Iraq hints at recognition of Kuwait

Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Saddam Hussein offered early today to recognize Kuwait as a sovereign state with the understanding it would lead to the United Nations easing a stifling embargo after six months.

The proposal came in a statement issued after a meeting between the Iraqi leader and Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev, who arrived in Baghdad Thursday to try to defuse tensions between Iraq and a U.S.-led coalition backing Kuwait.

Shortly after the statement was issued, senior U.S. military officials in Washington said some Iraqi units that had been heading away from the Kuwait border halted their retreat Thursday. The officials said that prompted the Pentagon to rethink a hold it had put on the flow of U.S. troops to the Gulf.

Hussein's offer, broadcast early today in Iraq, echoed one made Wednesday by his U.N. ambassador. The statement did not specify when Baghdad would recognize Kuwait, which it has long maintained was part of Iraq.

The 1991 Persian Gulf War cease-fire resolution calls for lifting the oil embargo after Iraq had eliminated its weapons of mass destruction and a monitoring program is in place to make sure Iraq doesn't try to rebuild them.

U.N. weapons inspectors told the Security Council Tuesday that the sophisticated monitoring system was ready.

The Iraqi-Russian statement said Iraq "has agreed to resolve the issue of Kuwait's sovereignty" as the U.N. Security Council has demanded.

Once it does so, Russia said it would support activating a six-month test period for

Former UI student charged in computer thefts

A former UI student was arrested and charged with first-degree theft Wednesday after allegedly stealing two computer systems valued at $18,000 from the internal medicine department between July 9, 1993 and April 18, 1994.

Matthew D. Bisbey, 21, was employed by the department in the UI Hospitals and Clinics at the time of one of the thefts and had access to keys for the rooms where the stolen equipment was located, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

One system, recovered on Aug. 10, was traced to Bisbey through a witness who identified him as the person who sold him the computer equipment.

Sen. Harkin to accompany Aristide to Haiti

DES MOINES (AP) — Sen. Tom Harkin will be among a congressional delegation joining ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide on his return to Haiti Saturday.

"I think the purpose is basically just to show support for President Aristide, for democracy," Harkin said. He said having members of Congress accompany Aristide to Haiti as he resumes power is a graphic demonstration "that we stand behind the restoration of democracy."

In a conference call with Iowa reporters, Harkin said Thursday he met with Aristide Wednesday, and the deposed leader asked that Harkin accompany him on his return.

Harkin said the congressional delegation would include House members and senators and signals that the U.S. commitment to Haiti is for the long-term.

"We're not going to pull out right away," Harkin said.

Aristide was Haiti's first democratically elected president but was deposed by a military coup. That led to U.S. intervention last month, a move that ousted the country's military leadership and cleared the way for Aristide's return.

Approval of the revised Iowa City Human Rights Ordinance by the Iowa City City Council now allows for protection of people registered as domestic partners.

The ordinance was approved Tuesday night at the City Council meeting by a vote of 6-1. The approval was the first consideration, and two more Council votes will be taken.

Alison Ames Galstad, chairwoman of the Human Rights Commission, said the ordinance is a complete revision of the one the city had for many years. The new draft will go into effect in about five weeks, City Attorney Linda Newman Gentry said.

After ending an 11-year nonabusive marriage in March 1989, Kafawain was single for seven months before meeting the man who later abused her.

BONES LOCATED IN SAHARA

New dinosaur species unearthed in Africa

Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bones from two new species of dinosaurs — a fleet-footed hunter and a long-necked grazer — have been found in Africa. They lived 130 million years ago in a lush, tropical paradise that is now the Sahara desert.

The new hunter dinosaur, about 27 feet long, was named Afrovenator abakensis, or "African hunter from In Abaka," referring to the area of Niger where the bones were found.

The second newly discovered African species was a 60-foot-long plant-eater that is still unnamed. It was a sauropod — akin to the brontosaurus — with a long neck and tail and a massive body. It was so big that its thigh bone was six feet long.

Paul Sereno, leader of a University of Chicago team, said the dinosaur species were the first found in Africa that date from the Cretaceous period, the second half of the age of dinosaurs. The newly found species are similar to animals that lived during an earlier time in North America and Asia, he said.

"All of these types of dinosaurs went extinct in the north, but they survived (much longer) in Africa," said Sereno.

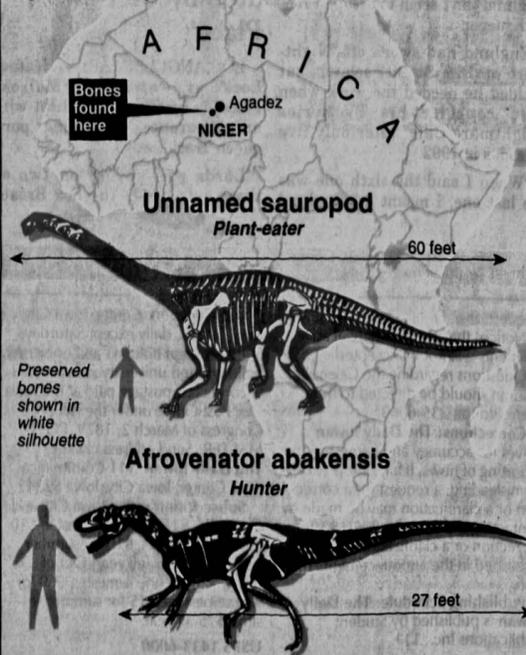

A report by Sereno and his colleagues on studies of the new dinosaurs will be published today in the journal Science.

Sereno said Afrovenator was a type of predator known as an allosaurus. It was smaller than Tyrannosaurus Rex, the killer king that lived during a later era in the American West, but was bigger than the Velociraptor that was featured in the film "Jurassic Park."

"Afrovenator ran on two back legs and had very strong forelimbs with sickle-shaped claws," said Sereno. "The whole skeleton is more slender and has a lighter weight and a faster running ability than allosaurus."

Antique dealer relates history of old passion

Janet Goetz sleeps, breathes and eats in the 20th century, but the subjects of her livelihood and passion are anything but contemporary.

Goetz said the antique business has gone from mom-and-pop establishments to booming retail businesses. Antique furniture is more appealing to the eye and better made than most contemporary pieces, she said.

There are 14 antique shops in Iowa City, but Goetz said the competition is minimal because of diverse merchandise.

"I don't think we compete that much," she said. "It's much more competitive in the shoe business."

Even though customers collect antiques according to their personal tastes and hobbies, Goetz

"Usually, trends relate to whether or not some book was written on the subject," Goetz said.

Majolica pottery, a soft-paste ceramic with a tin glaze, is a hot find right now, and oak furniture always sells well in Iowa City, she said.

Goetz's home is strewn with old furniture waiting to be refinished and antique collections of her own. Oriental rugs cover her floors and shelves are filled with Majolica pottery.

"This is a real funny business because we get all different levels of dealers — people who dabble in antiques as a hobby and people who make a profession out of it," Goetz said.

Her interest in antiques began at an early age as she grew up with her grandmother's Victorian pieces dating from 1860-1880. Everyday contact with antiques during her childhood gave her familiarity with antiques and a critical eye for them.

Goetz begins her morning with a cup of coffee and a walk in Hickory Hill park with her dog, Zephyr. The rest of her workday revolves around anything made before 1940.

Most of her time is spent restoring antique furniture. When a kid bangs his tricycle into his mom's antique wardrobe or table, Goetz is the one who can get the scratches out.

After furniture has been stripped and treated, Goetz said, she hopes the piece will have retained its original look. She said the hardest part of restoration is finding original replacement parts, and it's crucial to know where to find them.

Las Vegas comedian to tie knot with partner

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Rich Little's wedding night should be a hoot.

The impressionist is marrying comedian Jeanette Markey in a private ceremony in Las Vegas on Oct. 29, said Little's spokesman, Bruce Merrin.

Little, 55, and Markey, 28, have been cracking up audiences together for the past two years. They have performed in seven countries and are frequent headliners in Las Vegas.

The two portray famous couples in their show, including George Burns and Gracie Allen, Edith and Archie Bunker, and Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy.

They've also recorded a comedy album, "Clear and President Danger," due out later this year. Both have been married once before.

Limbaugh used a version of the tune in July and August with a Clinton impersonator singing new lyrics about the sexual misconduct allegations leveled against the president by Paula Corbin Jones.

Songwriter Ray Hildebrand of Overland Park filed a copyright infringement lawsuit Tuesday in federal court in Kansas City, Mo., seeking unspecified damages.

Freddy Krueger character won't die for actor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Like the children chased by his razor-fingered alter ego, actor Robert Englund can't seem to escape Freddy Krueger.

Englund had sworn off "Nightmare on Elm Street" sequels but decided he needed the work when NBC canceled his TV series "Nightmare Cafe" after only five episodes in 1992.

"When I said the sixth one was the last one, I meant it," Englund said in Thursday's Orange County Register. But he added, "I was so upset by that cancellation ... I jumped at it. I just wanted to get back to work."

The seventh Freddy movie, "Wes Craven's New Nightmare," is due out today.

Former porn queen to drop by 'Melrose Place'

Lords will not be a regular, and it is unclear what her role will be or which of the show's regulars she'll be involved with, Prousky said. Locklear stars on the show as a cold-hearted vamp.

Lords has appeared in several B-movies since she stopped making porno flicks in 1987. She began making X-rated films when she was just 15.

Man hoodwinks 'Columbo' actor's mom

NEW YORK (AP) — If only Peter Falk's "Columbo" could have been on this real-life case.

A man who says he used to care for Falk's 92-year-old mother, Madeline, has been accused of stealing more than $3 million from her. Prosecutors have moved to freeze the assets of Alfonso P. Cacace, who could also face grand larceny charges.

Prosecutors say Cacace stole money, bonds, jewelry, antiques and furniture. His lawyer denies the allegations. It was unclear how Cacace met Madeline Falk.

Falk, the TV detective on "Columbo," put his mother in a nursing home in 1992. Three months later, without Falk's knowledge, Cacace arranged to have Madeline Falk discharged and returned to New York, prosecutors said.

Madeline Falk then allegedly opened several joint bank accounts with Cacace and he allegedly stole items from her home.

VIEWES SOUGHT FOR U.N. MEETING

Women congregate in I.C. to powwow on world issues

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

More than 200 women from across the state will gather in Iowa City this weekend to make recommendations for next fall's U.N. World Conference on Women in Beijing, China.

"Priorities '95: Anticipating the U.N. World Conference on Women in Beijing" will be held in the UT's International Center. The event begins tonight and ends Saturday.

Participants will discuss the leading issues already scheduled for the Beijing meeting, such as development, peace, the environment and violence against women, said Elsa Chaney, a member of the conference organization committee.

"This is an attempt to inform Iowa women about the issues that are going to be debated in Beijing," Chaney said. "This also gives women the chance to have input in the official U.S. position paper."

Participants in the conference will submit their recommendations and conclusions to the U.S. State Department for inclusion in the official report the U.S. delegation will take to Beijing next year.

Dorothy Paul, executive director of the Iowa U.N. Association and a member of the conference organizing committee, said the conference will give women a chance to directly contribute to the Beijing conference.

"Just making recommendations shows that people are working on the issues, that they are interested in the issues and that support is out there," she said.

This weekend's conference includes eight workshops on women and decision-making, poverty, education, health, economics, employment, legal rights and violence. Each participant may sign up for two workshops. International foods and performances in music, dance and poetry will add a cultural dimension to the conference.

Keynote speaker at the conference will be Vera Gathright, a native of Croatia and a U.S. representative to the United Nations' International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women.

Chaney said the local conference allows women to get a better understanding of the world.

"Iowa has a lot of people who are interested in the international issues," she said. "There is a natural basis of interest for Iowa women in women around the world who face the same problems."

Though only eight men are currently registered, Julie Ann Fishel, a member of the organization committee, said she hopes more will participate.

"Men's input is important," she said. "Both men and women make up society. With issues concerning women it's necessary to look at men's point of view also since they will be important in the implementation of policies."

The local conference is one of 15 being held across the United States in preparation for next September.

Late registration will be from 6-7 tonight and costs $18 for students and $35 for nonstudents.

Orgren said she will speak about the soul and the unity of the body, mind and spirit.

"We have to get in touch with our soul and see ourselves as not flawed," she said. "We have to see ourselves as spiritually perfect and that we're here to learn lessons. SCHWAN'S ICE CREAM FAULTED

13 salmonella cases crop up in Iowa

Associated Press

DES MOINES — There are at least 13 confirmed cases of salmonella poisoning in Iowa, and at least five of those people reported eating Schwan's ice cream before getting sick, Iowa health officials said Thursday.

Kevin Teale, a spokesman for the Iowa Department of Public Health, said the other eight people either have not been interviewed or could not remember eating any Schwan's ice cream.

Cases of salmonella poisoning have been confirmed in Minnesota, South Dakota and Wisconsin, Bob Howard, a spokesman for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, said Wednesday.

Health officials in Georgia, Indiana and North Dakota also reported confirmed cases.

Teale said the bacteria strain found in Iowa — salmonella enteritidis — is the same one that has been confirmed in Minnesota as being tied to the ice cream.

People in Pennsylvania, Montana, Arizona, Illinois, Nebraska, Oregon and Washington got sick after eating the ice cream, but the exact cause of their illness has not yet been confirmed.

Salmonella causes nausea, vomiting, abdominal cramps, diarrhea, fever and headaches. Symptoms are most severe in infants, the elderly and people with weak immune systems.

Schwan's Sales Enterprises, based in Marshall, Minn., issued a national recall of its ice cream products Oct. 7.

The company has temporarily closed its Marshall plant and moved its bulk ice cream production to the Wells Dairy plant in LeMars.

Iowa man pleads guilty to Minn. police slayings

Pam Schmid
Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn., — Guy Harvey Baker pleaded guilty Thursday to two counts of first-degree murder in the August killings of two St. Paul, Minn., police officers.

Ramsey County Judge Kenneth Fitzpatrick sentenced Baker to two consecutive life terms without parole.

Baker, 26, of Mason City, Iowa, pleaded guilty to the Aug. 26 killings of officers Ron Ryan Jr., 27, and Tim Jones, 36, against the advice of his attorney.

Assistant County Attorney Fred Fink told the judge that Baker coldly ambushed both officers and later bragged about it. Fink called that attitude "totally disgusting."

Ryan's mother, father and wife asked for the maximum sentences.

"Guy Harvey Baker deserves nothing more than to suffer the way Ron had to suffer," said Ryan's wife, Ann. "Anything less than the death penalty is too good for you."

Fink said this is the first sentence under a state law passed after the 1992 slaying of Minneapolis police officer Jerry Haaf allowing for tougher murder penalties in cases involving police deaths.

Minnesota does not allow capital punishment.

Judge OKs extradition of Missouri teens

Associated Press

A juvenile court judge on Thursday ordered four Missouri teens sent to Iowa to stand trial on charges in the stabbing death of Rebecca Hauser.

Associate Circuit Judge Gary Lewis signed the order in Kirksville, Mo., sending the four to Iowa. It is now up to Iowa court officials to determine whether they should be tried as juveniles or adults.

Twin brothers Burt and Derek Smith of Kirksville, Jayson Speaks of Kirksville and Blake Privitt of Green City, Mo., all 15 years old, are charged in Iowa's Marshall County juvenile court with first-degree murder and first-degree robbery.

In court records, Marshall County Sheriff's officials said the boys were runaways who had stolen a Blazer from Privitt's parents and were driving to Canada. They ended up in Marshalltown when the Blazer broke down. Sheriff's officials said that's when they used yellow and red postal service warning lights on top of the Blazer to pull Hauser over.

The records say the runaways hadn't decided whether to just rob someone or take their car.

But according to the application for a search warrant for the Blazer, prepared by sheriff's detective Burt Tecklenburg, two of the teens said Burt Smith shot and stabbed Hauser when she asked them for identification after they'd stopped her car.

"The driver walked up to the car with a flashlight and told the woman to get out of the car," the document released Wednesday said. "The victim refused and demanded identification from him twice. The driver went back to the Blazer and told them that she wanted ID, and what should they do now."

"The passenger, supposedly Burt Smith, then got out of the vehicle and with a .22 rifle, shot through the back window. The victim may have been turned around looking at them at the time. Burt Smith reportedly then put the gun down, ran up to the driver's side window and kicked out the window and began stabbing at the victim repeatedly."

Hauser, a 32-year-old wife and mother of four from rural Union, was found dead in her car early last Wednesday along a county road near Liscomb.

INCREASED GUN USAGE BLAMED

Teen murder rate skyrockets as activity in gangs surges

A.J. Hostetter
Associated Press

ATLANTA — The homicide rate among young men ages 15 to 19 more than doubled between 1985 and 1991, and researchers attribute the rise to drug gangs' recruiting of younger members

"We've got to get guns out of the hands of these kids — it's an epidemic... You have kids transforming bloody noses into shootings."

Alfred Blumstein, of the Heinz School of Public Policy and Management and increased use of guns instead of fists.

"When it comes to violence, in the past what may have led to fist-fights now leads to gunfire," Dr. David Satcher, director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said Thursday.

The homicide rate for males 15 to 19 jumped from 13 per 100,000 in 1985 to 33 per 100,000 in 1991, a 154 percent increase, the CDC said.

The nation's highest homicide rate — 41 per 100,000 — is among men ages 20 to 24, according to the CDC.

"We've got to get guns out of the hands of these kids — it's an epidemic," said Alfred Blumstein of the Heinz School of Public Policy and Management at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh. He contributed to the CDC study.

Blumstein said drug gangs are recruiting teen-agers because the youngsters have little sense of the risks and consequences.

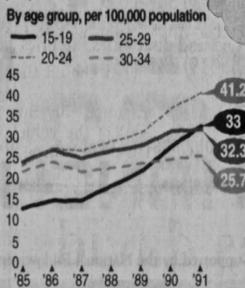

Guns claimed the lives of 88 percent of the 15- to 19-year-olds killed in 1991. From 1985 to 1991, 97 percent of the increase was attributed to guns.

"You have kids transforming bloody noses into shootings," Blumstein said.

Homicide's ranking as the No. 2 cause of death among males ages 15 to 19 has changed little since 1963, said Dr. Kenneth Powell of the CDC's National Center for

MEDIA MEMBERS SUBPOENAED

Ito poised to ferret out Simpson press leaks

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A TV reporter, her boss and a police spokesman were subpoenaed Thursday by O.J. Simpson's lawyers, who want to find the source of persistent leaks to the media.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito will take up the issue of leaks during a hearing today.

KNBC-TV reporter Tracie Savage and station general manager Carole Black have been subpoenaed, station spokeswoman Regina Miyamoto said.

The station was chastised by Ito for a story on DNA test results he called erroneous. Savage later said her sources provided some inaccur-

"I am not looking for hermits. We would be very suspicious of a Rip van Winkle that awoke yesterday and just learned of this case."

Lance Ito, superior court judge rate information, but she said they wouldn't specify what was wrong with the story.

Cmdr. David Gascon, a spokesman for the Los Angeles Police Department, said he, too, was subpoenaed. The defense has accused police of leaking information.

Meanwhile, judging from their responses on written questionnaires, Simpson's potential jurors have one thing in common: They haven't escaped publicity about the case.

"I am not looking for hermits," Ito warned the first batch of potential jurors. "We would be very suspicious of a Rip van Winkle that awoke yesterday and just learned of this case."

He spoke as individual questioning of potential jurors got under way Wednesday. It was supposed to continue Thursday but was canceled when one of the prosecutors called in sick.

In place of jury selection, Ito convened a brief hearing during which he ordered prosecutors to turn over socks to the defense after the prosecution finishes tests on them.

The defense wants to do independent tests on the socks, which police seized from Simpson's master bedroom the day after the murders of his ex-wife and her friend.

None of the 84 people called into court Wednesday claimed to have missed news reports about the June 12 knife killings of Simpson's ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman.

Many said in the questionnaires that they were glued to television sets as Simpson's Ford Bronco meandered along southern California freeways during his flight from police on June 17.

The prospects were questioned about their beliefs, backgrounds and knowledge of the case. Some of the 75-page questionnaires they filled out last month were released, providing a glimpse into their thoughts and lives.

"I'm inclined to believe him guilty at this point," wrote a 68-year-old Los Angeles woman. But a 56-year-old South Bay woman wrote, "More likely not guilty than guilty."

Many promised to keep an open mind. Some indicated that they took allegations that Simpson is a killer in stride, just another story in a city struck by earthquakes, riots and brush fires.

"Living in L.A., this type of news is not surprising to me anymore," wrote a 32-year-old cleaning man from West Los Angeles.

The responses came out as the long, grueling task of face-to-face interviews began in Ito's court. By law, the judge is the only person who may question jurors, but Ito said he would allow questions from lawyers because of the "unusual nature" of the case and intense media coverage.

U.S. Marines with the 15th Marine Expeditionary unit from Camp Pendleton, Calif., advance during a live fire exercise Thursday in the desert north of Kuwait City. Despite the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from the northern Kuwaiti border, the buildup of American and allied troops continues.

DEFENSE SECRETARY ARRIVES IN SAUDI ARABIA

U.S. troop flow to Gulf slows as Iraqis withdraw from border

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Noting Iraq's pullback, the Pentagon put a hold Thursday on some ground units and aircraft that had been ordered to the Persian Gulf. "Iraq heard our message," President Clinton declared, but he also said the United States would not let down its guard.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary William Perry arrived in Saudi Arabia on a two-day visit to the Persian Gulf region and said the deployment of some 30,000 ground troops would continue no matter what the Iraqis did.

Perry said some of those troops could begin returning home within weeks if the Iraqis keep withdrawing the forces that had pushed close to the Kuwaiti border. But the U.S. warplanes in the region would be bolstered to continue enforcing — in more visible fashion — the no-fly zone over southern Iraq, Perry said.

Clinton, at the White House, said the situation still bears watching "very, very carefully."

"We will not allow Iraq to threaten its neighbors or to intimidate the United Nations as it ensures that Iraq never again possesses weapons of mass destruction," the president said in a satellite address to broadcasters in Los Angeles.

In Saudi Arabia, Perry said, "We're going ahead with the deployment ... because we don't have the withdrawal of the Iraqi forces completed, and it won't be completed in some time."

"To put in simple terms, I don't trust the statements we've gotten from them," he said.

Even as Clinton applauded the pullback, the administration said a number of Iraqi units had stopped their withdrawal, pausing near the town of Naziriyah.

The units amount to three brigades of troops, or about 3,500 soldiers, officials said. One of the units is heavily armed with tanks.

"We're watching it very carefully," one official said, adding that it was a matter of concern but that "it's not a crisis mode."

At the United Nations, the United States proposed that Iraqi troops and heavy equipment near the Kuwaiti border be limited, a move Clinton praised as "very strong." But it is less strict than an earlier suggestion that would have barred all Iraqi forces from the area.

A senior military official said plans to deploy about 19,000 Marines from Camp Pendleton, Calif., are being adjusted and only about 7,000 now are expected to go to the region. An announcement from Camp Pendleton said the deployment of the 19,000 Marines had been delayed "until later."

Another official said the Army's air assault forces with the 101st Airborne Division from Fort Campbell, Ky., would remain on alert but would not deploy.

A third official said some Air Force jets and bombers would "pause" in Europe while en route to the Gulf, pending clarification of the situation.

"It's been slowed up considerably," the second official said of the military's movement. All spoke on condition of anonymity.

One of the officials said stormy weather in the Indian Ocean also had delayed some of the ships bringing supplies into the Gulf. There could be problems in bringing in troops if their equipment had not yet arrived by ship.

Central Command spokesman Capt. Robert Prucha, asked about the reports, said, "We are adapting the flow to conform to the timing of matching everyone up." But he declined to offer specific details of the troop movements.

At the height of the crisis, the Pentagon had envisioned sending about 63,500 soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines into the Gulf to face off against the 71,000 troops Saddam Hussein had massed on the border.

Perry said he planned to meet with top Saudi officials, including King Fahd, to seek "the cooperation needed in order to make this deployment work."

The defense secretary said the United States has to get approval "for bedding down each of the aircraft we bring in here, and we need to get that clearly straightened out" with the Saudi leadership.

MOB SCENE ANTICIPATED

Troops to safeguard Aristide homecoming

Lisa Hamm
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — To avoid "mob hysteria," the U.S. military plans to carry President Jean-Bertrand Aristide by helicopter from the airport to the National Palace when he returns from exile Saturday.

"Right now that's our plan: to help him," Lt. Gen. Henry Hugh Shelton, commander of U.S. forces in Haiti, said Thursday, hours after Haiti's former army leaders left for exile in Panama.

Shelton said he feared that massive celebrations Saturday hailing Aristide's return after three years in exile would degenerate into a mob scene.

"All the leaders have stressed nonviolence ... but you get the crowd hysteria that starts to creep in occasionally, particularly if there are those who want to incite a riot," he said.

Shelton met with Haiti's new army commander, Maj. Gen. Jean-Claude Duperval, for several hours Thursday to discuss security.

Shelton said the U.S. military wanted to avoid situations in which Aristide would be part of a procession or make impromptu speeches before crowds.

Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and his family were taken to the international airport by a convoy of U.S. Humvees before dawn Thursday. Then the man who helped overthrow Aristide on Sept. 30, 1991, accompanied by his top general, Philippe Biamby, flew to exile in Panama.

U.S. soldiers erected a barricade of concertina wire around military headquarters to protect Haitian soldiers from crowds seeking retribution.

"Seeing this gives me a bad feeling, but it's necessary," said Haitian Lt. Col. Francois Raphael, who stood inside the razor-sharp barricade. "It's a question of security for both sides — for us and for (the people)."

U.S. soldiers had to rescue a soldier in civilian clothing and an accused thief from the wrathful crowd.

In Washington, the White House announced a series of incentives bestowed on the deposed military leaders, including safe passage for friends and family to the United States and access to their money frozen in U.S. banks.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said 23 relatives and associates of Cedras and Biamby were flown to Miami Wednesday night. The United States also plans to lease three of Cedras' homes in Haiti — in effect giving government money to the one-time dictator.

Myers suggested that at least one of the actions was required to persuade Cedras to leave Haiti.

But drawing a line, she said, "Cedras and Biamby will not be allowed to come to the United States ... ever."

In Port-au-Prince, U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schragger denied at a news conference that the United States paid off Cedras to induce him to leave. But he said the U.S. government was going to rent Cedras' two homes at "fair market value" to be used by U.S. personnel or sublet to other tenants.

Soldiers and U.S. Humvees blocked the gates to Cedras' hillside house.

One soldier displayed a desk nameplate that had belonged to Cedras and confided, "This is a souvenir."

A new democratic movement announced its formation Thursday.

The National Federation of Democratic Organizations is led by two pro-Aristide legislators recently returned from exile who said they would work to broaden political participation.

There were excited preparations everywhere for the arrival of "Titid," as Aristide is affectionately known. People painted Aristide murals on walls and buildings in Carrefour, a poor neighborhood in western Port-au-Prince.

Rumors of murders spur uprising

Charles Hanley
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — It started somewhere up the road with someone.

"Have you heard about Cote-Plage? Fifty-two prisoners missing. Probably buried behind the police station."

It rolled down the road toward Cote-Plage, sweeping up people with it and building intensity as the sultry afternoon wore on. It continued gathering details, accumulating more outrage, finally crashing against the outer walls of the police station — at least 5,000 Haitians besieging three dozen frightened policemen.

And it wasn't true, said the U.S. Marine officer who investigated

Wednesday's incident.

"The whole thing was just a rumor from the get-go," said Col. Richard Rosser. But it took a couple of dozen U.S. military policemen to stamp it out.

The wild, confused two hours in this poor western district of Port-au-Prince was a sobering reminder of just how explosive Haiti still is at this delicate juncture between governments — a time when no one claims ultimate policing authority in the streets and when any rumor can become a bombshell.

The tension can only tighten as Haitians count down to Saturday and the triumphant return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"It's very dangerous," an Italian nun who works in Cote-Plage said to reporters on the edge of the crowd.

What happened, according to Rosser, was that a very specific rumor began circulating outside Cote-Plage: American soldiers had fed 52 prisoners Tuesday night at the Omega, an old factory converted some time ago to a military-police compound. On Wednesday morning all were gone. They must have been killed and buried in the back.

The rumor fit the murderous image of Haiti's police, leftovers from the military government just forced to resign by the United States.

By 4:30 p.m., thousands of vengeful Haitians had surrounded the walled compound in Cote-Plage, blanketing the road filled with potholes outside and spreading to nearby rooftops.

GOVERNMENT FEARS RESISTANCE MOVEMENT

Haitian army leader escapes U.S. grasp

David Beard
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A Haitian army commander who has eluded American control is reportedly organizing resistance to the U.S. intervention.

American commander Hugh Shelton said Thursday that Lt. Col. Claudel Josephat, a leading strategist for the Haitian army who commanded the northern district before his soldiers got into a firefight with U.S. Marines on Sept. 24, was missing.

Lt. Gen. Shelton, commander of the 19,500 American soldiers in Haiti, stressed in an Associated Press interview hours after former dictator Raoul Cedras left Haiti for exile in Panama that the United States has no indication armed training is under way.

Josephat resigned his commission in disgust after the Cap-Haitien firefight that left 10 Haitians dead.

PROFIT MOTIVE

Interests of education

Last week, the city of Hartford, Conn., veered off in a radical new direction in an effort to solve the significant problems in its school district. Despite spending nearly double the national average per student and paying an average salary of $52,000 to its teachers, the district still had one of the highest dropout rates and lowest test scores in the state. Frustration and despair were rampant among its citizens. After much debate, they chose a solution. They are going to turn over the entire school district, including its $200 million budget, to a private company.

The basic premise here is fairly simple. The private company, Education Alternatives Inc. of Minneapolis, will come in and pay the bills, take care of maintenance, direct the training of teachers, shape curriculum and invest in technology. They claim to be able to improve test scores and performance. Here's the real kicker, though: They get to keep half of every dollar they save the city.

These two organizations do not belong together in this type of relationship because they have very different goals. The school district exists to educate. The company exists to make money. In this instance, the company will make money by helping the school district, and thus the city, save money.

To save money implies that it not be spent on something. How will this company decide what not to spend — or at least spend less — money on? They will look to areas which don't particularly contribute to raising test scores or lowering dropout rates, which is what the company needs to do in order to attract new customers in the future. Classes such as art, music, shop or physical education can't be measured against this quantitative type of standard and will thus be in danger. Yet these kinds of classes do contribute to the formation of a well-rounded person, which is part of the school district's goal in educating its students. The goals of the company and the goals of the school district are in opposition and the students suffer. This is — or should be — unacceptable.

The fact that a school district like Hartford's turned to a private company like this is yet another indication that the education system in our country is in trouble. If this company can somehow make this work they could be creating a whole new industry. Just imagine if competitive market forces developed. School districts would sell themselves off to the highest bidder, or the one who made the best promises, anyway. It's highly unlikely that this will happen, though, because there's an inherent flaw in this type of solution. The interests of education will always be at risk of being compromised by the profit motive. Not a lot of people will take that kind of risk. At least we should hope not.

IOWA CITY TRAFFIC

Take heart, drivers

Recently, traffic problems in Iowa City have been called to our attention, making Iowa City out to be a congested urban area where rush hour looks like something out of the movie "Falling Down."

No one is denying that there are certain problem areas on Iowa City roads. So it takes five minutes instead of two to get to South Gilbert Street from downtown — big deal. That's hardly bumper-to-bumper gridlock.

The problem is not that our streets can't hold all the vehicles in Iowa City. The problem is far more complex. So here's a look at possible reasons for this unnecessary uproar over the ills of Iowa City traffic:

- There are two types of drivers in Iowa City: slow ones and fast ones. When you combine the two, traffic hardly moves. By the time a faster driver has pulled in front of the slower one, the faster driver has hit an ill-timed traffic light. Meanwhile, the slower driver has just pulled behind the faster one, and both wait at the stoplight. Not much progress there.

- Everyone is driving to and from the same areas. There are two places to go in this town: downtown and away from downtown. So of course there's going to be traffic if you put some 40,000 cars on the same path.

- Everyone is driving in circles looking for parking. Combine that task with the frustration that eventually sets in and you have roads filled with angry, impatient drivers narrowly focused on finding a space somewhere within 10 light-years of their destination. Lack of parking clogs up our roads.

- Have you noticed that there are traffic lights and stop signs every, oh, 5 feet or so? Would it hurt the city to take a few of these out? Do we really need a stop sign at the Dodge Street and Kirkwood Avenue intersection? It's not even a four-way stop. The ease with which people can drive through streets is obviously interrupted when you see a red light every two minutes.

- The one-way streets are ridiculous. All of you newcomers to Iowa City surely understand. What is with these streets? You're driving along one-way traffic on Dodge Street and — surprise! — there are oncoming cars headed right at you. What? You didn't see that small sign hidden behind that large maple tree stating that the direction of traffic is about to suddenly and unexpectedly change? Hey, at least they don't hide from view the "No parking" signs. Otherwise, we'd all be falsely assuming that there were 101 places to park instead of the actual 11 spaces that exist.

So take heart all ye disgruntled drivers of Iowa City streets. Don't let your blood pressure rise every time you get into your car. Consider riding a bike to your destination instead. But good luck finding a place to lock it up without the risk of it being confiscated and sold for parts somewhere in Muscatine.

JONATHAN LYONS

Screen saver is a commentary on our future

Since setting up my computer at home, I've become a bit enslaved to it, as have so many elsewhere on the planet. But being by nature opinionated animals, many human beings may find the common flying toasters or fish tank screen saver programs, while imaginative, to be a little on the less than meaningful side.

It is exactly this sort of opportunity that a good entrepreneur can take greatest advantage of: a young, new market that is still yawning steadily and widely enough to comprise a growing number of computer-enmeshed students and professionals.

Recent news and marketing reports heralded the arrival of Conservative Screen Saver, marketed by Advanced Computer Systems of Dallas.

Yes, for only $39.95, you, too, may have former President Ronald Reagan, piper to the dittoheads Rush Limbaugh or convicted felon Oliver North drift across your screen during those idle — sorry, make that idle — moments. And who knows — periodic updates may be made available, lessening the marginalization in which former Vice President Dan Quayle currently basks or making Bob Dole's face a Republican household icon. Even Pat Buchanan, whose bid for the presidency a few years back operated openly on his myopic, country-club vision of "a predominantly white, predominantly Christian America," could grace the screens of conservatives everywhere.

Setting our time machine to one year in the future, we can see the market as it will be by October 1995:

Liberal Screen Saver finds a market, as well, but who to eulogize? Bill and Hillary? For some,

Many on the left don't seem to be exceedingly pleased with the president and first lady lately. Al and Tipper Gore? Hmm ... Tipper's collusions with the Parents' Music Resource Center and their efforts to label music they find objectionable rubs many free speech advocates the wrong way. The solution arrives in the form of a liberal-minded option to selectively edit and / or delete some of the pictures. The company agrees to donate one-millionth of a percent of all sales to preserve national forests.

This package includes pro-women's equality leader Gloria Steinem, the recently resurrected former President Jimmy Carter but does not include Walter Mondale or Michael Dukakis (no need to rub salt in old wounds).

Christian Screen Saver proves difficult, with all of the directions and interpretations Christianity has frayed into. All versions include computer-illuminated Christs, to be certain. For more enthusiastic members of the flock, there's Jesus with hands-on, click and drag Stigmata™ for Macintosh or Windows. Catholics have the option of selecting the current pope. Most versions of Christian Screen Saver include a Last Supper image and a digitized ascension, with editing options to tailor the application to one's individual perspective and faith.

The religious right markets its own image file, which includes slogans derogatory to homosexuals and images of book and witch burnings. Sales collapse. Corporate donations keep this file available through an exclusive "700 Club" offer: buy Pat Robertson's latest book, "How The Lord Tells Us Clinton is an Antichrist," and receive your copy of the Religious Right Screen Saver free of charge. Sales collapse.

Over at the Writers' Workshop, the Literary Icons Screen Saver begins sprucing up the computers of those whose terminals have been left idle with different image files, including authors from different genres to suit the individual writer's word processor. William S. Burroughs appears in a psychedelic color-shifting image if one selects the experimental writers file. "Howl" author Allen Ginsberg's countenance graces the North American Man/Boy Love Association literary choice file for this screen saver.

As an added bonus, workshop students, graduates and faculty can have a friend with the proper equipment add their own promotional mug shots and / or those of friends to their files down at the Information Arcade, allowing them to construct a personalized hopeful writers file for this application.

Sales wobble locally after the refusal of some of the workshop's more Luddite members to learn how to operate anything more efficient at word processing than a manual typewriter.

Record labels begin marketing their own additions to the Grunge™ and Alternative™ scenes to college students' Grunge™ Screen Saver files, featuring a selection of J. Crew's trendiest pre-torn jeans and a variety of flannel-pattern images. The recording industry chimes in, including free image files of music icons with a CD purchase at the regular price.

Meanwhile, back in 1994, all of this has me thinking — scheming, really. This market is wide-open. My significant other is studying in Far Eastern religions. I think I may be able to stage a desktop marketing coup over at Calvin Hall with my own introduction: the Zen Screen Saver. Leave your computer idle for a preestablished duration, and Zen Screen Saver kicks in, leaving you with its trademark — an empty screen.

KOBIE COLEMAN

A secret talk between Hussein and Aristide

Lawson called to tell me he was on his way over. I knew I was in trouble. Lawson was a friendly adversary from my philosophy days as an undergrad. He'd drop by from time to time, and we would kick philosophy. Last time, we discussed Harvey Natanson's contention that due to slavery some so-called African-Americans are not obligated to obey the laws of society because we never consented to them nor have we received the political protection that other fully free white Americans have. Thus began our debate about citizenship and slavery. I said, "Old Nate thinks some of our brothers and sisters are in a 'state of nature.' All we need is the right application and BAM! All new Black Action Movement!"

Lawson, who is notoriously deliberate, shook his head slowly. "Hmmm, I'll have to meditate on that," he said. "I'll get back to you." And here he was, knocking at my door.

"What's up, Laws? Come in," I said. He skipped the formalities and marched right past me into the living room.

"Your conclusion is false," he said. "Given an accurate account of the slave experience, most African-Americans were in a position to give their consent. First, many slaves wanted to be citizens — look at the great agitator Frederick Douglass — and when they were emancipated in 1863 they showed they were capable of the responsibilities of citizenship."

"Slow your roll, Laws. Your example of a free African-American, whom I call an Afrikan, wanting to be a citizen says absolutely nothing about what Afrikan slaves wanted after so-called emancipation. Even using Douglass' solid example of agitation for citizenship backfires because, as the record shows, Douglass himself became bitterly disillusioned about the potential of Afrikans to become full American citizens.

"Afrikan slaves had no choices upon emancipation. If they had a choice, who is to say that some would not have decided to return to Africa or build a free state in America or continue building the colony in Liberia? No one was to say because no former slave had the right to make her own choices. Wake up, brother Lawson!"

"Well, the federal government did make an attempt to help in the adjustment from slavery to freedom." One small setback for Laws — still, he was determined. "The creation of the Freedmen's Bureau was a worthy federal attempt to act on behalf of African-Americans."

I shook my head. "One small step for white men, one backward leap for all Afrikankind. The Freedmen's Bureau could not begin to address 200 years of a white American stampede over subjugated Afrikan slaves. You have to admit that the government pulled its troops out of the South intentionally, allowing the former slaveholders to move right back into power. The government did not have our best interests at heart whenever they claimed to act on our behalf."

Lawson went on to contradict himself a number of times by admitting it was government inaction which led to Afrikan civil disobedience. That was not the whole truth. The representatives of white power acted when they wanted to — not because of any "moral persuasion" from Afrikan people and definitely not by our consent.

Now we can explain the presence of two so-called civil rights movements in the United States. The first was at the end of the Civil War, when Afrikans were given freedom, voting rights and full access to the Constitution. Over the next 50 years, all these rights were taken away. The second movement began after WWII, and by the late 1960s Afrikans were once again given freedom, voting and housing rights, and full access to the Constitution. Representatives of the "new world order" grant Afrikans "civil rights" when they want to, and they take them away or apply them to suit their own needs when they want to. Look out for Civil Rights Movement III coming to a theater near you, as long as it keeps pockets lined on Capitol Hill.

"Laws, you do not need to assume that former slaves chose to be citizens."

"But not to do so would mean that Natanson was right. If former slaves were not citizens, then our behavior cannot be seen as civil disobedience, but rather as an act of war against the state. Then we must depend on the good will of white Americans who are citizens to try to convince the state to protect us — and you see how far that got us!"

Lawson had fallen into my trap. I smiled, "Far beyond civil disobedience, we abandon the state of nature and assume the greatest control over our own lives when our cause is revolution against oppression. Fight the power and overturn a society that never intended for us to become citizens. Our leaders have been waiting on the good will of citizens all our lives. We, who have always depended on ourselves and each other, now look to some outside state, perhaps some rising Afrikan nation, to defend us, offend them and truly free all Afrikans!"

"Oh? Who's going to lead this revolt? Saddam Hussein?" Laws smirked, and I had to laugh. I didn't know he had a sense of humor. "Or maybe Jean-Bertrand Aristide?"

I threw my head back and laughed loudly. Then I looked hard at Lawson and said, "What about you, brother Lawson? Why not you?"

Kobie Coleman's column appears alternate Fridays on the Viewpoints Pages.

How many years will it take you to graduate and why?

Sridhar Jayaraman, UI graduate student

"Two to three more years because I'm working on my Ph.D. in medical engineering. I've been here for one year. I've already got my M.A."

Eliot Blake, UI graduate student

"I have no idea — I'm a graduate student. Maybe four more years. I told my dad three because he keeps asking me about it. It is at least a five- or six-year deal to get a Ph.D."

Cheryl Wiand, UI senior

"Five years. I'm a biochemistry major — that should explain it. I took 12 hours a semester and went full time in the summer, too."

Heidi Ludwig, UI sophomore

"It's a long story. I did one year at Lynn Carnegie-Melton University and a semester at Harvard extension. So I'm a second-semester sophomore, and all in all, it'll be about four and a half years. I'm feeling ambitious."

GUEST OPINION • DONNA FLAYHAN

Explaining the history of the sex-act policy

In a guest opinion (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 21), Jeff Koenig argued that the classroom materials policy does not limit academic freedom at the UI, yet stated that he was not completely informed on the subject and would like to be corrected if wrong. Here is the correction.

On the history of the policy, Koenig wrote, "Students have, in the past, objected to the nature of certain films and / or materials presented in class. A policy has been enacted requiring instructors to inform students of potentially offensive classroom materials."

The actual history of the drive for the policy is not so simple. The fact is over 2,500 signatures — 60 percent from undergraduates — have been collected opposing the policy in its various forms, while only a handful of students (six or fewer) have actually complained about materials fostering the drive for a policy. President Rawlings and the regents have ignored the voices of hundreds of students while picking up on the voices of a few in order to give legitimacy to their homophobic attack on academic freedom. The facts are as follows:

In the fall of 1991, a few students in a German language class complained that the German award-winning film "Taxi Zum Klo" had scenes with gay sex. One student called her parents, who called The Des Moines Register, and the regents picked up on it to start their drive for a policy. Then-regents President Marvin Pomerantz commented, "We hope we don't see this kind of thing again" and also stated that he didn't think any of the instructors involved would be fired only because "It would be difficult to make the dismissal stick." Thus began the chill on academic freedom at the UI.

In February 1993, Teaching Assistant Megan O'Connell was vilified in the press when a student complained to the regents after seeing a 10-minute video presentation by UI graduate student Franklin Evans in an art colloquium — the film contained a few seconds of electronically distorted images of gay oral sex that was graphically distorted. The student who complained was given the floor at the regents' meeting and lied about the content of the video, while O'Connell was not even allowed to speak in her own defense. The dozens of students who supported their right to view the experimental presentation were not allowed to speak either.

In March of 1993 came a hushed-up incident that clearly showed that the drive for the policy was not about sexually explicit materials but rather about quashing all discussion of homosexuality in UI classrooms. An American studies TA was reprimanded for showing the documentary film "Paris is Burning." The film depicts the lives of gay men living in New York City who support one another emotionally and participate in drag queen costume displays. The film contains no sexually explicit scenes and was shown in a context where the class was discussing alternative family structures. Clearly appropriate, yet the TA was reprimanded. The reprimand was eventually rescinded, but the original letter remains on his file. This chilling message was not lost on TAs whose job security is nonexistent and need for strong recommendations to get jobs when they leave here is jeopardized by reprimands.

It is in this context of intimidation that the regents took up the complaints of a handful of students in order to provide a cover for their own drive for a homophobic classroom materials policy. In the fall of 1993, the regents mandated that the UI Faculty Senate come up with a policy. When they finally passed a watered down version of the policy, it was not "acceptable" to the regents.

Over winter break, President Rawlings collaborated with a tiny handful of faculty members to draft the current "unusual and unexpected" materials policy that they have since rammed down the throats of students and faculty at this university. This new wording allows for a continued attack on classroom materials dealing with homosexuality at the same time that it broadens the potential areas of censorship to anything they deem unusual or unexpected.

In the spring of 1994, many instructors were particularly intimidated to hear how the policy was being carried out. The administration required a warning on the critically acclaimed film "Kiss of the Spider Woman," and they carried out an investigation of a TA on the basis of an anonymous complaint.

In April a communication studies TA showed a video on AIDS in a production class in order to demonstrate editing techniques (again the video had no sexually explicit materials). On an anonymous complaint, Provost Peter Nathan called the chairman of the department, who called the TA in. She had to prove her innocence by giving the tape to the chairman for review. While this particular TA was "found innocent," the chill was felt by all TAs and instructors and the message was clear — on an anonymous complaint to the highest authority you may be investigated and have to prove your innocence.

For already overburdened TAs and untenured faculty who are busy teaching and researching, the idea of spending time and energy defending oneself inevitably leads to self-censorship. Thus, entire areas of inquiry are now being stigmatized by a warning or eliminated from the classroom altogether. Students are not allowed to think for themselves and make up their own informed opinions about different materials, and instructors are operating in a climate of fear — not a climate of academic freedom.

Clearly, academic freedom is under attack at the UI. It is the wishes of Rawlings and the regents — not students — that limit classroom discussions. The good news is that with thousands opposed to the policy we can overturn it. The regents will be in Iowa City Oct. 19, and instructors and students opposed to the policy should be there to force them to overturn their homophobic attack on academic freedom.

DI attacks athletes

To the Editor:
It is becoming an all too common situation where The Daily Iowan tries to drum up some kind of controversy in the athletic department. Why does the DI see it as its job to cause trouble? I was not going to write until I read "Readers say ..." (DI, Oct. 5), which, as always, should be known as "Readers say what DI wants." The article itself about football players in low-income housing was bad, but the "Readers say ..." shows the influence that the DI has on students and how it can mislead them.

The article did not provide all the facts and was written with the purpose of misleading the campus. The fact is that everything going on in the Pheasant Ridge Apartments is perfectly legal. The author knew that and tried to make something else out of it. Obviously she did not know the facts about the individuals involved. I will not go ahead and embarrass anyone living in Pheasant Ridge who was mentioned in the article; the author did enough of that by attaching their names to this whole situation.

The fact is that some of these players come from struggling families who can't even afford to fly them across the country at Thanksgiving. The fact is that these students are transplanted from across the country and told they are not allowed by NCAA standards to hold a job. The fact is that any student on any kind of scholarship is eligible for this housing. No mention was made of that.

The sad fact is that this article was written only to improve someone's standing in her journalism class and not with the facts. She proudly stated that the players get a monthly stipend of $400. The fact is that it is $350. This may seem like a lot, but remember this covers all meals except for five in a week. It is intended to cover utilities and rent as well. At this point, that monthly check does not go far.

This attack on athletes is just another example of how the DI tries to tear things down. Why is it the paper is filled with weekend trouble every week, but an athlete in trouble ends up on the front page? The quick-to-convict DI tarnished the reputation of former basketball player James Moses last year running his name and picture in a negative event in which a completely different James Moses was involved. Get your facts straight.

Get off the back of the athletes, DI. They are doing a lot more for this school than you will ever be able to do in bringing it down.

Editor's note: The crime James Moses was supposedly accused of was actually committed by Moses' cousin, who identified himself to police as James Moses.

Suggestions for the Burlington Street dam

To the Editor:
If you have an old cannon lying around, you spike it. That's what they've done in the Civil War memorial battlefields. Here in Iowa, there are these useless old roller dams — and they can still kill! I have heard the "damn fool" explanation again regarding the "posted signs" and "everybody knows" about the dam. Not everybody knows. These kinds of dams weren't placed in every river in every state.

I wrote you last time someone died, asking that The Daily Iowan sponsor a contest to find how to solve this problem because the politicians and administrators and professionals apparently have no real solution to this point. The survival rate is better for those who went over Niagara Falls in a barrel than for those hapless souls who got caught on the Iowa River.

Perhaps we're scraping the bottom of the barrel to go public with a plea to spike this "smoking gun." A river is a natural wonder, and in a sense each citizen has a right to enjoy the natural habitat. But man has made these rivers killers. The dam is no longer in use, except as a carrier of conduit from one side to the other. If it's too costly to remove, disable it! Apparently, after a rafter's death someone figured out to put a chain system upriver. A good idea which does not, however, disable the dam itself, and another young man found a way, regrettably, to drown.

Why not use the same chain system or a maritime cargo net or an array of old car tires bolted together to make a kind of slide attached to the top of the dam in the water stretching downstream far enough to prevent a body from being pulled back into the vortex? The "slide-net" could use phone-pole floats if it were not permanently anchored.

Water over the dam would flow through the net or tire array, but a person in the river would bounce down the net to the downstream portion of the river, giving them a chance for rescue. What if a child, innocently feeding the ducks by the Union, slipped and went into the river? There would be a mere few minutes to effect a rescue before it went to its death over the roller dam. I don't suppose if this happened the "damn fool" excuse would hold much water.

We can't let another death occur as if it were passing news we are helpless to prevent. Some of the water over this dam is tears from those who loved someone who died in the manmade hazard of these Iowa rivers.

Rawlings criticized

To the Editor:
If Hunter Rawlings' main goal at Iowa was to destroy the Iowa athletic department, we would say mission accomplished!

When Iowa cannot recruit and admit the same players as the rest of the Big Ten schools because of its special discriminating criteria it shows. This is an uneven playing field to Iowa's disadvantage.

Iowa used to compete for the Big Ten championships in football and basketball. Now, thanks to its special criteria, which discriminates against quality people like James Head (who was eligible at every other Big Ten school but Iowa), Iowa will be competing to stay out of the Big Ten cellar in both sports! Remember, Iowa used to be ranked in the top 25 nationally in football and basketball, but its criteria has severely handicapped the recruiting and admissions success to maintain a successful program.

Don't you think other schools use this against Iowa, implying it is racist because it affects the inner city kids the most? (They have not all had the same opportunity of taking certain core classes.)

Do you think Michigan or Ohio State would allow such rules? Apparently not! A University of Michigan article states they won't bench athletes who are eligible to play by Big Ten and NCAA rules. Why does Iowa? Do Iowa fans want C. Vivian Stringer, Tom Davis and Hayden Fry to leave because they can no longer compete on an even admissions / recruiting field? No, we would like to see Rawlings leave!

This is not Princeton University, where tea parties and tiddlywinks are considered contact sports! Iowa is a state university — of the people, by the people and for the people.

Please, Hunter Rawlings, help out some other school with their athletic department, or venture out into the real world and find a job!

Esiason files suit against Kentucky hospital

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Former Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Boomer Esiason has sued a hospital for allegedly failing to diagnose that his son had cystic fibrosis.

St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Edgewood performed an outdated test in 1992 to determine whether Gunnar Esiason, now 3, had the sometimes-fatal lung disease, according to the lawsuit that Esiason and his wife, Cheryl, filed Wednesday in Kenton Circuit Court.

The Esiasons are seeking unspecified damages.

Jackie Hirt, spokeswoman for St. Elizabeth, said Esiason, the New York Jets starting quarterback, made an out-of-court claim against the hospital before the lawsuit was filed.

"When the claim was initially presented, we had an independent, board-certified pathologist review the Esiason claim and determined there was no basis for it," she said. "Consequently, the medical center denied their claim."

According to the Esiasons, Gunnar began to experience respiratory problems shortly after he was born April 6, 1991.

The St. Elizabeth test, conducted June 25, 1992, was negative. As a result, Gunnar received treatments inadvisable for people with cystic fibrosis, the lawsuit said.

Lakers swap Christie for draft picks

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers traded swingman Doug Christie to the New York Knicks on Thursday for two second-round draft choices.

Christie, 24, averaged 10.3 points and 3.6 rebounds in 65 games for the Lakers last season, his second in the NBA.

"I'm definitely elated about coming to New York and being a Knickerbocker," Christie said. "This is a golden opportunity for myself and hopefully for the organization."

Christie was taken by Seattle with the 17th overall selection in the 1992 draft after playing at Pepperdine, but he never signed with the SuperSonics. He was traded to the Lakers on Feb. 22, 1993, with Benoit Benjamin for Sam Perkins.

The 6-foot-6 Christie missed 16 games because of a sprained left ankle last season, and had surgery on the ankle Aug. 24 to remove calcium deposits.

Four starters return from last season's 11-16 squad

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

Iowa finished last in the Big Ten Conference last season and has no real center this year, but Coach Tom Davis is convinced the Hawkeyes can contend for the league title.

"I think the thing is wide open and a lot of us think we have chances, and we're included. We think we've got a chance to make a run at the thing," Davis said. "Maybe we're dreaming, maybe it's too far a reach, but I wouldn't underestimate this group. This group is special."

The Hawkeyes finished 11-16 last season, but return four starters to the roster.

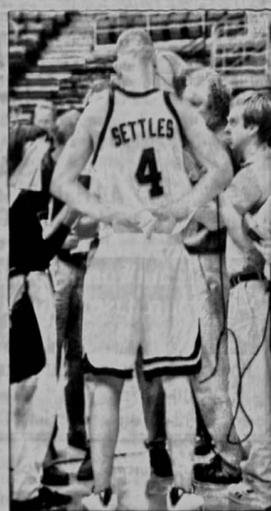

The nucleus of Iowa's squad is primarily juniors and sophomores which bodes well for the future, but Davis isn't looking ahead.

"We're trying to be the best we can be this year," Davis said. "We're not looking towards the future."

"Hopefully, we can win the Big Ten and make the (NCAA) tourna-

Iowa sophomore Jess Settles answers questions Thursday. Settles, who was selected Big Ten Freshman of the Year last season, averaged 15.3 points and 7.5 rebounds for the Hawkeyes.

Settles will miss Millard, Helmets

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Without a true center or a player taller than 6-foot-9 in the lineup, this could be the time for sophomore forward Jess Settles to shine. But that's not what he says.

"I think I'm better off when I have a big guy with me," Settles said. "I've heard people say 'Well, since everybody's gone it's going to be a better chance for you to shine.' I kind of feed off other people. If I have four other all-Americans on my team, then I like that better."

Settles, last season's Big Ten Freshman of the Year, said he'll miss playing the frontcourt with Russ Millard, who is not enrolled in the UI this semester.

"I love playing with Russ," he said. "It will be a new experience, but I really don't consider it any more pressure."

"Russ and I at the end of the year, we did OK under there. Without him, we're really lacking. But we'll see what happens."

Iowa's tallest player, Greg Helmets at 6-foot-11, will not compete this semester, Coach Tom Davis said Thursday. Helmets will sit out after pleading guilty to theft charges this week.

Settles, a native of Winfield, Iowa, understands Millard and Helmets' situation.

"I'd prefer to have them, I think it makes us better as a team and me better as an individual," Settles said. "I don't blame them individually. I'm 20 myself, the freshmen are 18 and 19. We're just young kids, everybody makes mistakes. It's just bad luck for us."

Starting every game last season, Settles was third in the conference in field goal percentage (56.5%) in Big Ten competition, sixth in free throw percentage (84%) and eighth in rebounds (7.7). He had more points (414) and rebounds (213) than any other Iowa freshman ever.

But Settles, who averaged 15.3 points and 7.5 rebounds per game, isn't aiming for records this season.

"I just look back to one year ago today," he said. "It was a whole new experience for me and I didn't know if I'd touch the floor here or anything. It's just a learning experience. I don't set goals of improving numbers and stuff. I hope to get a little smarter and keep working hard. I don't worry about that stuff."

Settles' athletic ability can't compare to the sophomore's work ethic, Davis said.

"It's not how fast he can run or how high he can jump," Davis said. "It's how hard he works."

Davis said Settles sets an example for his teammates.

"He's unflappable, he's an amazing individual," Davis said. "He just does not worry about what other people think of him. He will work until he's exhausted

IOWA VS. ILLINOIS

Duprey predicts tough start

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

Winless in the Big Ten and down to its fourth-string quarterback, now is probably not the best time for Iowa to take on the No. 2 defense in the nation.

But that is exactly what the Hawkeyes must do Saturday when they travel to Illinois. Kick-off is scheduled for 1:05 p.m.

"They know that this is my first start. I'm sure that they want to put pressure on me to see if I can handle the pressure first off," quarterback Mike Duprey said. "I anticipate (Illinois) throwing everything at me. I just have to make sure I do my job, make my reads and get my teammates the ball."

The Illini are No. 1 in the Big Ten in every defensive category and give up just 10.4 points per game.

Illinois, 3-2 and 1-1 in conference play, is coming off a huge 24-10 victory at Ohio State.

Linebacker Dana Howard was named Big Ten defensive player of the week for his efforts against the Buckeyes. He had 14 tackles and two sacks. Howard leads the Big Ten in tackles with 13.4 a game.

"As a combination, (John) Holecek and Howard are the two best (linebackers) together on any footstereared by the presence of junior Simeon Rice. Rice moves around a lot on defense, sometimes lining up as a down lineman and sometimes as a linebacker.

No matter where he is, Rice reeks havoc on opposing offenses. He has 10 sacks already this season, double that of his closest competitor in the Big Ten.

Illinois' offense has been explosive at times as well.

Quarterback Johnny Johnson threw for 224 yards and two touchdowns last Saturday on 16 of 21 passing, earning Big Ten offensive player of the week honors.

"When their quarterback Johnson's hot, he's as good as you'll find because for just pure talent, he's the best all-around athlete in the Big Ten at quarterback," Fry said.

Johnson has yet to throw an interception this season, but Fry said his real strength is his ability to scramble.

"This youngster could have been a running back," he said. "He's a great scrambler and when he makes his big play offensively, at least half the time he's out of the pocket."

The Illini blew away the Hawkeyes 49-3 last season at Kin-

NHL players settle in for 'lengthy lockout'

R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Don't throw away those NHL pocket schedules yet.

Brian Burke, the NHL's director of hockey operations, said Thursday the league might be able to play a full 84-game season even if it is unable to start play Saturday, the deadline previously announced by commissioner Gary Bettman. But, Burke added, the deadline can't be extended too far.

"Nov. 1, as of that date, it would be very difficult (to play all 84 games)," Burke said.

Sixty-nine games have been postponed, with six more set for today and 10 on Saturday. Burke said the league can't extend the season into July because of arena commitments.

Burke, making the first stop in a tour of various NHL cities, said there's no other plan in place.

"We don't have a Plan B," he said. "We had hoped to have a deal in place by the 15th. At some point, we're going to have to look at a reduced schedule."

There's no chance for the NHL's first deadline being met. The sides haven't met since Tuesday, when the owners rejected the players' latest contract proposal, and no new talks have been set.

"We've resigned ourselves to the fact it's going to be a lengthy lockout," union spokesman Steve MacAllister said. "Right now, all is quiet. Nothing is happening."

Although Bettman and union head Bob Goodenow have agreed to keep the lines of communication open, Burke, said it was "intolerable and inexcusable" that negotiations weren't ongoing.

He said the league would make the next move and call for another session early next week. Although Bettman said Tuesday that the season would not begin without a collective bargaining agreement, Burke indicated the league would be flexible on many other items of contention.

"We don't need a knockout victory here," Burke said. "If we wanted a knockout, we should have mailed these guys the NFL collective bargaining agreement and said, "Call us when you're ready to talk." We're looking for a sensible system that goes forward. We see it as win-win."

Pittsburgh Penguins chairman Howard Baldwin, whose team has one of the NHL's highest payrolls at an estimated $19 million, defended the owners' proposal. Baldwin predicted that while some of the bigger-spending clubs would probably restrain themselves more than they have in the past, lower-spending clubs will be forced to spend a minimum.

"We hate to not have him in there and he hates to not be there, but I think the message I'll try to get across to him is sometimes out of adversity comes real strength," Davis said. "Sometimes when you have to struggle through some things that are unpleasant or are just miserable to go through, out of that you find out if you're tough."

Millard is expected back in January, but until then, the Hawkeyes will lack depth in the frontcourt.

"It's pretty clear what style we're going to play, partly because we're going to be a smallish team," Davis said. "We don't have as much physical size. We probably won't have a true center per se."

Davis said seniors John Carter and Jim Bartels, or 6-foot-9 freshman Ryan Bowen will have to fill the void.

"Ryan Bowen is going to get a good hard look, but I hesitate putting too much pressure on him as we start our practice. But he did look good this summer," Davis said.

Carter showed potential on the Hawkeyes' European trip in August, averaging 9.6 points and 5.6 rebounds per game.

"He's not the most consistent player yet," Davis said.

"He's got a chance to have a real fine senior year. The question is going to be consistency and doing it day after day and game after game. He's not the most confident young man, so I've got to try to build his confidence."

and Jim Bartels, or 6-foot-9 freshman Ryan Bowen will have to fill the void.

"What he lacks in physical strength he's got to make up in speed and quickness, and he has that," Davis said.

Davis said he would not move Big Ten Freshman of the Year Jess Settles from small forward to shore up the center and power forward positions.

"I'm hesitant to move anybody who has a great year because then you sometimes weaken yourself at two positions," he said.

Kingsbury isn't concerned about about the Hawkeyes' lack of size.

"We don't have a true center, but neither does anybody else in the Big Ten, really," he said.

repeat performance.

As a heavy underdog, the Hawkeyes feel they have nothing to lose going into Champaign.

"That's probably the best attitude, to just go out there and play winning football and eliminate the turnovers and mistakes we've been making," wide receiver Willie Guy said.

Fry agreed.

"It doesn't look too bright, but we're not going to go ahead and surrender," Fry said.

ing has passed.

"Everyone in this dispute is tough," he said. "We all agree on that. Now, let's see how smart we all are."

Meanwhile, some players are looking into the option of playing in Europe, although the head of the International Ice Hockey Federation said that wouldn't be allowed.

"We will not let them play," IIHF president Rene Fasel told The Canadian Press on Thursday from Switzerland. "We have a contract with the NHL (governing player transfers) and will abide by that contract."

the guys to get them to go with him."

Hard work comes naturally, Settles said.

"I think ever since I was young, I get a goal in my head and go after it," he said.

"It comes from my mom and dad. I just know you don't get anything free in this life, unless you win the lottery or something. That's something I can control. I can't always control jumping ability or my shot. But I know I can put in the time."

KANSAS STATE VS. NEBRASKA

Huskers up next for streaking May, K-State

Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Kansas State quarterback Chad May could hardly have a better day Saturday against Nebraska than he had against the Huskers last year in Omaha.

But if he does, the stats will likely also show the No. 16 Wildcats beating the No. 2 Cornhuskers for the first time in 25 tries.

May set a Big Eight record last year by passing for 459 yards as the Wildcats gained 565 yards total and still lost 45-28.

But it is a far more confident Kansas State team this year, and a far more confident May, who hasn't thrown an interception in 166 attempts.

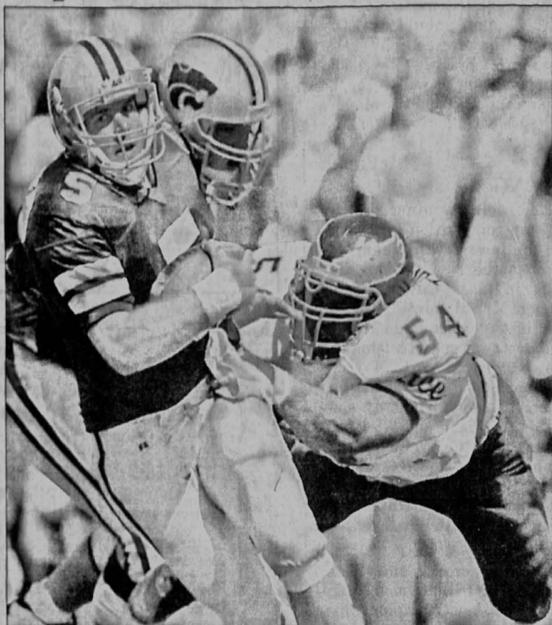

"(The passing game) worked last year," said offensive tackle Jim Hmielewski.

"We just came up short. I think we found out how we can beat them, or at least attempt to beat them."

May seemingly is on a roll, having completed 33-of-44 passes last week for 379 yards — the second-highest total of his career — as the Wildcats went to 4-0 by defeating Kansas in the conference opener.

Big at 6-foot-2 and 215 pounds, May has shown remarkable poise to stay in the pocket and has thrown very accurately.

Perhaps the only knock on the quarterback is that he doesn't run very well, but he seems nimble enough to step up to avoid the rush.

Associated Press

May had a checkered career at

Damien High School in Laverne, Calif., and things didn't get much better when Cal State-Fullerton was the only school to offer him a scholarship.

Then Cal-State changed its offense, and the new scheme wasn't suited to May's abilities.

May tried to get UCLA to bite, but there were no offers there either.

Kansas State coach Bill Snyder heard about the situation through the coaches' grapevine, and suddenly the California boy was playing at the school in the Flint Hills of Kansas.

May sat out last season, but went into spring practice as the No. 1 quarterback and now is being talked of in some quarters as a Heisman candidate.

A high-profile game like the one pitting the Wildcats against the Huskers could bring the respect that he has been seeking.

"I'm looking forward to it," he said matter-of-factly.

"It's a great challenge. They've got a great football team and we'll be up for it."

With the Nebraska quarterback situation unsettled because of injuries to Tommie Frazier and Brook Berringer, the game likely will come down to a contest between the Huskers' powerful rushing attack and May's throwing ability.

"I think the fact that we have been gradually improving week in and week out, the idea that you are playing at home ... that might indicate a reason to be positive," Snyder said.

"We have great respect for Nebraska, but by the same token, I think our players are confident that they can play well in this ball game."

Gators set sights on national title

Rick Warner Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — When Steve Spurrier became Florida's coach in 1990, the Gators had never won 10 games in a season, an official Southeastern Conference championship or the Sugar Bowl.

Since then, Florida has won two SEC titles, posted the two highest victory totals in its history and captured its first Sugar Bowl trophy. Now the top-ranked Gators are setting their sights on an even bigger prize — the national championship.

"It's time to take it up a notch," quarterback Terry Dean said.

Receiver Jack Jackson agrees. "It's like building a house," he said. "We've got the foundation in place. All we've got to do is put that last brick in."

Florida has hit its first five opponents like a ton of bricks, outscoring them 254-60. After nailing New Mexico State 70-21 and Kentucky 73-7, the Gators trampled Tennessee 31-0 — the Vols' worst home defeat in 70 years. Then came home, 24-point victories over Mississippi and LSU.

Their first real challenge comes Saturday against sixth-ranked Auburn, which is riding a nation-leading, 17-game winning streak.

"It's probably the biggest game in Florida history," said linebacker Matt Pearson. "The Swamp is going to be rocking."

The Swamp is the nickname for Florida Field, where the Gators are 26-1 under Spurrier. They're so good at home that oddsmakers have made them a 16-point favorite over an Auburn team that hasn't lost since Terry Bowden took over last season.

One of those Auburn victories was a 38-35 thriller over Florida last year. "We let it slip away," Jackson said. "We can't afford to do that again."

Jackson, who leads the team with 29 catches and eight touchdowns, is one of the main cogs in an offensive machine that is averaging 50.8 points a game.

The Gators have gained almost seven yards per play, scored on more than half their possessions, and converted 60 percent of their third downs.

Despite Spurrier's reputation as a pass-happy coach, his offense has shown great balance. The Gators have run 186 times and passed 184.

"Our running game really opens up our passing game," said Dean, ranked second nationally in passing efficiency with 18 TDs and a 62 percent completion rate. "If you try to stop one, we'll hurt you with the other."

The emergence of two fabulous freshmen tailbacks has filled the void left by the departure of Errict Rhett, the school's all-time leading rusher.

Fred Taylor leads the team with 451 yards and Elijah Williams, a redshirt who will miss the Auburn game with an ankle injury, is second with 377.

"When we're clicking on all cylinders, we're unstoppable," said

Associated Press

Florida coach Steve Spurrier will try to break Auburn's 17-game win streak Saturday at The Swamp. The Tigers won last season, 38-35.

freshman receiver Ike Hilliard.

While the offense usually grabs the headlines, it's an improved defense that could make this Spurrier's best team. Unhappy with a pass defense that was the SEC's worst in 1993, Spurrier shook things up. He hired Tulane defensive coordinator Bob Pruett, who scrapped the Gators' run-oriented scheme for a more flexible system that is designed to beef up pass coverage.

The Gators are still stronger against the run, limiting opponents to an NCAA-best 47 yards per game while giving up an average of 207 passing yards, ninth in the SEC. But the most important stat — points allowed — is down to 12 per game, eight fewer than last season.

"We don't compare ourselves to last year," Pruett said. "We just want to get better each week."

KANSAS VS. IOWA STATE

History stands on Jayhawks' side

Cole Pepper Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Kansas linebacker Don Davis knows history sometimes repeats itself. This weekend in Ames, Iowa, he hopes it does.

The Olathe history major has seen some of the wildest games in Kansas history come against Saturday's opponent, Iowa State.

Last year in Lawrence, running back and then-freshman June Henley rushed 27 times for 237 yards and three touchdowns as the Jayhawks won 35-20. The teams churned out 821 yards of total offense.

In a rollercoaster game at Ames in 1992, Kansas jumped out to a 21-7 first quarter lead, the Cyclones roared back to make it 47-21 and the Jayhawks pounded out four touchdowns in the final 20 minutes to win 50-47.

Before Davis' time, the teams tied 34-34 in 1990 on a late 53-yard field goal by Iowa State kicker Jeff Shudak.

Overall, Kansas leads the series 38-29-6 and has won the last three meetings.

Averaging more than 272 rushing yards a game, Kansas (3-2) ranks third in the Big Eight and ninth nationally in rushing offense. Jim Walden's Cyclones (0-5) have allowed an average of 270 rushing yards each game, worst among all Division I-A schools except Kentucky.

Henley, who's missed the last two games because of a bruised right shoulder, is practicing this week but is listed as questionable for Saturday.

This game, Davis said, will be a key to the Jayhawks season.

"Guys are down, we must come together as a team if we want to contend in the Big Eight race," he said.

As a senior, Davis has had to take on more of a leadership role this season.

That includes trying to keep team morale up he said.

Intrastate rivalry heats up at Finkbine

The Iowa men's golf team hosts the Big Four Golf Tournament this Saturday at Finkbine golf course. Other schools competing are Iowa State, UNI, and Drake.

Tea time is 9 a.m. The Hawkeyes have met each team at least one time earlier this year.

"We're on our own course, and we've beaten all of these teams," Coach Terry Anderson said.

Iowa sends a confident squad to tackle the one-day, 27-hole tournament. The Big Four hasn't been played in several years, Anderson said.

Anderson doesn't look at this weekend as a sure win, but he does believe Iowa is sending the best team.

"I don't want to say that we'll definitely win, but I'd like to win by 40 shots or so. I want everybody to know that we're for real," Anderson said.

-David Schwartz

WOMEN'S GOLF

After finishing last out of the Big Ten Conference schools two weeks ago at the Lady Northern Invitational, the Iowa women's golf team returns to action.

Iowa travels to Kansas Monday for a two-day tournament.

"After Michigan we just have to come back and have a better performance," Thomason said. "In golf you can't worry about what has already happened, otherwise you'll never recover."

Thomason has spent the past two weeks working with her team on an individual level.

"I try to help with club selection, but I also try to single out what each person needs. No two people on this team are the same," Thomason said.

MEN'S TENNIS

-David Schwartz

The Iowa men's tennis team hopes to pick up where it left off last weekend when it heads east for the Ball State Invitational in Muncie, Ind. Saturday.

The Hawkeyes dominated last weekend's Husker Invitational returning champions Bryan Crowley, Tom Derouin, and Marcus Eckstrand.

Coach Steve Houghton said this is a very important tournament this early in the season.

"Most of the Big Ten teams will be in the tournament so it will give us a chance not only to see some good teams but teams from our own conference," Houghton said.

-Chris James

WOMEN'S TENNIS

The Iowa women's tennis team is back in action today when it travels to Champaign-Urbana for the Illinois tournament.

The Hawkeyes are coming off victories over Nebraska and Illinois last weekend, which should give them momentum heading into this week's competition.

Iowa will be led by No. 1 seed Laura Dvorak in one flight and freshman standout Kristen Campbell at No. 2.

Iowa will be facing South Florida and Rice for the first time and that has Iowa coach Micki Schillig a little wary.

"This is the first time we've ever matched up against South Florida or Rice. So I don't know really what to expect," Schillig said.

-Chris James

FIELD HOCKEY

The No. 12 Hawkeye field hockey team continues its tour of the Big Ten Conference this weekend as the players pack their bags and head to No. 3 Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes, 7-5 on the season, 3-2 in the Big Ten, are looking to get back on track after two disappointing losses last weekend.

This weekend's game could be a big indication of how far this team can go. The players should be well rested, and they should be hungry.

"Obviously Northwestern is heavily favored," Beglin said. "They're ranked third in the country right now. They're on their home field. They've got every motivation in the world for revenge because we beat them here. I'm not going to downplay the fact that this would be a very nice win for us. I'm more concerned with our ability to compete and compete hard, to beat Northwestern to the ball, to want the ball more than Northwestern does."

Game time is 1 p.m.

VOLEYBALL

After picking up its first win in three weeks last Saturday, the Iowa volleyball team is looking to pick up some more steam this weekend in Michigan.

The Hawkeyes (13-5 overall, 3-3 in the Big Ten) will travel to Michigan State tonight and Michigan on Saturday.

Iowa had the last five days off after defeating Indiana last weekend at Carver Hawkeye Arena. The layoff marks the longest break the Hawkeyes have received in quite some time.

The time off should not only help the Hawkeyes out physically, but the extra practice time should prove invaluable as well. After the Indiana match, several players credited the win to a week of hard practice.

-Mike Triplett

ROWING

After racing against the Big Ten's top competition last weekend, the Iowa rowing team will travel to the Head of the Kaw Sunday in Kansas City, Mo.

Coach Mandi Kowal said the Head of the Rock Regatta last Sunday was a good test for the young Hawkeyes.

"I probably felt better about this race than any of the others," Kowal said. "Michigan and Wisconsin are the top in the Big Ten. It was good to measure ourselves against them."

Competition begins Sunday at 9:40 a.m. on the Kansas River.

CROSS COUNTRY

The women's cross country team will be trying to build momentum for the Big Ten Championships, when they run against in-state rival Iowa State Saturday.

"When I came here 19 years ago, I decided that one of my goals was to always be competitive with Iowa State. Through the years we've held our own and competed very favorably with them," Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said.

The Cyclones won't be the only strong team Iowa must face this weekend.

The Invitational field will also feature Missouri, Drake, Northern Iowa and Big Ten power Wisconsin. Wisconsin is currently ranked fourth in the nation.

-Shannon Stevens

Iowa peaks at right time

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Coach Larry Wiecek set up his cross country schedule in such a way that the team would reach its peak around the Big Ten Championships.

The plan seems to be working.

The Hawkeyes will get their final tuneup before the Big Ten Championships when they travel to Alabama for the Auburn Invitational Saturday.

Iowa has put together a string of strong performances this season. After finishing fourth at the Iowa Invitational, The Hawkeyes finished second in a triangular meet against Big Ten rivals Wisconsin and Minnesota. The team didn't stop there as they tacked on another good performance when they finished third at the Loyola Invitational.

At the Auburn Invitational, the Hawkeyes will get to see how they match up against several strong teams including Auburn, Georgia Tech, and Florida State. Iowa would also like to get even with Illinois, who beat them by six points in the Iowa Invitational.

Senior Pete McDowell attributes Iowa's success to working well together as a team.

Michigan quarterback Todd Collins prepares to handoff to running back Tyrone Wheatley as guard Joe Marinaro (73) provides blocking ahead of the play against Michigan State last Saturday.

Penn State to defend 5-0 start

Harry Atkins
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Joe Marinaro remembers the day Joe Paterno came to his house.

"It was a great honor," the senior Michigan guard said. "I could easily have played for him, and probably would have ... but it came down to the fact that my heart was at Michigan."

On Saturday, Paterno and No. 2 Penn State will be at Michigan's house for a game that could decide the Big Ten champion and a berth in the Rose Bowl.

The Nittany Lions are 5-0 and lead the nation with 51.6 points and 556.6 yards per game, while the fifth-ranked Wolverines (4-1) average 31 points and 434 yards.

"Joe Paterno teams are always going to be sound, they're always going to have players," Michigan coach Gary Moeller said. "They know how to play in big games. He knows how to coach in big games."

Paterno, in his 29th year as coach, is the nation's leading active coach with a 262-69-3 record. He is fourth in all-time victories and tied with Bear Bryant for bowl wins with 15.

And Marinaro can almost recite the numbers from memory. He grew up in Andover, Mass., where he became one of the best high school linemen in the country. He got college offers from everywhere, including Penn State.

"Penn State is the dominant college in the East," Marinaro said. "Even growing up near Boston, they were much, much bigger than Boston College."

This is the third straight year Penn State has started 5-0. Both times, the Nittany Lions lost in their sixth game. Two years ago, Miami beat Penn State 17-14 and last year Michigan won at Penn State 21-13.

"The motivation is not to see Moeller go 2-0 over Joe Paterno," Moeller said. "The motivation is to get to the Rose Bowl, to be called."

The Nittany Lions no doubt remember last year's game very well. Paterno probably reminds them of it frequently. Penn State led 10-0, but Derrick Alexander returned a punt 48 yards for a touchdown to get Michigan back in the game.

"Those are things that happen in a great rivalry, but I think the rivalry was there the day they let Penn State in the Big Ten," Moeller said. "It's enhanced by both teams having a chance to win the championship."

The Wolverines also came up with a goal-line stand, stopping Penn State four times from the 1-yard line.

"Last year, we'd just come off our worst embarrassment," a 17-7 loss at Michigan State, Moeller said. "They'd been running up scores and were at home. Maybe they just weren't quite as concerned with us."

"That won't be the case this time."

Marinaro knows the value of a team seeking revenge. He said it helped the Wolverines repay Michigan State with a 40-20 triumph last week.

"I'm sure Penn State will be coming in here with a revenge factor in mind," Marinaro said.

Bug! splatters onto I.C. scene

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Local warble-weary grunge freaks tired of all that white noise and Eddie Vedder's incessant whining can expect a refreshing pop buzz when Minneapolis sensation Bug! alights at Iowa City Saturday at The Metro, 121 Iowa Ave.

Daniel Corrigan / October Records

Pop sensation Bug! hits Iowa City this weekend for a Saturday show at The Metro, 121 Iowa Ave. The Minneapolis alternative band is opening for Clockwork Orange.

The Minneapolis music scene has consistently turned up its nose at the current flannel-clad alternative trend made prevalent in the American Northwest by "grunge" groups. Remaining true to its inspired, guitar-driven alterna-pop roots, Minneapolis' seething music pool has given birth to a handful of shining Midwestern originals ranging from Rex Daisy, Trip Shakespeare and the Gear Daddies to the Willie Wisely Trio, the Hang Ups and, of course, favorite funksters Beat the Clock.

Bug! is a vocal-driven pop machine whose heart literally formed in the afterbirth of some of Minneapolis' core groups. Guitarist/vocalist Rick Meyer came to Bug! straight from his split with "frat-funk" group Sam Jam. Lead vocalist Karen Paurus, fresh out of her breakup with country-pop band Holiday Ranch, followed Meyer into the group. Bassist/producer John "Strawberry" Fields filled out the rhythm section of Bug! with former Rembrandts drummer John Niefeld, and the group squeezed its way into the world kicking and screaming.

Bassist Fields produces for Steve Greenberg's Minneapolis-based record label October Records. (Greenberg is the mastermind behind the 1980 Lipps Inc. hit "Funkytown.") It is Fields' penchant for Todd Rundgren and XTC-style expansiveness, which he calls "pop mixed with slightly psychedelic rock," that doubtless lends Bug! part of its distinctive sound.

Other members of the group hail from different schools, bringing still more shapes and colors. Guitarist Meyer prefers metal pop, while singer Paurus favors a more soulful and emotive approach to her work. Throw in the fact that all four members of the band are capable singers in their own right, and it forms the vocal harmony heart of the catchy and highly praised pop stylings of Bug!

Regardless of how Bug! came by their characteristic flavor, it has taken Minneapolis' taste buds by storm. For a band just launching into its second year of existence, it's won a surprisingly large and loyal following; the band's performances at some of Minneapolis' outdoor summer music festivals have prompted local critics to call it "a latter-day, fusion-based Police with a female singer."

Strong praise indeed for a group whose parts may seem to overshadow the whole at times. Highly recommended to fans of pop's more inventive craftspeople, Bug! is a new treat in Iowa City's candy aisle, a fresh tidbit for those whose tolerance for Seattle and its "thrash for the maladjusted" has reached its combat boot-clad extremities.

One @#*$ of a fun weekend ahead

Today Raritan, tomorrow the Sudetenland! Our armies march on, and I'll make @#$ sure that anyone who stands in our way is @#$ed with the business end of a jackhammer! — Resident of Raritan, N.J., who favors the ordinance their City Council just passed banning public profanity tools one would be able to thrust into the bodily cavities of the Iowa coaching staff.

Who wastes their time hating the underbelly of the English language enough to ban it? If only these Nazis had the b#%*s to march on Iowa City this weekend when the Hawks are away extending their spotless losing streak. All of that repressed football energy has to be redirected somewhere. How about a good swift kick to the mayor of Raritan's dookie-chute? (I'm sure to get a week in the Raritan klinker for that one.)

Or we could get these prudes canned at any I.C. night spot and show them how to loosen up and enjoy a little tuneage.

Folk music will eat itself tonight and Saturday, as The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., plays to the wishes of local fans of the acoustic. Hills and Hicoek blow bluegrass on The Mill's stage tonight, while local folk/pop gurus Big Wooden Radio render the down-home figurine a different shade of blue on Saturday. foul customers with bottles of Burgundy when necessary.

True to form, The Metro, 121 Iowa Ave., pushes the outside of the musical envelope this weekend. Tonight, look for Kind, the newest rock act to come tooling out of the burgeoning music scene of Omaha, Neb. Local band Heavy Boots will warm up the crowd. Saturday, Minneapolis' latest pop exports Bug! buzz into town (see story Page 6B). I assume the owners of The Metro don't really care if you swear — just make d@*n sure not to p!@s off their sound man by shouting filthy limericks about Doris Day into the P.A.

The Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., offers another folk and blues alternative to those who've grown weary of all that smutty grunge nonsense. Local artist Dave Moore hits the stage tonight and Saturday with his own folk stylings. Be wary of any hooded individuals outside the bar who are attempting to give away 12-page expurgated copies of the Dictionary of American Slang.

Those expecting to be censored by the bastions of independent thought at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., should have their heads checked for signs of dry rot. Tonight, Gabe's offers the nasty at heart a chance to sweat out all their pent-up frustrations with headliners the Poster Children. Love Cup and budding neopunk sensation Heatmiser will open. Saturday, Joe Price and Bo Ramsey bring the walls down on the blues. Bring an umbrella.

The Wheelroom of the Union continues its weekend hell-raising with a show by rhumbadome ringmasters Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz Saturday night at 7. This'll cost you $4, but don't b*$%h — they're well worth it.

I now draw the shades on this edition of the weekend love shack. If anyone cares to reach me, I'll be in the back room testing these new obscenity laws by @!#*ing a chicken with two @#*s and a bottle of soy sauce.

WILL BE ON CAMPUS RECRUITING FOR: GRAIN MERCHANDISERS MAJORS: Bus Admin, Economics, Finance, Marketing FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1994
Imagine an environment where a dozen people are talking at once, phones are ringing constantly, and you're carrying on three simultaneous conversations. If you're the sort of person who can thrive in such an environment, let us welcome you to the world of grain trading, where you'll spend much of your day on the telephone, talking with elevator managers, buying and selling cash grain, and arranging for the transportation of the grain.
During this 4-6 month training program, you'll spend time at our Decatur headquarters, a processing plant, our traffic and transportation department, a country elevator, a river terminal, our accounting department, and on the floor of the Chicago Board of Trade. Afterwards, you'll take a trading position in either our grain division or our processing division. Advancement opportunities are excellent: many ADM managers, as well as the president of the grain division, started as merchandisers.

ARCHER DANIELS MIDLAND CO.
WILL BE ON CAMPUS RECRUITING FOR: GRAIN MERCHANDISERS MAJORS: Bus Admin, Economics, Finance, Marketing FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1994
Imagine an environment where a dozen people are talking at once, phones are ringing constantly, and you're carrying on three simultaneous conversations. If you're the sort of person who can thrive in such an environment, let us welcome you to the world of grain trading, where you'll spend much of your day on the telephone, talking with elevator managers, buying and selling cash grain, and arranging for the transportation of the grain.
During this 4-6 month training program, you'll spend time at our Decatur headquarters, a processing plant, our traffic and transportation department, a country elevator, a river terminal, our accounting department, and on the floor of the Chicago Board of Trade. Afterwards, you'll take a trading position in either our grain division or our processing division. Advancement opportunities are excellent: many ADM managers, as well as the president of the grain division, started as merchandisers.
