Branstad blazes to victory

Mick Klemesrud and Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

An explosion of cheer greeted the announcement that Terry Branstad would begin his 13th year as governor, and Branstad called Democratic challenger Bonnie Campbell "the stiffest competition" he's encountered.

What was predicted to be a horse race turned into a relatively easy victory for Branstad, who captured 57 percent compared to Campbell's 42 percent when 90 percent of the votes were counted.

that I have received, the strong vote of confidence that we've received tonight," Branstad said. "As governor I am very honored and very proud to have this unique opportunity to serve a fourth and final term for the people of this state."

Winning a fourth term is unprecedented in Iowa history, and Branstad's win makes him one of the longest office-holding governors in the country.

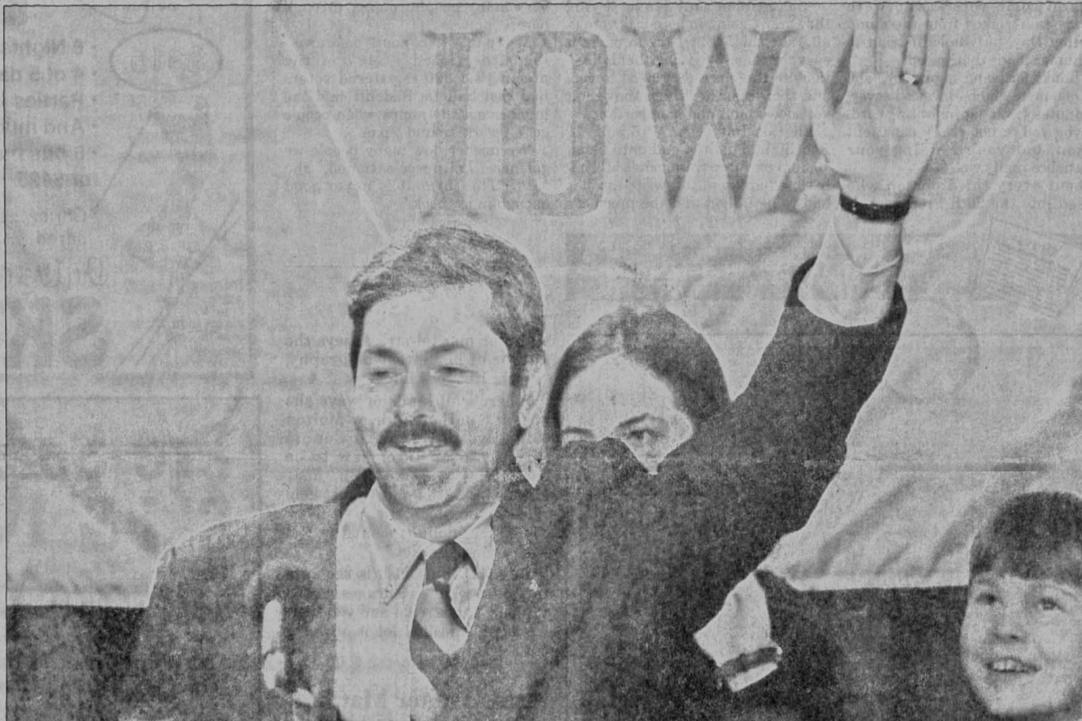

"We did it against the odds, against the anti-incumbent trend, against the pundits and against the stiffest competition we have ever seen," Branstad said.

His victory speech was routinely interrupted by the more than 700 cheering Republicans in attendance at the reception in the Des Moines Marriott Hotel.

"I want to acknowledge my opponent Bonnie Campbell, who fought a tough race," Branstad said. "I want to thank her for having the decency to call me tonight and to congratulate me and to wish me well."

He said he intends to follow through on his campaign promises to cut income taxes and give Iowa families more money to spend.

"We intend to reinstate the death penalty to make our neighborhoods safer for our kids," Branstad said.

Efficient and effective schools and government are priorities for the next four years, he said.

"I want to lead Iowa to the best day in our state's history," Branstad said.

An Associated Press exit poll declared Branstad had 60 percent of voter support and voters were unconvinced that 12 years in office is too long to serve.

Although Branstad won statewide, Campbell triumphed in Johnson County with 59 percent compared to Branstad's 38 percent.

GOP nets electoral windfall

John King

Resurgent Republicans sought to take control of Congress for the first time in 40 years Tuesday, laying claim to the Senate and making major headway in the House. The GOP captured a string of governorships, too, in midterm elections shaped by profound discontent with Democratic rule.

Among the wide swath of victims were Mario Cuomo of New York and Ann Richards of Texas — governors who fell to voters' persistent misgivings about President Clinton and Democratic liberalism. Richards lost to one son of former President George Bush. Another son, Jeb Bush, lost a tight race to Democrat Lawton Chiles in Florida.

Bob Dole, in line to be majority leader of a Republican Senate, cast the results as a "vote of no confidence in the Clinton agenda."

GOP Chairman Haley Barbour said voters were sending Clinton a booming message: "Government is too big for its britches."

A projection by Voter News Service, based on voter surveys and returns from key precincts, said Republicans had better than 90 percent odds of capturing the House. Voter News Services is a partnership of the Associated Press and four television networks.

Republicans haven't controlled both chambers of Congress since 1954. And they won the races for governors in at least seven of the eight most populous states — more bad news for Clinton when he seeks re-election in two years.

The GOP needed to gain seven seats for Senate control, and they had eight after taking Democratic seats in Arizona, Ohio, Michigan, Maine, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and two in Tennessee.

That would be one more than enough for a GOP majority as long as Republicans held all their seats on Tuesday's ballot. By late evening they were safe everywhere but Minnesota, where Republican Rod Grams was in a close race. In Washington, GOP Sen. Slade Gorton was leading.

The night's marquee race was in Virginia, where Sen. Charles Robb

The exact student voter turnout wasn't known Tuesday night after election results were tallied, but many students cited the inconvenience of registering as one of the reasons for not showing up at the polls. Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett said student voting figures may be available today. "We don't really know yet, but (student turnout is) always terrible," Slockett said. "I hope we made

The Republican sweep rolled over Democratic candidate Glen Winekauf Tuesday night when he lost to Iowa Republican Rep. Jim Leach in the U.S. 1st District House election.

Districtwide, with 95 percent of the precincts reporting, Leach had 62 percent of the votes and Winekauf held 39 percent.

In Johnson County, the race was tighter, with Leach carrying 51 percent of the votes and Winekauf receiving 46 percent.

Precinct chief elects to spend day with voters

Kirsten Scharnberg
The Daily Iowan

UI football head coach Hayden Fry and Disney staple Mickey Mouse may not spend a cent on the campaign trail, but both always pull in a few votes for president and governor, said Shari Radcliff, chairwoman for the 20th Precinct voting site, the Senior Citizen Center, 28 S. Linn St.

DAY IN THE LIFE

A ballot-counting machine tallies most votes, but workers must tally write-in votes manually. People waste their votes when they use the blank write-in space to vote for candidates who don't stand a chance of winning, Radcliff said.

"I don't mind tallying up the write-in votes — that's part of the voting process — but my pet peeve is when people write in Mickey Mouse or Hayden Fry," she said. "That is just making a mockery of the election process as far as I'm concerned."

Despite Fry's popularity during the years when the UI football team wins games, famous Disney cartoon characters still garner the largest number of write-in votes, Radcliff said.

"I don't know what it is about them, but the Disney characters are always voted for," she said.

This year's Election Day was uneventful in comparison to the 13 elections Radcliff has worked in previous years.

"One year there was a battle over the abortion issue and the two candidates had opposing views," she said. "Someone painted a slogan for their cause all over the front sidewalk. It had to be covered up by tape because it's against the law to campaign within a certain area around a voting site."

A diverse group of student voters went to the Senior Citizen Center Tuesday.

"I like to do this because I enjoy looking at all the people," Radcliff said.

Everyone who walked in the door was greeted cheerfully by Radcliff, who asked, "Are you ready to vote?" Annoyance flickered across the faces of some voters who were already rain-soaked from the damp Election Day, but Radcliff tried to use humor to lift their mood.

"Thanks for being so patient," she told one man who had waited several minutes to fill out his voting card. "Maybe you're not really a patient person, but you're hiding your impatience really well."

About every third person who walked into the 20th Precinct voting site was sent to another polling place. Voters may only cast their ballots in the precinct in which they live, and Radcliff said some people get angry and frustrated with this policy.

"Sometimes they leave saying they aren't going to bother to vote at all," she said. "But I try to make it easy for them by giving them directions to the place they need to vote and then reassure them that their vote does count and is important."

Election Day began at 6 a.m. for Radcliff and did not end until about 10:30 p.m. After voting sites officially closed at 9 p.m., all write-in votes had to be tallied and the precinct's results and ballots had to be delivered to the Johnson County Auditor's Office.

"It gets to be long day, but I do it because I enjoy it," she said. "It's only tiresome when there aren't very many people coming through here."

At 3 p.m. — six hours before voting sites closed — 187 of the precinct's 1,300 registered voters had cast ballots. Radcliff said the number usually jumps when people get off work around 5 p.m.

"No matter how many people we get here, I'm never satisfied," she said. "The turnout is never good enough in my book."

Director to convert Marilyn Monroe's death site into museum

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The next project by Michael Ritchie, director of such movies as "The Candidate" and "Fletch," will be making a museum out of the house where Marilyn Monroe died.

"I'm very much a preservationist," said Ritchie, who bought the secluded four-bedroom home in September for a price he wouldn't disclose. "It is an important piece of Hollywood history."

In a telephone interview Tuesday from New York, Ritchie said he couldn't elaborate yet on his plans to open the house to the public. He denied a report that he would probably demolish the house to build a home.

"Marilyn fans should rest easy," he said.

Monroe's nude body was found in the bedroom in 1962. The coroner's office ruled her death was probably suicide, caused by an overdose of sleeping pills. She was 36.

In addition to "The Candidate," starring Robert Redford, and "Fletch," starring Chevy Chase, Ritchie also directed Eddie Murphy in "The Golden Child."

"Kenneth assured me that we could create a strong character out of Elizabeth. He showed me only a structure of the role at first, and I accepted in a leap of faith," she said in a recent interview. "He wanted to make the love story a greater part of the overall piece, and he kept his word."

The 27-year-old actress has been looking for roles that depart from the delicate image she creat-

"I have been turning down a lot of offers to play ingenues because I would rather start playing women," Carter said. "What I've done in the last 18 months has really helped."

Diana copes with pressure by unleashing royal fits of anger

NEW YORK (AP) — Screaming, kicking and pounding the bed with a tennis racket are part of Princess Diana's way of dealing with her marital stress, says the author of her latest biography, "Diana: Her New Life."

"There's all kinds of ways she does it," author Andrew Morton told "Eye to Eye With Connie Chung" in an interview to be broadcast Thursday. "She does kickboxing with a guy to just help release the anger that she feels. She'll occasionally beat the bed with a tennis racket."

He said Diana also is seeing a therapist who "encourages people to shout and scream and yell their heads off and just let it all hang out."

Actor Walter Matthau proves himself not quite so 'odd'

WETUMPKA, Ala. (AP) — Walter Matthau, the curmudgeonly Oscar Madison in "The Odd Couple," is more like courteous Felix Unger in real life.

Paul Littlejohn, a production worker on the set of "The Grass Harp," said he got a helping hand from Matthau when he needed to call home Saturday to say he would be late.

Matthau loaned Littlejohn his telephone and passed along his best wishes to his family.

"He couldn't be a nicer, more easygoing guy," Littlejohn said.

"The Grass Harp" is based on a Truman Capote story about his youth in Monroeville.

Jack Lemmon, Matthau's costar in "The Odd Couple," has a cameo role in the film. Also appearing are Sissy Spacek, Mary Steenburgen and Roddy McDowall.

With a grin, Democratic Senate incumbent Robert Dvorsky thanked supporters, giving them handshakes and pats on the back after soundly defeating Republican Rosie Dalton by more than 2,000 votes Tuesday night.

Dvorsky won the support of 60 percent of the Senate's 25th District voters and exuberant well-wishers swarmed around Dvorsky as he walked into the victory party at RT Grunts, 826 S. Clinton St.

"I'm obviously happy about the election results," he said in an interview outside the bar. "I felt good coming into it, and I feel good about it now."

The competition was stiff throughout the campaign, but Dvorsky said his knowledge of the issues helped him capture the victory.

"I did what I wanted to do, and I think people took a more in-depth look at the candidates," he said. "Rosie (Dalton) ran a pretty tough campaign. She went door-knocking. We had nine forums that really got the issues out there. I am in-tune a little more than she is."

With the election over, Dvorsky said he is looking forward to his ninth legislative session, where he said the budget will be the main issue.

"I've been there for eight years, so it's all kind of the same thing," Dvorsky said. "The overriding issue is the budget. We want to keep it in the black. We're going to stay with the 'budget reform' act. We need to get the resources needed for the university."

supporters gathered in Dane's garage was subdued.

"We put up a good fight," Dalton said. "(The Republican Party has) got the structure in place and there's no reason why we can't look ahead. This is just the beginning."

Despite the typically rough political waters for Republicans in Johnson County, Dalton said the results of the election were a surprise.

A few hundred votes cost Dalton the February special election and gave Dvorsky the Senate seat. On Tuesday, Dalton lost by 2,436 votes.

"I was really surprised about the results, especially with the special election being so close," she said. "I expected to win it."

Dalton was optimistic about Republican victories across the nation, especially in the U.S. Senate, where the Republican Party became the majority party.

"If we have a majority in the Senate, that will make a big difference," she said. "It will be a wonderful fiscal thing because of the majority."

Dalton said she had no immedi-

"Right now, I don't want to think about running again," she said. "I'll have to take a look a few years down the line. Tonight we're going to have some food and some champagne and I'm going to spend time with my family and friends."

Voter turnout and volunteer cooperation on Election Day were high points of her campaign, Dalton said.

DEMOCRAT PREVAILS IN RACE

Mascher scores in 46th District

Kathryn Phillips, Moira Crowley and Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Following the declaration of Democrat Mary Mascher's victory over Republican Bill Kidwell for state representative of Iowa's 46th District, the crowd of supporters at RT Grunts, 826 S. Clinton St., cheered.

Before the final results were in, Mascher said she was excited and optimistic about voter turnout.

"I've been out door-knocking this morning, and if I win the first thing I'll do is get some sleep. It's not that I'm losing sleep over the election; I just haven't been getting enough," she said.

After hearing the final results, Mascher said her hard work really paid off. She said her victory was due to her commitment to important issues.

"During the entire campaign, I focused on the issues of primary concern to Iowans, including education and health care," she said.

Cathy Kern, chairwoman of the Johnson County Democratic Committee, was always certain that Mascher would be victorious.

"I was very confident. The turnout was great — there were lots more Democrats out today," she said.

Dennis Ryan, a member of the Central Democratic Party Committee, had been on the campaign trail for several months, going door to door raising money for the Democratic Party, helping people register to vote and encouraging people to vote. Ryan was excited about Mascher's victory and the committee's hard work.

"Being in the Democratic committee is all about being a good citizen in a democracy," he said.

Meanwhile, across town in John Dane's garage at 4082 Dane Road, the crowd that had gathered to support Kidwell transformed itself from a boisterous group of well wishers to a group of sympathizers. Mascher's win had a sobering effect on all of the nearly 150 people who gathered to support Kidwell and fellow Republican Rosie Dalton, who lost her bid for the state House to Democrat Robert Dvorsky. Not even Pepsi the Campaign Dog, dressed in a white sweater with "Vote for Kidwell" buttons on it, could cheer the forlorn Kidwell.

"They're killing us," Kidwell said as he received the final election results over his cellular phone. "These numbers just can't be right."

Final numbers showed Kidwell lost by 1,685 votes. Mascher received 5,789 votes, compared to Kidwell's 4,104.

Kidwell said the campaign was exhausting, and he refused to commit to running for public office again in the near future.

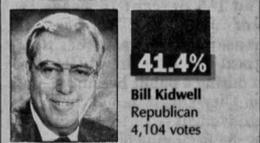

"I'll stay active in Republican politics in Johnson County, but I'm not prepared to say that I'll run for office again," he said.

Kidwell said his 45 volunteers did an exceptional job.

"I'd say that we all worked real hard and we put on a great campaign. But the voters spoke, and that's what goes," he said.

The former policeman and Iowa City resident had tears in his eyes as he addressed his supporters after the official declaration of his loss. He expressed his gratitude to his volunteers and his family.

46th House District

"Needless to say, we're not very happy," he said. "But God damn it, I've got the best campaign committee in this county."

Dorothy Kidwell echoed her husband's sentiments. She had been very confident of his chances of winning.

"Johnson County is a Democratic county, and some day the Republicans will crack it," she said. "I think Bill did a fine job; he didn't win, but he did a fine job. I'm sorry he didn't win, but our lives will go on."

LACINA AND STUTSMAN TO FILL POSTS

Democrats triumph in supervisors race

Carrie Crumbaugh
The Daily Iowan

With more than three-fourths of the total votes each, Democrats Stephen Lacina and Sally Stutsman swallowed up the two open seats on the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

"My committee did a superb job, and I really owe it all to them because they did all the work."

Steve Lacina

Incumbent Lacina received only 24 votes more than Stutsman, each receiving approximately 78 percent of the vote. Republican Ken Fearing came in a distant third just under 44 percent.

Lacina

work," Lacina said.

Stutsman said her 25 years of living and working in Johnson County contributed to her victory.

"Getting out and visiting with the people and listening helped," Stutsman said.

With a new term ahead of him, Lacina said he is looking forward to working on the economic development of Johnson County and targeting the efficient use of county taxes. "I want to make sure that when the county spends money they get everything out of it," Lacina said.

Getting familiar with the office and issues will consume the beginning of Stutsman's first term, she said.

From there she wants to help the board work together and focus on what needs to be done.

Fearing said overcoming campaign staff turnover, including having two campaigns and three finance chairpersons, proved too difficult a task.

"I had a lot to overcome and there was a lot working against me," he said. "It's been a long campaign and I'm ready to get back to work. I send my appreciation to the voters, and I'm glad to be elected and serve again."

Stutsman also said she was glad the campaign was over.

"Oh, boy, campaigning is rigorous," she said. "It will be nice to serve on the board and go from here."

Fearing said his loss will allow for more time to enjoy life.

"It's kind of nice the election is over, and now I can take a few vacations and live a normal life," Fearing said.

Lacina congratulated his opponents for the clean campaigns each ran.

"Luckily, we all came out of this as friends," Lacina said.

INCUMBENTS RETAIN POSTS

Experienced politicians prevail in state races

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — All three incumbents vaulted to wide leads in state government races Tuesday, while Tom Miller regained his old job of attorney general.

The closest of the five statewide races was the battle for secretary of state, in which Democrat Anne Pedersen and Republican Paul Pate faced off to succeed Elaine Baxter, who gave up the job after eight years to run for Congress.

With 75 percent of the precincts reporting, Pate led 51 to 47 percent.

Pedersen, 45, of Fort Madison, Iowa, is the Lee County auditor. Pate, 36, a Marion paving contractor, is serving his second term as a state senator.

Miller, a Democrat who was attorney general from 1978-1990, faced fellow Des Moines lawyer Joe Gunderson, who was making his first run for office.

With 75 percent of precincts reporting, Miller led 53 to 45 percent.

Miller bucked a Republican trend in Tuesday's elections.

"I think it's the experience, the record, the credibility I had with Iowans," Miller said.

Miller, 50, left office in 1990 to make an unsuccessful bid for his party's nomination to run for governor. Since then, he has been working in Des Moines for a Minneapolis law firm.

Gunderson, 35, is a former

Black Hawk County prosecutor.

Incumbents were leading in the other statewide races.

Auditor Richard Johnson, 59, a Republican with 16 years in office, beat Democrat Dan Gray, 41, a business consultant from Sidney. With 74 percent of precincts reporting, Johnson led 59 to 41 percent.

Secretary of Agriculture Dale Cochran, 65, an Eagle Grove Democrat serving his second four-year term, faced a challenge from Republican Tom Cory, 46, a farmer and teacher from Alleman.

Cochran led 53 to 43 percent with 74 percent of the precincts reporting.

Treasurer Michael Fitzgerald, a 42-year-old Democrat with 12 years in office, led Republican Jay Irwin, a West Des Moines attorney, 54 to 44 percent with 74 percent of precincts reporting.

Republicans in House

WASHINGTON — Republicans rolled up big gains in Southern and border states Tuesday and appeared headed toward outright control of the chamber for the first time in four decades.

The tide swept out former Ways and Means Committee chairman

Dan Rostenkowski, a 36-year veteran indicted in May on federal corruption charges. He was defeated by Republican Michael Flanagan, an unknown lawyer whose name had recently been in a trivia contest on a

Chicago radio station.

Another symbol of Democratic power, House Speaker Tom Foley was fighting for political survival as voters took out their anger over business as usual in Washington.

As returns rolled in, Republicans captured 27 previously Democratic seats, 16 of them in Southern and border states, and led in another 27 races. By contrast, Democrats managed to pick up just two GOP-held seats, in Pennsylvania and Rhode Island, and led in three others. To win control of the House, Republicans needed a 40-seat pickup.

National exit polls conducted by the Voter News Service showed that Republicans would seize control of the chamber, a goal that had eluded the party for 40 years.

The last time voters turned out a sitting speaker was before the Civil War.

PLANT CONSTRUCTION TO INCREASE COSTS

Council flooded by protest of water rate boost

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

The 115 percent increase in water rates and 75 percent increase in wastewater fees over the next two years drew little support during a public hearing at the Iowa City City Council meeting Tuesday night.

At the beginning of the hearing, City Manager Steve Atkins gave a short presentation about what the increases will pay for and why they are necessary.

The increases are due to the building of a new water plant to comply with new wastewater regulations, Atkins said. In the 1972 Clean Water Act, the federal government set strict regulations and will continue to set new regulations every three years, he said.

"The city is directly affected by the new laws and responsibilities, and that affects costs," Atkins said. "It makes good environmental sense, but it won't come without a cost."

The city last built a new water treatment plant in the late 1970s to mid-1980s and was told then that there would soon be stricter regulations, he said.

"We now need to meet new water treatment standards," Atkins said. "We're in the process of trying to clean up and provide far better drinking water. It's not just an issue of the environment but also an issue of public health."

Responsibility for enforcing the federal regulations lies with the Council, he said.

"The Council has the obligation to see that the national investment is made," Atkins said. "That will mean the costs have to be borne locally. The federal government has said that's the direction we need to go."

The new plant would be able to provide on different days different sources of water, he said. Currently, the city gets 80 percent of its water from the Iowa River. The new plant will be able to provide the city with other sources, which would allow for greater flexibility to fit demand and to provide higher quality water.

Roberta Patrick told the Council she was concerned that with her small fixed income she may not be able to cover the increased fee.

"I don't see how I can stay in my home and pay the increased water rates," she said. "I will find it extremely difficult to pay the increases you are anticipating. I have trouble paying my water bill now. The city needs to find some way to help people like me pay."

Mike Woodhouse also said he was looking for alternatives to paying the sharp increases.

"The city needs to hold a referendum for a local sales tax," he said. "So many people come to this town — 70,000 will be coming to watch the football game on Saturday. They come the night before and eat out and buy things. If we were to do this, we could get some help to pay for this."

Woodhouse said he understands why the city has to build the new plant but wants the Council to explore more options before setting the increases.

"The government told us we had to do this, and you just can't argue with them," he said. "I know it has to be done, but with a local sales tax the people wouldn't be so hard hit. Then landlords wouldn't have to raise rents and businesses wouldn't have to raise prices."

Atkins said a sales tax would provide roughly $4 million to $5 million in revenue. He called the tax a legitimate tool, although a rather weak one, as it would offset a substantial part of the costs but not all of them.

GOP seizure

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans captured control of the Senate Tuesday, toppling Democratic incumbents in Tennessee and Pennsylvania and taking away seats in all regions of the country. GOP candidates chorused support for lower taxes and less government.

Republican Oliver North lost his costly, conservative crusade in Virginia in one of the nation's most closely watched races, falling to Democratic Sen. Charles Robb.

But Sen. Jim Sasser, a Democratic committee chairman and ally of President Clinton's, fell to Republican Bill Frist, a physician and political newcomer who ran the classic anti-incumbent's campaign in a year of voter anger with the status quo.

And freshman Democrat Harris Wofford lost to 36-year-old GOP Rep. Rick Santorum in Pennsylvania.

Eight years out of power, Republicans added Democratic seats in Ohio, Maine, Oklahoma, Arizona, Michigan and a second Tennessee contest, part of an impressive sweep of nine races without incumbents on the ballot.

The restored Republican majority is virtually certain to install Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas to the powerful post of majority leader for the final two years of President Clinton's term.

In an interview with C-Span, Dole said the strong Republican tide amounted to a "vote of 'no confidence' in the Clinton agenda." He said a GOP majority would move to address voter concerns over "big government, big taxes, big regulation."

GINGRICH TO TAKE OVER AS SPEAKER

Republicans capture majority in House after four decades

Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans rolled up big gains in Southern and border states Tuesday and appeared headed toward outright control of the chamber for the first time in four decades.

The tide swept out former Ways and Means Committee chairman

Dan Rostenkowski, a 36-year veteran indicted in May on federal corruption charges. He was defeated by Republican Michael Flanagan, an unknown lawyer whose name had recently been in a trivia contest on a

Gingrich

Chicago radio station.

Another symbol of Democratic power, House Speaker Tom Foley, was fighting for political survival as voters took out their anger over business as usual in Washington.

As returns rolled in, Republicans captured 27 previously Democratic seats, 16 of them in Southern and border states, and led in another 27 races. By contrast, Democrats managed to pick up just two GOP-held seats, in Pennsylvania and Rhode Island, and led in three others. To win control of the House, Republicans needed a 40-seat pickup.

National exit polls conducted by the Voter News Service showed that Republicans would seize control of the chamber, a goal that had eluded the party for 40 years.

The last time voters turned out a sitting speaker was before the Civil War.

Foley, who has represented eastern Washington in the House for 30 years, was challenged by George Nethercutt, a GOP opponent with little experience but independent backing from interest groups like the National Rifle Association and advocates of term limits for politicians.

As results poured in from across the country, the news was mostly bad for Democrats.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., an 18-year veteran and chairman of the Intelligence Committee, was ambushed by Todd Tiahrt, a state senator who got support from gun owners and right-to-life groups.

Freshman Rep. Tom Barlow, D-Ky., was defeated by Republican Ed Whitfield, a former state representative. Another freshman Democrat, Rep. Leslie Byrne of Virginia, lost to Republican Tom Davis, a county official. And freshman Rep. Don Johnson, D-Ga., lost after being faulted in the campaign for supporting President Clinton. Rep. Jill Long, D-Ind., was ousted by GOP businessman Mark Souder, and freshman David Mann lost in Ohio.

Democrat Dick Swett of New Hampshire, who was targeted by the National Rifle Association, lost to Republican Charles Bass, a former state senator. In Texas, Rep. Bill Sarpalius, implicated in a campaign finance investigation, lost to Republican Mack Thornberry, a lawyer. Two North Carolina incumbent Democrats, Martin Lancaster and David Price, also lost.

Also falling were freshmen Herbert Klein of New Jersey and Ted Strickland of Ohio, and five-term Rep. Buddy Darden, D-Ga.

At the same time, Republicans captured 13 previously Democratic open seats — districts where no incumbent was running — in Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Tennessee.

In one Oklahoma race, state corporation commissioner J.C. Watts, a former star quarterback for the Sooners, became the second black GOP House member by taking the seat vacated by Democratic Rep. David McCurdy.

In northern Mississippi, Republicans captured the seat held for 52 years by Rep. Jamie Whitten, the first time it had been in GOP hands since Reconstruction.

"It's looking like one of the best Republican years in history," said Rep. Bill Paxon, R-N.Y., chairman of the GOP House campaign committee.

Exit polls conducted for the Associated Press and four major television networks showed a slight Republican preference when voters were asked whether they voted for a Republican or a Democrat for the House.

For decades that index has tilted sharply in the Democrats' favor; the last time the numbers were in rough balance was in the 1950s — the last time there was a GOP majority in the House. The Republican advantage was strongest in the South, a 60-40 split.

Republicans appeared to have succeeded in making the off-year election at least in part a referendum on Clinton, whose pre-election approval ratings hovered just below 50 percent. That played especially well in the South, where analysts saw a long-anticipated political realignment taking shape.

State races leave Clinton with new goal

Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With his party on the ropes, President Clinton pledged Tuesday to work closer with congressional Republicans and prevent rancorous midterm elections from putting his presidency in peril. Political reform will replace health-care reform atop his agenda, aides said.

An air of resignation crept over the White House after half the states' polls closed and aides digested the gloomy results of an election that seemed, in many cases, a referendum on Clinton's presidency.

The election results appeared to tip the White House legislative agenda on its end, forcing lobbying and campaign finance reform to the forefront. The apparent victim was health-care reform.

Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said the administration will propose only "an incremental change" in the health system because Republicans successfully used Clinton's aggressive proposal against Democratic candidates.

Citing voter discontent with Washington, Panetta said that although Clinton will be working with an unfriendly Congress, his top priority for the next two years will be political reforms "because obviously voters are speaking to that tonight."

"The pressure is going to be on the members of Congress ... to vote clearly for reforms in the way Congress does business, or they will pay one hell of a price in two years," he said.

The president was said to appear disappointed but not defeated at a gathering of party workers in the evening. He watched election returns into the night as Republicans strove toward command of the Senate, made major headway in the House and captured a string of governorships.

Aides said Clinton recognized that he will be dealing with a more conservative and more Republican Congress. "I think the president will want to heal the wounds and close the gaps as quickly as possible," press secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

DOLE MAY BECOME MAJORITY LEADER

GOP seizes control of Senate

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans captured control of the Senate Tuesday, toppling Democratic incumbents in Tennessee and Pennsylvania and taking away seats in all regions of the country. GOP candidates chorused support for lower taxes and less government.

Republican Oliver North lost his costly, conservative crusade in Virginia in one of the nation's most closely watched races, falling to Democratic Sen. Charles Robb.

But Sen. Jim Sasser, a Democratic committee chairman and ally of President Clinton's, fell to Republican Bill Frist, a physician and political newcomer who ran the classic anti-incumbent's campaign in a year of voter anger with the status quo.

And freshman Democrat Harris Wofford lost to 36-year-old GOP Rep. Rick Santorum in Pennsylvania.

Eight years out of power, Republicans added Democratic seats in Ohio, Maine, Oklahoma, Arizona, Michigan and a second Tennessee contest, part of an impressive sweep of nine races without incumbents on the ballot.

The restored Republican majority is virtually certain to install Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas to the powerful post of majority leader for the final two years of President Clinton's term.

In an interview with C-Span, he said the strong Republican tide amounted to a "vote of 'no confidence' in the Clinton agenda." He said a GOP majority would move to address voter concerns over "big government, big taxes, big regulation."

"The burden of government is now on them," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said at midnight as the scope of Democratic losses became clear. Already the impact on the administration was clear, as White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said Clinton would propose only "an incremental change" in health care next year, rather than the top-to-bottom overhaul that died earlier this year.

The new Republican majority will mean a sharp turn rightward at key committee chairmanships: Jesse Helms of North Carolina at Foreign Relations, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina at Armed Services and Orrin Hatch of Utah at Judiciary.

With one Democratic seat undecided at midnight EST, Republicans had taken away eight seats, guaranteeing a 52-48 majority at the least.

One likely early legislative proposal: a Constitutional amendment to balance the budget, atop the list of measures that GOP candidates embraced at a campaign rally held in the shadow of the Capitol in early fall.

In one bright spot for Democrats, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, the embodiment of liberal incumbency, won a sixth term handily.

In contrast, the voters installed a new crop of conservative Republicans, many of them veterans of the political wars.

Lt. Gov. Mike DeWine won a Democratic seat over Joel Hyatt in Ohio, Rep. Jim Inhofe won over Rep. Dave McCurdy in Oklahoma and Rep. Jon Kyl won over Rep. Sam Coppersmith in Arizona, while moderate Rep. Olympia Snowe defeated Rep. Tom Andrews in Maine. Actor-lawyer Fred Thompson, who claimed Vice President Al Gore's old Tennessee seat over Rep. Jim Cooper, was making his first race, as was Frist. Veteran GOP campaign aide Spencer Abraham defeated Rep. Bob Carr for a Michigan seat that had been in Democratic hands.

Former Republican Gov. John Ashcroft, defeating Rep. Alan Wheat, held a GOP seat in Missouri; Rep. Craig Thomas overcame Gov. Mike Sullivan to do likewise in Wyoming; Rep. Rod Grams triumphed over former legislator Ann Wynn in Minnesota.

Republican challengers gathered in Washington in early fall to pledge support for a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, lower taxes for families and the elderly, tougher crime legislation and other measures.

One race remained unsettled as the evening wore on:

Sen. Dianne Feinstein battled GOP Rep. Michael Huffington, who spent more than $25 million of his own money, in a California matchup.

In Virginia's costly, nasty race North, a former White House aide whose Iran-Contra convictions were overturned on appeal, spent $18 million in his bid to join the Congress he once scorned.

Robb had to overcome voter unhappiness with his personal life — which included an acknowledgment that he had received a massage in a hotel room from a woman other than his wife. "Thank you from the bottom of my heart," he told supporters in a victory speech.

Crime, term-limit measures approved

Arlene Levinson
Associated Press

Voters unleashed their famously foul mood Tuesday, cracking down on crime and long-term politicians and sticking to their guns in Milwaukee.

Voters in Maine, Nebraska, Nevada and the District of Columbia approved congressional term limits, Nebraskans for the second time in two years.

By a 4-to-1 landslide, Georgia voters approved the nation's toughest sentencing law, mandating life in prison for a second violent felony. California voters gave firm approval to a law already on the books, ordering 25 years to life for three-time serious felons. Passage makes it virtually impossible for lawmakers to alter the law without another ballot referendum.

And Californians pondered the explosive measure to deny illegal immigrants schooling, social services and all but emergency medical care.

Floridians turned down a proposal to allow up to 47 casinos. The rejection was almost 2-to-1 despite the $16.7 million campaign by casino proponents, the most expensive campaign in state history.

Rhode Island voters said "no" to proposals to permit casinos in four cities and towns, including the state capital, Providence, and appeared close to rejecting a proposal for a fifth in West Greenwich, which the Narragansett Indians hoped to build. The Narragansetts may still build a casino without voter approval, but it would have to be on their own land in Charlestown, 25 miles away.

State law now requires any casino proposal to be put to local and statewide vote. Rhode Islanders passed a separate ballot question Tuesday, which will add the law to the state constitution so the General Assembly cannot alter it, by 68 percent to 32 percent.

Most of South Carolina's popular video poker games may continue pouring out cash. Voters in all but nine of the state's 46 counties appeared ready to keep the status quo, rejecting a ballot proposal to stop the payouts.

"It was a common sense vote," said John Reyelt, owner of The Gold Rush Saloon in Myrtle Beach.

Term limits, the preferred remedy for the '90s voter sick of longtime incumbents, were on ballots in Alaska, Colorado, Idaho, Maine, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Nevada, Utah, the District of Columbia and several cities and counties.

Nebraskans' enthusiasm for term limits matched their ardor for Republican U.S. Rep. Doug Bereuter. He won a ninth term despite the ballot measure's limit of three consecutive terms for future members of Congress.

Nebraskans had to tackle the issue for a second time because the required number of petition signatures was miscalculated when term limits were approved in 1992.

Washington, D.C., voters approved term limits for mayor, city council and school board.

California's Proposition 187, which would require police, health and school officials to report suspected illegal aliens, was seen by many as a referendum on American attitudes toward immigrants. It ignited hot debate and protests, even in Mexico City. Early returns Tuesday evening showed the measure too close to call.

But Californians appeared ready to reject a state-run health insurance system by a margin of more than 2-1 according to preliminary exit polling around the state.

The poll, conducted by Voter News Service for The Associated Press and four television networks, was reinforced by early returns.

Texas Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush tells members of the media he'll be back in a few minutes because he forgot to bring his voter registration card to the polls Tuesday morning in Dallas. Bush was assured he could vote without the card as long as his name was on the list.

One Bush wins in Texas, the other loses in Florida

Brent Kallestad
Associated Press

The Bush brothers won one and lost one in the governors' sweepstakes Tuesday, with George W. Bush defeating Democrat Ann Richards in Texas and Jeb Bush losing to Democrat Lawton Chiles in Florida.

In Texas, George W. Bush beat the popular incumbent by a margin of 54 percent to 45 percent, while in Florida, Chiles edged the younger brother in the closest governor's race in the state's history.

George W. Bush, the 48-year-old managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, succeeded in his second try for office; he previously lost a 1978 election for Congress.

He advised the presidential campaigns of his father, George Bush, and apparently learned one lesson well. Bill Clinton talked about change in his 1992 victory over the elder Bush, and the son mentioned the word in every speech in his gubernatorial run.

One of his favorite lines was, "If you like things the way they are, vote for her. If you want change, vote for me."

He advocated tougher penalties for juvenile criminals, no mandatory early release of convicted felons, no parole for sex offenders, abolition of the Texas Education Agency and creation of "home rule education districts" to give parents, teachers and local communities more control.

An exit poll showed that George W. Bush scored a bull's eye with his focus on crime, and Richards received little credit for the state's economic recovery.

It also showed that Richards didn't get much of a bounce from her endorsement last week by Dallas billionaire Ross Perot, who is viewed unfavorably by more than half of Texans.

Slightly more than half of those who said they had backed Perot's 1992 independent presidential bid voted for George W. Bush on Tuesday.

George W. Bush also enjoyed the support of more men than did Richards, and he won the backing of his father's base of support. The elder Bush carried Texas two years ago in his race against Clinton.

Only the second Republican to be elected Texas governor since Reconstruction, George W. Bush said his win "will give me a chance to have some political capital ... to make necessary changes for Texas."

Chiles, who has never lost an election, had taunted his 41-year-old Republican challenger during the campaign for getting help from "momma and daddy," but Jeb Bush remained unflappable on that issue.

"I'm proud to be the son of George and Barbara Bush," Jeb Bush said at political rallies as his parents watched proudly.

Jeb Bush started earlier than any of his Republican opponents in a crowded field, touring the state and building a network for more than a year. A former state commerce secretary, he surged in the polls during the fall campaign and looked like he might pull away.

But Chiles, a 37-year veteran of Florida politics, would have none of it, saying, "I don't want to peak too early."

Robb clobbers North in Virginia elections

Anne Gearan
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Sen. Charles Robb won a battle of tarnished heroes Tuesday, defeating Oliver North in a Senate race that turned Virginia's tradition of political gentility on its head.

With 56 percent of precincts counted, Robb, the Democratic incumbent, had 45 percent of the votes to 40 percent for the Republican North. Independent Marshall Coleman trailed with 15 percent.

Robb, scarred by his own alleged extramarital affairs and parties with drug figures, had battled fiercely against North, who seven years ago stood before Congress and admitted to lying about his role in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Appropriately enough, after their toe-to-toe campaign, both men used boxing as an analogy in election-night speeches to their supporters.

The 55-year-old Robb, son-in-law of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, likened himself to boxing's newest — and oldest — heavyweight champion. "George Foreman is indeed an inspiration," he said.

North, conceding defeat, broadly hinted that his political career is not over.

"You may recall in my much younger days at Annapolis that I was a boxing champion," he said. "What you may not remember is that the first time I tried, I was defeated in the quarterfinal. And the second time, I lost in the semifinal. But the third time, I won."

Politics had always been a civil exercise in Virginia since its favorite sons, George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, helped establish democratic government in America.

But the discredited figures of North and Robb and their nasty, personal and expensive political duel left Virginians questioning what the process had wrought.

Nearly four of every 10 voters surveyed in a statewide exit poll said they felt neither Robb nor North has the honesty or integrity to serve in the Senate. A majority said Robb and North had waged a sleazy campaign.

The poll was conducted by Voter News Service, a cooperative of the Associated Press and the four major television networks.

North spent $18 million in his bid to join the Congress he once scorned. He mobilized a corps of conservative Christians and voters whose anger at the government approached critical mass.

Robb, the straight-arrow former governor once seen as presidential material, had fought not just for reelection but to reclaim his tattered image.

Coleman, a Republican-turned-independent, ran as the protégé of the courtly Sen. John Warner, a GOP moderate. Coleman's candidacy angered many Virginia Republicans.

North energized his constituents early, invoking Reagan-era conservatism and old-time religion as he crisscrossed Virginia in a recreational vehicle he had christened "Rolling Thunder." He seized the GOP nomination from a party insider and rocked the state's staid political establishment.

From the outset, he hammered away at Robb's allegiance to the liberal initiatives of President Clinton, noting that in 1993 Robb voted in support of Clinton's proposals 95 percent of the time.

While North spent the summer traveling Virginia's back roads building a solid rural coalition and eroding the 13-point lead Robb held in early July, Robb remained in Washington claiming important Senate business was at stake.

By September, North had pulled even with Robb. And by October, North held a slight but statistically insignificant lead. Only then did Robb take the offensive, airing ads attacking North's truthfulness.

COWLINGS RELIEVED

Inquiry of Simpson friend halted

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Al "A.C. Cowlings won't be charged with crime for driving the white Bronco in which O.J. Simpson fled the day he was supposed to turn himself in.

"We can't prove the case," District Attorney Gil Garcetti announced Tuesday. He said the investigation is closed.

Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden was reassigned from the Cowlings case to the Simpson murder case, drawing immediate criticism from the Simpson defense in part because Darden is black.

"We have said that the (Cowlings) investigation was a charade," said defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr., who also is black. "Now all of a sudden he shows up over here, now that we have eight African-Americans (on the jury). ... We are concerned about it."

In court Tuesday, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito relaxed the rules for the 12 sworn-in jurors, who have been living under a media blackout since mid-September. The search also began for 15 alternate jurors.

Simpson was in the courtroom to face the group of roughly 100 people from which the alternates may be picked.

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith's family offered apologies to the black community Tuesday for her false claim that a black man had abducted her two sons.

"We apologize to all of the black citizens in Union and everywhere," said Scotty Vaughan, Smith's brother. "I'm thankful especially to many of my black friends who called me to comfort me and tell me they still loved me. It was just a terrible misfortune that all this happened," he added.

For nine days after her children vanished Oct. 25, Smith had claimed a black carjacker had driven off with them. When the car was found in a lake and she was charged with murder, many blacks were angry and hurt as well as sad.

MILWAUKEE — A church van punctured its gas tank on a piece of road debris and burst into flames Tuesday, killing five of the minister's children and critically injuring a sixth.

The minister and his wife also were injured.

The van ran over a 5-by-18-inch hollow piece of steel bracketing for holding mud flaps on trucks, Sheriff's Sgt. David Iushewitz said. The debris weighed 20 to 35 pounds, Lt. Esther Moore said.

Walter Pahl, who was driving on an overpass near Interstate 94 at the time of the accident, said he heard four or five explosions.

"I saw smoke and pulled over. A lot of cars screamed to a halt. People were running around trying to get to the van. There was no way to get to it. Flames were just unbelievable," Pahl said.

Four boys and a girl, ages 6 weeks to 11 years, were trapped from the burning van and killed, Iushewitz said.

Their parents, Dwayne "Scott" Willis, a 47-year-old minister in Chicago, and his 47-year-old wife, Janet, were hospitalized in stable condition. Their 13-year-old son suffered third-degree burns over 40 percent of his body and was in Al Cowlings, left, stands in a Los Angeles courtroom July 15 with his attorney Donald Re. Los Angeles District Attorney Gil Garcetti announced Tuesday that his office had insufficient evidence to prosecute Cowlings for the famous low-speed chase of O.J. Simpson on the day of Simpson's arrest.

A former Army sergeant who was questioned said he heard a portion of the 911 tape in which Simpson's ex-wife pleaded for police help when Simpson broke through her door in 1993.

"Something was going on in the house that shouldn't have been going on," the man said. "If he was beating her or hitting her, there was a lot more to it."

Simpson quickly became agitated at the man's comments and said to Cochran, "I wasn't beating her."

Simpson is charged in the June 12 stabbing deaths of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Opening statements are expected in January after a hearing on the admissibility of DNA test results.

Simpson was arrested June 17 after a police pursuit in which Cowlings' Ford Bronco crept along Southern California freeways and streets to the driveway of Simpson's mansion.

Late Monday, Garcetti made the final decision not to charge Cowlings, a former football player and a close friend of Simpson's. On Tuesday, the district attorney said the investigation is over.

Cowlings is "happy that the investigation is behind him," said his lawyer, Donald Re. Cowlings, who has never spoken publicly about the getaway, again refused comment Tuesday.

Simpson has said he wasn't trying to flee police the day he and Cowlings slipped away and instead was trying to get to his ex-wife's grave.

Ito's new jury rules allow the panel to watch most entertainment programs and sporting events on television, and they may also rent videos.

But he warned them to avoid news and talk shows and anything Simpson-related. Newspapers with all Simpson references cut out will be delivered to jurors' homes, he said.

"I love you, Daddy," were 14-year-old Matilda Kaye Crabtree's last words to her father.

No charges were brought against 53-year-old Robert Crabtree. Ouachita Parish Chief Deputy Richard Fewell said the case would be turned over to the district attorney as a matter of routine.

"It's sad," Fewell said. "This is something every kid has done. I don't know how the father is going to live with it."

Matilda Crabtree and a friend, whose identity was not released, were supposed to be spending Sat-healing process. I think the gesture was well-needed and well-taken," said funeral home owner William Free III, who is black.

Sheriff Howard Wells said of the apology, "I believe it'll go a long way into easing the tension and helping us to get back to a state of normal function in the county. I hope that it satisfies everyone."

The children's father, David Smith, was too "torn up" to appeal publicly, his father, Charles David Smith, said at a news conference. Smith said through sobs, "He wants his children back. That can't happen."

Susan Smith, 23, is charged with rolling her car into a lake with her children — 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex — buckled into their safety seats. She is currently in isolation at a prison.

Investigators said a possible motive was that Smith had recently broken up with a boyfriend who didn't want a ready-made family. She had filed for divorce in September.

VAN EXPLODES ON INTERSTATE

5 children killed in blaze sparked by highway litter

John Hartzell
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — A church van punctured its gas tank on a piece of road debris and burst into flames Tuesday, killing five of the minister's children and critically injuring a sixth.

The minister and his wife also were injured.

The van ran over a 5-by-18-inch hollow piece of steel bracketing for holding mud flaps on trucks, Sheriff's Sgt. David Lushewitz said. The debris weighed 20 to 35 pounds, Lt. Esther Moore said.

Walter Pahl, who was driving on an overpass near Interstate 94 at the time of the accident, said he heard four or five explosions.

"I saw smoke and pulled over. A lot of cars screeched to a halt. People were running around trying to get to the van. There was no way to get to it. Flames were just unbelievable," Pahl said.

extremely critical condition, Lushewitz said.

The morning accident occurred one day after and about 20 miles from where another fatal Interstate 94 crash involving children occurred. A 7-year-old boy died after a five-vehicle accident sent metal piping for scaffolding ripping through a school bus. A dozen other children and three adults also were injured Monday.

Dwayne and Janet Willis had taken six of their nine children to Wisconsin from their home in Chicago because they lived upstairs from their church, Parkwood Baptist Church, which was being used as a polling place, Chicago election Judge Kathleen Mannix said.

The van, a 1994 Plymouth Voyager, was registered to the church. Dwayne Willis has been pastor for three to four years, Mannix said.

"They were very good people, never a bad act or word," said Christine Kerr, 42, a neighbor of the Willises. "My son got hurt, and the children made get well cards and sent them."

Tim Hurd, a spokesman for the National Highway Transportation Safety Board in Washington, said he didn't know whether there had been any similar accidents involving Voyagers.

MAKING INFORMED DECISIONS

Community resources

In light of the local Election Day, it is important to not only exercise our right to vote but to remember how, as a college town, our voting and community action affect Iowa City residents who will continue to live here and raise their families after we have gone. It is a valid criticism that college students who register to vote in Johnson County are often not as informed as those voters who are more concerned with candidates in their own district. Some would definitely argue this by acknowledging their status as property taxpayers, as well as by their investment in local business and public-school districts. Residents of Iowa City have a vested interest in the local community that seemingly is lacking in temporary college residents.

However, college students who vote in Johnson County would argue that they have the right to vote here. Furthermore, many students do reside in Iowa City for much longer than it takes to obtain a degree because of the appealing community that Iowa City offers. The question for many then becomes whether it is more important to vote in Johnson County or to not vote at all. The likely solution for all voters to implement would be to make more informed decisions at the polls.

Local businesspeople who have helped make Iowa City the unique place that it is are left to compete against those who are here to make a fast buck and move on.

As college students and temporary residents of Iowa City, we are responsible for making better decisions about how we vote, how we utilize community resources and how to best use our consumer dollars. A great number of students choose Iowa City not only because of its educational and community resources but because of its diversity. As consumers, we are targeted by many outside sources that detract dollars from the local economy and take away valuable resources from our community.

For example, every year the Union allows outside traveling salespeople to sell goods to the college community. Most students don't realize that many of these goods are available through local businesspeople, who are able to support the local economy better than these traveling entrepreneurs who take the revenue back to their own communities out of state. It is important for the college community to recognize that consumer dollars have no beneficial impact on the Iowa City community when spent this way. Local businesspeople who have helped make Iowa City the unique place that it is are left to compete against those who are here to make a fast buck and move on.

While as college students we are viewed by the community as temporary residents, making better choices and informed decisions at the polls can greater consolidate Iowa City residents with students' ideas about what is best for the community. We all have the freedom to vote, to make lifestyle choices and to make consumer decisions. It is important, however, to make sure they are educated decisions.

DJALAL "D.J." ARBABHA

America is a conservative nation, not liberal

Under the self-interest theory of human behavior, people do what is in their best interest. Therefore, we as humans will do what benefits us the most by weighing the costs and benefits of an action. The same theory that explains much of human behavior can also explain our political behavior.

If this theory were true, however, most Americans would have to be liberals. Americans enjoy few of the economic rights enjoyed by the citizens of most nations in Western Europe. In the United States there is no right to a free and equal education, no right to free child care for working parents, no right to free health and mental care for all citizens and no right of access to a comprehensive welfare system. Why have Americans allowed this economic inequality to continue?

Instead of demanding fundamental change, Americans have allowed a status quo to continue, which undoubtedly hurts them. Why are Americans not protecting their self-interests? I have been able to gather a few reasons that may explain why Americans do not have political views which can protect and advance their self-interest.

The first reason is the political structure. The political system is structurally designed to be conservative. For instance, in the U.S. Senate, conservative states with smaller populations, such as Iowa and Wyoming, are as equally represented as larger and more liberal states. Furthermore, there are divisions of political responsibility not only among the states and the federal government, but there are also further divisions of responsibility at each level of government. With so many levels of government, the electorate cannot focus its whole energy or attention on any one level of government at a time.

The second reason is the lack of political education, which is exasperated by the media. The complexity of the American governmental structure has the further effect of making itself incomprehensible to those who do not have a strong background in politics and history. An uninformed electorate is an electorate that can be manipulated by powerful forces in society, as evidenced by the wide sways in public opinion polls before election days.

The media contribute to this problem by not giving political news the continuous and in-depth analysis it deserves. In Western Europe, the media are extremely sophisticated in their coverage of politics. In Europe, the media could not care less whether a candidate has committed adultery. There the media concentrate on policy, not personality. For this reason, the electorate can make a wiser choice based on matters that count, not matters that merely satisfy the electorate's prurient interest.

The third reason is the role religion plays in shaping the political behavior of individuals. The United States is a far more religious nation than most Western European nations. People in this country believe in the existence of a compassionate God; many Europeans have given up on this notion. They rely on their governments to provide a compassionate living environment here in this world without having to wait until death to enjoy such a lifestyle. Belief in God has the effect of lowering people's expectations in what human institutions can and need to do.

Religious beliefs also foster conservative social views. Religious people often vote for candidates who support their conservative social views without regard for the candidates' views on economic issues. Thus, we have the anomaly of economically disadvantaged individuals who support political candidates who have conservative social and economic views — economic views that have the potential of harming those same individuals.

The fourth reason is the role race plays in shaping people's political behavior. It is the view of many experts on race that race is probably one of the main reasons why Americans have not fully embraced a comprehensive welfare system as have nations in Europe. The protectors of the status quo have been able to thwart any major efforts at reform by hinting subtly (though not always — recall Jesse Helms' TV commercials) that major social reforms will help only African-Americans and other ethnic minorities.

This race-centered divide and conquer strategy, experts point out, is less likely to occur in racially homogeneous nations like those of Western Europe. In this country we can clearly witness the role race has played in shaping the political cultures of different states. For instance, states such as Wisconsin and Minnesota have strong social and educational programs. It is not coincidental that those states have a small minority population. On the other hand, states in the South often have dismal social and educational programs. It is not coincidental that those states have a large minority population. It is an undeniable fact that race is used as a weapon by those who are against social progress.

Many Americans are conservative and support conservative candidates even though it is directly against their self-interests. Instead of protecting their self-interests, many Americans end up protecting the interests of others. It is only through simplifying the political process, increasing people's political awareness and taking religion and race out of politics that a measure of sanity can be brought back into the system.

TERI BOSTIAN

Advisory: Let the Keds' buyer beware

Keds have enjoyed a reputation for inexpensive common-sense durability for several generations. My oldest aunt bopped around in canvas Keds when she wore light angora sweaters and Capri pants; with her poodle skirts she wore saddle shoes. My mom slopped around in them in the late '60s, mostly for communal gardening and running errands on Saturday mornings. They were something less casual than slippers or bare feet but easier to walk in than clunky wedges. When I started wearing them, I was young enough to believe they had something to do with my ability to move — no Keds, no walk. I even learned to say Keds long before I knew there was a generic term like "shoes."

My grandmother used to wash my Keds and stuff them with socks before leaving them outside in the sun to dry. When I put them on the next morning, they were always still a little damp. The rubber soles would squeak cleanly on the kitchen floor, and the whiteness of the canvas would catch my eyes all day as I walked kicking my toes out in front of me.

We never put our Keds in the dryer. Grandma said the heat would loosen the rubber trim. As an impatient teen-ager, I found out she was right. As far as Keds went, the dryer was an all-around bad idea. As the dryer tumbled the shoes, thumping them against the drum, the socks stuffed in the toes loosened and fell out, and the Keds would come out curled up, looking like the feet of the shriveled Wicked Witch of the East. The dryer also cemented in dirt and grass stains which hadn't quite come out in the wash, leaving creases of dingy gray on the canvas to contrast with the bleached white laces.

Two pairs of Keds ago, my new purchase included attached washing instructions outlining the best care techniques. One could bleach them every time, but the chemicals would eat the rubber. One could put them in the dryer, but "for best results, place socks in the toes and leave in the sun to dry."

The very last pair I bought, after weeks of shopping around futilely for a pair under $21, did not have those same instructions attached by a thin, plastic string. The shoes themselves had care instructions sewn into them, small white flip tags like those on the insides of underwear. These instructions suggested tumble drying; not a word was printed about air drying or the hint about stuffed socks as toe shapers.

Had I noticed before putting them on three days later for the first day of classes, I would have given more consideration to many of the chintzier pairs I'd passed up — the $3 cheapos typical of stores like Target or the $10 No Excuses pair that made me think of Donna Rice. I would have walked around longer in the Bass canvas style, wondering if I could live with the narrower fit.

I'd like to think I could resist paying premium price for a pair of white summer kickoffs made by a company who wanted to dupe its faithful customers. This is a company already charging us twice the average retail cost of canvas-style sneakers, a company no longer interested in reputation other than as a sales strategy, a company bent on taking advantage of the grandmothers, mothers and daughters whose feet had become almost genetically accustomed to the fit of Keds' most popular style of shoe.

In the fall issue of the Georgia Review, David Bosworth meditates on the lost ground of our freedom, where "as political rights (are) guaranteed and religious values fade, possessions themselves begin to see 'right,' the embodiment of value — more the totems than the tokens of the burgher's good life," and where material goods are "designed to fall apart" so that we not only spend more and more as prices are artificially inflated, but we do it more often. And more often than not our earnings are going for the small stuff: "The latest movie one had to see, the nouveau restaurant one had to try" and the Keds one had to have not only for that bogus reputation for quality but to avoid the stigma of being thought of as poor or, God forbid, cheap — all of which lend themselves "to that addictive process through which the unnecessary is made necessary and hence exploitable for repetitious profit."

My grandmother knew how to make my Keds last in the same way she knew whether to use peroxide or lemon juice to get out a stubborn stain and in the same way she knew which cuts of meat would go the furthest for a week of supper. She took good shoes to the cobbler for resoling, and she took in and let out most of her own family's clothing, frequently making some of her daughters' garments from her own creative patterns.

That businesses might hoodwink their customers was a given for her and my grandfather, to whom freedom meant the ability not to spend — the means and ingenuity by which they did not need to and the discipline by which they did not desire to.

I don't have to altogether resist buying Keds — I get out of them all of their worth. But as I am handing them my money, I do not also have to lay on the counter my loyalties and innocence in exchange for their shoddy business ethics. As long as I pay attention, the choice is mine.

Struggle continues with new generations

To the Editor:
As an African-American, part of the legacy we receive is our sense of community and that we are bound by our responsibility to it. No matter if we fulfill it or not, the expectation is there. I attempt in the best way I know how to pass community responsibility on to all of my students, be they students of color or white. That is the reason I write, and certainly it is the reason I teach.

That sense of belonging to something more than one's individual self is, in my opinion, why the African-American community has survived the horrors of American democracy. It is for this reason I question the "good intentions" of the Iowa City business community, and by extension the UI. How is it that both of these entities have failed to teach one of their own the racism inherent in the cigar store American Indian that sits in the window of the new Java House restaurant in downtown Iowa City?

There is also one that sits in the entranceway of Diamond Dave's inside the Old Capitol Mall. When I complained about that many years ago, they thought me odd but kept it.

Assess value of life

To the Editor:
I am writing in regard to the death penalty debate currently under scrutiny in Iowa.

Accepting the death penalty as a solution to anyone's problem, victim or perpetrator, is only exacerbating the problem. My mother often told me, "Two wrongs do not make a right." No amount of further death will bring a loved one back. The death penalty ultimately condones the violence it is supposed to control.

Government leaders are in a position to uphold and deploy a whole-

They did not see it as my concern, since I was not an American Indian. Do I have to be "other" to be offended as an American? I no longer spend money there and have very little tolerance for those who do.

Where have all the '60s activists gone? Surely everybody understands that a cigar store American Indian is every bit as offensive as a lawn jockey. Does that mean that one day I can expect to see one sitting in front of one of your stores (a lawn jockey, that is)? Or perhaps on exhibition at one of those quaint little antique shows of sentimental items of nostalgia in the Union? Will you consider that your "right" since you own the business and "own" the stereotypes you have created as a culture and can do with them what you damn well please, no matter whom they hurt or offend?

So what you are telling me by your permission (and your silence does give permission) is that the struggle continues anew with each new generation. Aren't you tired yet?

some attitude toward life to their constituents. Supporting violence or violent episodes of the death penalty provides a foundation for further violence — not rehabilitation. Rehabilitation should be the goal of the jailer, law enforcement agent, politician, student, parent and citizen.

I urge our public figures to assess their value of life and the potential for good in every person. Let Iowa remain a leader in enabling people to live fulfilling lives, not die without hope.

Women's responsibility has little to do with age, geography, options

To the Editor: I am writing in response to Laura Fokkena's article titled "Reproductive Health Care" (DI, Oct. 31). In her article, Fokkena stated that the problem of high teen-age pregnancy is caused by the "lack of options young women have in obtaining birth control."

Somehow this view seems a little off. The last I knew, teen-age pregnancy, "regardless of age and geography," was caused by irresponsible sex. If a young woman is in a position to have sex, that young woman should also be in a position to take responsibility for the consequences that could occur.

What is more difficult: arranging for an abortion without parental knowledge in the way Fokkena described or giving the matter a little forethought, exhibiting some self-control and swallowing your pride to buy a box of condoms?

I come from what is considered a rural Iowa town, and there are more places to buy condoms than just the family pharmacy.

Also, just because it is a rural town it does not mean that if a rural town judge were allowed to give consent for a young woman who wanted an abortion, any confidentiality would be compromised. When a judge is sworn to confidence, the information should remain private whether they are in an urban area or a rural area.

If a young woman's health is at risk because she chose to have irresponsible sex, then it is that same young woman that has put herself in that position of risk. It is her responsibility to take control of what happens to her body. It has little to do with age, geography or the availability of birth control.

Opposition movement fights undemocratic UI

Various events on campus recently demonstrated the arrogance and elitism of the UI administration / Iowa state Board of Regents, as well as their increasing separation from students' concerns.

On Monday, Oct. 17, Associate Dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts James Lindberg blamed the low admissions standards at the UI for the low four-year graduation rate as compared to Harvard University (29.7 percent at the UI, over 90 percent at Harvard). In other words, our students are dumb and don't compare with the intellectual Harvard elite. Lindberg does mention in passing that many UI students work over 20 hours a week and that this is "a common reason students are taking longer to graduate, but this is not always a negative factor. ... In the modern era, students who go to college and make the choice to take fewer credit hours and work at least part time are gaining valuable work experience." First of all, I would argue that economic obstacles are the main reason why most students do not graduate in four years. Secondly, students do not "make the choice" to go through "valuable" minimum-wage experience at Pizza Hut instead of devoting more time to their studies — there is just no alternative.

The outrage continued on Wednesday, Oct. 19 with the visit of the board of regents. In spite of students' pleas to reconsider yet another tuition raise, board President Marvin Berenstein could only encourage students to follow his example in 1958, when "he was married and had two children and was going to law school and was working 24 hours a week ... thought tuition was too high then but ... managed to get through it, graduate and get a job." He was careful to omit the recent Labor Department report indicating that Iowa ranks 44th in average annual pay in the nation — behind Alabama, Louisiana and West Virginia — and that the average service sector compensation in Iowa is $17,986 a year — that is $6,600 below the national service sector average (The Des Moines Register, Oct. 4).

After Berenstein finished uttering his patronizing statement, it took but a few minutes for the board to unanimously establish the increased rates. Will students' minimum wages increase by 6 percent? Will TAs and professors get a raise? Will our classroom ceilings stop leaking? I think not. But this increase might bring us a new coat of paint on President Rawlings' mansion or a new wave of repressive administrators and — why not? — a new wing to the prestigious business school.

It is very convenient to separate academic success or success in life in general from economic resources. If students fail, it is because they brought it on themselves. It is convenient because as a UI administrator you then don't have to stand up and oppose the regents when they want to raise tuition. Indeed, if success is a direct result of a student's intelligence and drive, then no matter how hard the way to graduation, she or he will make it. It is convenient also because you don't have to go against the board which appoints and pays you.

However, the ideological implications of that assumption are dangerous. It is the same assumption which allows Charles Murray in his book, "The Bell Curve," to state that intelligence is 60 percent genetic, that whites are more intelligent than blacks and that it is therefore not necessary to spend public funds trying to educate people who are genetically destined to poverty and failure. The same assumption had Bush say to inner-city residents that family values — not money — are needed to improve the school system.

Well, how do you keep a family together when you work three jobs and still do not make it to the poverty line? I am ready to bet that their IQ is not what got the Bushes, Quayles and Berensteins of the world to their positions of power. It is enough to read Jonathan Kozol's "Savage Inequalities" to understand that there are schools for the rich and schools for the poor in this country and that they serve to perpetuate social inequalities. Confirming this, test managers at ACT recognize that the only predictor of academic success is family income. The main problem in the United States today is the distribution of wealth, but nobody in power wants to touch the issue.

We should remind UI administrators and other bullies that they are not the vital element of a university; students and instructors are, and we will not stand for the repression, contempt and financial burdens that have been accumulating on our backs over the last few years. Even John Lohman, president of UI Student Government, realized that being courteous, explaining students' viewpoints and following rules does not get us anywhere with this administration. They say "Thank-you" and move on to vote and pass whatever we just spent hours speaking against. There is no question that the only way to fight this undemocratic administration is with an active opposition movement.

part of her loss to the strong Republican turnout.

"When you're on the track and the train is coming, folks, you're going to get mowed over," Campbell said.

Democrats and Republicans should find some common ground in order for Iowa to improve, she gave Democrats a rare dose of good news by narrowly beating Iran-Contra figure Oliver North.

If one man personified the Democrat's plight, it was 30-year Rep. Thomas Foley of Washington state, at risk of being the first House speaker voted out of office since 1860. Another embattled Democrat, Dan Rostenkowski, lost in Illinois. The former Ways and Means Committee chairman is under indictment on ethics charges.

The election was sure to reshape next year's debates over health-care and welfare reform, a balanced-budget amendment, curbs on costly benefits programs such as Social Security and Medicare, and perhaps even congressional term limits. At the White House, Clinton made an Election Day call for more bipartisanship, a sure sign he expected the conservative tide. And his chief of staff conceded next year's health-care proposal would be a lot more modest than the one that failed this year.

The elections carried broad implications for Clinton's re-election prospects as well as the direction of a Democratic Party that has yet to fully adjust to having one of its own in the White House and now faced losing its congressional dominance.

The man in line to lead the House Republicans, possibly as speaker, was Georgia conservative firebrand Newt Gingrich. He said he wanted to work with Clinton yet also had a responsibility to push the GOP campaign platform, which includes a balanced-budget amendment and other provisions the president opposes.

Incumbents were generally faring well in the Senate voting, but the GOP claimed one significant scalp: Dr. Bill Frist wrested a Tennessee seat from Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser. Even worse for the White House, Republican Fred Thompson captured the seat once held by Vice President Al Gore.

The hurdle for Republicans to capture the House was 40 seats,

"I think the president will want to heal the wounds and close the gaps as quickly as possible."

Dee Dee Myers, White House Press Secretary

one for every year since they last ran the chamber. By late evening, with half of House races still to be decided, Republicans had captured 26 Democratic seats and lost just two of their own.

Clinton retreated to the White House to watch the painful returns. "I think the president will want to heal the wounds and close the gaps as quickly as possible," said press secretary Dee Dee Myers.

Democrats began the day controlling the Senate 56-44 and the House 256-178. On average, a first-term president's party loses three or four Senate seats and perhaps two dozen in the House. But this was not to be an average year.

In settling 36 governorships, voters were cutting deep into the Democrats' dominance. Democrats had 29 statehouses to start the day, but lost in Wyoming, Kansas, Tennessee, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Oklahoma — all states where Democratic governors did not seek re-election. In New Mexico, Democratic Gov. Bruce King lost in his bid for a fourth term.

In the biggest state of all, California Gov. Pete Wilson won a second term. Republican governors were also re-elected in Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Wisconsin and New Hampshire, and the GOP kept the statehouse in South Dakota. Democrats held onto the governorships of Colorado, Vermont, Nebraska and Arkansas.

In the Senate, Richard Lugar of Indiana won handily to start the big GOP night. Florida Sen. Connie Mack crushed the closest thing to a Clinton on the ballot — Hillary Rodham Clinton's brother, Hugh Rodham. GOP incumbents also won in Mississippi, Montana, Texas, Delaware, Utah and Vermont. Former Gov. John Ashcroft held an open GOP seat in Missouri, and Rep. Craig Thomas did the same in Wyoming.

Democratic incumbents won in North Dakota, New Jersey, New York, New Mexico, Wisconsin, Connecticut, Maryland, West Virginia — and Massachusetts, where Edward Kennedy won handily after an October scare. Kennedy's son, Patrick, will join him in Congress, winner of a House seat in Rhode Island.

Other Republicans winning Democratic Senate seats were Mike DeWine in Ohio, Olympia Snowe in Maine, Jim Inhofe in Oklahoma and Spencer Abraham in Michigan.

Democratic losses in Oklahoma and Maine were more hurtful than most: The party likely would have held those if not for the surprise, voluntary retirements of George Mitchell and David Boren.

Crime was on the mind of voters most everywhere, as was clamoring for change. Clout, on the other hand, didn't seem to matter. Fewer than 25 percent of Tennessee voters said Sasser's power as Budget Committee chairman mattered to them. Voters worried about health care tended to side with Democrats, but those worried about taxes — and there were more of them — favored GOP candidates.

government while spending less money and increasing discipline in the Republican party.

"It'll be a challenge for the Republican party to govern. There is nothing more difficult than to put a country together with so much social division."

Jim Leach, U.S. Congressman

"It's been a rather extraordinary year in politics," he said. "It'll be a challenge for the Republican party to govern. There is nothing more difficult than to put a country together with so much social division."

Leach said he is optimistic about building a government with a strong base, but he felt that during the election both Democrats and Republicans became more radical in their stances on issues. "Both parties headed towards outer extremes," he said. "The public showed a more independent streak compared to other years. I think this country is sick and tired of campaign ads. The polls reflected negativity in politics."

Despite his loss, Winekauf said his spirits remain high. "We stayed on a very positive level," he said. "I got into the race as a relative unknown. We worked hard all year to get my name out. This is my first race, and I'm young and energetic. This is not my last political race by far."

Winekauf said he is going to keep pushing for issues he feels strongly about.

"The campaign was about issues we believe in," he said. "It was a good campaign; we stuck to the issues, and I respect Jim Leach. My criticism was always on the policy level."

Winekauf said he will continue to be involved in politics, but he is not sure what position he will run for in the future. "We're going to sit down and evaluate it in a couple of months," he said. "It's in my blood. I will be involved in politics for many years to come, whether it's running again or working hard for the Democratic Party."

Increasing jobs and promoting social programs were focuses in the election. Leach said it is a challenge to have a representative voice that expresses a more conservative fiscal policy and a more progressive social policy.

"That is my primary challenge," he said. "I hope to have a better policy in job-creating. Iowa in the last few years has picked up decidedly, and that trend has to continue."

Leach said more restraint needs to be shown in government spending, and he wants to realign the defense budget. But he said he first wants to build a strong base for working together.

"It's my main goal to pull people together," he said.

some progress this year." Lack of time and being from another state were hindrances to casting ballots, said some students who didn't vote.

"I'm from Minnesota, and I don't know enough," said UI freshman Paul Beckman, who didn't register in Iowa. "I just don't want to take that time (to register). I'm not going to be around for very long."

Many students attributed the lack of student voting to laziness among the student population and to the inconvenience of registration.

"I think a big problem in Iowa is you can't register the day of the election," UI freshman Joe Peters said. "In Minnesota, they let you register right before you vote. It's a lot easier for people. I'd go vote if I could register today. College kids have so many other things on their minds, and elections don't affect them directly."

Kerry Reinert, a UI freshman, said the political system doesn't attract college students.

"They're not encouraged to vote," Reinert said. "It doesn't seem like the candidates really target us."

Tim Bankin, a UI senior, said he didn't vote because he's from outside the state and didn't feel familiar with the candidates. He said the reason for low student voter turnout is students aren't well-informed.

"A lot of them just don't know the issues," Bankin said. "They aren't concerned. They don't think the vote will affect them personally at Iowa, which is untrue. It seems like the students have been apathetic to politics in general. The average student just isn't interested."

Bankin suggested more visits by candidates to the UI to increase the voting turnout among students. Slockett also gave a number of reasons as to why students don't vote.

"Students are very busy people," he said. "They aren't familiar with the town. They don't know where the precincts are. Iowa City government is new to them. They need information and education before they're comfortable with it."

Students who did vote said they felt it was their duty and their right as U.S. citizens to cast a ballot.

"It's a privilege we have. We might as well do it," UI sophomore Missy Klein said. "I just registered in Johnson County because I'm going to be here for years to come."

UI junior Craig Amundson said it's important for people to vote and students can influence the election.

"I think as soon as someone is able to vote they should get in there and vote for whoever they think should be in that office," Amundson said. "I think students would be able to change things for the better."

Mary Schreurs, the official precinct chairwoman at the Union voting site, said the student turnout there for this election was slightly better than in the past.

"This is normally a low polling place," Schreurs said. "Some (students) didn't send in voter registration until the last day, so they didn't make it into our poll books. They can't vote because they can't get an absentee today."

Sandra Cook, the official precinct chairwoman at the Burge Residence Hall voting site, said student turnout there was also improved from past years.

"It's not outstanding," Cook said. "But it's better than we thought it would be."

Iowa loses Edwards, Jackson to injuries

Iowa seniors Simone Edwards and Tia Jackson have been sidelined with knee injuries, Coach Vivian Stringer announced Tuesday.

Edwards, a 6-foot-4 center, missed the entire 1994-95 campaign while Jackson is out for eight weeks.

"Obviously, we're disappointed that Simone won't be able to play this season," Stringer said. "Luckily she now has the option to redshirt and return next year."

Edwards, who averaged 3.1 points and 2.8 rebounds per game last season, is scheduled to undergo surgery in December.

Jackson had knee surgery in January and received a medical redshirt last season. The presence of an all-American may require additional surgery this fall.

Owners, players plan to return to the table

TORONTO (AP) — A day after a seven-hour negotiating meeting, hockey players and owners decided to meet again Thursday.

While the sides didn't make any announcement, an agent, speaking on the condition he would not be identified, said Tuesday the parties had agreed to go back to the table.

The site, he said, has not yet been determined. But the fact that talks will continue, he said, was encouraging.

Still, with no prospect of a son in sight, Toronto Maple Leafs captain Doug Gilmour said he was leaving Sunday to play in Switzerland, and the Vancouver Canucks announced staff cuts, laying off two employees. The Calgary Flames, New Jersey Devils, Dallas Stars and Winnipeg Jets already had made layoffs.

Gilmour, who will join Rapperswil-Jona in the Swiss League, said he still held out hope for a deal.

"Maybe we'll be called back a week and this will be like a training camp for me," Gilmour said. "I'm trying to be optimistic. We'll be back soon."

The lockout, in its 39th day, already has led the league to cancel 14 games from each team's schedule.

Missouri looks into possible violations

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The University of Missouri has begun an investigation into possible NCAA violations involving former basketball player Jevon Crudup, school officials said.

The Atlanta Journal and Constitution reported Sunday that transfer records obtained by the Florida state attorney's office at a campus police linked agents to at least six college athletes, including Crudup.

The information was found part of an ongoing investigation of Florida State University, where athletes were taken on shopping sprees and given cash as enticements to sign with agents before their eligibility expired.

Fry plans to evaluate assistant coaches

Iowa coach expects Cyclones to look at Hawkeyes for Walden's replacement

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

With a 3-5-1 record and all bowl game hopes shattered, Iowa coach Hayden Fry hinted Tuesday that changes in both his team and his staff could be on the horizon.

"Just like always I've got some (assistant coaches) that have been very, very successful, some that are pretty good and some that aren't," he said.

"At the conclusion of the season we'll sit down and we'll go one-on in regards to coaches interviews just like we have all the players the first three days after the Minnesota game before they go home for Thanksgiving. We'll evaluate every player.

"I do the same thing with my coaches."

With Iowa State coach Jim Walden resigning at the end of this season, Fry said he expects at least one or two of his assistants to emerge as candidates for the head coaching position in Ames.

"If you go back and check all the people that have been on my staff, when they left here and have gone someplace they seemed to have done exceptionally well," he said.

Even if none of Fry's assistants take the Iowa State job, that doesn't mean there won't be changes on his staff.

"I've got a saturation point in certain things and it's my job as the head coach to get a solution to correct the problem," Fry said. "It just comes with the territory."

Recruiting is one area where Fry won't stand for mediocrity.

"I'm very meticulous in regarding success rate of who recruited whom, if he's produced, et cetera, and who hasn't," he said. "I even go so far as to see who gets people to come and visit on an official visit because some guys can't even get somebody to come and visit. Now that's bad."

Before he can worry about next year, Fry will have to contend with Northwestern which visits Kinnick Stadium Saturday in Iowa's last home game.

Kickoff is scheduled for 1:05 p.m. Redshirt freshman quarterback Matt Sherman will make his first start against the Wildcats.

Northwestern is 3-5-1 on the season, 2-4 in the Big Ten.

Sherman went down with a broken bone in his foot after the third game of the year, but returned Nov.

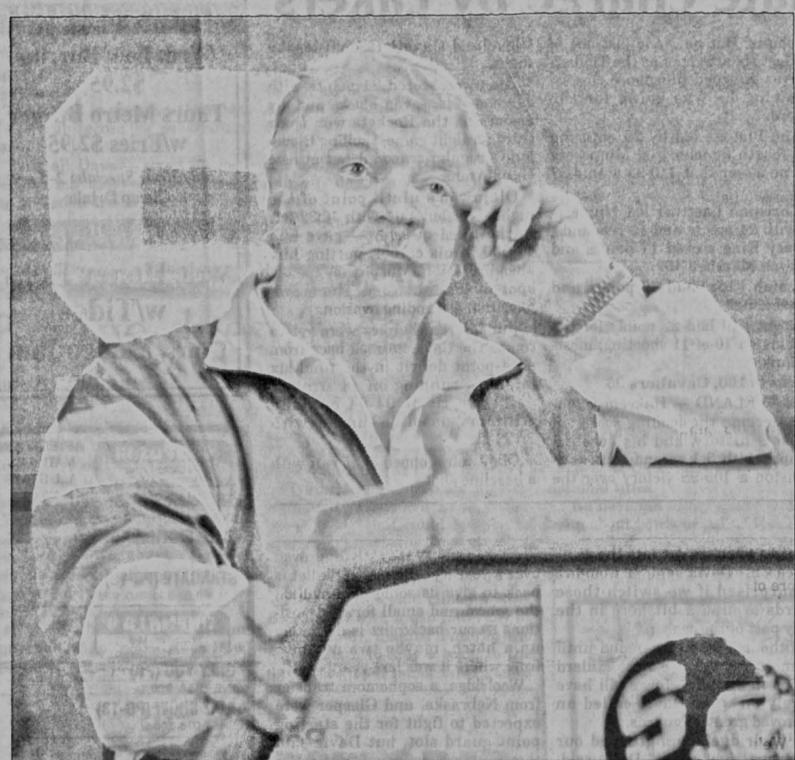

5 at Purdue to lead the Hawkeyes to 21 fourth-quarter points in a 21-21 tie.

"I'm sure I'll be a little nervous but this just is an opportunity for me to take advantage and that's the way I look at it," Sherman said. "I'm just going to go out there and do what I can do and not worry about what happens."

Fry said Sherman won't be 100 percent until the end of the year.

"He's got the type of injury he's not going to be healthy for the remainder of the season. It's going to take a lot of time, but after the season then he should be fine," Fry said.

Michigan State coach George Perles wipes his eye during a news conference in East Lansing, Mich., Tuesday after the university announced his firing. Perles, who coached the team for 12 seasons, will continue to coach the Spartans in their two final games of the year.

Spartans dismiss Perles

Harry Atkins
Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — George Perles, wiping away tears, was fired as Michigan State's football coach Tuesday by a university president tired of losing.

Peter McPherson, Michigan State's president, said Perles would coach the team's last two games of the season. The Spartans (4-5) play Purdue on Saturday and at Penn State on Nov. 26.

Perles, 59, who has three years remaining on his contract, was asked to resign. He refused and it will cost the university about $1.3 million to buy out his contract.

"I'm confident we can come to an agreement," McPherson said at a campus news conference. "George will be loyal. The fact that he's here today is proof of that."

Perles has always bragged about running a clean program in his 12 seasons as coach. Yet he has been embroiled in controversy in recent weeks. Roosevelt Wagner, a former player, claimed some Spartan football players received cash and had grades fixed to meet eligibility requirements. Perles has denied any wrongdoing.

Wagner's credibility was called into question when The Detroit News quoted him as saying he had once stalked and planned to kill Perles when he was passed over in the 1992 NFL draft. Wagner later denied talking to the newspaper or stalking Perles.

Still, the claims are being investigated. The university hired independent investigators from the Collegiate Sports Law Group to assure an unbiased examination of the football program.

"It's hard to find loyalty nowadays," Perles said, looking over at the man who fired him. "It's like a precious gem. You don't find many of them."

TALKS RESUME THURSDAY

Ad promotes owners' proposal, angers Fehr

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Just two days before the scheduled resumption of negotiations, union head Donald Fehr criticized owners for trying to "fool the public" with their latest advertising campaign.

Fehr was angered that owners bought a full page in today's editions of USA Today and claimed baseball's "long-term financial viability" was threatened by "huge payrolls (that) also impair the league's competitive parity."

The ad, which owners released Tuesday, said management's bargaining proposal is needed to preserve teams in Pittsburgh, Milwaukee and Kansas City. Owners also say they're "determined to reach an agreement on a new contract so that the 1995 baseball season can begin on schedule."

"I think what it clearly says is they believe it's a public relations war," Fehr said. "I think they're just trying to set the stage for implementation and trying to fool the public."

Talks are to resume Thursday at an executive retreat in Rye Brook, N.Y., the suburb north of New York where Fehr lives. One union official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the union believes owners placed the ad to irritate the players' association going into the bargaining sessions.

"It is something that our people conceived of and implemented two weeks ago," Selig said by telephone from Phoenix, where he was attending baseball's marketing meetings. "Certainly at that time we didn't know anything about the mediation process taking place with meetings starting Thursday. We don't believe it's at all confrontational."

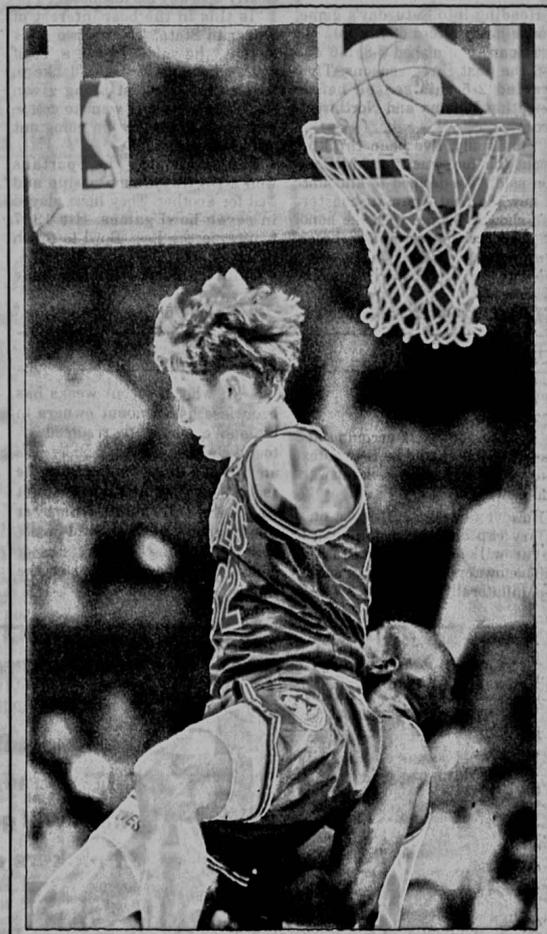

"I think they're just trying to set the stage for implementation and trying to fool the public."

Donald Fehr, union head

The sides have met formally just five times since players struck Aug. 12 and just once since owners canceled the season Sept. 14. Mediator W.J. Utery, appointed last month by the Clinton administration, called for the renewed talks, which are scheduled to run through Sunday.

"It's important that fans, players and management understand that at this time in history baseball needs some fine tuning," Selig said

Starks, Knicks hold off late charge by Lakers

Associated Press

NEW YORK — John Starks scored 15 of his 23 points in the decisive third quarter Tuesday night, leading the New York Knicks to a 117-113 victory over the Lakers.

New York, which entered the final period with a three-point lead, built it to 10, but the Lakers came back to cut it to 112-109 with 51 seconds left on a pair of free throws by Vlade Divac.

Patrick Ewing, who led New York with 24 points and seven blocks, hit two foul shots with 13 seconds left to preserve the victory. Hubert Davis added 15 points.

After trailing by 20 points in the first half, the Knicks shot 83 percent in the third period to take a 93-90 lead into the final quarter. The cold-shooting Lakers scored only eight points in the first nine minutes of the fourth.

Pistons 126, Timberwolves 112

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars tied the NBA record for most 3-pointers in a game, making 10 Tuesday night and scoring 40 points as the Detroit Pistons beat the Minnesota Timberwolves 126-112.

Dumars made 10 of 18 3-point attempts and all 10 of his foul shots. He missed his only two-point attempt.

He tied the record set by Brian Shaw of the Miami Heat against Milwaukee on April 3, 1993. Shaw set the record from behind the old 3-point line, which extended as far as 23 feet, 9 inches from the basket. The line was moved this season to a uniform 22 feet.

At one point in the game, Dumars was 9-of-12 on 3-point attempts. But he made just one of his last six attempts as the Timberwolves guarded him more closely, knowing he was going for the record.

The Pistons led by 20 entering the fourth quarter and Minnesota got no closer that 110-98 with 4:37 left.

Christian Laettner led Minnesota with 24 points and 10 rebounds, Stacey King scored 17 points and Donyell Marshall 15.

Isaiah Rider had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Grant Hill had 22 points for the Pistons on 10-of-11 shooting, mostly dunks.

Rockets 100, Cavaliers 98

CLEVELAND — Hakeem Olajuwon became the leading scorer in Rockets history, and his baseline jumper with 3.1 seconds left gave Houston a 100-98 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers on Tuesday night.

Olajuwon scored 21 points with 12 rebounds, seven blocks and six assists as the Rockets won their third straight game, spoiling Cleveland's regular-season debut at new Gund Arena.

Olajuwon's ninth point of the night — a foul shot with 10:32 left in the third quarter — gave him 17,950 in his career, putting him ahead of Calvin Murphy for the top spot in team history. The crowd gave him a standing ovation.

But his real heroics were yet to come. The Cavs stormed back from a 14-point deficit in the final six minutes, running off 14 straight points to tie it 94-94 on John Williams' baseline jumper with 1:19 left.

Olajuwon stopped that run with a baseline shot.

favor of the gold team if you look at the roster there."

Freshman Greg Helmers will not play in the scrimmage. While he still practices regularly, the 6-foot-11 center has been suspended from game competition by Davis until the second semester begins. Helmers was charged with computer theft early in the semester.

Other festivities include a laser light show during pregame introductions as well as a performance by the Hawkeye Marching Band.

Saturday also will offer the first peek at Iowa's three-guard and two-forward offense.

Davis, in his ninth season at Iowa, said Bartels, Settles and Murray will all be starters when the regular season begins while Woolridge, Glasper and Kingsbury will battle for the last two backcourt positions.

"It will be five of those six guys starting when we get into the actual season," Davis said. "I wouldn't be surprised if we switch those guards around a bit here in the early part of the season."

Without a true center and until Helmers and 6-foot-8 Russ Millard return in January, Iowa will have to rely on what Davis called an improved group of guards.

"(Woolridge) strengthened our backcourt right away," Davis said. "Mon'ter is playing at a level beyond what he did a year ago.

Chris Kingsbury is vastly improved over a year ago and Kevin Skillet is back to give us some play at both the guard and small forward positions so our backcourt is definitely up a notch, maybe two notches, from where it was last year."

Woolridge, a sophomore transfer from Nebraska, and Glasper were expected to fight for the starting point guard slot, but Davis said they could see action on the floor at the same time with Glasper moving to off-guard.

Heading into Saturday's game, Perles has a record of 72-61-4. But the Spartans finished 3-8, 5-6 and 6-6 the past three seasons. They started 2-5 this season before defeating Indiana and Northwestern.

"Obviously, I've been thinking about this for some time," McPherson said. "We decided to announce it now, so that Spartan boosters can shower George with the honor he deserves the rest of the season. Our primary idea was to allow George to have the honor he deserves."

Perles agreed he will always be

"a son of Michigan State," but was clearly upset by his dismissal.

"Is this in the best interest of Michigan State? There's two sides to that," he said. "I have a lot of energy left and would still like to coach. But, I'm not being given that chance. I don't want to create any controversy. So I'm going out as a good guy."

During his stay the Spartans won a Big Ten championship and tied for another. They have played in seven bowl games. His 1987 team won the Rose Bowl to finish 9-2-1.

Things haven't been the same since.

"I already met with the team,"

Perles said. "I said, 'If you want do something real good, get ready to beat Purdue.'"

Perles wouldn't discuss what his future might hold. He has made it clear recently he would like to be athletic director, should Merrily Dean-Baker step down. He also would listen to other coaching offers.

McPherson declined to talk about a successor to Perles. The leading candidates appear to be Bowling Green coach Gary Blackney and Colorado quarterback coach Rick Neuheisel. Both say they have talked with an unidentified member of the university's board of trustees.

"In the weeks ahead, I will sift through some recommendations," McPherson said. "We'll meet with the board and select the best person."

In a memo leaked last March, McPherson said he expected an "outstanding" season. Tuesday he was asked what "outstanding" meant.

"I just felt I would know it when I saw it," McPherson said. "I have enormous respect for George and I'm doing this with a lot of thought. When I make up a decision, I like to act quickly."

STRIKE

Fehr, who in recent weeks has been less harsh about owners in his public comments, resumed his tough rhetoric. Asked if there was any agenda items for the talks, he responded: "My attitude is to let the clubs talk about whatever they're going to talk about. I do not believe anything we have said or done ... has had any effect on the clubs at all."

Perles said. "I said, 'If you want do something real good, get ready to beat Purdue.'"

could get any separation between the two top people, then it would be cut and dry going into the fall," Fry said.

"Regardless if it's Driscoll or Sherman next fall, or Duprey, they've all got some playing time, some experience this year. It's obvious we're going to be better next fall than we were going into this year."

SIX STRAIGHT LOSS

Reeve doesn't blame Brown

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Not so much what Coaches Reeves said Tuesday following Giants' sixth straight loss, a humbling Monday night two-time champion Dallas Cowboys.

It was what he didn't say.

Throughout the Giants' streak, Reeves has stuck quarterback Dave Brown.

But Tuesday — a day Brown connected on just 4 passes, fumbled the ball and set up a Dallas touchdown and finally benched in favor of Graham late in the third period — Reeves blinked.

When asked who would start quarterback this Sunday with Cardinals, Reeves hedged his bets. "We'll come in tomorrow, our plans and talk about what we're going to do," the coach said.

Cowboys won't lose Harper

Denne H. Freeman Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — The Dallas Cowboys got good news from their medical staff Tuesday: injuries suffered wide receiver Alvin Harper offensive lineman Derek Knerd weren't as bad as earlier feared.

Harper was thought to have torn a left knee ligament. Owner Jerry Jones said he was surprised Harper was gone for a season.

However, an MRI examination on Tuesday showed sprain to the outside ligament of the knee. Harper was listed as doubtful for Sunday's game in San Francisco, but it was a season-ending injury.

Knerd hurt his toe, but doesn't appear to be serious.

SIX STRAIGHT LOSSES

Reeves doesn't blame Brown

Associated Press

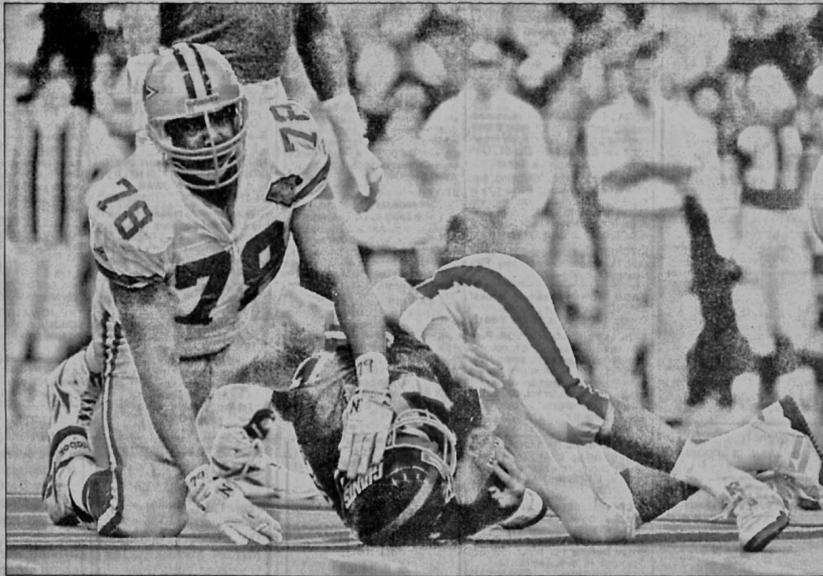

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — It was not so much what Coach Dan Reeves said Tuesday following the Giants' sixth straight loss, a 38-10 humbling Monday night by the two-time champion Dallas Cowboys.

It was what he didn't say. Throughout the Giants' losing streak, Reeves has stuck with quarterback Dave Brown.

But Tuesday — a day after Brown connected on just 4 of 17 passes, fumbled the ball away to set up a Dallas touchdown and was finally benched in favor of Kent Graham late in the third period — Reeves blinked.

When asked who would start at quarterback this Sunday when the Giants play host to the Phoenix Cardinals, Reeves hedged his bet.

"We'll come in tomorrow, make our plans and talk about what we're going to do," the coach said.

New York Giants quarterback Dave Brown is sacked by Dallas Cowboys defensive lineman Leon Lett for a five-yard loss in the second quarter Monday night in Irving, Texas.

Clearly the Giants have to do something.

The losing streak is their longest since 1980, when the club lost eight in a row.

The streak is also just three shy of the club record for consecutive losses.

"Is it all Dave?" asked Reeves. "No, it's our defense, our offense, our execution and also partly Dave. Right now we're just not a very good football team."

The loss to Dallas was proof positive.

The Cowboys outgained the Giants, 450 yards to 183, but more than half of the Giants' yardage came in the fourth quarter against the Dallas second string.

Still, the Giants coach says he has no intention of writing the season off, despite the Giants' 3-6 record.

"We're not saying the season is over by any means whatsoever,"

Reeves said. "But we do have to start looking at some of our players to see if they can help us win this year or down the road. But we're going to play every game to win ... not to evaluate personnel."

Yet the Giants coach, who lost six in a row in 1990 as coach of the Denver Broncos, admitted the losing streak was taking its toll.

"This is a tough business even when you win," he said. "But when you lose, it's just miserable."

SUFFERS FIFTH CONCUSSION

Beebe won't back off because of injuries

Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Don Beebe doesn't remember much about his fifth career concussion, the latest ache in a medical history that also includes three pulled hamstrings, a broken collar bone, a sprained neck and a metal rod in his leg.

But the Buffalo Bills wide receiver knows this: He will put it out of his mind and gladly expose his body to danger, if he must, in order to catch a pass. He has to, for this is the business that he has chosen.

"If I worried about coming across the middle, I would have worried about it after my rookie year" when he sprained his neck, Beebe said. "It doesn't bother me. On Monday night, if the same situation comes up, I'll do the same thing."

The Bills were trailing the Jets 22-17 in the game's final minute on Sunday when the pass went to Beebe on third-and-7. Linebacker Bobby Houston arrived just after the ball did, driving his helmet into Beebe's.

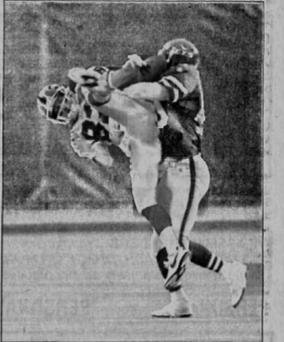

Beebe was out before he hit the ground. He remained on the turf for several minutes, motionless, with one arm pointed into the air.

"It scares you, when you see a guy lying there with his arm sticking up," Bills tight end Pete Metzelaars said. "You just thank God he's all right. But you don't think, 'Boy, if I go over the middle, I might get hit.'"

Head trauma has been a common topic around the NFL since Chicago fullback Merrill Hoge retired earlier this year, citing repeated concussions. Jets wide receiver Al Toon retired a season ago after his ninth concussion.

Beebe was asked if this injury made him think about his future. "Retiring? Is that your question?" he said.

"The family and my wife are encouraging it, but I'm not going to do it," he said. "I enjoy the game, and (I will continue) as long as I feel fine and have no ill effects from the concussion."

Associated Press

"I just hope I don't take a big hit in the next two, three weeks, because that's when you start getting the danger. But if I stay away from a big hit the rest of the season, I should be fine."

Beebe said the scariest part of the incident was watching the tape of himself walking off the field, and not remembering any of it.

"I had no recollection of any of the game, coming off the field, going to the locker room, lying there for a while," he said. "Then things started to come slowly back. ... I remembered that I had scored in the game, and I remembered that we had lost."

CHANCE TO CLINCH ROSE BOWL BERTH

Paterno doesn't regret joining Big Ten

Michael A. Giarrusso
Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Joe Paterno won't second-guess Penn State's decision to join the Big Ten, even if it costs the Nittany Lions a shot at the national championship.

The No. 2 Nittany Lions (8-0) could go 12-0 and still have trouble convincing pollsters they deserve a national title because none of their regular-season opponents is currently in the top 15.

As the Big Ten champion, Penn State would go to the Rose Bowl against the Pac-10 winner, which will have at least two losses. No Rose Bowl winner has been ranked No. 1 by The Associated Press since Southern Cal in 1972, and no Big Ten team has won the AP title since Ohio State in 1968.

"I wouldn't say getting pigeonholed into the Rose Bowl is the worst thing that could happen to you," Paterno said Tuesday. "I'd like to be around some of those pigeons."

Penn State would clinch a Rose Bowl berth with a win Saturday at Illinois (6-3), making Paterno the fourth coach to take a team to the four traditional major bowl games

— the Rose, Cotton, Orange and Sugar.

Paterno also has a chance to coach his fourth undefeated and untied team.

Three of those teams did not win national titles.

"We have not really talked to the team about bowls or polls," Paterno said.

Denzil toasts universal themes with watering-hole show, songs

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

If there really is a universal experience, something people of most nationalities can relate to, it's probably on Denzil's album Pub.

Love? That's one. But when love doesn't work out, there's always booze, that elixir which shows no favoritism for any race, age or flag. Both are featured on Pub, an album as steeped in British culture as any London watering hole. Denzil and his band will probably be quaffing plenty when they return to local watering hole Gabe's tonight with openers the Swarays.

Pub is not full of drinking songs, it's not really about drinking and judging by the quality, singer/songwriter Denzil probably wasn't drunk when he wrote it. But many of the stories it tells were culled from conversations which may have been overheard at pubs — tales of broken hearts and broken homes related with the atmosphere of those places people go to in order to drown their sorrows.

"They're actually stolen from things that I know either have happened or sort of happened," Denzil said. "It's the easiest way of writing lyrics in the world because they're sort of firsthand."

As much as Denzil tries to dodge praise for them, the lyrics that sit so unassumingly within his dreary but lively folk-influenced rock are masterful, poetic glimpses into what it means to be depressed and British.

Among his most moving lyrics are true stories. "Running This Family" tells the story of a young couple, forced into marriage by pregnancy, who watch their daughter grow up to repeat their mistakes: "She looks more like you than you did / And someday soon some great baboon will spend all afternoon teaching baby new tunes with his trousers still strewn on my couch / When they kissed I almost said 'Ouch' / And she said 'Me and Duane are going out' / But if she keeps up that pitiful pout / She'll be running this family."

With song titles like "Fat Loose Fancies Me" and "Funnymoon" and

Imke Lass/Giant Records

Denzil, whose latest album, Pub, tells stories best suited for extended unhappy-hour bar conversations, will play for local pub-crawlers tonight at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

an astounding ability to turn life's trials into narrative wonders, Denzil has attracted a label he despises: "clever."

"It's a very unpleasant reputation," he said. "It's almost like somebody's waiting to see if you're not very clever about something: 'Oh, that wasn't very clever.'"

Denzil's lyrical prowess and folk sound also have earned him unwanted comparisons to Elvis Costello. While he acknowledges Costello as an influence, Denzil doesn't see the similarity.

"You sit down and you write some songs and it hasn't got laden guitar all over it and I'm not sticking two fingers in the air and they seem to say, 'Well, he's from Britain, he's a singer-songwriter, we're going to put him here,'" he said. "I'm quite flattered to be compared to Costello; I like him, but I don't think I sound a bit like him. I don't think I have a thing in common with him even lyrically, other than the fact that I actually think about lyrics."

Denzil formed his band in 1992 after he had been playing acoustic sets in British pubs. The group still plays plenty of drinking establishments. In fact, Gabe's is one of their favorites, at least when they're playing.

"Iowa City was our best show in America last time," he said. "When we first went on, it was kind of loose and indifferent in there, and by the time we finished the whole place was just crazy and up at the front. We had to go and play an encore. It's just great knowing you turned a whole crowd on."

"I'm no admirer of me," Denzil declares on "Useless," but he will find it increasingly difficult to say that of America. Denzil's sentiments ring true on either side of the Atlantic, and his ironically charming presentation makes them impossible to resist, even if you don't drink.

Doors open for Denzil's show tonight at 9 at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. Cover is $5.

MOVIE REVIEW

'Fall' mostly effective thanks to cast

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

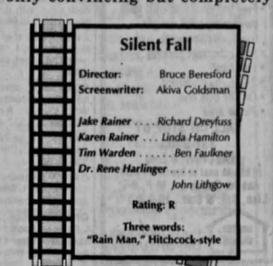

Without Richard Dreyfuss and his remarkably competent co-stars, "Silent Fall" is a nominally effective thriller which teeters on the brink of formula, a quietly engaging amusement park ride which thankfully never crosses the border into sensationalism. It's a thoughtful tale about a murder and a gaggle of suspects with histories shadier than a Bowery catwalk at 3 a.m. In short, it's nothing that couldn't be gleaned from an old episode of "Unsolved Mysteries."

The twist is that Tim Warden, the only witness to the murder, is an autistic 9-year-old who holds the key to "Silent Fall" 's closetful of skeletons somewhere in the darkened corners of his brain. It's a major gamble for an American movie to take, hanging its hopes for success on the talents of a child; Hollywood's shallow and infirm grip on kids has never seemed to go any further than Steven Spielberg is willing to let it go.

Fortunately, first-time child actor Ben Faulkner isn't a problem for "Silent Fall" in that regard. In fact, Faulkner may be the best catch Tinseltown has pulled out of the tyke pond since Lucas Haas made his stunning debut in "Witness." Quiet yet enormously intense for a person of his years, Faulkner provides one of the best performances in "Silent Fall."

As Jake Rainer, a troubled psychiatric genius with a haunted past who has to break through Tim's autism, Dreyfuss shines with a sensitivity and grace which is not only convincing but completely compatible with Faulkner's intensity.

"Silent Fall" builds itself up around the journey that Jake makes into Tim's labyrinthian mind and the bond he forms with the child while doing his "psychic spelunking." The plot twists and turns admirably around the two, serving the thrills subtly while knitting Dreyfuss' and Faulkner's characters into a delicately balanced relationship. It's an odd bond between two actors, a bond whose success or failure often hinges on Dreyfuss' ability to recognize Faulkner's moments as an actor and spin them around to his own benefit.

Surprisingly, Liv Tyler, who plays Tim's protective 18-year-old sister, Sylvie, is able to glow just as brightly as the young Faulkner, going so far as to nearly outshine Dreyfuss himself in a few scenes.

The film gets low marks only on its resolution; it's not exactly a disappointment, but given director Bruce Beresford and screenwriter Akiva Goldman's graceful handling of the relationship between the doctor and his tortured patient, the conclusion seems far too simple. But it's satisfying nonetheless, bringing important plot events to a sense of closure while leaving a select and deserving few almost maddeningly open-ended.

"Silent Fall" comes on quietly and reaches its peak through a subtle absorption of its audience rather than through cheap thrills. It's a human story that just happens to get ugly, a "relationship" movie that includes a murder in its guts almost as an afterthought. What's most amazing is the fact that "Silent Fall" works on both levels without really trying.

READING TONIGHT

Poet makes inroads into life's mysteries

Jonathon Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

Mystics and poets both delve into the reasons behind love and hate. Mystics usually find answers, while poets usually fail. Poet Frank Bidart, who will read tonight at 8 in Lecture Room Two of Van Allen Hall, also fails to discover the "why" of our actions, but his attempts are mysterious and original.

Frank Bidart

tension and strange punctuation. He uses italics, capital letters, placement of words, dashes and quotes to "score" the strange voice of his poems — sort of like E-mail messages fused with a Bible passage. Bidart's voice is quite simply unique in poetry. And while the mention of a poet being unique may conjure up images of something utterly impenetrable, Bidart is also one of the most accessible poets modern America has.

The action of Bidart's poems is confessional. Many of the poems of "In the Western Night" are addressed to his parents. Others are persona poems that read like dramatic monologues. In both cases the poems, as Bidart has said, "imitate an action and (are) an action." The voices in his poems take us along for the ride, so to speak. Whether it be Bidart's own voice or some other voice, from dancers to child murderers, we are invited into the consciousness of his characters. Once there, we follow along as they "act" on the page.

This is a mighty disturbing experience — to die of anorexia in "Ellen West," to murder in "Herbert White" and to confront a mother in "Confessional."

Bidart is the Marlon Brando of poetry. Like the great method actor, he transcends himself and becomes the voice of his poems. His poems are actions, but they are also actors. They strut and fret upon the "stage" of the page until they have said their piece and are heard from no more.

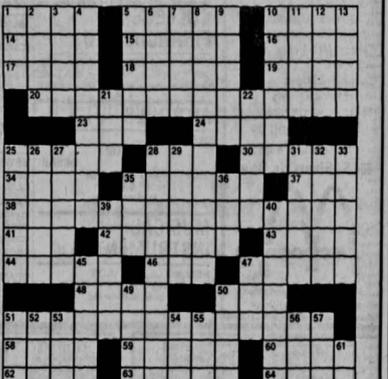

Because his poems are so oddly voiced and dramatic, Bidart's reading is likely to be one of the most interesting this year. Confessional, mystical and transcendent, Bidart is a postmodern skeptical prophet. We hate and love. Why? Nobody knows, but Bidart will continue asking the question or, more appropriately, embodying the question.

Frank Bidart will be reading tonight at 8 in Lecture Room Two of Van Allen Hall. Admission is free.

Green Bean Casserole

Prep Time: 10 minutes. Cook Time: 30 minutes
 1 can (10 3/4 oz.) Campbell's® Condensed Cream of Mushroom Soup
 1/2 cup milk
 1 tsp. soy sauce
 Dash pepper
 4 cups cooked cut green beans
 1 can (2.8 oz.) Durkee's® French Fried Onions
 1. In 1 1/2 quart casserole, combine soup, milk, soy and pepper. Stir in beans and 1/2 can onions.
 2. Bake at 350°F 25 minutes or until hot and bubbling; stir. Top with remaining onions. Bake 5 minutes or until onions are golden brown. Serves 6.
 Tip: Use 1 bag (16-20 oz.) frozen green beans, 2 pkg. (9 oz. each) frozen green beans, 2 cans (about 16 oz. each) green beans or about 1 1/2 lbs. fresh green beans for this recipe.
