Source of Colonial Park fire remains unknown

Fire caused an estimated $250,000 in damage to an Iowa City office building Sunday morning, but investigators have not determined a cause.

No one was injured in the fire, which broke out at the Colonial Park Business Services, 1901 Broadway St., at 10:30 a.m. It took 10 minutes to put out the fire, but firefighters took 2 1/2 hours to ventilate the building.

Hawkeye Investments of Coralville owns Colonial Park, which sustained smoke damage to all three floors, with water damage to the lobby as well as where the fire struck.

Kubby, Bolkcom to wed

Iowa City City Councilor Kubby, a Socialist, and Johnson County Board of Supervisors member Bolkcom, a Democrat, said they want to keep the details top secret.

"Since we're in the public eye, we want to keep it private," Kubby said.

911 records desperate call of missing Texas teen-ager

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A frantic 911 call from a teen-ager being abducted left far more questions than answers.

"They're trying to break down my door! Hurry up!" 16-year-old Lisa Rene told the 911 dispatcher at 8:11 p.m. Saturday.

The dispatcher then heard a scream. When police arrived at 8:13 p.m., she was gone. The sliding door of the apartment was smashed in.

In a recording of the call, Lisa can be heard talking to someone and asking who they are. A man answers, "I'm with the FBI."

A muffled scream is heard seconds later, with the man asking, "Who you on the phone with?" The line then went dead.

Family and friends issued an appeal Monday to her kidnappers. "Tell them to please let Lisa go," said Pearl Rene, her sister.

Clinton rescinds Haiti embargo

Tom Raum
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Citing "a moment of opportunity" for democracy, President Clinton lifted travel, economic and most other U.S. sanctions against Haiti Monday and urged other nations to follow suit.

Clinton told the U.N. General Assembly that lifting the sanctions would hasten rebuilding of the impoverished country and was being done "in the spirit of reconciliation and reconstruction."

He suggested the sanctions were no longer needed, with American and other forces firmly in place in the Caribbean country to enforce the U.S.-brokered agreement to restore exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power by Oct. 15.

Haiti native questions country's future

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

A Haitian participant in the International Writer's Program came to the United States to inform people about Haitian literature, art and culture.

Now most people are asking Lyonel Trouillot, 37, about his view on the political situation in his home country. They no longer hear his ideas about the underlying reasons for Haiti's problems, but Trouillot insists culture and the military dictatorship are related.

He views the Haitian crisis as a result of the tension between the poor and the rich — the lower classes and the bourgeoisie.

"Haiti is a divided country; it is almost a situation of segregation," Trouillot said. "There is no common ground — nobody believes in the national ties."

Trouillot finds the class tension so severe that the idea of Haiti as a nation is inconceivable to him.

"You'll be walking in the streets or driving in your car, and you can hear people saying, 'Here's one of them.' If you are too well-dressed, you see the hate," he said. "I dream of a Haitian nation. But how can you create a

Clinton said some sanctions would remain in force — including a freezing of bank accounts and other assets — against Haiti's military leaders and their supporters.

The U.S. government has a list of 600 people with ties to Haiti's military junta who will remain under the sanctions, officials said.

Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, later told reporters that leaving the sanctions in place on the military leaders and their associates was designed to turn up the heat on them to leave the country by Oct. 15.

She said the United States would seek a quick vote on lifting remaining U.N. trade sanctions on Haiti, even though it may contain a "trigger" that they would not be fully removed until Aristide is back in power.

The United States is encouraging exiled Haitian parliamentarians to return for a key session Wednesday in Port-au-Prince to consider amnesty legislation — an important step in persuading the military leaders to leave. U.S. forces will provide security for the legislators once the session is convened.

Zoiks! Class on comics hits UI

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

"Pow" and "zap" aren't words written by Shakespeare or Keats, but in UI senior Bill Keenan's literature class, comic books are the objects of critical analysis spurring classroom discussion.

Keenan, an avid comic book reader, said he appreciates the UI's willingness to go beyond the mundane by having its first course on contemporary comic book analysis.

"It bothers me that everyone is so shocked that we are studying comic books," Keenan said. "We are getting to experience something that very few universities have the guts to do. Critical analysis of comic books is just not being done in the academia."

Keenan is one of 21 students enrolled in a course taught by Teaching Assistant Matt Pustz, a graduate student in the American Studies program. The class, Popular Arts and Entertainment in the United States: Comic Books in American Culture, analyzes comic

'Circus' atmosphere prevails at Simpson trial

Reporters, retailers camp at courthouse

Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A radio station had promised the start of the O.J. Simpson trial Monday would be a circus. The acrobats and jugglers didn't make it, but the scene outside the courthouse was still, well, a circus.

Hawkers offered Simpson memorabilia, and barkers advocated causes ranging from religion to children's programs at the YMCA.

Media trailers filled a nearby parking lot, and hot dog vendors competed with caterers who delivered meals to some news organizations.

On Sunday, KHS-FM took out a full-page ad in the the Los Angeles Times featuring a picture of acrobats and promising a "media circus provided by Circus Vargas."

The station ended up not hiring the performers.

"It was a last-minute decision. ... You can only be so irreverent. We wanted to be involved, but

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson quietly sang, "A new day has begun ..." before facing some of his potential jurors Monday as the most-watched murder trial in U.S. history got under way.

Jury candidates were identified only by numbers, and the first to be questioned was No. 0032. Simpson wore No. 32 as a college and professional football star, and that didn't go unnoticed.

"I don't know if this is an omen," said Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

After questioning potential jurors about whether serving would be a hardship, Ito excused 112 of the first 219 called.

The judge divided those remaining into groups who said they definitely could serve and

Socialist organization struggles for change

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa International Socialist Organization has offered the UI political awareness with a dash of controversy since the early '80s. The social / political organization is determined to change what it doesn't like through protest and petitioning.

DAY IN THE LIFE

Its most recent event was a demonstration held on the Pentacrest last Tuesday protesting the U.S. occupation of Haiti. The group also recruited the Campaign for Academic Freedom to assist in declaring many UI buildings "policy-free zones."

"From childhood on we're taught to conform," organization senior member and Teaching Assistant Donna Flayhan said. "We tell people they don't have to conform — they can challenge the system."

The organization confronts the system on a daily basis by holding demonstrations and dealing with political issues such as capital punishment, racism and corporate oppression.

International socialism is rooted in Marxism, specifically Russian revolutionary Leon Trotsky's belief that by withholding labor the working class can bring a stop to society.

"Change comes from the struggle from below," Flayhan said. "We look to the working class as a vehicle to change. They have the power to stop everything, even the most powerful — including Ross Perot."

Flayhan, who was a registered Republican when she was 18, said she changed to socialism after buying the Socialist Worker, an International Socialist Organization newspaper. She still believes that the publication is the best way to interest potential members.

"After reading the Socialist Worker, I found that I agreed with everything in it, and I switched from Republican to leftist very quickly," Flayhan said. "This fall we have over 40 active members and a lot more young people — freshmen," she said. "Also, nationally we've doubled in the past year."

Flayhan said she believes the increased membership is due partially to people becoming more critical of their surroundings. One new recruit said she wanted to become more involved with changing society.

"I joined the IISO because it is one of the few groups on campus which actually takes action instead of just sitting around," said UI freshman Susan Demas. "We take the next step and say, 'If things suck, then let's change them.'"

Although membership is constantly increasing, people shy away from the organization's literature and vocal demonstrations, according to Flayhan. She blames the media's one-sided reporting for the public's "lack of awareness."

"The media, although not controlled by the government, relies on official sources and press releases for the base of their stories," she said. "Also, every major media outlet is controlled by 24 corporations."

Besides breaking individual and media barriers, the IISO has had its share of controversy with UI administration.

"Last year after a rally our office was searched by the administration," Flayhan said. "The administration never found anything but didn't denounce the search either."

The UI administration is not supportive of the Iowa International Socialist Organization, she said, but the group continues its struggle to change the fabric of government and society.

"We're people who are organized and committed to change," Flayhan said. "We're not about compromise. We stand up for what we believe in and don't sell out."

Actor Tim Robbins loves Elvis tender

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Robbins has a thing for the King.

Robbins have this unnatural fascination with Elvis," the star of the new movie "Shawshank Redemption" told Entertainment Weekly.

Robbins' wife, actress Susan Sarandon, gave him a Presley tapestry for Father's Day.

"I guess it reminds me of how important perspective is. You know, watch out or you might wind up wearing really silly costumes with Hawaiian leis," he said.

Successful singer also desires to achieve as 'mom'

WAYZATA, Minn. (AP) — Success has fresh meaning for singer Karyn White.

"Being able to have a successful career and have a family — it's very hard," she said. "I want my daughter to know she has a mother."

After her last album, 1991's "Ritual of Love," White married one of her producers, Terry Lewis. The couple have a daughter, Ashley, who turns 2 in November. White, 28, is stepmother to Lewis' two young children.

"I've redefined what success was," said White, whose new album, "Make Him Do Right," comes out next week. "Before, I was career-driven. Not that I'm not anymore. But there's other things beyond career in life. Suc-

'Sundance kid' derides fanatics

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a scene in the movie "Quiz Show" that director Robert Redford knows all too well.

An obnoxious fan demands an autograph, chiding the star, "C'mon, don't be a snob."

Fans "don't care about you. What they care about is, 'Hey, look who I've seen,'" Redford said in the latest Entertainment Weekly.

Redford, star of "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," headed for the hills of Utah in the late 1970s and early '80s when fame became too much for him. But he said he stayed away too long.

"I got too far off the track," he said. "I went four years at a crack without acting or directing. And that was too long for me."

The setback was temporary. Redford, 57, has directed four movies and feels he no longer has to fight the pretty-boy image of his youth.

"Finally, you get old enough where you're not seen that way anymore. New people come in to occupy people's attention, so you no longer hold the same place," Redford said. "It makes it a little better for you."

Boxer steps into the ring for God

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Who would you rather fight, Larry Holmes or the devil?

Former boxer Marvis Frazier chose the latter Sunday, when he was ordained as a Pentecostal minister.

As a heavyweight, the son of former champ Joe Frazier believed God was imploring him to make the change. "But I kept ducking Him," he said.

"I was a little bit nervous beforehand, but I figured preaching couldn't be as hard as facing Larry Holmes or Mike Tyson."

Marvis Frazier, former boxer and son of former champ Joe Frazier

The younger Frazier, who retired from the ring in 1988, said he had been a deacon in the church for 15 years and doesn't think the transition from boxer to full-time clergyman will be difficult.

"I was a little bit nervous beforehand, but I figured preaching couldn't be as hard as facing Larry Holmes or Mike Tyson," Frazier said of the only two men who beat him as a professional. "Then again, now I'm fighting the devil, and those two can't be badder than the devil, can they?"

I.C. NATIVE SPEAKS AT FORUM

Nobel laureate returns home to share new RNA findings

Moira Crowley and Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

Recent research on RNA may lead to the development of pharmaceuticals to treat viruses, including HIV, flu and cold, said Nobel Prize recipient and Iowa City City High School graduate Thomas Cech.

Cech spoke Monday at a forum at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., and then at the Union Ballroom as the 1994 Wawzonek Lecturer, sponsored by the UI chemistry department.

RNA, or ribonucleic acid, is a form of genetic material which has many functions, one of which is protein synthesis.

"What we have found more recently and continue to work on is that some RNA molecules can interact with other compounds in the cells and can change them, rearrange them and promote chemical transformation, which previously had been thought was something only proteins could do," Cech said.

The experiments work well in test tubes, but using RNA in a pharmaceutical capacity remains a hopeful goal, he said.

"There's a growing interest in using ribosomes (RNA biological catalysts) as pharmaceuticals to try to manipulate the flow of genetic information in cells to try to destroy unwanted nucleic acid molecules," Cech said. "They have the ability to identify and bind to other RNA molecules and cells. And after recognizing them they cut them, and cutting an RNA molecule and cell functionally deactivates it."

Cech's research team discovered that RNA can form an active site for the production of genetic material, something previously thought only DNA could do. This discovery merited the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1989.

UI graduate student of chemistry Steve Adah said Cech's research also contradicts the belief that life began with DNA.

"What he has shown in his work is that maybe life started with RNA," Adah said.

In his forum speech, Cech showed a slide of his research team and said he had them to thank for the achievements.

"We're trying to pave the way for things in the next century," he said.

Many students were involved with Cech's work at the University of Colorado at Boulder, where he teaches.

"About 90 percent of the work is done as part of the education process," Cech said. "We often do things in the research laboratory in a certain way because it's better for the education of the people involved. We choose to integrate the students into the process so that they learn how to carry the project through all of the different stages."

Sitting in the audience at the forum was Malcolm Gore, a retired City High chemistry teacher, who once graded tests taken by the Nobel scientist.

"I feel proud and honored," he said. "You don't have a student of that caliber very often, if ever."

When asked if he keeps up with the continuing research of his former student, who graduated from high school in 1966, Gore said he keeps up with as much of it as he can understand.

The forum at the library was sponsored by the Iowa City Area Science Center Inc., a nonprofit organization whose nearly 400-person membership directs an effort to establish a science center for the community.

NEW STOP SIGNS TO BE INSTALLED

City Council announces date for downtown ramp fare boost

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Increases in hourly parking rates at the Dubuque Street parking ramp will not increase until Jan. 1, the Iowa City City Council stressed at Monday night's work session.

The change in parking fees was among several items the Council discussed. New stop signs will be in place around the city where there are now uncontrolled intersections. The point is to eliminate confusion about right of way and to reduce speeds. The signs will be used for a six-month observation period, but if no results are obvious in that time it may be extended.

City Manager Steve Atkins said the city will be presenting outstanding student-citizen awards to area elementary school students starting this month; the first winners will be named today. Atkins said each month a different school will recognize four fifth- and sixth-graders.

Students from these grades were chosen because they usually take on leadership roles in the schools, he said. The program was expanded from choosing one or two students each month because there would often be close calls, Atkins said.

In other business, Councilor Ernie Lehman proposed turning the commercial loading zones downtown into 15-minute meters.

Shoppers often don't notice that the areas are for commercial loading only and often get a ticket. He said that if there are 15-minute meters, the shoppers would be out of the spots sooner and instead of having to mark tires, city employees would only have to check expired meters. This matter was given to Atkins for consideration.

Councilor Karen Kubby also apologized for the defensiveness of a letter she sent to members of one subcommittee of which she's a member.

She said since four committee members have problems with her upcoming marriage to Johnson County Board of Supervisors member Joe Bolkom, she will resign from the committee. The problems are mainly because they think it will cause a conflict of interest, but she said some had problems with her politics.

CAMPBELL, BRANSTAD QUIBBLE OVER COMMERCIAL

Cantankerous campaign ads pique quarrelsome candidates

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Democrat Bonnie Campbell said Gov. Terry Branstad was "whining" Monday when the governor again complained about a commercial she's airing.

In separate news conferences, the two fought over parole policies and the tenor of this year's heated race for governor.

"This ain't beanbag, this is hardball, and he started the game," Campbell said.

Branstad started the latest exchange when he complained bitterly about a commercial Campbell is airing that attacks Branstad's parole policy.

The commercial raises the case of a Council Bluffs man sentenced to 50 years for second-degree murder but was paroled after 28 months. One of his close friends is a major contributor to Branstad, and the ad raises questions about the connection.

"The parole board makes decisions on who is going to be released," Branstad said. "I have never asked the parole board to release anybody early."

Branstad labeled the ad "consumer fraud" and said Campbell should apologize.

"The governor should quit whining," Campbell said.

Campbell said the governor is talking about ending parole but is silent when his own parole board releases a convicted murderer after barely two years in prison.

"Which is it?" she said. "You cannot have it both ways."

She said that while Branstad has complained about the ad, he hasn't questioned whether it is factual.

"If the governor wants to nitpick over whose ads are more truthful, hey, I'm willing to have that debate with him," she said.

FACILITY TO BE COMPLETED BY 1997

Alumni Association awaits move into new building near Hancher

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Due to extremely cramped quarters in the current Alumni Center, construction for a $17,831,000 Center for University Advancement facility will begin in the spring of 1995.

Alan Swanson, the UI Foundation vice president of communications, said the staff is four times larger than originally intended for the current building.

"We're very crowded," he said. "Our board room in recent years has been built into office space, and we've taken over all other spaces."

UI director of Planning Richard Gibson said meeting space has been chewed up.

"They're extremely crowded in the building right now," he said. "They can't have large meetings and operations. The pressure is on the foundation to raise money."

The new building will contain the Alumni Association, the UI Foundation and the UI Alumni Records division. Swanson said the foundation will raise funds for the cost of construction and furnishing, and bonds will be sold by the UI to the foundation. The foundation, in return, will rent the building from the UI.

"We hope to raise funds through good friends of the foundation," he said. "We're giving UI this building, and then we'll lease the building from them."

Gibson said that official UI

Richard Gibson, UI director of Planning functions will also be held in the Center for University Advancement.

Currently, the Alumni Association occupies an area of the Art Building. The UI Museum of Art is expected to expand into the deserted space.

"The Museum of Art is very crowded," Swanson said. "They have many exhibits that they have to rotate because they don't have enough room to display them at the same time."

The new building will stand on part of Hancher Auditorium's parking lot and an unpaved parking area located at the southeast corner of Riverside Drive and Park Road. Gibson said some grass and about 60 parking spaces will be eliminated.

"We're going to replace parking on the east side of Riverside Drive in the spring of 1995," he said. "We purchased the gravel parking lot from St. Thomas More Church."

The new building — designed by Gwathmey, Siegel & Associates Architects from New York; and Brooks, Borg and Skiles Architects-Engineers from Des Moines — has two elements. A four-story main office block will extend along the river, and a public meeting and banquet area will be located in the three-story rotunda.

The Iowa state Board of Regents approved the building design in February 1994. Completion of the Center for University Advancement is set for spring 1997.

For the first time in eight years, a student representative will serve on the College of Liberal Arts Educational Policies Committee.

UI Student Association President John Lohman volunteered to be the new voting student representative at the regular committee meeting Monday. The Educational Policies Committee (EPC) regularly reviews the College of Liberal Arts' procedures and courses.

Lohman wants to reinstitute the Liberal Arts Student Association by the end of October. The group would discuss student problems and concerns with Educational Policies Committee members.

The former Liberal Arts Student Association (LASA) disbanded due to lack of student interest. Lohman said he wants the new association to be directly involved with the EPC.

"The EPC is important enough to have student representation," he said. "I'd like to get the LASA to do this in coordination with myself. I'll ask for volunteers from the student senate."

Associate Dean of the College of Liberal Arts James Lindberg, chairman of the Educational Policies Committee, said he counted on the Liberal Arts Student Association to have delegates in the past.

"The student representatives in the past have made notable contributions, most notably in the plus-and-minus grading system," Lindberg said. "I just want to stress the importance of a student representative in this committee."

UISA Vice President Gretchen Lohman said establishing a student committee will help bring students and faculty together.

"It's a chance for students to hear concerns about the College of Liberal Arts," she said. "It's a body to bring the college together to work on things that are important."

Gretchen Lohman said most of the students interested would probably be freshmen. She said first- and second-year undergraduates tend to be more involved in student government.

Teen-ager arrested in murder of 2 Iowans

TIPTON (AP) — The bodies of two eastern Iowa men were found in a wooded area north of Atalissa, and a 15-year-old youth was charged with two counts of first-degree murder, authorities said Monday.

Cedar County Sheriff Keith Whitlatch said the bodies of Brett Duane Wood, 26, and his uncle William Asa Isabel, 49, both of rural Atalissa, were found Sunday and that both had been shot about 5:30 p.m. that day.

Authorities arrested Robert Lee Barker, 15, who was being held in the Lee County Juvenile Detention Center. Barker, a freshman at Bennett High School, is the son of Terry Gaskin of rural New Liberty, Whitlatch said.

The deaths are being investigated by the sheriff's department, the Iowa state Patrol and the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation.

The men were hunting when they came upon a group of three youths, including Barker, who were apparently hunting on Isabel's property without his permission, family members said.

Whitlatch said he knew the victims and that he was led to the bodies by someone whom he didn't identify.

Authorities said it was the first double-homicide in the county's history.

Sexual assault trial begins for wrestling coach

SPIRIT LAKE, Iowa (AP) — A high-school wrestling coach accused of sexually assaulting the team's 17-year-old manager goes on trial today in Dickinson County.

Gary Bergman, wrestling coach at Graettinger, is charged with lascivious conduct with a minor and assault with intent to commit sexual abuse.

Dickinson County officials allege Bergman assaulted the teenage girl on the team bus while the wrestlers were inside a restaurant. The team was in Spirit Lake for a junior varsity meet.

Bergman has taught art in the Graettinger school district and is also the high-school baseball coach.

CHILDREN PLACED IN FOSTER CARE

Baby sitter stranded with kids as parents take 16-day vacation

Michael Haddigan
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — A couple who left four children with an eighth-grade baby sitter for a three-day trip that stretched past two weeks turned up Monday and were charged with child endangerment.

Bonnie Railing and James Fignar offered no public explanation for their 16-day absence, but Fignar's employer said he was working in New Jersey until Saturday installing floor coverings.

The couple were arrested when they appeared at a custody hearing for the children, who ranged in age from 2 to 10.

The sitter, 14-year-old Angela Morris, tried to maintain the household, enlisting the help of friends, skipping school and keeping the secret from her own parents and police, hoping to keep the children out of foster homes.

"In the end, that's what happened anyway," she said.

The gas had been shut off at the house, so Morris improvised to feed and bathe the youngsters, at one point heating bath water in an electric coffee maker.

Police acting on an anonymous tip came to the house Friday and removed the children.

Railing and Fignar were arraigned Monday on four counts each of endangering the welfare of a child. Each count carries five years in jail.

Fignar also was charged with failing to appear at a hearing earlier this year on a 1993 domestic violence charge, police said.

Family Court Judge Joseph Jaffe ruled Monday the children must remain in foster care at least until another hearing Oct. 5, said Mark Cancilla, a lawyer representing the children.

The couple learned about the hearing, which was closed, from the children's grandmother, who said she tried to have the children turned over to her last week.

The couple had no comment as they left the custody hearing. The children attended, and the oldest was crying, said their grandmother, Dorothy Brooks.

Associated Press

Baby sitter Angela Morris, 14, center, poses with two of her friends, Ronald Meade, 18, left, and Roxanne Magrino, 14, in Pittsburgh Friday. Morris persuaded Meade, Magrino and two other teens to help baby-sit four children for more than two weeks after the children's parents left for what was to be a three-day trip to New Jersey.

"The kids are obviously quite traumatized after having been removed from their home," Cancilla said.

The baby sitter said the couple left their two children, ages 2 and 3, and Railing's two older children, ages 9 and 10, in her care Sept. 7 with the promise they'd return in three days. Her payment was to be $75.

"But it ended up being extended every other day until it ended up being 16 days," Morris said.

Last week, Brooks had asked police to release the children to her care but was turned down. She said she didn't realize how long the parents had been away or how young the baby sitter was.

Fignar worked until Saturday installing floor coverings at a Burlington Coat Factory store being built in Lawrenceville, N.J., according to Ric Bramble, a Burlington spokesman. Railing said the job took longer than expected, and Fignar wouldn't be paid until the job was completed, Brooks said.

The couple initially called twice from New Jersey and left a motel phone number, but the motel would not accept the sitter's collect calls.

Police, who described the neighborhood as a well-kept working-class area, said the house was filthy when they removed the children.

CREATIVE TACTICS EMPLOYED

Kennedy's hold on Senate seat challenged by eager newcomer

Robert W. Trott
Associated Press

BOSTON — Sen. Edward Kennedy is finding himself doing some unusual things this campaign — hanging out with Aerosmith, going negative and running neck and neck with a Republican.

Kennedy's opponent is Mitt Romney, an energetic, clean-cut millionaire who is convinced — and has convinced other Republicans — that 1994 is the year Kennedy comes home from Washington for good.

"After many years there are some serious questions being raised, indeed for the first time among his own supporters, about whether it would be best for him to continue or for him to be replaced," said Paul Watanabe, political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Both candidates, for different reasons, are banking on a key premise: Voters know who Kennedy is and what he has done. Kennedy hopes they know him as a powerful senator who has fought for education, health care, job training, child care and other issues, and repeatedly steered federal dollars to Massachusetts.

"He says longevity — meaning experience — is not a vice but a virtue," Watanabe said. "The prime virtue attached to that is clout."

But the picture painted by Romney, son of former Michigan Gov. George Romney, is of an old, out-of-touch liberal politician who has been in the Senate far too long, pushing massive government programs that exacerbate problems rather than solve them.

"He's just too associated with the old, discredited liberalism," said Todd Domke, a Republican consultant.

Romney spent last Thursday chatting up Republican fund-raisers in Washington. Nevertheless, to protect his "outsider" image, he says he doesn't want Republican bigwigs coming to Massachusetts to campaign.

"This race will be between Mitt Romney and Ted Kennedy, and it'll be run from Boston to Springfield," said Gary Koops, spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

Kennedy, though, has relied on several big names. Unlike many Democrats around the nation, he has not been loathe to embrace the Clintons.

Hillary Rodham Clinton attended a fund-raiser for the senator in Boston on Friday, and the president is set to attend a gathering this week at Kennedy's home in Virginia.

Kennedy also has made an effort to woo younger voters who haven't been touched by the Kennedy mystique, campaigning with celebrities like actor Alec Baldwin and nephew John F. Kennedy Jr.

Earlier this month, the Boston hard rock group Aerosmith performed at a Kennedy fund-raiser.

CBS BIGWIGS TESTIFY ON HIRING PRACTICES

Labor commission probes 'glass ceiling'

Lisa Genasci
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Women make up about half the work force, yet less than 5 percent hold positions in senior management of U.S. corporations.

For minorities the statistics are even grimmer. Black, Asian and Hispanic men and women occupy only 1 percent of top corporate jobs.

Those are discrepancies the Labor Department's Glass Ceiling Commission is attempting to address. The term "glass ceiling" refers to unseen barriers to the advancement of women and minorities in the corporate world.

The commission held its fifth and final hearing Monday with testimony from Lawrence Tisch, chief executive of CBS Inc.; Connie Chung, co-anchor of the CBS network's evening news; corporate and community leaders; and educators and others.

It will report to Congress on its findings and recommendations in January.

"In the past 30 years since Congress passed the Civil Rights Act, the United States has made progress in eradicating many of the most overt forms of bias on the job," Secretary of Labor Robert Reich said in his opening remarks. "But we've still got a long way to go."

Speaking before the commission, Tisch said CBS had worked hard to promote the concept within the network that a person should be judged on ability alone. Consequently, women officers and managers represent almost 40 percent of the work

Congress to cap lobbyists' lavish functions

Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A sweeping package of reforms banning most gifts to members of Congress and imposing strict new reporting requirements on lobbyists won agreement Monday from House and Senate negotiators.

The bill appeared to be on a fast track to passage, with action in the House scheduled for today. The Senate is expected to act soon afterward, and supporters said they anticipated no major opposition.

"This makes a historic change," said Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, the bill's chief House sponsor. "These limits have never existed before."

At the core of the bill is a requirement that all professional lobbyists — those whose business is to influence government policy — register and disclose who they are working for, how much they are paid and the issues on which they are lobbying.

It would cover for the first time not only the more traditional approach of lobbying in person, but the growing practice of "grassroots" lobbying — generating contacts with Congress by mail, telephone, fax, computer and advertising.

The bill is designed to close loopholes that render the current lobby registration law, in effect since 1947, almost meaningless. Of the more than 10,000 lobbyists estimated to work in Washington, fewer than half are registered under that law. Those who do register seldom report meaningful details about their activities.

FATHER VINDICATED

Florida girl swapped at birth fibs about abuse

Pat Leisner
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Kimberly Mays, the teen who was switched at birth, accused the man who raised her of sexually abusing her for years then admitted she made it all up, authorities said Monday.

The 15-year-old could face a charge of filing a false police report against Robert Mays, said Phil Ramer, head of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement's Tampa office, which investigated the case.

"She 'needs professional help,'" Ramer said, explaining that officials have no way of forcing her to get counseling.

Kimberly has spent nearly six years in the middle of a custody battle between Mays, who had raised her since her birth, and Regina and Ernest Twigg, her biological parents.

Kimberly once testified tearfully how she pleaded with Mays not to let the Twiggs take her away from him. She told a judge she wanted any ties with the Twiggs severed and finally got her wish in August 1993.

Seven months later, she ran away from Mays' home to a shelter, and last spring she moved in with the Twiggs in Sebring.

On Sept. 12, the state law enforcement agency learned from the Sebring state attorney's office about allegations by Kimberly that Mays had sexually abused her from age 7 until this past June. Mays had visitation rights with Kimberly after she moved in with the Twiggs.

Ramer said he did not know when the allegations were made.

State investigators interviewed Kimberly a number of times and began detecting inconsistencies. She admitted she lied Friday, he said.

He said his agency made the case public Monday because news reports had surfaced that Mays was under investigation.

Mays cooperated in the investigation, Ramer said. He described Mays as relieved about the probe's outcome but worried about Kimberly.

"He feels she needs help," Ramer said at a news conference. "He is quite frankly concerned about her well-being. He is more concerned about her than anything else."

Ramer refused to discuss details, saying a report was being turned over to the state attorney's office for possible action.

Judy Lee, a legal assistant for Mays' attorney, said Mays, of Sarasota, had no comment.

Kimberly could not be reached Monday for comment; the Twiggs' phone number is unpublished.

WORLD LEADERS ASSEMBLE

Yeltsin takes spotlight at U.N.

Louis Meixler
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Russian President Boris Yeltsin told world leaders Monday they must accept Russia as a "great power" and called for a treaty on ending the production of nuclear weapons material.

Yeltsin said he would welcome U.N. involvement in former Soviet states beset by civil strife but warned that "the main peace-keeping burden in the territory of the former Soviet Union lies upon the Russian Federation."

The Russian leader's speech was part of the three-week U.N. general debate, the largest annual gathering of world leaders. About 180 diplomats will speak, including 47 heads of government.

Security was extremely tight, with police blocking off the street in front of the building and U.N. guards closing access to two floors.

In an earlier speech, President Clinton praised the cooperation between the United States and Russia and said the two nations were working to reduce their nuclear arsenals.

Clinton also announced the

Associated Press

Russian President Boris Yeltsin, left, pays a visit to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali Monday before addressing the 49th session of the U.N. General Assembly.

United States was lifting all sanctions against Haiti — except those that would help its military rulers — and indicated he would support the lifting of the U.N. economic embargo.

Yeltsin's plan to limit the spread of nuclear weapons included signing a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty by 1996, extending the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, regulating weapons sales, initiating a treaty on nuclear security and holding a conference on converting military factories to civilian use.

"There is an urgent need for all nuclear states to participate in the process of reduction and limitation of nuclear weapons," Yeltsin said.

The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Madeleine Albright, called Yeltsin's proposals "creative and intriguing" but said the United States would have to study them.

"The fact that we have gone together on this path and the fact that President Yeltsin is bringing a package here, I think, is very important," she said.

Yeltsin said the treaty on nuclear security and stability should be signed by the world's five major nuclear powers — the United States, Russia, the United Kingdom, France and China.

He also called for ending the production of nuclear materials and nuclear munitions.

Yeltsin urged nations to be more active in U.N. peacekeeping and said Russia was prepared to designate troops for a standby U.N. force.

HEALTH INSURANCE DEDUCTION DROPPED

Tax cut for self-employed expired

Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Several million self-employed Americans may be in for a rude surprise when they file their taxes next year. They will no longer be able to deduct a penny of the money they pay for health insurance.

The 25 percent tax deduction for the self-employed expired at the end of 1993. Lawmakers in both parties had expected to restore it and provide an even more generous break this year as part of health reform.

But the tax deduction for the self-employed has been buried for now in the wreckage of the health-reform bills.

"It's kind of a shock," said Rebecca Anderson, a legislative analyst for the National Association for the Self-Employed. "It was being held hostage to the health-care debate. Now we're down to the wire and ... everyone is saying it's not going to happen."

"It's a crime," said John Motley, vice president for government affairs of the National Federation of Independent Business. "Not only is there no health-care reform, but we lost even the very meager incentive that small, self-employed people had to purchase health insurance."

Corporations can deduct 100 percent of the costs of providing insurance for their employees.

Many health-reform bills — including President Clinton's and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole's — proposed giving the self-employed a 100 percent tax deduction. It was trimmed to 80 percent in a House Democratic leaders' plan and 50 percent in Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's proposal.

The 25 percent tax deduction, which applied to insurance bought by the self-employed for themselves, spouses and dependents, cost the Treasury about $500 million a year. Expanding it to 100 percent would cost $2.5 billion a year.

More than 12 million Americans are self-employed for part or all of their livelihood, and almost 3 million have no health insurance, according to the Employee Benefit Research Institute.

A study conducted last year by the National Association for the Self-Employed predicted that 400,000 more self-employed would go without insurance if they lost the 25 percent tax deduction.

"This is health care in reverse if they don't reinstate this provision," said Anderson.

Several lawmakers, including Reps. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, and Jan Meyers, R-Kan., are pushing bills to revive the 25 percent tax deduction.

The tax break for the self-employed has expired in the past. It took Congress until August 1993 to restore it after it expired at the end of 1992.

Motley said former House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., "always tried to use it as a trump card to keep us in line."

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., the current Ways and Means chairman, wants to restore the 25 percent deduction, but the timing is up in the air, said spokeswoman Ellen Dadisman.

300 DIE IN OUTBREAK

Indian industrial city infested by plague

Ashok Sharma
Associated Press

SURAT, India — Doctors and health officials battling India's pneumonic plague outbreak recorded 56 new cases in Surat on Monday and reported an outbreak of 31 cases in the neighboring state of Maharashtra.

Soldiers searched shantytowns in Surat for new victims and guarded the hospital to stop infectious patients from fleeing the city. Authorities listed no plague deaths in the industrial city for the first time in six days.

Since the plague was reported in Surat last Tuesday, at least 51 people have died, more than 450 have been hospitalized and an estimated 400,000 have fled the city. Unofficial death tolls run as high as 300.

South of Surat, officials in Maharashtra state reported 31 cases of bubonic plague — a less deadly form of the disease that ravaged 14th century Europe and Asia as "the Black Death."

"This development makes us worried," Ramanand Tewari, Maharashtra's health secretary, said of the outbreak in the city of Beed. An outbreak of bubonic plague in villages around Beed last month infected 93 people but caused no deaths.

In Surat, a port in western Gujarat state, soldiers in blue-gray fatigues accompanied doctors into slums, where most plague cases were reported. The troops helped search for plague sufferers being kept home by their families and watched for looting of medicine being distributed by health officials.

City workers cleaned up piles of garbage and dead cows and rats left in the slums by monsoon floods.

The plague is spread by fleas that have bitten infected animals and by bacteria ejected into the air by the coughing of infected people.

Soldiers with automatic weapons stood guard at the Civil Hospital to keep patients from leaving before being cured by antibiotics. At least 60 people fled before the federal government sent in 800 soldiers Sunday.

Doctors described the fugitive patients as "time bombs" who could quickly spread the disease from one mud hut to another in the many shantytowns on the banks of the filthy Tapi River.

With nearly one-fifth of the population having fled the city, Indian officials fear the plague may be spread to other regions. A few patients with pneumonic plague symptoms were being examined in hospitals in Maharashtra state and in New Delhi, the federal capital.

Although plague can be cured with antibiotics, the 600 million people who live in rural India often have little access to doctors or medicine, and many die of curable diseases.

Officials declared Surat a disaster zone and rushed in millions of capsules of antibiotics.

"No deaths in 24 hours, that is since 5 p.m. on Sunday until 5 p.m. Monday," said Kundan Lal, a city administrator.

But Lal also told the Associated Press that two patients from neighboring villages died at the hospital Sunday. They were the first plague victims from outside the city.

In a dispute at Civil Hospital, many doctors and nurses reportedly staged a brief strike Sunday night because of a clash with city officials over the building's cleanliness.

The city government also reportedly suspended at least six hospital employees Sunday because they refused to report to work since the plague broke out.

India's first plague outbreak in 30 years is raising concern around the world. U.S. officials are monitoring airports to watch for passengers arriving with plague. In Canada, airline crews refused to unload an Air India flight Saturday. Indians arriving on flights in Hong Kong also are being monitored.

'Whining' about life in the state of Iowa

One of my friends says that she likes my column because I don't whine about anything. I have since had a fight with and am not speaking to this friend, so just for her I am devoting this column exclusively to complaints about life in Iowa. You know who you are.

much more sense. If you are a cashier, take note. Next time you have the misfortune of getting me in line, my hand may be in your face.

2. Cars at lights and stop signs. I do not have a car, so I only know the pedestrian side of things. Here is how I see it. There are three white lines on the street. One of them, the thick one, marks where the cars should stop. Then there are two other lines which are thinner and parallel. These supposedly delineate where pedestrians should walk. Guess where the cars stop? Not at the thick line - we're lucky if their back tires are on that.

These cars get up as close to the intersection as they can, leaving the pedestrians no room to walk without risking a brush with the cars which race by perpendicular to the stopped cars. Once, I walked up to a car that was smack on top of the pedestrian walkway and told the driver and his passenger what those white lines were for. He thanked me for telling him. I knew I was not in New York. But really, it is too much work to tell all the drivers about this rule of the road. Hopefully they will all read this, or perhaps you can tell them, too. I hope you can help spread the word. I am a busy woman.

3. The English-Philosophy Building. What is the deal with this building? No buses stop in front of it, the windows don't open, there are no "lefty" desks anywhere, there are only three bathroom stalls per floor and the stairways in the building are actually large, gaping spaces interrupted by slats. I fear that on a careless day, as I am hurrying up those "stairs," I will slip through one of those vats of space and splatter on top of a book sale table below. The other annoying thing about the English-Philosophy

Building is the heavy doors. I am a pretty strong person, and even for me it takes a lot of effort to get inside that building. I get the feeling that they do not really want us in there. For a building that houses the humanities, it sure seems pretty inhumane in there.

4. Signs and names of landmarks. These are not annoying as much as they are amusing. I remember when I first came here and noticed those orange signs in front of every building. I feel like I am watching "Electric Company" when I see these signs. In most places where I have lived, the name of a building is inscribed on the building. Why do buildings each get their own signs here? Is it because there is so much space? Or is this the city where little kids come to learn how to read, a living version of "Sesame Street"? The top three most amusing orange signs in Iowa City read "Klotz Tennis Courts" (Have you ever heard of a klutz? It is, basically, someone who can't play tennis.); "Halsey Hall" (too cute); and, in first place, "Clapp Recital Hall." While I realize that these are the names of famous, generous people, I can't help but think that they, too, would find this amusing.

I hope that my friend who doesn't like whining columns gets a good yuck out of this one, and that I have recruited a few believers who will help me promote pedestrian-friendly car stopping and correct change etiquette. As for the signs and the English-Philosophy Building, I guess there is nothing we can do about those. Just be careful going up the stairs.

PROFESSOR INTEREST

Lecture hall nightmare

While most of the students at the UI look up to their professors as mentors - some of which are regarded almost as heroes - there is a strange paradox at work. Oftentimes, as the majority of the student body here has probably been witness to, professors and Teaching Assistants have been found complaining about the UI's policies or lightly abashing their benefactors and their salaries. Although all teachers are totally justified in such claims, what they aren't realizing is the harm they may be causing their students who hold them in a heroic light.

To hear from highly respected professors that they resent the teaching policies at this university or don't enjoy teaching in crowded lecture halls and speaking on such controversial issues at such a liberal college almost betrays the enormous reverence most students hold for well-liked professors.

While everyone would most likely be interested in seeing more rewards for the teaching staff, lecture halls are not the place for oral rallies.

Most students find the "lecture hall experience" the most dynamic way to learn. While books hold incredible history, an articulate interpretation of great literature, Greek tragedy or biblical literature by a renowned professor largely impacts many students' learning experiences. A heartfelt lecture by a totally immersed professor imprints on students' minds a sort of passion for the subject, an unforgettable monologue that in the long run is often hard to erase from the memory.

However, if such lectures are given beginning with university policy complaints that the students may or may not be interested in, some of the impact is lost in the process - along with some of the previous respect for the professor and interest in the class.

While this may seem like a mundane topic, it's more than a serious issue. If each one of the students here thought about how many times they have been subject to such grievances, many of them may remember various instances.

While it is sometimes humorous to lighten the intellectual mood with anecdotes about the system, it also detracts from the subject matter and leaves many students focused on the ills of the system rather than the issue at hand. It's quite distracting to hear a lecture that consists of so much anger at the system. Students at the UI are not here to witness retaliation for the poor compensation the teachers receive. While everyone would most likely be interested in seeing more rewards for the teaching staff, lecture halls are not the place for oral rallies.

Many students are slightly frustrated when part of their lecture time is taken up with accusations against the university and its components. Everyone at the UI is interested in either furthering their own education or being an instrument in furthering someone else's. The UI's foremost focus should be on learning; these malicious statements against the system in lectures are detracting from its purpose.

Statistics show cruelty in greyhound industry

To the Editor:
In the clamor to extract profits from the placing of slot machines at the Waterloo Greyhound Park, one important fact has been overlooked: Dog racing for profit is a vulgar, barbaric and horribly cruel business. And it is fast becoming more and more unpopular. (Note the decline in profits.)

According to statistics gathered by the Greyhound Protection League, 35,000 to 40,000 greyhounds are killed each year. Some are killed because they fail to win races at the tracks. The others are greyhound puppies that are slow of foot; many of the puppies in each litter are killed because they display little talent for racing. Since the standard method of euthanasia - an injection of sodium pentobarbital - costs approximately $15 each, the most popular method of killing unwanted greyhounds is a bullet to the head or the heart. In Arizona, it has become a common practice for breeders and owners of unwanted greyhounds to release dogs with their muzzles left on into the desert to die. Mass graves containing the lifeless bodies of former racers have been unearthed in many parts of the United States where tracks operate. Furthermore, only 20 percent of all former racers are adopted into homes across America; there simply are not enough homes for all of the dogs.

For many greyhounds, the research labs are their final destination, and their owner makes one final profit on these tragic souls.

To those greyhounds who must die each year because they find themselves part of the dog racing industry, a fitting tribute by Edgar Allan Poe is:

*Let the burial rite begin
The funeral song be sung
A dirge for them, the doubly dead
In that they died so young.*

Campbell advertisement provides faulty facts

To the Editor:
Bonnie Campbell's latest television commercial tells Iowans that Governor Branstad has given them a $400 million deficit. With all due respect to Attorney General Campbell, this is not just a distortion, it is a lie.

Iowa does not have a deficit. Instead, we have a balanced budget with a substantial surplus which will amount to nearly $1 billion in four years. Gov. Branstad fought Campbell's Democratic friends in the Legislature every step of the way to reform spending and make budget cuts.

Iowa's state government is in excellent fiscal shape. We have been rated as one of the best managed states in the nation. We were even rated as one of only 15 states in the nation which can afford to cut taxes (State Budget & Tax News, Aug. 24, 1994).

Gov. Branstad came into office when Iowa's system of budgeting technically had a deficit. Today, Iowa has a legitimate surplus and even has room to cut taxes.

The governor and the Republican-controlled House of Representatives deserve the credit for adhering to strict spending controls and getting our budget on track.

The facts surrounding Iowa's budget is that Gov. Branstad has provided the leadership to do what is right and get state spending in line. If it were not for Terry Branstad, we'd still have a deficit. Thank-you, Gov. Branstad!

HEALTH CARE REFORM

CHELSEA CAIN

National health care and my friend Tom

I'd like to tell you about my friend Tom.

You probably know someone like him. He was the kind of person who always had a book to lend you or a bottle of your favorite beer. He was a free spirit. He wrote short stories. He loved his dog. He drove an old blue pickup truck and could make you laugh until your sides got sore just by looking at you. Once, after reading about the plight of the education system in Eskimo villages, he packed everything he owned in his van and moved to Alaska, where he taught school for five years.

Tom had one flaw, though. It was a tiny congenital heart defect that made it impossible for him to afford health insurance. Last December, the heart defect developed into a leaky heart valve - a malady that is not that difficult to correct with surgery if one happens to have two or three hundred thousand dollars laying around. Tom did not. But he had faith in the system, and he filled out all the paperwork and waited in all the lines and talked to all the right bureaucrats to facilitate state funding for the operation.

The whole process took six weeks, and as every day rolled by, Tom got weaker. The operation was finally approved on a Friday. Tom's girlfriend found him dead two days later.

My friend Tom died last year because he didn't have enough money to buy his life. And yet, amid the fervor of promises for "health care for all Americans," it seemed some meaning was to come from the meaningless, some satisfaction from the rage.

Well, friends, I have just come from Tom's grave, and I bring bad news from the cemetery.

National health care is being buried, and the gravediggers are your public representatives.

The 70 percent of Americans who favored national health care in the last poll have been asked (told) to abandon the notion this year because Congress is tired and partisan and anxious to get back home to campaign for the fall elections. (Can you remember the last time 70 percent of Americans favored anything?)

Meanwhile, the wound continues to hemorrhage. More Americans are uninsured now than have been since before Medicare and Medicaid were passed in 1965. Health policy experts say that 48 million to 58 million people go without any insurance during any given year, and 10 million more are covered by insurance that does not even deserve to be called skimpy.

Sadly, the only people who know where the bandages are have stopped talking. National attention, once firmly fixed on universal coverage, has turned elsewhere. Live footage of live anchor men in front of live tanks in Haiti makes for better TV than a bunch of sick, poor people. (Dan Rather wears khakis!)

The Senate's liberal Democrats are happy to let the issue rest rather than accept Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's recommendation of a very scaled-down package, and the Senate's conservatives are already busily decorating for the wake. Still more representatives seem to be content to slide into election season without having to vote on a politically decisive issue. This all leaves us taxpayers with - surprise! - absolute diddle. Why, it almost makes you think our pious politicians actually care more about politics than people.

Even Clinton seems to have admitted defeat on this one for now. (Then again, maybe he's just giving in out of habit.)

I have to admit I expected more from Hillary, and I am still hoping that her silence is merely a cover and she is busily penning a top-secret reform bill she and a team of elite troops will present to the public when she storms Capitol Hill next week. (She shouldn't have to take any prisoners, but if she does, I hope she takes Dole.)

But what is most frightening about this sudden shift in agenda is not how quickly promises were abandoned. It is not even that the issue has been buried successfully before. (Does anybody remember that Ted Kennedy ran on a health-care platform in 1980?) It is not that the needs of human beings are being crushed under the weight of political deal-making. Nor is it the fact that we are so afraid in this country of change that we prefer to drown in the status quo.

What is most frightening is that even as you read this there is a sick kid out there somewhere whose parents can't afford to take them to the doctor. And that kid is getting sicker every day while elected officials worry about party politics and fund-raisers and who is or is not going to be in the White House in 1996.

My friend Tom, near the end, said that every night he went to bed, he fell asleep with the fear that he would never wake up again. Because of this, he lived each day to the fullest so that each night he could fall asleep with the knowledge that he had been well and done good. For the those 48 million to 58 million Americans, the Clinton administration and Congress have let too many precious days slip past without action.

Let's not let any more.

Chelsea Cain's column appears alternate Tuesdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Why do you think U.S. News and World Report article depicted sex on the UI campus the way it did?

Kurt Hanna, UI junior and geography / environmental studies major

"Because it's accurate. Morals of the people who come to the campus are pre-established, and the freer environment transcends into drinking and sex."

Mark Saint-Andre, UI graduate student studying social work

"Maybe because Iowa is portrayed as a blank slate in the U.S. If they can portray the UI campus as a debauchery zone, then the rest of the U.S. must be worse."

Theresa Hejl, UI senior and psychology major

"I don't understand how they got their research. It sounds like people here are very blasé about sex."

Lisa Adams, UI graduate student studying electrical engineering

"I'd like to know who they talked to. None of my friends act like the type of people portrayed. I just don't see that when I'm here."

books as a popular culture medium. The class studies every kind of comic book — from superheroes to alternative comics — to fit any type of interest. It meets Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 10:30 a.m. in room 168 of Van Allen Hall. Pustz said the course has three objectives: to develop a theory for the analysis of comic books; to illustrate American cultural history as portrayed through a popular culture medium; and to analyze contemporary comic book culture, including motifs in the books, characterization, art and form.

He pushes students to expand their notions of what comic books are and what function the texts serve in American culture. Pustz said learning how to analytically read the books may explain why people read them and how readers react to depictions within the comic books.

"I teach the students to be able to think critically about popular culture and the things in pop culture we generally take for granted," he said. "There are messages put into these texts and meanings that people who read the texts get out of them. By studying these meanings, we can learn about what we as a culture feel are important."

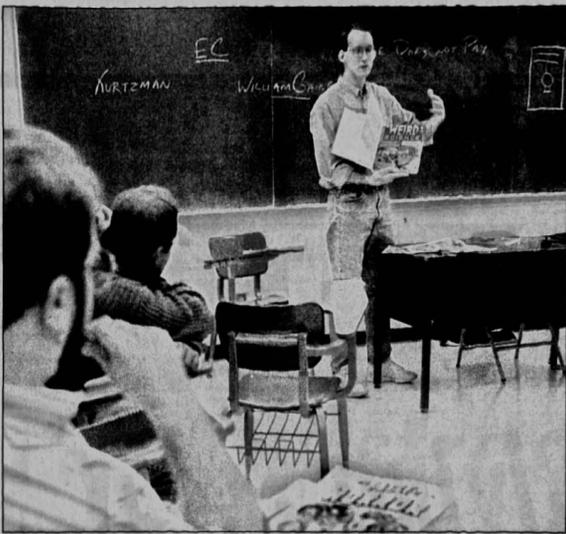

Of the 21 students in the class, 18 are men and three are women. The gender split reflects the male-dominated trend in comic book consumers, Pustz said.

UI junior Angela Sharp said she never had an interest in comic books because she grew up thinking that boys always read them. "She was afraid to take the class but decided to challenge herself and break away from the monotony of regular history-text reading."

"The class surprised me because I didn't think comic books were that important as a form of media," Sharp said. "But they reflect society as much as a novel would. Comic books are different from reading textbooks because comics help to define a certain group of people who read them and why."

She said comics are easier to read than novels because seeing the pictures with the words helps the reader become aware of hidden cultural meanings.

The only thing Sharp found frustrating about the class was having to purchase a comic book from a local shop. She said she couldn't "just jump in and start reading from

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Matt Pustz, instructor of Popular Arts and Entertainment in the United States: Comic Books in American Culture, lectures on the cultural significance of comic books. "I teach the students to be able to think critically about popular culture and the things in pop culture we generally take for granted," he said.

any book" because "you have to find a zero issue that might explain the history of a character."

Sharp is one of about 10 students who had little experience with comic books before enrolling in the class, while the other half of the students read comics regularly.

Keenan said he likes having the opportunity to hear how other readers may interpret a text.

"Reading comic books are such a solitary activity," Keenan said. "But you get to hear about other readers' opinions expressed in class. The interests of those in the class may be different from your own, so it's really interesting to know what others think about them."

Pustz wants his students to understand that comic books are a cultural medium as important as television, radio, newspapers and magazines.

"Comic books are one way we can tell culture reflects something about us," he said. "These texts — like novels, movies and any other form of pop-cultural mediums — are storytellers. Therefore, ignoring comic books or any other branch of the story-telling experience would be a mistake."

UI senior Dave Haddy said he has read comics since he was 6 years old. He decided to take Pustz's class because he was curious to see how an instructor would try to teach the course.

"When you think of comics, most people associate them as guys running around in spandex tights beating the crap out of each other," Haddy said. "But examining how to read comics helps to define what it is about comics that makes you keep reading."

The freedom to explore ideas raised in comics and to question personal perspectives have been highlights of the course for Haddy. Pustz's course has given Haddy what he considers "an air of legitimacy to his hobby."

"It's hard to break the stigma that comic books are childish and trivial. When you see an adult reading a comic book, you think he's a simpleton," Haddy said. "But comic books are just as valid a literary medium as anything else. They add a level of re-examination of the society which they reflect by challenging genres and people's perceptions of reality."

Other comic book readers, such as UI junior Ledon Sweeney, want to know how they can sign up. Sweeney said he has collected comics for six years, so he wants to take the course to see how it would be taught.

EMBARGO

A week after American soldiers and Marines landed peacefully, Clinton said the operation demonstrates that "progress can be made when a coalition backs up diplomacy with military power."

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, Defense Secretary William Perry cautioned that while U.S. troops are being greeted "as friends and not invaders" in Haiti, it is critical that humanitarian aid begin flowing to maintain that idea.

Taking note of the violence over the weekend in Cap-Haitien, Perry said that U.S. forces have been told to defend themselves and that the Marines involved in the shoot-out had acted within the military's rules of engagement.

He cautioned Congress anew about setting a specific date for a troop withdrawal, saying that would "complicate our military operations."

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said his committee will take up a Haiti resolution Wednesday setting a binding "date certain"

— likely around March 1 — for withdrawal.

The limits would apply only to the first stage of the operation to restore Haitian democracy, not the second stage, in which a U.N. peace-keeping mission, including some U.S. troops, will move in, Hamilton said.

"In the best of all worlds there would be no date," he said. "But I don't think that's realistic in the current political environment."

nation when there is so much poverty and so much wealth? The idea of a nation built by people like me doesn't fit the poor."

Born into a well-known middle-class family of writers and lawyers, Trouillot said the wealthy of Haiti are hostile to the poor and try to distance themselves by sending their children to separate schools and speaking a different language.

Trouillot has written in Creole — the language of the Haitian lower classes — as a political statement. He said that until recently, only French — the language of the bourgeoisie — was the official language of the country.

The tension is reflected in the attitude of the Haitian population toward the American invasion. Although American news media predominantly show pictures of excited Haitians celebrating the invasion, the reaction among wealthy Haitians is one of disgust, according to Trouillot.

"The rich hate Aristide because for them he's a symbol of poor people knocking on their door," Trouillot said. "If he was elected, he should come back," he added.

TRIAL

those who said they might be able to, then asked them one by one to explain their positions. Sixty-five had said they definitely could serve.

Of those called, 212 reported Monday and had to pass a phalanx of news crews, demonstrators and entrepreneurs outside the courthouse hawking everything from T-shirts and caps to buttons reading, "O.J. juror reject, didn't make the cut."

Inside, they gathered in a large 11th-floor jury assembly room, and Ito introduced the principal players in the case, including Simpson. The former football star then stood up and said, "Good afternoon."

He is charged with the slaying deaths of ex-wife Nicole Brown

Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman on June 12.

Simpson sat at a table, hands in his lap, and tried to make eye contact with the jury candidates, but few looked at him.

Just before they were brought in, he hummed and sang quietly. A pool reporter could make out the words "a new day has begun..." but didn't know the name of the song.

"This is probably the most important decision you'll make in your personal life," Ito told the group. "It's the most important decision of any American citizen. I need a fair jury."

Among those excused were at least one person who was physically disabled and some whose employers would pay for only 10 days of jury service.

"Five dollars a day doesn't quite make it," Ito said of the money the county will pay the jurors.

The trial could last up to six months, and some jurors were apparently scared off by the prospect that they might have to be sequestered. But the biggest problem, the judge indicated, was financial.

Those who made the first cut were told to fill out a 75-page questionnaire probing their personal lives, as well as their attitudes toward the Simpson case. A groan came up when Ito told the crowd how long the form was.

CIRCUS

It's not something that is totally congenial to humor," said Steve Perun, program director for KIIS-FM. He said the ad cost about $20,000.

Simpson faces two first-degree murder charges in the June 12 stabbing deaths of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman.

About 200 people, mostly reporters, crowded the downtown street outside the blocklong courthouse. They were kept at bay by orange pylons and ropes that carved out an aisle for attorneys and potential jurors to walk down the stairs to the building's entrance.

"It's very annoying," defense attorney David Herriford said as he waited for an elevator inside the building. In the attorney lounge it's the main subject of discussion. ... Most are concerned about the extra five minutes at the elevator, about pushing through the crowds. It takes longer to get in and out."

Among those trying to get into the courthouse were 212 prospective jurors who were told to appear before Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

For those who couldn't serve, Eddie Dee had a commemorative button for only $1. "O.J. juror reject, didn't make the cut," it reads.

Dee said he was drawn to the frenzy "for the money. That's right — that's the only reason I'm doing this." He flashed a wad of bills from his pocket.

Nearby, James Horton was selling "Free O.J." T-shirts and caps embossed with "Shapiro vs. Clark" scrawled atop two opposing boxing gloves.

In a more serious tone, Women Against Violence draped long banners along a wall by the courthouse decrying spousal abuse.

"It so often leads to murder," said Stephanie Boggs of West Hollywood. "I think this is an opportunity to get our voices heard and turn it around."

"It's like a city in itself. There's so much media here, more so than if the president were here," said Frank Adelman, a security guard watching over the area.

Camp O.J. is not without amenities, including five portable toilets (cleaned daily), four 24-hour security guards, daily trash pickup, 600 phone lines and, for some, catered lunches.

NCAA slaps DePaul with one-year probation

CHICAGO (AP) — DePaul's basketball team was placed on probation for one year Monday by the NCAA for violations involving a booster who provided free apartments and meals to some players.

However, the men's team remains eligible to play in post-season tournaments and faces no television sanctions.

The penalties include a reduction in scholarships, official visits and off-campus recruiting.

There were no specific violations found against Coach Joey Meyer. However, David Swank, chairman of the NCAA infractions committee, said Meyer shares the blame for the most serious infraction — failure to closely monitor the program.

As an example, Swank said, the booster sent envelopes with his name on them to players in care of the school's basketball office. The envelopes contained keys to the apartments they used and tickets to professional sports events. Swank said someone should have been suspicious of the envelopes.

The school had frozen Meyer's salary last year and said Monday it won't negotiate his contract until the NCAA probation ends in 1995.

Female athletes charge Brown with discrimination

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A lawyer representing Brown's female athletes said Monday the university discriminates against her clients, but the school said Brown has the nation's top women's sports program.

The differing opinions came on the opening day of a trial in which the school's entire athletic program is charged with sexual discrimination.

Lynette Labinger and other attorneys from Trial Lawyers for Public Justice claim the school's decision to cut funding for two women's teams in 1991 was discriminatory and representative of a pattern of discrimination against all Brown female athletes.

Brown offers 15 women's varsity sports, well above the average of 8.3 for NCAA Division I schools, and has 324 female athletes, nearly three times the average.

There are 2,700 female students at the university.

It was the first time in four years the team has settled with its top pick before training camp.

Panthers threaten Hawks' strong start

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

After four weeks of competition and just one home tournament, the Iowa volleyball team begins what is easily its toughest week of the season tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Schoensted

The Hawkeyes will host Northern Iowa tonight before welcoming Big Ten powerhouse Penn State and Ohio State this weekend.

Not only are the Panthers an intrastate rival, but they could be the toughest opponent Iowa has faced all year. Iowa has posted its best start in school history with a 12-1 record overall and 2-0 in the Big Ten Conference. Iowa is tied for first place in the league with Wisconsin and Northwestern.

The Panthers are 10-1 this season and haven't lost a match to the Hawkeyes since 1988. The last two times these teams met, Northern Iowa swept Iowa, including a 15-0 game in 1991.

"They're a very good volleyball team," Iowa coach Linda Schoensted said of the Panthers. "And they have been a thorn in Iowa's side for years."

"They're going to be very pumped up," Schoensted continued. "I'm hearing that they have three busloads of people coming in for the match. Plus, they have three players on their roster from Iowa City."

Only three current Hawkeyes were around the last time Iowa faced UNI since the rivals took a year off last year. But senior Heather Grim said that won't lessen the intensity of tonight's match.

"Even the people that haven't played them are fired up to play because of the intrastate rivalry," Grim said. "This match means as much to us as the Iowa State match did."

Grim also feels that the Hawkeyes are more prepared for the Panthers than they have been in years past.

"Ability-wise we're 100 percent more prepared," she said. "Also, the other times we played them, we were away. They have a small gym and a big crowd. This time we're going to use the home-court advantage to the best of our ability."

Schoensted admits that the Panthers will be a difficult opponent and rival, but she said that she doesn't want the Hawkeyes to get too emotionally involved.

"It will be important for us to remember that this is just another team," Schoensted said. "We will use them as a good tuneup for Ohio State and Penn State."

"If we have to play someone that's going to help us work on our defense, it's Northern Iowa," she explained. "Because they spray balls all over the place."

The Hawkeyes will remain at home this weekend when they face the Buckeyes and Nittany Lions, this year's favorites to battle for the Big Ten title.

Iowa walk-on steps into No. 2 position

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

With a worn pair of Saucony running shoes and a fresh piece of Trident sugarless gum locked in place, Shawn Fleck prepares for a four-mile run and the start to another busy day.

Fleck, a junior on the women's cross country team, wasn't heavily recruited by Iowa after she graduated from Mandan High School. In fact, she wasn't recruited at all by the Hawkeyes.

Fleck, a walk-on this season, grew up in Mandan, N.D., with her mother and three brothers. She attended the University of Mary in Bismarck, N.D., for two years before transferring to Iowa.

Fleck described the decision to transfer as being one of the most difficult choices she has ever made.

"I was all by myself. Everybody in my family was saying 'Iowa? What are you doing?' It was really hard for me to adjust to a bigger school and a faster pace of life," Fleck said.

Fleck said she transferred to Iowa because she was interested in the medical program and had dreamed of running for the Hawkeyes.

Now Fleck has stepped into the team's No. 2 spot after strong performances in two early season meets. She finished in the Top 20 in both the Iowa and Purdue Invitationals. In her first season in the Big Ten Conference, Fleck is running second to Hawkeye team captain Erin Boland Fleck started her running career as a sophomore in high school and has been winning awards ever since. In high school, she was named the school's top female student-athlete and was also a member of the all-state cross-country team. At the University of Mary, Fleck was an all-conference runner for two years in the N.D.C.A.C. and competed in the national NIAA championships.

Fleck's career at Iowa didn't begin immediately after her transfer. She couldn't afford to come to the UI and there was no spot waiting for her on the team.

"I think her competitive racing and spirit eventually sold me and I received her with open arms into our program."

Last season she worked full-time at the University Hospitals and Clinics to pay for college, while she was establishing her state residency. In her spare time, Fleck ran road races and trained once or twice a day in an attempt to make the team. Fleck said sitting out last season was very hard for her because she missed the competition.

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL

Elway chokes on fourth down

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The Buffalo Bills and Denver Broncos both know the anguish of losing Super Bowls. The Broncos are learning a lot about the anguish of losing plain, old games.

Thurman Thomas ran for two late first-half touchdowns and Carwell Gardner scored early in the third quarter as the Bills beat the Broncos 27-20 Monday night in a meeting of the losers of seven of the last eight Super Bowls.

But the Bills didn't clinch it until John Elway threw out of the end zone from the 4-yard line with 21 seconds left in the game.

Denver, considered a Super Bowl contender when the season started, fell to 0-4. The only other time Denver began that badly was 1964 and it got Jack Faulkner fired as coach, a fate that could be awaiting Wade Phillips if Denver fans get their way.

The Bills took advantage of two turnovers for two TDs for 14 points in their spurt.

Thomas, who gained 103 yards in 17 carries before leaving with a right knee injury early in the third quarter, went in from 16 yards with 1:54 left in the half and from 27 with 18 seconds left in the half after Bruce Smith sacked Elway and forced a fumble.

Then Gardner scored 1:42 into the second half after Mickey Washington's interception, the fifth thrown by Elway this year.

The Bills (3-1) trailed 7-3 late into the second quarter against a team that had allowed an average of 37 points in its first three games and four starters to injury in the first 18 minutes — running back Rod Bernstine, cornerback Ray Crockett, offensive tackle Russell Freeman and defensive end Dan Williams.

The Bills took a 3-0 lead on Steve Christie's 36-yard field goal with 4:28 left in the first period.

Elway, who finished 26 of 45 for 280 yards, hit Anthony Miller on an 11-yard slant 1:18 into the second period to give the Broncos their only lead.

The drive was vintage Elway: a 31-yard strike to Shannon Sharpe on a third and 19 from his own 19 and a 22-yard scramble to the 12 set up the score. But on his next series, he missed Miller wide open for what could have been a long TD play.

Buffalo appeared to take the lead on a 65-yard punt return by rookie Jeff Burris. But as the teams lined up for the extra point, referee Bob McElwee announced that a Bill had been holding on the play, negating the TD.

So Buffalo drove 68 yards in nine plays with Thomas running 16 yards off tackle with 1:54 left in the half, Buffalo's first touchdown in eight quarters.

Baltimore dumps Oates

David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Johnny Oates, whose high-priced lineup did not produce enough to satisfy ownership, was fired as manager of the Baltimore Orioles on Monday night.

The Orioles were 63-49, second in the AL East, under Oates when the players went on strike Aug. 12. But new owner Peter Angelos had made it clear in the offseason that with the addition of free agents Rafael Palmeiro, Sid Fernandez and others, even more was expected.

"He has served the Orioles not only well as a coach and manager, but has shown much character in the process," general manager Roland Hemond said. "He is an extremely decent man and will leave with our gratitude and deep respect."

Oates became the third manager to be fired since the strike, following Hal McRae of Kansas City and Butch Hobson of Boston.

The Orioles did not name

Oates' replacement. They reportedly have been interested in Oakland's Tony La Russa, whose contract expires shortly.

Oates took over as manager when Frank Robinson was fired in May 1991. In his first full season, the Orioles went 89-73 in 1992 and finished third and they were 85-77 and tied for third in 1993, marking their first consecutive winning seasons since 1984-85.

"I want to thank the Baltimore Orioles organization for giving me the opportunity to manage at the major league level," Oates said in a statement released by the team.

"I leave the O's with my head held high. Last but not least, I would like to thank all the wonderful Orioles fans for their support and encouragement."

Last October, Oates signed a two-year contract with an option for 1996. The Orioles were 6½ games behind the first-place New York Yankees when the strike began, and 2½ games out of a wild-card playoff spot.

Shutout inspires Chiefs

Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The next time the Kansas City Chiefs face a team they're supposed to beat, they'll have something to draw on for inspiration: Remember the Rams.

"I bet you'll hear that more than once in this locker room as the season goes on," wide receiver J.J. Birden said Monday, a day after the Rams jolted the Chiefs 16-0.

"I think it will help us realize that we have to prepare better, no matter who we're playing. We thought we prepared well. But watching the films today — we just didn't play well at all."

The Chiefs (3-1) are now second in the AFC West behind surprising San Diego.

The Chargers (4-0) are home against Kansas City in two weeks after all AFC West teams except Seattle take their bye week this Sunday.

Having the bye week immediately follow makes a disheartening loss all the more difficult to take.

"I'd rather play today in light of the way we played yesterday," said Coach Marty Schottenheimer. "I don't think I've ever been in a season as a player or coach where all 16 games went as I wanted, or as I expected them to go. What you've got to do is say we're 3-1 and we've got a bye week and then we're going to get into the meat of the schedule."

Wisconsin players receive top honors

Associated Press

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — Two Wisconsin players and one from Michigan were named Big Ten football players of the week Monday.

Wisconsin tailback Terrell Fletcher was named offensive player of the week, and kicker John Hall won honors for his special teams play. Sophomore linebacker Jarrett Irons of Michigan was named defensive player of the week.

Fletcher had 10 carries for 146 yards and two touchdowns in Wisconsin's 62-13 victory over Indiana.

Associated Press

Rams safety Keith Lyle pulls in an interception thrown by Kansas City quarterback Joe Montana in the Chiefs futile fourth-quarter drive to get points on the scoreboard Sunday in Kansas City, Mo.

Schottenheimer singled out no one for the defeat, saying everyone played poorly.

"Everybody wishes they could play another game this week," safety Charles Mincy said.

Birden said the wait will not be easy.

"All the guys want to put this one behind us as quickly as possible and get on to another game this week if we could," he said. "All the things we didn't do right yesterday, we'd like to go out and do them right this week. But unfortunately, we've got to sit around and think about this for two weeks when we'd all rather be playing."

The Rams, getting a 72-yard touchdown on a tipped pass, jumped to a 13-0 first-quarter lead and then let Jerome Bettis rush for 132 time-consuming yards.

Joe Montana, who had been taking treatment for flu-like symptoms, had his worst game as a Chief, failing to guide his team to at least a field goal for the first time in his 15-year career. Montana was intercepted three times and insisted his illness was no factor.

SAN FRANCISCO

Sanders high steps on Saints

Dennis Geogatos
Associated Press

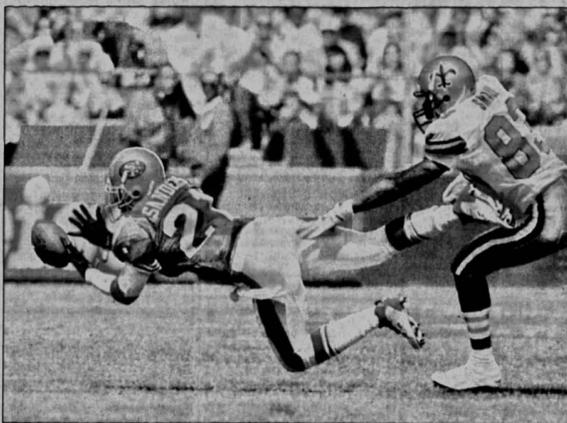

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — It didn't take long for Deion Sanders to break in with the San Francisco 49ers — and break out his high-stepping touchdown routine.

In his first start for the 49ers, Sanders led the team Sunday with eight tackles and knocked down two passes. And in keeping with good theatre, he saved the dramatics for the end: He intercepted Jim Everett's fourth-down pass and bolted 74 yards for a score, sealing San Francisco's 24-13 win over the New Orleans Saints.

In the final 25 yards, Sanders went into his trademark prance. He was mobbed by teammates in the end zone, the Mickey Mouse jingle blaring over the Candlestick Park public address system. Nothing like getting in a dig at fuming Saints owner Tom Benson.

In a snit over Sanders' rejection of the Saints' four-year, $17 million offer, Benson last week suggested San Francisco somehow skirted salary cap rules in signing the free-agent cornerback for $1.1 million and he called the 49ers a "Mickey Mouse" organization.

"If Mickey Mouse clubs can win

Associated Press

49ers cornerback Deion Sanders just misses intercepting a pass against the Saints during the second quarter of their game in Sunday.

like this every week, we're going to Mickey Mouse land," strong safety Tim McDonald said.

That remains to be seen.

But with their offense struggling against the Saints, the 49ers needed a lift from their defense and they got it. And Sanders was at the center of the game's two most critical plays, one by putting the player in position to make it and the other by making it himself.

San Francisco started him at right corner and made room for him by shifting former Iowa player Merton Hanks from right corner to free safety, bumping Dana Hall from the lineup.

CYNICISM IN MATTERS POLITICAL IS RARELY UNJUSTIFIED... CONSIDER, FOR INSTANCE, THE G.A.O.'S CONCLUSION LAST WEEK THAT THE PENTAGON SYSTEMATICALLY LIED TO CONGRESS THROUGHOUT THE EIGHTIES IN ORDER TO JUSTIFY THE BUDGET-BUSTING REAGAN ARMS BUILDUP...

CONSIDER TOO THAT WHILE CONSERVATIVES EVENTUALLY LEFT THE COUNTRY SADDLED WITH A FOUR TRILLION DOLLAR DEBT, IT IS DAMNING ACCUSATIONS OF LIBERALISM FROM WHICH BILL CLINTON MUST FLEE-- GOING SO FAR LAST MONTH AS TO HIRE EX-REAGAN PITCHMAN DAVID GERGEN--

2nd 'Modern World' collection more serious, intense than first

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

The ongoing grinding conflict of the Clinton presidency may be getting to Dan Perkins, a.k.a. "This Modern World" cartoonist Tom Tomorrow. His second "World" compilation, "Tune in Tomorrow," is distinctly more serious -- and at times more weighty and demanding -- than its predecessor, "Greetings from This Modern World."

all, "Tomorrow" 's strips take the mass media to task for promoting hollow values, blindly disseminating government propaganda as news, explaining societal trends via shallow, self-serving analyses and emphasizing entertainment value over content.

Perkins is well-aware that these are weighty subjects for a four-panel comic strip. The saving graces of his cartoons are his pithy sense of humor, his deftly ironic talent for exposing idiocy wherever it lies, and his deliberately dissonant kitschy images, which soften the impact of his harsher judgements. He often makes reference to the frustration of working in a medium that makes most people expect cheap sight gags. And he occasionally breaks the fourth wall, putting himself into his strips.

The combination of insight, humor, reality and parody usually makes Perkins' work hysterically incisive and informative. His arguments are well supported with facts; he cites sources and uses direct quotes in a way Rush Limbaugh can only dream of. But he also keeps a tongue-in-cheek attitude -- albeit an increasingly ironic, hostile one.

Unfortunately, some of the charm goes out of "This Modern World" when so many of Perkins' bitter, cynical and obviously frustrated strips are placed back to back. Where one dollop of knowledgeable, sarcastic criticism per week is a breath of fresh air, this many of them all at once can be stifling.

"Tune in Tomorrow" doesn't lack for humor or thought. But it is missing out on some of the jovial detachment that made Perkins' previous collection fun. As it is, Perkins' unique capacity to enlighten and entertain readers at the same time is well worth the price of admission to "Tune in Tomorrow." But be warned: this collection is not for the naive, the rigid Rush Limbaugh fan or the easily depressed.

There are a few lighter areas in "Tomorrow"; individual strips, especially early in the book, touch on issues ranging from temp jobs to uncomfortable airline seats. Bill Griffith's Zippy the Pinhead puts in a guest appearance, and in one extended sequence Perkins' recurring character Sparky the Wonder Penguin takes a trip to France and makes fun of someone else's cultural peccadilloes for a change.

But as the collection goes on, the subjects become distinctly more complex and grave. Perkins delves repeatedly into NAFTA, the national economy, political correctness, homelessness and the deficit. He takes Clinton, George Bush and Rush Limbaugh to task, reserving especially brutal mockery for Dan Quayle. Clinton's health-care plan, its flaws and its self-serving detractors are a favorite topic. And above

REGULARS GATHER EACH TUESDAY

Faithful fans credit hip-hop show's popularity to rarity of African-American cultural events

Tuesday nights at Gabe's Oasis are known for the beer garden and its $2 pitchers. However, many Tuesday patrons tip back their glasses unaware that just above them a doorman welcomes newcomers, saying, "Thanks for coming up here. Things should get movin' up here in a little bit." The regulars, who know he's right, chat as if they're old war buddies. Another Iowa City favorite, "Ashcroft and Davis' Hip Hop Dance Party," is about to begin.

before mutating into a dance-hall groove.

"We attract a very eclectic group," Davis said. "There are black and white students, as well as a lot of dance music lovers inside and outside the UI. Before we started doing this there really wasn't a venue in town for this kind of thing."

"I think one reason we attract so many people is because there's a big void for African-American cultural activities in Iowa City," Ashcroft added. "There are African-American cultural activities, but they tend to be greek-oriented. The reason this works is it's a social outlet and there's not many for this group of people."

Alfred Davis, a Tuesday regular, says hip-hop night offers a dance-club atmosphere. "You don't have to worry about dressing up or anything. You can just come and hang out."

"I come here because I love to dance and I love the music," added Theresa Wilson, another regular. "It's the best, nicest mix of people. Pretty much anything goes here, and I like that."

Due to its Tuesday evening time slot, however, the hip-hop dance party remains one of Iowa City's best-kept secrets, as it excludes those who cannot afford to go out during the week.

"There's always room for improvement," said UI student Stephanie Quinn, who says she enjoys the show but would like to see it moved to the weekend.

"I have to get up tomorrow morning, and I don't on Saturday, and I think I'd enjoy the show a lot more on a weekend," agreed Wilson.

So besides cheap beer, a thumping bass line and hordes of folks sweating it on the dance floor, what can newcomers to "Ashcroft and Davis' Hip Hop Dance Party" expect?

"Be prepared to dance and if dancing's not your thing, be aware you're going to be entertained," said Davis. "There's just a phat party going on. The show's phat -- that's P-H-A-T, and you can quote me on that."

"Ashcroft and Davis' Hip Hop Dance Party" starts at 9 Tuesday nights at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St. Cover is $3 for patrons 19 and up and $2 for those 21 and over.
