Flag to fly at half-staff for UI professor

The flag over the Old Capitol will be flying at half-staff today in memory of Dr. David Paul, clinical associate professor at the UI College of Medicine, who died Sunday after a long illness.

Paul had also served as the chief of rehabilitation at the Iowa City Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Paul was a pioneer in the development of diagnostic electromyography, and his chief research interest was in the field of pain mechanisms.

William Jahnke, who was the chief physical therapist at the VA hospital, said Paul worked well with his patients.

"I enjoyed working with him and for him," Jahnke said. "It was very beneficial to me as well as the patients. I learned a lot from him."

Services will be today at 2 p.m. at Agudas Achim Synagogue, 602 E. Washington St. A private burial will be held in Agudas Achim Cemetery.

'Hair' rehearsal disrupted by threat of fire

The cast of the musical "Hair" was forced to practice outside the UI Theatre Building around 9:15 p.m. Tuesday night when the building was evacuated due to a "smoky" odor in the lobby, witnesses said.

Three fire department units responded, said Iowa City battalion chief Terry Fiala, but the cause of the smell couldn't be located. At 10:15 p.m., all units but one had left because the odor wasn't getting stronger.

UI student Meredith Ratzel, who described the smell as something burning slowly, was rehearsing for "Hair" when the alarm sounded.

"Our stage manager said it wasn't a joke," Ratzel said. "We came out here and were singing and dancing on the front lawn."

Electricians visited the scene to try to determine the source of the problem.

Violence erupts in Haiti as U.S. soldiers stand by

Troops instructed to not intervene

Andrew Selsky
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Jubilant supporters of Haiti's exiled president cheered U.S.

"I feel terrible to see people beaten and not be able to do anything."

Douglas Walton, of the U.S. Army's 10th Mountain Division troops Tuesday, but police clubbed the demonstrators and fired tear gas as American soldiers stood by, under orders not to get involved.

Some demonstrators became angry at the Americans for failing to protect a man who according to witnesses was clubbed to death by a Haitian policeman.

After the disturbances, senior U.S. military officers in Haiti roared up to Haiti's army headquarters for a lengthy "talk to," as one American officer put it. At sunset, U.S. military police emerged from their bases at the airport and seaport to begin motor patrols along the perimeters.

The confrontations in the capital, which came as U.S. Marines swarmed ashore at Cap-Haitien on the northern coast, underlined the tensions in Haiti and the danger of factional violence that could drag in the Americans.

U.S. troops are walking a precarious path in trying to build democracy in the impoverished Caribbean nation. Their very presence could embolden mobs into violence against Haiti's military regime, but staying aloof runs the risk of being viewed by the masses as allies of Haitian soldiers and police.

Some American soldiers brided at the orders that prevented them from intervening when police attacked supporters of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected president, who was ousted in a 1991 coup.

"I feel terrible," said Specialist

Within 100 feet of U.S. soldiers, members of the Haitian military subdue a man outside the airport Tuesday. It is unclear why they had to subdue the man.

Douglas Walton of Cincinnati, a soldier in the U.S. Army's 10th Mountain Division, at the gates of the capital's port. "To see people beaten and not be able to do anything."

For now, U.S. officials said, the troops would not interfere in Haiti's domestic affairs. In Washington, Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, warned the risk of violence was high and said, "We can be taking casualties at any moment."

While street clashes escalated in Port-au-Prince, most parts of the capital were quiet. Many people were still holed up with relatives out of town waiting for the dust to settle. The normally bustling Iron Signs reading "Troops Out Now" and "Stop the Slaughter," were waved among a crowd of around 50 protesters speaking out against U.S. involvement in Haiti Tuesday afternoon on the Pentacrest.

The rally, sponsored by the Iowa International Socialist Organization, included four speakers and lasted about a half-hour.

"We're rallying to show our opposition to the U.S.'s invasion of Haiti," said UI freshman and organization member Charlotte Bright.

The rally's first speaker, UI senior and IISO member Susan Wolfe, compared the U.S. involvement in Haiti with its 1992 invasion of Somalia.

"Peacekeeping is not what the military is about," Wolfe said. "In Somalia, 10,000 people were killed, and two-thirds were women and children."

The United States should leave Haiti altogether and let the Haitians decide their own fate, Wolfe said.

Another speaker, UI Teaching Assistant Donna Flayhan, said the media told the public there was no invasion of Haiti, but the U.S. presence in the country is still an invasion.

"What we have seen going on in Haiti is old-fashioned colonialism," Flayhan said. "The U.S. has joined with the Haitian military to squash internal dissent. They're going to be killing people who are fighting for their basic rights."

Media photographs depicting Haitians supporting the U.S. troops are wrong because most of the Haitians are opposed to intervention, Flayhan said.

IISO member Tom Lewis, UI associate professor of comparative literature and Spanish and Portuguese, also stressed that U.S. involvement in Haiti is wrong, but touched upon the exiled Haitian President Aristide in his speech.

"President Aristide is not the same man who said five years ago, 'Capitalism is no good,'" Lewis said. "The Aristide coming back has agreed to step down. He can't serve as a leader."

The rally failed to see the U.S. mission in Haiti, crowd member Elizabeth Meyer said.

"These people don't understand that we don't want aggression," said the UI junior. "If we don't put Aristide back in power, then we suffer by getting more refugees. More people will die if Haitians are turned back than if we invade."

AMERICANS BECOMING MORE CYNICAL

Lack of sympathy revealed in new poll

A survey released Tuesday shows Americans have become less tolerant of other races and feel less secure about their financial standing.

Jill Lawrence
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans are more cynical and less compassionate than they were seven years ago, and many feel strapped for money despite the improving economy, according to a poll released Tuesday.

A mostly discouraging snapshot of the national mood emerged from the survey of 4,809 people by the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press.

"It's not a pretty picture. The trends have a negative cast," said poll director Andrew Kohut. "Generally when things are better, people are more altruistic. But that doesn't seem to be the case here."

Attitudes toward minorities, immigrants and the poor all have hardened somewhat over the seven years of the poll, particularly when it comes to spending money on them and expanding opportunities for them.

In 1987, 71 percent said the government should take care of people who can't take care of themselves, but that fell to 57 percent this year. Only 41 percent said the government should help the needy even if it means going deeper in debt — the first time that assertion failed to win majority support.

Also this year for the first time a majority of whites (51 percent) agreed with the statement that equal rights for racial minorities have been pushed too far, up from 42 percent two years earlier. And 82 percent said people coming here to live should be restricted and controlled more than they are now, up six points from 1992.

"It's an unusual set of trends for a time in which the economy's been expanding and unemployment's been going down," Kohut said. He said one reason may be that the new wave of jobs offers relatively low wages, benefits and security.

More than 40 percent in the survey said they "often don't have enough money to make ends meet" — a huge chunk considering the relatively healthy economy, Kohut said. Six in 10 said they don't have enough money to lead the kinds of lives they want to, and only half of those expect they ever will.

Charlie Slaymaker, of Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co., digs through the pavement on First Avenue near Highway 6 in Coralville Tuesday to allow repairs to a gas line which was damaged by construction.

Businesses close due to gas-line break

Kathryn Phillips
Daily Iowan

City Center Plaza and four other businesses were temporarily shut down and traffic was blocked off in Coralville Tuesday when a natural gas line was damaged at the intersection of Highway 6 and First Avenue.

Although no damage was done and no explosions occurred, police evacuated the plaza stores, as well as China Garden, Taco Bell, Pizza Hut and the Coralville 76 service station. Police feared the gas would ignite if it came into contact with people or cars.

At about 10 a.m., the gas escaped through a hole drilled in the pavement by water crew workers. The workers accidentally hit a gas line, causing the line to break.

Steve Lepic, an employee of the gas company, said the crew misjudged the depth of the gas line.

"Water workers thought they were below the line but hit it instead of going underneath," he said.

This type of accident is rare, since state law requires workers to call the Iowa Underground Plant Location Service before they dig, said Jeff Duffy, distribution superintendent of the Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. The service tells workers the location of previously buried utilities.

Workers did call the service, but they made a mistake while drilling. Duffy said a gas explosion would have been unlikely, since the gas was diluted as it spread into the air.

If the gas had remained underground, there would have been a possibility of concentrated gas leakage into surrounding buildings, Duffy said.

"The evacuation was just a precaution," he said.

Three connecting lines were sealed, and 23 gas meters were immediately shut off so repairs could begin. Duffy expected the gas

Piercing expert turns puncturing into profits

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

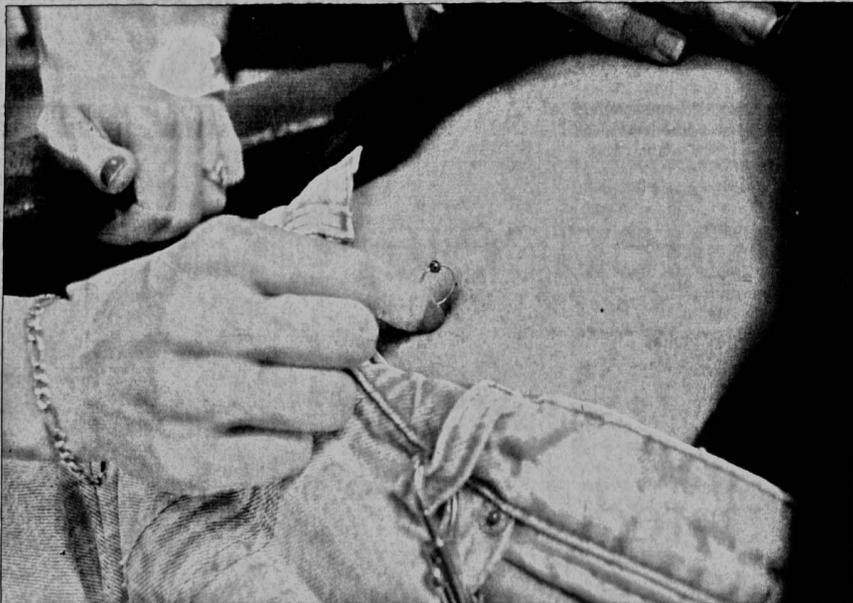

It doesn't matter what body part it may be, Iowa City professional piercer Shannon Youngs will put a hole in it.

"I pierce whatever they ask me to pierce," Youngs said.

Youngs, 25, is a wife, mother and owner of King Stingray's progressive design studio, 128 1/2 E. Washington St.

"I was very careful about learning the technique before I started piercing people. Now I can pierce with my eyes closed."

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

She begins her working days at 8 a.m., running errands for the studio. After opening her business at 11 a.m., Youngs works at the studio until 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Along with piercing, she styles hair and nails.

Youngs has been in the piercing business for more than five years. Currently, Youngs pierces at least six customers a week.

Although now she is a confident piercer, she said learning to pierce did not happen overnight.

"I was really bad at first," Youngs said. "I practiced on little potatoes every day for a month. I had to learn to line up the dots and use the right fingers. I was very careful about learning the technique before I started piercing people. Now I can pierce with my eyes closed."

On average, most of Youngs' customers are between the ages of 18 and 30. She said she pierces a variety of people.

"Piercing is popular," she said. "It's not just punk people who get pierced. I get all different types of customers. I pierce a lot of people Shannon Youngs, professional piercer at King Stingray's, 128 1/2 E. Washington St., sizes up a naval ring on a customer before piercing. Youngs became interested in body piercing after reading "Modern Primitives," a book about piercing and tattooing. Youngs' skill isn't used only on her customers, though; she has also done several piercings on herself.

technique. She said a needle also allows for a wider assortment of earrings, such as hoops, to be used as studs.

Youngs said her interest in piercing began after she read "Modern Primitives," a book about piercing and tattooing. Then her friends started asking her if she was interested in piercing them. As her fascination in piercing grew, Youngs said she decided to become a professional piercer.

She began with noses and learned the art of nipple piercing in Chicago.

Her profession has allowed her to meet a variety of people. However, Youngs said she will never forget the first time she pierced a nipple.

"I was piercing this guy who was a Buddhist," she said. "He was so scared. I asked him to relax, so he started chanting. He chanted louder and louder as I was piercing him."

"After I was finished, he jumped straight up, hugged me and told me how much he loved me. I've never had another customer like him."

Youngs not only pierces others, she has pierced her own nose and the skin around her clitoris. She has also had her left nipple pierced.

"They were novel for a while, but I didn't keep any of them."

Shatner faces litigation for theatre no-show

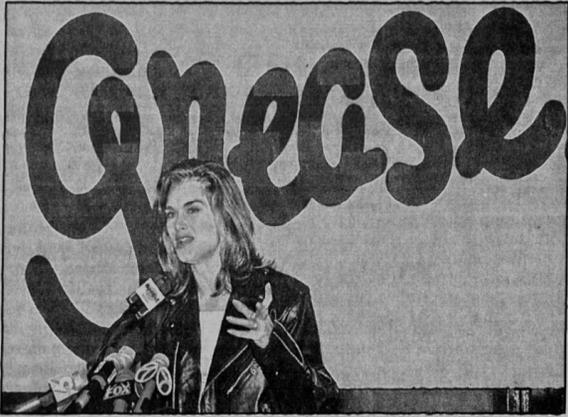

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A playhouse owner is suing William Shatner after the "Star Trek" actor failed to materialize for the premiere of a play based on one of his books.

Shatner had agreed to star in a two-week run of "Harry and Arthur," a play about escape artist Harry Houdini and Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, said Ralph Miller, owner of the Bucks County Playhouse.

Shatner's agent said the star "had all good intentions" of performing but never had an agreement — oral or written.

"It was always, 'If, if, if, if,'" Carmen LaVia said.

Miller is seeking $150,000. He said he has advertised and canceled the premiere twice.

Shields prepares to stretch for Broadway role

NEW YORK (AP) — Brooke Shields will be the newest transfer student at Rydell High School, joining the Broadway cast of "Grease" as Rizzo, the musical's loud-mouthed, gum-snapping bad girl.

Shields is replacing Rosie O'Donnell, who is leaving the show to resume her movie career, which includes "The Flintstones" and "A League of Their Own." Shields joins the cast Nov. 22.

The 29-year-old actress, dressed in a black leather jacket, black jeans and black boots, said Tuesday that the character of Rizzo will be a stretch. "I was in the cheerleader mode in high school," she admitted. And she revealed she once was sent home for chewing gum and wearing blue jeans.

Tom and Roseanne write themselves out of newspaper ventures

OTTUMWA, Iowa (AP) — Tom Arnold and Roseanne may still make headlines, but they're getting out of the newspaper business.

The soon to be divorced couple have sold their five weekly newspapers for an undisclosed price to a company owned by Arnold's father and stepmother.

"Tom and Roseanne sell!" belated one of the papers, The Batavia & Eldon Beacon-Forum. The other newspapers are The Fremont Gazette, The New Sharon Star, The Eddyville Tribune and The Hedrick Journal.

The bickering Arnolds bought the newspapers more than a year ago.

Flag flown at half-staff in remembrance of UI professor

The flag at the Old Capitol was flown at half-staff Tuesday for Carl J. Couch, a UI sociology professor who died Sept. 15 of complications from a liver biopsy. Couch was 69.

Couch, who taught at the UI for 25 years, was an impressive teacher and researcher, said James Price, chairman of the UI anthropology department.

"Carl had an enormous impact on the students here, both those with whom he worked personally and those he did not," Price said. "He was very highly regarded for his teaching and research."

Couch was especially noted for his research on symbolic interaction, the study of how people use language and other symbols to communicate and interact. He was a past president of the Society for the Study of Symbolic Interaction and of the Midwest Sociological Society.

Couch received his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the UI.

Couch, who had been ill for the last two years, retired from the UI at the beginning of August. He is survived by his wife, four children, three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Health secretary appoints UI professor to committee

Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala has named a UI neurologist to a national advisory panel on neurological disorders and stroke.

Dr. Antonio Damasio, professor and head of neurology at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, was named to the National Advisory Neurological Disorders and Stroke Council, the major advisory panel of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

The council meets three times each year to review applications from scientists seeking financial support for biomedical research and research training on disorders of the brain and nervous system. The council includes physicians, scientists and representatives of the public.

RECRUITMENT, CHILD CARE TOP AGENDA

Faculty Senate outlines priorities

Amy Biederman
The Daily Iowan

An active UI Faculty Senate is essential to solving issues like recruitment and child care instead of "rubber stamping" policies into existence, the Faculty Senate president said at Tuesday's meeting.

Richard Hurtig, Senate president and associate professor of speech pathology and audiology, said recruiting graduate students and faculty is a top priority of the Senate this year.

Child care is another issue the Senate will particularly focus on this year. Hurtig said it is important for the faculty not to invest in so many projects that they cannibalize themselves. The reallocation of money must not end up hindering the faculty's ability to continue quality education, he said.

The way to find solutions to these goals is to work collectively, face to face with regents and constituents, Hurtig said. The state needs to see that teaching efforts can only go so far with limited resources.

Several reports were given at the meeting, detailing new projects and the status of continuing work.

The Affirmative Action Office reported that cases of sexual harassment may have gone up due to the impact of increased educational programs and reporting, said Susan Mask, director of the office.

During 1993-94, the UI held 106 sessions on sexual harassment that were attended by 2,005 people, Mask said. In that academic year, 34 discrimination complaints were filed to the office. The most common were based on race, and next most common was of sexual harassment, with nine complaints.

While numbers are going up, the office feels the departments are better equipped to resolve these complaints either informally or formally, Mask said.

The UI ombudsman reported on issues of concern for this year. Encouraging departments to disseminate authorship policies is an important factor in avoiding problems arising after a work is finished among several authors, ombudsman Nancy Hauserman said. It's primarily an issue among graduate students.

Another goal is to encourage faculty to avoid hiring people under their power for personal use, such as students for baby-sitting.

A program to improve the number of women in science and engineering was established from the general fund, said David Skorton, UI vice president for research.

The program focuses on reaching girls at an early age, for example by visiting junior highs, Skorton said.

Chairman of the budget planning committee, Warren Piette, said instructional equipment will be sought in a joint effort by all three state schools, which are requesting $6 million. If passed, UI will receive $2 million.

Piette said the UI tagged four important areas where they want to see increased tuition revenue go, in response to an Iowa state Board of Regents request: computing and inter-building communications, library operation, upgrading instructional equipment for classrooms and the modernization of classrooms and instructional laboratories.

U.N. CONFERENCE VOTE WINS NATIVES' SUPPORT

Brazil's split with Vatican backed

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

Local Brazilians approve of their country's break with the Vatican at the U.N. population conference two weeks ago but say the issue of population control is so complex that this step is only part of the solution.

The purpose of the conference, held in Cairo, Egypt, was to develop a plan of action for U.N. members regarding population control. Brazil abstained from voting with the Vatican for the first time, severing with a past of adherence to Catholic dogmas.

While Brazil voted for the guideline draft, the Vatican disagreed with it on birth control, abortion and sex education, said conference delegate Jael Silliman, also a UI assistant director for the Center for International and Comparative Studies.

Voting against the Vatican is a big political step, but Brazilians generally don't follow the Catholic Church on birth control issues, said Glauca Silva, a UI graduate student in Spanish and Portuguese and a native of Brazil.

"People do use birth control and don't pay much attention to what the church says about it. If they did pay attention, it would really get out of hand," Silva said. "It's bad enough as it is with a lot of poor people listening to it, and they just keep on having children because God wants them to."

Silva, who is Catholic, said that while she never heard any mention of birth control in her church, she is certain the priest knew about the widespread use of contraceptives.

"Brazil has the largest Catholic population in the whole world, so it's hard for the country to go against what the church wants," Silva said. "I'm really glad they made that decision."

Marcia Lobo, an Iowa City resident originally from Brazil, said the importance of Catholic views is decreasing and that many people turn away from the religion.

"Middle class in Brazil has contraceptives, but the poor people can't buy birth control anyway," Lobo said. "It's not just a question of religion, it's also that the government is not interested in having birth control."

The Brazilian government worries too much about the economy, forgetting a nation of increasingly poor and desperate individuals who have children because they have no other choice, Lobo said.

"If you're poor, you're gonna buy rice and beans for all of your money," she said. "The government should do something to help the kids who are dying in the streets — to give birth-control pills. I don't even know why they voted that way; it seems they don't care."

Claudio Cordoso, a UI graduate student in music from Brazil, said the church is following a philosophy that can't be applied to the present time. He said education and empowerment of the poor people in Brazil is necessary.

"It's not only in Brazil, but in the whole world that there is a problem," he said.

FALL SESSION STARTS IN OCTOBER

Shared youth, elderly activity promoted by education program

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

The Youth and Elderly in Service (YES) project bridges the generation gap, bringing young and old together, by providing time to share knowledge and experiences.

The Youth and Elderly Service project is a community service program started last year as part of the social studies methods course for the UI elementary education program. It joins groups made up of two UI education students, a senior citizen and an elementary school child.

The fall session of the project will start at the beginning of October and will continue through early December.

Project participants meet once a week for an hour, usually at the senior citizen's home, said Rahima Wade, UI assistant professor of elementary social studies.

"The students are learning about community service, which is an important teaching method in social studies instruction," Wade said. "They're learning about the value of intergenerational activities in social studies curriculum."

Bill Kraemer, a senior citizen who was involved in the project last year, said he enjoyed getting to know the students.

"I wanted to be involved with things concerning youth, and I wanted to find out what could be done by an older person like me," he said.

Kraemer said his group did various things, ranging from playing cards to planting seeds.

Many of the elementary children involved come from single-parent households, and the senior citizens help add stability, Wade said.

"For seniors, it's a way for them to contribute both to the profession of teachers as well as young children who don't have a lot of adult role models in their lives," she said.

UI senior Susan Everett, who was involved with the project last spring, said it was beneficial.

"I think the child benefited from having these three extra people in her life," she said.

ADDITIONAL MEETINGS CONSIDERED

Iowa gubernatorial hopefuls approve October debate date

Mike Glover

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Democrat Bonnie Campbell and Republican Terry Branstad have agreed to a televised debate in their campaign for governor on Oct. 5, aides said Tuesday.

The agreement was reached during talks between the two camps earlier in the day. There was disagreement over whether there would be additional campaign debates.

The one-hour meeting will be sponsored by Des Moines television station WHO, beginning at 7 p.m.

For half of the debate, the two candidates for governor will field questions from a panel of reporters. The other half of the debate will feature videotaped questions from voters around the state.

Agreement to the debate caps weeks of arguments between the two camps over how to structure debates and whether they will be held at all.

"That's the only one at this point in time. It may be the only one."

Phil Roeder, spokesman for Bonnie Campbell

Branstad spokeswoman Christina Martin said the incumbent governor hoped to reach an agreement "by the end of the week" on a second and third meeting. Campbell aides were skeptical.

"That's the only one at this point in time," said Campbell spokesman Phil Roeder. "It may be the only one."

Roeder said the two camps "are still looking at some other possibilities," but "we've made it clear all along we're not going to be doing any debates after mid-October."

Branstad accused Campbell of seeking to duck campaign debates, saying she performed badly in a primary-season debate with rival Bill Reichardt.

"I suspect that because of the poor showing that she made in the debate with Reichardt that she doesn't want to publicly debate me before the television cameras," said Branstad during a meeting with reporters.

The Des Moines television station also sponsored campaign debates between Republicans and Democrats during the primary.

CLEANUP SCHEDULED

UISA plans campus activities

Patricia Harris

The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Association announced at its meeting Tuesday that it will co-sponsor a forum on sexual harassment on campus.

The forum, which will also be sponsored by the Faculty Senate and the Staff Council, will be held Oct. 3 in the Main Ballroom of the Union. The public is invited and encouraged to attend. Times were not announced at the meeting.

Three other UISA or UISA-affiliated group-sponsored events were discussed at the meeting.

The first was the campus cleanup, which UISA Vice President Gretchen Lohman said is intended to coincide with UI Homecoming Week activities. The cleanup will be held Oct. 6, beginning at 8 a.m. with a ceremony on the Pentacrest. It will last until noon and will target most UI buildings in an effort to beautify the campus.

The UISA also announced that a

The United Students of Iowa, UISA-affiliated group, announced a petition-signing and letter-writing campaign to protest the tuition increases slated for the 1995-96 school year.

24-hour study area will be established in the Wheelroom of the Union between Sept. 25 and Oct. 14. It will be open Sunday through Thursday only. The area was made possible through a $3,000 grant from the office of the Dean of Students Phillip Jones.

The United Students of Iowa, an UISA-affiliated group, announced a petition-signing and letter-writing campaign to protest the tuition increases slated for the 1995-96 school year.

The group hopes to get 500 petition signatures and 250 postcards sent to the Iowa state Board of Regents. The tuition hike is 4.2 percent for in-state students and 6 percent for out-of-state students.

Iowa City Mayor Susan Horowitz invited UISA members to attend a special meeting with Iowa City City Council members to address student concerns and needs. The meeting is scheduled for Oct. 11 at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.

IRANIAN OFFICIAL KILLED

8 claimed in shooting rampage in China

Charlene L. Fu
Associated Press

BEIJING — Even with rising crime in China, a shootout in Beijing on Tuesday that left eight people dead and more than 30 wounded was highly unusual in a nation that keeps such a tight grip on its citizens.

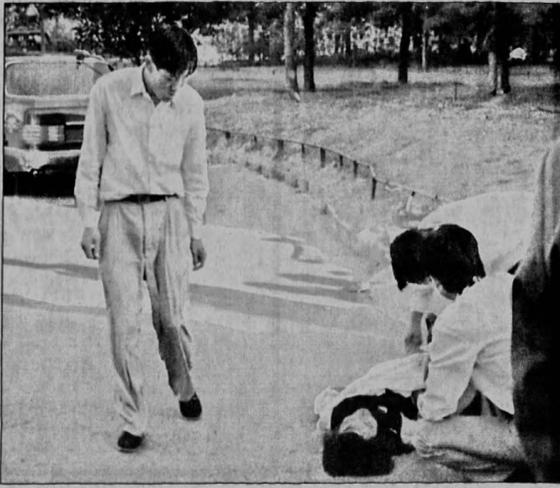

An Iranian diplomat and his son were among those killed in the early morning shootout on a major thoroughfare.

China has a strict ban on civilian ownership of guns and ammunition and harsh penalties meant to deter crime, including wide use of the death penalty.

Yet the government reported a 20 percent increase in the number of serious and violent crimes nationwide in the first six months of this year.

Current economic reforms have made many Chinese richer. But they also have led to enormous leaps in crime, drug abuse and prostitution — and the most corrupt government since the Communists took power in 1949.

"China is becoming an increasingly anarchic society," David Shambaugh, senior lecturer in Chinese politics at the University of London, wrote earlier this year in Current History. "China's social fabric is fraying."

Associated Press

Passers-by look at the body of a person killed by an automatic rifle-wielding gunman in Beijing Tuesday. Eight people, including an Iranian diplomat and his son, were killed and 30 were injured in the early morning shooting.

The rush-hour shooting rampage occurred shortly after 7 a.m., when a single gunman fired indiscriminately on the Second Ring Road, near a compound where foreign diplomats and journalists live.

The man ran down the middle of the road, firing an automatic rifle, probably an AK-47, witnesses said. They saw the windows of a passing bus explode and saw the gunman shoot a motorcyclist.

He hailed a minivan taxi and got into the back, said an Asian diplomat whose apartment faces the road. When the driver and a passenger in the front seat tried to flee, the gunman shot both at point-blank range. The passenger appeared to have died, said the diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

After shooting the two men in the minivan, the gunman fled down the road, pursued by police with automatic rifles, who shot him to death.

Officials at the Iranian Embassy said Yousef Mohammadi Pishknari and one of his sons were shot to death. Another son was shot in the leg.

The official Xinhua News Agency reported Mohammadi's two daughters were taken to a hospital.

It was unclear if all the victims were hit by the gunman.

The son who was wounded ran back to the diplomatic compound screaming that police had shot his father and siblings.

The Iranian government summoned China's top diplomat in Tehran to protest the shootings and planned its own investigation, said Tehran radio, monitored in London by the British Broadcasting Corp.

POSSIBLE POLLUTION LAW VIOLATIONS INVESTIGATED

Wasteful habits recycled at Woodstock '94

David E. Kalish
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As thousands grooved to the music, some Woodstock '94 revelers visited a solar-powered "Eco Village," read about saving the earth and soothed their consciences by tossing the brochures in recycling bins.

But one month later, nearly 1,500 tons of beer cans, soda bottles, crumpled lawn chairs, muddy tents and other concert trash are buried in landfills. And what was billed as an environmentally friendly event is being investigated for possibly breaking pollution laws.

Ulster County authorities claim organizers of the 25th anniversary concert in Saugerties recycled a scant 2 percent of the refuse — far less than the 50 percent they promised. County law requires recyclable materials to be kept out of landfills.

"In a festival such as this — that was billed as an environmental concert — recycling should have had a high priority on the agenda. I don't believe it did," said Charles Shaw, executive director of the Ulster County Resource Recovery Agency, which manages solid waste and recycling for the area.

Wetlands also were trashed and toilets overflowed into the Beaver Kill Stream. The state's Department of Environmental Conservation tested the water twice but hasn't said what it found.

"There could be some basis for water pollution violations, but we haven't determined that," said department spokesman R.W.

Groneman.

Shaw says the Saugerties-based concert promoter, Woodstock Ventures, could face up to $4,000 in fines for each day of the massive trash cleanup, which is only now wrapping up. About 250,000 people came to the concert, which ended Aug. 15.

Woodstock spokeswoman Ilene Marder conceded that only a few tons of material was recycled but insisted it wasn't all the organizers' fault.

It rained for most of the three-day festival, and trash got buried in ankle-deep clay mud on the 840-acre site, a former dairy farm. Once trash is tainted with mud or other garbage, it is no longer readily recyclable.

Also, while Greenpeace urged companies in the concert's Eco Village to "Clean Up Your Act, Not Your Corporate Image" and reggae singer Jimmy Cliff led thousands in singing "Save Our Planet Earth," crowds tossed nonrecyclables in recycling bins and crews couldn't get through to empty them.

Workers are still finding dirty socks and crumpled soda cups between tufts of grass and tree limbs, but Marder said the site's original beauty is being quickly restored.

APPEALS REFUSED

Texas man executed 18 months after trial

Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — A former lawyer who refused to appeal his death sentence was executed by injection early Tuesday, only 18 months after he was convicted of killing two prosecutors during a courthouse shooting rampage.

George Lott, who represented himself to the end, spurned offers of assistance and did nothing to halt his execution, the second in Texas in a week.

Lott, 47, made no final statement and was pronounced dead at 12:19 a.m.

It was the speediest execution in Texas since it resumed capital punishment in 1982. The average time between conviction and execution in Texas is 8 1/2 years.

However, in one of the quickest executions since the U.S. Supreme Court in 1976 allowed executions to resume, Utah executed Gary Gilmore in 1977 three months after his conviction. Gilmore waived all his appeals.

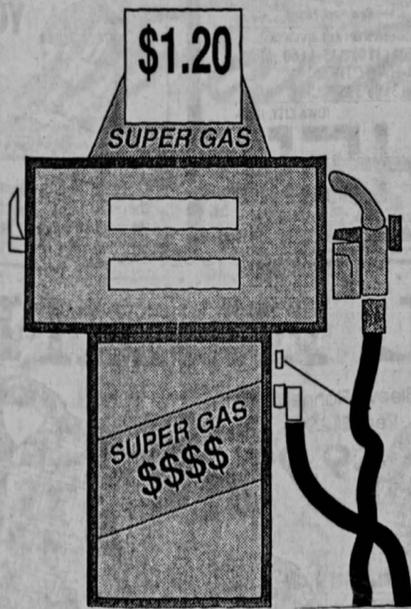

Lott stood up in a Tarrant County Courthouse courtroom in Fort Worth on July 1, 1992, and fired a 9 mm handgun at least 17 times. Two prosecutors were killed and three people were wounded, including two judges.

Lott fled and surrendered later at a Dallas television station. He told the station he wanted to draw attention to wrongs the legal system had inflicted on him in his divorce and in a child-molesting charge his ex-wife brought against him.

"I have no sense of satisfaction," said Clyde Ashworth, 71, one of the judges wounded in the attack. "It's a shame his life has been wasted as well as the lives of those he killed and those who have been affected by those deaths."

State bar records show Lott became a licensed attorney in 1981 but became inactive in 1988 and was not eligible to practice. Prison records listed his last occupation as computer programmer.

JOINT TRIBUNAL SUGGESTED

Hutu prosecution details proposed

Angus Shaw
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — The United States has called for Rwandan war crimes to be tried by an international tribunal already established to deal with atrocities in the former Yugoslavia.

Enlargement of the tribunal in The Hague could eliminate delays in prosecuting Hutu extremists blamed for the massacres of over a half-million Rwandans, mostly from the Tutsi minority.

The Yugoslav tribunal's work was delayed two years by disputes over its composition and operation.

A U.S. draft document that circulated in Kigali on Tuesday said Washington believed prosecutions under international humanitarian law relating to Rwanda "can be most effectively done by adding this responsibility to the mandate of the current international tribunal."

It said officials working on the two sets of trials could share some buildings, staff and even cell facilities in The Hague, but a lot more money and at least two extra trial chambers, each with three judges, would be required.

The document has been submitted to the Tutsi government that gained power in Kigali in July after four months of bloody fighting triggered by the death of Hutu President Juvenal Habyarimana in a suspicious plane crash April 6.

Neither the government nor U.S. officials in Rwanda have commented publicly on the proposal, which U.S. allies have also been asked to consider.

The government in Kigali has repeatedly called for rapid foreign assistance to put in place a judicial system to investigate ethnic massacres during the Rwandan civil war.

It has cited growing impatience among its supporters to see Hutu leaders accused of fostering mass violence punished, and it argues that prolonged delays could cause an eruption of reprisal killings.

AIRLIFT HALTED

Cutoff of utilities worries U.N.

Samir Krilic
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — U.N. officials tried to talk Bosnian Serbs into restoring utilities Tuesday to Sarajevo, but for a sixth day the capital remained without running water and electricity, and too cold for comfort.

As temperatures dipped into the 40s on the eve of autumn, a halt in the humanitarian airlift added to the miserable reminder of the two past winters when Sarajevo residents were short of food and fuel.

Also, just hours after the airlift resumed Tuesday morning, a small-arms bullet pierced the fuselage of a C-130 French aid plane as it landed in Sarajevo.

No one was hurt and the plane was able to unload its cargo, but the airlift, suspended Monday due to a surge in fighting in Sarajevo, was halted anew by U.N. authorities.

The onset of cold, together with the ban on utilities, prompted U.N. officials to go to the Bosnian Serb headquarters in Pale to discuss last week's cutoff of electricity, water and natural gas.

The U.N. commander for Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, and civil affairs chief Victor Andreyev held talks with Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, described by a U.N. spokeswoman as useful.

Another meeting was scheduled for today at the Sarajevo airport.

The spokeswoman, Claire Grimes, said the Serbs were linking restoration of utilities to Sarajevo to other issues, and that the United Nations would reject such linkage.

The Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA quoted military Chief of Staff Gen. Manojlo Milovanovic as saying rebel Serbs wanted restoration of utilities to Serb-held towns.

The cutoff of utilities was a way for Bosnian Serbs to pressure the Sarajevo government, even as they themselves were under increased pressure from their former patrons in Belgrade to halt the 2 1/2-year-old war and accept a peace plan.

Last month, Serbia President Slobodan Milosevic announced he was sealing the border with Bosnia to all but humanitarian aid. An international monitoring team that is beginning its work said preliminary indications are that Milosevic is serious.

The peace plan would give the Bosnian Serbs 49 percent of Bosnia instead of the 70 percent they now hold. A federation of Muslims and Croats would get the rest.

In Brussels, Belgium, Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic told NATO that only the threat of international military action or the lifting of the arms embargo against the Bosnian government would convince Bosnian Serbs that they had to come to terms.

Shapiro advised to leave phone out of court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three rings, and he's out — of a phone.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito threatened to confiscate the cellular phone of O.J. Simpson's defense lawyer Robert Shapiro if it rings again in court.

As prosecutor Marcia Clark argued a point Monday, she was interrupted by a ringing phone and looked over to Shapiro.

"Is that counsel's phone?" she asked.

As Shapiro struggled to shut off the phone, Ito chided, "That's twice, Mr. Shapiro."

Shapiro grimaced and tried to explain. Ito let it go, but added a word of caution.

"Next time, it's mine," he said.

Probation servers monitored through telephone system

DANVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Big Brother is phoning in Hendricks County, and people who drink while serving sentences at home have reason to worry.

The county probation department has a new device that uses a computer and a special phone to monitor up to 50 people to see if they have violated their parole by drinking alcohol.

The home detention system, developed by Digital Products Corp., keeps track of people electronically, registering the whereabouts of their wrist or ankle bracelets with a central computer.

But this computer also makes phone calls, and a sensor built into the receiver analyzes the person's breath. The device can't measure the amount of alcohol consumed, it only says whether alcohol is detected.

After calling back twice to verify positive findings, the computer automatically summons a probation officer to the home for a more conventional test.

The program costs about $4,400 a month but generates twice that in fees paid by the detainees.

Millionaire's marriage ad raises suspicion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A billboard that tells of a lonely millionaire looking for a bride might be too good to be true.

The billboard asks women between the ages of 35 and 45 to call a number and leave personal information including religion, occupation and education. But would-be brides also are asked to send a $10 "processing fee" to a local post office box.

"If this guy is a millionaire, why is he asking for $10?" said Ron Miller, president of the Better Business Bureau of Central Ohio. "It's a scam. That's not Cupid working there. That's some guy lining his jacket."

Robyn Ziegler, a spokeswoman for Attorney General Lee Fisher, said the fee requirement does not appear to break any state law. Postal inspectors are investigating.

The Postal Service won't reveal the name of the box renter or any information about the responses received.

Jury bequeaths judgment to prisoners attacked by guards

CINCINNATI (AP) — A federal jury awarded $490,800 to two prison inmates who said they were beaten and clubbed by two guards while four others stood by and watched.

"It sends a message to all the corrections officers throughout the state," inmate Danny Lee Grimm said after the verdict Monday. "You just can't beat prisoners."

Prison officials said they would appeal. If the verdict stands, the money will be held for the inmates until they finish their sentences.

Grimm, 37, was sentenced in 1989 to four to 15 years for robbery. Gary W. Bennett, 26, was sentenced to seven to 25 years in 1987 for voluntary manslaughter.

Each won punitive damages of $150,000. Grimm got $75,000 and Bennett $115,800.

PRESIDENT BLAMED FOR ALMOST RUINING NEGOTIATIONS

Carter clashes with Clinton over Haitian diplomatic issues

Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If he didn't learn the lesson in North Korea, President Clinton knows now that Jimmy Carter's help comes with a price.

Hours after closing a deal to avert a military invasion of Haiti, the former president broadsided Clinton with criticism of his Haiti policy and launched a publicity campaign from, of all places, the Lincoln bedroom.

Carter opposed an invasion. He opposed an embargo. He opposed driving fallen dictators from Haiti. He opposed nearly every aspect of the president's work in Haiti, a senior Clinton aide said, except the decision to let Carter try to make peace.

And even that wasn't handled right, the former president said.

He accused Clinton of nearly scuttling peace talks by deploying an invasion force while negotiations were still under way. "What we had worked on to accomplish was about to come apart," Carter told CNN in an interview he arranged from the historic White House bedroom, moments after returning from Haiti.

The administration obviously disagreed. Clinton's foreign policy team insisted that an imminent threat of war was what pushed military leader Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras to close the deal. The agreement has drawn criticism from lawmakers who think Clinton, eager to avoid violence, went too easy on the junta.

Carter, whose global troubleshooting is eclipsing memories of a vexed presidency, said the White House should not be surprised by his objections.

"Well, I've expressed my criticism publicly," Carter said Tuesday. Referring to two other members of the negotiating team, retired Gen. Colin Powell and Sen. Sam Nunn, the former president added, "All three of us have expressed our concern about the embargo, which was affecting primarily very poor people in the country."

Clinton is said to be bothered by Carter's criticism over Haiti, but not nearly as annoyed as he was when Carter appeared to misstate U.S. policy during the Korean negotiations. This time, the president tried to keep a shorter leash on Carter — closely monitoring the talks by telephone.

But time after time, Carter's actions or words on Haiti contradicted the White House.

In a telephone conversation with Cedras quoted by the Los Angeles Times, Carter said he discussed their "mutual faith in God" and invited Cedras to teach at his Georgia Sunday school. This is the same man Clinton described as a thug, leader of a junta responsible for rapes and killings.

Carter credited Haitian President Emile Jonassaint for showing the courage and power to force peace on the military regime. This is the same man Clinton considered a puppet of the military.

LEGISLATORS ATTACK PEACE ACCORD

Republicans scorn president's policy

David Esposito
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's top general warned Tuesday that American casualties could occur in Haiti "at any moment." Republicans sharply attacked the 2-day-old military operation, and some Democrats in Congress talked of swiftly setting a date for withdrawal.

Exiled Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, too, signaled his disapproval of an American policy that permits Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras to remain in power until mid-October.

At the White House, President Clinton said the nation awoke to a "much better and very different day" than if the troops had been sent in as an invasion force.

Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told reporters at the White House there could be an outbreak of violence pitting Haitian against Haitian at any time.

"And the nation needs to understand that we can be taking casualties at any moment, and we need to be prepared for it," he said.

Shortly afterwards came word that some Haitians, jubilant at the prospect of an American-led change in government, clashed with police in the streets.

In Congress, where opposition to a military invasion had been overwhelming, Republicans said the mission is doomed to fail.

"If our forces stay long enough they will become the target of both sides," predicted Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming. He and other Republicans compared the situation to Somalia, where Americans were sucked into tribal animosities.

Sen. Larry Pressler of South Dakota accused Clinton of playing politics. "I don't like to accuse our president of using the troops for political reasons. But as a former lieutenant in the Army, I feel strongly the White House is looking for a boost in the political polls with this occupation."

"The fact is the president has impossibly complicated the situation" by permitting Cedras to remain in power and his military to work alongside American troops, said Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana.

• Careers Day •

1994

Wednesday September 28, 1994 • 9:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
IMU Main Lounge

WHAT IS CAREERS DAY?

It is a day when representatives from business, industry, social service organizations and government meet informally with University of Iowa students for an exchange of career information. It is a chance to learn about career opportunities with approximately 125 employers.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Careers Day is open to all University students - Freshman, Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors, and Graduate Students.

WHY SHOULD YOU ATTEND?

Careers Day can help all students learn about many career fields. You can find out about post-graduation employment opportunities. Juniors and Seniors can talk with recruiters about job opportunities, resumes, and interviews. Freshman and Sophomores who are trying to decide on a major can benefit by talking with professionals from different career fields. Information about cooperative education programs and internships will also be available.

TIPS ON HOW TO MAKE CAREERS DAY WORK FOR YOU:

FRESHMAN:

- Read the Careers Day list of employers in the Monday, September 26th Daily Iowan and circle the companies you would like to visit.
- Bring a book bag to put your employer information in - the companies will give you a lot of brochures, reports, etc.
- Walk around and talk informally with the representatives. Stop in and out throughout the day.
- Dress casually.

SOPHOMORES:

- Follow the same tips as the freshman and add these tips: Begin to explore internship and summer job responsibilities by taking a resume with you. Ask the employers if they hire interns, and if so, in what areas.
- Dress professionally if you want to make a good impression.

JUNIORS:

- Do all of the above with the addition of trying to research the employers a bit more before you attend Careers Day. Stop by 380 IMU, Business and Liberal Arts Placement, 18 PH, the Employer Literature Room, and 3121 Engineering Careers Services to learn about each employer. Write down a number of questions to ask each employer about opportunities with their company.
- Leave your resume if you're looking for an internship or summer job.
- Dress professionally.

SENIORS AND GRADUATE STUDENTS:

- Target 10 to 15 companies to explore in depth.
- Write down questions to ask each representative, and make sure you visit with your targeted companies first. You can tire easily if you try to talk to too many.
- Pick up materials from each employer which will help you make a decision about whether you want to pursue opportunities with them.
- Tell them about yourself and leave your resume.
- Dress as you would for an interview.

TIPS FOR EVERYONE:

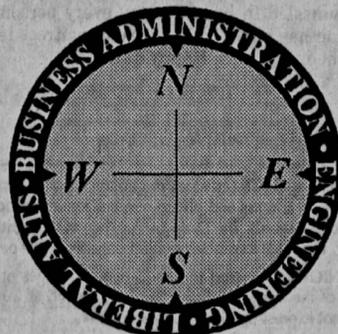

- Make sure that you check in at the Information table at the East entrance. Get a name tag and wear it. The employers like to know who you are.
- Plan to visit several times throughout the day. Last year over 2,000 students talked with employers. You're often standing in lines or pushing your way through the crowded aisles. It's tiring! If you can take a few breaks, you'll feel fresher.
- Don't expect to get private time with the employers. This is an information fair, and you'll have lots of people trying to get themselves heard too. Be patient and try your best to listen carefully when the employer is talking to you.
- Prepare questions that you want to ask. Don't ask the obvious. Only ask what you really want to know.

PLAN TO ATTEND ONE OF THE FOLLOWING PRE-CAREERS DAY PROGRAMS:

MESSAGE TO BE SENT

Anti-Semitism rising

When does the learning begin? Teachers always said the reason to study history was so people could learn from it and not let the negative events happen again. There seems to be a simultaneous interest in educating about the Holocaust as well as a significant increase in anti-Semitism. It makes one wonder if perhaps there is some association between those two events.

The world is an ever-changing series of events, from falling governments to dealing with the efforts to control possible overpopulation. It can be hard to keep up with all of these things, but, as asked earlier, have people learned anything from the Holocaust? It wouldn't seem so when Italy has its first neo-Fascist political party since World War II involved in its government. Italy is not alone; the former Soviet Union had a new party to support in its first democratic election. The Liberal-Democratic Party, led by Vladimir Zhirinovskiy, does not have much tolerance for beliefs other than its own, a very similar concept of Hitler and the Third Reich.

The increase in anti-Semitism or a lack of tolerance is not only happening overseas, but in the United States as well. In New York, where there is a large population of Hasidic Jews, there is also a large amount of negative activity directed towards these people. The activity involves vandalizing rabbis' houses, as well as many other Jewish residences, which the police said they don't think are hate crimes.

In Iowa City there is a great deal of diversity — cultural, racial and religious. There is also a lot of acceptance toward this diversity. For that reason, Jewish students take for granted the ease and comfort with which they can walk around campus displaying their religious orientation by wearing a Star of David necklace or clothes with Jewish slogans.

For one Jewish student, that comfort came to a halt when he noticed a group of skinheads on the Pedestrian Mall. People might react by thinking that these people aren't really a threat to anyone; they're young and probably just too impressionable. That may have some truth for today, but it should also be a sign for people to realize that not everywhere will people of all beliefs feel the comfort to safely express themselves.

College, a place for learning and expanding the mind, is the last place one would think there would be such displays of growing hatred. But colleges are the lecture halls for many members of the Nation of Islam. One member, Khalid Abdul Muhammad, gave a speech at Kean College in Union, N.J., which stated that Jews are scum and the cause of the world's problems. How would the students at the UI respond if Louis Farrakhan, another active member of the Nation of Islam, was invited to speak here? The NAACP, the nation's largest and oldest civil rights organization, invited Farrakhan to speak at a convention. This brought about a lot of controversy since Jews had been very involved with the NAACP during the civil rights movement. Farrakhan blames all of the controversy on the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

The message must get out — a message that people should not be treated cruelly or with disrespect on the sole basis of their beliefs or origins.

STANDARDS IN DINING OUT

Staff deserves respect

Your waitress is a philosopher. She knows things that you don't. She has seen more than mortal man should see. She is a transmitter, a link between knowledge and the frightening reality of human nature. She knows that for the most part people are negative.

Another football weekend is on the horizon, and so is the hard work for every person employed in the service industry in Iowa City. In pursuit of a good time, many patrons forget not only their consideration and respect for the people who are there to facilitate that good time, but also their manners, tact and ability to act like rational human beings. Patrons lose sight of the fact that they are in a place of business, not in their living rooms or the stands of a football stadium.

The key to dining out is contingent upon one important fact: The patron is the reason why the waitress is there. The patron provides her income. However, the patron is not her life.

The standards of behavior for dining out, even in the nicest of establishments, are constantly being challenged. The restaurant of our modern times has become a place where every societal ill manifests itself into a chaotic, hyperdysfunctional mess — with your waitress as the tour guide.

Face it, people need help learning the proper pain-free and mutually satisfying art of dining out. The bottom line is that people go out to eat to socialize, have a good time and to let someone else do the work. People in the service industry know this; however, it is not the crux of their lives. The key to dining out is contingent upon one important fact: The patron is the reason why the waitress is there. The patron provides her income. However, the patron is not her life. First and foremost, presume that your waitress wants you to go away happy because it means that you'll return.

Your waitress has seen it all, dealt with all kinds of people and counseled in her own way every person who walks in the door and has had a bad day. Your waitress is more than a waitress, she is a person. Happy dining.

DJALAL "D.J." ARBABHA

Used correctly, media can be a teacher

Teachers are the quiet revolutionaries in all societies. They have the ability to start revolutions in the minds of their students — revolutions that can change the course of their students' lives. This does not happen often, but when it does the effect on the student is profound.

For me, Paul Alff was such a teacher. He was my American and world history teacher in high school. He worked against the stereotype that non-Americans could not become interested in learning about American history. His best advice to me — and the advice I will never forget — was that I could learn much about the world and, in particular, history on a daily basis by just keeping up with the news. After all, it is the accumulation of today's news that forms the basis of tomorrow's history.

There is no excuse for an uninformed citizenry in this country. Except in rare circumstances, every American has access to the world's most diverse sources of news and information. It is just a matter of utilizing these resources. Let me share with you some of the lessons I have learned in my attempts to access this wealth of information.

First, you should not be overwhelmed by the immense size of this information reservoir that is out there. You have to sip the water before you take the plunge into the massive reservoir of information. Another important fact to remember is that you should not be afraid of tasting different kinds of water. What do I mean by this piling of analogies upon analogies? Let me give you a concrete example from my own experience.

Until about seven years ago, I had never been interested in reading about business issues of the day, when I started to read newspapers, I would usually skip the business sections. However, once in a while a business story would catch my attention. From these periodic readings, I slowly became interested in reading business stories. As I learned more about this area, I started reading business magazines. I started with Fortune magazine, which had a lot of colorful pictures with relatively simple articles. Then, I moved on to Business Week and other business magazines. The fact was, I had no training in business and slowly I worked my way up to reading and actually understanding articles dealing with more complicated business issues.

The advantage of learning about a whole new area through media is that a person does not have to have a background in that particular area. We can simply work our way up from the simple to the complicated. In no other mode of learning does one get such an opportunity. In college, for instance, you are assumed to have a solid background in your field and then you are expected to build upon that background using a pace determined by professors. This is contrary to learning through the media, in which you are in charge of the pace of your learning.

A second important fact to remember in attempting to learn through the media is that we should not get ourselves carried away with the news of the day. News is unpredictable — that is what makes it refreshing. However, as the important news of the day moves from one issue to another (Cuba yesterday, Haiti today), we must not forget that life has not stopped in other places. News is still being made, though in a less extravagant manner.

We should not overwhelm ourselves with the attention-grabbing news of the day. If we do, we may miss out on smaller events that lay the seeds for the opportunities, as well as catastrophes, of the future. One weakness of the media is that in its attempt to cover the important news of day, it often ignores other events that may seem less important at the time. This is somewhat understandable as there are limited resources, but the consequences of this practice are often horrifying. The media, for example, did not cover the internal political events in Rwanda until sheer madness took over that unfortunate country. But this madness did not start overnight. It did not start when the camera crews of CNN arrived in Rwanda. It was going on for a long time, away from the consciousness of the international media and thus the international community.

A third fact to remember in attempting to learn through the media is that unlike other forms of learning it should be fun. This means you should use the type of media you enjoy the most. It could be reading newspapers or magazines, listening to radio or watching television — news in every imaginable form, even the kind spread by talk-show hosts. The point is that your comfort in the type of media you choose makes your learning more enjoyable and much more productive. The key is to have a good time and not worry if you are understanding everything you are reading.

The beauty of learning through the media is that nobody will test you on what you are learning. The satisfaction comes from within — when you notice that you are learning about new fields, new people and new places that you never thought you would, never thought you would be interested in and never thought existed before.

GUEST OPINION • JEFF KOENIG

Free speech not under attack at UI

My fiancée and I moved to Iowa City this summer to continue her education. Having received undergraduate degrees at a private institution, we looked forward to the greater academic and social freedom that state college campuses foster. We were disappointed by a certain chain of events.

It started with the front-page article of the Sept. 8 The Daily Iowan, "Phillips faculty defies sex act policy." The article made no mention that this policy was directed at stopping the presentation of any specific classroom material. Instead, as my fiancée read it, it stated that the policy, which faces opposition, requires that students be made aware of material to be presented that may be offensive to them. Bewildered as to the nature of the protest, we set the paper aside.

Later, as we drove along Clinton Street, we noticed a small gathering of individuals displaying signs and rallying. We heard a speech related to the article we read, but the focus of the protest seemed to be homosexual-oriented. Intrigued, we parked to learn more. We were singled out immediately, and two flyers were placed into our hands by supporters of the rally. Later, we read the letter to the DI editor by Patricia Miller and called the office of the president to have the policy in question read to us. With all of this information, we became confused by the message that the Phillips Hall faculty, Teaching Assistants and members of the Campaign for Academic Freedom seemed to be communicating.

As we understand them — and we would very much like to be corrected if we are in error — these are the facts. Students have, in the past, objected to the nature of certain films and/or materials presented in classes. A policy has been enacted requiring instructors to inform prospective students through course descriptions, syllabuses, etc. of potentially offensive classroom materials.

However, the policy does not prohibit the presentation of such material or even imply that the presentation of such material should be avoided. The policy has no wording that specifically singles out homosexuality or any other form of sexuality as its target. Furthermore, for the purposes of our letter we are assuming that there is no underhanded conspiracy to use the policy to purposely discriminate against any particular group of oversensitive or paranoid people. If these are the facts as any reasonable person would interpret them, then what, my fellow citizens, is the problem?

A bright pink half-sheet flyer read, "Free speech is under attack at the University of Iowa." Discussing class materials, a question on the flyer asked, "Who gets to define what is 'unusual' and 'unexpected'?" To the author of that question we must ask, "Regardless of what one considers unusual and unexpected, who has told you that you cannot present it?" We see nothing in the policy, stated or implied, that limits your freedom to present any material or that hampers your freedom of speech.

A lighter pink full-sheet flyer stated, "The policy creates a dangerous administrative mechanism for the disciplining or dismissing any instructors whose views are deemed undesirable by the administration of the board of regents. ... They have imposed a stigmatizing warning requirement that sanctions homophobia, chills academic freedom and narrows the scope of students' educational experience." These statements were also copied by Patricia Miller in her letter. Again, what limits anyone's freedom, beyond limiting the freedom of instructors to abuse their fiduciary relationships with students in order to force their own views about delicate social issues on them? Rather than promoting their rally cry — "Freedom to learn" — it would appear that they really mean "Freedom to force our views on others without warning."

By implication, can we conclude that supporters of CAF believe that the only way they will get enough students to take the classes they support is by not telling them about their hidden personal agendas in the teaching materials? Maybe that should tell them something. Does CAF oppose their own right to have full disclosure concerning a car, a house or a business for sale? Then why do they oppose full disclosure as to the content of a class which is similarly "for sale?"

It would appear that CAF believes that the only way that they can promote homosexuality is to trick others into watching it, name-calling and "straight-bashing" (from the second flyer), and the limiting of others' rights to know what a class discusses. Additionally, withholding information from a student, which effectively limits a student's right to choose, does nothing for their cause. Yet the right to choose is an ideal they have so often accused others of violating. The liberal hypocrisy continues to unveil itself as those who fight for one form of freedom on one day fight against it the next when it doesn't suit their agenda. They obviously feel that the only way to promote their lifestyle is by limiting the rights of others to choose whether or not they wish to be exposed.

My friends, you cannot win freedom for yourselves by robbing it from others. We believe that every human being has the pure right to determine their own views. However, a line must be drawn when a minority group attempts to use a public, neutral forum like the classroom to push those views on others unless all persons in attendance were made aware of the material and have come voluntarily. The administration's intent through their free information policy is only to give students the freedom to choose and the "freedom to learn" what they wish to learn without being tricked into it.

Accomplishments deserve recognition

To the Editor:

On Tuesday, Sept. 13, seven youths enthralled an audience of over 1000 people with their stories of how they battle with AIDS. The Daily Iowan covered the event with articles on Tuesday and Wednesday. The organizations who sponsored this event greatly appreciate the publicity the DI gave it. But who are these sponsoring organizations?

The answer is the greek community. The Interfraternity, Panhellenic and National Panhellenic councils and the Sigma Nu and Sigma Alpha Mu fraternities sponsored and hosted the event, which raised over $3,000 for Camp Heartland. The DI neglected to mention who hosted the evening in either article.

The educational-development directors of the Interfraternity and Panhellenic councils gave countless hours of their time to organize every aspect of the trip Neil Willenson and his kids made to Iowa City. This informative and entertaining evening would not have occurred without the efforts of the greek community.

It is unfortunate that the DI often covers negative stories concerning the greek community in great detail but does not recognize us for the fund raising, service and education we provide for our members and others.

We admit that our system is not without flaws. With over 3,500 members, mistakes and incidents are inevitable. However, the programs we provide, the hours of community service, the opportunity to learn from each other and the countless friendships that are formed through greek membership surely outweigh the unfortunate and occasional actions of a few members.

I am certain that the hundreds of pints of blood donated by greeks during Greek Week are appreciated. I am certain that the money raised by Hospice Road Races, another greek-sponsored event, will be once again put to great use. I am certain that Camp Heartland appreciates the money raised through the efforts of the greek community.

We only ask that if the DI wishes to criticize our flaws that you also recognize our accomplishments.

Student conduct is embarrassing

To the Editor:

This is an open letter to the student body:

The UI is an outstanding school with a long history of academic and athletic excellence, as well as unequalled sportsmanship and fan support. Unfortunately, the actions of a few often bring a bad feeling about many.

Those of you who attend football games and participate in the chant during the band's playing of "The Hey Song" are the few. You bring shame upon yourselves, your families, the university and the state of Iowa as a whole. Your chant is an embarrassment to many who attend the games for the same reason you do — to support and cheer on a fine football team representing a fine university.

Please reconsider your actions and bring this activity to an end.

Paraphrase of editorial called for

To the Editor:

"With so much precaution taken at the sake of offense in society — namely animal testing, racial and sexual discrimination, abortion and the like, materializing itself on the Pentacrest every day — should not the same concern arise at the expense of uninformed students?"

This sentence of Jessy Flammang's editorial on the UI's explicit materials policy stopped me cold. Would it be possible for you guys to run a paraphrase of it in the Corrections section, purely for the sake of clarification?

I am reminded of a comment attributed to Robert Browning about his own obscure poem, "Sordello": "When I wrote it, only God and I knew what it meant; now, only God does."

Headline disturbing

To the Editor:

I honestly didn't know whether to be amused or horrified at the juxtaposed headline and subtitle of Devon Alexander's piece on STDs (DI, Sept. 13). To gravely announce "Increase of gonorrhea cases reported" and then punctuate it with "Condom use recommended" is like following "Increase in alcohol-related accidents reported" with "Seat belt use recommended."

Get real, folks! The solution to STDs isn't found in trying to avoid the natural consequence of one's own actions but in avoiding the act itself. The issue isn't safe sex, but sane sex: abstinence until marriage, then faithfulness within same. Our present choice of solutions will continue to exact its high price for just so long as we fail to recall that sex for its own sake — like anything for its own sake — will destroy the very end it seeks.

Health care a right, not a privilege

To the Editor:

I would like to counter what I believe to be a couple of flawed assumptions in Gloria Mitchell's column of Sept. 6.

Mitchell seems to fear that health reform will involve nationalization of the private clinics, hospitals and laboratories that constitute most of our vast medical-industrial complex. In closely following the meanderings of reform the past three years I have not yet encountered a serious proposal that would have the United States ape the government-owned and run system that prevails in Britain. For what it's worth, I would share Mitchell's apprehensions were they grounded in fact.

I also believe Mitchell is generally off-mark in focusing on Washington, D.C., as the center for meaningful reform. Both Congress and the president himself appear to me to have been effectively bullied and co-opted by the private insurance cartel (watch them transmogrify into next century's would-be HMO cartel!), which grew strong and arrogant while we were asleep at the wheel during the Cold War. This year, however, those nutty Californians have very sanely placed something called "Proposition 186" on the ballot for the Nov. 8 elections. If it passes, Californians will be the first Americans to enjoy the equity, efficiency and security that would result from implementing Canadian-style single-payer (hey English majors, this needs a better name!) reform. My point is only such a bold end run around Washington's cynical snake-oil hucksters will result in reform extensive enough to yank (even part of) our health-care nonsystem kicking and screaming out of the wild West and into the 20th century.

Again, for what it's worth, let me emphasize that I'm no radical — I merrily accept inequity in the distribution of status goods such as cars and swimming pools. However, access to quality, prompt, nonbankrupting health care should not be a privilege; it is so basic to our personal and societal dignity and well-being as to easily deserve to be a federally protected right. To demand less is unpatriotic! (Cheesy, but true.)

Columnist challenged

To the Editor:

Kobie Coleman, a black columnist, has a credibility problem with at least one of his readers. Coleman alleged in his Sept. 16 DI column that a white female client of his employer refused to meet with him (Coleman) because, she claimed, she had been raped seven times by black men. Coleman further alleged that this woman told this story to everyone she came into contact with at Coleman's place of employment.

I think Coleman invented this story. I challenge Coleman to publish the name of this woman and to also publish the names of all the people to whom she told this story.

AWAITS HEARING FOR ABORTION CLINIC MURDERS

Accused killer convicted in related case

Bill Kaczor
Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A man facing trial in the killings of an abortion doctor and his escort was convicted Tuesday of violating a noise ordinance by shouting taunts at the same clinic where the killings took place a month later.

The six-member jury returned its guilty verdict against Paul Hill following a one-day trial and two hours of deliberation. The jury acquitted Hill of a second charge of disorderly conduct.

Hill, who advocates killing abortion providers, was charged in both counts for yelling "Mommy, Mommy don't let them kill me" and similar statements through cupped hands outside the Ladies' Center on June 17.

The 40-year-old former Presbyterian minister also faces an Oct. 3 trial in U.S. District Court on charges of violating federal clinic protection and firearms laws and a Jan. 30 trial in state Circuit Court on charges of murder, attempted murder and shooting into an occupied vehicle.

He is accused of killing Dr. John B. Britton, 69, and retired Air Force Lt. Col. James H. Barrett, 74, as they arrived at the Ladies' Center on July 29. Barrett's wife, June, was wounded.

Immediately after Tuesday's verdict, Escambia County Judge Thomas Johnson sentenced Hill to 45 days in jail. He is already being held without bail on the federal and state charges.

Hill's lawyer, T. Patrick Monaghan, said he expected to appeal, arguing that Hill's conviction violated his right to free speech.

"The issue of abortion in this case is whether we are going to abort the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States," the New Hope, Ky., lawyer said in his closing argument.

Assistant State Attorney Gregory Marcille contended free speech was not a factor because the law covers only volume, not the content of what is being said.

As the trial's only defense witness, Hill admitted he was trying to be heard by patients inside the clinic, not people on the street.

"I was making a reasonable effort to persuade women not to kill their children," he said.

Prosecution witnesses testified they could hear Hill inside the building, although he was outside and several feet away.

"I heard someone screaming. It was loud enough to make me jump," said clinic administrator Linda Taggart. "It sounded like he was in the building."

Market in the heart of the city was all but deserted.

American soldiers numbered 7,000 by day's end — a force equal to the entire Haitian army.

The capital's pro-Aristide mayor, Evans Paul, urged Haitians to stop demonstrating, at least until American peacekeeping forces reached their planned deployment of 15,000.

"We've got to know how to manage this situation and not react by chasing rainbows," said Paul, who has been in hiding. "It is too soon for mass popular demonstrations, which are dangerous."

Following Tuesday's incidents, a senior U.S. Army official walked stiffly into Haiti's military headquarters for discussions.

Marine Lt. Col. Steve Hartly, commander of one of the two task forces landing Tuesday, said under the rules of engagement his men could only step in when murder or rape was involved.

A U.S. Army spokesman, Col. Barry Willey, said the Pentagon was "looking closely at the implications of the rules of the engagement in light of the incidents." But Willey said he didn't anticipate any major rewriting of the rule.

Several thousand Haitians were gathered outside the Port-au-Prince port Tuesday, hailing the arriving Americans. Blue-uniformed Haitian police had held back, watching the milling crowd, but one officer attacked a demonstrator, hitting him on the back of the neck with a club, witnesses said.

At least 500 angry Haitians massed around his body, angry over the death. Some of the protesters blamed the Americans.

"If they came to help us, no one would be dead," said one demonstrator, Melax Dasluvaes. "I don't know why they are here."

The crowd briefly drove off the police by throwing grapefruit-size rocks and pieces of concrete. One policeman, bleeding from the stomach, was taken away to an ambulance. Another was chased by the crowd to a building.

But after reinforcements arrived, police fired tear gas at the crowd and charged, forcing 30 of the protesters to jump into the harbor to escape.

American soldiers loaded their assault rifles but took no action. Three U.S. Army Humvees arriving on the scene briefly separated the police and protesters but then drove off.

Disturbances also broke out near Cite Soleil, a stronghold of Aristide's supporters which is near the airport.

More than 5,000 people massed just 200 yards from a police post in Cite Soleil. Many sang "We are Lavalas!" — the long-repressed popular political movement of Aristide.

Some people hopped onto two U.S. Army personnel carriers, chanting "Cedras has to go! Biambi has to go! Michel Francois has to go!" — references to the military leaders who overthrew Aristide.

About a dozen Haitian policemen fired automatic weapons into the air and several officers dragged the demonstrators off the vehicles. U.S. soldiers again did nothing.

About the same time at the airport, Haitians mobbed another Haitian man, beating, choking and grabbing him. The man pleaded vainly for help from American soldiers 10 yards away.

A priest close to Aristide, the Rev. Jean-Yves Urfe, said the American inaction was "a source of worry."

"It's obvious that the U.S. Army is not protecting the people," he said. "It may be protecting the Haitian army."

But he also credited the U.S. presence with halting the nightly gunfire in pro-Aristide areas by Haitian soldiers and their civilian allies.

Americans displayed some increased tolerance on social issues that don't threaten their jobs or pocketbooks. A record 65 percent of whites said they thought it was all right for blacks and whites to date each other — up from 43 percent in 1987.

Nearly six in 10 said school boards should not be able to fire teachers who are known homosexuals and disagreed with the statement that "AIDS might be God's punishment for immoral sexual behavior." In 1987 neither position got majority support.

The financial discontent is centered in a political group Kohut calls the New Economy Independents — a high-school educated group, heavy on single mothers and service workers, who represent nearly one in five U.S. voters and gave nearly 29 percent of their votes to independent Ross Perot in the last presidential election.

"They are the anxious class. Politically, they're unanchored because neither the Republican or Democratic party has paid off for them," Kohut said. "Their level of information is very low, and they're very volatile."

Other political findings:

• Colin Powell, the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, out-pollied Clinton 51 percent to 41 percent — and that was before Powell helped negotiate the last-minute agreement that averted an invasion of Haiti.

• Both parties have missed opportunities to solidify support among young voters. Four in 10 are independents.

The poll of 4,809 adults over 18 was conducted July 12-27. Its margin of error is plus or minus two to three percentage points.

to be turned on by Tuesday evening.

The Coralville Pizza Hut had to close down until Tuesday evening because their gas was shut off.

"We were preparing for our lunch buffet when we were told to leave the building," said Dave Houston, Pizza Hut employee. "I sent all the employees home." Employees returned at 5 p.m. to work the dinner shift.

Businesses in the City Center

Plaza were also forced to close down.

"Police evacuated the minimal, so we took off and reopened at two," said Neil Hauser, Subway employee. "Business was pretty slow."

Other plaza store owners were inconvenienced by the unexpected evacuation.

"It was frustrating, because we don't make any money when we're closed," said Ann Rearick, EDA Futon employee.

It's a Grind coffee shop employee Debra Summers appreciated the concern the police had for the workers' safety but was also frustrated by the low sales. The business was evacuated at 10:30, when many customers were eating breakfast.

"We bake a lot of pastries. So at the end of the day, we had quite an abundance," Summers said.

Memorial for Hartman planned

A memorial for Iowa baseball player Brent Hartman will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Newman Center.

Hartman drowned June 28 in a raft accident on the Iowa River. Hartman's jersey, No. 39, will be retired and a memorial scholarship fund will be established.

To donate to the scholarship fund, contact Iowa baseball coach Duane Banks.

NHL Negotiators hold 7-hour meeting

NEW YORK (AP) — The NHL and its union resumed bargaining on a new labor agreement Tuesday, with the two sides facing a wide gulf and the season to start in less than two weeks.

"Some serious philosophical differences have to be resolved if we're going to have a deal," said Bob Goodenow, executive director of the NHL Players Association.

The parties met for seven hours at NHL headquarters, the longest of the negotiating sessions so far.

Goodenow would not specify what was discussed, but it is believed the NHLPA had presented the league with a new proposal involving a tax plan.

NBA Portland signs Edwards

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers signed free-agent center James Edwards to a one-year contract Tuesday.

The 38-year-old Edwards, who played for the Los Angeles Lakers last season and is entering his 17th NBA season, is expected to back up Chris Dudley.

Financial terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Last season, the 7-foot-1 Edwards averaged 4.7 points, 1.4 rebounds and 20.8 minutes in 45 games for the Los Angeles Lakers. The Trail Blazers will be Edwards' seventh NBA team.

In 1,112 career games with Indiana, Cleveland, Phoenix, Detroit, the Los Angeles Clippers and Lakers, Edwards has averaged 13.2 points and 5.3 rebounds.

TENNIS Gerulaitis' cause of death determined

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Former tennis star Vitas Gerulaitis was killed when a broken propane heater filled the cottage where he was staying with so much carbon monoxide that investigators had to retreat for gas masks, authorities said Tuesday.

Gerulaitis, 40, was found dead Sunday afternoon. Tests showed "between 72 and 77 percent of his blood was saturated with carbon monoxide — extremely, extremely high levels," said Norma Dill, assistant to the chief medical examiner.

Police said the fumes seeped into the heating and air conditioning system of the cottage, which sits near the beach on an estate in this affluent Long Island community.

The Suffolk County medical examiner found carbon monoxide traces during an autopsy Monday. Investigators then returned to the house and recorded carbon monoxide levels that were described as "off the scale."

Hurley earns starting spot

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

After making the long trip east to Penn State, the Hawkeyes will shift focus to the opposite coast this week when they face Oregon (1-2).

But the travel schedule won't be the only change for Iowa.

Sophomore Brion Hurley and redshirt freshman Tavian Banks were both promoted on the Iowa depth chart for Saturday's game.

Hurley will assume the place kicking duties against the Ducks, replacing junior Todd Romano. Banks is listed with Sedrick Shaw and Ryan Terry as the Hawkeyes' top running backs.

Hurley, who attended Iowa City City High, takes over as the No. 1 place kicker after Romano missed an extra point and a field goal against Penn State Saturday.

Romano's lone field goal attempt, a 30-yarder, hit the left goal post in the second quarter of the 61-21 loss.

"Those things like missing a field goal and hitting the upright, that should have gone through," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "We didn't hit it, that can be corrected."

"Missing an extra point, that's just ridiculous. You should never miss extra points although I've seen some of the pro teams do it too."

For the season, Romano is 11 of 13 on extra points and has made two out of five field goal attempts. His longest successful field goal this year was from 38 yards.

Romano ranks 20th on Iowa's all-time scoring list with 94 points.

Hurley made his only kick of the year, an extra point against Central Michigan, in the Hawkeyes' opener. His last field goal attempt was in the 1993 Alamo Bowl. In that game he accounted for the only Iowa points when he connected on a 42-yard try.

At his weekly press conference Tuesday, Fry said Banks will see more action against Oregon than he has in Iowa's other three games, but he still has a long way to go.

"What you all see right now is Tavian is a tremendous runner," Fry said. "But you have to understand there's a whole lot of other responsibilities when you're in that backfield like blocking, picking up the stunts and blitzes, reading the coverages and he just hasn't played enough."

Fry said Banks did not participate during spring practice and only saw time on the scout team for three or four weeks during the '93 season.

Banks, from Bettendorf, Iowa, is one of Fry's most prized recruits in recent memory. He has scored two touchdowns and gained 106 yards on just nine carries. Banks is a regular on the kickoff return team averaging 24.6 yards per return.

Despite his impressive numbers, Banks said he is content playing behind veteran running backs like Shaw and Terry.

"I don't need to worry too much about playing time because I'm still a freshman. I'm still learning the game" he said. "Sed (Sedrick Shaw) and Ryan (Terry) are a lot more experienced than I am. I don't think people realize that."

UI football coach Hayden Fry announced his first and second teams for Saturday's game against Oregon. The teams are as follows:

AFTER THREE SEASONS

Red Sox dismiss Hobson

Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Butch Hobson, who could not turn around a team whose players admired him, was fired Tuesday as manager of the Boston Red Sox after three losing seasons.

Although rumors of his dismissal circulated for the two seasons, Hobson said he was surprised he was let go.

"I believed in my heart that this day would never happen," Hobson said during a news conference at Fenway Park. "I'm not going to burn any bridges. When new faces come in, they want to bring in new faces, I knew that."

Speculation on Hobson's future intensified when Dan Duquette became general manager last Jan. 27 after serving in that capacity with Montreal. It increased when the Red Sox faltered after getting off to a strong start this year.

Duquette did not name a successor to Hobson. He said he was considering a list of candidates with more experience at the major league level, "an experienced veteran baseball man."

Butch Hobson, 43, reacts during a news conference at Boston's Fenway Park Tuesday, where it was announced that he was fired as manager of the Boston Red Sox after three losing seasons.

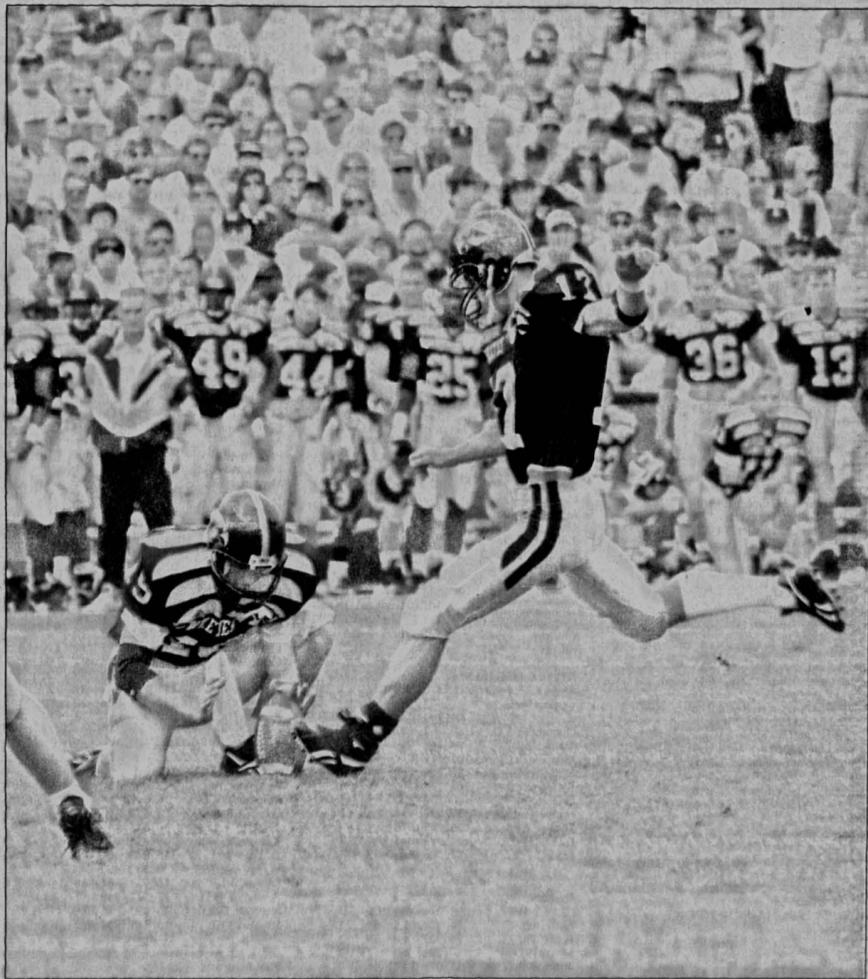

"Butch gave his best efforts for the last three years. Are we holding him responsible for everything with the club? The answer to that is no," Duquette said.

The Red Sox were 54-61 in the strike-shortened 1994 season, 17 games out of first place in the AL East. His record since taking the job in 1992 was 207-232.

Hobson, 43, was not offered another job with the Red Sox. He had flown to Boston from Alabama after receiving a call from Duquette on Monday night.

"I apologize for my attire, I didn't know this was going to happen," said Hobson, dressed in blue jeans, a leather vest and a white crew-neck polo shirt.

Iowa's Fry rips on Beaver Stadium

Iowa coach Hayden Fry was upset about more than just the final score of the Hawkeyes' 61-21 loss to Penn State Saturday.

At his weekly press conference Tuesday, Fry complained about everything from Iowa's cleats to Penn State's scoreboard.

Fry said Iowa had trouble audibling because of the noise from crowd which exceeded 95,000. He added that he thought it was unfair for the Beaver Stadium scoreboard to urge the fans to make noise when the Hawkeyes had the ball.

"(Penn State coach) Joe (Paterno) and I are good friends and I'm not going to write him a letter, but I'm going to tell him, 'Joe, you're a very ethical and nice guy. I'm surprised you let those guys flash on the scoreboard 'Let's have noise' and all this stuff throughout the game whenever we're on offense,'" Fry said.

"The dad-gum scoreboard throughout the game saying, 'Let's have it loud, let's raise the noise level,' and all of this. I'm not griping about the thing. That's just not right."

Fry said he won't allow similar tactics at Iowa home games.

"It's just like I tell my players, I'll jump on them or I'll pull them from the game if I see our guys doing this at Kinnick Stadium to get the crowd to holler when the other team has the ball," Fry said as he flapped his arms up and down to imitate a player encouraging the fans. "I want to win the ballgame fair and square."

Fry also said the slick field played a factor in the loss.

"We counted 12 slip downs where we were in a position to make a tackle," he said. "We checked the shoes at halftime and some of our key people had on molded shoes which don't give you any traction at all. I couldn't believe it."

Iowa had four turnovers and a blocked punt during the game that contributed to the blowout. He added that Iowa didn't catch any breaks from the officials either.

"On the punt block they throw our left guard and throw him to the ground to allow the linebacker to run through and block the punt," Fry said. "If we did that, we'd have a flag just like that."

Fry insists the game was not indicative of what kind of team the Hawkeyes (2-1) are.

"I'm not trying to brag on our football team after we got beat the way we got beat. What I'm telling you is the score is very deceptive in regards to how good

CYCLONE CONTROVERSY

Iowa State's Walden spars with reporter

Chuck Schoffner

AMES, Iowa — Jim Walden's frustration is mounting.

Last week, the Iowa State football coach vented it at disgruntled fans, taking them to task for criticizing his players. Tuesday, he took to a reporter.

Walden, whose team is 0-3, was upset with Des Moines Register sports writer Ron Maly for reporting some of the coach's comments at a Des Moines Cyclone Club meeting on Monday. Those remarks are intended only for fans and aren't meant to be published, he said.

"There are things in the paper today that even our players don't know yet," Walden said. "I gave those things in the strictest confidence."

Walden also said that if reporters insist on attending his booster club luncheons, he'll end his regular Tuesday press conferences.

Maly responded that his paper considered the luncheons to be public gatherings and that he and other Register reporters have been going to Cyclone Club luncheons for years, long before Walden became coach.

"If you don't want it in the paper, you shouldn't say it," Maly said.

"Don't get into a contest with me now," Walden retorted.

"Don't get into a contest with me," Maly said.

Walden didn't like Maly writing that the Cyclones would use more I-formation plays and rely less on their triple-option offense in next Saturday's game with Rice.

"There are things in the paper today that even our players don't know yet. I gave those things in the strictest confidence."

Jim Walden, Iowa State football coach

He also objected to Maly reporting that Artis Garris might be moving from halfback to fullback.

"Why would I want Rice Institute today reading that we're going to run more I-formation?" Walden said. "I've got a cross to bear here when about 90 percent of what we might do is out there on the front page. How many coaches you know would do that willfully?"

Maly said there would have been nothing to stop a Rice graduate in the room from calling Rice coach Ken Hatfield and telling him everything Walden said.

Walden said he didn't like seeing Garris mentioned because he had not met with him yet to discuss a position change.

Iowa is. It's very accurate in regards to how good Penn State is," Fry said.
After whipping Minnesota and Southern Cal, Penn State (3-0) has outscored its three opponents this season 155-38.

"I've seen Nebraska. I've seen Florida. I've seen all the rest of them on film. This is the best college football team I have seen in years and years and they were Saturday against us," Fry said of the Nittany Lions.

"We're not as bad as most people write about us being. We're bad when you put us against Penn State. So was Southern Cal. So was Minnesota."

NFL

Cowboys take time to regroup

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — There was sorrow in Switzerland on Tuesday. Barry Switzer's Dallas Cowboys finally found out what it was like to lose a game. And agonizingly so. "I told the team this is just the start of a long journey and there will be setbacks along the way," Switzer said. "We're just going back to work to be the best team we can be. We've been in deeper holes before."

Switzer suffered his first NFL loss Monday night when Jason Hanson finally got a field goal attempt over the big hands of Leon Lett to give the Detroit Lions a 20-17 overtime victory.

It was the first loss for the Cowboys in 11 games stretching back to Miami's 16-14 victory on Thanksgiving Day.

Dallas defensive end Charles Haley was preaching patience after the defending Super Bowl champions' hard loss on a 44-yard field goal with 27 seconds left in overtime.

"This is a veteran team and we'll bounce back," Haley said. "It is hard to do when you lose in this fashion. Both sides of the ball lost this game. You can't pin the blame on the offense or the defense."

Haley, who led the NFL in sacks, had trouble getting to Lions quarterback Scott Mitchell because of the great blocking by left tackle Lomas Brown.

"The Lions just dictated the tempo of the game to us," Haley said. "Barry Sanders was exceptional. We knew he would get the ball a lot and we still had trouble stopping him."

Sanders rushed 40 times for 194 yards in a duel with NFL rushing leader Emmitt Smith, who pounded out 143 yards on 29 carries.

Lett blocked two field goal attempts by Hanson but couldn't reach the kick that gave both teams 2-1 records.

After reviewing the films, Switzer said "turnovers killed us and Barry Sanders had a great game. Lett kept us in the game with those blocks but we just couldn't make a play in overtime when it counted. Too many mistakes. This is the first time I've lost a game in six years and it hurts."

Switzer was out of coaching for five years after he was fired at Oklahoma before he was hired by Jerry Jones to replace Jimmy Johnson.

The Cowboys have a week off and they need it.

"I would like to think we can execute better than we did," said a disgruntled quarterback Troy Aikman. "Stupid mistakes killed us."

Phoenix gives up Miller

Associated Press

DETROIT — The Phoenix Suns will not match Detroit's offer to restricted free agent Oliver Miller, clearing the way for him to join the Pistons, the teams said Tuesday.

The Pistons signed the 6-foot-9, 300-pound center to an offer sheet on Sept. 6 worth a reported $10 million over four years. The Suns had 15 days to match the offer or let the 24-year-old Miller join the Pistons.

Oliver Miller

Billy McKinney, Pistons vice president of player personnel, said Miller will help the team improve and bring needed youth.

"We feel Oliver Miller will make an excellent addition to our team in 1994-95 and beyond," McKinney said. "He has top-notch ability on the floor, and we admire the dedication he has made as of late to be the best he can be."

Miller, a third-year pro out of Arkansas, played with Phoenix the past two seasons, averaging 26 minutes per game with nine points, 6.9 rebounds and two blocked shots.

But he has struggled with his weight throughout his career, embarking on numerous weight-loss programs.

In August, he started a program that included sessions with a psychologist.

BUFFALO SABRES

Hasek begins holdout

Jimmy Golen

Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Buffalo Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek, last season's runner-up in the most valuable player vote, skipped practice Tuesday and began a holdout.

Sabres executive vice president Gerry Meehan did not return calls seeking comment. Hasek did not return a message left on his answering machine.

Hasek led the NHL last season with a 1.95 goals-against average and a .930 save percentage. He won the Vezina Trophy awarded to the league's best goaltender, and finished second in voting for the Hart Trophy (MVP), which has not been won by a goalie since 1962.

Hasek was paid $400,000 last year and would make about $600,000 this season if he plays out his option. He wants a contract "somewhere between what they're paying Alexander Mogilny (about $2.5 million) and Pat LaFontaine ($4.5 million)," Hasek's agent Rich Winter said.

The Sabres' final offer was about $6 million for three years, Winter said. He thinks the Sabres are trying to underpay Hasek because the market for goalies is soft.

"If Dominik was a forward, they'd say, 'Oh, my goodness, based on the MVP (nomination) we'd have to pay him $3.5 million to $4 million. But he's not a forward, he's a goalie, and goalies are paid less.'"

"But if a goaltender is more valuable than another player, then he should be paid more," Winter said. "It's fairly simple."

Meehan has said the Sabres' policy is not to negotiate with players who aren't in camp. Winter said Hasek will return only if he thinks progress is being made.

"He would come back when the negotiations reach a point at which there is a reasonable prospect of concluding a deal," Winter said.

"He is not going to wait until we dot the i's and cross the t's before he comes back. He wants negotiations to move forward to the extent that at least we're on the same page."

Also Tuesday, the Sabres signed left wing Randy Wood to a one-year contract.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Irish take on Boilermakers without Becton

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame and Coach Lou Holtz will face something new this week — an unbeaten Purdue football team.

Holtz said Monday the Boilermakers have improved so much, in fact, he's willing to make a prophecy right now.

"I don't think there's any doubt this is the best Purdue team I've seen since I've been here, and that's eight years. I will even make a prediction that Purdue will have a winning record in the Big Ten."

"I will go on record to say that," the Irish coach said during his weekly teleconference.

Lee Becton, Notre Dame's leading rusher last season, will be out about four weeks with a strained muscle near his groin, Holtz said.

Becton, who rushed for 1,044 yards last year, has 182 yards and two touchdowns on 35 carries this season. He was injured Saturday during the No. 9-ranked Irish's 21-20 victory at Michigan State.

"Lee Becton is still on crutches,"

Holtz said. "They tell me four weeks. I would be more optimistic, but then again I'm not the trainer. Lee is a quick healer. The only injury he's had since he's been at Notre Dame was a pulled hamstring which kept him out of the Purdue game last year and most of the Stanford game."

"We're not going up there to be competitive. We talked about that before, but we're not talking about that this time."

Jim Colletto, Purdue coach

open field. Even though he didn't have blazing speed, he was always capable of going on a 50- or 60-yard run."

The Irish (2-1) edged Michigan State after trailing 20-7 at halftime. Quarterback Ron Powilus had four passes intercepted but led Notre Dame on two long scoring drives in the second half to win the game.

"The discouraging thing in the last two games is we've had eight turnovers and our opposition's only generated two," Holtz said. "You can't win if you're going to have negative turnovers, which is where we are at the present time. This is one thing we excelled in last year, and perhaps in the last couple years we might have been strong enough to overcome the large number of turnovers we've generated the last two games, but at the present time we really aren't."

Purdue coach Jim Colletto can almost sense the Irish vulnerability, or at least the big opportunity for the Boilermakers.

"We're not going up there to be competitive. We talked about that before, but we're not talking about that this time. We're going up there to play the game and to win the game. That's why we're going," Colletto said of Saturday's game in Notre Dame Stadium.

Mike Alstott and Corey Rogers have rushed for 255 and 253 yards, respectively, in the Boilermakers' victories over Toledo and Ball State.

In those two games, Purdue has scored 100 points.

"The confidence level is getting better, but again there will be a lot of kids going up there to play for the first time, which takes awhile to get used to," Colletto said. "But I think they feel a lot stronger about themselves."

New Music Revue

Various artists
You Got Lucky

If the intent of a tribute album is to honor the tributee, the artists collaborating for You Got Lucky must not have been told.

The album features 12 underground bands covering familiar Tom Petty tunes in a nearly unbearable fashion.

"American Girl" kicks off the tribute, and Everclear's husky, choppy and seemingly pissed-off version is unfortunately the best remake on the album.

It seems that even the timing was off with You Got Lucky. Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers released their own greatest hits album last spring, and that album is a far more respectable retrospective of the impact Petty has had on rock 'n' roll.

When the instrumentation isn't tortured, the lyrical tributes lack quality, and the respectable lyrical tributes are ruined by instrumental chaos.

Chicago's Nectarine turns the memorable 1979 Petty release "Even The Losers" into a thrashing annoying song, while Truck Stop Love's rendition of "Listen To Her Heart" is more of a high-strung grating than a complimentary tribute to Petty's talent.

Petty songs come from the heart and are capable of relating the lyricist's musings. The Petty tribute album falls short, however; it not only lacks heart, it proves disheartening.

Jeff Buckley

Live at Sin-é and Grace

Jeff Buckley has a mere two albums to his credit, both recorded within the last year. Yet each disc resonates with the truth and beauty of a fully matured and divinely wizen singer/songwriter.

Buckley's talent goes far beyond his evocative eight-octave vocal range and spare yet highly emotive guitar playing. Contained in all their raw, sparse glory on the EP Live at Sin-é and expanded upon in his first full-length studio release, Grace, Buckley's talents work a little magic. He captures a sonic moment, creating a fleeting suspension of time in which emotion is removed from itself and put under glass for the world to fondle at its leisure.

From a dream song like "Mojo Pin" to the bleeding razor's edge of "Eternal Life" (both tracks on the live EP that get reworked on Grace), Buckley demonstrates a virtuosity of expression — an almost molecular sensitivity to the moment between silence and sound, which is the misty limbo where most of the emotional epiphanies in his songs can be found.

No clearer example exists of this precarious and extremely rare talent and the enchantment it creates than the 10-minute opus which closes Live at Sin-é, "The Way Young Lovers Do." With a stack of power chords and a shiver-inducing dose of scat singing, Buckley succeeds in simultaneously hypnotizing and hypersensitizing his listeners to the meaning of sound and its images.

This visualization of feeling is the heart and soul of an artist who could turn out to be the best discovery in the last five years, if not one of the most influential artists of the decade. Live at Sin-é is cause enough to celebrate Buckley's emergence as a talent. Grace is at once a coda to it and a revelation unto itself — proof positive that Jeff Buckley has entrenched himself deeply in his own musical psyche, a mind song with limitless possibilities of expression.

Ian Corwin

Stereolab

Mars Audiac Quintet

Britain's Stereolab occupies a unique realm moved equally by a vague sense of nostalgia and a quirky vision of the future. The most striking aspect of the band's sound is its marriage of rhythmic guitars — sometimes boisterous but usually subdued — with a variety of vintage organ backdrops. The heavenly ambience that results is the backbone of Stereolab's sound.

Add a modest brass section, the sweet unassuming voices of Lætitia Sadier and Mary Hansen and a dose of '60s-flavored pop bliss and you get Mars Audiac Quintet.

To suggest that Stereolab is merely excavating music history would be to miss most of its charm. While these spacey pop hymns borrow from the '60s, the band's off-kil-ter interpretations and subtle playfulness make songs like the meandering "Anamorphose" and the enchanting, distant "Des Étoiles Electroniques" truly their own. The simple vocals of Sadier and Hansen add another layer with imaginative pronunciations and lilting harmonies.

Whether it's being cute, sly or strangely beautiful, the music itself explains Stereolab's motives well beyond words.

Paul Ferguson

Neil Young

Sleeps With Angels

Neil Young is an acquired taste, a taste hard to cultivate until some huge calamity or other epiphanous episode rips life apart.

In an eloquent response to the suicide of Nirvana's Kurt Cobain earlier this year, Young has joined again with Crazy Horse on Sleeps With Angels, an album very aware that shit happens, but it shouldn't.

Echoing Young's tremulous voice, a thin and eerie flute keens sadly into "Prime of Life," which speaks in the veiled terms of kings and queens, castles and paper dolls. The title track tells the brooding story about a familiar couple trapped in a tumultuous lifestyle ending in tragedy.

A 14-minute jam session extravaganza, "Change Your Mind" is the slow, rambling heart of the album, but the dry heat coming off two other songs thoroughly diverts attention. Young's weary voice drills through bone in "Blue Eden," in which he sings of "Convincing you, consoling you / Controlling you, destroying you." "Safeway Cart" glowers in the slow burn of urban decay and ghetto dawns.

Angels is a frustrating work, but trying to force meaning from the songs before you should be like trying to force a butterfly out of its cocoon before it's grown.
