President bolsters forces in Gulf

Clinton showcases U.S. brawn in dealing with Saddam Hussein

Susanne Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Unmoved by Iraq's promise to pull back its troops from the border of Kuwait, President Clinton on Monday ordered an additional 350 warplanes — including B-52 bombers and advanced fighter jets — to the Persian Gulf in a muscle-flexing warning to Saddam Hussein. Clinton said Hussein "cannot be trusted" to keep his word. White House officials said the first real test of Iraq's intentions would come today. In a nationally broadcast address from the Oval Office, Clinton said sanctions imposed after the 1991 Persian Gulf War would not be lifted despite Iraq's demands for relief. "Our objectives are clear, our forces are strong and our cause is right," Clinton said. "We will not allow Saddam Hussein to defy the will of the United States and the international community," the president said.

Clinton said there was no evidence Hussein was withdrawing 80,000 troops massed at Kuwait's border as promised at the United Nations earlier Monday. White House officials recalled that Iraq reneged on a pledge to retreat after invading Kuwait in 1990, instead pouring in more troops. "Iraq announced today that it will pull back its troops from the Kuwait border. But we're interested in facts, not promises — in deeds, not words," Clinton said. "And we have not yet seen evidence that Iraq's troops are in fact pulling back. We will be watching very closely to see that they do so."

"Our policy is clear. We will not allow Iraq to threaten its neighbors or to intimidate the United Nations as it ensures that Iraq never again possesses weapons of mass destruction. Moreover, the sanctions will be maintained until Iraq complies with all relevant U.N. resolutions. That is the answer to Iraq's sanctions problem (that forbids oil sales and other trade): full compliance, not reckless provocation." Clinton spoke as 300 U.S. soldiers arrived in Kuwait City Monday, the vanguard of 70,000 troops mobilized or standing by for duty in the Persian Gulf region. U.S. officials said it will take at least until the end of the week for even the first major wave of ground troops to reach the Persian Gulf.

R.J. Reynolds introduces new odorless cigarettes

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — For all those people sneaking smokes in the rest room, R.J. Reynolds may have just the product — a cigarette that doesn't leave you smelling like you just smoked one.

The trick, said Reynolds spokeswoman DeeDee Whitt, is in the paper, which is treated with a secret ingredient to eliminate the lingering stale odor.

The slogan of the new Salem Preferred cigarette: "I love what you're not wearing."

Reynolds came up with Salem Preferred after asking smokers what — besides the price — they would change about their cigarette.

"They said they would change it to get rid of the lingering stale smell," Whitt said Monday. "We're addressing a growing social concern that perhaps some people don't like the smell of cigarettes in their clothing, car and hair."

Reynolds treated the paper with what Whitt described only as a very common food additive. Federal regulators were told what it is.

The menthol brand will be introduced this month in stores on military bases across the country. Reynolds didn't say when it would be available elsewhere.

New York man suspected of murdering family

JAY, N.Y. (AP) — The decomposed bodies of a woman and two children were found in a crawl-space under their home in the Adirondack Mountains, and police said the woman's husband was the "prime suspect."

State police found the bodies of Kari A. Charles, 31, and her two children, Justin, 4, and Jamie, 2, Sunday night after the woman's landlord called to report he hadn't seen members of the family for about a month.

Everette D. Charles, 56, was being held in Ocala, Fla., on unrelated charges of threatening suicide and pointing a loaded weapon at hostage negotiators during the Oct. 3 incident.

Authorities would not say how the three died but believe they have been dead since early September.

Resident Assistant Anji Newell hugs a resident of her floor during a protest in Burge Residence Hall. The protest stemmed from the UI's request that seven RAs turn in their keys due to violation of a residence hall policy on alcohol. The RAs are currently appealing their firing.

RAs vow to contest dismissal as residents gather in protest

Mick Klemesrud

The seven recently fired Resident Assistants defiantly refused to turn in their room keys and said they are appealing the UI Department of Residence Services' decision.

The announcement came during a rally in the Burge Residence Hall lounge Monday afternoon.

Tears of sadness and shouts of encouragement came from the more than 80 students who were in attendance. Each RA is submitting an individual appeal because they were dealt with as individuals and not as a group.

The seven RAs in Burge and Daum residence halls were dismissed for breaking the UI's residence hall alcohol policy.

Chod Hill, the former RA of the 5800s of Daum Residence Hall, said support from fellow students at the university has been outstanding. He said he isn't going to wage a huge protest but wants to see what will happen.

Hill said he has many things to offer as an RA and his value isn't ruined by making one mistake.

Searchers discover missing man's body

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

After an exhausting six-day search, the body of 22-year-old Cameron Inghram surfaced in the Iowa River at 9:41 a.m. Monday, just past the Highway 6 bridge.

Although the body was found by Johnson County rescue crews almost a mile downstream from the accident site, Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter said the location wasn't a surprise.

"It wasn't really unexpected," he said. "Once (bodies) begin to float, it doesn't take long to move a ways downstream."

Carpenter and three sheriff's deputies were in a boat when they found the body.

"We're relieved it's over. It's going to be a good day for us," Carpenter said. "Everybody that's out there knows that it's finally over and done. I knew we'd find him. It was just a matter of time."

The search was going into its seventh day after rescue crews had been called to the scene Oct. 3 around 11:30 p.m.

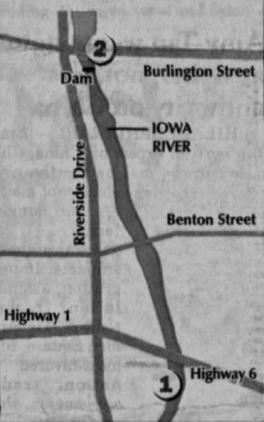

"It's been a lot longer than we would have liked, but under the circumstances it was all we could do," Carpenter said.

The body of UI senior Brent Hartman, who drowned in the river this summer, was found three days after his accident.

Inghram's body was taken to the George L. Gay Funeral Home, 2720 Muscatine Ave., for an autopsy by

'OFFENSIVE' OUTFITS DISCOURAGED

I.C. schools reiterate costume suggestions

Kirsten Scharnberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Community School District is being haunted by political correctness after the same letter that drew national attention last year was reincarnated and sent out Friday, cautioning parents against offensive Halloween costumes.

The letter, sent by the Iowa City District Equity / Affirmative Action Advisory Committee, advises parents to be sensitive to the feelings of racial, religious and ethnic groups when adorning their children in costumes. This is the ninth consecutive year the letter has been sent to parents.

The letter specifically outlines costumes which may be construed as offensive, including "Gypsy, American Indian, princess, African, witch, old man, differently abled person, East Indian, slave, hobo, devil and old woman."

The letter gained attention last year, when people who were new to the district misinterpreted its meaning, said Marion Coleman, See HALLOWEEN, Page 7A

EXILED LEADER TO RETURN TO POWER

Clinton proclaims Aristide's homecoming in speech

George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton announced Monday that Jean-Bertrand Aristide will return to Haiti this Saturday to resume his "rightful place" as the country's first democratically elected president.

Clinton, in an Oval Office address to the nation, also said that since U.S. troops occupied Haiti three weeks ago, the level of violence there has declined, refugees have been returning and Parliament has been restored.

Further, he noted that military leader Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and army chief of staff Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby had announced their resignations Monday. Port-au-Prince police chief Michel Francois, the third member of the Haitian junta, fled last week to the neighboring Dominican Republic.

Clinton, who spoke to the nation about both Iraq and Haiti, credited American troops for putting Haiti back on the road to democracy.

"But I also want to caution again: The job in Haiti remains difficult and dangerous. We still have a lot of work ahead of us, but our troops are keeping America's commitment to restore democracy.

"They are performing their mission very, very well, with firmness and fairness, and all Americans are proud of them."

Concerning the exiled Haitian president, who has frequently been at odds with the administration, Clinton said, "I am pleased to announce Aristide will return home to assume his rightful place Saturday, Oct. 15."

U.S. officials said earlier that Aristide may be accompanied to Haiti by Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said Aristide's return should be viewed as an opportunity to pull American troops out of Haiti.

Iowan plants new roots in Japanese culture

Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
The Daily Iowan

Although he has spent most of his life in Muscatine, Ian Hillman's heart belongs to a country on the opposite side of the globe.

Two years ago, Hillman, a UI sophomore who speaks both Japanese and Spanish fluently, spent a year in Ichikawadaimon, Japan — a sister city of Muscatine — as a cultural ambassador.

DAY IN THE LIFE

Teaching elementary-school children about American culture, he cooked much-cherished American holiday delights — such as pumpkin pie, eggnog and corn bread — for curious explorers of American food.

"I have focused so much of my life on Japan, so I'm set on that now. I look for every opportunity to study Japanese culture and language."

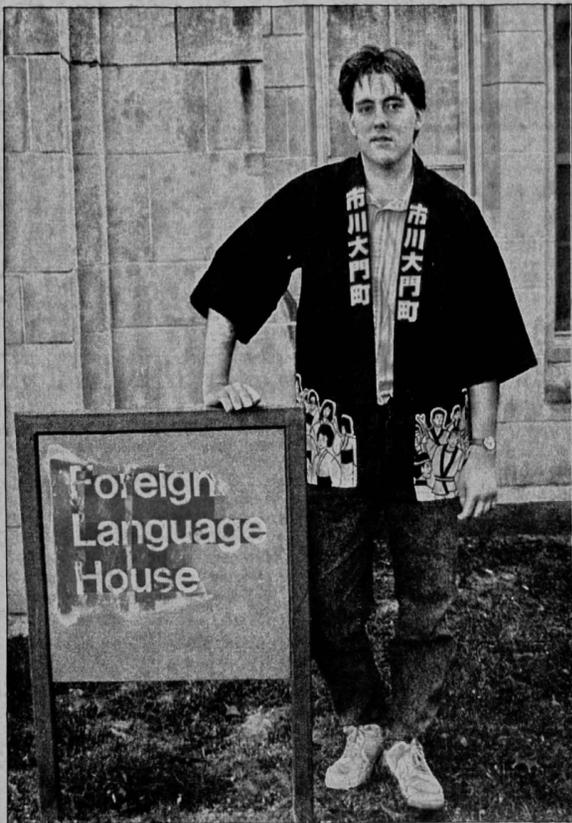

Ian Hillman, UI

"Some of them liked it, and some of them hated it," he said. "The kids thought eggnog and pumpkin pie are the same, except there was no pumpkin in the eggnog."

This experience taught him that different cultures value different things and that it is important to realize cultural differences.

Hillman, who drinks Japanese green tea and would like to spend more time cooking elaborate Japanese dishes, said he plans to return to Japan to go into foreign service after graduating from college.

"I have focused so much of my life on Japan, so I'm set on that now," he said. "I look for every opportunity to study Japanese culture and language."

Hillman, a high-school valedictorian and presidential scholar, needs this insight into Japanese culture as the president of the Foreign Language House.

The Foreign Language House, which constitutes two floors of Hillcrest Residence Hall, has 73 inhabitants and five different language houses: Spanish, French, German, Russian and Japanese.

In the Foreign Language House, foreign students and American students live together, and while foreign students have a chance to use their native language, Americans can practice their second language, Hillman said.

"The purpose of the Foreign Language House is to provide an opportunity for people to communicate in an informal setting," he said.

As president of the Foreign Language House, his administrative duties include presiding over house council meetings, making decisions about everything from planning activities to management of intercultural conflict and living in the Foreign Language House.

Although school is the highest priority for Hillman, he keeps himself busy with extracurricular activities.

"I try my best to get everything done, but there are many things I have to give up," Hillman said. "I just don't have a personal life. I see my friends when I'm working with them at events. I see my roommate every day, and that's about it."

For Hillman, an interest in different cultures has influenced his lifestyle from an early age. In high school, he helped foreign students at his school adjust to American culture.

As a cultural ambassador in Ichikawadaimon, he gave a speech in Japanese at a coming-of-age ceremony and taught elementary-school children about the American culture.

Since his ambassadorial stay, Hillman has visited Japan twice as a translator. He has also used his skills to teach Japanese in summer camps.

Hillman said one of the things that fascinates him the most about Japanese culture is the challenge posed by the attitude of exclusiveness which makes it difficult for foreigners to establish contact with locals. He said adults were reserved, but children talked to him out of curiosity.

"By the time I went back, everybody would come and talk to me at the school, and everybody knew my shoe size and how tall I was," he said.

"You have to weed out the differences and find out what you have in common," Hillman said about the challenge of intercultural communication.

Amy Tan wants status as writer, not as authority on China

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Amy Tan isn't an expert on China, Chinese culture, mahjong or the psychology of mothers and daughters.

Or any of these subjects: immigration, assimilation, racial tension, Tiananmen Square, the most-favored nation trade agreements, the future of Hong Kong after 1997 or Chinese cooking.

Make no mistake: The acclaimed author of "The Joy Luck Club" and "The Kitchen God's Wife" takes pride in her Chinese heritage. She just doesn't want to be boxed in as an Asian-American writer.

"I often wonder why works of fiction by minority writers are read mainly for the study of class, gender and race," Tan said during a recent stop on a publicity tour for her new children's book, "The Chinese Siamese Cat." "Why is it so hard to break out of this literary ghetto?"

Allen threatens movie detailing custody dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen is contemplating revenge via the big screen.

The neurotic one may make a movie about his child custody battle with Mia Farrow if Farrow doesn't treat his kids right, said Douglas McGrath, Allen's writing partner on the new movie "Bullets Over Broadway."

Associated Press

Spike Lee has 'Hoop Dreams'

Arthur Agee, right, a college basketball player who is the subject of the documentary film "Hoop Dreams," reacts following the screening of the film at the close of the New York Film Festival at Lincoln Center Sunday. Filmmaker Spike Lee, left, plans to produce a fictional version of "Hoop Dreams," to be shown on TNT cable network in conjunction with the NBA playoffs. William Gates, second from left, and Curtis Gates are also in the film.

The director and his longtime leading lady have a biological child, Satchel, and two adopted children, Dylan and Moses. A judge last year gave Farrow custody of all three, with only limited visits with Dylan.

"Woody perseveres and remains optimistic but has told me that if the children are not treated with the humanity and sympathy they deserve, he may make a nonfiction film of the events," said McGrath, who wrote about the possibility in the Oct. 17 issue of New York magazine.

Allen contends the custody arrangement was meant to punish him for his affair with Farrow's adopted daughter Soon-Yi Previn.

He will make up his mind about the movie after all his appeals over custody are resolved, McGrath said.

Allen also wants to see what Farrow wrote in her upcoming book.

Martha Stewart makes most of every minute

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Stewart, the authority on upper-crust domesticity, uses all 24 hours in a day.

"Once my wife and I were with Martha at her house in Easthampton, and I noticed her light was on very late at night," said Richard Chesnoff, a correspondent for U.S. News & World Report and a friend for nearly 20 years.

"She told me she keeps her light on all night so if she wakes up she can immediately read. It sounds obsessive, but it's not. It's just Martha's determination not to waste time."

Stewart, with her own how-to TV show, magazine, books and American Express commercial, lives alone after she and her husband of 26 years divorced in 1989.

"I make a home for myself," she said in Sunday's New York Times. "I love my home."

Director fights for uncut movie

NEW YORK (AP) — Darnell Martin had to bully the new movie "I Like It Like That" onto the screen.

Martin, who wrote and directed the film about a young woman struggling to support her three children, stood firm when Columbia tried to cut some of the grittier scenes. She threatened to remove her name.

"That made them back down," she told Newsweek. "That and the test screenings, when the audience applauded the very scenes they wanted to cut."

The Bronx-born, Sarah Lawrence-educated Martin said she hates being called the first black woman to direct a major feature.

"To single me out takes away from all the new black woman directors like Julie Dash, Leslie Harris, Euzhan Palcy," she said. "And it suggests we're not part of the mainstream."

PREREQUISITE PROCESS STUDIED

Committee seeks to prevent regression

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

The language defining a prerequisite in the registration handbook will be reworded to reduce confusion for UI seniors, who sometimes find they're missing a requirement due to numerous mix-ups, mistakes, regression and duplication with prerequisites.

Regression, which occurs when a person takes a high-level course and then later takes a lower-level course in the same department, is often not noticed until graduation analysis, the College of Liberal Arts Educational Policies Committee explained during its meeting Monday.

Joann Castagna, an academic adviser, said only six things can be held against a student at the final analysis before graduation.

Currently, sequences in foreign languages, mathematics, computer sciences, chemistry, statistics and elementary psychology are the only ones in which regression can be detected before graduation.

"Philosophy lists all of the non-REGs as not open to freshman because of level of maturity, but the ISIS system has no way of policing it," Castagna said, using philosophy department courses

"The way we use prerequisites is to make sure that person is prepared. Students who want to violate the policy usually know what they're doing."

Keith Stroyan, UI mathematics professor as an example of how students are supposed to take introductory courses first.

Duplication will be caught if the course number is the same, but not if the class is listed with the same title but under different departments.

Keith Stroyan, a mathematics professor, said students should be allowed to take high-level courses without first taking prerequisites.

"The way we use prerequisites is to make sure that person is prepared," he said. "Students who want to violate the policy usually know what they're doing."

Luke Flaherty, program associate of the College of Liberal arts, said many professors have different prerequisites for their classes, which causes problems for the departments overall.

"The registrar said that a different instructor may have different prerequisites," he said. "I found a large number of discrepancies. The registrar assumed those were conscious choices."

He said the department is trying to give students an earlier warning about regression and duplication.

"If we could just be clear in our language, maybe this will fall into place," Flaherty said. "I think we are becoming clear in seeing the language should be first, and we're building from that."

College of Liberal Arts Associate Dean James Lindberg said prerequisite matters are more individual than computer-oriented.

"The prerequisites are by no way controlled by a computer," he said. "I don't think the college can do anything."

English Associate Professor Barbara Eckstein agreed that taking advanced classes without first taking introductory courses is carried out on a personal level.

"The issue has to do with the community of the classroom," she said. "The classroom community is crucial, and these things help. It's difficult when one person is far ahead and another is analytically behind."

PROGRAM REGULATES NEIGHBORHOOD SPACE

Council to approve park allocation plan

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

The number of parks in every Iowa City neighborhood will increase as the city grows, the Iowa City City Council will ensure when it votes for the Neighborhood Open Space Ordinance tonight.

The plan, which was discussed at Monday night's work session, was originally adopted in 1993 as part of the Council's comprehensive plan. It is not intended to fund the acquisition of community parks or large playing fields for organized sports, although portions of parks may be included in the plan.

The ordinance states that the amount of land required for each neighborhood is based on the density of a section and must measure three acres for every 1,000 people. As well, 90 percent of the land must lie outside of floodways, lakes or other bodies of water.

The other 10 percent of the land is preferred to be used for the dedication of lakes, ponds and other sensitive areas.

A main goal of the plan is to distribute equitably the costs of obtaining and developing the open space between the city and developers.

The city will decide whether each subdivider will dedicate land, pay a fee or both for the open space purposes. Fees will be required if the city finds that part or all of the land is not suitable for open space purposes, or if it finds the recreational needs can be met by nearby open spaces planned or constructed by the city.

High land costs in densely populated areas would cost more for those neighborhoods to dedicate the land. The city will use redevelopment, federal, and state and park acquisition funds to help reduce costs.

Last month, the Parks and Recreation Commission voted to endorse the Neighborhood Open Space Ordinance. It also unanimously passed a recommendation that the Council commit the necessary funds and personnel to adequately maintain the new parks acquired.

In a memorandum to the Council, Parks and Recreation Commission director Terry Trueblood said he hopes the Parks and Recreation Commission will continue to look to neighborhood associations and other adopt-a-park groups to assist with maintenance after the acquisition of the land.

BANNED FILMS TO BE SHOWN

CAF takes on policy with movie screenings

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

To protest the classroom materials policy, the Campaign for Academic Freedom is sponsoring the Canned Film Festival tonight. "Kiss of the Spider Woman" and "Paris Is Burning," two movies restricted by the policy, will be shown in room 107 of the English-Philosophy Building at 7 and 9, respectively.

"We are showing these two movies because they were deemed unusual and unexpected by the sex act policy," group member Jean Fallow said.

Last year, Department of Spanish and Portuguese Teaching Assistants were advised to warn their students about "Kiss of the Spider Woman." This year, an American studies TA was reprimanded for showing "Paris is Burning" without warning students in advance. Both movies contain openly homosexual characters.

"If I didn't have three kids, an obligation at home, I'd go. As far as I know, they are both good movies."

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for University Relations

CAF contends the policy legitimizes homophobia, while the Iowa state Board of Regents says the policy protects students from any topics that may make them uncomfortable, including explicit sex or violence.

"People can see for themselves the material being stigmatized doesn't necessarily contain explicit sex. Rather, it stigmatizes gay characters," Fallow said.

"Policy-free zones" have been established in buildings across campus without interference from the UI administration. An unauthorized CAF literature table will be set up on the Pentacrest today with several pamphlets explaining the group's stance on the issue. CAF was banned from the Pentacrest by UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones earlier this year for setting up a table without UI permission, which is required.

Because the movies are not being shown for a class assignment, they are beyond the policy's jurisdiction, said Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for University Relations.

"Students have the option to go, so the policy is not relevant," Rhodes said. "If I didn't have three kids, an obligation at home, I'd go. As far as I know, they are both good movies."

The Canned Film Festival's name is based on the Cannes Film Festival in France. The French festival premieres the year's most important movies and bestows honors by committee, much like the Academy Awards.

Each movie will have 75 seats available, and UI sophomore Josie Dunnington said she'll be sitting in one of them "to see what all the fuss is about."

NUMBER OF TICKETS DECLINES

Survey finds most Iowans ignore posted speed limits

Associated Press

AMES — Speed signs tell the maximums allowed, but a majority of Iowans give them just a wink and a nod.

The latest Department of Transportation speed survey said most Iowans travel faster than posted limits, and on some stretches virtually all traffic violates speed laws.

On a four-mile segment of Interstate 29 south of U.S. 34 in Mills County, for example, 97.2 percent of drivers exceed the 65 mph limit. The average speed there is 71.6 mph.

On most of the highways where speeds were monitored, the average speed was above the posted limit.

Speeds are also going up on two-lane roads.

Seven years ago, speeds on Iowa's two-lane roads averaged 55. Drivers on the same roads, which still have the same speed limits, are now traveling an average of 57.5 mph in a study of 15,700 cars and trucks.

Iowa State Patrol officials said they don't have enough manpower to enforce the law as they'd prefer.

In 1993, troopers wrote 21,294 speeding tickets on interstate highways, compared to 65,955 written in 1987. Overall in 1993, troopers wrote 106,915 speeding tickets, including 72,691 on state and federal highways.

CITY ASKED FOR $20 MILLION

Land dispute irks I.C. brothers

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City citizen has charged that Iowa City employees swindled him and his three brothers out of $20,000 in property and that the city's harassment over the past 14 years has cost them $20 million worth of mental and physical damages.

Wilfred Yeggy's property, located at 834 St. Annes Drive and 1525 Prairie du Chien Road, contains salvage materials such as old cars, iron scraps and water heaters. It has been used as a salvage operation since the 1950s, when the land still belonged to Johnson County, Yeggy said.

Court documents show the property was first ruled nonconforming in 1961, when the Yeggys bought the land from the county. Nonconforming means the property can be used in the same way it was before any zoning changes.

In 1988, the city charged the Yeggys with prohibited accessory use, meaning the open storage of salvage materials. Small claims Judge Thomas McDonald ruled the Yeggys were not guilty because the property was already ruled nonconforming.

After receiving complaints from some of the family's neighbors in 1989, Building and Zoning Inspector Terry Goerdt examined the property and found it violated city ordinances. He said the property in question, at 828 St. Annes Drive, has never been ruled nonconforming.

"We have people who testified from the neighborhood that there was nothing on that lot as long as they remember," Goerdt said.

The property Yeggy refers to as 834 St. Annes Drive contains two lots of land side by side. He said a new address was given to one of the lots and renumbered 828 without their knowledge. The brothers then decided they would not clear off the land because they did not own a lot numbered 828.

Goerdt issued notices of violation for allowing junk or salvage materials to be collected and to remain on the exterior of the property. He said that when the Yeggys refused to remove the salvage, he got a court order for city workers to clean up the property.

"They said they had been doing it for so many years and would continue doing it," Goerdt said. "They have reacted in different ways every time I go out there."

The city took $20,000 worth of property, Yeggy said, and then charged them $8,000 in taxes for the cleanup. Goerdt said the lot was completely cleared off.

In 1989, the city sued and won after charging that the salvage yard was a nuisance that caused salvage materials to be collected to the prejudice of others. Goerdt said neighbors were complaining of a loss in property value and that when the salvage can be seen by the public it's in prejudice of others.

"They swindled us," Yeggy said. "The court ruled on phony land, and the lawyers knew it was phony. It was a conspiracy."

Yeggy wrote two letters to the City Council, on June 8 and Sept. 21, demanding that the city's harassment stop, sanctions against their property be removed and that the city pay the family $20 million in damages, as well as five other demands. The Yeggys also provided the Council with four signed affidavits from neighbors, stating there is no nuisance at 1525 Prairie du Chien Road and that the city is harassing the family.

Paul Campbell, a neighbor of the Yeggys for 27 years, was one of the residents who signed an affidavit.

"I think the whole neighborhood would like to see it cleaned up," he said. "But when I was sick last winter, they came over and shoveled my walks and then asked if there was anything else they could do. I owe people like that something."

Campbell said he thinks the city's harassment of the brothers has gone too far, and that it's actually causing them physical and mental damage.

"If the city has the power, they should either get it cleaned up or stop harassing them," he said. "One of them gets so upset when they come around, he can't even come out of the house for two or three days. There's a place just up the street that's just as bad, and there's never been a word about it. I feel that if they can't close it up, they should leave them alone."

In a letter of response to the Yeggys' demands, City Attorney Linda Newman Gentry said because the Yeggys' complaint against the city has already been litigated all the way to the Iowa Supreme Court, it has been "finally determined" and cannot be relitigated.

Mayor Susan Horowitz said she feels this letter was an appropriate and satisfactory response to the Yeggys' charge of conspiracy.

"Many times charges like that are made to Council," Horowitz said. "It's just not appropriate. We have no intention of answering that, and we have no way to appropriately answer that."

FUNERAL FOR IOWA WOMAN HELD

Robbery tagged as motive in slaying

Tom Seery

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa — Driving alone at night along a rural road near her home, Rebecca Hauser might have thought she was being pulled over by police when she encountered four young runaways, who shot and stabbed her to death last week, officials said Monday.

The four boys from Missouri, whose names and ages have not yet been released, were having car problems when they reached Marshalltown last week. Authorities said the youths' Blazer was equipped with a bar of emergency lights that could be mounted on the roof.

"Our investigation showed us the motive was armed robbery," Marshall County Sheriff Ted Kamatchus said at a news conference Monday. "It was a random occurrence. Mrs. Hauser happened to be the next person along the road."

The youths were charged Sunday with first-degree murder and first-degree robbery. Marshall County Attorney Diann Wilder-Tomlinson said she will seek to have the youths prosecuted in adult court, meaning they would be subject to life in prison without parole for the murder charge and up to 25 years for the robbery charge.

Kamatchus said the youths are over 14, making them eligible for adult prosecution in Iowa. He declined to give their exact ages. He said three of the boys are from Kirksville, Mo., and the other is from the Kirksville area. Two of the youths are related, Kamatchus said.

"It's our indication they were in fact running away from home," he said. "They just happened to end up in Marshalltown."

Hauser, 32, of rural Union, was found dead in her car early last Wednesday along a county road about a mile and half east of Liscomb, in east-central Iowa. Kamatchus said she might have been attacked up to five hours before his office was alerted to the car and found the body shortly before 3 a.m.

The youths were seen later Wednesday in Marshalltown, where police helped them make arrangements to return to Missouri.

Kamatchus and a state Division of Criminal Investigation agent went to Kirksville Friday and spent Saturday questioning the youths.

Kamatchus declined to say whether any of the youths confessed to the crimes. He said one weapon believed to have been used in the slaying has been recovered.

"We're still looking for the second weapon," he said.

Hauser was buried Monday at a family cemetery near the home where she lived with her husband and four children — sons ages 10 and 8, and twin daughters age 6.

RE-ENACTMENT PROTESTED

Slave auction portrayal sparks controversy

Alison Freehling
Associated Press

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — She came out of the tavern appearing very pregnant and sobbing, her head buried in her husband's chest.

"Please, please don't do this. Please, Mr. Taylor, buy me, too," Lucy begged the landowner who had just paid 62 British pounds for her husband, Daniel.

But the white slave traders stood impassively as the black husband and his expectant wife were separated. Behind them, some 2,000 people, mostly white, stood silent and uneasy.

When the re-enactment of a day in the life of Colonial Williamsburg was over, some in the audience Monday were weeping, too.

Among them was a civil rights activist who had denounced the re-enactment beforehand as trivializing black history.

"I would be lying if I said I didn't come out with a different view," said Jack Gravely, Virginia political action director for the NAACP. "The presentation was passionate, moving and educational."

The auction was one of the most controversial re-enactments that Colonial Williamsburg had attempted, and it drew a smattering

Associated Press

Protesters raise their fists and hold a sign as they demonstrate against a slave auction re-enactment at Colonial Williamsburg in Williamsburg, Va., Monday. The re-enactment drew more than 2,000 people and several protesters.

ing of sign-carrying protesters to the tourist community of restored 18th century houses and shops.

While organizers at Colonial Williamsburg said the re-enactment dramatized the horrors of slavery, some complained that it cheapened history and dealt with an episode too painful to handle in a theaterlike production.

"This is pure and simple entertainment, making money off people's oppression," said Andrew Highsmith, a white student from Cincinnati. "It's not showing the true history of what it was like to be a slave. Where is the story of people who fought back?"

But Larry Earl, a black actor who has taken part in several reenactments, said that in one recent show a slave was depicted killing his abusive master. "There were two forms of resistance against slavery — active and passive — and we showed both," he said.

The slave auction was based on a real-life experience: In 1773, slaves Lucy and Daniel, both house servants, were sold to separate owners. Sukey, a laundress, met a kinder fate. Her husband, Johnny, was a freed slave who managed to buy her for 42 pounds.

Participants in Monday's re-enactment were led out, unchained, in simple clothes of the sort slaves of the period wore. One man, a carpenter, clutched a large wooden toolbox that was included in the sale. He fetched 70 pounds.

Christy Coleman, who portrayed Lucy, emerged before the presentation to calm the spectators.

"They were getting very angry very quickly," Coleman said of people gathered on a cobblestone lane by the Wetherburn Tavern. "This is important because it humanizes slavery; it puts a face on what happened."

Curtis Harris of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference disagreed.

"I felt this was nothing more than a show, not an authentic history," he said.

INVESTIGATION CONTINUES

Body of cult leader discovered among dead

Christian Humbert
Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Joseph di Mambro, a mastermind of the doomsday cult at the center of last week's death of 53 people, died with his followers, Swiss police said Monday.

A statement from Valais state police said di Mambro was among 25 people whose bodies were found last week among the rubble of fires that destroyed three chalets in the Alpine village of Granges-Sur-Salvan.

The fate of the cult's other leader, Luc Joutet, remained a mystery. Swiss experts began autopsies Monday to find out if Joutet was among the dead.

Police last week issued an arrest warrant on charges of premeditated murder and suspicion of arson against di Mambro, a 70-year-old French-Canadian, and Joutet, a Belgian believed to be the charismatic force behind the cult.

The identification of di Mambro's body followed the arrival of Canadian police investigators with his dental records. Many of the dead were burned beyond recognition.

Another 23 people died in a farmhouse in the western Swiss village of Cheiry. Autopsies on those bodies indicated many were murdered, some with multiple bullet holes in the head.

Five other bodies were found in a charred chalet the cult leaders owned north of Montreal. Canadian police said three were murdered.

The investigation continued in Canada, Australia and Europe. There have been unconfirmed reports that cult leaders were involved in a huge arms-trafficking and money-laundering operation.

One of Switzerland's biggest banks froze an undisclosed number of accounts and launched an internal inquiry. Newspapers have reported cult links to a manager at the Swiss Bank Corp.

The Australian Associated Press reported that di Mambro and Joutet regularly visited Australia. The agency said di Mambro lived at the Gold Coast, a beach resort in Queensland state, between November 1993 and last April. The Australian Associated Press said immigration records showed that Joutet visited Australia five times since 1989.

"He was very calm and very cool. He had a charisma about him," said Peter Bruinhout, a Gold Coast businessman who said he rented several cars to Joutet.

"The last words he said to me ... was that he loved the country and he'd be back in about two months," Bruinhout told Australia's Channel 9 television network.

The network said Joutet and four French friends rented an apartment in Surfers Paradise, the major tourist area of the Gold Coast.

"He spent a lot of time up in his (apartment)," said resident Neville Anderson. "I did ask him what he was doing here for such a long time. He said he was writing a book."

The Australian Associated Press said police were also investigating claims made in a suicide note of one of the dead Swiss cult members that other cult members died in Sydney last Jan. 6.

RESEARCH OF CELLS Praised

U.S. medical scientists garner Nobel Prize

Johan Rapp
Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Two Americans won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for shedding light on how cells communicate to speed the spread of killer diseases like cholera and diabetes throughout the body.

Alfred Gilman and Martin Rodbell will split the $930,000 prize for determining how a certain group of proteins can help transmit and modulate signals in cells, much like a biological switchboard.

Their discoveries, products of two decades of work, have been "paramount" in helping scientists understand diseases that affect tens of millions of people around the globe, said Professor Bertil Fredholm of the Karolinska Institute's Nobel Assembly.

While their research has not netted treatments yet, the institute said it ultimately might.

The medicine prize was the first of this year's six Nobel awards to be announced. Since 1901, when the first Nobel Prize in medicine was awarded, 72 of 157 winners have been from the United States, reflecting an American dominance in basic research, especially after World War II.

Rodbell, however, deplored what he called today's emphasis on specific goals at the expense of unfettered basic research.

"The world ain't the same," he said at a news conference in suburban Washington, where he was visiting family. "Now everything is targeted, bottom line, how to

"The world ain't the same. Now everything is targeted, bottom line, how to make a buck."

Martin Rodbell, winner of the Nobel Prize in medicine

make a buck."

Rodbell, 68, retired in May from the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences in Chapel Hill, N.C., because, he said, his basic research budget kept shrinking and he saw there would not be enough money to complete the fiscal year. He now holds the title scientist emeritus.

"The attention of the Congress and the executive branch always has been toward the end goal," he said. "They are not as willing to take a chance now on people like me in exploring the unknown."

Gilman, 53, is chairman of the pharmacology department at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

"I'm awestruck. I'm more excited than I've ever been," Gilman said after the prize was announced.

He predicted more knowledge about the communication process inside cells "will help considerably in designing better drugs and control malfunctions for treatment of specific diseases."

Although the scientists worked separately over the years, Fredholm said "one handed the baton to the other," beginning with Rodbell's research in the late 1960s and continuing with Gilman's from 1975 to 1985.

Rodbell and his team worked at the U.S. National Institutes of Health at the time, while Gilman was working at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville.

Haitian crowd noise overpowers Lt. Gen. Cedras' farewell speech

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Raoul Cedras kept the people cowed for three years with his terror campaign. On Monday, Haiti's masses rose up and drowned him out.

The once-omnipotent Cedras seemed small in the entrance of the clapboard army headquarters as he announced he was resigning as military leader and quitting the country for its own good.

Cedras was dwarfed by crimson-bereted U.S. military commander Hugh Shelton, whose 19,500 soldiers played a large role in finally driving out the Haitian coup leader.

The sound of 5,000 joyful people buried the tubas and trombones of Cedras' military band playing the national anthem with an impromptu version of "Auld Lang Syne."

Then Cedras' voice, which once dominated state media, faded amid an underamplified sound system and the crowd's shouts of "Hoodlum!" and "Thief!"

Even his wife, Yannick, wearing designer eyeglasses and a green-and-white polka-dot dress, wasn't paying attention during her husband's speech, instead trying to maintain a smile as she heard the verbal abuse from the crowd.

As a sort of final indignity, the camouflage-uniformed American occupying troops had to protect Cedras, firing warning shots when a rock thrower shattered the windshield of his departing Toyota Land Cruiser. Haitians scrambled to

"I have chosen to leave the country to protect you so that my presence will not be a pretext for unjustified acts," Cedras told the crowd.

As a result of Lt. Gen. Cedras' resignation, the final condition has been met by the Haitian military leadership to comply with the terms of the agreement former President Carter worked out only hours before a U.S. invasion was to begin.

Cedras is gone as well as Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby, who resigned Saturday. Port-au-Prince police chief Michel Francois escaped in the dark last week to the neighboring Dominican Republic.

Cedras gave no time or venue for his exile, but U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrage listed Argentina, Panama, Spain and Venezuela as possible refuges. Schrage did not rule out the United States.

Venezuelan President Rafael Caldera on Monday rejected asylum for Cedras, his family and some colleagues. Former President Carter had asked Caldera to consider it, Venezuela's Foreign Ministry said.

Anticipating Cedras' departure, the crowd in Port-au-Prince continually shouted the name of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the man Cedras overthrew in September 1991. One man shimmied up a palm tree before Cedras, waving an American flag with a photo of Aristide in its center.

Cedras, who previously vowed not to flee, said he decided to "sacrifice" himself to save Haiti.

Few Haitians or American soldiers believed it.

"There's a lot more Haitians who want to sacrifice him," said Spec. 4 Charles Hill, holding binoculars as he sat on top of a Humvee at the back entrance of the two-story yellow-and-white building.

The U.S. military policeman said he now believed Haiti "would be safer without Cedras," who was slow to cooperate with American forces in disarming the pro-military gunmen known as "attachés."

"The people are on our side," said Hill, 22, of Pembroke, Mass.

Hundreds of singing, branch-waving Haitians streamed up the hill to Cedras' neighborhood in suburban Petionville afterwards. The crowds included carnival bands and urged the general to leave now.

FORMER COALITION MEMBERS FAIL TO AGREE

Gulf war allies lack consensus on Iraq

Nesha Starcevic

The international coalition that worked together to fight Iraq in 1991 has yet to unite again in the face of Saddam Hussein's military buildup on the border with Kuwait.

Only the United States, Britain and France had deployed troops by Monday, with Australia and Egypt saying they would join if necessary. Other Arab nations had not made any public announcements about joining an international force to withstand Iraq a second time.

After Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990, it took President George Bush months to build the coalition of dozens of countries to set up forces in the region.

One big difference from the Persian Gulf War was the stand reportedly taken by King Hussein of Jordan, isolated for siding with Saddam Hussein in 1991.

The king was quoted Monday by Kuwait's al-Siyassah daily as saying, "We have advised Iraq not to repeat the mistake of 1990. We will oppose any use of force by any Arab against another. We are on the side of the target of aggression."

Russia and China, members of the U.N. Security Council with veto power over military action, urged restraint and a peaceful solution to the crisis.

"As we see it, it is still possible to settle the problem by diplomatic and political means," said Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev, according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

Gandy, a member of the 27th fighter squadron, and other squadron members were scheduled to leave at 8 p.m. Sunday but were placed on a 24-hour wait just before takeoff. The squadron left Monday.

Keating said Monday that his country, which provided several warships for the Persian Gulf War coalition, would favorably consider any U.S. request for similar help this time.

"I think that the great pity was that we never went after Saddam Hussein in the first place," he said. "When we had him beaten, we should have finished him off."

An Egyptian Defense Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Egypt's armed forces were ready to participate in any international coalition force. Egypt also was a member of the U.S.-led coalition.

France was sending the frigate Georges-Leygues to the Persian Gulf waters to join U.S. and British warships already dispatched there, the French Foreign Ministry said Monday.

dence of foul play will also be looked for.

Autopsy results vary, depending on the substance or cause of death an examiner is looking for during examinations.

"For drugs, the reliability is very good, depending on the drug," said state Medical Examiner Dr. Thomas Bennett. "Amphetamines, LSD and prescription medications will be pretty stable from the time of death to the time of the examination."

Alcohol is different because decomposition of a body can actually cause the creation of alcohol in the body. This alcohol can show up on tests just like alcohol consumed before death, Bennett said.

"Alcohol created in the body during decomposition can be between .10 and .15 blood alcohol level," he said.

If blood cannot be tested, examiners will use organs — such as the liver — to test for controlled substances.

Exact identification of a drowning victim depends on the temperature of the water and the length of time the body was in the water, Bennett said.

"With the water getting colder, you can distinguish features pretty well for days afterward," he said. "If not, you use fingerprints or dental records."

Ingram, a 22-year-old Iowa City resident, fell into the Iowa River around 11:30 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 3 while attempting to jump over the gap between the eastbound and westbound lanes of the Burlington Street bridge. A search was started immediately with crews working all night Monday and for 12 hours a day for the next five days.

A memorial service for Ingram will be held Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at Starr's Cave Nature Center in Burlington. In the event of rain, the service will be held at the Lunning Chapel in Burlington.

ond chance as an RA," Hill said.

However, if his job is offered back to him, he is not sure he would accept it, Hill said.

The appeal to Department of Residence Services director George Droll may be resolved by the end of the week, Hill said.

Former RA of the 3200s of Burge Residence Hall Michele Beverly said it is too early in the appeal process to guess the outcome, and she didn't want to speculate on the future.

"I already signed a lease with an apartment," Beverly said. "If the job is offered to me, I will deal with it then."

She said she is still trying to get her bearings and didn't have a comment on what she hopes will come from the appeal.

Droll said it is not common for employees to appeal the decision.

"They always have that right," he said. "We try to move them (the appeals) through as quickly as possible."

He could not speculate on the length or outcome of the appeals because it is a personnel matter.

Care packages were prepared for the departed RAs by their former charges.

menting our armed forces," Dole said on CNN's "Larry King Live" Monday night. "They're doing the best they can, but they were never trained to be the sheriffs of Haiti. And my view is that Aristide walks in, we ought to walk out."

With an eye on Aristide's return, the United States has been sending to Haiti food for feeding programs and equipment for a jobs program that is expected to employ 50,000 Haitians by early next year.

The United States has been feeding large numbers of Haitians for years. Officials said the expanded program being considered will reach 1.3 million Haitian children under 5, women and the elderly. Fuel also is being sent to compensate for shortages resulting from the international trade embargo against Haiti.

All international sanctions against Haiti will be officially removed once Aristide returns.

Dozens of American technical experts will be flying to Haiti in the coming days to assist with the transition. Also, the International Office of Migration is expected to play a key role in resettling internally displaced Haitians and those who have been returning from safe havens at the U.S. naval base in Cuba. The Haitian population at Guantanamo has been dwindling sharply in recent days.

equity coordinator for the Iowa City Community School District.

"The intent of the letter is the same as the intent of the district philosophy," she said. "That is to continue to deliver the message to students and parents that year-round we have an accepting environment for diversity."

Parents thought the letter was a strict mandate against certain costumes and that the district was attempting to influence how the children dressed outside school walls, Coleman said.

"We can't say what students or parents can or cannot do outside school," she said. "But we hope that if we promote an environment that is consistently accepting of diversity in the school, then maybe the students will transfer those ideas in their home and in their life."

Mandates were not the intent of the letter, Coleman said. Students have never been sent home for wearing "offensive" costumes, and Coleman said she hopes it never comes to that.

Sending letters regarding Halloween costumes is probably a common practice throughout the state and nation, Coleman said.

"I'm guessing that there are a lot of districts that are attempting to do the same thing," she said. "But after all the controversy we had, not many people are going to come forth and say they are."

A slight change in the letter's wording is designed to head off misunderstandings before they occur. A caption at the top of the letter states that the intent of the letter is only to encourage students to be sensitive when choosing Halloween costumes they are allowed to wear during the last 20 minutes of the school day.

The examples of potentially offensive costumes are not intended to be exhaustive, Coleman said. Other costumes may not be appropriate, including ones in which students carry weapons. The district's weapons policy strictly prohibits the carrying of any weapons — real or toy.

The letters are meant to encourage the respect of diversity, Coleman said.

John Marshall, principal of Hill Elementary School, said there will be no punishments should students choose to ignore the suggestions in the letter

"We are only encouraging that parents and students be sensitive," Marshall said.

Teachers will be in charge of directly advising students to dress appropriately, said Sandra Lawrence, principal of Lucas Elementary School.

"We are advising them to dress like their favorite storybook character or inanimate objects such as crayons," she said.

So far, no complaints have been reported by either parents or students, Marshall said.

Owners to debate new taxation rate

Associated Press

TORONTO — Hockey players, making what may be the final attempt to ensure a full NHL season, presented the owners Monday with a new taxation proposal.

The owners, who postponed the start of the season from Oct. 1 to Oct. 15, will consider the proposal today when they meet in New York.

"The issue will be brought back to the governors for an update, and we'll have a discussion and then a decision," NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said after a 3 1/2-hour meeting.

The new proposal calls for a top taxation rate on salaries from 5.5 percent to 7 percent. Players say this would create a $20 million pool for small-market teams, $1 million more than the NHL's proposal. They say the proposal would give the small-market teams revenue of 72 percent of the NHL average.

"It is something that goes against our grain," said Toronto's Mike Gartner, president of the NHL Players Association. "I hope the owners see that, but I do not know how they will react to it."

Fifty-seven games will have been postponed through today. Bettman has said the league would consider starting the season Saturday if there were significant movement toward a collective bargaining agreement. Union head Bob Goodenow said that condition was met.

"In today's proposal, we responded to all of the stated concerns of the NHL and made significant moves that should form the basis for a new agreement," he said. "We have gone the extra mile to get an agreement. We have made today's proposal to bring an end to the lockout and play hockey, not because we are interested in taxing player salaries."

Bettman says if the season starts this week-end, teams will play full 84-game schedules.

The players' plan, responding to a suggestion by owners, reduced the tax on gate receipts from 5.5 percent to 3 percent. The payroll tax would be applied at graduated rates to the top 16 clubs by revenue.

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois' Johnny Johnson and Dana Howard were named Big Ten Players of the Week on Monday.

Johnson passed for 224 yards and two touchdowns Saturday in a 24-10 upset win at Ohio State to take offensive honors, while Howard was the top man on defense with 14 tackles, including two sacks and one interception.

Michigan's Remy Hamilton got special teams honors from the conference for his four field goals in a 40-20 win over Michigan State.

Hornets lose Mourning for two weeks

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte Hornets center Alonzo Mourning, in a cast with an injured toe, will miss the next two weeks of training camp.

Mourning, whose injuries last year cost him 21 games, has a strained flexor tendon in the big toe of his right foot.

"He injured it over the summer and it's not considered a real serious injury," team spokesman Harold Kaufman said.

The 6-foot-10 center is expected to be ready to play before pre-season ends. Charlotte's first exhibition game is Friday night against the Atlanta Hawks in Johnson City, Tenn.

The next day, the Hornets fly to Paris for a two-game European tour. Mourning may join his teammates on the trip.

The Hornets also announced Monday that backup guard Tony Bennett will be sidelined for two weeks to help rehabilitate his left foot, injured during the offseason.

The Hornets open the regular season Nov. 4 in Chicago.

Mourning missed 15 games last season with a torn muscle in his left calf. He missed another six games with a sprained right ankle.

After making it into the second round of the playoffs in 1992, the injury-riddled Hornets struggled to a 41-41 record last year, finishing in fifth place in the Central Division.

Heat signs first-round draft pick

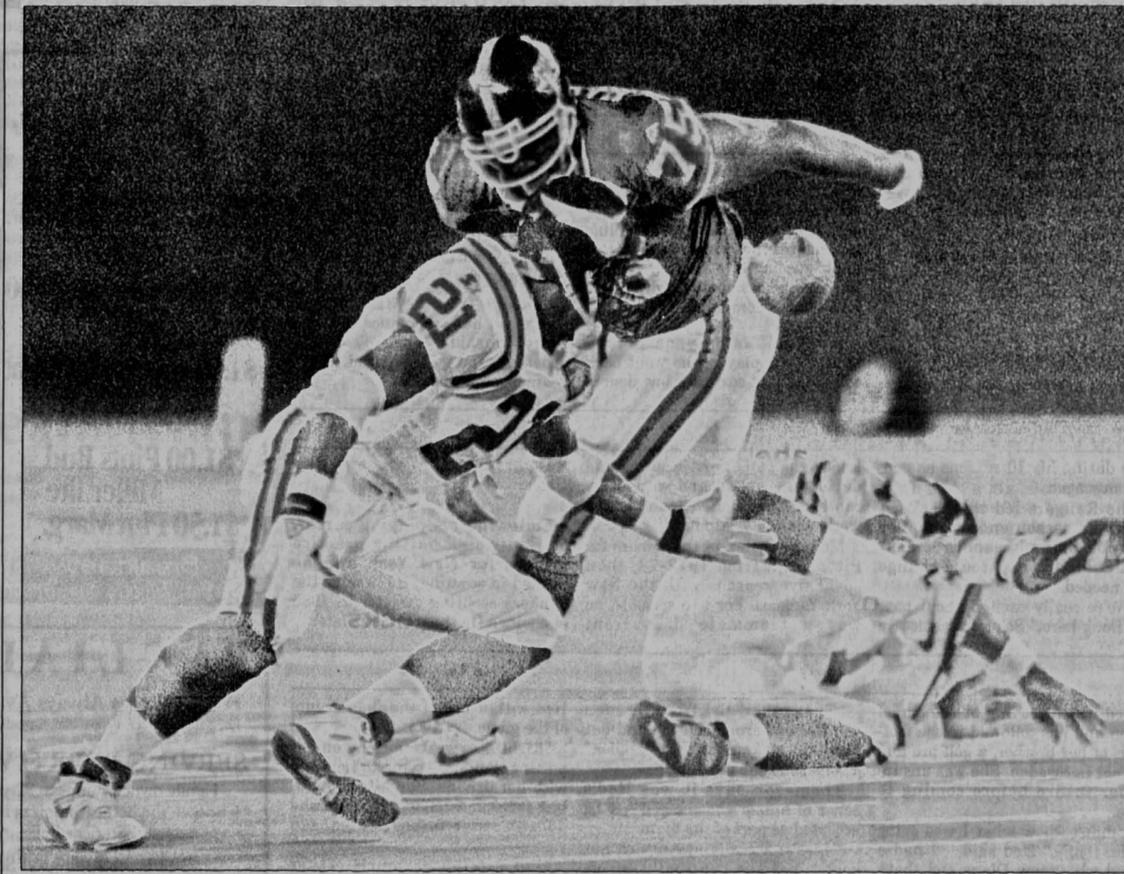

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Heat first-round draft pick Khalid Reeves, who led Arizona to the Final Four in 1994, signed a multi-year contract Monday.

Reeves, a guard, was drafted by the Heat with the 12th pick.

The terms and length of the agreement were not announced, however The Miami Herald reported in its Monday editions that the Heat and Reeves were close to terms on a five-year contract believed to be worth $8.5 million.

The Heat hope Reeves, 23, can eventually replace Brian Shaw as the starting point guard, though he hasn't played the position since his freshman year in college.

Shaw signed with the Orlando Magic in the offseason.

Iowa's Hed challenges for No. 1 spot

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

No factor is more important in the game of golf than mental preparation. Solid, more consistent play is typically reserved for juniors and seniors; mental mistakes are the territory of underclassmen.

Somebody forgot to tell Lisa Hed. Hed, a 21-year-old freshman, is already challenging seniors Jennifer McCullough and Lynette Seaton as Iowa's top golfer.

"(Lisa's) made the adjustment very well. Mentally, she's very tough," Coach Diane Thomason said.

Hed, a native of Ytterby, Sweden, has taken a liking to Finkbine Golf Course. Despite differences in the structure of European and North American courses, Hed has made a smooth transition.

"I like Finkbine because it is very wide. I need that for my game," Hed said.

Hed is possibly the hardest hitter on the team, which sometimes leads to problems, Thomason said. Two weeks ago at the Lady Northern Invitational, Hed ran into some difficulty.

"Ann Arbor gave Lisa some problems, especially with her putting," Thomason said. "She got torn down a little."

Hed said the Michigan course was laced with sand traps and water hazards, but she doesn't use that as an excuse for her play. Following the tournament, Hed still found herself tied with McCullough for the lowest Hawkeye score.

"I've been working hard on my putting the past two weeks. Diane has helped me a lot," Hed said.

Hed says that her teammates have been very receptive towards her, which has made the move to Iowa a lot easier.

"Lynette (Seaton) picked me up from the airport. I was really nervous, but she was great. I also met Jennifer (McCullough) and she was really nice," Hed said. "Everybody

Cubs, Rangers replace general managers

Orioles lose assistant GM who helped lift Baltimore near the top of the AL East.

ARLINGTON, Texas — Doug Melvin, the assistant general manager of the Baltimore Orioles, was hired Monday as general manager of the Texas Rangers.

"Right now, I feel like the luckiest man in baseball," Melvin said. "I'm excited about being in charge. ... There's a good foundation here of quality players."

Melvin, 42, joined the Orioles in 1986 as a special assistant to the president. Two years later, when Baltimore lost 107 games, he became director of player personnel.

CHICAGO — Chicago Cubs president Andy MacPhail looked at his list of general manager candidates. Then he interviewed the first man on the list.

"I didn't need to look any further than Ed Lynch," MacPhail said Monday. "If I was not satisfied, I would have moved on to No. 2. That never happened."

Lynch, who in 1987 finished his eight-year pitching career with the Cubs, agreed to a three-year contract. He replaced Larry Himes, who was demoted to director of the club's Arizona operations.

Lynch, who becomes the Cubs' fourth general manager since 1987, said he hoped to build a championship team around good pitching, speed and defense.

"A lot of time, we had molded this team to fit Wrigley Field: Let's sit back and hit three-run home runs and go one base at a time because the wind is blowing out," Lynch said.

"That might be well and good at home but you still got to go to St. Louis. Guys who hit three-run home runs go into slumps, but if guy runs a 4-flat to first base, he's always going to run a 4-flat."

MacPhail or Lynch didn't want to discuss the status of manager Tom Trebelhorn, but a source within the organization, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said: "I imag-

PLAY INSPIRES DUPREY

Hail Mary passes hit once every 10 years

When Iowa's fourth-string quarterback Mike Duprey took the field for the final time against the Indiana Hoosiers on Saturday, one thing was on his mind.

"All I could think of was Kordell

Stewart in the Colorado-Michigan game," Duprey said. "Wouldn't that be great, Homecoming, a terrific ending like that? (We were down) only seven points. It would have been a story-book ending."

For Duprey, the dream quickly faded. His storybook ending never got past the publishers. An interception by Indiana's Eric Smedley did the trick rather nicely.

But for Stewart, it's no longer a dream. It's reality.

On Sept. 24, the Colorado Buffaloes did the impossible.

With six seconds left, trailing the Wolverines by five points, Kordell Stewart grounded the ball at his own 36-yard line, leaving time for just one more play, one last desperation heave towards the end zone.

It was a play Colorado ran every Thursday at the end of practice, a play they seldom got right, a play Michigan free safety Chuck Winters intercepted at the end of the first half. It was a play called "Jets Rocket Victory."

The play wasn't run exactly the way Coach Bill McCartney drew it out, but as Albert Einstein said, "Imagination is more important than knowledge."

Wide receivers (Jets) go deep (Rocket) and hope for (Victory).

Westbrook and Anderson were supposed to stop at the goal line and tip the ball outside to Carruth or Kidd, that is, if the ball ever got there.

Stewart dropped back seven steps, looked, stepped left, shuffled backward, and with double-zeroes glowing on the scoreboard, let it fly. The pass traveled 73 yards in the air, a feat in itself.

The ball hung in flight for five full seconds, it's laces screaming through the afternoon air, a picture perfect pass. Years from now, Colorado fans will tell their grandchildren it was five minutes.

Anderson and Winters both jumped, and both claimed they hit it. In any case, Westbrook, slanted into the end zone and cradled the ball into his arms as he fell to the ground.

In disbelief, 100,000 fans turned silent while 100,000 hearts were broken.

Sure it happened more than two weeks ago, but sometimes it takes that long for events of this magnitude to set in, for the full effect to reach us.

Put a bat in a kids hand and he will dream of a ninth-inning home run. Put a basketball in his hand, and he will dream of scoring the game-winning 3-pointer. Put a football in his hand and he will dream ine there will be a new manager." He would be the team's 11th manager in 11 years.

 MacPhail said he will retain veto power but the choice of a manager belongs to Lynch, who spent the last year as the assistant to Mets general manager Joe McIlvaine.
 "The manager and general manager have to have a strong and unique relationship," MacPhail said. "And a manager has to know he's the general manager's choice."

 MacPhail left his position as Minnesota Twins GM last month to rebuild the Cubs. He and Minnesota manager Tom Kelly combined to lead the Twins to World Series titles in 1987 and 1991. The Cubs haven't won the Series since 1908.
 Lynch possesses the five characteristics a good general manager must have, according to MacPhail: an academic intelligence to deal with changes in baseball, discipline to understand when and how to apply resources, a healthy respect for baseball, competitive drive and an ability to communicate.

 MacPhail said Lynch's background — a player who went back to college and earned a law degree at the University of Miami — prepared him well for administration.

 Lynch, who had a career 47-54 record with the Mets and Cubs, said he is satisfied with a three-year contract.
 "I came from being a player where ... I had to produce or I was gone," he said. "If I don't do it I deserve to be gone. I think three years is more than fair."

ORIOLES

 major-league roster.
 The Rangers have long revolved around power hitting and been lacking pitching and defense. Those problems were cited last month when Tom Grieve was fired after the team didn't win a division title during his 10 seasons as general manager.

 The Rangers led the AL West when the season ended, but they were 52-62 and team president Tom Schieffer insisted a change was needed.
 "We're really excited about having Doug here," Schieffer said. "He knows the game from scouting and developing areas, and we feel he can be the person who can bring a world championship here."

 Melvin pitched in the minors for Pittsburgh from 1972-73, then spent five seasons with the New York Yankees. For two seasons, he was a teammate of current Rangers batting coach Willie Upshaw.

 Following his playing career, Melvin was a batting-practice pitcher for New York and he worked in scouting. He became the Yankees scouting director in 1985 and joined Baltimore a year later.

 has been a big help."
 Before arriving in Iowa, Hed played in Swedish amateur events, leading her team to the Swedish team championship. Hed and her mother won the Volvo Cup, Europe's largest amateur competition with nearly 20,000 participants.
 "First we had to qualify in Sweden, then we went on Spain for the tournament. It was a four-ball, best-ball event," Hed said.

Hed began playing at the age of seven and has followed in the footsteps of her brother, a golf pro and teacher in Sweden. She was unsure of her future before coming to Iowa.
 "I didn't know what I was going to do, really," Hed said. "I had a friend who knew Diane and that's how I got to know her."
 Thomason, who was initially looking at another Swedish prospect for the Hawkeyes, said she is very impressed with Hed's play.

"That other girl from Sweden went elsewhere. Then I found out about Lisa. I couldn't be happier," Thomason said.
 Thomason says it was Hed's sense of humor that helped her be accepted as part of the team.
 "(Lisa's) a really sweet girl, but sometimes she can really cut us up," said Thomason. "Sometimes one of the other players who knows the course shoots a tough round. Then Lisa, who is new to Finkbine, tells me she thinks it's easy."
 Thomason says she tries to help

Hed with a few of the finer points of the game.
 "Right now we're working on her putting. I'm also trying to help her with her driving. She hits so hard, but sometimes ends up where she doesn't want to be," Thomason said.
 Hed attributes much of her smooth transition to team acceptance and gratuitous courses.
 "Lynette and the others have been really nice to me. I didn't know what to expect, but I'm comfortable now."

HAIL MARY

 of Stewart and Westbrook.
 "When you're in your back yard playing football, that's what you think of," said Duprey, a junior who will now be asked to lead the Hawkeyes until No. 2 Matt Sherman returns.
 In all reality, it never should have happened. Michigan should have leveled Colorado's receivers at the line of scrimmage, or at the very least, batted the ball down in the end zone, taking home a victory and remaining undefeated.
 But that is the glory of sports. One minute, you're on the top of the world, the next minute, you're lying down in the end zone with tears in your eyes. You just never know. Just when Colorado fans were about to give up on the game, they were given much more than a victory. They now had fate on their side, as if someone up above was saying, "This is your year."

 If the Colorado Buffaloes go on to do what seemed impossible with six ticks showing on the clock in Ann Arbor and win the national championship this year, they will look back on this one play as the key.
 Very few events in life can compare to an event like this. Very few events can take the hearts of thousands of fans and run them through the ringer, while at the same time, renewing faith in the hearts of thousands more.

 That is why 70,397 fans pack into Kinnick Stadium on football Saturdays because they know at any moment, they may witness greatness.
 That is why America is obsessed with sports. That is why we pay professional athletes millions of dollars.
 As Stewart ran down the field to meet his herd of Buffaloes in the end zone, instant comparisons were made. The name Doug Flutie danced in the heads of fans and the tongue of sportscasters everywhere.

 Flutie, who did his time with the Chicago Bears and became a star in the Canadian Football League, will always be remembered for one play 10 years ago. Flutie broke the hearts of Miami fans with his late November buzzer beater in the Orange Bowl.
 But this is Stewart's moment, his Sportscenter highlight, to savor and to relish. He may not go on to win the Heisman, as Flutie did, but he has won our hearts, at least until the feat is repeated, at least for another decade.

NHL

 The last proposal by owners called for a graduated tax of up to 122 percent on payrolls above the league average. The tax would begin at 5 percent on the first $250,000 above the average and increase 5 percent for each additional $250,000.

 "Significant dollars are shifted from the wealthiest, highest-spending clubs, which will operate as a drag on player salaries, as the NHL requested," Goodenow said.

 Other issues have been under discussion, such as salary arbitration, a rookie salary cap and free agency. But it clearly is the taxation plan that the players emphasized Monday.

"The NHL's plan will not achieve any revenue sharing since it will drive the high-paying clubs to cut their payrolls to avoid paying the tax," the union said in a statement. "This remains the critical difference between our respective plans."

AFC EAST

First place looks familiar to Bills

Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The new era in the AFC East will have to wait. The first-place Buffalo Bills — sounds familiar, doesn't it? — aren't quite ready to step down.

"No, no, no, no. Nooo, no, no," center Kent Hull said Monday, adding a shake of his head for emphasis. "Not at all."

After a loss to Chicago in Week 5, the Bills were stuck at 3-2 — not bad, but they were hardly the dominant force that won four consecutive conference championships. Up ahead was Miami, which was perched in Buffalo's customary spot atop the AFC East.

For the Dolphins, it was a chance to assert themselves as the new class of the division. The Bills were in danger of falling two games back, and maybe out of the division race.

It was also a chance for the Bills to put their lackluster performances of weeks past behind them, to move into first place despite it all. And that's just what they did Sunday with a convincing 21-11 win.

"It's better than being in third place, which we probably would have been if we lost," Coach Marv Levy said. "We won. It was a great victory. It was a thrill. We beat a great team."

"But now 63 percent of the season lies ahead, including a game against Miami somewhere down the line, down there. And before that we've got a lot of other games, too."

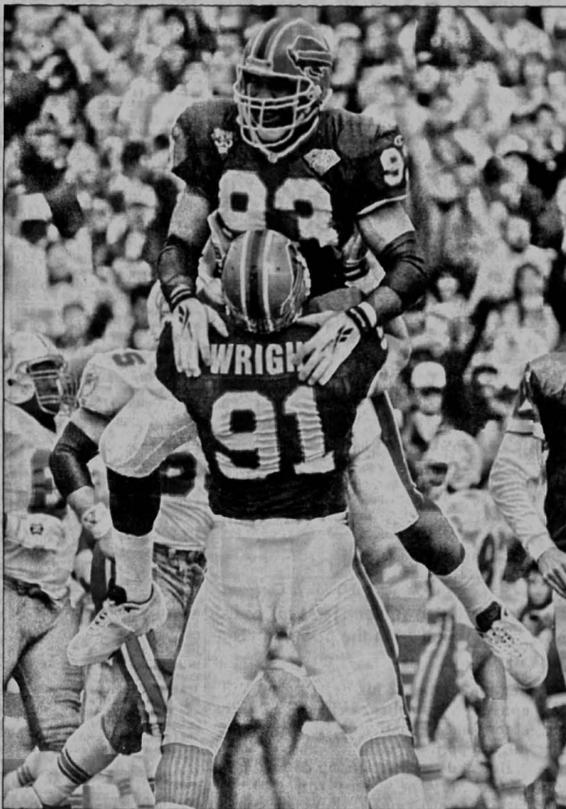

Other than a one-year reign as division champs in 1992, Miami (or any other team, for that matter) has been unable to break the Bills' stranglehold on the AFC East title.

It looked like it was going to happen last year, when the Dolphins started 9-2. But with quarterback Dan Marino injured, they lost their last five games and didn't even make the playoffs.

This season Marino was back, and Miami jumped to a 4-1 record. Meanwhile Buffalo was struggling, barely coming away with victories over New England, Houston and Denver, teams that were winless before playing the Bills.

"We're the team that should win the AFC East," Marino said.

"We are the team that should win this division. That's how we felt. That's how we still feel. But we just gave Buffalo a chance to get back in it."

Means powers Chargers

Bernie Wilson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — On the day when Don Coryell was honored for his innovative passing attack of a decade past, running back Natrone Means ripped through Kansas City's defense to highlight the other side of the San Diego Chargers' offense.

Life with the Chargers isn't always a 99-yard Stan Humphries bomb.

Means rushed for a career-high 125 yards and one touchdown on 19 carries in a 20-6 win over the Chiefs on Sunday that kept the Chargers (5-0) the NFL's only undefeated team.

"Overall I think this was the best game I've played so far," said Means, a second-year pro from North Carolina. "Hopefully I can keep doing it, but as long as we keep winning, that's the key."

The Chargers are off to their best start since 1961 — the franchise's second year — mainly because of their balanced offense.

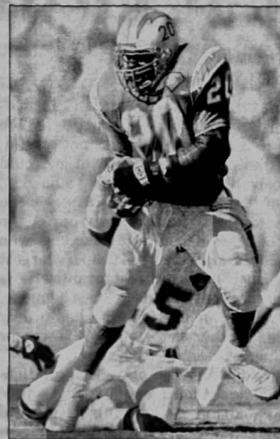

Humphries' passing will make the highlight shows, and so will Means' quick bursts and spin moves that get him extra yards.

"We're at our best when we run the football," first-year offensive coordinator Ralph Friedgen said Monday. "There's no doubt about that."

And that starts with Means, who developed so well in his rookie year that the Chargers traded Marion Butts to New England in April.

"We need a big, strong running back, and what Natrone gives you is not only being big and strong, but he's elusive and can make people miss," Friedgen said. "That's a little different quality."

On San Diego's decisive fourth-quarter drive on Sunday, Means carried four times for 57 yards, with runs of 25 and 23 yards. He strained a muscle in his chest and came out, but returned on play later. Humphries capped the drive with a 5-yard touchdown pass to Mark Seay.

"Coming down that last stretch when I had a couple of runs back-to-back, I wanted it every time I saw them signal in the play," Means said.

"The offensive line was in the groove, the whole offense was in the groove."

"When we're all focusing and playing our best, I think teams are hard-pressed to try to stop us," Means said.

In the second quarter, Means carried five straight times for 38 yards, including a 9-yard TD run.

The Chargers have run 163 times this year — Means has 107 for 466 yards — and thrown 132 passes.

"We've always been a power running team, and Natrone is our power back," left tackle Harry Swayne said. "He gets it done."

Said Friedgen: "I guess we don't have as many finesse plays as say a San Francisco or teams along those lines. We come pretty much straight at you."

SALE RESOLVES LAWSUIT

Warriors' new owner buys his dream team

Anne M. Peterson
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — When he was a young man pumping gas for a living, Christopher Cohan dreamed of owning the Golden State Warriors. On Monday, the cable television executive was introduced as the team's sole owner.

"I've been very fortunate," he said. "It is a dream come true."

The Warriors announced Saturday that Cohan, who had owned 25 percent of the team, planned to buy out chairman Jim Fitzgerald and president Dan Finnane.

The purchase price has ranged in various reports from $95 million to $105 million.

Terms of the transfer were expected to be completed Jan. 4, pending approval of the NBA's Board of Governors.

The surprise announcement closed a lawsuit brought by Cohan against Fitzgerald and Finnane over ownership of the team. Cohan had claimed that when he bought the team in 1991, it was with the understanding he would eventually become full owner.

Cohan's attorney, Robin Baggett, said the sale agreement, reached on Friday, resolves the dispute. Lawyers for both sides had been scheduled to be in court for the matter today.

"That's over. That's history," Baggett said. "We should respect that."

Cohan, who maintains the sale negotiations were friendly, said the purchase plan's genesis came at a trial conference two weeks ago when "a little light opened up." He would not discuss the matter further.

"If I had any problems they are resolved and we're going ahead," Cohan said.

"We've kissed and made up," added Finnane.

Cohan, 44, the president of Sonic Communications, made his first official appearance at the Oakland Coliseum Arena on Monday, after weekend-long speculation about how the ownership shift might affect the team.

"I guess I've been in the business long enough and I don't try to fix anything that isn't broken," he said. "I try to add to it."

Perhaps the most notable problem facing Cohan is the replacement of the Warriors' arena, which has been deemed too small.

The Warriors have explored several options, including the construction of a new arena on the same site or moving the team elsewhere in the area.

Cohan said he has had no formal conversations with the San Francisco Giants, who want to build a new sports complex near downtown San Francisco. The complex could include an arena project as well as a ballpark.

Coach's job put on line

Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Rollie Massimino's future as UNLV basketball coach was on the line Monday as university officials tried to negotiate a possible buyout of the remaining years on his contract.

Just five days before the Runnin' Rebels were to start practice, Massimino met with UNLV interim president Kenny Guinn and athletic director Jim Weaver to discuss whether he would remain as coach.

Sources told The Associated Press that Guinn has decided Massimino should leave, and efforts were being made to structure a buyout to get the coach out before the start of practice on Saturday.

Massimino emerged from the meeting to confirm a buyout had been proposed, but said nothing was resolved.

'Eat Drink' a flavorful feast

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

"Eat Drink Man Woman" is possessed of an insatiable appetite for life and its many flavors. If it's not careful, the film's gluttonous sense of joy could conceivably devour audiences whole.

On the one hand, "Eat Drink" is the story of joy trickling slowly out of the life of Master Chu, a famous chef who heads the staff of one of Taipei's largest and most respected restaurants. He is aging, losing his sense of taste for life, as well as for food, and he has to rely on his brother as a surrogate tester for his "secret recipes."

Director Ang Lee plays this relationship of dependence and loss as a source of exposition well, using it to build Chu's complex life up around him like a decaying stone wall. But ultimately, the decline of Chu's masterful cooking skills and their representation of his dulling senses are reduced to a simple murmur — a symptom of life's larger and the third is caught in the middle. All of them are face to face with independence and the consequences of their decisions past and present. Since their mother passed away early in their lives, the task of seeing them on their respective ways falls to Chu.

The one stumbling block is that Chu, in his cocoon of sensory decline, simply can't relate to young, modern women.

Shihung Lung plays Master Chu close to the vest. His stiff exterior and rigid demeanor are unsettling at first, but they become strangely endearing no matter how foolish or insensitive he may act. His strength is at home in the kitchen, but it doesn't work too well when he has to leave the wok behind and play father to his heartbroken and confused daughters. From a male standpoint, empathy for him comes in large supply.

But male understanding doesn't carry Chu very far when it comes to the meat of "Eat Drink" — Chu's treatment of his middle daughter, Jia-Chien (Chien-Lien Wu). Wu has a complex character to fill with Jia-Chien. She radiates strength, character and success, but her father and sisters are awash in their own problems of taste, and she winds up being taken for granted and abused.

The temptation for Wu to play Jia-Chien for sympathy is felt but never lessons simmering in his kitchen. Chu's three daughters are coming of age, learning what tastes in life appeal to them and which ones to avoid. One is blooming early, one is starting late

TONIGHT

Bulgarian chorus blends styles to produce unique world beat

Melanie Johnson
The Daily Iowan

East meets West tonight in Hancher Auditorium as the Bulgarian Women's Choir attempts to draw new fans for an unusual mix of Asian rhythms and European harmonies.

Formed in the late 1950s as the Bulgarian Women's State Television Choir, the group became a private chorus after the fall of communism in Eastern Europe. Since that time, the women have toured across Europe and the United States. This is their second American tour promoting their 1987 album, Le Mystère Des Voix Bulgares.

"For a big part of the choir, this is not their first or second tour here, but their fourth," said Tanja Andreeva, the choir's manager. "The audiences in the States are very enthusiastic, especially when it's young people. They seem to be really excited about what we play."

The choir's sound is quite unlike standard choral music. Andreeva said the group's style has both Asian and Slavic influences and mixes traditional choral music with a Middle Eastern style for an effect that sounds like a combination of Ofra Haza and Gregorian chants.

International Music Network

The Bulgarian Women's Choir hits Hancher Auditorium tonight with an unusual blend of Eastern rhythms and Western harmonies.

"It's really stunning. The harmonies are really unique," said choir spokesman Rob Griffin. "The first time I heard them live I got goose bumps. This is a seriously professional group."

"It's music that's difficult to describe," Andreeva said. "It has all the style of traditional Bulgarian music, but it's arranged in a modern style. It's arranged for an open-throat style of singing, which is unusual for people other than natural Bulgarians."

The choir will be dressed in colorful native costumes, but the real draw of tonight's show will be the chance to hear something genuinely unique.

"This is the music I think everyone should hear at least once," Andreeva said. "I think those who have heard it one time will love it forever."

The Bulgarian Women's Choir performs tonight at 8 in Hancher Auditorium. Student discounts are available. For ticket information, call 335-1160.

DANCE

'Swan Lake' captivates Hancher audience

Molly Faulkner
The Daily Iowan

Swans and scenery and Siegfried, oh my. National Ballet of Canada's "Swan Lake" played at Hancher Auditorium this weekend to a sizable and enthusiastic crowd. For two and a half hours, the audience sat entranced as if engaged in children's story time. The familiar characters and storyline were comforting and beautifully performed.

Visually, this production was eye candy. Every part of the stage showcased something lovely: costumes ranging from colorful peasant garb to the traditional white tutus of the swans, sets designed by Desmond Heeley and lighting designed by Robert Thomson. These elements together created the hazy romantic atmosphere crucial to the story.

The well-known lake scene opened with the swans filing out on stage one by one until 24 of them were moving in unison. The symmetry of the lines and patterns were mesmerizing, and the continual ebb and flow of the dancers embodied the traditional spirit of this ballet.

Friday night, the title roles of Swan Queen and the Prince were danced by Kimberly Glasco and Aleksandar Antonijevic. The chemistry created on stage was palpable and genuinely moving. The high point of the evening was their Black Swan pas de deux in the second act. The dancers' almost flawless technique moved them in and out of spectacular lifts and balances, all with a wonderful flirtatious quality.

Other favored moments included the dance of the "Four Little Swans" and the lively "Neapolitan" duet, danced by Chan Hon Goh and Robert Tewsley. Both dances were met with wild applause.

The music of Petyr Ilych Tchaikovsky was admirably played by the National Ballet Orchestra, led by principal guest conductor Paul Connelly.

"Swan Lake" is possibly the most famous of the classical ballets. Because of its adaptable nature, sections of this work are performed by almost every ballet company in the world and the music by Tchaikovsky is used widely in television commercials and shopping malls muzak-style.

"Swan Lake" as a full-length work is a huge undertaking for any company. Perusing the program's list of technical and artistic staff makes it clear that only big companies with big budgets can afford it. Most smaller companies satisfy their feathered urge by producing the lake scene on its own. It's a treat to see this timeless classic done — at length and in full — by such a reputable company.

acted upon. The restraint in Wu's performance and the rigidity in Lung's builds up a resolution between father and daughter at the film's climax that is both touching and deeply resonant.

"Eat Drink Man Woman" lies somewhere in the middle of the scale between a "father/daughter" story and an ensemble piece. Watching Wu and Lung spar as their relationship disintegrates and rebuilds in waves is a treat, but the efforts of the entire cast can't go unmentioned.

Nor can the scenes of Chu preparing his weekly meals for the family. They're visual feasts which border on high-class food porn. Audiences will drool into their popcorn over Chu's inventive buffets and mouth-watering lunches.

In fact, reveling in the obvious bad metaphor is inescapable: "Eat Drink Man Woman" is a perfectly balanced meal. A cast that captivates, a director with a penchant for lust and dim-sung, a story with more twists and turns than a plate of lo mein — they all combine in a broad, touching and satisfying comedy/drama with an impeccable sense of taste and style.

"Eat Drink Man Woman" ultimately asserts that there aren't many guarantees in life and that we should enjoy the taste of our successes and failures alike. But one certainty does remain: Coming out of "Eat Drink Man Woman" with a full stomach and happy taste buds is as inevitable as death and taxes.

Editor's note: "Eat Drink Man Woman," closes Thursday night.
