Scholarships made available for needy students

Applications for two scholarships are available through the UI Student Government.

A self-help scholarship is available to a full-time UI student who works 15 or more hours a week. Applicants must have a 2.5 cumulative GPA and must have a completed financial aid form on file at the Office of Student Financial Aid. Applicants must have at least $200 in unmet financial need. A total of $1,000 is available.

The UISG Child Care Commission is sponsoring a child-care scholarship for students with children enrolled in the Community Consolidated Child Care Home Provider network or other state-licensed facilities. The students must be enrolled in at least five semester hours and have a completed financial aid form on file at the Office of Student Financial Aid. Three awards of $300 each will be awarded.

Applications for both scholarships are due by Nov. 11, and forms are available at the financial aid office or at UISG office, room 48 of the Union.

Woman struck by truck near Iowa City Public Library

A woman was hit by a pickup while walking across Linn Street near the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., around 8 p.m. Thursday. A witness said the woman rolled over the hood of the car and went into convulsions while lying on the street less than a minute after being hit.

Jessica Couchman, a sixth-grader at Lemme Elementary School, was waiting outside the library when, she said, she saw the pickup driven by an unidentified man run a stop sign and hit the woman.

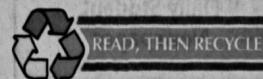

"He said he stopped, but I don't think he did," Couchman said. "I don't think he saw her. The truck hit her in the stomach, and she rolled on top of the car and when she landed she started shaking."

The man stopped immediately to call the police, Couchman said.

The woman's name could not be released until her family was notified, said Iowa City police officer Vernon Coates. The woman's condition was unknown when an ambulance took her to the hospital, but Coates said she was conscious at the time.

President Clinton was in Des Moines Thursday afternoon stumping for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bonnie Campbell. The president spoke to a crowd of more than 300 at the Des Moines airport before heading to a fund-raiser for Campbell. Clinton announced additional pork exports to Russia and other former Soviet states, as well as loan extensions for farmers in light of recent bumper corn crops.

President Clinton said Democrats have done more to improve the country in the past 21 months than Republicans did in the last 12 years, and Democrats need to be elected Nov. 8 to cement and continue that improvement.

ANKENY, Iowa — Sen. Bob Dole counterattacked President Clinton Thursday as he campaigned for Iowa Republicans the same day the president stumped for the state's Democrats.

Clinton came to Iowa earlier in the day after saying that farm-belt Democrats uncovered a "secret" Republican plan to cut farm subsidies. Dole told about 400 Republicans at a rally that he was eager to debate the president on the issue.

"I'll put my record on agriculture against anybody," the Senate minority leader told the crowd. "I'd be glad to debate the president tonight."

Clinton left Des Moines at 8 p.m. The two men missed each other by about 12 miles and a to lower the crime rate and give kids a better future. He added that Campbell proved as attorney general that she can do that.

Republicans told Americans for 12 years that big government and big deficits were bad, Clinton said, but when they were in charge the federal government got bigger and the national debt quadrupled.

He spoke in glowing terms of his past 21 months as president, mentioning legislation, spending, the deficit and the help he received from Smith and Harkin.

"Since we have been in office, we have reduced the federal deficit, we have shrunk the federal government," Clinton said. "We are taking all the savings from reducing federal bureaucracy and giving it to local communities in Iowa and elected, she will work to make criminals serve their entire prison terms.

Clinton said. "Bonnie Campbell can do that, and I want you to help her."

"If a person is sentenced to 25 years, don't let them out in six. Make them do the time," she said. "Right now, our sentences don't say what they mean, and they surely don't mean what they say."

Election '94: Governor

Bonnie Campbell - D Terry Branstad - R
Incumbent

Why they are running.
Campbell is running because she has seen mismanagement of government, unnecessary bureaucracy and cronyism and believes she can do better.

Branstad wants to invest in education, reduce the state's dependency on property taxes and reduce the individual income tax by 15 percent over the next four years.

What they can do to attract good-paying, high-tech jobs to Iowa.

Campbell says consolidating and reducing obstacles such as paperwork, permits and fees and installing a competitive tax system with neighboring states will encourage business to locate and expand in Iowa.

Branstad says eliminating the property tax on machinery and equipment will cause expansion in current corporations and encourage entrepreneurs to stay in Iowa by reducing the income tax.

What they can do to alleviate financial strain on students.

Campbell wants to find a way to cap tuition and tie it to something like income growth.

Branstad says he believes strongly in financial aid and programs like work-study. He would like to see tuition increases kept at or below the rate of inflation.

GENERATIONS CLASH OVER RELATIONSHIPS

Parents' input pressures young Indian daters

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

When Indians immigrate to the United States, many try to preserve their cultural heritage in the midst of American staples such as apple pie, fast food, the Statue of Liberty and television. The cultural differences leave many first- and second-generation Indians confused about dating and marriage.

UI sophomore Suma Nagendra said cultural differences have made it difficult for some Indian parents and their children to relate to one another. "Because our parents were brought up in a completely different culture, it's hard for them to comprehend the difference in the cultures and it's hard for us to understand where they are coming from," she said. "The way they were raised can't be erased from their minds. They just want the best for their children."

Many marriages in India are arranged by parents. The basis for arranged marriages is security and success. Believing that marriages between similar people will be successful, parents often search for brides and grooms who belong to the same caste, class, and region and who speak the same language.

Well-meaning parents have caused stress for some American-raised Indian children. Many UI students of Indian descent feel pressured to date and marry Indians or those of Indian descent.

Simpson case jury designated

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A jury that includes eight blacks and eight women was chosen Thursday for the murder trial of O.J. Simpson. A quest for 15 alternates remains.

Immediately after the 12 jurors were chosen, they stood, raised their right hands and took an oath. "I want to welcome you to the league of judges," Superior Court Judge Lance Ito told them. "I believe you can rise to the occasion despite the unusual circumstances. I know you can do a good job in this case, and I trust you."

Lawyers settled on a panel with eight women and four men. In addition to the blacks, one juror is white, one Hispanic and two are of mixed races. Their ages range from 22 to 52.

"It's an extremely good jury for the defense for several different reasons beyond the obvious one that it's an African-American jury," said Peter Arenella, a law professor at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Loyola University law Professor Laurie Levenson said the presence of eight women was almost as important as the fact that eight jurors are black.

"The whole theme of the defense is going to be, 'This is the O.J. Simpson you know and love. How could he have committed these murders?'" she said.

Race has emerged as an important issue in the Simpson case. Public opinion polls have shown that blacks are more likely to believe Simpson is innocent and are more open to suggestions he was framed, possibly by police.

Simpson appeared dazed and glum when a panel was finally seated. Later, he hugged his lawyers. The final word on who stayed and who was excused appeared to fall to Simpson, who would nod in agreement before

S.C. mom admits to killing her children

Jesse Holland

UNION, S.C. — The mother who said a carjacker dumped her on a lonely road and drove off with her two young sons in the back seat confessed to killing the boys, her arrest warrant shows.

Susan V. Smith, who had made tearful pleas on national television for the boys' return, is in custody and will be charged with two counts of murder, Union County Sheriff Howard Wells said.

The nine-day search for 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex, which stretched from Georgia to Seattle, ended where it began, in Lake John D. Long near where Smith told police a gunman forced her from the car Oct. 25 and drove away with the boys.

Michael and Alex died Oct. 25, the arrest warrant says.

Hundreds of volunteers from the small town torn by the disappearances had combed the area. Divers had searched the lake several times during the past few days, and police cordoned off the area Thursday.

The identities of the bodies in the burgundy 1990 Mazda would have to be confirmed through an autopsy, Wells said, and Smith is scheduled to be arraigned today.

Wells would not take questions and did not discuss a possible weeks spent apart from their girlfriends. The two men eat, sleep and study in Iowa City, but their hearts are somewhere in Illinois.

Zachmeyer, 29, met his girlfriend three years ago at a bar in Davenport. He said they were together for a year before he went back to school to work toward a bachelor's degree. The two bought a house together in Rock Island, Ill., and when Zachmeyer graduates he plans to move in with her.

When he's not traveling to and from Rock Island, a typical day for Zachmeyer includes classes, basketball and relaxing. He sets aside

"When I was younger, my long-distance affairs never worked out. I'm a lot older now," Zachmeyer said.

Bowers, 22, said he is in the most serious relationship he's ever

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

Roommates Scott Bowers (left) and Michael Zachmeyer have at least one thing in common: the difficulties of long-distance relationships. Bowers hates his $30-$70 monthly phone bills, and Zachmeyer dislikes the phone, period. "I hate talking on the phone. A 30-minute call is a record for me," he said.

had, and it's hard to tell if it's because of his age or maturity level.

He met the object of his affection at a party in Ottawa, Ill., a year and a half ago. Every other weekend, one of them makes the three-hour trek between cities, burning gas and minutes all in the name of love.

Bowers spends most of his day concentrating on mechanical engineering and sending out résumés. Every other evening he spends a half-hour talking with his girlfriend — 30 minutes he refuses to sacrifice.

"When we were first apart, the letter-writing was crucial. We don't write as much anymore because we talk on the phone, but I used to get a card every week," Bowers said.

Both Bowers and Zachmeyer admitted they are used to saying goodbye. Zachmeyer said the tearful goodbyes aren't that wrenching because in five days another weekend will arrive.

On bachelor weekends, the two roommates said they seek the company of friends, celebrating the end of a grueling week with good conversation and cold beer.

"Sometimes I just need to be with the guys to talk, drink beer and look around," Zachmeyer said. Although he's alone at the UI, Zachmeyer said he's in Iowa City to go to school and not to meet anyone else. He said he's never been tempted by the women on campus and if he does talk to girls, he won't be shy about telling his girlfriend.

"No girl will compare to her, but it's still fun to flirt," Zachmeyer said.

Bowers said he notices the girls sitting in classrooms and bars, but he's not interested. "Good-looking girls are a dime a dozen on this campus, and it takes a lot more than good looks. I'm a choosy individual," Bowers said.

Do the guys ever get jealous? Bowers said he does get jealous, his worries stemming from the fact that his girlfriend has male friends. Zachmeyer said having friends of the opposite sex is part of life and he doesn't get jealous.

With all the long-distance phone calls, the nights apart and the jealousy, some people may wonder if it's worth it.

Zachmeyer and Bowers agree that any amount of heartache is a small price to pay for the love of these two women.

"Before this, I tried to avoid all relationships, much less long-distance ones. It's all worth it because we're as much of a perfect match as possible," Bowers said.

Dylan's ex-girlfriend sues for $5 million in claim she co-wrote songs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Dylan's companion of nearly 20 years is suing him for more than $5 million, saying she co-wrote his music and helped manage his career before they broke up last year.

Ruth Tyranigel "devoted all aspects of her life to (Dylan's) needs, interest and well-being," she claimed in a lawsuit filed Wednesday.

Tyranigel said that she allowed the singer and songwriter "to hold her out and she also held herself out as his wife," and that he promised to split his property with her in the event of death or separation.

The relationship began in 1974 and ended in 1993, the lawsuit said.

Tyranigel wants a monthly stipend, half of Dylan's still-undetermined assets and $5 million in damages.

The lawsuit didn't say which of Dylan's songs Tyranigel claims she helped write. Her lawyer, Gary Spritz, didn't immediately return calls Thursday.

Dylan's agent, Joan Hyler, was out of her office and didn't immediately return calls.

Director Singleton's new flick promotes 'unlearning' stereotypes

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — John Singleton likes to provoke people. His latest film starts digging for a reaction early, starting with the movie's poster.

"Higher Learning," set for release in January, is about three college students who must grapple with racism, sexism and other problems.

Its promotional poster shows a series of epithets, from "nigger" to "whitey" to "queer." Standing out in bold red type is the word "unlearn."

"I want to give people something to talk about," said Singleton, who directed "Boyz n the Hood" in 1991. "I want them to experience something different, to see things in a different light."

Singleton said Wednesday his greatest movie-making thrill is "sitting in a theater of 500 or 700 people and seeing them react to something I've written." Michael Rapaport, Lawrence Fishburne and Ice Cube.

Skating rink to glide into I.C.

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Ice skaters have a chance to lace up their skates and take to the ice this winter on a new outdoor rink coming to City Park.

The Old Capitol Skaters Alliance is developing the rink for people wanting to learn how to skate, improve basic skating skills or participate in hockey. The first winter skating program will be in January, and the outdoor rink will also be available for public skating.

City officials offered the group a parking lot near the small pond in City Park to set up a natural ice rink, formed by spraying water over the surface of the cement. The 1 1/2 inch sheet of ice will be surrounded by 2- or 3-foot boards.

City Park has always offered public skating on the park ponds, according to Terry Trueblood, director of Parks and Recreation, but there hasn't been an organized attempt to form a manmade outdoor rink in Iowa City for about 10 years.

Trueblood said the initial effort to create a natural ice rink in Mercer Park was a failure because crews could not maintain the ice during the unpredictable Iowa City winter.

"Iowa City's climate is not truly conducive to maintain outdoor ice for any lengthy period of time," Trueblood said. "One day at 40-degree temperature can ruin any manmade ice."

David Murray, vice president of the Old Capitol Skaters Alliance, said the group proposed the natural ice rink because it is easier to maintain during the unpredictable Iowa winter season than a 5-inch sheet of ice on a pond.

"It's difficult to maintain a pond for skating if it should happen to thaw during the winter," Murray said. "You can't get on the pond surface to clean it or fill in any cracks."

Murray said the advantage of the new rink, which will be about the size of The Field House swimming pool, is that it will allow skaters to get on the ice earlier in the season. It takes longer for a pond to ice over enough for enthusiasts to skate safely.

The Old Capitol Skaters Alliance is in the last stages of creating the rink. The only thing the group has left to do is set up proper lighting around the area to allow for night skating.

"The outdoor temperature after 5 p.m. is great for sustaining the ice (on the rink), but once it gets dark, proper lighting — something like the lights that surround a baseball field at night — is required," Murray said.

The volunteer nonprofit organization purchased the lights and obtained materials for the rink, and the city will supply the electricity.

Once the lights have been placed, the rink will be open to the public during the ice skating program's off times. Murray said Friday or Saturday evenings would be "prime times" for public skating, and the rink will also be available for rent.

Throughout the rest of the week, the rink will be used for the "Kids on Skates," program sponsored by two groups within the Alliance, the Old Capitol Youth Hockey Association and the Learn-to-Skate Program. Registration for the programs will begin Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon at the Robert A. Lee Community Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert St.

Sue Reeves, director of the Learn-to-Skate and figure skating programs, said they will teach children basic skills such as how to move forward and back, start and stop, and how to do simple turns.

"Ice skating instructors are needed to teach hockey, basic and figure skating skills to children," Reeves said. "Instructors can expect to be on the ice approximately two to four hours a week."

Murray said his organization's expectations for the program are high. He said the success of the program will be measured by public interest and the number of volunteers who become involved with teaching the skating programs and maintenance of the outdoor rink.

Children must be 5 or older to participate in Learn-to-Skate and between the ages of 5 and 17 and know how to skate for youth hockey. The hockey program will cost $40 per child, and the Learn-to-Skate program is $20 per child. Parents must sign insurance forms and a liability waiver, and payment is due at registration.

Farmers crow exotic bird's value

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

Six-foot flightless birds with humanlike eyes could be the next alternative livestock in Iowa for ranchers, farmers and acreage owners.

Emu farmers, veterinarians and prospective consumers will gather for a seminar Saturday at the Best Western Westfield Inn in Coralville. The Iowa Emu Association is holding the semiannual educational and informational seminar from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. to promote the expanding emu industry.

Emus, relatives of the ostrich, are cheaper and easier to raise than cattle, said Sue Kurtz, owner of Kountry Korner Emus farm in Cedar Falls and member of the Iowa Emu Association. The birds require only 100-foot strips of land to live and run on, they produce more offspring in captivity than do cattle and they cost only $150 each to feed per year, she said.

These brown feathered birds yield several products including low-cholesterol, low-calorie red meat, leather and oil. Though not widely distributed, the products are very useful to the public, Kurtz said.

People find little difference in the quality of emu meat and leather compared to cow hide and beef, Kurtz said.

"The meat is very healthy," she said. "It's hard to tell the difference because it's so tasty. It's very good — they have roasts, steak similar to fillet mignon, sausage, ground-burger meat and jerky."

Emu leather is popular in Europe and Texas as leather trim for other materials, Kurtz said.

"The leather is real soft. It's pliable and sturdy," she said. "You pluck off the quills and it's just like cow skin."

Every part of the emu can be utilized, including the fat glands of the animal. Hand and face creams, burn cream, arthritis medicine, shampoo, conditioner and perfume are by-products of the oil, Kurtz said.

"The oil is very beneficial and healing," she said. "Aborigines have been using it for hundreds of years. They would rub it in and sit in the sun and let it penetrate."

A few UI football players are currently using emu oil in hopes of relaxing their muscles and soothing their pains.

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Healthy red meat, leather and large numbers of offspring are only a few pluses of this emu, a 6-foot flightless bird. Emus are a new alternative livestock for farmers, ranchers and acreage owners.

"We have a sample, and we're in the process of trying it out," UI football trainer Ed Crowley said. "We are using it on strains and inflammations."

The cream is being applied to a few players before physical therapy modalities, but so far no differences have been observed, Crowley said.

Kathryn Kos of Kalona said she uses emu oil for her arthritis pain. Kos' son recently starting raising emus in Kalona and will be attending the Saturday seminar.

"It has a menthol smell to it," she said. "It gets hot when you rub it in. I have lower back pain and arthritis in my fingers. When I rub it in it seems to help."

Currently, the market for emu products and meat is small. Mary Yoder, owner of the English River Emu Ranch in Kalona, said there are too few birds in the Midwest to have a strong slaughter market.

Seven to 10 million birds of slaughter age are needed to start a meat market, and Yoder said it is hard to predict when this goal will be within reach.

Currently, Yoder keeps eight emus on her farm, but she is expecting eggs soon. Emus can hatch up to 30 eggs during their breeding season, which lasts from December to May.

"The male emu hatches the eggs," Yoder said. "We go in and take the eggs and incubate them ourselves. If we didn't, the female would just lay four eggs and quit."

"Right now we are focusing on breeding stock," said Yoder, in light of the market goal. "I hope to think in five years that food will be out in restaurants and on the table."

STUDENTS STILL FLYING

I.C. travelers unfazed by plane crash

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

As Thanksgiving and upcoming winter vacations lead students to consider ways to get home, airlines don't need to worry about ticket sales, despite a commuter plane crash in Indiana which claimed 68 lives Monday.

Sarah Reed, a St. Louis resident visiting friends in Iowa City, said she travels by plane on occasion but usually drives on long trips.

"I feel safer in a car because I'm in control," Reed said. "I'd still probably fly again though, because (an accident) only happens once in a while."

located on the Pedestrian Mall, said this attitude was common.

"I've only had two comments on the crash since it happened," Hieber said. "People realize that flying is safer than traveling by car."

There were 1,956 plane accidents in 1992, with 408 of these resulting in 810 fatalities according to the 1994 U.S. Statistical Abstract. In the same year there were 34,928 fatal auto accidents in the United States resulting in 39,235 deaths.

The crash hasn't affected ticket sales at Hawkeye World Travel, even for American Eagle, the airline of the plane that went down. Hieber said potential vacationers haven't shied away from American Eagle or its parent company, American Airlines, when considering ticket options.

Despite the reputed safety of airlines, some students have mixed feelings about flying.

"I think flying is pretty scary, but so is getting in a car, if you think about it," UI sophomore John Rasmussen said. "I'd feel safer in a car because in a plane if you go down you die. But in a car, if you crash there's a chance you'll live."

The human element of the accident is more important to some students.

"The accident was pretty sad. Each time something like this happens, it kind of makes you second-guess flying, but I'd still do it," said UI freshman Eric Miller, who said he has never traveled by plane.

Impoverished students tap into plasma center

Carrie Crumbaugh
The Daily Iowan

Need some quick cash? The answer may lie in selling your assets — namely your plasma.

Students may sell plasma, part of blood, up to twice a week for a maximum of $30 and use the money not only to support their social lives, but also for tuition, rent and food.

Students paying their own way through college need the extra money to get by, UI junior Mandy Ewing said. "I'm selling my plasma so I can pay my rent and eat," she said. "I work at a university job, and if you work there you only can work for 20 hours a week and that is not enough to support yourself."

Ewing said she has received loans to pay for tuition and is responsible for her bills as well. She has been selling plasma for two months and plans to continue.

"I'm going to do it until they tell me I can't donate anymore," Ewing said. Some students who sold plasma in the past have stopped for various reasons.

"I was so incredibly desperate for money and it was the easiest way to get money fast, but I stopped because my grandparents saw the bruise on my arm and freaked out," UI sophomore Ingrid Pohl said. "They decided to send me money every month."

UI sophomore Trey Runcie said he stopped selling plasma because he doesn't think giving plasma was good for his health.

"I stopped because my mom, who is a nurse, told me that if you sell plasma regularly your vein will callous, so it makes it difficult to put in emergency IVs, and that could be dangerous," Runcie said. "My mom said she didn't know any doctors who would condone their children to give plasma."

There aren't any health problems associated with the plasma-giving process, said Chris Dorman, manager of Sera Tec Biologicals, 408 S. Gilbert St.

"Plasma is the liquid portion of the blood, which replenishes itself in 24 to 48 hours after it is drawn," Dorman said.

The plasma-giving process consists of a person getting a physical and a urine test, she said. The process can last for 30 to 50 minutes, after which the person is paid.

"It is safe because each time a donor comes in they go through a screening process to see if they are all right to donate," Dorman said.

The screening process includes a vital signs assessment, a medical questionnaire and a weighing, Dorman said. Also, physicians and nurses check the health of sellers each time they come in.

Dr. Jennifer Kylo, a fellow associate in the pediatrics department of the UI Hospitals and Clinics, said the plasma-selling process is safe.

"I don't think it's unhealthy at all," she said. "It's about the same thing as giving blood or getting blood tests."

Some UI students said they have never considered selling plasma to increase their income — or lack of one.

"I never have and I never will because I heard from people that it just sucks and the money is rotten," UI junior Ryan Christensen said.

GALA TO BE HELD IN UNION

Festival to shed light on Indian celebration

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

Though Indian Hindu students at the UI are thousands of miles from India, they will recreate the spirit of the Festival of Lights this weekend with traditional customs.

There will be a public celebration marking Diwali, the Festival of Lights, Sunday in the Ballroom of the Union from 6-8 p.m.

The event will give people a chance to learn more about Indian culture, said Veera Rajendran, a member of the association.

"It's an occasion in which we can give the public a glimpse of this diverse culture we have," he said. "It will give people the chance to learn more about the Eastern culture."

Festival participants will learn about Hinduism and the different myths about Diwali. Though myths about the festival's origin vary widely in different parts of India, the most popular myth centers around the hero-god Lord Rama. According to this myth, Diwali commemorates the return of Lord Rama to his birthplace following a 14-year exile, said Philip Lutgendorf, associate professor of Asian Languages and Literature.

Diwali is celebrated at the appearance of the new moon during the month of Kartik (October / November). It is traditionally marked by fireworks and the lighting of lamps, Lutgendorf said.

Association secretary Anil Subramani said Diwali is a time of celebration and happiness in India.

"Come Diwali, and all of India witnesses a spirit of joy and festivity not different from the Christmas spirit seen here each December," he said.

Tickets for the festival are $7 and are available at the Union Box Office and Masala Indian Vegetarian Cuisine, 9 S. Dubuque St.

OSLO, Norway — A Bosnian hijacker surrendered Thursday a commandeering an airliner with people aboard over northern Norway and demanding that aid supply lines be opened to Muslim areas in Bosnia.

In a tape recording released by Norwegian media, the hijacker wanted to speak to Bosnian officials before releasing the hostages.

"We want to open humanitarian corridors on the ground... (so) food, electricity and water, and necessary things come into places that are under blockade," he said. It is the third winter. It is very cold.

He threatened to kill the passengers if police stormed the plane parked on a darkened tarmac at Gardermoen Airport just north of Oslo. After negotiating with police he surrendered without incident Thursday night.

Police identified him only as a year-old Bosnian refugee who has been in Norway for about a year. Norwegian media quoted police saying he was born in Sarajevo.

The hijacker had claimed to have a grenade, although police said they have found nothing on the plane.

The hijacker commandeered Scandinavian Airlines System Flight 37.

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A jury recommended Thursday that a former minister get the electric chair for his role in the shotgun slayings of an abortion doctor and his bodyguard.

Paul Hill, a 40-year-old who had claimed that killing abortion doctors is divinely sanctioned and had prayed himself as a martyr to the pro-life cause, showed no emotion during the jury's recommendation was read.

The same jury took just 20 minutes Wednesday to convict Hill of murder. It took nearly four hours to choose between the death penalty and life in prison without parole.

Circuit Judge Frank Bell is bound by the recommendation a could instead impose a life sentence. A sentencing date was not immediately set.

DURUNKA, Egypt — Holding tight to two of his children, Mohammed Abdel-Aal searched Thursday through the debris of his home destroyed by the inferno which swept through this town in southern Egypt and killed at least 475 people.

Abdel-Aal and the two children escaped; his wife and a 2-year-old son may well have not. A day after a torrent of burning oil ravaged the town, they were still missing. The town was strewn with charred palm trees, decaying animal carcasses and still smoldering cars and trucks.

"There are people it will take three months to find in all of this sand and mud," said Abdel-Aal, hugging his kids as they sat on his lap.

The tragedy in Durunka, 200 miles south of Cairo, came as the heaviest rains in 60 years lashed normal arid Egypt. More than 40 people were killed in floods which swept across the country from the Sinai Peninsula in the east to the ancient temples of Luxor in the south.

In Durunka, a train carrying fuel oil derailed on a track loosened by the torrential downpour. Electric PASADENA, Calif. — One of the comet fragments which smashed into Jupiter's surface last summer created a five-mile-wide fireball hotter than the surface of the sun, according to space scientists.

Fragment G was one of 21 from the Shoemaker-Levy 9 comet, which exploded in Jupiter's atmosphere between July 16 and July 22.

When instruments aboard NASA's Galileo spacecraft first detected it on July 18, the fragment G fireball was five miles across and had a temperature of at least 14,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The sun's temperature is 9,927 degrees.

The spacecraft then recorded the expansion of the fireball within about a minute and a half to hundreds of miles across and a drop in OSLO, Norway — A Bosnian hijacker surrendered Thursday after commandeering an airliner with 129 people aboard over northern Norway and demanding that aid supply lines be opened to Muslim areas in Bosnia.

In a tape recording released to Norwegian media, the hijacker said he wanted to speak to Bosnian officials before releasing the hostages.

"We want to open humanitarian corridors on the ground... (so) that food, electricity and water, and all necessary things come into places that are under blockade," he said. "It is the third winter. It is very cold."

Police identified him only as a 25-year-old Bosnian refugee who had been in Norway for about a year. Norwegian media quoted police as saying he was born in Sarajevo.

The hijacker had claimed to have a grenade, although police said they have found nothing on the plane.

The hijacker commandeered Scandinavian Airlines System Flight 347

with 123 passengers and six crew members Thursday afternoon as it flew between the Arctic towns of Bardufoss and Bodo.

Fifty-two people were allowed off at Bodo, where the plane made a brief stop before flying 500 miles south to an airport outside Oslo, the capital of Norway.

At roughly the same time as the hijacking, Norwegian police received bomb threats at 10 locations across the country, including Fornebu International Airport near Oslo.

It was not clear whether the threats were linked to the hijacking. Police were checking the 10 sites. Fornebu was evacuated briefly then reopened Thursday evening.

The hijacker said he wanted to bring world attention to Bosnia, where the Muslim-led government, Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Serbs have been fighting a war for 2 1/2 years.

"We are going to negotiate with the world community... and there is no hope," he said on the tape. "And if there is no hope in Bosnia, if there is no help to Bosnia, then there is no hope and no hope to all the world."

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees has reported persistent problems getting aid into the northwest Muslim pocket of Bihac and three eastern Muslim enclaves. The areas are surrounded by Serb-held territory. Aid flights to the Bosnian capital, Sarajevo, have frequently been interrupted by shelling, mostly blamed on Bosnian Serbs. However, flights have been arriving in the besieged city without a hitch for weeks.

Norwegians Per and Heidi Pettersen, with their children, Robert, 4, and Sandra, 2, right, speak to reporters in Bodo, Norway. They were passengers on board the SAS plane which was hijacked Thursday, but they were both released before the plane continued on to Oslo.

JURORS DELIBERATE FOR FOUR HOURS

Death penalty urged for abortion clinic murderer

Bill Kaczor
Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A jury recommended Thursday that a former minister get the electric chair for the shotgun slayings of an abortion doctor and his bodyguard.

Paul Hill, a 40-year-old who had claimed that killing abortion doctors is divinely sanctioned and had portrayed himself as a martyr to the pro-life cause, showed no emotion as the jury's recommendation was read.

The same jury took just 20 minutes Wednesday to convict Hill of murder. It took nearly four hours to choose between the death penalty and life in prison without parole.

Circuit Judge Frank Bell is not bound by the recommendation and could instead impose a life sentence. A sentencing date was not immediately set.

Barred by the judge from arguing that the slayings were justifiable homicide to save fetuses, Hill, acting as his own lawyer, offered no defense at his trial. He put no witnesses on the stand and asked no questions.

However, he finally spoke directly to the 12 jurors just before they began weighing his fate.

"In an effort to suppress this truth, you may mix my blood with the blood of the unborn and those who have fought to defend the oppressed," Hill said. "However, truth and righteousness will prevail. May God help you to protect the unborn as you would want to be protected."

Wielding a 12-gauge shotgun, Hill ambushed Dr. John B. Britton, 69; his bodyguard, retired Air Force Lt. Col. James H. Barrett, 74; and Barrett's wife, June, 68, as the three arrived at the Ladies Center clinic on July 29. June Barrett was wounded.

Hill, a former minister in the Presbyterian Church in America and the Orthodox Presbyterian Church, was also convicted Oct. 5 of violating the new federal clinic-protection law in the shotgun attack. He could get up to life in prison for that offense at sentencing Dec. 9. He acted as his own lawyer at that trial, too.

The federal law against using violence or otherwise harassing those entering abortion clinics was prompted by the slaying in 1993 of another abortion doctor at another Pensacola abortion clinic.

On Thursday, Assistant State Attorney James Murray told the jury it had a responsibility to recommend death for Hill.

"The defendant had been telling the doctor for the past six months: Execute abortionists," Murray said, referring to a poster Hill used during anti-abortion demonstrations.

"He had 30 rounds of ammunition in order to carry out his murderous rampage. You give him the same level of mercy and compassion he gave Dr. Britton and Col. Barrett."

Many abortion opponents have denounced Hill and his use of violence. But a few said it would help their cause if he were executed.

"His hope and mine is that his execution will save the lives of many, many more children," Donna Bray, director of the Defenders of the Defenders of Life in Bowie, Md., said during the trial.

In Durunka, a train carrying fuel oil derailed on a track loosened by the torrential downpour. Electrical wires set the oil ablaze, and swirling flood waters carried the burning oil into the city of 22,000 people.

By Thursday afternoon, the death toll had jumped dramatically as officials said that in addition to 258 bodies already in morgues, about 220 other victims remained buried in the ruins. Those returning to Durunka feared the toll would rise even higher.

Ahmed Sharaf Eddin, a taxi driver, said he looked out of his home and saw "a wave of people running to the mosque screaming, 'There is only one God.' They thought it was the day of judgment."

In nearby Assiut, a makeshift morgue at the general hospital drew dozens of grieving families searching for the bodies of loved ones. Many victims were disfigured by fire, making identification difficult.

"They have no features left to recognize," said Abdel-Hamid Youssef, a hospital technician helping survivors search for relatives.

The fuel depot was still smoldering Thursday afternoon. Survivors asked angrily why the government had put a fuel storage terminal so close to houses and why it was so slow to provide assistance to victims.

"Very simply, it looks to us like an expanding, cooling bubble of hot gas," said Robert Carlson, the principal infrared investigator at the NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena. "But obviously, it will take more complicated models to explain the data."

By combining readings from three instruments which can detect light and heat from parts of the spectrum not visible to the eye, the Galileo scientists "have characterized a comet impact directly for the first time in history," said Galileo Project scientist Torrence Johnson.

The spacecraft at the time was 150 million miles from Jupiter and uniquely positioned at an angle to record information which could not be gathered from Earth.

NATURAL RESPONSE TO CIRCUMSTANCES

Why we are 'slackers'

In a recent article outlining last week's teleconference on Generation X, a reporter defined twentysomethings as "consumers of popular culture" and "slackers."

It's not news that this generation (sometimes defined as those born between 1965-1975) has had exhaustive material written on why they can't cope, why they are "slackers," how they will fare in the future and the like.

But why are "consumers of popular culture" inevitably equated with slacking off? Despite the philosophical and analytical mire lining the bookshelves, there is actually a very logical explanation.

Popular culture seems to be defined as today's television, music, film and reading materials which contribute to our consumer culture. This is, of course, a rather large category under which every human "consumer" can most likely be lumped. If those defining Generation X as slackers want to assert their claims as valid, then let's hear specifics. Are we talking about "The Ricki Lake Show"? MTV? Rap music? Cosmopolitan magazine?

Does slacking off mean being unemployed, depressed and / or confused? If so, join the ranks of reality, not just the up and coming generation.

Some have asserted that X-ers are spoiled because unlike previous generations they have not lived through a major war. So what do you call AIDS? There's not exactly the choice to negotiate a peace treaty or call in the troops.

The fact of the matter is that the twentysomethings of the world have not defined their generation — they've been defined by the times. And the times (and employment figures), they are a-stagnant.

Take a look at Iowa City, for example. Chances are that as soon as a decent-paying professional job is up for grabs, it will be snatched up within days. In a town busting with X-ers, that's hardly slacking off.

So what's the real reason X-ers have been deemed "slackers?"

There simply aren't many good jobs. X-ers are acquiring a zillion advanced degrees and — if they're lucky — they wind up with a job paying little more than $5 an hour. Naturally this leads to depression and boredom, which leads to watching too much TV and trashy movies and the reading of nonacademic journals. It's a natural chain of events and has nothing to do with slacking off. It is simply the result of advancing technology, downsizing, a lousy economy and the scarcity of employment.

Generation X wants to be an employed, productive bunch. How many times have we read that this generation will make far less money than their parents' generation? If denied employment despite an abundance of credentials, who wouldn't become despondent and depressed? Instead of analyzing these reactions as a function of a generation of people, it should be viewed as the natural responses to unfortunate circumstances.

So wait and see. The minute you have on your business suit with pay stub in hand, all of a sudden you won't be classified as a member of Generation X or a slacker — even if you do subscribe to Cosmopolitan.

Sen. Grassley backs Branstad for governor

To the Editor:

I write to urge your readers to join me and vote for Gov. Terry Branstad on Nov. 8. I know firsthand Branstad's commitment to do what's right for Iowa. We worked together in the state Legislature. I've been proud to call him my friend since he was a college student at the UI.

Branstad and I come from the same place. And he's earned just the strong record you'd expect of someone from a family farm in Iowa. Gov. Branstad has done a good job during tough times. Today, Iowa's economy is diversified. It's growing, with a half-million new jobs created under his watch. Unemployment in Iowa has reached a record low. Gov. Branstad has made hard choices to balance the state budget. Without a doubt, tax cuts are on the table this year because of his leadership.

Looking ahead, Branstad understands what's good for Iowa's future. He has pledged to reduce the income and property tax burden for Iowa families. He wants to lower taxes on machinery and equipment and help create better paying jobs. Branstad appreciates that Iowans want criminals to face swift and sure punishment. He supports the death penalty, hard labor sentences and an end to parole.

Iowans deserve a governor with an aggressive strategy for new economic opportunity and a plan to keep Iowa streets and neighborhoods safe. Take it from me, this year Branstad is the experienced leader who can deliver.

Leach will end 30-year assault on democracy

To the Editor:

In 1964, University of Michigan researchers found that 76 percent of Americans trusted the government to do what was right. By 1992, the figure had dropped to 29 percent. The erosion of support for our democratic institutions these statistics represent is partially explained by the coarsening of the public discussion about the nation's agenda. Example: Democrats proclaim the Republican Party beholden to "radical, religious puritans," and Republicans call Democratic initiatives "Stalinist."

One man who understands the importance of returning to a deliberative, respectful approach to public policy is Rep. Jim Leach. Not only does Leach quote the great thinker Reinhold Niebuhr on the importance of protecting our democratic process, he follows through by respectfully engaging his constituents and political opponents and by giving reasons and sound arguments to support his positions.

Leach may not vote precisely how we would prefer on every issue, but we cannot allow perfection to become the enemy of the good. He takes his public charge seriously, acts on principle and projects a vision of the country he will work toward — he is a statesman.

We should know by now that democracy is about the politics of the half-loaf. Democracy is messy — it is given to compromise, inconsistency and long public debates. The sooner we freely admit these facts and the sooner we begin to elect more people like Leach who understand these facts, the sooner the 30-year assault on our democratic tradition will cease.

If we value them, we will make an effort

You tell me. Why was Sandra Peacock's life worth only 18 months' prison time (less time off for good behavior)?

About two weeks ago, Maryland truck driver Kenneth Peacock was given an 18-month prison sentence for murdering his wife. He had come home early from a delivery assignment and found his wife in bed with another man. His reaction was to go drink for several hours, load his shotgun and shoot her to death.

So from Kenneth Peacock's sentence we learn that according to the Maryland legal system's point of view, if a woman commits adultery it's OK to murder her, as long as you're willing to endure the minimum sentence required by law.

Judge Robert Cahill, in sentencing Peacock, was quoted as saying, "I seriously wonder how many men married five, four years would have the strength to walk away without inflicting some corporal punishment."

Not many. Information provided by the Domestic Violence Intervention Program states that 42 percent of all women killed in the United States are killed by their intimate partners — 42 percent.

In our society, examples continue to turn up of our devaluation of the lives of women. Those who work toward ending sexual violence and domestic abuse are labeled "rape-crisis fanatics," and their message is drowned out. Those males who choose to work against violence against women are deemed "sensitive New Age guys" and dismissed as wishy-washy.

Because some work against that violence and express views consistent with that, they are labeled "politically correct" (whatever that means), even "feminazis." They, their causes and even those they seek justice for are dismissed as out of hand.

In exchange, our country's Kenneth Peacocks get slapped on the wrist for murdering their mates. Repeatedly convicted woman abuser John Wayne Bobbitt is rewarded with a brief career as a pornography star rather than being locked up so that he may no longer harm women. Society rewards the assailants.

And that should make us all very, very angry — all of us. For we are all related to women and all have women in our lives in some role or other. Why do we allow this attitude toward them to persist, making light of sexual assault and domestic battery? Why do we work so diligently to blame the victims, as Judge Cahill has done?

Why do we reward abusive behavior against women?

American society at this point is so barbarous as to be a dark age for the treatment of the female half of our population. We can't pass an Equal Rights Amendment to guarantee women equal consideration and equal pay, we force victims of sexual assault to submit to cruel innuendo and insinuation if they have the courage to take their cases to court, and we as a society decide consistently that the woman who was raped and / or murdered must have somehow deserved it. And we let the dangerous criminals behind these assaults off easy.

And it makes me sick. The solution to all of this will only come when we — regardless of gender, regardless of religious orientation, regardless of race or any other classification — take strides to end violence against women and to make punishment for that violence more severe when it does occur.

The strides we make will vary from person to person; some will be more activist, some may help by volunteering time or supplies to programs such as the Rape Victim Advocacy Program or DVIP, and many may help to improve conditions for women by teaching our children that such violence and gender-based arrogance are very wrong.

Think of the women, girls, mothers, daughters, grandmothers, co-workers, spouses and friends in our lives. If we value them, we will make the effort. For this problem isn't unique to Sandra Peacock, whose life has now been judged as being worth about 2 1/2 weeks of her husband and murderer's life for every year of her own. It's about all of us — all of the females we know — and how society reinforces a philosophy of their relative worthlessness.

We must step in and tell them that that is unacceptable.

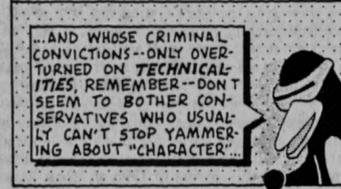

And to my fellow men, I'll say it once again: Don't put up with the degradation of women. Only when men stand up to violent men can the cycle of violence end.

Listen to and elect independent voices

And I ain't no Communist
And I ain't no capitalist
And I ain't no imperialist
And I ain't no Socialist
And I ain't no Democrat
Sure ain't no Republican
I only know one party
Freedom
"I am a Patriot," written by Little Steven and sung by Jackson Browne

Election time is here, and once again those bickering political scoundrels have reared their ugly heads. How many people are appalled by the Branstad / Campbell debacle and their bitterly waged campaigns for the Iowa gubernatorial position? How many people even care anymore? After more than 200 years of democracy, our election process has devolved and regressed to this: a mud fight with the "cleanest" candidate after the battle declared the winner. We can and must do better than this.

On to a brighter subject. More and more people — including myself — disgruntled with party politics are shrugging off their political name tags and affiliations and instead are joining the growing independent movement. The movement has and needs no leader. We have no set agenda or political platform. We do not see conspiracy around every corner nor do we go around calling other groups of Americans "they." We seek positive change and are not tied down or enslaved to any particular philosophy. And most important, we desire a political revolution from within and an ending of the stagnation that inflicts this nation's political process. We seek a new America.

Radicals and fanatics on the left and right are often blind devotees unable to see the good on the so-called "other side." Yes, staunch conservative Republicans, Sen. Ted "never let him forget Chappaquidick" Kennedy has served his country honorably. Yes, die-hard liberal Democrats, former Vice President Dan Quayle, even if he did misspell potato, is a man of character who has withstood much unwarranted criticism and abuse. Unfortunately, our nation is permeated with a tabloid mentality — a mentality based on personality flaws and the inconsequential. Inflexible, blind ideologies and apathy are major roadblocks to true progress. Look around — slowly but steadily the nation's moral, economic and social infrastructures are crumbling right before our eyes.

Let me give a specific example of what I am talking about.

In New York City, every baby is blindly tested for the HIV virus at birth. The results are not released to the parents, even if the results come back positive. The test is done for purely statistical purposes, to keep track of how fast the AIDS epidemic is spreading. Why not release the results? Advocates for the blind testing, such as New York's National Organization for Women chapter, insist that the mother, also positive for the virus and having never consented to the testing, has a right to privacy.

New York state Rep. Nattie Mayersohn disagreed. Mayersohn, a strong pro-choice supporter and NOW's New York chapter "Legislator of the Year" in 1989, ran into tough opposition from her friends at NOW. Mayersohn pleaded for humanitarianism to prevail over rigidity of ideology. She tried to convince fellow liberals that these babies are not statistics but living, independent human beings whose right to health care was being violated.

Earlier this year she introduced legislation which would allow positive test results to be sent to the parents, allowing some treatment of both baby and mother to be started earlier. Many liberals did back her but not the influential ones — the ones who could kill the bill in committee. Her measure failed. The tests are still blind.

Nat Hentoff delved into this issue in a series of Village Voice articles titled "Sacrificing Children at the Altar of Privacy." The author is of a rare breed. Although a liberal, an atheist and a card-carrying member of the American Civil Liberties Union, Hentoff does not tow a tight ideological line. His actions and reactions are based on his conscience, his intellect and his heart — not on some affiliation's official dogma.

To the dismay of many liberal comrades, Hentoff is a staunch anti-abortion advocate. He nevertheless aligned himself strongly behind the pro-choice Mayersohn. A commonly seen injustice — the treatment of children with AIDS as a political problem instead of a health problem — overshadowed their differences and united them.

Independent voices — the voices of the people like Hentoff and Mayersohn in this country, the voices of tolerance and compromise — must prevail. We independents can revitalize our government, eliminate the status quo of muddling through, help rebuild our societal infrastructures and, unencumbered by political entangling, better promote the general welfare of all Americans. Hopefully, both the strict ideologues and the apathetic will transform and come together and help build a new America.

And to tie everything back to my opening, if you really are unhappy with the Branstad / Campbell thing, don't vote for either one. Write me, Michael Tushek, in for governor of Iowa. If elected, I promise to serve because ...

... What I believe in my soul
Ain't what I see with my eyes
And we can't turn our backs this time.
I am a patriot
And I love my country
Because my country is all I know.

Michael Tushek's column appears alternate Fridays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Do you think the proposal to put pictures on student IDs is a good idea?

Tara Logan, UI senior majoring in journalism

"I think it's a good idea because people are always losing their IDs. It would take care of the problem of people charging on other people's IDs, and you wouldn't have to carry different things around."

Joshua Neff, 1994 UI graduate

"I don't think it's a bad idea per se. I'm bothered that they are considering doing it to increase campus security and keep tabs on people. Do they want a DNA sample as well?"

Jian Huang, UI assistant professor in statistics

"I don't think it's necessary. It's too troublesome and it costs too much. Everybody's got to have their pictures taken for it. It has a good side in that nobody would have a fake ID."

Michelle Goetz, UI senior in secondary math education

"It's my first semester here so I haven't had the experience of losing my ID yet, but I like that idea. I thought it was a good idea when they started putting pictures on credit cards."

Maintaining the UI as one of the nation's 50 best buys for an education is important, Branstad said. He believes keeping tuition increases at or below the rate of inflation is essential to maintaining affordability.

"I had student loans, and I didn't get my last student loan paid back until after I was governor," Branstad said. "I believe very strongly in financial aid and all things like the work-study program, where the state has been putting money."

CAMPBELL

She said truth in sentencing along with increasing prison space would be a big part of crime prevention.

Another strong position in Campbell's campaign is her opposition to the death penalty, which she said will benefit courtrooms.

"Iowa without the death penalty has a better conviction rate than states with the death penalty," she said. "If a person receives a life sentence for murder here, they will die in prison."

Besides fighting crime, Campbell said she is striving to keep people from leaving Iowa. She blames low wages for the population decrease in recent years.

"We're in a spiral and (wages) keep getting lower," she said. "It's hard to stay, and that's why we have to change."

Campbell said her plans for change lie in creating more capital through technology transfer and mass production.

"We need more capital and more communication with private industry," she said. "So if you're like someone at Iowa State and you invent a computer you can stay in Iowa and mass produce the computer."

If elected governor, Campbell said she would help alleviate financial strain on students by finding ways to cap tuition. She said the increase in tuition over the past 11 years is a problem in such a low-wage state.

"We need to find a way to cap tuition and tie it to something like income growth," Campbell said.

Over the past four years, some Campbell's accomplishments in Iowa attorney general have included introducing a law to prevent stalking and implementing the Child Support Recovery Awareness Project, in which she printed "wanted" posters of parents with delinquent child support payments. She has also strived to give domestic violence more recognition by launching a public-awareness campaign.

Campbell said she believes she can run the state more efficiently because of her experience as attorney general.

Election '94

GOP courts Democrats to gain House control

Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a recent closed-door meeting with lobbyists and Republican corporate chiefs, House GOP Whip Newt Gingrich predicted his party would capture the chamber if it can pull to within four seats of a majority. The key: courting conservative Democrats to switch parties.

But a survey of some of those most likely to be targeted suggests it will be a tough sell.

"I don't think it's something you even look at in the beginning" of a new legislative session, said Rep. Nathan Deal, D-Ga., one of those on the likely target list. He said he wasn't inclined to make any changes and suggested it could be months before any Democrat might conclude it's time to switch.

"It's as likely as an asteroid striking the Earth and everyone dying by next Tuesday," said another possible target, Rep. Gary Condit, D-Calif. "This massive switch-over is just a dream."

Aides said others on the target list had ruled out party switches, including Reps. Pete Geren, D-Texas; Ike Skelton, D-Mo.; Bud Cramer, D-Ala.; Bill Sarpalus, D-Texas; and Ralph Hall, D-Texas.

History provides little guide for convert-seeking Republicans. An election that leaves Democrats with such a thin margin of control is virtually unprecedented in this century.

"A closely divided House would put the chamber in uncharted waters," said John Pitney, a political scientist at Claremont McKenna College in California. "There is no clear model" for what would happen next.

Pitney and a colleague, William Connelly of Washington and Lee University, believe the GOP would turn to those who would be most philosophically comfortable in the Republican fold — conservatives whose districts aren't shy about voting for Republicans in presidential races. Most who fit that description are Southerners.

Rep. Bill Paxon of New York, chairman of the House GOP campaign committee, fueled the discussion this week by vowing to target for defeat any conservative Democrat who survives re-election

Tuesday.

"There's one way to avoid being targeted by the Republican Party, and that's to join it," Paxon told reporters.

No Democrat could be found who would acknowledge considering such a switch, however, and some attacked Paxon's threat as counterproductive.

"Nobody knows what the future holds, but based on circumstances now I would have no inclination of doing that," said Deal. "The best thing we can do is work together across party lines. I would hope the Republicans would try that approach rather than this adversarial approach of trying to coerce people. I don't coerce very easily."

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, said he has "made it as clear as can be that I am a Democrat, and I am going to continue to work within the Democratic Party to move the party back to ... what we once were and was appreciated by the American people."

Pitney pointed out that while parties have a weakening hold on voters, they still represent a strong support system for candidates. Switching affiliation often would mean giving up a home-grown political network, personal friendships and financial support.

"Among politicians, party continues to exert a strong hold. There's a certain culture within a party that might make it uncomfortable for a lot of people to switch," he said.

few minutes as they campaigned for the two main candidates for governor — incumbent Republican Terry Branstad and Democrat Bonnie Campbell, as well as other candidates.

Dole called on Clinton to repudiate a recent White House memo outlining $16 billion in agriculture cuts during the next five years.

"I want him to repudiate that. I want him to say that's not true," Dole said.

Dole also criticized Clinton and Vice President Al Gore for using scare tactics in the final days before the Nov. 8 election.

"I just wish he'd stop scaring people, scaring farmers, scaring senior citizens. I think it's a big mistake," he told reporters afterward.

To the crowd, many of whom waved small American flags and Branstad signs, Dole said, "This is the same administration that increased Social Security taxes $32 billion, and not a Republican voted for it."

"They cut $2 billion out of agriculture, and not a Republican voted for it. They cut $50 billion out of Medicare, and not a Republican voted for it. They give hypocrisy a bad name," he said.

Dole also predicted a gain of seven Senate seats in the election and was optimistic about GOP chances nationwide, even though recent polls show Democrats gaining strength.

"We don't see any slippage anywhere," he said.

CLINTON

all across the United States to fight crimes and to make our streets safer and to give our kids a better future."

Despite Democratic progress, Clinton said there is still more to be done. He stressed the importance of sending Democrats to Congress because Republicans only care about defeating Democrats and not about passing quality legislation.

"If you want to keep going in this direction, give me partners. Send these people to Congress," Clinton said. "I need help, folks. The other guys, what do they care? They voted no every chance they got."

The president also had good news for farmers: He announced an extension of U.S. Department of Agriculture loans to buy feed grain.

"You escaped the flood — now you have more corn than you know what to do with," he said. "It has depressed feed grain prices by 10 to 15 percent below the average. The extension will enable farmers to store their grain rather than sell it when prices are too low."

The announcement came on the heels of Wednesday's news that additional pork sales to Russia and other former Soviet states had been approved through an export-enhancement program.

The enthusiasm of the more than 300 people in attendance was only slightly dampened when a small disturbance occurred as the president took the podium. A handful of anti-abortion activists held up signs which read "Abortion Kills Children." The signs were torn down by other people in the crowd, and the protesters left.

The president ended his Iowa trip with a $250-a-plate fund-raising dinner for Campbell Thursday night at the Hotel Savery in Des Moines.

Iowa and create good-paying jobs."

Maintaining the UI as one of the nation's 50 best buys for an education is important, Branstad said. He believes keeping tuition increases at or below the rate of inflation is essential to maintaining affordability.

"I had student loans, and I didn't get my last student loan paid back until after I was governor," Branstad said. "I believe very strongly in financial aid and also things like the work-study program, where the state has been putting money."

According to the governor, the difficulty is in balancing low tuition costs and a high quality of education. Faculty salaries have improved to the point where Iowa is above the national average, and Branstad wants to keep it that way.

"That's the reason why annually the regents have provided tuition increases," he said.

Branstad plans to improve primary education in Iowa in three phases: parental involvement, school improvement, and innovation and professional development.

Local politicians are critical of state government pushing expendes on counties without providing funds to pay for them, said Branstad. One commonly cited expense he hears about is mental health care, which is provided by counties without financial support from the state. He says counties pay for mental health costs in part with funds raised through property taxes.

"We passed legislation this last year and began a statewide contract to control mental health-care costs," Branstad said. "We think we can save property taxpayers $90 million by this managed care for mental health."

Branstad has been outspoken on issues ranging from cutting Iowa's income tax to crime. He also wants to reinstate the death penalty and has promised to sign it into law if the legislature sends a bill to him.

Branstad was first elected governor in 1982 and won re-election in 1986 and 1990.

Campbell said her plans for change lie in creating more capital through technology transfer and mass production.

"We need more capital and more communication with private industrialists," she said. "So if you're like someone at Iowa State and you invent a computer you can stay in Iowa and mass produce the computer."

If elected governor, Campbell said she would help alleviate the financial strain on students by finding ways to cap tuition. She said the increase in tuition over the past 11 years is a problem in such a low-wage state.

"We need to find a way to cap tuition and tie it to something like income growth," Campbell said.

Over the past four years, some of Campbell's accomplishments as Iowa attorney general have included introducing a law to prevent stalking and implementing the Child Support Recovery Awareness Project, in which she printed "wanted" posters of parents with delinquent child support payments. She has also strived to give domestic violence more recognition by launching a public-awareness campaign.

Campbell said she believes she can run the state more efficiently because of her experience as attorney general.

"As attorney general, I have a unique position to watch state government funds," she said. "I have seen mismanagement, unnecessary bureaucracy, cronyism, projects that are mismanaged, and I think we can do better."

each move. Both sides must agree before a jury is seated, and they did so on the first day of the crucial peremptory challenges. In this stage — the final stage of jury selection — potential jurors can be excused for any reason except gender or race. Each side exercised 10 of its 20 challenges.

After nearly every challenge, lawyers huddled with the judge for private discussions. The exact nature of the sometimes lengthy talks was unknown, but defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. said at a break that the defense objected to any prosecution attempt to exclude jurors, particularly blacks, on the basis of race.

Of the 10 challenged by the prosecution, eight were black and two were white. The defense challenged five whites, one black, one Hispanic, two American Indians and one person of mixed race.

The prosecution began the much awaited session by dismissing a white 35-year-old hardware salesman from Pasadena who sported a ponytail and said he had a "positive image" of Simpson.

Asked what he thought of Simpson as a football player, the man had written on his jury questionnaire, "Wow! He was good."

The man was replaced and it was then the defense's turn for a challenge. In a surprise move, the defense offered to take the 12 prospective jurors in the jury box.

"Your honor, we feel we have a fair and impartial jury and will accept the jury as presently constituted," said attorney Robert Shapiro.

The prosecution wasn't as satisfied and exercised another challenge.

"It's an extremely good jury for the defense."

Peter Arenella, a law professor at the University of California at Los Angeles.

As the jury makeup changed, the defense excused a Hispanic woman who said that when she heard Simpson was charged, her reaction was "Who is O.J.?"

The defense also dismissed a 48-year-old American Indian who had heard the 911 tape of Nicole Brown Simpson calling for police help when Simpson broke through her door last year.

Simpson is accused of the June 12 slaying deaths of Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Among those selected were a quality-control worker at Hertz Corp., the company for which Simpson was a spokesman, and a postal worker who said repeatedly she didn't want to be on the jury. She put her head in her hands when it was announced she made the final cut.

Ito said Wednesday that he wanted 15 alternates instead of eight, and he had indicated a full panel won't be seated for another month. The search for alternates begins Tuesday.

Ito has said he plans to sequester the panel, but he hasn't said for how long. Prosecutors want full sequestration; the defense opposes any.

Jury selection began Sept. 26 with hundreds of potential jurors filling out a lengthy questionnaire. The next phase involved detailed questioning in person, at which time Ito dismissed jurors for legal cause, such as having a bias or defying his order to avoid all media reports on the case.

After the jury was chosen, Ito said he would loosen the restrictions. He asked jurors to submit lists of the three TV shows they can't live without and to tell him whether they own VCRs.

motive or how investigators were led to the lake where the car was found. However, there had been several reports before the news conference that Smith confessed.

Dozens of people crowded around the outside of the county courthouse and many gasped as Wells said Smith would be charged with murder. Several sobbed.

"If she didn't want those children, she could have given them to me or any other mother in Union. We would have taken them," said Karen Huss, the mother of two sons, ages 2 and 4.

Alex and Michael's great-grandmother expressed shock at the day's events.

"I just couldn't imagine that Susan would do that. She always seemed to be such a devoted mother," Sara Singleton said in an interview with KNBC-TV from Sylmar, Calif.

On Wednesday, investigators searched Smith's home and took away several bags. Authorities had refused to comment on what they were looking for. There also had been reports that Smith had taken a lie-detector test and that the results were inconclusive.

Smith told authorities an armed man had jumped into her car at a stoplight in a sparsely populated area at the edge of town, ordered her to drive several miles, then forced her out and took off with her two sons still strapped in their safety seats.

"Our lives have been torn apart by this tragic event," Smith said earlier this week, her estranged husband, David, by her side. "I can't express how much they are wanted back home." David Smith asked people to pray for the boys.

The couple filed for divorce in September.

Smith had been on her way to visit her friend Mitch Sinclair the night the children disappeared.

Wells said earlier in the week that Sinclair was not a suspect. Police had put out a composite sketch based on Smith's description of the alleged assailant, and people called in tips from around the country. On Wednesday, police received a report that a boy who looked like Alex had been dropped off at a motel in Seattle by a car with South Carolina plates.

Smith, who is white, described the alleged carjacker as an armed black man wearing a knit cap.

The unraveling of Smith's story bears similarities to the 1989 Charles Stuart murder case in Boston, in which Stuart, a white man, told police a black man shot his pregnant wife to death. Stuart later plunged to his death from a bridge as investigators zeroed in on him as the killer.

The Smith boys' disappearance prompted an outpouring of community sympathy in the northwestern South Carolina mill town. Hundreds of volunteers helped look for the boys and staged prayer vigils.

DATING

its never been official," UI sophomore Tony Mirchandani said. "I know a lot of Indian girls and boys who can't date but still do. They just get around it by not telling their parents or lying."

The pressure to not date or to date only other Indians is partially due to a fear of the unknown, Nagendra said.

"To lose our culture is really scary, and I think that's what our parents are scared of," she said. "I think parents feel that if their child marries a non-Indian, they will lose touch with their kid and that they won't be able to relate to the daughter-in-law or son-in-law."

Familiarity is another reason for the pressure, Patel said.

"My parents are pretty open-minded, so I haven't had to deal with any pressure, but I think any parent with a certain cultural background prefers their kids to marry within that culture only because that's what they know and are familiar with," she said.

The way Indian parents were raised may add to the importance placed on dating other Indians, UI freshman Kinjal Kadakia said.

"I think it has to do with the fact that in India you don't date at all — you just get set up," she said. "I can understand that they don't believe in dating. They believe dating is directly going to lead to sex. Whether it will or won't is another story."

Although traditional arranged marriages don't exist in the United States, Kadakia said another form is present.

"It's an altered form of arranged marriages," she said. "If you meet someone Indian, you can date them or your parents try to set you up with someone if you're having trouble finding someone. But you can decide if you want to date them or not."

Many Indians in the United States realize they are not going to have an arranged marriage but are still confused about what is expected of them when it comes to dating.

"My parents don't want to arrange a marriage for me, but I have no clue what they want," Kadakia said. "I don't know what parents are going to do with our generation. Everyone dates without their parents knowing, or at least parents pretend to not know their kids are dating."

Finding a middle ground may be the only alternative Indian parents and their American-born children have to avoid the conflict over dating and marriage.

"Trying to find a median is really hard, and that only happens with families that have good communication," Nagendra said. "Someone has to give in in the end, and it's usually the parents. It's our life and this decision is going to affect us the most."

Dubuque center verbally commits to Iowa

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — Herrig, a 6-foot-4 center who averaged 17 points a game last season for Dubuque Senior, she will play basketball for Iowa next year.

"It has a very good academic reputation, it's in the Big Ten which was important to me, it's a lot closer to home," Herrig said. "I also love the coaches the players, who I'll be around in and day out."

She chose Iowa over Colorado, Purdue, Northwestern and defending NCAA champion North Carolina. The Hawkeyes have recorded 10 straight 20 seasons and have made nine NCAA tournaments under coach C. Vivian Stringer.

Herrig, who also has all-conference and all-state awards in volleyball and is the defending state discus-throwing champion, said she would like to study physical therapy.

Herrig said she played in an informal pick-up game with members of the team during a visit and felt right at home.

"I seemed to fit in," Herrig said. "There seemed to be a spot open for me at the post."

Iowa State's Walden resigns

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Iowa State football coach Jim Walden, whose team is winless this year, announced Thursday night he'll resign at the end of the season.

Walden, in his eighth season as the Cyclones' head coach, said he was making the announcement now to give the university a head start on finding a new coach.

Iowa State is 0-7-1 and must finish the season against three nationally ranked teams — No. 15 Kansas State, No. 1 Nebraska and

No. 7 Colorado.

Walden had said earlier that he expected to be fired after the Colorado game on Nov. 19. He has three years left on his contract but said in a statement released by the university that he did not seek or receive any financial offer to resign early.

"As it became obvious that this would be my last season coaching at Iowa State University, I concluded that the best thing I could do now for the future of ISU football would be to help the university obtain the best possible successor to lead this program," Walden said in a statement released by the university's athletic department.

"By announcing early that I will

"Let me assure everyone that no one wanted to win more than myself and my staff."

Jim Walden

resign at the end of the season, Iowa State will be able to get a head start in recruiting a new coach," he said.

Iowa State officials planned to discuss Walden's resignation at a news conference later Thursday.

Walden is 28-54-3 at Iowa State and has had only one winning season, a 6-5 record in 1989. That season gave Iowa State fans hope that the program was on the rise, but the Cyclones haven't won more than four games in a year since.

Iowa State will be a big underdog in its last three games so it's likely the Cyclones could go through their first winless season since 1930, when they were 0-9.

"Let me assure everyone that no one wanted to win more than myself and my staff," Walden said. "No one is more disappointed that the win-loss record is not better. When I came here I said we would do the very best we could and when I leave I'll know we did the very best we could."

Walden was the head coach at Washington State for nine years before taking the Iowa State job. His record there was 44-52-3 and his overall record as a college coach is 72-106-6.

He said he and his wife, Janice, had no immediate plans and would

Big Ten tourney Iowa's last hope

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

It's do or die time for the Iowa field hockey team.

The Hawkeyes managed to climb one spot in the latest NCAA Division I field hockey poll, but still find themselves out of the top ten at No. 12.

What that means for Beth Beglin and the Hawkeyes is they must win this weekend's Big Ten tournament if they hope to gain a bid to the NCAA tournament.

With a third place finish in the regular season, the Hawkeyes were unable to earn a first-round bye in the tournament, so they must win three games to win it all.

Beth Beglin, Iowa field hockey coach

Beglin knows that will not be easy by any means.

"It is very difficult to win three games in three days against this level of competition," Beglin said.

The Hawkeyes open first-round play against Michigan State today at 11 a.m. in the Woody Hayes Athletic Center in Columbus, Ohio.

Iowa has beaten the Spartans in both meetings this season, including a 4-0 win on Sept. 23 in Iowa City, and a 2-1 victory Oct. 23 in East Lansing.

Sophomore Diane DeMiro was the big scorer in those games, knocking in three goals in the two contests.

The winner of that game will go on to face Penn State on Saturday in the second round of the tournament.

By finishing second in the league, the Nittany Lions earned a first round bye, as did Northwestern.

Penn State has beaten Iowa both times they met this season, winning 2-0 on October 7 in University Park, Penn., and 2-0 last Sunday on Grant Field.

The winner of that game will more than likely face Northwestern for the automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Senior Mary Kraybill will lead the hockey tournament beginning today when Hawkeyes into the first ever Big Ten field Iowa takes on Michigan State.

Robinson worth $68 million to Milwaukee

Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Glenn Robinson agreed to terms with the Milwaukee Bucks Thursday after relinquishing his goal of becoming the first $100 million athlete in professional sports.

Robinson, the top pick in the NBA draft, agreed to a 10-year, fully guaranteed deal worth approximately $68 million. The pact contains no incentive or performance goals.

It is the biggest guaranteed deal ever signed by an NBA rookie. Jason Kidd, the second pick in the draft, signed a nine-year, $54 million contract with Dallas with all but a portion of the final year guaranteed.

But it wasn't the $100-plus million Robinson wanted — quite an asking price considering the team's value is estimated at only $75 million.

"Both sides won," said team owner Herb Kohl, a U.S. senator up for re-election Tuesday. "Glenn Robinson has now got a pro career underway in a city that he wanted to play in with a very nice 10-year contract fully guaranteed. And for the Milwaukee Bucks, it's wonderful to sign the No. 1 pick."

Asked how the deal was reached after months of gridlock, Kohl said, "The season starts tomorrow. Glenn Robinson's a basketball player. He wants to play basketball."

Kohl said he entered the negotiations for the first time Wednesday and the deal was closed at 2 a.m. Thursday.

Robinson, 21, who led the nation in scoring with a 30.3 average as a junior at Purdue last year, underwent a physical in Milwaukee Thursday afternoon before going to sign the contract.

Neither he nor his agent, Charles Tucker, were available for comment. The team planned no news conference.

Robinson was expected to be in uniform for the Bucks' season opener at Philadelphia Friday night, but Milwaukee coach Mike Dunleavy said it was doubtful he would play against the 76ers or against the Los Angeles Lakers at home the following night.

After two hard months of training, the Iowa men's swimming team is ready to sink or swim.

The Hawkeyes take to the Field House Pool today against Wisconsin at 4 p.m. Coach Glen Patton isn't exactly thrilled about opening against a Big Ten opponent, but he knows his swimmers are ready to get for some competition.

"It's been a long fall of training, and we're ready for a dual meet," Patton said. "Our guys will be excited to get up on the starting blocks and race."

Three Hawkeyes looking forward to the first meet are team captains B.J. Blair, Jim Mulligan, and Erik Marchitell. Blair was an all-American diver last season and Mulligan was an all-American swimmer.

Patton has been pleased with the leadership his captains have offered this season.

"So far, they've provided a tremendous amount of leadership for our team, and they've certainly moved our team towards achieving our team goal of team unity," Patton said. "We've been doing a lot of things together as a team."

Coming together as a team is one of the goals the Iowa swimmers set for themselves coming into this season.

"We have several goals that our team set," Patton said. "One is we want to be NCAA academic all-American as a team. That

The Iowa women's swimming team hopes to get back on track this weekend when it hosts Wisconsin and Penn State.

The diving competition begins at 1:30 p.m. with the swimming portion of the double dual starting at 6.

Iowa is attempting to win its 100th dual meet for the second time after coming up short against Purdue last weekend.

Iowa coach Pete Kennedy said his team is definitely ready.

"The kids are really psyched and ready to go. They are looking forward to facing two of the better teams in the Big Ten and I know they will swim tough," Kennedy said.

"Penn State has a great squad and I know Wisconsin is real solid so we'll definitely have our hands full."

Hawkeye senior J.J. DeAth said

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

even though Penn State and Wisconsin have excellent squads Iowa isn't going to be intimidated. "The competition is going to be real tough but if we stay concentrated and swim as hard as we did last week we could surprise some people," DeAth said. "This year's squad has had a really positive attitude and has worked really hard. With the effort we've put in we're just bound to get better."

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

Hawks look for first sweep in two years

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

The last time the Iowa volleyball team faced Indiana, it was looking to pull out of a four-game losing streak. Tonight the Hawkeyes are looking for their first conference sweep since 1992.

Iowa defeated Indiana at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Oct. 8 to even its conference record at 3-3. Tonight Iowa travels to Indiana, where a win would boost the Hawkeyes' Big Ten mark to 8-6. The match is scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m.

Iowa (17-8) has seven matches remaining this season. The Hawkeyes have already guaranteed a winning season, their first since 1990. And to add to the excitement, Iowa is sitting in great position to earn a berth to the NCAA tournament.

The Hawkeyes are fresh from a three-game sweep of Minnesota Wednesday night. Iowa will be looking to use the momentum from that victory, but one thing the Hawkeyes can't use is the revenge factor. This time, it will be Indiana looking for revenge against the Hawkeyes.

"Revenge certainly played a factor Wednesday night," Iowa's Katy Fawbush said. "Minnesota embarrassed us earlier in the year and we really wanted to get them back. But I don't think Indiana will do the same to us. If we play our best, we can hold them off."

Fawbush said that Iowa should be able to carry its momentum into tonight's match.

"(Wednesday night) we did everything right," she said. "We had good defense and good offense. We all had complete games, instead of one person doing one thing and another person doing another thing."

"We just have to learn to keep teams down when we have them down. I think we have a tendency to lose leads and make matches closer than they have to be."

Indiana is Iowa's only opponent in a shortened weekend for the Hawkeyes. They will then get a week of rest and practice before coming home to host Michigan and Michigan State next Friday and Saturday.

Friday's match is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m., while Saturday's match is slated for an 8 p.m. start.

1962 — Sonny Randle of the St. Louis Cardinals catches 16 passes for 256 yards and a touchdown in a 31-28 loss to the New York Giants.
1976 — Major league baseball holds its first free agency draft, involving 24 players from 13 clubs. Reggie Jackson eventually signs the most lucrative contract of the group, $2.9 million over five years with the New York Yankees.
1984 — Miami's Dan Marino passes for 422 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Dolphins to a 31-17 victory over the New York Jets.
1984 — Seattle's Dave Brown returns two interceptions for touchdowns in a 31-17 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

Injury sidelines Barkley

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley inadvertently burned his corneas when he rubbed body lotion into his eyes during a rock concert and will miss the Phoenix Suns' season opener Friday night.

An ophthalmologist ordered the star forward to wear eye-patches for 12 hours. Barkley traveled with the Suns to Sacramento for the opener, but coach Paul Westphal said he would not play.

Barkley was wearing wrap-around glasses with orange lenses before boarding Thursday's flight to Sacramento.

The incident took place Wednesday night at an Eric Clapton concert. Barkley said his allergies and the bright stage lights caused him to rub his eyes, and he got lotion in both eyes. He did not experience intense stinging until later that night when he awakened in pain about 2 a.m., and went to Humana Hospital.
"I never really had any vision loss," Barkley said. "It's just that my eyes were on fire. It burned the first layer of skin off my eyes."

MEN'S SWIMMING

requires a team GPA of 2.85. We want to try to be in the top two in the Big Ten. We're shooting for the top ten in the NCAA's. And our fourth team goal is to have a tremendous amount of team unity."

Patton knows it will take a lot of hard work to reach those goals, but if his team remains focused, they can accomplish it.

"We need to have our entire team pursuing excellence in the classroom, as well as in the swimming pool. In order to achieve those goals, we need to work hard in the water and in the classroom."

Along with the returning upperclassmen, two freshman have come on the scene. They are Tyler Holcomb and Brian Brinkley, both of the Chicago area.

"Those are two freshman who have come in and have definitely worked hard and seem to be rising to the top," Patton said.

As it stands now, Patton sees the Big Ten race coming down to five or six teams battling for the top three spots.

"Michigan is an overwhelming favorite to win the Big Ten. They even have a chance to win the NCAA. The next strong team at the Big Ten level is Minnesota. They've been second the last few years in the Big Ten. Then, there's about three or four teams battling to be in the top three this year. That's Iowa, Ohio State, who was third last year, Michigan State."

Iowa's first opponent, Wisconsin, doesn't appear to be in contention for a high finish in the Big Ten.

"Wisconsin was in the bottom half of the conference last year, and they probably will be again this year," Patton said.

Patton sees this team as overall stronger than last year's team, which finished fourth in the Big Ten Championships.

"We have our top quality back from last year, but we have much better depth. It's going to be a lot harder to make our travel team this year than it has the last couple of years. We have a good sized group of freshmen who are going to be a good addition to our team."

Patton feels his current group of freshmen will help the Hawkeyes become strong in areas where they were weak last season.

"We need to improve in distance freestyle and in backstroke and breaststroke. I think we've been making some strides in those areas. We've got better depth in those events than we had last year, through the help of our freshman, so we should be strong in those events this year."

and it has been estimated that it would have cost the university $1 million to buy out Walden and his assistants if he were fired.

Walden said he hopes the university can hire a new coach quickly so the players can get to know him and feel comfortable so they'll remain at Iowa State.

"This allows the new staff to avoid the numbers problem our staff faced when we came here," he said. "I'm proud to have been associated with Iowa State. It is a great university. I'd like to know that every player will receive his degree from this institution."

The Cyclones are struggling in what Walden had expected to be his best season. They had 22 fifth-year seniors, giving Walden his most experienced team, and had shown some hopeful signs, especially on offense, late in the 1993 season, when Iowa State went 3-8.

But the Cyclones lost to Division I-AA Northern Iowa 28-14 in the season opener and things went downhill from there. The only game Iowa State hasn't lost was a 31-31 tie with Oklahoma State on Oct. 22.

Walden has blamed injuries for many of the problems, with the offensive line, linebackers and quarterback position especially hard hit. The offense has improved in recent weeks when Walden went to a more wide-open attack, but the defense has been shaky all year.

This week, the Cyclones are 96th out of 107 Division I-A teams in total offense and 106th in rushing defense.

There were off-the-field problems as well.

In August, three players and a former player were charged with forgery and another player was charged with aiding and abetting for receiving merchandise bought with a stolen check.

Walden suspended running back Calvin Branch, wide receiver James Brooks and defensive back Russell Johnson for the Northern Iowa game. They are expected to plead guilty next week. Running back Artis Garris, charged with aiding and abetting, was not suspended. He also is expected to plead guilty.

Walden also was criticized by women's groups for appearing in a television commercial for Hooters, a restaurant known for the attire of its waitresses — skimpy shorts and tight T-shirts.

Walden never did beat Iowa, going 0-8 against his cross-state rival, and Iowa coach Hayden Fry constantly skimmed off the state's top high school players.

Ki-Jana Carter has led Penn State to a 7-0 record, but the Associated Press poll has ranked the Nittany Lions No. 2 in the nation.

hyped, nationally televised game. While Penn State was overpowering, it came against a team that had already lost to Washington and Illinois.

"Everyone was raving about Colorado and they didn't think Ohio State was that good," said AP voter Mark Blaudschun of the Boston Globe, who has picked Nebraska No. 1 the past three weeks.

In first-place votes, Nebraska leads Penn State 33-28 in AP and 32-30 in USA Today-CNN. The other AP first-place vote went to third-ranked Auburn (8-0), which is barred from the coaches' poll because the school is on NCAA probation and can't play in a bowl.

Auburn has won 19 straight games over two seasons, but the Tigers probably can't finish first in AP unless Nebraska and Penn State lose.

"They need help," said ESPN's Beano Cook.

"As long as Nebraska and Penn State are undefeated, they don't have a chance."

With neither team facing a Top 25 opponent before the bowls, there's a good chance Nebraska and Penn State will remain atop the polls at the end of the regular season.

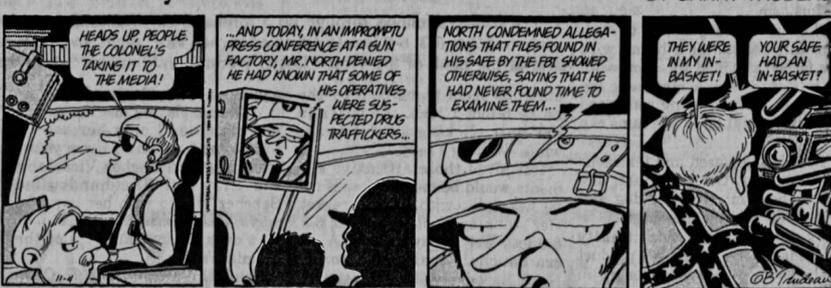

So it's likely to come down to their bowl games, where Nebraska would face a good news-bad news situation.

The bad news is Nebraska would probably play No. 5 Miami or No. 8 Florida State in the Orange Bowl, where the Huskers are a combined 0-5 against those teams since 1984.

14-YEAR-OLD PRO

Future of tennis riding on Williams

Rob Gloster
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The astounding pro debut of 14-year-old Venus Williams should silence critics who were writing the obituary of women's tennis.

With Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati sidelined indefinitely and Martina Navratilova heading toward retirement at the end of this year, the women's game has been in the doldrums.

Sure, Steffi Graf is a great player; but she's too predictable and not very flashy. And while baseliners such as Conchita Martinez can win tournaments, they earn little fan enthusiasm.

The rise of Mary Pierce to stardom this year after a break with her father provided the sport with an intriguing and sympathetic figure. But that's nothing compared to the potential boost Williams can give tennis.

Williams is poised and tenacious on the court. Off the court, she talks about missing her dog and flashes the smile of a little girl.

As her father continually reminds observers, she is a product of the ghetto — a true all-American success story. Youngsters at her Venus Williams follows through on a forehand en route to a 2-6, 6-3, 6-0 loss to Arantxa Sanchez Vicario at the Bank of the West Classic, Wednesday.

Williams, 14, who won her pro debut Monday night, overpowered Sanchez-Vicario in the first set and led 3-1 in the second before falling apart.

matches seem transfixed by the lanky 6-foot-1 teen, the beads in her hair clicking as she sways while awaiting a serve.

But all of those attractive elements would be meaningless if not for her ability with a tennis racket. Her stunning display in a 2-6, 6-3, 6-0 loss Wednesday night to Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, the world's No. 2 player, gave the tennis world a glimpse of its potential future.

Williams, playing just her second pro match and only her second tournament match in three years, overpowered Sanchez Vicario in the first set. She handcuffed Sanchez Vicario with her powerful serve, and slashed backhand shots just over the net and out of the Spaniard's reach.

Sanchez Vicario, the U.S. Open and French Open champion, seemed bewildered at times by the power and speed of Williams, whose long strides and tremendous reach allow her to return balls most players cannot.

Williams was the aggressor throughout the set, continually dictating points with a serve-and-volley style that would make Navratilova proud.

FORMER COWBOY COACH

Johnson intrigues lowly Bucs

Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The NFL's worst franchise might offer the kind of challenge that would coax Jimmy Johnson back to the sidelines.

In the Tampa Bay area, the Buccaneers' 2-6 record has fueled speculation — and hope — that Johnson will replace Sam Wyche as coach next year.

"It's the nature of the beast," Johnson said Thursday. "When somebody loses, my name surfaces."

And the Buccaneers lose often. They need four more defeats to extend their league record of 11 consecutive seasons with at least 10 losses.

"They've been bad for so long, I guess it's kind of accepted," Johnson said. "And that's unfortunate."

The former coach of the Dallas Cowboys and Miami Hurricanes visited with reporters at a reception in the Eden Roc hotel, where he plans to open a restaurant next January.

By then, he could be back in coaching.

"Toward the end of the season I'll look at my options," Johnson said. "I don't want to be a distraction to anybody. I've been very noncommittal all season long. It's tough enough for them to do their job without being distracted with my name."

But fans with little chance to cheer must settle for such speculation. And if Wyche departs, Johnson could find Tampa tempting. He loves Florida and loves a challenge; the Bucs offer both.

Johnson won two Super Bowls with Dallas after going 1-15 in his first year, so he's undaunted by the Buc's perennial haplessness.

"Any team that is down is difficult to turn around," he said, "but with free agency and the way you can pick up players in a hurry, I think you can turn it around."

"That's one of the plusses for the new franchises. With free agency, you can put together a team faster than you could have years ago."

Associated Press

Jimmy Johnson cuts a large sandwich following a press conference where he announced plans for Jimmy Johnson's Three Rings Bar and Grill to open at the Eden Roc Resort and Spa in Miami Beach, Fla.

Capriati set to return next week

Bucky Gleason
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Jennifer Capriati, refreshed and ready to play tennis again, will return to the women's tour at next week's $750,000 Virginia Slims of Philadelphia.

The 18-year-old has not played competitive tennis since the U.S. Open in 1993, when she left the tour, burnt out by tennis and struggling with injuries.

The 1992 Olympic champion accepted a wild-card invitation to the Philadelphia event, which runs Nov. 7-13. Her first-round opponent will be determined at today's draw.

"The tournament is coming up at the right time, and she's ready to play," said Barbara Perry, her agent. "She's excited. She needed a break from tennis, and she's fresh and ready to go."

Capriati went through a 28-day drug rehabilitation program after she was charged with misdemeanor drug possession last May.

The arrest came eight months after Capriati was eliminated from the first round of the 1993 U.S. Open.

The Shinto art of yama kagura has been performed for years to ward off evil spirits entering Japanese villages.

Tonight, Yamabushi Kagura Mt. Hayachine will be doing the same for Iowa City.

Kagura ("god music") is one of Japan's most ancient artistic traditions. It is a body of dramatic music and dance developed by ascetic mountain priests yamabushi — and linked to the island's Shinto religious practices.

Wearing headdresses, costumes and masks on a ritual stage, performers present dance stories which are believed to attract the blessing of the gods, promote fertility and ensure long life, in addition to warding off evil spirits.

The yamabushi, who live in the mountains of the year, travel from village to village during the winter to perform religious rituals. The religious practices recently fallen out of use, but the art form has been preserved and declared a National Intangible Folkloric Cultural Property by Japan.

The dance was performed in the homes of the Japanese village, to cleanse their houses and wear much a ritual as a form of entertainment, group transmission Masayoshi Kobayashi said. The homes were very small in size, had only one room, so the stage turn was also very small — generally 12 feet by 12 feet. That tradition will hold true for tonight's performance.

"Squanto: A Warrior's Tale" might be more appropriately titled "Squanto: A Pacifist Pushed to His Limit." It's a shame, then, that "Squanto" 's anticlimactic finish dilutes the impact of its surprisingly engaging first hour and a half.

"Squanto" 's screenwriters just didn't quit when they were ahead. They waste the final scenes of the movie preaching to the audience when they have already conveyed their message in a subtle and more convincing manner.

"Squanto" is the more or less true story of a 17th century Indian warrior captured by English traders and shipped in shackles to Plymouth, England. Upon arrival in England, the Plymouth Shipping Co.'s evil owner, Sir George, declares Squanto to be company property and pits him against a giant grizzly bear in a fight to the death.

The Shinto art of yamabushi kagura has been performed for 500 years to ward off evil spirits from entering Japanese villages.

Tonight, Yamabushi Kagura of Mt. Hayachine will be doing the same for Iowa City.

Kagura ("god music") is one of Japan's most ancient artistic traditions. It is a body of dramatic music and dance developed by ascetic mountain priests — the yamabushi — and linked to the island's Shinto religious practices.

Wearing headdresses, costumes and masks on a ritual stage, the performers present dance stories which are believed to attract the blessing of the gods, promote fertility and ensure long life, in addition to warding off evil spirits.

The yamabushi, who lived as farmers most of the year, traveled from village to village during the winter to perform religious rites in homes. The religious practice has recently fallen out of use, but the art form has been preserved and declared a National Important Intangible Folkloric Cultural Property by Japan.

The dance was performed in the homes of the Japanese villagers to cleanse their houses and were as much a ritual as a form of entertainment, group translator Masayoshi Kobayashi said. Most homes were very small in size and had only one room, so the stage in turn was also very small — generally 12 feet by 12 feet. That tradition will hold true for tonight's performance in Clapp Recital Hall of the Music Building.

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

Yamabushi Kagura of Mt. Hayachine, a troupe dedicated to the traditional Japanese art form of yamabushi kagura, demonstrated their art in the Theatre Building Wednesday. They will give a formal performance tonight in Clapp Recital Hall of the Music Building.

The only difference, Kobayashi said, is that instead of sitting on the floor around the stage, audience members will be in seats off stage. Only 13 dancers and musicians make up the Yamabushi Kagura troupe. Three musicians play instruments on the side of the stage during the entire performance, while a flute and chanting can be heard from behind the curtain.

The actors' headdresses sometimes prevent them from seeing, Kobayashi said. When this happens, they gauge their positions by listening to the musicians on the side of the stage.

Almost every dance features repetitive steps facing all four directions of the stage, he said. The stage represents the universe, and the dancers face in each direction at least once to affect the entire universe.

The climax of the performance is the manifestation of the divine, Kobayashi said. The costume of the all-powerful lion is brought on stage, and the tradition is that those bitten on the head by the lion are considered blessed.

In the Japanese villages, people lined up to be bitten by the lion, he said. Tradition will not change tonight, as the lion will gladly bite the head of audience members who wish the blessing.

Yamabushi Kagura of Mt. Hayachine will perform tonight at 8 in Clapp Recital Hall of the Music Building. Tickets are $16, $12.50 for UI students and senior citizens, and $8 for people under 18. For information, call the Hancher Box Office at 335-1160.

ANOTHER SLAM-WORTHY WEEKEND

We who are about to NIN salute you

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

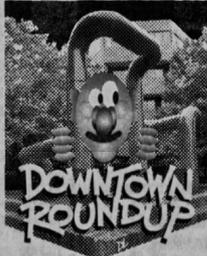

"Nine Inch Nails is like any other music. It is peace. It is serenity. It draws out the inner child and slips its body into lures and pants and motorcycle boots." — Note scrawled in black lipstick and pinned to the weekend love shack's door.

Skeptics fearful of a goth-rock meltdown due to the NIN concert this Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena have already started drawing a chalk outline around Iowa City's prone corpse, causing panic to spread like an unchecked tumor. But if the prospect of thousands of black-clad Satan babies roaming the streets causes hives and nausea, there's plenty to do and see on the local music scene tonight and Saturday before the fearful few seal their doors against the industrial onslaught.

Two local drinkeries which aren't usually in the live-music lineup open their doors tonight as consolation to the moshed-out masses. The Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave., has snagged Lincoln Garcia and Funky Reggae Party for a rasta boogie bomb show. Disguise your joints as pool cues and win a kewpie doll. The Airliner bar, 22 S. Clinton St., offers visiting Chicagoans Hello Dave as the perfect companion to their Chicago-style pizza — but The Airliner on a crowded Friday night can sometimes be as hectic as doing blow and going to a Bangles concert.

The Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., lives up to its name tonight and Saturday. Paranoiacs of all ages, beset by visions of NIN fans waving blowtorches and carrying farm animals through the streets, can look to the Sanctuary as a clinic of sorts where

The Pat Williams Trio will be handing out a solid dose of cool jazz as a substitute. It ain't exactly methadone, but then again, mixing methadone and Trent Reznor would be like swallowing a live badger with a turpentine chaser.

For those who are just plain bummed that SCOPE got Reznor instead of Lonnie Brooks or B.B. King, some whiskey-soaked blues will soothe those broken hearts. The Metro, 121 Iowa Ave., has it all this weekend. Tonight, Shade of Blue knocks it down Austin, Texas-style, and Saturday, Bo Ramsey and his slide guitar wend their way onto The Metro's stage. Which is worse? Repressed NIN fans venting frustrated hormones in a mosh pit or rowdy blues fanatics imbibing until they can fart the "Peter Gunn" theme in three different octaves? A koan for the ages.

The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., has its hands full all weekend contending with the industrial overflow. Tonight, Rockin' Billy and the Wild Coyotes bust a gut rockabilly-style. Saturday, Shade of Blue treks over from The Metro for an encore gig. And Sunday night, the ubiquitous Catfish Keith wanders in for another stab at his Iowa City fans.

Lastly, leave it to Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., to rev up the boogie machine instead of shutting it down in the face of a mosh-pit overload. Tonight, the rhumbadome returns, as Orquestra de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz sambas into Gabe's for an evening of Latino mayhem and percussive seizures. Saturday Dagobah, the funky poobahs from a galaxy far, far away, dig deep into the Force for another wiggled-out wonder show. See you at the rendezvous point on Tatooino.

And remember, no matter how bad it gets at Carver-Hawkeye on Sunday night, we can always take comfort in the fact that a sonic hickey from Trent Reznor now sells for about $3,000 on the black market. Happy hunting, o children of the upward spiraling demographic.

DULL ENDING TAINTS GOOD POINTS

"Squanto: A Warrior's Tale" might be more appropriately titled "Squanto: A Pacifist Pushed to His Limit." Much to George's consternation, Squanto escapes and turns Plymouth upside down before finally taking refuge in a seaside Jesuit monastery. There he learns English and shares the secrets of his native culture with the resident monks. Despite their cultural differences, the brothers accept the American Indian into their fold. Much of the movie explores how members of two cultures can grow to respect each other.

Walt Disney Pictures

Adam Beach, left, stars as the title character of "Squanto: A Warrior's Tale." Mandy Patinkin plays a monk who gives the Indian shelter from slavers.

Eventually, Squanto's yearning for his lost bride vessels are elaborately constructed and, from the 20th century viewer's vantage point at least, lend the film an air of authenticity. The scenery in the New World (Northern Canada was substituted for today's metropolitan Massachusetts) is lush and untainted by modern industrial life.

The acting is also merit worthy. Adam Beach as Squanto is a compelling hero. Michael Gambon's portrayal of Sir George, a Boss Hogg of preindustrial Plymouth, is terrifyingly wicked. He's a source of clever irony as he refers to his enslaved American Indians as "savages" while making cold-hearted business decisions too vicious for them to even contemplate.

"Squanto" isn't the best Disney movie of the last few years, nor does it outdo "The Last of the Mohicans." Nevertheless, for the preteen and young-teen audience for which it is intended, "Squanto" is far from a bad choice. It entertains, provides a history lesson and provides some insight into different cultures — no small tasks, even if not done to perfection.

Father receives maximum penalty for killing son

DENVER (AP) — A father given a maximum 96-year prison sentence for fatally beating his 1-year-old son with his fists, a pen stick and a lead pipe.

"This was abuse ... torture and torment. This is the most egregious case I've ever heard of in my life," Denver District Judge M. Rice told 32-year-old Allen Spencer at the sentencing Friday.

When paramedics arrived at Spencer's home on Sept. 2, they found his son Robert's body a mass of bruises from punches and blows from an 18-inch lead pipe and a thick wooden rod, prosecutors said.

Robert Spencer died after he was hit in the stomach with a blunt object — probably a fist — which severed his intestine. Doctors said that kind of death is slow and painful.

The jury convicted Allen Spencer of second-degree murder and child abuse resulting in death.

Robert Spencer had confided to a friend that his father would dunk his head in a toilet and hit him with a stick if he fell asleep while standing in a corner.

Pet snake decapitated after attack on boy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 4-foot pet python that slithered out of its cage and began wrapping itself around a 4-year-old boy killed by rescue workers.

After five men were unable to pry it off the boy Friday night, rescuers cut off the snake's head, said police spokesman Mike Brown.

The boy suffered a bite to his right leg and was hospitalized in good condition, Brown said.

The 30-pound snake had wrapped itself around the boy's chest and legs and was cutting off the child's circulation, said Sgt. Dan Eland, a Marion County animal control officer.

"Somehow it got down to the basement and the kids were (there) playing," Eland said. "Apparently one of them stepped on it or kicked it and it started wrapping itself around the 4-year-old."
