry's best group of backs in his 16 years at Iowa.

This year's backfield, led by senior co-captain Ryan Terry, sophomore Sedrick Shaw, red-shirt freshman Tavian Banks, true freshman Tim Dwight and full-backs Kent Kahl and Rodney Filer is out to raise the Iowa running game to another level.

Iowa is currently the No. 1 rushing team in the Big Ten Conference.

"We've got a problem," Fry said. "We've got to keep all those guys happy so we're trying to create different formations, different ways to get them in the ball game. That's a great problem to have, we haven't had that kind of problem around here."

While competition for playing time is fierce, all the backs are supportive of one another.

"There's no animosity between us, we all get along," Terry said. "I would like to get the ball 50 times a game, but maybe that's not realistic right now. We've got a lot of quality backs."

Last Saturday, five different running backs scored a total of seven touchdowns and picked up 347 yards in beating Central Michigan 52-21.

The success of the running game is especially important this season as the Hawkeyes try to ease the transition for new quarterbacks Ryan Driscoll and Matt Sherman.

"It makes it a lot easier on me just handing the ball off," Driscoll said. "If that's what our team becomes, that's fine with me."

Sherman agreed that the offensive emphasis will be on the ground game.

"That's our main goal for the season, establish the running game," Sherman said. "That was something we didn't have last year."

Iowa averaged a dismal 108 rushing yards per game last season.

"Our rushing game was pretty below average last year and I think we concentrated on that a lot in the off season," Kahl said. "That was our priority (Saturday), to get that going and I think we did a pretty good job."

Kahl was a major factor against the Chippewas, scoring three touchdowns and converting a fourth down short yardage attempt. But the most impressive performance came from Shaw who gained 135 yards on only 11 carries, including an 80-yard touchdown run that broke the game open.

Shaw said he feels he has something to prove this year.

"A lot of people say you get a sophomore jinx if you have a good freshman year, so my whole point was to just keep working hard and comeback and try to improve," Shaw said.

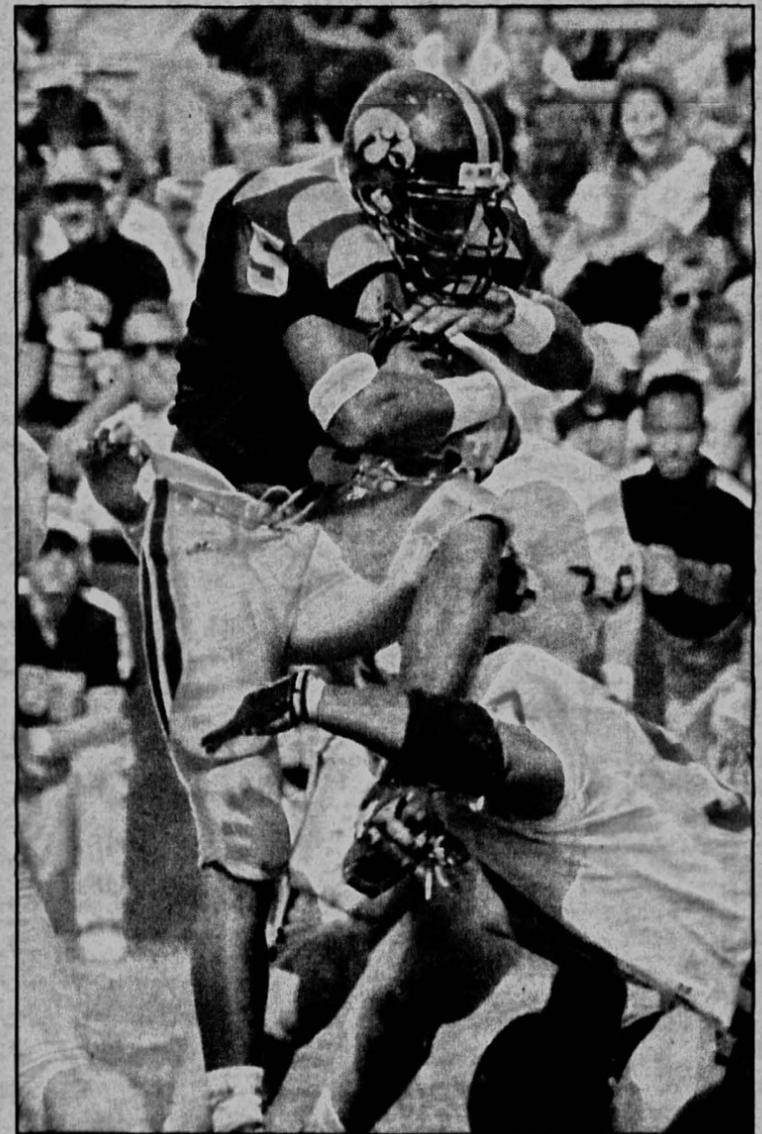

While Terry and Shaw combined for two scores and more than 200 yards against Central Michigan, it was the debuts of Dwight and Banks that got the biggest reaction from the crowd.

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Above: Senior co-captain Ryan Terry runs through Central Michigan defenders last Saturday. Terry had 88 yards and one touchdown on the afternoon.

Right: Sedrick Shaw breaks a tackle against Central Michigan. Shaw led the Hawkeye running attack with 135 yards on 11 carries. Shaw had the game's longest run when he took the ball 80 yards for a touchdown.

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

They did not disappoint as Dwight gained 125 yards on kickoff and punt returns and Banks had 52 yards rushing on six carries. They each scored a touchdown as well.

"We have a lot of special plays that me and Tim (Dwight) go in on so there is going to be a lot more of us going in there," Banks said. "This is just the beginning."

Dwight, from Iowa City, and Banks, of Bettendorf, are two of Fry's most highly touted recruits in recent memory.

"Timmy (Dwight) and Tavian Banks obviously bring excitement and enthusiasm," Fry said. "They're kind of favorites because they're from the state of Iowa."

"You have to believe that they're going to become better and better through the years. It's wonderful that we've got a pretty good ball club that we can get out in front and bring them in where there's not any pressure on them and see how they perform. Hopefully by midseason we won't even have to worry about their classification being freshmen."

Tailgating tradition continues

Jason Wheeler

Special to the Daily Iowan

Things look different for Iowa football this season. The Hawkeyes have new uniforms, Kinnick Stadium isn't as full as it used to be and Iowa is picked to finish towards the bottom of the Big Ten.

Despite all these changes, Hawkeye fans continue to look to one constant of Iowa football — tailgating.

Tailgating is ritual on college campuses throughout the fall. Every Saturday fans pack up the Winnebago, custom van or whatever vehicle is handy and head for a college football game.

Over the years the tradition has evolved beyond a grill in the parking lot and a cooler in the trunk. Fans today are taking tailgating to new levels, but some have taken pregame parties too far and measures have been taken to reduce alcohol consumption on football Saturdays.

Some believe the measures, such as stricter enforcement of the alcohol ban inside Kinnick Stadium, combined with the recent lack of success of the Iowa football program have led to a decline in Iowa's tailgating scene.

Second-year law student Scott Wormsley, who spent his undergraduate years at Iowa, said the authorities have gone too far.

"It is obvious that the police and campus security have both tried very hard to control the Saturday afternoon crowds," Wormsley said. "In doing so they have actually ruined the idea of getting up early and tailgating all day then going to the game and supporting the Hawkeyes. It's hard to cut loose when you know the police are looking for people to throw in jail."

Campus security Lt. Duane Papke said the tightening security is good and has led to people becoming more responsible for their actions.

"I think there is less alcohol being consumed on game day partly because of law enforcement," Papke said. "If a fan goes out and tries to test the law there is a chance that they will get burned by the law."

Papke added fans didn't need alcohol to have a good time and emphasized the importance of designated drivers.

Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department agrees things are getting better and said today's tailgates are much safer.

"A person walking around that is so drunk that they can't handle themselves is an accident waiting to happen," Lihs said. "If the fans have become afraid of being arrested by us then that is just fine with me."

While some believe the toning down of today's tailgaters has detracted from football Saturdays, others don't think it makes much of a difference.

William Johnson has been attending Iowa home games for the past 21 years and said the crowds and the tailgates work in cycles.

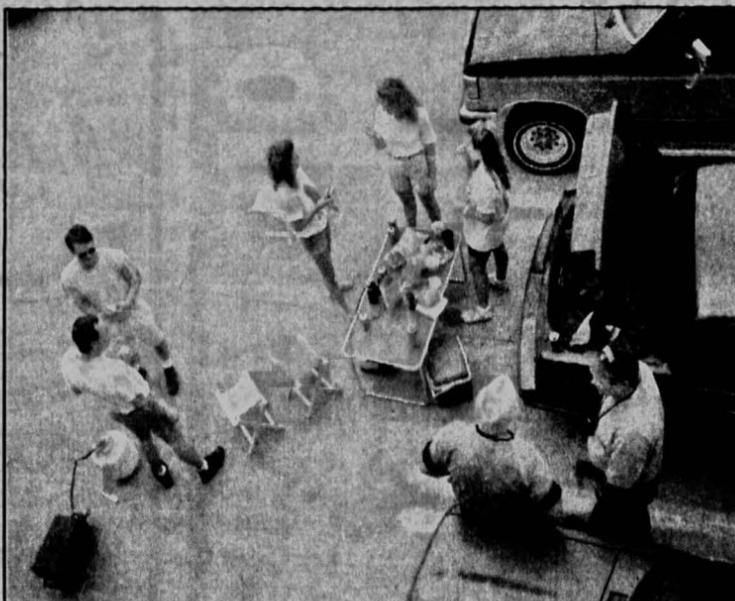

"It seems to me that there comes a time every year or two when people just don't support the Hawks like they used to," Johnson said. "I come no matter what, rain or shine. I don't come to drink or get crazy, just to see the Hawkeyes play. The unruly crowds and tailgates will be back, just give it a year or two."

Iowa junior Ryan McDonald said tailgating and Hawkeye football games are still the same for him.

"I have a lot of fun at the games. It really hasn't changed for me because I haven't had problems with anyone on game day. I just have a good time and enjoy the game."

Hawkeyes looking to extend streak

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

In the battle for state bragging rights on the football field, Iowa State goes to war practically unarmed.

Despite Iowa's dominance, when these two teams clash on the gridiron, records, rankings and streaks go by the board.

"(Iowa State coach Jim Walden has) got a great imagination," stated Hayden Fry, who has orchestrated eleven consecutive Hawkeye wins over Iowa State.

"We know they're going to surprise us some way, but we don't know what it is. That's in Walden's personality. It may come on offense, defense, maybe both. He's always got tricks on the kicking game," Fry said.

"It's always a difficult preparation for Iowa State, and then throw the in-state factor in. I think that's why the game's been very interesting through the years."

While a convincing season opening win over Central Michigan puts the oddsmakers in the Hawkeyes corner, nobody is ruling out an Iowa State upset.

Coming off a disappointing 28-14 setback at the hands of a very talented Northern Iowa team, the Cyclones may be fighting for their lives, as well as their pride.

"No team likes to lose," said Iowa starting quarterback Ryan Driscoll, who earned the No. 1 spot in last week's victory. "They're going to be twice as fired up for us."

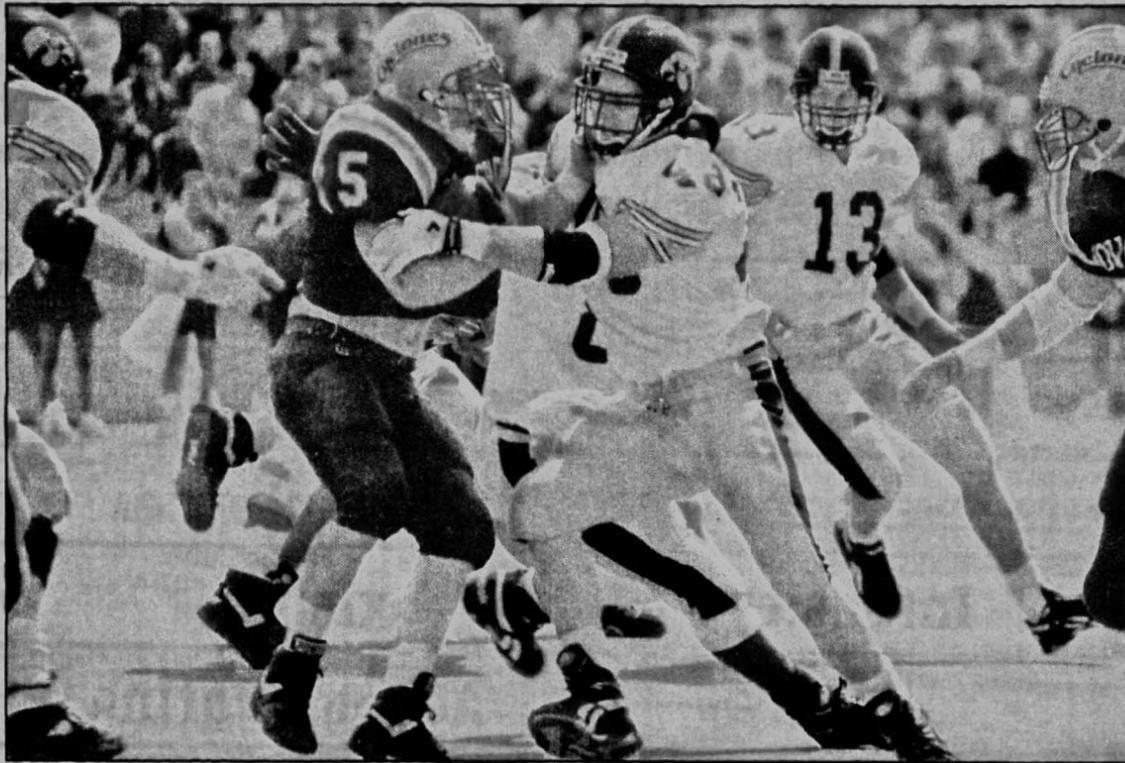

Iowa outside linebacker Jason Henlon is not about to look past the Cyclones.

"They always play Iowa tough. They're going to come to play. I just feel we have to be ready for this game just like we were playing Penn State or Michigan," Henlon said.

Because beating Iowa State has become somewhat of a tradition at Iowa, losing to the Cyclones would be considered a sin by the Hawkeyes.

Co-captain wide receiver Harold Jasper, who came from New York, quickly learned the importance of this particular game.

"When I first got here, it was just another game to me, but the kids from Iowa that played on the team really got you going during the week, and got your heart pumping to play these guys," Jasper said.

Former Hawkeye linebacker Matt Hilliard (48) wraps up Iowa State's Chris Ulrich (5) during last year's Iowa-Iowa State game in Ames. The Hawkeyes held to to win 31-28 and have not lost to the cyclone since 1982 and are looking to continue the streak Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

"It's very important. It puts a lot of pressure, kind of on the seniors, because you don't want to go out being the team that lost to Iowa State. So everybody picks up their game a little more."

Senior Kent Kahl, who transferred from Colorado and is currently in his second year of action with the Hawkeyes, knows a good rivalry when he sees one.

"It means a lot to the people around here," said Kahl. "Obviously it's important to both teams. I'm looking forward to it."

Offensive tackle Ross Verba, who grew up in Des Moines, feels that history may help the Cyclones.

"I think they're mad. They want to come in and snap that streak, so we just have to defend ourselves," Verba said.

Driscoll, who is another Iowa native, is looking forward to his first shot at the Cyclones.

"I remember watching it when I was little," Driscoll said. "It's going to be exciting being a part of it."

In an effort to find the last time the Hawkeyes fell to Iowa State, one must look past the Berlin Wall coming down, past the end of the Soviet Union and past the Gulf War.

Fans must look past Bill Clinton, past George Bush and return to Ronald Reagan's first term in office.

To find the last time Iowa failed at the hands of Iowa State, one must look way back to 1982.

September 18, 1982

Iowa State 19, Iowa 7

Cyclone placekicker Alex Giffords invaded Kinnick with four field goals en route Iowa State's third consecutive victory over the Hawkeyes. Iowa started the game on a good note, when defensive end Tony Wancket intercepted a Cyclone pass and returned it 26 yards for a touchdown. Unfortunately, Iowa's defense would outscore the offense on this day. The Iowa offense managed only 102 yards total offense and no points in the 19-7 defeat.

September 10, 1983

Iowa 51, Iowa State 10

The Iowa Hawkeyes played all 60 members of their traveling squad, while piling up over 500-yards of total offense. Owen Gill rushed for 136 yards on 16 carries, tying an Iowa record by scoring four touchdowns. Chuck Long completed 13 of 17 passes for 204 yards in the rout. At the time, it was the largest margin of victory in the series, which dates back to 1894.

September 8, 1984

Iowa 59, Iowa State 21

For the second year in a row, Iowa routed Iowa State, this time racking up the most points in the history of the series. Chuck Long threw for 217 yards and four touchdowns. Ronnie Harmon scored two touchdowns, one on an 86 yard run and one on a 68-yard pass. The Iowa defense held Iowa State to only 28 yards rushing.

September 28, 1985

Iowa 57, Iowa State 3

Thirty-four second quarter points paced the Hawkeyes to a 41-0 halftime lead and an easy win over the Cyclones. Iowa quarterback Chuck Long threw for 223 yards and three touchdowns. His main receiver was wingback Scott Helverson, who caught eight passes for 154 yards and two touchdowns. Mark Vlasic threw for another 134 yards as the Hawkeyes won their third straight over the Cyclones.

September 13, 1986

Iowa 43, Iowa State 7

Iowa scored the first 43 points of the game and never looked back.

Mark Vlasic threw for 286 yards and two touchdowns, as four Iowa quarterbacks saw action. David Hudson added 120 yards rushing and the Iowa defense did the rest.

September 19, 1987

Iowa 48, Iowa State 9

Kevin Harmon ran for a career-high 182 yards and added three first half touchdowns. Chuck Hartlieb connected on 15 of 18 passes for 175 yards and Dan McGwire added 27 more. Marv Cook caught four passes for 61 yards in front of 54,101 fans in Ames.

September 24, 1988

Iowa 10, Iowa State 3

For the first time in five years, Iowa State made a game of the intrastate rivalry.

The Cyclones went for 238 yards through the air, compared to only 129 for the Hawkeyes, but Tony Stewart almost single handedly made up for Iowa's lack of passing. Stewart ran the ball 32 times for 194 yards and caught three passes for 30 more yards. The largest chunk of Stewart's receiving yards came on the lone touchdown of the game. A 26 yard third quarter touchdown pass from Hartlieb to Stewart proved to be the difference in Iowa's sixth straight victory over the Cyclones.

September 23, 1989
Iowa 31, Iowa State 21

Iowa State jumped out to 21-14 halftime lead before the Iowa defense finally took things over. The Hawkeye steel-curtain allowed just 22 yards total offense in the second half, and sophomore quarterback Matt Rogers, in his first collegiate start, did the rest.

Iowa rolls with video crew

Patrick Regan

Hundreds of video tapes line the office walls signifying thousands of hours of work. Although Iowa football video coordinator Matt Engelbert and his staff receive few accolades for their efforts, they are an important part of every Hawkeye game.

"No position is too small and every part is important," Engelbert said of the Iowa program. "We're just one cog in the wheel and when the team wins there is a trickle down effect."

Defensive ends coach Milan Vooletich did not hold the video department responsible for the Hawkeyes' eighth place finish in the Big Ten last season.

"They do one hell of a job," Vooletich said. "They do whatever they are asked. I don't care what it is or when, it gets done."

Hayden Fry chats with Jim Zabel during a break in the taping of "The Hayden Fry Show." The Iowa football video department tapes the show following each Hawkeye football game called the LAKART system which is also used by seven to 11 NFL teams.

"Through this computer, what we can do for the coaches is give them scouting tapes," Engelbert said. "If we play Michigan on Saturday, we can give them a tape of Michigan first and 10's from the left hash mark. We can see what they do on a certain play or how they react to secondary coverage, down and distance and field position. We can design the computer to get as specific as we would like it to be."

Using the LAKART system, each tape is time coded and then given to coaches who label each play according to the game situation.

Iowa not looking past Cyclones

IOWA STATE OFFENSE

Iowa is coming off a big win, Iowa State is trying to rebound after a disappointing loss and Hayden Fry isn't comfortable with the whole situation.

Fry said he thinks the Cyclones 28-14 loss to Northern Iowa last Saturday is only going to motivate them further and added the score was misleading.

"I'm very concerned because (Iowa State is) a very dangerous football team," he said. "They always play us tough. We'll be fighting for our lives like always."

The Hawkeyes have taken the last 11 meetings between the intrastate rival, but Fry said with every Iowa win the statistics lean a little more toward Ames and the Cyclones snapping the streak.

"I personally wish that Iowa State had won the ball game against UNI," he said. "I don't think you can build any more (frustrations) than exist right now. UNI did a super job and won the game, but that's just going to make Iowa State that much tougher."

Fry was obviously pleased with Iowa's performance in last Saturday's 52-21 drubbing of Central Michigan, but he does not expect the rest of the Hawkeyes' opponents to be like the overmatched Chippewas.

"We know that Central Michigan didn't have the greatest people, but at the same time they were big tough kids," Fry said. "This was a very good opening game for us. We still made a lot of mistakes, but we were hustling and moving so good that we covered a lot of the mistakes. A good football team will do that."

Fry said correcting fundamental mistakes is Iowa's biggest priority going into Saturday's game.

■ MORE QUARTERBACKS

Although Ryan Driscoll was impressive against Central Michigan and will get the start against Iowa State, he will not be the only quarterback to play. Fry will continue to give Matt Sherman playing time to give the red-shirt freshman some experience.

Driscoll completed 13-of-19 passes for 175 yards last week while Sherman completed 2-of-3 for 46 yards in limited action. With both players lacking any more experience, Fry said getting them each some playing time is essential.

"Ryan did a very good job. He was calm, cool and collected," Fry said. "We're going to play Sherman because we have to get the No. 2 guy ready in case Ryan goes down. We can't just go cold turkey."

Driscoll and Sherman need more experience and to establish confidence before Iowa begins Big Ten play. The Hawkeyes face their first conference opponent next Saturday when they visit Penn State and it could be a rude awakening for the young quarterbacks.

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Driscoll started for the Hawkeyes and completed 13-of-19 passes for 175 yards.

■ YOUTH MOVEMENT

Quarterback is not the only area where the Hawkeyes are young.

Iowa has only nine seniors starting on offense and defense combined. Although Fry said the Hawkeyes' young reserves are not quite ready to step in, he expects Iowa to manage just fine as the season continues.

"We still don't have depth at certain positions on offense and particularly on defense. But I think we're going to be able to swing enough people that we'll get by until the young guys catch on," he said. "The young guys now are going to be a factor this year's season the way they're coming on."

■ HEALTHY AT LAST

Fry was all smiles after the Central Michigan win for a reason other than the final score. He was happy because for the first time in a long time, the Hawkeyes made it through a game without a significant injury and will have their starting lineup intact for Saturday's game.

"I don't think we're going to lose a single player from the first game because of injuries, which indicates their conditioning and that's very encouraging," Fry said. "We've got some bumps and bruises and we're going to hold out a few guys for a few days, but they'll be OK by game time."

Walden looking for first win over Iowa

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa State Cyclones take on the Iowa Hawkeyes, the number 12 will be very apparent.

For Iowa coach Hayden Fry, the number 12 will represent the twelfth man, a wild and crazy Hawkeye crowd. But to Jim Walden and his Iowa State Cyclones, the number 12 could represent a dozen years of frustration.

When Iowa State invades Kinnick Stadium Saturday it will be the eighth time Walden has faced the Hawkeyes. He is currently 0-7 against Iowa, but the Cyclone losing streak began before he took over as head coach in 1987.

For the past eleven years, the Iowa Hawkeyes have had their way with the Cyclones, winning every game, by an average of nearly 25 points per contest.

Jim Walden knows the deck is stacked against him again this

Iowa State Sports Information

"They look like they were having fun out there and they're gong to be a tough team for us," stated Walden after seeing Iowa against Central Michigan. "I think they're probably a 35-point favorite, and they should be."

The Cyclones bring an 0-1 record into Saturday's game with the Hawkeyes after losing its season opener to Northern Iowa in front of 40,295 fans at Cyclone Stadium in Ames.

Northern Iowa took it to the Iowa State defense through the air and on the ground. Northern Iowa halfback Jeff Stovall carried the ball 23 times for 99 yards and scored two touchdowns for the Panthers. Quarterback Brett O'Donnell connected on 14 of 18 passes for 185 yards and two more touchdowns in the win.

The Panthers took a 14-0 lead into the lockerroom at halftime after O'Donnell connected with Jake Kothe for a 21-yard scoring pass with 27 seconds left in the second quarter.

Quarterback Todd Doxon scored from four yards out with 3:30 remaining in the game for Iowa State's only touchdown of the day. Cyclone place-kicker Ty Stewart made field goals from distances of 43 and 40-yards to round out the Cyclone scoring. Fullback Jim Knott led the Iowa State running attack with 66 yards on 15 carries.

Stewart is the brightest point on the Cyclones' team this year. The first-team all-Big Eight place-kicker was ranked among the nation's top four by The Sporting News, and is 15 of 19 for his career between 40-49 yards. He was 11-for-15 overall last year, including two 58-yard boots.

Offensively, the Cyclones are looking to have a big year. Jim Walden calls this year's offensive backs the best he's ever had at Iowa State. The Cyclones were 11th in the nation in rushing last year, and return the majority of their key backfield members to this years team.

Receiving may be a weakness for Iowa State, but with its wishbone attack, receivers are merely decoys.

When Jim Walden put in the wishbone offense two years ago, he hoped to have a group of guys that would know what they were doing within three years. This is the third year, and so far Walden is happy with who he has.

On the other side of the ball is where Iowa State runs into problems. Last season, they finished last in the Big Eight in pass-efficiency defense, intercepting a league low six passes.

But their real weakness was against the rush. Iowa State ranked in the bottom ten Division-I teams in the nation in rushing yards allowed. Overall, Iowa State's defense finished seventh in the Big Eight.

The good news is they return nine defensive starters from last year, including three senior linebackers in Marc Lillibridge, Jeff Cole, and Matt Nitchie. If experience is the key, the Cyclones are on the right track.

The Cyclones haven't won a Big Eight title since 1912, and this won't be the year they turn that around. But they do hope to avoid that nasty number 12 with a win over the Hawkeyes Saturday.

Pregame's pick...

Iowa State will fall short once again

D/ME

OK, so we were a little bit off last week. But 24-14 sounded so right at the time. We underestimated Iowa's offense and overestimated Central Michigan's defense. We won't make the same mistake twice.

Iowa State is hungry to beat the Hawkeyes and snap its 11-year losing streak. Cyclone head coach Jim Walden is especially anxious to get his first win against the Hawkeyes after seven consecutive losses. A win for Walden Saturday would also be a very important step in Walden's campaign to keep his job.

Both teams always get up for this game. Last season, Iowa was up 28-7 and looked to be in control at the half, but Iowa State didn't give up. The Cyclones put up 21 points in the second half but it wasn't quite enough as Todd Romano's 29-yard field goal in the third quarter won it for the Hawkeyes.

This year's game could be very similar. Iowa won't be able to afford to blow another lead this year with a young and inexperienced defense.

The Cyclones returned nine starters from last season's defense. That's a lot of experience, but keep in mind Iowa State's defense held its opponents under 20 points only twice in the Cyclones' 3-8 campaign last year.

The Hawkeyes are coming off a big win. Fifty-two points to open the season is a good start and the momentum should carry over against Iowa State.

Saturday will be a good test for Ryan Driscoll in his second game at quarterback. The Cyclone defense gave up 370 total yards, including 194 yards and two touchdowns in the air in its loss to Northern Iowa last week in Ames.

The Hawkeyes are looking to get Driscoll and backup quarterback Matt Sherman throwing the ball into the end zone. Seven touchdowns against any team is an impressive stat, but all of Iowa's touchdowns came on the ground last week. If Iowa opens up a big lead early, look for the offense to open up and put the ball in the air.

Defensively, Iowa will need to stay consistent. The Hawkeye defense for the most part played well last week and wants to keep the momentum going. Iowa's defense is small this season but Hayden Fry says it's fast. It's going to have to be to stop the Cyclone's option.

As much as Hawkeye fans would love to see Iowa rout Iowa State, it's not going to happen. Pride can play a large roll in a football game and will be a factor Saturday. Iowa State does not want the distinction of having the worst football team of Iowa's three state schools and will play determined to knock off the Hawkeyes. It will make the game interesting, but it won't change the end result.

The Hawkeyes know they must win their non-conference games if they are to have a successful season. The Cyclones are dangerous and are a better team than most people give them credit for being, but so is Iowa and the Hawkeyes will prove it Saturday.

Hawkeye fans will have to settle for a close win rather than a blowout. The Cyclones can and will put points on the board Saturday, but not enough. Look for the home team to come out on top in an offensive game.

This week in the Big Ten

Michigan tops non-conference matchups

Michigan at Notre Dame

The Wolverines lead the all-time series 14-10-1 in this matchup of Top 5 teams.

Michigan will be without injured tailback and Heisman Trophy candidate Tyrone Wheatley. He wasn't missed in last week's 34-26 win over Boston College.

The Irish stunned Michigan 27-23 in last season's game in Ann Arbor. Highly touted quarterback Ron Powlus, fresh off his 300-yard passing game against Northwestern, will lead the Notre Dame attack.

Michigan is the second of four straight Big Ten Conference opponents for Notre Dame this fall.

USC at Penn State

The Nittany Lions will try to make it two straight over USC in one of the most intriguing games of the week.

Penn State held on for a 21-20 win last season in Happy Valley when a late two-point conversion try by the Trojans was no good.

Penn State is rolling following last week's win at Minnesota. The Nittany Lions have a multitude of offensive weapons led by Ki-Jana Carter, who leads the Big Ten in rushing with 220 yards after his first outing.

USC is coming off a win over Washington and is considered a favorite in the Pac-10 race. This could be a preview of the '95 Rose Bowl.

Ohio State at Washington

The Buckeyes are back in action after taking two weeks off. Ohio State is 1-0 following its victory over Fresno State in the Pigskin Classic.

The Huskies will provide a good test for the defending Big Ten co-champions. The Buckeyes return only four starters on offense and five on defense from last year's 10-1-1 squad.

Washington will be out for revenge after last year's 21-12 loss at Columbus.

Missouri at Illinois

Last season's 31-3 drubbing at the hands of Missouri will have the Illini looking for a little pay back.

Illinois lost the first of its seven home games 10-9 to Washington State on Sept. 1. As a result, Illinois coach Lou Tepper has elected to bench quarterback Johnny Johnson in favor of sophomore Scott Weaver. Johnson was 20-for-38 for 220 yards in the losing effort.

Missouri was beaten by Tulsa last weekend in Coach Larry Smith's first game as a Tiger.

Look for the Fighting Illini to rebound behind Big Ten defensive player of the week Simeon Rice.

Eastern Michigan at Wisconsin

The defending Rose Bowl champion Badgers should walk through this game with no problems, even if they do look ahead to next week's game at Colorado.

Coach Barry Alvarez will have to have his troops ready for the '94 run for the Roses because everyone will be gunning for them.

Quarterback Darrell Bevell, running back Brent Moss and Wisconsin's seven other returning offensive starters will make the Badger's one of the country's toughest teams to defend this fall.

The defense will be stingy as well with six starters back.

Miami (OH) at Indiana

Indiana may be looking ahead to its matchup with Kentucky Sept. 17, but it shouldn't matter.

Indiana gets its second straight cupcake at home in Miami of Ohio.

The Hoosiers opened the season with a blowout of Cincinnati a week ago. Coach Bill Mallory is trying to give his players experience after graduating 25 lettermen from last season's 8-4 team.

Michigan State at Kansas

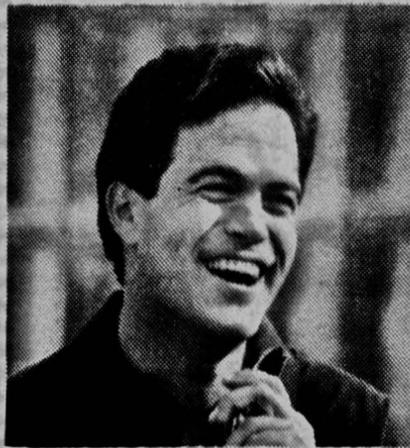

The Spartans open their season with a difficult Big Eight opponent. Michigan State won last year's game 31-14 in East Lansing.

The Spartans return seven starters on both sides of the ball from last season's 6-6 squad. Michigan State ended the '93 campaign with three straight defeats, including an 18-7 loss to Louisville in the Liberty Bowl.

The Spartans have won all five previous meetings with the Jayhawks.

Rogers opened things up for 276 yards and three touchdowns, while allowing only one interception. Travis Watkins caught seven of those passes for a career-high 125 yards. Tony Stewart again had a big day against ISU, gaining 99 yards on 18 carries. Defensively, Jim Johnson had 14 tackles and forced a fumble that was recovered in the end zone by freshman Larry Blue for a touchdown.

September 22, 1990
Iowa 45, Iowa State 35

70,389 fans, the most ever to see a football game in the state of Iowa packed into Kinnick Stadium for a UI-ISU shootout.

Iowa running backs Nick Bell and Tony Stewart were each given the ball 17 times, and each responded with over 100 yards rushing. Bell ran for 115 yards and Stewart added 101, with each of them scoring a touchdown.

The Hawkeyes took a three-point lead into halftime, before opening things up in the third quarter. Matt Rogers, Tony Stewart, and Lew Montgomery scored the first 21 points of the second half, giving Iowa a 38-14 lead.

ISU quarterback Bob Utter got his team within ten points in the fourth quarter, but Lew Montgomery's second touchdown of the day with 7:53 remaining put the game out of reach.

The two teams combined for 434 yards on the ground and 336 yards in the air. Eddie Polly and Moses Santos each recorded 14 tackles for the Hawkeyes.

September 14, 1991
Iowa 29, Iowa State 10

Hayden Fry moved his career record to 10-3 against Iowa State, as his number 14 ranked Iowa Hawkeyes defeated ISU in a wet and windy Cyclone Stadium.

Matt Rogers connected with Danan Hughes three minutes into the game for a 46-yard touchdown pass, and the Hawkeyes never looked back. Another touchdown, two field goals and a safety gave Iowa a 22-3 lead.

Iowa State managed just 163 yards in total offense against Iowa, who would move up to ninth in the polls after the victory.

Mike Saunders rushed for 83 yards on 17 carries and Matt Whitaker caught two passes for 55 yards and a touchdown, as Iowa defeated Iowa State for the ninth consecutive year.

September 12, 1992
Iowa 21, Iowa State 7

Iowa statistically dominated the Cyclones more than the score indicated in their first win in three tries during the 1992 season.

Iowa outran the Cyclones 229-173 and outpassed them 218-96, while holding possession of the ball eight minutes longer than ISU. Seven Iowa penalties for 72 yards kept Iowa State in the ballgame.

Chuck Hartlieb threw for 218 yards, including eight passes to Danan Hughes for 133 yards. Marvin Lampkin and Ryan Terry added 83 and 80 yards respectively, on their way to victory in front of 70,397 fans at Kinnick Stadium.

September 11, 1993
Iowa 31, Iowa State 28

What was arguably the most exciting game during the Hawkeyes winning streak almost became the greatest comeback.

With winds measuring more than 20 miles per hour, Iowa turned to its running game to defeat Iowa State for the 11th straight time. Ryan Terry rushed for 107 yards on 21 carries and Sedrick Shaw ran for 82 more on 17 attempts, as Iowa built a 31-7 lead over the Cyclones.

Three consecutive second half touchdowns put the Cyclones right back in the game with under two minutes remaining. ISU recovered an onside kick near mid-field with 1:25 remaining, trailing by only three points. But on the first play from scrimmage, Maurea Crain forced a fumble by ISU quarterback Bob Utter, which Hawkeye linebacker Mike Daily covered to assure the victory.

Engelbert could, for example, make a tape of long passes by Ohio State and the coaches can search for tendencies in certain situations on that tape.

Engelbert said Iowa is the only college football team in the nation to use the LAKART system, but other teams' systems do essentially the same thing.

"I know everyone is always partial to their own (system)," Engelbert said. "I like the way ours works whereas if you ask somebody who has one of the other systems, they will say that theirs is the greatest."

The LAKART system was fully implemented in 1990, replacing movie reel type film with video tapes which enabled the video department to speed up the editing process.

"Since we went to video everything has been a lot quicker for the coaches," Engelbert said. "In the old days when it was film, we would have to take it up to Cedar Rapids and then get it developed. It wouldn't get back here until the next day.

"Now we can just video tape practice and a half an hour to 45 minutes after practice it will be in their box and they're ready to watch it."

The video department records every game with both an end zone and a midfield angle. For organizational purposes, a different tape is used for offense, defense and kicking at both angles. These tapes are then traded to future opponents so the teams can scout each other.

The video team spent the summer preparing for Central Michigan, Iowa State, Penn State and Oregon, the first four games on the 1994 schedule.

"During the Spring we exchange film with each of those schools," Engelbert said. "They call us or we call them and we just get it organized to whichever games they want of ours and to whichever games we want of theirs."

Engelbert said the video staff consists of three full-time employees, two scholarship students, Ron McKinley and Scott Ravenscroft, and secretary Julie Dotson, who work in close conjunction with the coaches so they can both do their jobs efficiently.

"We have to help our coaches out in any way possible," Engelbert said. "Basically, they all want the same thing day after day. I have a set routine when I come in after practice or after a game and it's the most efficient way I know of to get everything copied and out to (the coaches) as fast as possible.

"I always like to get everything cleared through them just so I don't do anything that would violate NCAA regulations or I don't do anything to violate the code of ethics of the American Football Coaches Association," he said. "I just want to play pretty conservative and not ruffle any feathers."

BIG TEN

Pacific at Minnesota

The Golden Gophers were embarrassed in last Saturday's 56-3 whipping by Penn State.

Look for Minnesota to rebound with a win over Pacific, although they lost the only previous meeting between the two schools in 1986.

Stanford at Northwestern

The Wildcats lost their opener to Notre Dame last Saturday in Soldier Field.

The schedule doesn't get any easier this week as Bill Walsh and the Stanford Cardinal invade Evanston.

Northwestern is searching for a quarterback to guide its 17 returning starters. Whoever guides the offense will be well protected. Northwestern boasts one of the biggest offensive lines in the Big Ten.

Toledo at Purdue

The Boilermakers return 15 starters from last year's team that went winless in Big Ten play.

Purdue is favored against Toledo despite the fact that they lost the only prior meeting between the teams in 1992.

The pressure is on Boilermaker coach Jim Colletto to produce this year. His record in three seasons at Purdue is a dismal 9-24.
