Father receives maximum penalty for killing son

DENVER (AP) — A father was given a maximum 96-year prison sentence for fatally beating his 8-year-old son with his fists, a wooden stick and a lead pipe.

"This was abuse ... torture and torment. This is the most egregious case I've ever heard of in my life," Denver District Judge Nancy Rice told 32-year-old Allen Spencer at the sentencing Friday.

When paramedics arrived at Spencer's home on Sept. 2, 1993, they found his son Robert's body a mass of bruises from punches and blows from an 18-inch lead pipe and a thick wooden rod, prosecutors said.

Robert Spencer died after he was hit in the stomach with a blunt object — probably a fist — which severed his intestine. Doctors said that kind of death is slow and painful.

The jury convicted Allen Spencer of second-degree murder and child abuse resulting in death.

Robert Spencer had confided to a friend that his father would dunk his head in a toilet and hit him with a stick if he fell asleep while standing in a corner.

Pet snake decapitated after attack on boy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 13-foot pet python that slithered out of its cage and began wrapping itself around a 4-year-old boy was killed by rescue workers.

After five men were unable to pry it off the boy Friday night, rescuers cut off the snake's head, said police spokesman Mike Brown.

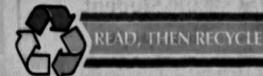

The boy suffered a bite to his right leg and was hospitalized in good condition, Brown said.

The 30-pound snake had wrapped itself around the boy's chest and legs and was cutting off the child's circulation, said Sgt. Dan Eland, a Marion County animal control officer.

"Somehow it got down to the basement and the kids were down (there) playing," Eland said. "And apparently one of them stepped on it or kicked it and it started wrapping itself around the 4-year-old."

S.C. murder victims laid to rest

Gary Karr

UNION, S.C. — A single white coffin stacked with yellow roses held the bodies of two young brothers, "precious jewels" whose drowning was mourned by hundreds who crowded into a small country church Sunday.

David Smith, with bowed shoulders and a handkerchief stifling his sobs, followed as the coffin holding his sons, 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex, was wheeled from the church to a cemetery.

The boys' mother, Susan Smith, was absent — behind bars and charged with killing her sons by strapping them into their car safety seats and sending the car rolling into a lake.

About 300 people crowded into the Buffalo United Methodist Church for the 45-minute service, where ministers assured mourners that the children were in better hands.

"Sometimes God takes from us the most precious jewels in life so he can give them back to us in eternity," the Rev. Joe Bridges said.

A mother's confession to the murder of her two sons in South Carolina has outraged Iowa City residents and raised the volatile issue of the death penalty.

A nine-day search for the two missing boys ended Thursday when Susan V. Smith admitted to intentionally rolling her car into a lake, drowning her two children, 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex, who were still strapped into their safety seats.

Smith claimed the boys had been kidnapped by an African-American male carjacker who forcibly entered her car at a stoplight in Union, S.C.

Following a nationally televised plea from Smith for the safe return of her sons, hundreds of local volunteers helped scour the area and held candlelight vigils for the boys' safe return before Smith confessed to the murders.

'THEY HAVE REASON TO MAKE COMPLAINTS'

Colleague corroborates gripes about professor

Karl Hejlik
The Daily Iowan

Although UI officials deny the existence of student complaints about UI history Professor David Schoenbaum's teaching style, one UI history professor said such complaints about him are common.

UI history Professor Sarah Hanley said students have been complaining about Schoenbaum, who has taught at the UI since 1967, for years, but their complaints have gone unheeded and have been covered up.

"There are a lot of angry students around," she said. "Everybody in the department knows about the complaints, but it's not something you can talk about. Everybody is scrambling to save their reputations; this is politically the way things are. That's when students are left in the cold. Students should be heard instead of their comments being covered up."

About three-fourths of the students in Historical Perspectives I, a Unified Program course taught by Schoenbaum, have dropped the class this semester. Many of these

Abortion pill study tests local sentiments

Local reaction is polarized regarding RU 486, the abortion pill from France, which has recently started to be tested on women across the country.

Twelve clinics nationwide have begun testing the pill, including Planned Parenthood in Des Moines. The pill will likely be approved by the Food and Drug Administration and be made available to women in early 1996, said Gayle Sand, associate director at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St.

The pill, which has been available to women in France for years, is a breakthrough in technology, Sand said. The pill is an abortion option which women in the United States should have access to, she said.

"It's an insult to women that the pro-life movement has applied enough pressure to ensure the pill wasn't made available sooner," Sand said. "Once it is approved, women will have the right to choose between a medicated abortion and a surgical abortion. I think the testing is a direct result

THIRD-PARTY HOPEFULS SEEK RECOGNITION

Candidates pose election alternative

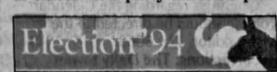

Mick Klemesrud
The Daily Iowan

In an era of specialized campaign staffs, television ads and huge election budgets, third-party candidates for public office wage uphill battles for media access and name recognition.

"I think that the discovery that this isn't a government of, for and by the people but is a government of, for and by the Republicans and Democrats was kind of a rude awakening for me," said Veronica Butler, Natural Law Party gubernatorial candidate.

The Natural Law Party, founded in Iowa in 1992, has candidates running for most state and national offices. The party bases its platform on transcendental meditation, which they say will result in conflict-free, nonpartisan politics which will work in the country's best interests. They say meditation reduces stress and creates coherence in society, along with being an effective way of rehabilitating criminals.

Ballots may be cast Tuesday for candidates who belong to the Democratic and Republican parties, the Natural Law Party, the Libertarian Party and the Socialist Workers Campaign.

Third parties often focus on specific issues and trends which are ignored by the Democratic and Republican parties, Butler said.

"I'm really pleased that more and more media are giving what they call 'nontraditional parties' attention," Butler said. "It's very important to keep the two-party system healthy that we have other parties."

Store manager makes peace with career choice

Jill Cretsinger
The Daily Iowan

After spending time as a Peace Corps worker in Honduras, Mallory Smith was thrilled to find a job which allowed her to fulfill one of the obligations of the program: giving back to the community the values she learned in the Corps.

Smith has been managing World Marketplace, 245 S. Gilbert St.,

Exchange Coffee. Organizations like these believe trade is better than charity and work to improve a country economically and environmentally rather than exploit it for short-term profits, Smith said.

"We do a pretty good job of not making a profit," she said with a smile. Smith earns $7 an hour and is the only paid employee. The other 20 to 30 people who work at the store are volunteers.

The store sells everything from ceramic candlestick holders from Mexico and pan pipes from Peru to baskets from the Philippines and jewelry from India. Prices range from less than $1 to $168.

The store's purpose is to provide a marketplace for goods made by a producer or a producers' group in a Third World country. Buyers from trade organizations place orders with producers and pay half of the money up-front to purchase supplies and the other half upon receiving the finished products. World Marketplace sends most of the money it makes from sales back to the buyers to order more goods.

While buyers are placing orders, they are teaching producers how to sell their products directly to a mass market without going through a nonprofit trade organization, Smith said.

"It's an admirable process," she said. "It's a developmental program with an end. If we do our job well, eventually we won't have anyone to buy from anymore. Our goal is to have them not doing business with someone like us."

If this goal is ever realized, Smith will have more time to spend with her three sons in her home in North Liberty.

"It's a very international town," she said of the town where she and her husband are raising their sons, ages 1, 3 and 5. Smith said she is teaching her children to speak Spanish as fluently as she does.

"It's one of those 'women of the '90s' things," she said. "I'm trying to do it all."

since July. The store is a factory outlet center for goods handcrafted in 37 countries, including South Africa and Vietnam.

She brings to her job firsthand experiences which give her a better understanding about the work she does.

Fresh out of the UI in 1985 with a degree in home economics, Smith joined the Peace Corps and spent two years at an orphanage in Honduras. She taught cooking during the day and English at night.

Smith said she wanted to see what life was like for people in a Third World country.

"I thought I needed to see the world and needed to challenge myself," she said. "It seemed easy here. I wanted to see what it was like if it wasn't easy."

After Smith completed her time in the Peace Corps, she managed the Kellogg Center for Rural Development in Honduras (a hotel she helped design and construct) until 1989. After the hotel was built, she coordinated seminars, such as Peace Corps meetings and reforestation programs, in the hotel's conference rooms.

Smith then returned to Iowa City. Her job at World Marketplace offers her a chance to fulfill some of her personal aspirations.

Murderer seeks to kill sale of personal possessions

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Jeffrey Dahmer doesn't want to be executed.

Relatives of eight of his victims say they're entitled to whatever they can get from auctioning his possessions - including his toothbrush and TV set - as partial payment of civil judgments. A hearing is set for this month.

But the man who confessed to the dismemberment of 17 young men and boys told the relatives' lawyer he doesn't think it's right.

"I wouldn't want the property falling into the wrong hands and being used for exploitive purposes, like these people who came up with the damn baseball cards and the comic book," Dahmer said a year ago in a prison interview with the lawyer. The judge recently released a transcript of the conversation.

The Dahmer belongings inventory includes handcuffs, a sledgehammer, pornographic videos, a lava lamp, "Star Wars" and "Exorcist III" videos, a power drill, handsaw, "heavy duty chemical-resistant gloves," a hypodermic needle and an 80-quart kettle.

Actor Smits reacts to 'NYPD Blue' move

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - "L.A. Law" alumnus Jimmy Smits compares joining the cast of another Steven Bochco megahit to "trying to jump on board a speeding train."

The stress of replacing David Caruso, the popular player who quit "NYPD Blue" on short notice, surfaced on Smits' body, he said in the Nov. 12 issue of TV Guide.

"My face and neck - I guess from the stress of everything that'd been going on - broke out in a really bad way. In a rash. It's never happened to me before. The doctor asked me, 'Are you under any stress?'"

Smits, who's due to make his debut Nov. 15 as Detective Bobby Simone, did finally relax.

"This feels good," he said, walking around the set. "This feels right."

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - Timothy Dalton could fall for Scarlett O'Hara - just give him the chance.

The actor, who plays Rhett Butler in the upcoming CBS miniseries "Scarlett," does not, however, condone her conniving ways.

"She takes something serious - a man's feelings - and betrays them," Dalton said in the Nov. 12 issue of TV Guide.

"How could she behave so appallingly? How could any man in his right mind put up with her? Unless he was in love with her."

Whoa! said Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, who plays Scarlett.

"If Scarlett were a man, she would be allowed to be roguish - perhaps even ruthless. Suddenly, it would all be noble and admirable," Whalley-Kilmer said.

The "Gone with the Wind" sequel is due to air Nov. 13, 15, 16 and 17.

Big Mac lovers who live in Iowa without a McDonald's Restaurant franchise won't have a chance of getting one if the Iowa Legislature doesn't change a law it made years ago.

The power struggle between franchisees and Iowa legislators resulted in threats by the parent of the McDonald's Restaurant Corporation that no contracts would be renewed and no new franchises be established under current laws.

"McDonald's wants to franchise Iowa," said Walt Riker, director of public affairs communications for the company. "It's unfortunate because of the anti-franchise law that can no longer grant franchises to those existing ones when they die under these terms. We've been joined by more than 100 franchisees in Iowa."

The 1992 law is one of the strictest in the country and has limited franchise business growth in Iowa, said Kevin O'Brien, owner of the McDonald's Restaurant franchise in Williamsburg. O'Brien's parents own the McDonald's Restaurant franchises in Iowa City at 804 S. Riverside Drive near Sycamore Mall. They could be reached for comment.

Many are working to have the law changed, but some franchise owners feel the law was the best thing that could have been done.

LARGE RIGHT-WING

Poll: religious right

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The religious right may play a large role in the results of Tuesday's gubernatorial election, according to a poll released Friday.

Political science Professor Andrew Miller was at the head of the Religion and Politics Poll, which surveyed 2,100 people from Iowa and six surrounding states. The random telephone poll asked respondents about their political and religious views then compared and contrasted their answers to a political profile of the respondents and their voting tendencies.

"We defined them based on a number of questions, such as whether they thought the Bible was the word of God," Miller said. "We defined the results of six questions into four groups: secular liberals, secular moderates, religious moderates and religious right."

The poll's results showed as follows:

McDonald's vows to halt Iowa expansion

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Big Mac lovers who live in towns without a McDonald's Restaurant franchise won't have a chance of getting one if the Iowa Legislature doesn't change a law it made two years ago.

The power struggle between franchisees and Iowa legislators has resulted in threats by the president of the McDonald's Restaurant corporation that no contracts will be renewed and no new franchises will be established under current conditions.

"McDonald's wants to franchise in Iowa," said Walt Riker, director of public affairs communications for the company. "It's unfortunate that because of the anti-franchise law we can no longer grant franchises or continue existing ones when they come due under these terms. We've been joined by more than 100 franchisees."

The 1992 law is one of the strictest in the country and has limited franchise business growth in Iowa, said Kevin O'Brien, owner of the McDonald's Restaurant franchise in Williamsburg, Iowa. O'Brien's parents own the McDonald's Restaurant franchises in Iowa City at 804 S. Riverside Drive and near Sycamore Mall. They could not be reached for comment.

Many are working to have the law changed, but some franchise owners feel the law was the best thing that could have been done.

"It works for franchisees," said Dean Thornberry, owner of the Burger King franchise at 1445 Boyrum St. "It's a David and Goliath thing. The franchisee is against the Goliath franchiser, who has always had a lot more power. If anyone had a legitimate complaint, we'd have to take the corporation to court in their home state. We do business in Iowa,

"No one's losing jobs, but the sad thing is these hard-working people are being bought out."

Walt Riker, McDonald's director of public affairs

we pay taxes in Iowa. We need some Iowa protection."

Thornberry said the Burger King chain lifted all bans on granting new franchises in Iowa. A new Burger King franchise was built in Burlington last year, he said.

The 1992 law states that franchise owners can't open franchises of the same chain within a three-mile radius of the existing one, but opposing companies can.

"There are small towns where if you have a restaurant in one town, and you want to expand only two miles away, you can't. But your competitors can," said Michelle Porter, executive director of the Iowa Coalition for Responsive Franchising.

Another disagreement between legislators and McDonald's Restaurant involves franchises transferring to new owners in an "unregulated way." Although this allows freedom for franchisees, Porter said the law is not fair because the new person does not have to have the same qualifications.

"Franchisees are worried they're going to get franchisees they don't want to be in business with," she said. "Ninety-four percent of franchisees are happy with their business relationships. But the law protects franchisees and lets them do whatever they want."

Franchisees work because people expect the same food and service whenever they walk into a restaurant, Porter said.

"They're borrowing that name to help their business and it helps their success," she said.

Mark Johnson, legal council for the Iowa legislative service council, drafted the bill in 1992. He said the bill was an attempt to provide equal power between franchisers and franchisees.

"Originally, there was a feeling that the situation between franchisers and franchisees was inequitable and the balance of power was weighted in favor of franchisers," he said. "That was the perception of the Legislature. There are people on both sides of the issues."

More than 100 franchising companies opposed the law and said they would stop expanding in Iowa if no changes were made. Since then, a federal court ruling has exempted franchise agreements established before 1992 from the law.

O'Brien said he is fighting the law, which he claims is unnecessary.

"We have a great relationship with the McDonald's corporation," he said. "We're friends and business partners. But the law passed in 1992 has caused over 100 companies not to franchise in Iowa. We have a 20-year lease. When our lease is up, we'll be out of the system because of the law."

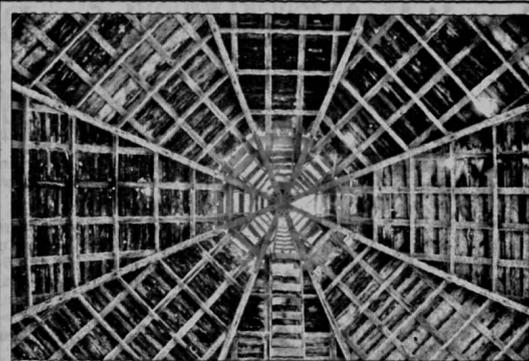

Entrepreneurs want to own their own stores, Riker said. The McDonald's Restaurant corporation will buy back stores from owners when their lease is up if the law does not change.

"No stores are closing, no one's losing jobs, but the sad thing is these hard-working people are being bought out," he said. "That's the sad thing about the Iowa law. It's denying the local entrepreneur that opportunity."

Iowa has shown a 1 percent growth in franchising since the law was passed, and chains in all other states have increased business in the double digits, O'Brien said.

"At a time when we needed to attract jobs and businesses, we're scaring them off," he said.

McDonald's Restaurant President Ed Rensi said several of the 20-year franchising contracts will expire next year and franchises will be bought back if the law is not changed. Ninety of Iowa's 102 McDonald's Restaurant franchises are locally owned.

Pedestrian Mall doused by water main rupture

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Dirty water flooded the Pedestrian Mall early Saturday morning when a break occurred in an 8-inch water line.

The break was reported at 12:52 a.m. and businesses on the Pedestrian Mall were without water until about 10 a.m.

Iowa City water superintendent Ed Moreno said the backup may have looked like dirty water because the water was coming out of the ground, but none of it was sewage.

"When you have a main break of that size, you carry everything around with it, including dirt. When a main break occurs, the water shows on the surface."

Some students coming home from bars were disgusted at the sight of the ankle-deep water.

"It was terrible," UI junior Kevin Dillingham said. "There was a lot of shit all over. It was a big mess."

Chris Nunnally, assistant manager of Burger King, 124 S. Dubuque St., said the restaurant ran out of water.

"They shut off the water at 1:45 a.m., but they didn't tell us," he said. "We couldn't serve pop. A lot of drunks were really unhappy."

The water made the area smell,

Nunnally said. "It stunk, but it was really cool watching water shooting out of the flower bed," he said.

Jolene Connolly, owner of JT Connolly's Tobacco Bowl, 111 S. Dubuque St., said the shop didn't have any problems, but customers complained about the water.

"People came in and told me about it," she said. "I didn't see anything at all, though."

Hardee's, 125 S. Dubuque St., did not have any water for two and a half hours, from 7-9:30 a.m.

"They were shut off during repairs," Moreno said. "Planned Parenthood complained of brown water; they thought it was something else. With breaks, when the water is turned on, it may look brown. The water is shifting and breaks loose stuff in the pipe."

Representatives from Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, 2 S. Linn St., were unavailable for comment.

Water mains are 5 feet under the ground, and Saturday's pipe break was caused by the ground shifting, Moreno said, adding that 8-inch main pipes can cause damage when they break.

"It will move cement, raise bricks," Moreno said. "It's possible and probable with an 8-inch main."

LARGE RIGHT-WING COMMUNITY MEASURED

Poll: religious affiliation to affect voting direction

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The religious right may play a large role in the results of Tuesday's battle for governor, according to a poll released Friday.

Political science Professor Arthur Miller was at the head of the Heartland Poll, which surveyed 2,100 people from Iowa and six surrounding states. The random telephone poll asked respondents about their political and religious views then compared and contrasted their answers to make a political profile of the respondents and their voting tendencies.

"We defined them based on a number of questions, such as whether or not they thought the Bible was the word of God," Miller said. "We combined the results of six questions and defined four groups: secular liberals, secular moderates, religious moderates and religious right."

The poll's results showed as much as 40 percent of Gov. Terry Branstad's supporters are members of what is called the religious right, and as much as 25 percent of Iowa's total population consider themselves members of this group.

The religious right is generally defined as supporters of conservative religious groups such as the Christian Coalition, a conservative political and religious group started by evangelist Pat Robertson in 1989, Miller said. Members of the religious right tend to vote conservatively in accordance with their religious views.

Since conservative views usually mean a Republican vote, Miller said the results of the poll may indicate a voting trend that could lean in Branstad's favor.

"The religious right is more likely to participate in the election, and they are more homogeneous in their political orientation," Miller said. "That can mean a great advantage for Branstad."

However, he said, the results cannot necessarily be applied to the Iowa City / Johnson County area.

"Johnson County is much more dominated by Democrats," Miller said. "Our numbers show it's out in the smaller towns that the religious right is really gaining power."

Local church leaders whose congregations fit into the profile of the religious right say the poll is indicative of the voting habits of their members.

"In a sense I agree with the poll in that a lot of our membership is on the conservative Republican side," said Kurt DeBoer, pastor of the Church of Christ, 1320 Kirkwood Ave. "I can see a lot of our people supporting Branstad. I would say there's a lot of truth to the professor's assertions."

The environment of Iowa City gives the church a variety of opinions within its ranks, DeBoer said, so the poll may not be representative of the area.

"Our Iowa City church is so diverse because it's a college town," he said. "It's a little more tolerant to other views in Iowa City."

Religion has been a deciding factor in people's political views for a long time, said religion Professor James McCue.

"People with religious beliefs have carried those over into their political views since the very beginning of this country," he said.

Despite the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, people don't ignore their religious beliefs when they go to the polls, he said.

"Just because the Constitution prevents the creation of an establishment of religion that doesn't mean people can or should bracket out their religious beliefs from their political views," McCue said.

Candidates contend for Board of Supervisors seat

Lacina seeks to woo companies

Name: Steve Lacina
Occupation: Farmer
Party: Democrat

Aggressively selling the Johnson County work force is not being done, yet it is one way to attract jobs to the area, said Steve Lacina, Democratic candidate for the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

"The companies that have located in this area and rave about the quality of people we have," Lacina said. "The best thing we have in this area is our people. The intellectual and work ethic I don't think can be beaten by anybody."

While it is important to go after high-paying jobs, Lacina said, people should not overlook the lower-paying jobs.

"We spent $7 million of the county budget money for social welfare programs," Lacina said. "A lot of people, if they were given the opportunity, would work."

The only companies the county doesn't want are those which would pollute through using true coal-burning smoke stacks and consuming a large amount of water.

Bringing in new companies will add tax dollars to the county's budget revenues, which currently stands at $29.5 million. Lacina said it takes a lot of time just tracking and keeping up with the budget.

"I see myself as a fiscal officer as well as being open to new programs," he said. "You can't just be a bean counter. Many people say, 'Taxes are too high, you can't do this.' In this job you have to realize there are faces attached to those dollars on the other end."

Having an open mind to new projects and programs is necessary because what may be right today may be wrong tomorrow, Lacina said.

"If there is a good program, provide the service to the people," he said. "But make sure it's done correctly. The worst thing government can do is waste money."

Stutsman aims to attract industry

Name: Sally Stutsman
Occupation: Volunteer Program Coordinator
Party: Democrat

UI graduates need a reason to stay in Johnson County and the county needs to keep them here, said Sally Stutsman, Democratic candidate for the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

Johnson County must increase its aggressiveness in attracting new companies to the area, and the county has many benefits to offer, she said.

"We have a tremendous work force and a low crime rate," Stutsman said. "I'm real intrigued in coming up with an industrial park in the county to attract industry."

Industrial development is only one aspect in the rural landscape of Johnson County. Housing developments are springing up in rural areas around Iowa City and each new subdivision must be assigned municipal services, such as fire and police departments, she said.

The primary role of the Board of Supervisors is to provide stewardship for the community's land and resources, Stutsman said.

"I'm real supportive of the direction the board has taken getting the input from people who provide the different services, such as the sheriff's department, the roads and the ambulance," she said.

Cluster developments in rural parts of the county must be reviewed to see if services such as water and sewer can be provided at a reasonable cost or if an organized development plan is needed.

"To say this is how we're going to do development in Johnson County is going to be a tough, tough issue because you're not going to come up with something that is going to be a good solution for everybody," Stutsman said. "I think the important thing is to come up with a plan and to stick with it."

Fearing highlights high-quality living

Name: Ken Fearing
Occupation: Retired teacher
Party: Republican

Maintaining the quality of life in Johnson County is the motivating factor behind Republican Ken Fearing and his run for the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

"We are the fastest changing county in the state of Iowa," Fearing said. "Also the fastest aging. By the year 2000, the senior citizens will outnumber the working adults 2-to-1 in Johnson County."

Fearing, who is a retired UI and Cedar Rapids Prairie High School math teacher, said the key to success is to keep bright graduates in the county.

"They all want a good-paying job and a good starter home," he said. "We can bring types of industry, the kind of job that will bring in more than the minimum wage."

Fearing doesn't favor giving tax breaks to attract new businesses to the county because he said it is not fair for the established business and the county would lose that potential tax revenue.

"When I first heard (tax breaks), I thought, 'Oh yeah, it'll bring all these jobs,'" Fearing said. "But it hurts the people here too bad, and it cuts down on the tax base."

Items on Fearing's agenda range from continued funding for social programs for the elderly and for crime prevention. In addition, Fearing said he won't try to spend everything in his budget just so it will be the same or increased the following year.

"I'm going to try to give retarded citizens the same benefits all other people have. I want the county to keep control of the SEATS," Fearing said. "I'm a protector of the small farm, hiring one or two more county deputies and more accessibility to board meetings."

Fans flood Reagan with sympathy

LOS ANGELES—Worshippers at former President Reagan's church bowed their heads Sunday to pray for a "healing hand" to fight his Alzheimer's disease, while messages wishing him well poured in from around the country.

"We are concerned and shocked to hear of his illness," the Rev. Paul Pierson said in leading parishioners at Bel Air Presbyterian Church.

One day after Reagan's disclosure that he had been diagnosed with the incurable brain disease, the pastor praised him for making his condition public.

"It may help others seek help," Pierson said.

"We pray for your healing hand to slow the progress of this disease," he said in leading the prayer.

Reagan's handwritten letter disclosing the disease was accompanied by a statement from five doctors. They said that while Reagan's health was otherwise good, "it is expected that as the years go on it will begin to deteriorate."

Reagan, 83, and his wife, Nancy, didn't attend Sunday services at their 2,000-member church overlooking the San Fernando Valley. They also were not at their Bel-Air estate, where TV cameras were set up outside the gate.

Reagan spokeswoman Cathy Busch said the Reagans were out of town and she wouldn't disclose where.

Telephone lines to the Reagan offices were jammed, and the staff left after a short time Sunday because they were unable to handle the volume.

faxes are flooding in. There's too many to count. The outpouring is incredible," Busch said.

At the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley, northwest of Los Angeles, visitors trickled into the museum.

"It's sad, very sad," said library docent Michael Markese. The letter, in which the former president said he would stay active and enjoy life, was vintage Reagan, Markese said. "He's always been such an optimist."

Between Sunday's two morning services, Pierson stepped out briefly and told reporters, "We care about him deeply. He seems fine. We just want to express our love for them and what they have done for the nation."

Pierson said he was asked not to do any interviews but wouldn't say who made the request.

Alzheimer's is an irreversible neurological disorder which destroys the brain's memory cells. In addition to memory loss, symptoms include impairment of judgment, disorientation and personality change. Victims eventually need 24-hour care.

Among diseases, it is the fourth leading cause of death for adults after heart disease, cancer and strokes. Some 4 million Americans have the neurological disorder, and about 100,000 die every year.

PRESIDENT DRUMS UP SUPPORT FOR CANDIDATES

Clinton reaps respect in campaign aid

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Curious as it may sound after a season of embarrassments, there's room for President Clinton to salvage modest bragging rights in the midterm elections.

While the president still isn't welcome by Democratic candidates in vast stretches of the country, his final swing included a handful of states where Senate races seem particularly close — and where the outcome will help determine which party holds the majority in 1995.

Beginning Thursday night, Clinton's itinerary included Minnesota as well as California, Washington, Michigan and Minnesota again today.

Minnesota and Washington in particular are key states for the Democrats because they represent rare chances to take away a Republican Senate seat and offset anticipated losses elsewhere.

In the battle for Minnesota's open seat, Ann Wynn watched an early lead disappear under charges from Rep. Rod Grams that she is a tax and spend liberal. Both parties and a late survey say the race is competitive. Clinton spent Thursday night there and campaigned Friday morning, where he touted figures showing a four-year low in joblessness nationwide. His approval ratings in Minnesota range from 55 percent to 60 percent, according to private polls.

The Wynn campaign hoped Clinton's visit to Duluth on Friday would mobilize traditional Democrats, particularly male blue-collar voters critical to a Democratic victory. "I think he's incredibly important to our campaign," said Beth Bernard, Wynn's campaign manager.

In Washington state, some polls suggest Ron Sims, a county official in the Seattle area, is gaining on Sen. Slade Gorton after trailing by margins measured in double digits. The visit was Clinton's second in little more than a week to a state where his personal approval ratings are around 50 percent, somewhat better than nationally.

"I think (Clinton) has made a difference already," said Frank Greer, a media consultant who worked for Clinton in 1992 and is working for Sims this year. He said Clinton helps with Democrats and independents and can take credit for helping boost the state's critical aircraft and agricultural industries.

In Michigan, where Clinton raised over $250,000 at a fund-raiser for Senate candidate Bob Carr on Tuesday, the president will stop again today. "We requested the president to come back," said campaign manager Jack Weeks. "We see him energizing the base."

By that, Weeks meant blacks, union members and others who form the elements of a traditional Democratic coalition and whose turnout will be critical in several races.

At the beginning of last week, Clinton worked for two Democratic incumbents in tough races: Harris Wofford in Pennsylvania and Charles Robb in Virginia.

Victories in these races would boost Democratic fortunes in the battle for the Senate, quite apart from the outcome in California, where Sen. Dianne Feinstein is in a close re-election race.

It also would allow Clinton to claim credit for helping lead a Senate salvage operation for the Democrats.

After months of walking almost surreptitiously with a cane following hip-replacement surgery April 29, the pope has begun waving it, joking about it and asking people what they think.

"Are you pro-cane or anti-cane?" he asked young people Saturday night during a three-day trip to Sicily. "Some say it makes me look older, others that it rejuvenates me."

Long known for his vigor and his image as a pope who skis and hikes in the mountains, the 74-year-old pontiff is trying to make the best of the contrast.

The pope put his leg to the test on the Sicilian journey, his first major outing since he canceled last month's visit to the United States because of slow recovery from the hip surgery.

Rumors have swirled for months that the pope, possibly suffering from bone cancer or Parkinson's disease, is seriously ailing. The Vatican has repeatedly denied he has any serious ailments.

During a Mass Sunday to dedicate the Madonna in Tears sanctuary, the pope used his bishop's staff for support while an aide gripped his arm when he climbed the steps to the altar.

But the pope made clear in Sicily he intends to keep traveling, with his next overseas trip an Asian tour in January.

"I'm preparing to go to Manila with my cane. I'll get there and I think my cane will, too," he said at Saturday's youth rally.

He also made his first public mention of his recently published book, "Crossing the Threshold of Hope," telling young people, "If you haven't read it, don't bother. It's not a book, it's an interview."

The book was based on questions submitted by an Italian journalist in advance of a TV interview that was later canceled.

The pope's stop at the shrine, dedicated to a Madonna statue said to have broken into tears in 1953, gave him a brief pause from his relentless attacks on the Mafia.

Instead, the pope spoke of the "tragic events" of World War II, citing the Holocaust of the Jews and the threat to Europe from Soviet communism.

Later, standing under a white umbrella during a driving rain storm, he returned to his theme of urging Sicilians to stand up to the Mafia.

The pope decried "violence that still leaves blood running" and a disoriented youth pressed by the need for consumer goods.

Meeting with youngsters Sunday afternoon, the pope spoke of the weapons of Christ — prayer, forgiveness and sacrifice — not "knives and pistols as you see on television and which unfortunately appear in real life."

PARTISAN POLITICS

Abandoning the platform

We live in a two-party society run by a bunch of money-grubbing scumbags. Deal with it.

On the positive side, Americans can be fairly confident in their elected officials' voting habits and will be able to judge candidates' future votes accordingly. For example, it is likely that a liberal senator will vote for gun control measures, just as a conservative would most likely vote against such measures. It takes the guesswork out of voting. Unfortunately, it turns the electoral process into an alternative to thinking for oneself.

Voting along party lines has made a mockery of what a democracy is supposed to be. The last session of Congress demonstrated exactly how pathetic the American political system has become. Republicans set out at the beginning of the session to block every piece of Democratic legislation which was put on the floor from the crime bill to health-care reform. They did so just to be able to go to voters during their election campaigns and blame the Democrats for not getting anything done. Never mind that the Republicans initiated gridlock in the first place.

Republicans used this past session of Congress to manipulate the democratic process in order to gain control of as many House and Senate seats that they could get their hands on. The scariest thing is that it seems to be working and laying the groundwork for Bob Dole's 1996 presidential campaign. A majority of polls show Republicans are going to make major gains in the number of members in Congress. For the first time since the Eisenhower administration, Republicans may control Congress.

The fact that Republicans may control the House and possibly the Senate shouldn't scare the electorate as much as the wording which is used. A small group of people is going to "control" the laws which are being made in this country. That is not a democracy, that is an oligarchy. In an oligarchy the citizens have no control; it is government by the few over the many — not a government by the people, of the people and for the people.

Any candidate for public office should be commended when they vote against party lines for the mere fact that they had the guts to stand up to the established order. Take, for example, Bonnie Campbell's rejection of the Iowa Democratic party platform. She rejected it on the basis that it called for the legalization of same-sex marriages. Although her reasoning may be faulty, she stood up to what everyone else said was right and stated what she believed in. Not only did she state it, she stood by it.

Don't let partisan politics make your decision for you in the voting booth Tuesday. Think about what your vote means and vote with your conscience. Also, when discussing the money-grubbing scumbags you are thinking about voting for, love your country but fear the government.

Focal Point: The race for Iowa's governor

Once every four years, Iowans are encouraged to participate in the voting process to either re-elect an incumbent governor or to select a new one. With Election Day Tuesday, five DI Viewpoints staff members examine the candidates for governor and campaign issues in detail.

KIM PAINTER

An elegy for election Tuesdays gone by

When I was a child, politics had human meaning. It's funny because I grew up while Paul Powell was busy stuffing money into shoe boxes in Illinois and Governor Otto Kerner was borrowing trouble as well. Hell, Chicago mayor Richard Daley had people voting from 6 feet under the ground. Daley's ward politics-driven city was the birthplace of the saying, "Vote early and vote often." I didn't know that yet, though. Most people didn't for a long time.

I grew up in a small town on the western side of Illinois. The family didn't have much money, but Dad knew what was what, and as the late 50s became the early 60s that meant you were a Democrat. He participated in precinct politics, knocking on doors and making sure all his pals had the right bumper stickers for their Chevrolet Impalas. He and his wife had five kids and precious little else, but there was ample respect for them and more than enough love to go around the small ramshackle house we rented.

It was the blue-collar big heart of the Democratic party which my father loved, I'm sure. Democrats — even Brahmins like that Kennedy kid out in Boston — gave a damn about human beings. You could hear it in their words and feel it in the way crowds were drawn to them on the campaign trail.

Over the decades, we have learned much about our politicians — far too much not to become cynical. But I remember when it was different. I remember my infatuation with Abe Lincoln, another Illinois kid who grew up with few advantages. I checked out library books four at a time on the man, feeling the pull toward someone who shared some of my troubles. I liked that Lincoln had a well-known streak of melancholia. It was fitting, somehow, that a man ceaselessly taunted about his looks, height and backwoods origins had the blues in him and carried those blues all the way to the White House.

I read about Abe as I sat on a kitchen heating register with the early night coming on in winter. I would stretch the flannel nightgown taut over my pulled-up knees to create a tent that filled with hot air rising from the furnace.

Later winters found me consumed by a commemorative book dad bought after JFK's assassination. Its biggest picture — and my favorite — showed mourners filing past the casket in the middle of the night. The faces were many different colors, but everyone's tears seemed to cry the same as grief wrote terrible words across each face in the same ravaging hand.

Those were times when the loss of a politician was broadly perceived as a loss of civil and humane direction in government. That feeling is absent now. Watching the funeral of former President Richard Nixon, I was ashamed of my cynicism toward this man who had lived in the service of the public. It was an unpleasant viewing experience for many Americans — we knew too much. As we recalled willful abuses of power, we didn't know where to put feelings of disgrace long enough to let the funeral procession pass by unassailed. We managed, though, which is what we do now with our politicians and their abuses. They are little more than a necessary evil.

Today, campaign issues ring as hollow as the candidates. Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad makes an issue of crime, although crime is objectively not a significant issue in Iowa. His opponent, Bonnie Campbell, buys into the issue of crime for the soulless reason that she can't afford to be seen backing away from him.

To appear more mainstream than the incumbent, Campbell has disavowed her party's platform. She says the party platform is no place to discuss issues which make people uneasy. She is referring to homosexual civil rights, but she could just as easily mean any other human rights issue. What she is really saying is this:

The members of a political party mustn't press candidates in a direction which challenges broadly held social assumptions and values. Their duty is to support the candidate. Don't judge her and never level public criticism when she fails to explain a difficult and controversial opinion to the people of the state. Campbell insists the flaw in the platform has its origins not in her timidity but rather in our bad manners as a polity pressing for change.

What gall it takes to make such a statement here in the Midwest, where the grand political free-for-all has found a home. How insulting to assume Iowans are too frail to discuss religion and sexuality with as much spirit and eloquence as they discuss trade and tariffs.

I am reminded often these days that the object of political campaigns is winning, but let me remind you: Winning is like sex. What you make of it afterwards is far more important than the act itself. Without the moral courage to see beyond victory to governance from the very inception of a campaign, a candidate is simply a hollow apparition rattling across the political landscape seeking support. The emptiness of such campaigns is what we face in Iowa and across most of the country Tuesday. Vote as you will, and God help us all come the morning after.

MUDDY EMOTIONS

Farmhouse to farmyard

The best thing to be said today about the governor's race is that it is almost over.

New York's 42nd Street prostitutes have more shame than Gov. Terry Branstad. Attorney General Bonnie Campbell's campaign had the direction and focus of a corn husk floating on the Iowa River.

Iowans should be proud of their choices.

Early in the race, Branstad put on his best pinstriped suit, walked out of the governor's mansion and crawled into the nearest, wettest and smelliest hog pen he could find. Not to be outdone, Campbell climbed the fence and nestled up to him.

In short, the Democratic and Republican candidates have spent a record sum of money and considerably too much time validating every cynical notion ever to enter the collective mind of the electorate.

As with most other campaigns, the minor candidates for governor couldn't raise the funds needed to buy commercial time. For this they should be thankful. They only embarrassed themselves in front of a small public-access audience rather than a statewide audience.

The sad aspect of the governor's race is that the negative ads, the fruitless focus on crime and the death penalty, and the complete avoidance of important issues and positions all pushed effective buttons in the minds of voters.

On Election Day, 60 percent of the country's eligible voters stay home. Many of the voters Tuesday will cast ballots based on emotional reactions — not intelligently reasoned decisions.

Iowa has the nation's lowest murder rate and the lowest rate of reported rapes. Despite this, Branstad showed how in-touch he was with the primal fears of Iowans and made crime and the death penalty the cornerstone of his campaign.

The attorney general minimized her opposition to the death penalty and criticized the condition of the state's economy. When she questioned the state's income and financial situation, he questioned her personal income and finances. To her credit, Campbell did draw a line and refused to respond to Branstad's attacks against her husband.

People say they don't like negative campaigns, but because negative campaigns keep winning, winners keep waging negative campaigns.

Most working people don't have the time or inclination to read candidate positions published in the papers. Instead, they rely on television. Here the candidates sold the voters short.

For each negative commercial that ran in the past months, a commercial proclaiming a candidate's position could have run in its place. An issue can be staked out and superficially explained in 30 seconds. It can be more thoroughly explained in 60 seconds. Of all of the commercials televised this campaign season, a very few actually mentioned a candidate's positions.

Branstad said Iowa needs a death penalty; his commercials never explained why. Campbell's commercials said Branstad gave gun ownership rights back to a few dozen convicted felons, but her commercials never fully explained what she had done to take illegal guns out of the hands of convicted felons. Neither Branstad nor Campbell had commercials that dealt seriously with the future of the state.

Campaigns like these are here to stay. Voters can demand less mud and more information when they talk with candidates face to face, but little else will stem the tide.

Now voters show their disgust by staying home. Perhaps when politicians win races by margins of five votes to three, candidates will walk out of the barnyard, shake off the muddy emotional charges and step into the cleaner realm of ideas.

Voting is a people's duty in a democracy

The 1994 midterm elections are Tuesday, and it is the public's duty to get out and vote. The American voting public has a reputation for apathy, which is a disgrace for the oldest continuous democracy in the world. The national average for voter participation in 1992 was a mere 55 percent — the lowest of the industrial democracies. Tuesday is a chance for people to redeem themselves and make a blunt statement to politicians concerning their conduct of public affairs.

It is the obligation of all registered voters to voice their opinions concerning the performance of the local, state and national governments. However, the people have ducked their responsibility to hold their government accountable for its actions.

The most common public complaints include: "I can't tell the difference between the candidates; it's a choice between two evils." "Special interests control everything. My vote doesn't count." "I don't know anything about politics."

Not only are these attitudes cliché, they show that the American public knows next to nothing about its own political process. This is pathetic in the most information-saturated society in the world. We have access to a wealth of information not available to the rest of the world, yet most of the public does not make use of it.

So how does the common citizen become active and make a difference in political affairs? It's easy: Register, become educated in political issues and vote.

Though it is the public's responsibility to register themselves to vote — unlike in the European democracies — all you have to do here is fill out a form at the post office and mail it. If you are already registered somewhere else, you can vote absentee, which requires a request to the county auditor not more than 70 days before an election. Finally, for the busy voter who feels as though he or she does not have the time to vote on Election Day, there is early satellite voting.

Registering is the relatively easy part; the hardest part of being a responsible voter is staying informed.

People do have a legitimate gripe when it comes to deciding who the best candidate is for the job. Our system emphasizes the individual candidate over a strong party identification. Local party members feel alienated because a small cabal of glitzy media operatives packages candidates and cuts the average person out of the process. In political science circles, this phenomenon is called the "permanent campaign."

Another problem with the system is negative campaigning. Politicians go negative because it works. The public is susceptible to 30-second sound bites, and it loves any sort of personal controversy. An educated electorate which demands constructive debate can compel politicians to stick to discourse on the issues and not devolve to personal attacks.

The power of "special interests" makes the electorate feel powerless in the political process. Though special interest political action committees (PACs) wield great power, they cannot buy a representative's vote — there are too many out there to hold very much influence.

Politicians pay attention to their constituents; they have large staffs at the local and national levels. A large, well-organized, grassroots group of constituents can wield as much power as a lobbyist in Washington, D.C.

A look at the German political system can put our interest group situation in perspective. In Germany, special interests have so much sway that one-third of the parliamentary delegates directly represent their interest groups. Also, interest groups exist at a semigovernmental level and they are major financiers of all parties. However, the Germans do not feel powerless in the face of such power. The voters are just as skeptical of their system as we are, but they vote. In the Oct. 16 elections, 79.1 percent of the electorate voted. This shows that in an interest group-infested environment, people do have a voice.

Our political system depends on an active informed populace to decide who represents their interests in governmental bodies. The political parties do not decide who runs for office, you do. The precinct caucus and the primary election are forums for people to decide who represent them at conventions and as candidates.

Though 1994 is an "off year" election, much is at stake for the average citizen. Issues ranging from college tuition to rural land development to health care and crime are at the forefront this political season. Also, Republicans have a good chance of gaining control of an indecisive Democratic Congress. If they succeed, a new, powerful agenda will sweep the land.

If people do not participate, the system becomes staid and corrupt, with politicians who do not know the feelings of this "silent majority"; a small politically active plurality decides policy. The electorate is upset with the system this year, and the registered electorate must do its duty to vote for change. If you do not and nothing changes, you have only yourself to blame.

Dalton 'clear choice'

To the Editor:

On Tuesday we will elect a senator to represent us in Des Moines. Rosie Dalton is the clear choice for our senator.

Unlike her opponent, Dalton, efficient government and lower taxes to taxpayers and property owners are her priorities.

Bob Dvorsky's record on taxes speaks for itself. In 1992, he voted twice to increase the sales tax by 1 percent. That same year he also voted to expand the sales tax to more than a dozen services that were not previously taxed.

Dalton will work hard as our senator. She will fight for responsible state government.

Please vote for Dalton for 25th Senate District on Tuesday.

State campaign money

To the Editor:

Terry Branstad receives his campaign money from in-state donors in 300 Iowa communities. He has received 80 percent of his campaign money from Iowans.

Compare that to the governor's opponent, who received nearly 100 percent of her money from outside Iowa. Bonnie Campbell receives campaign money from a very limited group of out-of-state liberal activists. She only received money from 121 out-of-state Iowa communities.

It is clear that Gov. Branstad has support of a wide group of Iowans, whereas his opponent has out-of-state special-interest groups supporting him.

The choice is clear: If you are an Iowan, vote for Branstad. If you are an out-of-state special interest, vote for Campbell. If you are an Iowan, vote for Branstad.

Campbell relies on facts, not emotions

To the Editor:

As I read an Amy Resewehr's editorial titled "Campaign is inhumane" (Sept. 14), I really began to think about what Gov. Branstad is doing in his campaign for re-election. The editorial was about the governor's use of Anna Marie Emy's death in his campaign for the death penalty in the state of Iowa.

I think that Gov. Branstad is right to exploit her death in order to get votes. Her family and friends have been through enough without Anna Marie's name being used in this way. Being from Grinnell, I witnessed the distress and despair in a town searching for a missing little girl. And I saw the grief and horror after her body was discovered. Her kidnapping and murder were senseless and horrifying. She should now be left to rest in peace.

Murder is no more immoral or illegal now than it was before this tragedy occurred. Anna Marie's death should not be looked at as Branstad's only chance to get the death penalty, although he obviously feels that it is the best way to play on the voters' sympathies and emotions in order to get himself elected for yet another term.

A letter to the editor on Sept. 1 brought it to my attention that the error had also attempted to use the Drake Diner murders to push his campaign to reinstate the death penalty in Iowa and the family asked Branstad not to use the tragedy in his campaign. Will he ever realize that his use of these violent acts is immoral and inhumane, not to mention insulting to the families involved?

Perhaps if our governor could take a real look at the issues and come up with some plausible ideas of what Iowa needs, then he would be able to accomplish his goals and campaign promises. Hopefully he will learn from some of his constituents, including me, that he could use a lot more facts and figures and a lot less appeals to our emotions.

After over 30 years with the FBI, I know something about integrity.

Bonnie Campbell would have you believe that Branstad has accepted campaign contributions for political favors. Nothing could be further from the truth, and Campbell knows it.

I know the man. I know the high standards. He is a rarity in today's political scene: an honest politician. Branstad is a man of integrity.

To the Editor:

Rosie Dalton definitely has my support as the candidate for the 25th state Senate District. Her dedication to work for reduced government spending and lower taxes makes her the right choice.

Her opponent, Bob Dvorsky, has consistently voted to raise your taxes by eliminating or limiting the amount of federal taxes that can be deducted on our state income taxes. Not only would this raise our personal taxes, but it also would drive businesses from Iowa.

As your senator, Dalton will work to ensure that Iowa's tax policies are fair and attractive to businesses and individuals to come to Iowa.

Vote for Dalton for state Senate on Tuesday.

GUEST OPINION • MICHAEL CUDDEHE

Natural Law Party offers solutions, not rhetoric

As Election Day '94 approaches, I would like to alert readers to the fact that there is one party which is actually speaking to the issues and offering solutions to the problems facing our nation: the Natural Law Party. The Natural Law Party was founded in 1992 to "bring the light of science into politics" and to promote common sense and fieldtested and cost-effective solutions to our nation's problems.

During the '94 campaign, the major themes of the Natural Law Party have been conflict-free politics and prevention-oriented government. We believe that candidates should engage in debate to illuminate the issues and to offer solutions, not to undermine and tear each other down. We believe that the proper role of government is to promote and implement programs which prevent problems from occurring rather than continuously engaging in crisis management.

The Natural Law Party promotes preventive health care. Proven preventive health-care programs can reduce our overall health-care bill by 50 percent. This amounts to hundreds of billions of dollars annually. Those savings will go a long way toward eliminating the deficit, not to men-the benefits of vastly improved national health.

The Natural Law Party holds that the problem of escalating crime will not be solved by building more prisons. The United States — the land of the free — already imprisons a greater percentage of its people than any other nation except Russia. Crime is the consequence of collective stress and poor education. The Natural Law Party's solution to the problem of crime is to institute measures for meaningful education, effective rehabilitation and reduction of social stress — the root cause of crime.

Specific programs to treat the symptoms of social stress — for example, crime, drug abuse and poor health — will be effective only if the underlying cause of those problems is treated. The Natural Law Party is the only party which offers to eliminate the cause of our social ills, which is stress in individual life and in the collective consciousness of society. The Natural Law Party program designed to eliminate stress and create coherence in collective consciousness is called "A Group for Government." It consists of the large-group (7,000 to 10,000 people) practice of transcendental meditation. This program was fieldtested in Washington, D.C., in the summer of 1993 and resulted in an 18 percent reduction in crime over two months. (A study documenting this project was published by the Institute for Science, Technology and Public Policy in Fairfield, Iowa.)

If this idea sounds far out, consider that 20 years ago the idea of closing your eyes and doing a simple mental technique to reduce hypertension was also considered far out. Yet today we know that transcendental meditation is the most effective nondrug therapy for hypertension — and it has no negative side effects. Our society can be said to be suffering from "societal hypertension." The Group for Government will reduce stress and hypertension for the body of society the same way that transcendental meditation does for individuals.

The best thing that any voter who is unsatisfied can do in this election is to cast their vote for Natural Law Party candidates. Why? This vote — win or lose — will send a clear message to Washington and to the major parties that the voters are fed up with politics as usual. It will also give support to the Natural Law Party themes of conflict-free politics and prevention-oriented government — ideas whose time has come.

Michael Cuddehe is the Natural Law Party's congressional candidate for Iowa's First District.

Columnist commended for government 'dream'
To the Editor:

I would like to applaud Kim Painter for her column titled "Opposed camps do not a community make" (DI, Oct. 17). It is about time someone got out from under the blanket of parties and labels and got down the most important issue of all: that we are all human beings.

Painter's dream of living in a true community is mine as well. Unfortunately, it is just that — a dream. Never has this fact been more clear than now, with the Election Day so close at hand. One can hardly turn on the television without hearing Branstad bash Campbell and Nagle bash Nussle or vice versa. Does anyone really know what the real issues of these campaigns are? I certainly don't have the time or the patience to wade through the slanderous bickering to find the truth.

Without clear sight of the issues, we are forced to return to the old standby: labels. Are you liberal or conservative?

Methodist Church cemetery matched the mood of this textile town of about 10,000 in northwest South Carolina.

Scores of flower arrangements — one with a Winnie the Pooh bear — were spread over a large part of the cemetery around the boys' grave. A sign close to the coffin read, "Alex and Michael. Heaven Bound."

Cars lined the small county road as mourners viewed the coffin.

"I just wanted to be a part of it," said Cathy Jones of Hartwell, Ga., who drove more than two hours to attend the funeral.

The boys were found at the bottom of Lake John D. Long on Thursday. Nine days earlier, their mother told police a man with a gun took her car and her children and drove off.

As the community and the nation mourned, new details surfaced.

CBS news, citing a law enforcement source, reported that the investigation into the killings continued and that at least one other person could be arrested. However, state police Chief Robert Stewart told the Associated Press that he knew of no other arrests.

Meanwhile, The State newspaper in Columbia reported that six years ago Smith told police she had been sexually molested. The investigation never led to any charges, the paper said, quoting unidentified sources.

Her allegation involved "more than patting and touching," a former sheriff's investigator told the newspaper.

Sheriff Howard Wells and others involved in the boys' disappearance investigation refused to say whether Smith mentioned the allegation and whether they thought it played a role in her alleged actions.

Smith, 23, is under a 24-hour suicide watch at a state prison near Columbia.

REACTION

Iowa City resident and mother Jan Dendinger said Smith should receive the death penalty for the murders of her children.

"I don't understand how someone can put anything else above their children," Dendinger said. "She should have given the boys to family members or put them up for adoption."

Deborah Buss, Iowa City resident and mother of three, agreed Smith should be executed. Buss, who had closely followed the case on the "CBS Morning News," said she had believed Smith's plea for help was sincere.

"If someone takes a life, they should be punished the same way, especially for killing two innocent children," Buss said.

However, some residents think the death penalty is a severe punishment which does nothing to make up for the children's lives.

"It would be fun to torment her back, strap her in a car and send it into the lake, but that wouldn't make us any better than her," said Jeffrey Mau, a Davenport resident.

Smith had to have been crazy when she murdered her sons, said Fred Lowery, a mental health counselor and Iowa City resident. He said she probably needs psychiatric help.

"Once she realizes her crime and has to live with herself for the rest

"It would be fun to torment her back, strap her in a car and send it into the lake, but that wouldn't make us any better than her."

Jeffrey Mau, Davenport resident looked at the media's portrayal of the murders with a critical eye and he said it's too early to decide on a punishment for Smith.

"People need to take a skeptical view of stories when they first come out in the media," Sheetz said. "The media will make (the murders) an issue in and of itself. This story is just another opportunity to argue about the death penalty."

Discussion of the death penalty is an impulsive reaction to the dramatic way the truth surrounding the murders unfolded, said Sheetz's mother, Cory Stutts. Stutts agreed with her son that no punishment should be decided until Smith receives psychological help determining why she committed the crime.

UI senior Matt Miller said uninformed public opinion should have nothing to do with policy and punishment.

"I hate it when people say, 'I don't believe in the death penalty, but in this case ...,'" Miller said. "The whole thing reeks of mass mob rule."

students have voiced complaints about Schoenbaum's teaching style.

Jeffrey Cox, chairman of the UI history department, said he has not received any student complaints about Schoenbaum, and the Office of Academic Affairs said it could not release information regarding student complaints.

Schoenbaum said he was unaware of any formal written complaints against him.

"No one has ever shown me anything of the sort," Schoenbaum said. "I have never been taken aside, either officially or unofficially."

Schoenbaum said he expects occasional informal complaints from students and professors.

"Higher education is not a beauty contest, not something to be put to a vote," he said. "It is nice to be liked, but it is not a qualification to teach. The pursuit of truth involves asking difficult questions. That is why college is often a difficult, even threatening, experience for them."

However, Hanley said student complaints can't be so easily dismissed.

"When students make complaints like this, it is not proper to say it is because it is a tough class," she said. "Lots of classes are tough. Students make complaints because they have reason to make complaints."

Steven Hoch, a UI associate professor of history, would not comment specifically about Schoenbaum, but said many UI professors employ an abrasive teaching style.

"It's certainly not right to berate students," he said. "It's not right to call them stupid, for example, but it is not a technique that is the sole property of one professor and the University of Iowa, I can assure you of that."

of having a pro-choice administration in Washington."

The use of RU 486 is not simple or painless, Sand said. A woman choosing to have an abortion will visit a clinic site approximately three times, she said.

During the first visit, a woman will take a pregnancy test, get screened for health risks such as heart disease and hypertension and sign a consent form stating she understands the procedure and the risks before she takes three tablets of RU 486. The pills prevent the uterine lining from nourishing the embryo.

A major risk of the pill is that it does not induce an abortion 4 percent to 6 percent of the time, so women must be willing to have a surgical abortion in that case, Sand said. No studies have been done demonstrating what would happen to a baby if the mother refused to have a surgical abortion in the event the pill failed.

During a second visit, between 36 and 48 hours after taking the RU 486, a woman returns to the clinic to take two tablets of misoprostol, which causes the uterus to cramp, contract and expel the fetus, usually within three hours, Sand said. This stage of the abortion is often painful for women, and Sand said vaginal bleeding lasts up to two weeks.

"It's not a magic pill without side effects or complications," Sand said. "It's not quick, pain-free or easy."

A third, follow-up visit is conducted approximately three weeks later to check the woman's health. The entire procedure in France is about $350, but it is free for women who test the pill in the United States.

Pro-life groups have spread the misconception that women will abuse the pill and rely on it as a birth control method, Sand said. She said she doubts the pill will increase the number of abortions done in the United States.

"I don't think people will take it lightly," she said. "I mean it's not that convenient — it's time-consuming. I doubt people are going to quit using birth control when they are having sex and start saying, 'We'll just go take that abortion pill later.'"

The morality of the issue is clear cut for the Catholic Church, Ed

"It's not a magic pill without side effects or complications. It's not quick, pain-free or easy."

Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women

Fitzpatrick, director of the Newman Catholic Student Center, 104 E. Jefferson St.

"We're against anything that takes human life," he said. "That's what this does, and we are totally against it."

The testing will not be objective because it is being conducted at clinics which are already biased in favor of abortion, said Tom Cannon, a member of Johnson County Right to Life.

"Common sense tells you the results are going to be skewed because it's being tested by people who are biased to begin with," he said. "Planned Parenthood and other abortion clinics promote themselves as American family planning clinics, but the fact is that 90 percent of pregnant women who go in there come out without a baby."

A woman's mental and physical health are at risk when abortions are done outside the walls of a clinic, Cannon said.

"It's very possible a young girl will literally watch her baby come out in the toilet — what can that do to a young girl?" he said. "The abortion won't happen in a controlled clinic environment where a doctor cuts up the baby and sucks it out and a nurse pieces it back together to be sure they got it all out. There's danger of excessive bleeding and infection without close contact with a doctor."

Specific sites where testing is done cannot be released unless the center has already gone public, said Sandra Waldman, director of public information at the Population Council, which was granted permission from the FDA to begin testing RU 486. The 12 sites include Planned Parenthood clinics, university student health clinics and hospitals and health clinics across the country.

RU 486 has not increased the number of abortions in France and will not in the United States, Waldman said.

"I doubt it will increase the number of U.S. abortions, but it will enable women to get an abortion earlier," she said. "A surgical abortion can't be done until the woman is seven or eight weeks along so the embryo is big enough to locate and remove. With RU 486, a woman can have an abortion as soon as she tests positive in a pregnancy test."

THIRD PARTIES

congressional candidate Michael Cuddehe is not so forgiving when it comes to discussing the media's treatment of third parties. He said the deeply rooted belief that the governmental process revolves around Republicans and Democrats is the most difficult obstacle to overcome as a third-party candidate.

"It's this fundamental attitude that permeates not just individuals on the streets but all the institutions involved in the process," Cuddehe said. "Some of the press has been very good. ... Their attitude is, whoever has taken the trouble to get on the ballot and meets ballot-access requirements should be treated as a candidate equally."

Keeping people involved with the democratic process is probably the most important reason for third-party participation, Butler said.

Another function of third parties is to be a source of new ideas.

Republicans and Democrats are more concerned with staying in the middle of the road and appealing to the masses than they are in embracing new ideas, Butler said.

"Historically, third political parties have been the source of ideas such as the anti-monopoly law, women's suffrage," Butler said. "Things we take for granted now were originally considered totally radical and were introduced into the political process by third parties."

Iowa women's tennis players Laura Dvorak and Nicki Willette advanced to the semi-finals of the ITCA-Rolex Regional Qualifier doubles play Sunday.

Coach Steve Houghton was proud of his whole team. "They played all week long. We had a great weekend. It isn't over for Bryan (Crowley). But we showed a lot of potential. How tough we can be. I think we play like this the rest of the year we definitely can compete for the Big Ten title," he said.

Navratilova drops to Sanchez Vicario
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The first half of the match between Navratilova and Sanchez Vicario was a serve-and-volley dominated affair. For the second time, she seemed like a player toward retirement.

Navratilova, playing in her next to last tournament, lost a couple of tie-breakers and 6-7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-3) Sunday. Arantxa Sanchez Vicario won the final of the Bank of the West.

"It's nice to be able to play great tennis, I just wish I could finish it off," Navratilova said. "When I play tennis like this, I know I didn't retire too late."

Navratilova, who plans to retire after the Virginia Slims Championships that begin Nov. 14 in New York, failed to win her remarkable streak of 14 consecutive singles titles every year since 1975.

Hawkeyes sweep through Big Ten championships to gain berth to Thursday's tourney

Tradition. The dictionary defines it as "a time-honored practice or the set of such practices." The Iowa field hockey team defines it as a trip to the NCAA tournament.

With their backs against the wall and a streak of 12 straight trips to the NCAA tournament on the line, the Hawkeyes soared to the occasion. Iowa beat Michigan State, Penn State, and Northwestern to capture the Big Ten tournament and more importantly, an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

"It was awesome," Coach Beth Beglin said after Sunday's victory over Northwestern. "It was unbelievable. I don't want to say disbelief, but I just felt we had a difficult road to win the tournament."

That road included winning three games in three days, matching Iowa's longest winning streak of the season. That road included wins against the No. 2 and No. 5 teams in the nation.

"The team under pressure, when everything was on the line, did a terrific job," Beglin said. "They played awesome. They were poised. They played with a lot of heart. They competed every second on the field. It was an amazing performance under real extreme conditions."

Ranked No. 12 in the nation, Iowa needed to capture the tournament crown to advance to the NCAA tournament, which begins this Thursday.

After beating Michigan State, 3-2, on Friday, the Hawkeyes were set for a showdown with No. 5 Penn State on Saturday.

The Nittany Lions beat Iowa in both meetings during the regular season, but Iowa had the last laugh, limiting Penn State to just two corners while shutting them out 1-0.

That moved the Hawkeyes to the championship game against No. 2 Northwestern, who had a first round bye and beat Ohio State 2-1 on Saturday.

Iowa falls short in Big Ten dual

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

If there was one thing that Iowa women's swimming coach Pete Kennedy wanted out of his team, it was for the Hawkeyes to swim tough against two of the top teams in the Big Ten.

The Hawkeyes didn't disappoint in the effort department, but came up short on the scoring end as they fell to both Penn State and Wisconsin last weekend at the UI Field House pool.

Iowa finished third out of the three teams with a score of 283. Penn State rolled to a first-place finish with 760 points.

Wisconsin finished second with 611 points.

Although Penn State ran away from the pack, Kennedy said his team hung in there.

"Penn State just had too many horses. They have one of the best teams in the conference and they were just too strong. Wisconsin is just as good. We gave it all we had. It's just too bad we had to face them the same weekend," Kennedy said.

It was Iowa's first double dual meet of the season, and Kennedy said it gave him the chance to change some things up.

"I like these kind of meets. It gives you a chance to look at some people doing different events. You can change a lot of things and do some experimenting," Kennedy said.

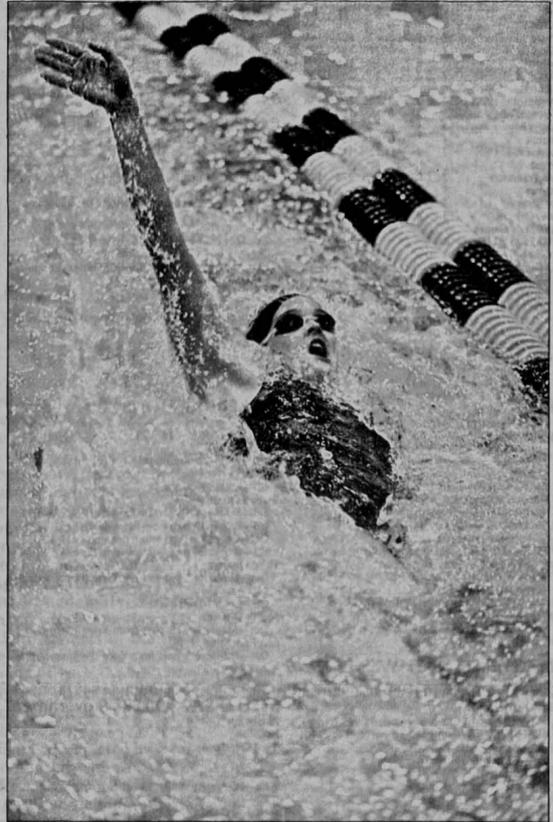

The two-day meet was dominated by Penn State as the Nittany Lions ran up a season-high 760 points. They closed out the double meet Saturday in style, winning nine of the 18 heats.

Iowa sophomore Jami Strauss said it was just a matter of being in the toughest conference in the country.

"The Big Ten is far and away the best conference in the country. It can be frustrating when your competing against these kinds of teams every meet. But it also can be exciting to know your swimming against the very best. It kind of puts things in perspective," Strauss said.

Things don't get any easier for the Hawkeyes as they will travel to Ohio State and Indiana this weekend. Kennedy said going on the road will be no easy task.

"When you into anybody's back yard its going to be tough but its really what you make it. There isn't a huge home field advantage," Kennedy said.

It may be early in the season, but men's swimming coach Glenn Patton has reason to be optimistic.

In the Hawkeyes' first meet of the season, they defeated Wisconsin 150-91 at the Field House Pool.

"I was very pleased to have a convincing win over a Big Ten opponent," Patton said. "We were really pleased with the performance of our entire team. The divers got off to a great start and we just continued from there to dominate. Our diving group is really strong. Our sprinting group looked really strong and I was really pleased with how some of our freshmen performed."

The diving group of B.J. Blair, Tete Gil and Josh Seykora placed first, second and third respectively in both the one-meter and three-meter events, giving Iowa a 32-4 lead entering the swimming events. The Hawkeyes never looked back from there.

Cornhuskers knock off Nittany Lions in poll

Rick Warner
Associated Press

College football's two major polls now agree: Nebraska is No. 1.

The Cornhuskers, already No. 1 with The Associated Press media, replaced Penn State as the top team with the USA Today-CNN coaches Sunday.

"Now we control our own destiny. If we play like we are capable of the rest of the season, we should be in good shape."

Ed Stewart, Nebraska linebacker

After Nebraska routed Kansas 45-17 and Penn State looked sluggish in a 35-29 win over Indiana on Saturday, the Cornhuskers gained ground in both polls.

Twelve coaches shifted their first-place votes from Penn State to Nebraska, giving the Cornhuskers a 42-20 advantage. Six media members pulled the same switch, increasing Nebraska's first-place margin to 39-22.

In total points, Nebraska leads Penn State by 18 in AP and 27 in USA Today-CNN.

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said he was surprised by the big swing in the coaches' poll.

"I thought it would be close and we might possibly be rated ahead in both polls, but I wasn't sure that we would," he said.

A week ago, a split national championship seemed like a distinct possibility. Now Nebraska (10-0) is in the driver's seat in both polls.

"I think it's good at this point to be the outright No. 1 team," line-backer Ed Stewart said. "Now we control our own destiny. If we play like we are capable of the rest of the season, we should be in good shape."

If the Cornhuskers beat Iowa State and Oklahoma, then defeat No. 5 Miami or No. 8 Florida State in the Orange Bowl, they would probably be consensus champs. If Nebraska doesn't lose, tie or play poorly in a close victory, Penn State could go undefeated and not win any share of the title for the fourth time under Joe Paterno.

Penn State spokesman Jeff Nelson said Paterno would not comment on the polls Sunday.

Associated Press

Nebraska beat Kansas 45-17 Saturday to replace Penn State as the top team in the coaches poll. The Cornhuskers are 10-0.

The Nittany Lions (8-0) have games remaining against Illinois, Northwestern and Michigan State before a likely Rose Bowl appearance against the Pac-10 champion. Arizona, Oregon and Southern Cal are tied for the Pac-10 lead.

Although Nebraska would have a tougher bowl matchup than Penn State, it could work in the Huskers' favor.

A victory over Miami or Florida State in their homestate would impress voters more than a Penn State win over a Pac-10 opponent with at least two losses.

CLOSEST FINISH IN HISTORY

Silva turns around to win NYC Marathon

Bert Rosenthal
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A wrong turn in the final mile cost German Silva about 12 seconds and made him run an extra 35 yards — and yet he still came back to win the New York City Marathon.

In one of the biggest running blunders since Roy Riegels ran the wrong way and cost his team the 1929 Rose Bowl, Silva veered off-course with seven-tenths of a mile remaining Sunday as he ran side by side with fellow Mexican Benjamin Paredes.

As police wildly waved for him to turn around, Silva ran 12 steps up the wrong street, turned around, and then caught a struggling Paredes with about 400 yards to go to win by two seconds — the closest finish in the marathon's history.

"I was concentrating — I thought I had to go to the right side," Silva said, after finishing in 2 hours, 11 minutes, 21 seconds. "I was thinking he was coming."

Instead, Paredes was heading for the finish line and Silva appeared headed for disaster.

"It was, ah, a mistake," a confused Silva said.

Marino, Moon win in clutch

Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Dan Marino and Warren Moon are used to winning games in the final seconds. Gary Anderson waited until overtime to win a game for the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Marino rallied the Miami Dolphins for 10 points in the final four minutes Sunday, lifting them to a 22-21 victory over the Indianapolis Colts on Pete Stoyanovich's 34-yard field goal with four seconds left.

"After you do it a number of times, you believe you can do it," Marino said after his 28th final-quarter comeback victory.

Moon didn't rely on a field goal for Minnesota as he passed 11 yards to Qadry Ismail with five seconds left and the Vikings beat the New Orleans Saints 21-20.

"When you know you need it, Warren will come in and say, 'This is what we've got to do, everybody listen,'" Vikings receiver Jake Reed said. "And everybody listens."

And then there was Anderson, who kicked a 40-yard field goal — his fourth of the game — with 3:36 left in overtime to lift the Steelers to a 12-9 win over the Houston Oilers.

"I'd like to kick it every time," Anderson said. "It's just like playing golf. If you take a good swing at the ball you're going to hit it well."

The victories left the Dolphins (7-2) atop the AFC East, and the Vikings (7-2) in front in the NFC Central and the Steelers at 6-3 in the AFC Central.

Dolphins 22, Colts 21

At Miami, Marino (30 of 41 for 261 yards) bounced back from a costly fourth-quarter interception to rally Miami. Cornerback Ray Buchanan appeared to set up a victory for the Colts (4-6) when he intercepted a pass and returned it 28 yards for a TD with 7:32 left.

Marino then hit O.J. McDuffie on a 28-yard TD pass with 3:52 left and the Dolphins got the ball right back. Marino completed five passes in a row to the 17 before Stoyanovich kicked the winner.

Miami running backs Bernie Parmalee (right knee, shoulder) and fullback Keith Byars (right knee) were both injured. The Colts' Don Majkowski injured his right thumb and was replaced late in the second quarter by Jim Harbaugh.

Vikings 21, Saints 20

At Minneapolis, Moon moved Minnesota 84 yards in 13 plays after the Saints (3-6) had taken the lead on two field goals by Morten Andersen. The quarterback was 8-for-12 for 86 yards on the winning drive, including a 4-yard, fourth-down completion to Amp Lee at the New Orleans 27.

Moon finished 33-for-57 for 420 yards and two TDs.

It was the second straight home game in which Moon rallied the Vikings on their final drive. On Oct. 20, he led a late drive for a tying field goal against Green Bay, then led Minnesota to the winning Pittsburgh Steelers linebacker Kevin Greene hits Houston Oilers running back Gary Brown causing him to lose the ball during the first quarter Sunday in Houston. The pass was ruled incomplete.

Steelers 12, Oilers 9, OT

At Houston, Gary Brown's fumble gave Anderson the one extra kick Pittsburgh needed. In a game with no touchdowns, the only turnover set up Anderson's winning field goal.

Anderson also had kicks of 50, 39 and 37 yards. Al Del Greco made kicks of 32 and 49 yards before his 38-yarder with seven seconds left in regulation tied it at 9. The Oilers (1-8) lost their fifth in a row.

Falcons 10, Chargers 9

At Atlanta, no touchdowns, no victory for the Chargers. For the second time in three games, San Diego got its points on John Carney field goals, while Jeff George threw a 9-yard TD pass to Terance Mathis in the first quarter and Norm Johnson's 23-yard field goal proved to be the winning points for the Falcons (5-4).

The Chargers (7-2), with Gale Gilbert starting for the injured Stan Humphries, had a TD called back because of an interference penalty and Carney, who extended his streak to 21 field goals in a row, missed on his No. 22, a 47-yarder that sailed wide right with 8:01 left.

49ers 37, Redskins 22

At Washington, the big-play 49ers struck in almost every way, with Dexter Carter scoring on a 96-yard kickoff return, Tim McDonald on a 73-yard interception return and Jerry Rice on a 28-yard reverse. In the first half, Steve Young (15-of-25 for 291 yards) hit Brent Jones for a 69-yard score and ran a yard for another TD for San Francisco (7-2).

The Redskins (2-8) are winless in six games at RFK, their worst start at home since 1961. Gus Frerotte was 15-of-32 for 167 yards and two interceptions before John Friesz replaced him in the fourth quarter.

Bears 20, Buccaneers 6

At Tampa, Fla., Steve Walsh improved to 4-0 as Chicago's starter by throwing second-half TD passes to Keith Jennings and Robert Green. Walsh, starting for the first time with a healthy Erik Kramer on the bench, helped the Bears (5-4) bounce back from a 27-point loss to Green Bay last Monday night.

Rookie Trent Dilfer, making his second pro start for Tampa Bay (2-7), had to hurry many of his passes and finished 13-of-25 for 159 yards.

Packers 38, Lions 30

At Milwaukee, Brett Favre had three TD passes in the second quarter as Green Bay (5-4) built a 24-point lead and held off a Dave Krieg-led comeback.

With the Lions (4-5) trailing 38-14 entering the fourth quarter and Krieg in for the injured Scott Mitchell (broken bone in right hand), the quarterback had two TD passes and two two-point conversions. His fourth-down down pass was broken up in the end zone with 42 seconds left to seal the win.

Jets 22, Bills 17

At East Rutherford, N.J., Boomer Esiason hit Rob Moore with a 4-yard TD pass late in the third quarter to lift New York (5-4) to its second win over Buffalo (5-4) this season.

Esiason was forced out twice with ankle injuries, while safety Ronnie Lott (neck) missed the second half. Andre Reed, Buffalo's leading receiver, also missed the second half with an injury and Don Beebe was injured on a hit by the Jets' Bobby Houston.

Trailing 14-10, the Jets drove 79 yards to the go-ahead touchdown and then got two of Nick Lowery's three field goals in the fourth quarter. In the final minutes, the Bills marched to the Jets' 27 and Jim Kelly's fourth-down pass was incomplete.

Browns 13, Patriots 6

At Cleveland, Leroy Hoard ran for 123 yards and scored on a 1-yard pass from Mark Rypien as the Browns (7-2) are off to their best start since 1965.

Drew Beldsoe threw for 166 yards, nearly half of it in the fourth quarter, and was intercepted four times as the top-rated passing team was bothered by wind gusts of up to 40 mph. Eric Turner had two of the interceptions.

Eagles 17, Cardinals 7

At Philadelphia, Randall Cunningham threw two long TD passes to Fred Barnett in the third quarter as the Eagles spoiled Buddy Ryan's return to the Vet. The Eagles' defense produced two turnovers and five sacks against Arizona (3-6).

Ryan was greeted by a cascade of boos as he came onto the field before the game. There were several signs and banners hung inside the stadium, some razzing him and others praising the former coach.

Rams 27, Broncos 21

At Anaheim, Calif., Chris Chandler threw two TD passes that helped Los Angeles to a 21-point lead and the Rams (4-5) held off another fourth-quarter comeback by John Elway.

Elway threw a pair of TDs in the final period, and got a final chance when the Broncos (3-6) took over at the Los Angeles 48 with 2:28 left. He gained three yards on two completions and then skipped a pass to Shannon Sharpe on fourth down.

Bengals 20, Seahawks 17 OT

At Seattle, the Bengals didn't score a TD, but got the points they needed from Pelfrey, who set a club record by converting on kicks of 36, 44, 36, 47, and 28 yards before his game-winner.

A 76-yard pass from Jeff Blake (31-for-43 for 387 yards) to rookie Darnay Scott set up the winning points.

Agassi notches fifth title of '94

Salvatore Zanca
Associated Press

PARIS — By achieving the No. 2 ranking in the world, Andre Agassi is at the high point of his tennis career.

He would like to move up one more notch, but the flamboyant American was too busy enjoying another first — victory in the City of Light — to concern himself with that.

"I have been to the final of the French Open at Roland Garros twice, but never won," he said after beating Marc Rosset on Sunday in the Paris Open. "Now I know what it is like to win in Paris."

Agassi, the 1992 Wimbledon and 1994 U.S. Open champion whose best previous ATP ranking was third in 1988, has another agenda.

"The best thing is to win Grand Slam tournaments," he said after a 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5 victory. "Hopefully, some day you can say, 'Yeah, I was No. 1 for a while or for this long.' But to win the Grand Slam tournaments is what is most important to me."

It was Agassi's fifth title of the year and the 24th of his career. Agassi beat top-ranked Pete Sampras on Friday.

Hawkeyes roll over Hoosiers in sweep

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team picked up its 18th win of the season Saturday night with a victory on the road in Indiana.

The Hawkeyes (18-8, 8-6 in the Big Ten) swept Indiana, 16-14, 15-11, 15-8. It was the second win over the Hoosiers for Iowa this season.

"The players did what they needed to do," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "Nobody played brilliantly and nobody played awful. They just pulled together and got the job done."

"What they showed was a lot of poise," she continued. "That is a difficult place to come in and play, especially since we just flew in that afternoon."

With just six matches remaining this season, Iowa looks to be well on its way to a berth in the NCAA tournament, where the Hawkeyes haven't been since going 22-11 in 1989.

"I think we're where we want to be," Schoenstedt said. "We should play out the rest of the season with confidence, but you can never underestimate a Big Ten opponent."

Next up for the Hawkeyes is a weekend home-stand against Michigan and Michigan State.

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION

Veteran Foreman gives Moorer lesson

Ed Schuyler
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — It was a last-second pass caught in the end zone, a bases-loaded homer in the bottom of the ninth, a buzzer-beating basket from midcourt.

All of those things were packed into the boxing glove that crashed against Michael Moorer's jaw and made George Foreman a heavyweight champion at the ripe old age of 45.

But was Foreman's dramatic 10th-round knockout victory Saturday night good for boxing? What does it say about the state of the sport, particularly the heavyweight division?

"George got lucky, but it just shows what boxing is like today," said Larry Holmes, a champion from 1978 to 1985, who will challenge Oliver McCall on Jan. 21 for the WBC heavyweight title.

"These young guys can't fight. We older people have to teach these young people that we know what we're doing," Holmes said from his home in Easton, Pa.

Associated Press

Referee Joe Cortez raises the arm of George Foreman, declaring him the winner by knockout over Michael Moorer in Las Vegas.

Foreman took advantage of a lapse of concentration by the 26-year-old Moorer in delivering the winning two-punch combination.

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

A gallery patron examines photographs by Drake Gallery, 812 S. Summit St. The exhibition continues Hokanson, now on display at the Summit Street through Dec. 4.

Photographer finds elegance in simple, mundane settings

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

"Photographs of a Small Place," the new Drake Hokanson show at the Summit Street Gallery, showcases the work of an artist with a gift for finding texture and elegance in the most mundane of settings. An ordinary slice of countryside becomes a place of dignity and profundity when captured by Hokanson's lens.

The exhibition is a study of Peterson, an unremarkable northwest Iowa hamlet which would never merit Hokanson's special attention had he not been born nearby. By distilling the flavor of this single average town into a series of landscapes, portraits and object studies, Hokanson makes a broad statement about the understated beauty of the rural Midwest.

The Peterson shown in these photos is a quiet, humble place where nothing much happens but no one seems to mind. Most of the pictures are of farmland, farm equipment or people at work. Hokanson makes this interesting by photographing things from odd angles (the complex web of pipes in "Grain Distributor, Farmers Co-op Association Elevator") or including little that say a lot about the subject (the ceramic raccoon in "Wilbur Tigges Garden, August" and the steerhorn hat rack in "Eddie Beck, Eddie's Hardware, Main Street").

Everything about Hokanson's work reflects careful consideration right down to the captions. His time-specific titles ("Eddie's Birdhouse, August," etc.) highlight the quiet sameness of each day in Peterson; they remind viewers that while the seasons may cycle, very little actually changes there. He backs this up by using occasional supplementary quotations to show how past and present writers have characterized the town. The best is a passage from the "History of Clay County" circa 1889: "Its citizens are moral and upright, its businessmen sagacious and enterprising. ... Besides many social organizations, there are two churches, and several secret societies, all ...

Hokanson's photos are a joy to look at. His expert use of light and shadow, as well as his careful geometric compositions, allow him to coax artistic images out of commonplace scenes. What's more, the crystal clarity of his photos adds a valuable sense of immediacy.

well-attended." Hokanson's photos are a joy to look at. His expert use of light and shadow, as well as his careful geometric compositions, allow him to coax artistic images out of commonplace scenes. What's more, the crystal clarity of his photos adds a valuable sense of immediacy. One can almost feel a chill autumn breeze blowing off of the field and scrub study "Elements of Landscape, South of Town, October."

Hokanson falters only in that a few of his images are just too empty to be visually pleasing. In his attempts to capture the breadth and expansiveness of the Iowa countryside, he sometimes focuses on settings so sparse that they lack any of the elements necessary to make a picture interesting. It's a calculated gamble predicated on the hope that the photos' "simple dignity" will carry them, and it doesn't always pay off. "Burgeson Farm, October," a shot which contains a little corn stubble but is mostly empty sky, is a case in point.

Fortunately, this excessive minimizing is only a problem with Hokanson's standard-size prints. "Photographs of a Small Place" also contains many 8-by-20-inch panoramas ranging from studies of late summer cottonwood trees to a gorgeous series taken along the Little Sioux River in winter. The panoramic "Peterson Township, April," showing a tiny community dwarfed by an imposing mass of gathering thunderheads, is more effective at giving the viewer a sense of scale than all Hokanson's other attempts put together.

Occasional misjudgements aside, Hokanson's choices of subject matter usually make for pictures which are visually striking as well as technically sophisticated. Overall, "Photographs of a Small Place" is not just a mature look at a vanishing way of life, it's also a beautiful art exhibition.

"Photographs of a Small Place" is on display at the Summit Street Gallery, 812 S. Summit St., through Dec. 4. Hours are 5-7 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

NORTH HALL SHOW

Austrian writer relaxes with rap

Free performance tonight showcases freedom-themed album

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Like most of his colleagues in the International Writing Program, Austrian fiction writer Josef Haslinger has recently been hard at work on a new piece; he finished a 662-page novel just last week. Unlike most, however, he'll be unwinding by performing selections from his rap album. Wild Bill's Coffee Shop in North Hall will be hosting a free performance of Haslinger's music tonight at 8.

Haslinger says writing for long periods of time is difficult, so he relaxes and has fun by making music.

"It gives me new power to work on my novels," he said.

Haslinger has recorded three albums so far, but only AMERIKA has been released. The album is a series of trombone instrumentals interspersed with German spoken-word pieces. Haslinger said the pieces tell the first-person story of a nameless European. The album's character grows up with the movie "Easy Rider," which inspires him to gain freedom by going to America. When he gets there, he drinks plenty of Budweiser and travels all over the country by car and plane.

Unfortunately, he also has all his belongings stolen and then trades the only item he has left, a laptop computer, for a flight inspector's pass, which he uses for 11 months before getting arrested.

Aside from the album's 10-minute centerpiece, most of AMERIKA seems more like traditional spoken-word tales than rap. Haslinger said the one true rap track, "Gutes altes Bud. Ein Rap," will be the highlight of tonight's show. He will be translating sections of the album into English for his performance.

Haslinger feels the central theme

"In other countries, a man who is chained up still considers himself free because he can think whatever he wants. In America, freedom must exist in movement, where one must be able to go wherever he wants in order to be free."

Josef Haslinger, International Writing Program member, about his album AMERIKA of AMERIKA is freedom. "Despite all the incidents the character must endure, he is still having fun because he is free," Haslinger said. "In other countries, a man who is chained up still considers himself free because he can think whatever he wants. In America, however, freedom must exist in movement, where one must be able to go wherever he wants in order to be free." No matter what happens to the man in AMERIKA, he is still free because no one is controlling the way he thinks, Haslinger said.

A fiction writer and essayist, Haslinger was invited by the American Embassy in Vienna, Austria, to be the first Austrian writer in the International Writing Program for one semester.

He holds a doctoral degree from the University of Vienna and has written two novellas and a collection of short stories (all in German), as well as numerous essays in German and English.

Haslinger is also a co-founder of the Austrian anti-racist movement SOS-Mitmenschen, or "SOS-Fellow Human-Being," in 1992. He has played a large role in battling the racist movement in Austria, a result of thousands of Central European refugees flooding into Austria because of the fall of the Iron Curtain.

"The co-founders of SOS-Mitmenschen felt as though Austria's critical voices were being choked in a stranglehold," he said in an essay regarding the group's creation.

Haslinger has spent many years writing for magazines and newspapers, but his greatest joy is in creative writing, he said.

"As a writer, you can work long on one idea," he said. "In (magazines and other journalistic types of writing), you must keep evolving in order to keep up with the rest."

Josef Haslinger will perform tonight at 8 at Wild Bill's Coffee Shop in North Hall. Admission to the show is free.
