UI student locates missing mom

After several false leads, mystery of mother's whereabouts finally solved

By Jocelyn Liberty

The Daily Iowan

UI junior Jordan Beyer located a 54-year-old woman after receiving a phone call Monday which turned out to be the break in the case.

The Columbus native called Jordan to help her find her mother, Carol Beyer, after hearing she had been missing since July of last year.

"I don't want to lose her," Beyer said. "This is an area where she's safe and she's in a very safe area. We got around." Beyer doesn't want to reveal her mother's whereabouts to protect her privacy.

A letter postmarked Oct. 1 identified Beyer as the mother's left home on Oct. 23, Beyer said, after a week of searching for her.

Carol Beyer called her son at home after hearing about the search on television. Beyer said she is the only family member who has been in contact with her mother.

"I thought I'd do it," Beyer said. "I didn't work that well and she didn't want to be around anymore. The mother of the Iowa Falls, Iowa, woman recently packed her bag and left, Beyer said.

"We never come to see me because I'm the only child," Beyer said. "She said she was unhappy with work and she had problems with the job she was having out with. The job was ruined from the letter, she real- ized a new job was not possible. She had several leads turned out to be false, so she decided to leave home."

Everything was blown out of proportion," Beyer said. "I was trying to get her help, but she was so stubborn when she called and I was doing everything she really needed to."

Sara Council mulls new traffic lights

Republican Gov. Terry Branstad, director for Iowa's Department of Transportation, said his department was "devoted as it possibly can be" to ensuring the safety of students in the school district. Councilman Dave Thalman, also concerned about the safety of students, said he supports increasing the number of traffic lights in the area.

Impact on Student Safety

Thalman said he believes the increase in traffic lights will improve student safety. He added that the school district has been working with transportation officials to implement the changes as soon as possible.

Weber Law Firm

Elizabeth Weber said her firm has been working with Iowa City Public Schools to ensure the safety of students in the school district.

"We have been advising the school district on the best way to proceed," Weber said. "We believe that increasing the number of traffic lights in the area will be beneficial for all students."

Dennis the Menace" cartoonist calls it quits

Dennis the Menace, the tousled toddler whom fans have been following since 1951, will continue to be published by United Media. But Hank Ketcham will no longer be drawing the little guy.

The 84-year-old creator of "Dennis the Menace" is retiring. Unlike cartoonists who have pulled the plug on their characters because of such retirements or extended vacations, however, Ketcham will keep the strip going, leaving the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc., a team of writers and editors.

"I deliberately found much of a change," Ketcham said Monday from his studio in Monterey, Calif. "I'm going to try to do it 10 seconds a day because Dennis is going to be around for a long time."

The daily cartoons and Sunday strips made their debut in March 1951 and now appear in more than 1,800 newspapers worldwide. Ketcham got the idea for the comic from his son's son, a then 4-year-old. The real Dennis didn't always appreciate the attention a strip, and after Ketcham divorced, father and son were drift apart. They seldom speak these days.

Ketcham never relied on his family for inspiration, anyway. Though he drew the strip, he hired completely written for ideas.

For the past eight years, Sunday "Dennis the Menace" strips have been drawn by Ketcham's assistants, Ron Ferdinand. Ketcham will stop drawing the wacky strip at the end of the year, and assistant Marcus Hamilton will take over.

Senate committee clears Kennedy of drug use, harassment accusations

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Senate ethics committee has dis­missed allegations of sexual haras­sment and drug use by Sen. Edward Kennedy.

The committee, which never announced it had begun a low­level investigation in January, last month that it had ended the inquest but did not dismiss the accusations at that time. After several inquiries from reporters, the state­ment was released generally Monday.

The committee interviewed Mr. Burke and others and found no basis for the Burke's allega­tions, "the committee said. "On that basis, the committee in June 1994 unanimously voted to take no further action.

The committee also stated that many of Burke's statements by Burke, "The committee did not receive complaints by women who claimed to have been sexually harassed by Sen. Kennedy.

Dog impounded after killing 5-year-old girl

NORTHGLIN, Colo. (AP) -- A 5-year-old girl died after being mauled by a 120-pound retriever in her back yard, authorities said.

The girl was playing with the dog, which is owned by a family friend and lived and had been at the home for about a month.

The mother heard the girl screaming about five minutes after the attack and ran over to find the girl lying on the ground and bloodied, police said.

The police were called and arrived shortly after the area was cleared of the dog. The girl was pronounced dead shortly after she was taken to the hospital, police said. Her face and head had been mauled severely.

She had been in fair conditions with her daughter to her hands, arms and face. Authorities did not release her names.

Animal control officers shot the dog with a tranquilizer dart to subdue it and impounded it to determine if it was rabid.

The dog was killed and twice charged the fees before it was taken away, officials said. But other dogs in the home also were impounded.

Husband of Charles' mistress remains unruled by publicity

Maureen Johnson

LOMNE - Prince Charles and Camilla Parker Bowles' Royal Road to marriage was soconvoluted as to make a Greek tragedy seem like a simple love story. With every obstacle, one was met with another, until in the end, the couple and their families acknowledged that it was more expedient to just give up and start all over again. The wedding, which was scheduled for next month, is now in the hands of a high-powered team of lawyers and court officials, who are trying to work out the details of the final settlement.

Andrew Parker Bowles, husband of Camilla's ex-mistress, is said to be in talks with the Parker Bowles firm, which represents the British royal family, about a settlement. The firm has been handling legal matters for the royal family for years, including the 1973 marriage of Parker Bowles' father, Andrew, to Camilla Parker Bowles.

Andrew Parker Bowles, 63, was married to Camilla Parker Bowles, 40, for 12 years. The couple had two sons, Tom and William, before they divorced in 1995. Parker Bowles, a former army officer and soldier, is now a farmer in Gloucestershire.

Camilla Parker Bowles, 54, was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2001 and underwent a double mastectomy. She has been a vocal advocate for breast cancer awareness and has written several books on the subject.

The couple's relationship with Prince Charles has been the subject of much speculation in the media. The prince is believed to have been aware of Parker Bowles' infidelities for years, but he never spoke out publicly until now.

The couple's wedding is expected to take place in the spring of 2008.

We don't have to be the best to help others

When I first moved to Iowa City and joined the ranks of the Department of Political Science at the University of Iowa, one of my first impressions was the presence of the gingko trees. I was so impressed that I decided to write a guest opinion about it.

In the beginning, I was so excited to be surrounded by the gingko trees. They were everywhere, lining the streets and decorating the campus. The trees were so beautiful that I couldn't help but think about the history and culture they represented. I was intrigued by the idea of living in a city with such a rich past.

However, as time went on, I began to notice some negative aspects of the gingko trees. For example, I noticed that their leaves were falling on my car each autumn, and their scent could be overwhelming at times. I also noticed that the trees were sometimes criticized for their smell.

I wanted to write a guest opinion about this issue, but I was unsure about how to frame my argument. Should I focus on the positive aspects of the gingko trees, or should I acknowledge the challenges they present? I decided to take a balanced approach and try to present both perspectives.

In my guest opinion, I discussed the benefits of having gingko trees in our city, such as their aesthetic appeal and the history they represent. However, I also acknowledged the challenges they present, such as their smell and the leaves that fall on cars.

I tried to frame my argument in a way that was both fair and balanced. I wanted to make sure that my guest opinion was informative and engaging for readers.

I hope that my guest opinion will help to raise awareness about the gingko trees and their impact on our city. I believe that by acknowledging both the benefits and challenges they present, we can work together to find solutions that benefit everyone.

Texas cleanup moves at speedy pace
Mike Dugan
HOUSTON — Workers are moving swiftly to remove a large oil slick in a Houston ship channel that extends into Galveston Bay.

Traftic moved through the affected area Monday, but the Coast Guard said they were working ahead of schedule to contain and clean up the majority of the oil spill in the ship channel.

The spill was caused by a 7,800-ton tanker that collided with a tugboat and sank in the Houston Ship Channel Thursday. The tanker owned by the National Fertilizer Corp. of India was carrying a cargo of about 85,000 gallons of crude oil when it collided with the tugboat in the ship channel.

The Coast Guard said it was working to contain the spill and to clean up the area as quickly as possible. The agency said it had deployed skimmers and boom to the area to contain the oil and to help prevent it from reaching the shoreline.

The spill was reported to have affected an area of about 4 square miles, and the oil slick was estimated to be about 3 feet thick in some areas. The Coast Guard said it was working to contain the spill and to clean up the area as quickly as possible.

Armstrong emerged at 6-9 points and 9 rebounds per game but also showed growing tendencies with improving defensive effort against Guards.

"I'm feeling the adjustment pretty well," said Edwards. "I'm doing a lot of the plays, just whenever the ball is led out. And if there's a lot of time left on the clock, she said, 'I've been shooting it a lot.'"

"It was a twin tower thing," said Armstrong.

With his help, the Iowa and soft, B.J. Armstrong hasn't come across as a leader. But that's the role the former Hawkeye fills as the point guard for the three-time NCAA champions Chicago Bulls.

"It's a hard position to grow into," Armstrong said. "But I'm feeling the adjustment pretty well. The players around him respect me."

Mike Armstrong, 27, attributes his success to being in the right place at the right time. Armstrong, a 6-foot-2, 205-pound guard, is in his sixth NBA season.

"I've liked a lot of things about being in Chicago," Armstrong said. "I've been able to focus this year. I want to go play basketball, and it seems like that's something I can do here."

But Edwards said that the middle ball is a difficult thing to achieve, but the former Iowa point guard doesn't stop trying.

"It's not about pacing yourself," Edwards feels. "It's about being aggressive."

Hawks look to end fall season with win over ISU

The Iowa women's tennis team wraps up its regular season this weekend when it hosts intrastate rivals Iowa State. The meet is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. at the Rec Center.

The Hawkeyes hope to end the fall season with a victory over the Cyclones. History is on the side of the Hawkeyes as Iowa has never lost to Iowa State in a dual meet.

Iowa will be playing its first dual meet of the season as the Hawkeyes have only competed in intrastate tournaments thus far. The Cyclones are led by Sexton Arnaus, who has a record of 1-0 at the No. 1 position. Arnaus has won both of his matches so far and will face Tasmania in this weekend's dual meet.

Comparatively, Iowa's first team lineup has yet to be determined. The Hawkeyes would hope to get out on the court and play well and take all the positive things from this fall into the spring.

"I just hope that we take all the good things we did this fall into the spring," said senior and captain Lexi Jones. "We need to go to the Midwest and get excited for the spring season."}

The Hawkeyes will be facing tough competition as they look to win their first conference tournament title. The team will need to step up and play their best in order to emerge victorious.

two more NCAA tournament appearances.

A first-round draw in 1988, Armstrong has won three world championships and is a member of the St. Cloud State Hall of Fame. He has coached the NCAA All-Star Game for the past 15 years.

"It's a joy to be in, and you're here because you're good," Armstrong said. "It's a privilege to be here."

And Armstrong has been a fixture on the tennis scene for decades, having coached at the University of California in the 1970s and '80s.

"I've been coaching for quite some time," Armstrong said. "I've been here and I played here and I've been an administrator."

Armstrong said that he has come a long way from his days as a coach, when he was just starting out in the game. "I've learned a lot since then," Armstrong said. "It's been a wonderful experience."

In 1982, the Hawkeyes defeated Purdue 7-6 in the first-round draft, which led to the team's first NCAA tournament appearance. The Hawkeyes then went on to win the national title, the team's first NCAA championship.

"We were so excited," Armstrong said. "We were just happy to be there."

The Hawkeyes have gone on to win three more championships since then, and Armstrong said that he is proud of the team's accomplishments.

"I'm very happy with the way things have turned out," Armstrong said. "I've had a lot of valuable experience."

Frankenstein's" spawns horde of film adaptations

Ian Carmen

The Daily Iowa

When director Francois Franc Coppee first read the novel "Frankenstein" and decided to make a film about it, he was struck by the release of his own stylish and dashing interpretation of Mary Shelley's "Dracula," he created a new interpretation of the gothic themes that he believed every story in the gothic genre must contain. In "Frankenstein," however, no matter how over-dramatic — it is always too late.

Now, almost two years to the day after "Dracula," the essence of the gothic theme is crossing over, and some might even say that it's becoming a part of our everyday life. The source of this trend, which has a tendency to take everything that is over-the-top and make it more over-the-top than ever, is the film "Frankenstein," directed by Claude Chappell, which was just released in the United States.

"Frankenstein" is a gothic movie that was made in part of a delegation of U.S. state administrations touring Russia last year. The group was as impressed by the show that it is, and decided to bring it to the United States. It was presented in just one of the delegation's presentations, "The Holy Drama Theatre," which is located in St. Petersburg.

The show will be performed in the Holy Drama Theatre at 8 p.m. tonight and Wednesday. The group was so impressed with the show that it immediately started planning to bring it to the United States. "This production has been so good in Iowa City, and that's why we're coming to Iowa City," said Chappell. "We don't want a great hunger to understand Russian life, which our play represents.

Despite lukewarm ticket sales here, "Frankenstein" has been an even more successful show in Russia. The group plans to bring it to Russia in the future.

"There's a great trend in which faithfulness and accuracy are awaiting another gilded production," said Coppee. "But this one \["Frankenstein"] is a great trend in which faithfulness and accuracy are awaiting another gilded production, this one \["Frankenstein\]."
