UI minority graduation rate lags

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

More UI students are graduating in four years, but administrators continue to seek ways to increase the rate for minorities, which remains lower than average.

Rising tuition costs work against graduation and retention of minority students, said UI Student Government President John Lohman.

"Out-of-state tuition is more, and if we're going to keep minority students from transferring, raising tuition is just compounding the problem," he said. "The tuition increase is going to affect lots of people."

A report by the Iowa state Board of Regents released Friday reported 32.5 percent of students who entered the UI in 1990 graduated in four years, compared with 27.6

percent who entered in 1986. However, the four-year graduation rate for African-Americans is 8.9 percent, for Hispanics is 22.7 percent and for Asians is 24.4 percent. The

"I think the UI does a good job in recruiting but a poor job in retaining and fostering."

John Lohman, UI Student Government president

report will be discussed by the regents at their monthly meeting Wednesday in Ames.

Regents President Marvin Berenstein said a seven-person committee has been established to investigate why minority retention and four-year graduation are so low.

The board is raising tuition for in-state students by 4.2 percent and 6 percent for out-of-state students this year, but Berenstein said he didn't know if money is the problem.

"We don't know why students are leaving," he said. "There are not a great deal of minorities in Iowa. If people graduated in four years, they wouldn't have to pay for an extra year."

While 16.4 percent of Caucasians graduate from the UI in four years, statistics say about 23 percent of African-Americans and 30 percent of Hispanics left school in 1990 without degrees.

Part of the reason minority students leave is because they don't feel accepted at the UI, Lohman said.

Faculty Salaries

The smallest faculty salary increase in the Big Ten has caused the UI's average salary to drop from third to fifth in the conference.

$1 million donated to law school for new program

A $1 million gift from the estate of a longtime Cedar Rapids attorney will help the UI College of Law create a visiting professorship program.

Robert Daniel, an attorney with the Cedar Rapids law firm of Shuttleworth & Ingersoll for more than 50 years, graduated from Coe College in 1936 and from the UI College of Law in 1939. He also received an advanced law degree from Yale in 1940.

Daniel, who died in 1992, was a philanthropic supporter of Coe College and the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art.

N. William Hines, dean of the UI College of Law, said the professorship will follow the example of the Mason Ladd Visiting Professorship, established in 1982, by bringing in scholars and members of the bench and bar to teach at the College of Law.

Bail set for man charged with dismembering mother

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A judge set bond at $1 million Saturday for a man accused of dismembering his mother and cutting out her organs.

Henry M. Heepe, who told police his mother was a "vampire devil," did not enter a plea at his arraignment. He was being held in county jail.

Heepe, 50, is charged with aggravated murder in the death of his 77-year-old mother, Barbara Heepe.

He is accused of beating his mother to death, stabbing her repeatedly, then removing her organs and possibly eating some of them. Police said they didn't find all of her organs.

He was arrested last Monday at his home and told officers that his mother had two hearts, both of which he claimed to have cut out, police said.

Police said they found Heepe nude on a bed, surrounded by pieces of the corpse.

Heepe is expected to appear in court today, when the judge will set a preliminary hearing date.

DES MOINES — Bob Dole is a man in a hurry these days, but he was content to cool his heels for half an hour to share a podium with Gov. Terry Branstad.

"I think there will be a number of people dropping into Iowa between now and January," the Senate Republican leader cracked as he milled around an airport lobby waiting for Branstad.

"Judging from my phone calls, yes, there will be," Branstad said when he arrived.

Obedience of alcohol laws ebbs at games

Patricia Harris and

The Daily Iowan

Alcohol laws go out the window near Kinnick Stadium on Iowa football game days, with pedestrians carrying open alcohol containers as they stroll past police and minors purchasing alcohol at a local market.

With police officers in the area, two Daily Iowan reporters, ages 18 and 19, were able to purchase alcohol without identification at the outside bar of Melrose Market, 1006 Melrose Ave., during the revelry that preceded Saturday's game.

Two West High School students, ages 15 and 16, were then asked by DI reporters to buy a can of Miller Lite beer at the bar. The students had no problems making the purchase, and neither had a fictitious identification card. The beer was then thrown away.

The high-school students said it's common for people from their school to go to the store on game days and buy alcohol with ease.

However, Melrose Market co-owner Chris Kleinmeyer said employees check identification cards of people buying alcohol.

'OUTSIDERS' ELECTED

Congress novices reflect old patterns

Diane Duston

WASHINGTON — Doctors, football players, a former CIA analyst and '60s rock 'n' roll star Sonny Bono are sprinkled among the lawyers and businessmen in the wave of at least 83 Republican and 13 Democratic newcomers to Congress.

Five House races still hadn't been called by Sunday.

No matter their outcome, the new House and Senate will remain a sea of mostly white male faces, just as it has always been.

And even though the newcomers generally claim to be "outsiders" intending to reform Congress, they are in fact mostly the same kind of people who usually get elected: local and state public office holders, party activists and aides to elected officials.

"There is nothing in the new members' background that suggests they will be any different than those who came before them," said Ben Sheffner, assistant editor of The Cook Political Report, which analyzes Congress. "They do talk a different game. Twenty years ago, you wouldn't have heard the anti-Washington messages in their campaign."

And most of them are Republicans whose election brought Congress under GOP control for the first time in 40 years.

"The Republicans coming in are pretty conservative," Sheffner added.

The statistics show:

Counselor guides AIDS patients through crises

Prasanti Kantamneni

Laura Hill works every day to help people who are diagnosed with HIV or AIDS find medical and emotional support.

As executive director of the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education, 320 E. College St., a support service for people affected by HIV and AIDS, Hill is a counselor in addition to being responsible for administrative duties, budgeting and daily management.

"My main role is to help people get through the crisis they are experiencing by providing support and helping them find options," she said.

People diagnosed with AIDS may feel they have nowhere to turn, and they look to Hill for guidance.

"When people are first diagnosed, they may feel like their life is going to end, like they have to put all their hopes and dreams on hold," she said. "I try to help them see that they have the power to make a change in their life."

Hill's clientele includes men, women, heterosexuals, homosexuals, adults, children and people of all ethnic backgrounds. She sees most clients at least once a week, forming personal bonds that go beyond the typical counselor-client relationship.

"It's very easy to get close to people," she said. "We're dealing with intense emotions on a very serious topic."

Working closely with clients has allowed Hill to empathize with the pain they suffer living in a society which is often unaccepting of HIV and AIDS victims, she said.

"Sometimes I get really angry at what people have experienced," Hill said. "When you see people who have been alienated from their families and friends or have experienced discrimination from society, it's very easy to get frustrated."

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

Laura Hill, executive director of the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education, 320 E. College St., works with people diagnosed with HIV or AIDS on a daily basis. "It's very easy to get close to people," she said. "We're dealing with intense emotions on a very serious topic."

Working with clients who are going to die can be emotionally draining, she said.

"The hardest part of working here is that we're dealing with a terminal disease," Hill said. "Knowing that you are going to work with someone and that loss may be involved is very difficult."

Eleven clients have died since October, and Hill said grieving becomes a big part of her work.

"It's hard not to take work home with you, especially with grief and loss," she said. "If someone has died, you can't just leave that at the office."

Many people have a misconception that people with AIDS are not active, but Hill said this is not true.

"Even if they have AIDS, they still have determination to get involved," she said.

When her clients voice feelings of helplessness and hopelessness, she tries to remind them of positive things in their lives.

"Frequently, people feel kind of helpless," Hill said. "If someone has been oppressed by society, it's easy for them to take up a helpless role. They feel like they have no choices. When you get caught up in emotions, you forget about your strengths. You tend to focus on your negatives. We point out what they have done and identify their strengths."

Clients also support and help one another through times of stress, she said.

"One of the things that's been so touching for me is to see the support they give for each other," Hill said. "They really rally for each other when a crisis occurs."

Feline emergency inspires Spielberg's new 'ER' series

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — When a Siamese cat fell out of a window, Steven Spielberg sunk his claws into a new TV project.

In the Nov. 19 issue of TV Guide, Spielberg said he was inspired to produce the smash series "ER" after rushing the fallen feline to the UCLA Medical Center.

"I didn't know where else to bring it," he said. "All of the people on duty immediately put splints on the cat's broken forepaws and even gave me the name of a vet to take the cat to for a follow-up."

Spielberg says he wanted to bring that spirit of compassion and know-how to the series "ER," which he produces. The series was created by author Michael Crichton. Spielberg added that his true-life cat tale will be featured in an upcoming episode.

The NBC series can be seen Thursday nights at 9 p.m.

'Frugal Gourmet' gets generous with former employment site

SEATTLE (AP) — "Frugal Gourmet" Jeff Smith put his money where his mouth used to be: a market where he worked as a teenager.

Smith donated $100,000 to repair and expand the Pike Place Market — a popular tourist attraction with farmers' and crafts' markets. He used to work at a deli in the market.

In a brief ceremony at the main entrance Thursday, Smith said his home is on land near the market that once was occupied by a hotel for homeless men. He said he donated the money because he "got the guilts."

The Care for the Market Campaign has raised $1.6 million and hopes to raise $3 million by mid-1996.

Bush cracked a wide smile at Gorbachev and the two embraced. "In our many meetings we argued, but we always found common points," Bush said as Gorbachev sat beside him nodding. "We're true friends."

The former Soviet president was less generous about Russia's current leader, Yeltsin.

"I could have sent him to Africa to study the advancement of the desert. I didn't do it because I appreciated some of his qualities, but I made a mistake," Gorbachev said.

Coach Pat Riley reports on TV days

seasons ago, says he wasn't comfortable with the network's demands to "go after" players and coaches.

"I always had a foot in the coaching door, so I was not going out to submarine anybody," Riley says in the Nov. 19 issue of TV Guide. "I wouldn't be critical of coaches or players because I knew there was a bigger picture."

The ever-stylish Riley says he can dish out criticism when it's called for, "but I wouldn't go after people for what I felt were smaller issues."

Riley's broadcasting career resumes temporarily Nov. 22 when he hosts an HBO special, "American Coaches: Men of Vision and Victory."

Actress Kahn analyzes misunderstanding in role preparation

NEW YORK (AP) — Madeline Kahn got more than she bargained for when she researched her role as a suicide hot line staffer in the upcoming comedy "Mixed Nuts."

Real-life operators kept trying to analyze her.

"I explained that I just wanted to observe them, but they persisted in saying, 'And how are you feeling? Uh-huh, and where are you right now?'" Kahn tells Premiere magazine in its December issue.

Kahn is best known for the hilarious Mel Brooks comedies of the 1970s. She was nominated for an Academy Award for her role in "Blazing Saddles."

Her new film is expected out for the holiday season.

SKIERS TAKE NOTE

That wonderful white stuff is almost here, and the winter toys at the Iowa City Spoke & Ski are nearly ready as well. It's taken lots of work and we'd like to thank those who were patient. For those who don't know us, we've gathered together our shop philosophies:

The Spoke is owned and operated by people serious about their sports. As with cycling, there is no aspect of snow sports with which we have not experimented. We've each become devoted to our own choice: some choose alpine, some snowboarding; others skate and cross country, still others telemark. We're devoted and addicted. In our mind, a shop owned or run by people who are not adamant users is not capable of fully serving you.

We're here, more than anything, to make sure you get what you need and what you want—from rentals to race skis. If you leave the store without the knowledge you sought, we've failed.

We're not your discount center. You can buy your skis at Big 5—where they are always 20% off—but you'll get the service you deserve. The Spoke, quite simply, gives you the best prices you'll find each and every day, along with the knowledge and service of a true ski shop.

We've been in business half a year, and since day one others have been trying to copy what we do. Again with skis, you will witness what happens when the old guard realizes that it's sinking in a tar pit with those guys from the Jurassic period. The Spoke: often imitated, never duplicated.

Students from the Community Education Center in Iowa City have drawn posters honoring victims of domestic violence. The posters can be found in store windows downtown and at the Domestic Violence Intervention Program shelter.

The 17 students who participated will receive extra credit in school for drawing the artwork, which will remain in store windows until the end of the month, Mouton said. Although the students may not have directly experienced domestic violence, one in four women are victims so the chances are high that some of them have knowledge about it, she said.

The posters have received plenty of attention, which won't go unnoticed even after they get taken down, Mouton said.

"We're going to try and get donations so the posters can get framed," she said. "We want to keep them for future presentations we make."

The posters will also be displayed in the DVIP shelter, she said.

Students are continuing to make posters for some stores which volunteered for the display but haven't received them yet.

"I've seen the posters around town, but I didn't know what was being organized," said Barbara McKenna, an employee at Vortex Crystal & Gem, 218 E. Washington St.

Most businesses support the program and willingly display the posters.

PAYCHECK DEDUCTION SOUGHT

Faculty funds solicited by social organization

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Shares, a group that supports various social associations including a national abortion rights group, sent a mass mailing at the end of October targeting UI faculty and staff and offering an automatic withdrawal from their paychecks.

The nonprofit coalition is statewide and has targeted Iowa State University as well. It gives money to 18 community organizations and solicited all the UI faculty and staff for financial support.

Jim Throgmorton, UI associate professor of urban and regional planning, is having money from his paycheck deducted each month to give to Iowa Shares. He pledged $2.50 per month for 10 months.

"Like most professors and faculty, I asked them to deduct from my paycheck," Throgmorton said. "There are a number of good organizations that are doing good work. I thought it was the best way to spread my money around."

However, the donation system and the use of campus mail for soliciting money was called "obscene" by UI research assistant Marvin Brummel, who dislikes one of the organizations Iowa Shares supports.

Brummel works in the Department of Pediatrics at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and wrote a letter to Iowa Shares and the Iowa City Press-Citizen saying he is insulted and outraged at the unsolicited mailing. He said he does not condone one of the groups Iowa Shares gives to, the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League (NARAL) of Iowa Foundation.

Peggy Baker, executive director of Iowa Shares, said Brummel's charges about unsolicited mailings are unfounded. The UI doesn't have a problem with the organization using campus mail, because the UI allows outside organizations to use campus mail for a set amount, Baker said.

"We paid the mail service a fee," she said. "(Brummel) was upset with that organization. The letter was unfair to NARAL. Abortion is just one of the options NARAL talks about. It's an educational organization."

One of Iowa Shares' founders, UI law student Bill Mooney, said the organization gives to action-oriented groups, which can be controversial.

"These are groups some people are going to like and some people are going to hate," he said. "The point of Iowa Shares is to make it easy for people to give. It takes a fair amount of effort to fund-raise."

Some of the groups Iowa Shares gives to deal with issues such as environmental protection, homelessness, women's rights, AIDS, criminal justice and affordable health care. People who donate money may either give to a general fund or specify an organization.

Environmental Advocates and Iowa Citizens Action Network Education Foundation are local groups sponsored by Iowa Shares, said Throgmorton, who is on the board of directors of Environmental Advocates. He added that Iowa Shares is great for individual groups that need help fund raising.

"Instead of each organization having to focus on bringing in their own funds, they share in fund raising," Throgmorton said. "We joined to share the costs and benefits."

Last year, Iowa Shares launched its first campaign. The organization raised about $25,000 and distributed 85 percent of the funds to community organizations. This year's goal is to exceed that amount, Baker said.

"We hope people will be responsible because we are a new federation that is meeting community needs not being met (elsewhere)," she said. "We haven't set a goal for this year, but we hope to raise a good amount of money."

'INTERNATIONAL UNIFYING FORCE' STUDIED

Periodical extols virtues of dandelions

Moira Crowley
The Daily Iowan

Autumn generally isn't the season for dandelions, the yellow invaders that plague even the most beautifully groomed lawns, but they can still land on your doormat in a magazine published in Iowa City.

Whole Dandelion! Magazine & Catalog, which has been on newsstands since last January, is owned and operated by Iowa City resident Rockwell Williams. His interest in publishing began a year and a half ago with an idea for a book about the cultural history of dandelions.

Williams said he was always interested in plants, but his fascination for the dandelion began on his daily walks to and from work, where he passed fields of them.

"That's when I began to think about the different ways they grew and started doing research," he said.

The monthly magazine is a compilation of gardening tips, dandelion recipes and personal stories about dandelions, Williams said.

"The dandelion is an international unifying force," he said. "Everyone who's had a lawn has dealt with dandelions and everyone who's had a childhood has enjoyed them."

Iowa City resident Brian Bachman is one of 25 subscribers.

"I've always been interested in herbs and especially the bond between plants and people. The magazine gives different uses of the plant and even their nutritional values," he said.

If a person's aim is to rid a lawn of the pesky weeds, Williams recommends the no-dig poison-control method called rapid repeat harvesting. If the leaves of the dandelion plant are continuously cut, the root becomes exhausted and dies.

Included in the magazine are recipes using dandelions — including dandelion mousse, lasagna, salad and casserole — made with just about every part of the plant.

Williams said when he was 12, he was left home alone with nothing to eat. He went outside, picked some dandelions and sorrel, mixed them with raisins and made a stew.

Years later, one of his favorite dishes still contains dandelions. He takes a plateful of wilted dandelion leaves and mixes them with bacon, brown sugar and a dash of vinegar.

When the snow and ice of an Iowa winter kills dandelions, Williams said New Pioneer Co-Op Fresh Food Market, 22 S. Van Buren St., receives them fresh from California.

Wine can also be made from dan-delions. Williams said the flowers are boiled in water and skimmed off the top, then sugar and a flavorless citric acid are added, and the liquid is poured into oak kegs. He said the kegs should remain unopened for at least one year to capture the right flavor.

"Of course, no two people make dandelion wine the same," he said.

Williams said his goal for the magazine is to spread information about how to encourage, or discourage, the growth of dandelions without using poison.

"We're here. They're here. We can at least try to amiably share the space," he said.

LEADER WEATHERS LOSSES

Democrat readies for fight in Iowa House

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The incoming Democratic leader of the state House has set his sights on two goals — assuring his party's views are heard and rebuilding the number of Democrats in the chamber.

Rep. David Schrader of Monroe was elected to the leadership post for a two-year term on Saturday. Schrader had competed with Rep. Art Ollie, D-Clinton, and Rep. Phil Wise, D-Keokuk, but they had dropped out by the time the balloting was done in a private meeting.

Saturday's meeting came as the 36 House Democrats began to assess their next step after suffering major setbacks last week.

The party held 49 seats in the 100-member House heading into the election but lost 13 of those, including three sitting Democrats who were ousted.

In an interview, Schrader said that "Republicans won the right to govern."

"We're going to work with them to pass good legislation," he said. "When they attempt to pass legislation that's contrary to our philosophy, we'll point out why we're resisting. We'll draw a difference."

Schrader won his fifth term in the House in this year's election. Assistant leaders picked during Saturday's voting were Rep. John Connors of Des Moines, Rep. Pam Jochum of Dubuque, Rep. Michael Moreland of Ottumwa and Rep. Richard Running of Cedar Rapids.

Schrader takes control of a group of Democrats who have seen their power at the Statehouse diminish steadily. Democrats controlled the House for a decade beginning in 1982 but narrowly lost power to Republicans in 1992.

Their dramatic losses this year have left the party reeling, and Schrader said Democrats face substantial political hurdles.

"Democrats have been defined by somebody other than Democrats," he said.

While arguing that political work needs to be done, Schrader said, "I don't think people sent us to the Statehouse to elect members."

"They expect us to make every effort to make their interests and concerns part of the mix," said Schrader. "In the long run, that usually causes electoral success."

On the other side of the partisan aisle, House Republicans face a leadership debate of their own. They are scheduled to vote this week on who will hold the top leadership jobs in the House.

House Speaker Harold Van Maanen of Oskaloosa faces a challenge from Rep. Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids.

3 OTHER STUDENTS KILLED THIS YEAR

Crash claims 4th youth from high school

Associated Press

ELDRIDGE, Iowa — For the fourth time this year, North Scott High School is coping with the death of a student in a traffic accident.

Laura Walker, 16, of Park View, died Thursday in a two-car accident on U.S. Highway 61 near Eldridge.

The high-school junior died shortly after 8 p.m. Thursday when she was thrown from a car driven by Meghan Billups, 16, of Princeton. Billups' car was involved in a minor collision with another auto, and the force of the accident sent both cars off the road.

Walker, a cheerleader and soccer player at North Scott High, was the daughter of Leland and Joan Swanson Walker.

Three other North Scott students died in earlier accidents.

Laura Gross, 17, of Donahue, and Julie Swarts, 16, of Park View, died March 4 in a fiery crash in rural Scott County.

On March 28, Brian Curtis, 16, of McCausland, died in an accident while he was testdriving a motorcycle in Long Grove.

Classes weren't scheduled Friday at North Scott because of parent-teacher conferences. However, a crisis-management team of counselors and teachers will be on hand today, Superintendent Pat DeLuca said.

Walker was remembered as a popular, lively girl. She would have been on the girls' varsity soccer team this year.

"There is no question about it. She was another shining example of our exemplary students," DeLuca said. "She was one of them for sure."

Sarah Burton, a friend and junior at North Scott High, said Walker had a passion for cheerleading.

"That was her whole life," she said.

Burton also remembered Walker's taste for clothing from the 1970s.

"She loved to turn heads, I guess you could say," Burton said. "If you said black, she said white just to be different."

Billups and two other teens in her car were not seriously hurt in Thursday's accident, while the driver of the other car, Craig Ward, 17, of Eldridge, was not hurt.

Investigators said Friday they did not know what caused the accident, but said alcohol was not involved.

JAKARTA, Indonesia — On his first overseas trip since last Tuesday's elections, President Clinton assured anxious Asian leaders Sunday that America's foreign policy will not be shaken by the Republican landslide in Congress.

"The position of the United States is certainly just as strong as it ever has been," Clinton said, setting the stage for a summit on expanding trade with Asia's booming economies.

Organizers hope leaders of 18 Pacific and Asian nations attending the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum will agree to free trade in the region by the year 2020, though China and Malaysia are resisting.

In advance of the summit, Clinton is holding one-on-one talks today with the leaders of China, Japan, South Korea and Australia.

Disputes over human rights and trade barriers are expected to be high on the agenda for Clinton's second meeting with Chinese President Jiang Zemin in a year.

Frictions eased somewhat after Clinton granted most-favored-nation trade status to China, and Beijing has agreed to several business deals, including a $1.6 billion purchase of American passenger aircraft.

Talks with Japan and South Korea are likely to center on trade and North Korea's agreement to freeze and ultimately dismantle facilities suspected of being capable of producing nuclear weapons.

Questions about Clinton's political standing and the impact of last week's historic GOP wins followed the president on a fast-paced state visit Sunday to the Philippines, the first by an American president in 19 years.

Before flying to Indonesia, Clinton commemorated World War II victories in the Pacific and toured bomb-ravaged Corregidor, the scene of fierce fighting and Allied humiliation a half-century ago. The island fortress in Manila Bay was captured by Japan after Gen. Douglas MacArthur, under orders from WASHINGTON — If women voters had prevailed in the midterm elections, the Senate would have remained in Democratic hands and several gubernatorial seats would have gone to Democrats instead of Republicans.

The election saw one of the strongest gender gaps in years, exit polls indicated, as men hardened their conservative views and showed more affinity for the Republican message of smaller government, less spending on social programs and anti-taxation.

Across the country, men — predominantly white men — voted heavily Republican.

Democrats sifting through the lessons of last week's election are faced with the reality that men are steadily defecting. In exit polls, men identified themselves as 37 percent Republican, 31 percent Democratic and 31 percent independent. Four years ago, they were evenly divided between the parties at 34 percent each and 29 percent independent.

Women, however, are 42 percent Democratic, 32 percent Republican and 26 percent independent — roughly the same split as in the 1990 elections.

"This is something that's been building over the past decade and a half ... as the parties became more polarized around issues and the choices became clear," said Susan Carroll, senior research associate at the Rutgers University Center for the American Woman and Politics.

Through the 1980s and into '90s, men have become more conservative and more Republican, and women have stayed as tied to the Democratic Party as they were going into the '80s," she said.

In virtually every gubernatorial and Senate race last week, women supported Democrats more strongly than men did — even in the cases where women ended up voting overall to elect the Republican.

The GOP takeover of the House was helped by the 57 percent male preference for Republicans compared with a 54 percent preference by women for Democrats. Democratic men crossed over more often to vote for Republican candidates than did Democratic women.

President Clinton, center, plays the saxophone during a private session with a Filipino band following a state luncheon tendered by the host government at Malacanang Palace in Manila, the Philippines, on Sunday. Clinton stopped over in Manila for a two-day visit on his way to Indonesia.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, fled to Australia, pledging, "I shall return."

"Gen. MacArthur did return and so would freedom," Clinton said at the Manila American Cemetery containing the graves of 17,206 fallen servicemen. "Countless horrors lay in the way, including the butchery of house-to-house fighting in Manila."

Warmly toasting Clinton later at Malacanang Palace, Philippine President Fidel Ramos sounded regretful about Clinton's election setbacks.

Praising the president's foreign policy and economic record, Ramos said, "These achievements have apparently not had the recognition that they deserve in your country."

Quoting scripture, Ramos assured Clinton, "No prophet is accepted in his hometown." Secretary of State Warren Christopher, traveling in Asia before Clinton arrived, encountered near universal concern about the election impact, officials said.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton was asked about the elections during a meeting with Philippine relief workers. "I don't know yet exactly what the message from the voters was," she replied. Her uncertainty contrasted with Clinton's statement last week that voters "sent us a clear message — I got it."

TEEN-AGE MOMS TARGETED

GOP aims to overhaul welfare system

Jennifer Dixon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans are promising quick action to reform the welfare system with a plan to strip young unwed mothers of cash benefits and funnel the savings into orphanages and adoptions — but not abortions.

Preparing to seize control of Congress, Republican lawmakers say they are willing to work with the White House to overhaul welfare by imposing strict time limits on benefits, work requirements and restrictions on aid to most immigrants.

But their legislation, included in the "Contract With America" signed by more than 300 Republican House candidates, may be too conservative for President Clinton, governors and moderate lawmakers.

Hearings on the bill could begin in early January, and the House is expected to vote on it within the first 100 days of the session.

Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the likely House speaker when the GOP takes over in January, is interpreting Tuesday's Republican landslide as a mandate for the contract — a list of 10 pledges that also includes tax cuts and a balanced budget amendment.

Gingrich, speaking Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," suggested radical changes in welfare where no payments would go to people capable of finding work and those without jobs would depend on private charity.

"People ought to have to do something for any resources they get if they are able-bodied under the age of retirement," he said.

Welfare reform was a favorite issue in this year's campaigns. Clinton used his promise to "end welfare as we know it" to define himself as a new centrist Democrat two years ago.

Approximately 5 million families receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children, and another 27 million individuals are on food stamps.

Republicans and many Democrats agree that welfare must be overhauled to promote work, end long-term dependency and strengthen child support collections.

The House plan goes even further by ending monthly welfare checks and housing assistance to unwed mothers 17 and younger. States would also be allowed to ban cash benefits to women ages 18, 19 and 20.

Rep. Jim Talent, R-Mo., said Tuesday's election outcome signals a demand for dramatic change in a welfare system that discourages marriage and work and encourages illegitimacy.

"This was a decisive repudiation of the policies of the Great Society," said Talent, who wrote the ban on welfare to young mothers. "We've got to change the incentives in the system ... and attack the problem with the out-of-wedlock birth rate. And the only way ... is to end the cash and cash-related benefits and take care of families in a different way."

Under the Republican bill, the savings generated by denying aid to teen-age mothers would be returned to the states to provide services to the women and their children. These services would include promoting adoptions and establishing orphanages or group homes, but none of the money could be used for abortion services or counseling.

Older mothers would be required to identify the fathers of their children to receive a monthly check and would be required to work after two years on welfare.

The GOP plan would also cut welfare benefits to most legal immigrants, saving $22 billion over five years.

"I want a comprehensive welfare bill that asks the people riding in the wagon to get out of the wagon and help the rest of us pull," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The GOP takeover of the House was helped by the 57 percent male preference for Republicans compared with a 54 percent preference by women for Democrats. Democratic men crossed over more often to vote for Republican candidates than did Democratic women.

Senate races in Washington, Michigan and Minnesota would have gone Democratic instead of Republican based on the women's vote alone, preventing the Republican takeover of the Senate.

Governors' seats in Connecticut, Alabama, Maine and New York would have been won by Democrats if not for male voters that put them in Republican hands.

In other cases, women provided the critical Democratic margin of victory where men favored the Republican — in Florida, for example, where women's 55 percent endorsement of Democrat Lawton Chiles helped him win re-election by two percentage points despite Jeb Bush's heavy support from men.

Men cited concerns about taxes more often than women in Tuesday's exit polls, and women mentioned health care more often as the primary issue in their vote. Both men and women said they were worried about crime in the national poll.

Even though most women agree with men that the country is seriously on the wrong track, they are more inclined to look to Democrats to fix things.

"The cynicism out there is even more intense among men," said Democratic pollster Celinda Lake. "Where women would like to change Washington, men would like to torch it."

Across the board, the sexes voiced different opinions — men disapproving of Congress more than women, and women giving President Clinton slightly more favorable ratings, while a majority of men disapproved of his performance.

In specific races:

- Men would have elected Oliver North to the Senate in Virginia, but the women's vote gave incumbent Democrat Charles Robb the win.

- Maryland provided a striking contrast in which men favored the woman gubernatorial candidate, Republican Ellen Sauerbrey, while women by a similar margin preferred the Democratic man, Parris Glendening.

- New York's Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo would have kept his seat based on women's votes alone.

- California men, who cited crime, immigration and taxes as influencing their vote, preferred GOP candidate Michael Huffington for the Senate. Women chose incumbent Democrat Dianne Feinstein, most frequently citing experience and knowledge of California as their criteria.

PROPOSITION 187

Immigration issues

In last week's elections, the citizens of California voted yes on Proposition 187, which prohibits illegal aliens from attending public schools, colleges or universities and from receiving federal funds in the form of welfare or Medicaid; the only exception is access to emergency health care. California claims it is spending an inordinate amount of money every year supporting its illegal aliens, but Proposition 187 will not solve the problem.

First of all, the plan, designed specifically to save money, makes no economic sense. A 1984 study conducted at the University of Texas at Austin found that illegal immigrants pay more in taxes than they take out in federal and state services such as welfare and unemployment compensation. Their utilization of education and health-care services is a burden, but it is a small one compared to the burden created if they did not utilize these services. Denying anyone preventative health care increases the chances of emergency care being needed sometime in the future, which ends up costing taxpayers more. Denying someone an education also takes a toll on society by increasing crime rates and ensuring that many children grow up without any chance of employment in the future.

Proposition 187 also goes directly against a 1982 Supreme Court ruling, Plyler vs. Doe, which declared that children of illegal aliens who live in the United States are entitled to a free education.

But most importantly, Proposition 187 is just another example of scapegoating immigrants, especially Latinos, for America's economic woes. This sentiment assumes that Anglo-Americans have a legitimate right to citizenship while others do not.

The United States, however, is a country which was founded by immigrants from Europe who committed an act of genocide unequalled in human history against American Indians. They then built the country and its economy on the backs of enslaved Africans. As late as the mid-19th century, the American Southwest was still the Mexican northwest, until the United States invaded Mexico in the 1840s. Mexicans and American Indians have a history in California which predates the arrival of Anglo-Americans, most of whom came to California after the gold rush in 1849. In short, California, like the rest of the United States, has never been racially or ethnically homogeneous.

If Californians want to deal with their immigrant situation in a humane manner, they should call upon the federal government. Most illegal aliens are concentrated in just a few states, with California alone absorbing nearly half of them. The federal government should be required to assist states with high concentrations of immigrants, particularly in funding educational resources. This way, even if the majority of illegal immigrants are concentrated in one state, the responsibility of supporting them is not.

On a larger scale, the American government should also address the issue of why immigrants are coming to this country in the first place. American support of dictatorial governments, particularly in Latin America, has led to an exodus of civilians fleeing political persecution, economic hardship and human rights abuses throughout the world. As the Salvadoran community in San Francisco says, "I'll stay out of your country if you stay out of mine."

PUZZLING QUESTION

White House targeted

First, on Sept. 12, Frank Corder flies through restricted air space, wrecks a tree planted by Thomas Jefferson and crashes into the White House. Then on Oct. 29, Francisco Duran pulled out an assault rifle — a weapon that is illegal to possess in the District of Columbia — and fired 25 to 35 rounds at the White House.

What do these men have against the White House?

The cornerstone was first laid in 1792, and President John Adams and his wife were the first residents in 1800. The British burned it in 1814. (They had a reason not to like it.) It was rebuilt and refurbished between 1948 and 1953. All in all, there have been very few basic structural changes since 1792.

The first house for the first family constantly evolves to reflect the personality of the current residents. A swimming pool was added by a handicapped Roosevelt. It was filled in by the penny-pinching Carter and was replaced by Reagan. Clinton added a jogging track; the next president may add fences and turn it into a go-cart track. Furniture, china and curtains are replaced with nearly every new administration.

This type of refurbishing was taking place when the plane crashed into the White House, so the president was staying across the street. A few phone calls could have established Clinton's location. The pilot evidently didn't care enough to learn where the president was, so he obviously was more concerned with hitting the building rather than the man.

The building itself is deceptively huge. The grounds and house cover 18 acres, so the two would-be assassins had almost no chance of hitting the president by dumb luck. These two men can't be considered even poor assassins. Assassins usually stand in crowds and wait until they can at least see their targets.

Some who know Duran say he left Colorado and traveled to Washington for the express purpose of killing the president. But there doesn't seem to be much evidence to support this claim.

Take the tour of the White House, and the guides will tell you the first family's private quarters are on the second floor. Stand in Lafayette Park across from the White House, and protesters and the homeless can tell you the president lives on the second floor. Guards at the northwest and the northeast gates will probably tell you the president lives on the second floor. It's common knowledge that the Secret Service doesn't like the fact that the location of the president's bed is common knowledge.

Duran didn't even take the time to stop and ask someone where the president was. If he was trying to shoot Clinton, he didn't even bother to shoot at the right floor.

Duran, like the pilot before him, evidently wasn't trying to harm the president. Duran was aiming at the White House.

So the puzzling question remains: Why don't these men like the White House?

Crashing soon over a voting booth near you

It's a good thing pundits don't run for office. If they did, the same tsunami that washed over Capitol Hill on Election Day would cleanse the editorial pages of every newspaper in the country and you would no longer have to face the painfully insipid spectacle of John Sununu and Michael Kinsley on "Crossfire." That tidal wave will come another day.

In the meantime, political gurus in all media describe Election Day as a "referendum on Bill Clinton" and its outcome as an "indictment of liberal Democratic policies." Such easy assumptions don't go far toward explaining the biggest change on Capitol Hill in four decades. The punditocracy that says America sent Clinton a message is only partially correct. To stop the analysis there is to focus on the election with one eye.

America's plummeting regard for the political process was one culprit, and it helped sink long-term Democratic incumbents in all areas of government from sea to shining sea. Mario Cuomo — Hamlet on the Hudson — is no longer to be, but his affiliation with Clinton had little to do with the upset. Likewise the case of Ann Richards. According to all knowledgeable observers, Richards was one of the best governors in America, overseeing growth rates in Texas that were among the highest in the country for three consecutive years and enjoying a 55 percent approval rating on Election Day.

Did anybody get the license plate number of the rig that ran her over along with a passel of other "sure thing" Democrats? It was hardly a presidential limo. In fact, it looked more like a Ford Fiesta driven by an electorate worried about its pocketbook, its children and the nation's overwhelming debt. That is a conservative list of worries for sure, but Tuesday's cri de coeur did not burst from a citizenry prepared to embrace conservative ideology. They want a conservative approach to the budget combined with less government in all areas — especially the realm of personal morality. Distinguishing between slimming the nation's wallet and restricting our moral choices is critical to continued Republican survival. Ultimately, Republicans will have to stymie many ultraconservative plans, even as they relish the solid triumph of a moderate conservative agenda.

In state after state, races and ballot initiatives seen by extreme conservative ideologues as harbingers of the revolution went the way of the liberals. Idaho and Oregon said no to ballot propositions that would have denied anti-discrimination protection to gays and lesbians. Ollie Ollie didn't make it in free as right-wing outlaw Oliver North lost to the disreputable Charles Robb in Virginia. Dianne Feinstein is poised to beat Michael Huffington in the battle of the bucks in California, though 500,000 absentee ballots yet to be counted could throw it either way. The unabashedly liberal Ted Kennedy liberally bashed Mitt Romney in debate to pull the state of Massachusetts back into the bosom of the Kennedy clan. In Wyoming, a ban on abortion was rejected, and an assisted suicide proposition won in Oregon. Despite the repeal of two gay rights ordinances in Florida, Tuesday's tally is not one the Christian Coalition can savor.

Make no mistake: Some mighty tall Democratic oaks were felled by Republican saplings. It's quite a list: Tom Foley, the first speaker of the House to lose a seat since the Civil War; Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, sounding the death knell of Dale-style pols with his defeat; Cuomo; and Richards. On the referendum side, Proposition 187 won by a huge margin in California, leaving one of our nation's most diverse border states bound to withhold many services from illegal immigrants.

Tuesday's election was a sign, but signals were mixed — far too mixed to declare the revolution Newt Gingrich proclaims. It looks a lot like part two of a double whammy, with part one being Bill Clinton's election. Narrow as that margin was, it was a call for change and a rejection of the bitter rhetoric of the last Republican convention.

Part two was the Election Day feature presentation, wherein Americans threw the cats into a bag, Clinton and Congress. Now the pressure is on to produce effective legislation. Voters condemned the blustering impotence of the last session and made it clear they expect meaningful budget controls and debt reduction combined with social policies that reject an outdated vision of the family. Producing both of these will be an extraordinary feat neither for the faint of heart nor the pure of politics. Any leftover time on the Hill will be taken up by the fight over who gets credit for the change — Clinton or Congress.

Clinton and Congress are truly the "Odd Couple" come to visit our federal government, and it will make for at least two of the most interesting years Washington has seen in a very long time. The Republican wave was a mandate to slim down government — not to use government policy to reshape national character, as Gingrich now says. Any pol who tries to force the anger of American voters into a tidy ideological box will doubtless be swept away in the next tsunami, crashing soon over a voting booth near you.

A new era of effective political leadership

Almost a week has passed since the Republican tidal wave swept across the nation, and the fallout is still falling. It is interesting to see Democrats from Dee Dee Myers to some professors in the UI political science department frantically attempting to put a positive spin on last Tuesday's crushing defeat.

The White House claimed it was an anti-incumbent vote, and some professors said it was merely a shift in unanchored voter groups who punished Republicans in 1992 and are doing the same to Democrats in 1994. This whitewash of Tuesday's events cannot obscure the fact that a much needed political realignment is under way — now the Republicans control the agenda in Washington, D.C.

The reason for this monumental shift is that Democrats have amply demonstrated that they cannot deliver the goods. They have had control of Congress and the presidency for the last two years, and nothing of any consequence has been passed. President Clinton broke too many promises at the start of his administration and expended his political capital on issues the voters deemed unimportant. In the beginning of the Clinton presidency, brash administration staffers went out of their way to belittle their congressional allies — not a smart move.

Another Democratic weakness was the fragmentation of the party. Liberal and conservative groups could not cooperate and form a consensus to pass health-care reform, which is the cornerstone of the Clinton presidency. Many conservative Democrats could not stand with the president's agenda and voted Republican in this election.

On the other hand, the Republicans have shown a fairly unified front and made a statement with their "Contract with America." People voted for a party with a clear vision and strong leadership.

More than 300 Republican candidates signed the "Contract with America," which was an agenda statement for the party. It calls for a balanced budget amendment, term limits for Congress, the line-item veto, cutting the number of House committees, reducing staffs by one-third and the "American Dream Restoration Act," a $500 tax credit for each child. This is a strong conservative agenda and is the blueprint for the first 100 days of the 104th Congress.

Another Republican strength was the energetic activism of religious conservatives. Though their poster child, Oliver North, was defeated, they were a driving force behind several campaigns. In fact, they were instrumental in the only Iowa House victory for a Republican in Johnson County. Like it or not, religious conservatives are going to be an active force in voter recruitment and campaigning in years to come.

Debunkers of recent elections have claimed the Republican victory is only temporary and that 1996 will be different. However, they ignore the fact that all Republican incumbents were victorious. Republicans gained an astonishing 49 House seats for a total of 227 of 435. Republicans captured eight more Senate seats, increasing the number of Republicans to 53 of 100. Eight more states elected Republican governors for a total of 31. Thus, at the state and federal levels, people chose Republicans to represent their interests.

A traditional Democratic stronghold, the South, fell into Republican hands. Another factor in the election has been the strong support from independents. This year, independents voted Republican at a ratio of 56-to-44. In contrast, independents voted Republican in the 1984 election only by a narrow 51-49 ratio. "Swing voters" are turning to Republicans for leadership.

The realignment runs deeper than just electing candidates; many state referendums had conservative overtones. Nevada passed a constitutional amendment stating any new tax increases must pass two-thirds of both legislative houses or a majority vote of the whole population. Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis., rejected handgun bans. Georgia voters passed measures imposing life sentences for two-time violent offenders and California voted to enact life sentences for three-time offenders. Twenty-two states voted in favor of term limits for federal lawmakers. These measures are hardly liberal planks and lend credence to the claims of a realignment.

Unlike with President Clinton, voters have handed Republicans a clear mandate for change. This is the first time Republicans have controlled the House of Representatives since 1963 and the first time both houses of Congress have been united under the Republican banner. The test of the realignment will be in the 1996 presidential and 1998 midterm elections. If the electorate is satisfied with the Republican agenda, it will set the realignment in stone with Republican victories in these elections. We are at the dawn of a new era of effective political leadership.

LOS ANGELES — What role the pursuit of the white Bronco will play at O.J. Simpson's trial remains in question since prosecutors decided against charging his best friend with helping him flee.

The quirky nature of the pursuit across Los Angeles diminished its impact as an indication of consciousness of guilt, said UCLA law Professor Peter Arenella.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — The Rev. Walter Everett spoke from the heart Saturday when he presided over the wedding of his son's killer.

"Love means knowing that you can say 'I'm sorry' and that the other person will forgive you," Everett told Michael Carlucci and his bride at the altar. "I'm sorry" and "I forgive you" are the key words in any relationship."

The men's relationship depended on the words.

Carlucci fatally shot Everett's 24-year-old son, Scott, in 1987 during a drunken scuffle at the apartment building where they both lived. He said he never meant to kill him.

Everett, 60, didn't speak of his son at the wedding attended by about 85 people in the Golden Hill United Methodist Church, only of love.

"Love is patient and kind," the pastor told the couple, reading from the Bible. "It does not rejoice at wrong but rejoices in the right."

After his son was killed, Everett was angry when he heard Carlucci would be sentenced to only five years in prison for manslaughter.

That changed when he heard Carlucci apologize at his sentencing hearing. On the one-year anniversary of his son's death, Everett wrote Carlucci in state prison to offer forgiveness.

"That decision for me didn't come easily," Everett said before the wedding. "I began to see how the anger was destroying me."

Everett, who adopted Scott when he was 22 months old, said he wrote the letter as a way "to get through it." Afterward, he found "some inner peace."

When Carlucci read the letter, he broke down in tears. He wrote back, and a friendship developed.

Carlucci, 34, was released in 1991. Everett, pastor of the United Methodist Church in Hartford, even testified on his behalf at a parole hearing. Everett's own marriage of 34 years, which was already troubled, ended after he forgave Carlucci.

As a wedding gift, Everett gave Carlucci and his bride, Sandie Foerster, a box of 16 crayons. The pastor said each color represents an emotion.

"Purple I see as a symbol of penitence," Everett told the couple. "Blue is a color symbolizing loyalty and trust."

Everett said before the ceremony that those feelings helped him carry on with his life.

"It began with an act of forgiveness," he said. "The healing process, I think, is an ongoing thing. Today is a definite milestone."

Trial starts for alleged call-girl boss

John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The state's prostitution laws may be on trial as much as Heidi Fleiss when testimony in the "Hollywood madam" case begins today.

Defense lawyers will attack the pandering laws and the way Fleiss was arrested.

Fleiss, 28, faces up to 11 years in prison on charges of possessing cocaine and running a call-girl ring catering to wealthy businessmen and celebrities.

Lawyer Anthony Brooklier said he will try to show that Fleiss was entrapped in a sting in which a Beverly Hills police officer posed as a wealthy businessman hiring prostitutes.

To succeed in the entrapment defense, lawyers will have to show that police used unacceptable tactics or pressure and that Fleiss was not predisposed to break the law.

Another defense strategy may include claiming that authorities unfairly target those who recruit prostitutes without pursuing their male clients.

PURSUIT'S ROLE IN TRIAL SCRUTINIZED

Simpson car chase muddies case strategy

Linda Deutsch

LOS ANGELES — What role the pursuit of the white Bronco will play at O.J. Simpson's trial remains in question since prosecutors decided against charging his best friend with helping him flee.

Legal experts say it's unlikely Al "A.C." Cowlings will testify for the prosecution. But they said that doesn't mean Simpson's flight from justice with Cowlings at the wheel will be abandoned as a feature of the murder case against him.

The flight has always been fairly ambiguous, said Loyola University law Professor Laurie Levenson. "The defense can say it was an act of panic by a man whose world was collapsing around him. The prosecution can still argue he was thinking of fleeing."

"But they would have had a stronger argument if Cowlings had been charged."

The quirky nature of the pursuit across Los Angeles diminished its impact as an indication of consciousness of guilt, said UCLA law Professor Peter Arenella.

"The slowness of this chase makes it hard for people to treat this as a deliberate flight from justice," Arenella said. "It's a piece of circumstantial evidence, but not a particularly compelling one."

The defense contends Simpson was distraught over the death of his ex-wife and was trying to get to her grave. Many people lauded Cowlings for saving Simpson's life that day.

Prosecutors deciding how much to make of the chase during the trial likely will take their signals from jury questioning, Levenson said.

"If jurors are skeptical about it, you don't want to make it the focus of your case," she said.

Prospective jurors were asked about the pursuit on a questionnaire: "Have you seen, heard or read any portion of the freeway pursuit of O.J. Simpson and Al Cowlings? If yes, approximately how many hours-minutes of the freeway pursuit did you watch on television or listen to on the radio? What did you think about the chase?"

Most prospective jurors said they saw at least part of the pursuit.

CHARACTER QUESTIONED IN FUND-RAISER

Hamlet judged sane in mock hearing

Ravi Nessman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — There was method to his madness.

At least that's what a majority of Hamlet's jury decided.

Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy presided as top lawyers and doctors gathered to put Shakespeare's melancholy Dane on trial for murder.

In a rhapsody of words, Chicago attorneys George Cottrill and James Montgomery led the defense, arguing that the prince was clinically depressed and hallucinating when he killed Polonius, who says in the play, "Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't.'"

The prosecution, led by Cook County Board President Richard Phelan and William Bauer, former chief judge of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, argued Hamlet was a brilliant tactician plotting to avenge his father's murder.

Almost 700 people paid $200 each to attend the sold-out trial Saturday night at the Art Institute of Chicago. The event was part of the fifth annual Chicago Humanities Festival, and the money will be used to subsidize other festival events. Kennedy, who devised the idea to put Hamlet on trial, said he intended the show to be educational.

before a jury of local government officials and intellectuals. The panel ruled 10-2 that Hamlet was sane and thus responsible for his actions.

The defendant, played by an actor in a fur-lined tunic, sat glumly and uttered no "to be, or not to be" soliloquies.

He was surrounded by "the heartache and the thousand natural shocks" of lawyers wearing expensive suits and sipping mineral water, resisting any urge to call them "errant knaves, all."

The often whimsical trial focused on the scene in Shakespeare's tragedy when Hamlet hears rustling behind a curtain, lunges with his sword and kills the hiding Polonius.

In Shakespeare's tragedy, Hamlet initially believes he killed King Claudius, who earlier had killed his father.

The prosecution argued Hamlet rationally tried to kill Claudius to avenge his father and only feigned madness to protect himself.

"We card," he said. "We're very conscientious about that."

With the large number of people who make purchases at the store during home games, it is inevitable that some underage persons will slip through the cracks in security, he said.

"Two underage people out of a crowd of 30,000 people coming by the store isn't bad," Kleinmeyer said. "Sure, some people are going to get away with it."

Local police say although it is common for minors to buy alcohol during home games, they worry more about crowd control than misdemeanor alcohol infractions.

At game halftime, University Heights police officers patrolled the area around the Melrose Market. Although it has an Iowa City address, the market is officially under the jurisdiction of the University Heights Police Department.

The officers patrolling Saturday said it is almost impossible to stop the alcohol violations.

"There's nothing we can really do about the drinking," said officer Chris Knouse. "On game day we kind of overlook it. We checked a couple IDs and found they were underage. I'm sure there's a lot more than we catch."

People drinking are usually left alone if they are not endangering themselves, other people or property, said Iowa City police Sgt. Richard Wyss.

"If what the people are doing is not creating serious problems, then we leave it alone," he said. "If it changes and more problems are associated with drinking, then they'll have to do something different."

REGENTS

"I think tuition is a part of it," he said. "I think the UI does a good job in recruiting but a poor job in retaining and fostering. The UI portrays Iowa City and the UI as being receptive, but when (minority students) come here, they think, 'This isn't it at all.' I don't know if they're alienated, but they're not taken care of like they should be."

Increasing diversity is in the long-range plan, Berenstein said.

"If we have to attract minority students, we have to understand what keeps them here," he said.

In other regent business, a report will be presented Wednesday showing that retention rates are faring better for UI faculty members, but the average salary

The most persistent problem is flagrant violation of the open container law, but Wyss said the large number of people breaking the law makes it impossible to enforce it.

"You could walk by the cops with a beer in your hand and say 'What's up?' to them," UI junior Tim Herter said. "Campus Security came by during a different game one time and the guy said, 'Hide it (four cases of beer) somewhere so I don't see it when I come around again.'"

People causing problems or throwing bottles are police officers' main concerns, University Heights police Chief Robert McDonald said. He described Saturday's crowd as "mellow."

"It's been a real good crowd," he said. "I don't think we've made any arrests today."

The alcohol-related problems haven't affected the crowd at the market, which has been cooperative all season long, Kleinmeyer said.

"On Melrose (Avenue), there is a happy-go-lucky atmosphere," he said. "There have been no fights and no arrests this year at Melrose Market."

To prevent problems, the market hires two Johnson County Sheriff's Department officers every Saturday a home football game is held to watch over the store and the crowd.

Most problems occur when the fans go to downtown Iowa City after a game, Wyss said.

"We haven't had any problems around the stadium," he said. "Generally, the problems occur later on when people get intoxicated downtown, when people get in fights and damage property."

first stop in that pursuit, are still 15 months away, but the chase took on new urgency in the Republican landslide, which many saw as a sign of Clinton's vulnerability.

"The value of the Republican nomination for president just went up," veteran Iowa Republican operative David Oman said Thursday. "That caucus effort starts very quickly."

The swing by Dole, from neighboring Kansas, came just two days after the election. Sens. Phil Gramm of Texas and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania were hard on his heels.

Gramm was already in Iowa on Friday, and on Sunday he said he would file candidacy papers with the Federal Election Commission this week. Appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," Gramm also took a swipe at Dole. "I think that I am more committed to changing government fundamentally than Bob Dole is," Gramm said.

Specter is announcing his interest in a presidential bid with scheduled "exploratory travels" today. He plans to stop in both New Hampshire, which holds the first primary of the presidential campaign season in early 1996, and Iowa.

"There's big-time interest, believe me," Dole said. "You can tell by the people coming out here."

"I think you're going to have to get used to it," Gramm said. "I think you're going to have a lot of people who believe there might be a good job that will be open. My guess is there will be a lot of applicants, and you'll probably get a chance to talk to most of them."

"The 1994 elections have showed President Clinton is a vulnerable president," Oman added.

In many ways, even though the Iowa caucuses are in February 1996, there's little time to waste.

The caucuses differ sharply from primary elections and demand early, heavy organizational work. Many of those interested in seeking the nomination spent considerable time in Iowa campaigning for state candidates and now are free to work more directly for themselves.

Much of former President Bush's cabinet has been spotted on the Iowa campaign trail, including Dick Cheney, Jack Kemp and Lamar Alexander. Former Vice President Dan Quayle showed up as well, and Tuesday's election returns stirred speculation that several Republican governors — Massachusetts' William Weld foremost among them — could be considering a run.

Iowa Republican activists were quick to begin handicapping the field and eager to begin reaping the benefits of a drawn-out campaign for the party's nomination.

Dole won the precinct caucuses when he unsuccessfully sought the 1988 GOP nomination.

"I think Senator Dole clearly starts with an edge," said former Iowa Republican Chairman Steve Roberts. He hastened to add that Dole's previous victory was a long time ago and no candidate has "locked up" the caucuses.

Dole dismissed suggestions that his new job as Senate majority leader would cut into presidential campaign time.

"Others are going to have more flexibility; they won't have leadership roles," Dole said. "There are certain advantages to leadership roles."

Meanwhile, other potential candidates were busy sending signals.

"If I had to decide today, I'd run," Gramm said. "The American people on Tuesday night rejected Bill Clinton's policies. My guess is, two years from now they're going to reject him."

respectively, in the 103rd Congress to 48 and eight in the 104th.

Three blacks newly elected to the House join 35 returning incumbents.

The rise of the baby boomers continues with 63 House newcomers born between 1945-64 and 122 returning; six new boomer senators join eight already there.

Generation X represented for the first time with 27-year-old Patrick Kennedy, D-R.I., and 29-year-old Randy Tate, R-Wash., taking House seats.

Of the new senators, seven were House members and one a governor. Among the others, Spencer Abraham, R-Mich., was deputy chief of staff to Vice President Dan Quayle.

And the newly elected Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., most recently a movie actor, also had a law career that included counsel to the Watergate committee. One of his questions revealed that President Nixon had secretly taped White House conversations.

The only true "outsider" joining the Senate is William Frist, R-Tenn., a heart and lung transplant surgeon who didn't even vote until he was 34.

Ten of the new senators are men, one is a woman and all are white. Their average age is 49, compared to an average of 60 for the returning incumbents. The oldest newcomer is Craig Thomas, 61, of Wyoming; the youngest is Rick Santorum, 36, of Pennsylvania.

Family connections continue to prevail. Besides Patrick Kennedy, whose father is Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the House newcomers include:

Rodney Frelinghuysen, R-N.J., whose father, Peter, was in Congress for 22 years.

Walter Jones Jr., R-N.C., whose father, Walter Sr., a Democrat, served 26 years.

James Longley, R-Maine, son of a Maine governor.

John Shadegg, R-Ariz., whose father, Stephen, managed political campaigns, most notably Barry Goldwater's first Senate run in 1952.

Ken Bentsen Jr., D-Texas, nephew of Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen.

One of the doctors coming to Congress is John Ganske, R-Iowa, a plastic surgeon who had never run for office before but was motivated by his opposition to President Clinton's health-care proposals.

Another is Dr. David Weldon, R-Fla., elected for the first time, but previously politically active as founder in 1989 of the Space Coast Family Forum, an anti-abortion group that endorses political candidates.

Houston Oilers and Seattle Seahawks football star Steve Largent, R-Okla., won his seat in the House his first time on any ballot.

But the other incoming football standout, J.C. Watts, R-Okla., of the University of Oklahoma Sooners and Canadian pro league, comes to Congress after first being elected to a six-year term on the Oklahoma Corporation Commission.

Robert Barr, R-Ga., hasn't been elected before, but he's no newcomer to the federal government having served nine years as a CIA analyst and four as the U.S. attorney in Atlanta.

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — Junior-college transfer Munib Dzuho scored six of his 18 points in the final 4 minutes Sunday to help rally Northern Iowa to a 78-77 exhibition victory over the Puntamika Zadar team of Croatia.

Northern Iowa trailed by as many as nine points in the second half and was down 65-59 with 5 minutes to play before taking the lead for good with an 8-0 run.

Freshman Brian Heying started the decisive burst with a hook shot and freshman Sredrick Robinson followed with a 3-pointer, cutting the lead to 65-64 with 4:16 left.

Dzuho, a native of Sarajevo, Bosnia, then sank two free throws and made a layup, putting the Panthers ahead 68-65 with 3:03 to play. Northern Iowa got the rest of its points on free throws, making eight of 12 to secure the victory. Jon Ellis made three and Dzuho hit two.

Iowa field hockey returns to Final Four

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Beth Beglin and the No. 12 field hockey team came into Sunday's game against Old Dominion looking for revenge.

After being defeated in the NCAA championship game two years ago by the Monarchs, Iowa's revenge came in the form of a 3-2 overtime victory over Old Dominion in Norfolk, Va., to advance to the NCAA Final Four.

"I think we're all a little bit in a state of shock, particularly with how this team has struggled and never knowing what team is going to show up," Beglin said. "I said this last weekend and I didn't think I'd be saying it this weekend, but this was by far and away the best game we've played this season."

The victory earns Iowa its ninth trip to the Final Four, the Hawkeyes' third in a row, and their fifth in six years under Beglin.

The first half appeared like it would go scoreless, until Iowa sophomore Diane DeMiro put the Hawkeyes on the board with a breakaway goal with 21 seconds before intermission to give Iowa a 1-0 lead.

Iowa held the Monarchs scoreless in the half, giving up only three penalty corner attempts and eight shots on goal.

"It was the best team defense we've played in terms of everybody helping each other out and people playing poised and handling pressure," Beglin said. "Particularly, I would say that Debbie Humpage, Mandy Abblitt and Mary Casabian did a great job of stepping up and intercepting and holding them to very few corners."

The Monarchs came back in the second period with their penalty corner team of Alaina Hunt, Karen Neiss and Sue Callahan tying things up 10 minutes into the half.

Kristen Holmes knocked in a penalty corner for the Hawkeyes, assisted by Debbie Humpage and Emily Smith, but Old Dominion came back once again. Kelly Burch scored with 11:24 to go in the game for a 2-2 tie.

That's where the score would stay until 9:37 left in the overtime period, when Holmes, Humpage and Smith hooked up

Woolridge takes charge with 11 assists

Patrick Regan

A crowd of 14,500 packed into Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday to watch the gold squad defeat the black team, 116-84, at the third annual Black & Gold Basketball Blowout.

While the gold dominated the black team of mostly walk-on players, the fans got a chance to see newcomers Andre Woolridge and Ryan Bowen in action.

Bowen, a 6-foot-9 forward, is expected to bolster the Hawkeyes depleted inside game. Woolridge, a sophomore transfer from Nebraska, is competing with Mon'ter Glasper for the starting point guard job.

Woolridge appears to be up to the challenge, as he scored 15 points and dished out 11 assists Saturday.

"Both Andre Woolridge and Mon'ter Glasper did a good job of handling the pressure from the gold team," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "That was a good sign for them. That was a good sign for their play-making and quarterbacking capabilities. That would be the biggest positive I saw."

Bowen was equally impressive with 16 points, two steals and two blocked shots.

Hawks claim 20 wins for first time since '89

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

A pair of home wins last weekend gave the Iowa volleyball team its first 20-win season since 1989, and put the Hawkeyes in prime position for postseason play.

Iowa (20-8, 10-6 in the Big Ten) defeated Michigan Friday night for the second time this season, 15-3.

"Now all we can do is hope and pray that we keep it up through the end of the season."

Jill Oelschlager, Iowa outside hitter

15-6, 4-15, 13-15, 15-10. Saturday night's win was one of revenge for the Hawkeyes as they defeated Michigan State, 18-16, 15-11, 11-15, 15-9. Earlier this year, Iowa lost to the Spartans at Michigan State.

Saturday's win marked the eighth Big Ten Conference opponent that the Hawkeyes have beaten this season. They will wrap up the year with a road trip to Northwestern and Wisconsin before coming home to host Purdue and Illinois Nov. 25 and 26.

Leading the charge last weekend was sophomore outside hitter Jill Oelschlager, who led the Hawkeyes with a total of 45 kills, including 25 on Friday. Both Oelschlager and Jennifer Webb picked up the load for team kill leader Katy Fawbush, who was slowed by a sore shoulder. Webb led Iowa Saturday night with 23 kills.

Oelschlager and Webb credited great passing as the key to their performances.

"The passing has been very good," Webb said. "When the passing is on, it makes it much easier to run the offense."

Webb added that the revenge factor didn't hurt on Saturday.

"We were irritated that we lost to them so we really wanted to get them back," she said. "This time we stuck with our game plan. We played our game instead of theirs."

One thing that haunted the Hawkeyes this weekend was hanging on to the lead. After back-to-back sweeps against Minnesota and Indiana, Iowa once again jumped out to 2-0 leads on both Friday and Saturday nights. However, they allowed their opponents to come back. It took a fifth game to settle the Michigan match on Friday.

"We were just on during the first two games," Oelschlager said after the Michigan match. "That's how we should play all the time. We let once more, with Holmes doing the honors again to give Iowa the victory.

"This team's come through a lot," Holmes said. "All our hard work paid off."
Beglin agreed.
"It's by far and away one of the most gratifying wins ever for this program in any year," she said. "To beat Old Dominion on their home field, to go to the Final Four, is doing it the hard way. I don't think anyone else has done it before. We set a real positive first for what is a very young group of players."

But those probably most gratified with the win were the older players, who remembered the 4-0 loss to Old Dominion in 1992.
"It meant a great deal," Beglin said. "We put on the bulletin board in the locker room, right before we went out on the field, our record against Old Dominion, which is 0-11-1. We talked about no one expecting us to win, no one expecting us to be here, and that there er and he's going to be in the rotation," Davis said. "For sure he's going to be a key if we're going to have a good year."

Despite making only his second public appearance in a Hawkeye uniform, Woolridge said he wasn't nervous.
"I played in it last year so I knew what to expect, you just have to try to relax," Woolridge said. "Plus, we play together so much that it's kind of hard to get nervous against these guys."

straight points in the fourth game to come back from a three-point deficit and take a 10-5 lead. Michigan State got no closer than 10-7 before Oelschlager served her third ace for the game-winning point.
"We've been working hard and doing well," Oelschlager said. "Now all we can do is hope and pray that we keep it up through the end of the season."
Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt had plenty of praise for the team after this weekend, but she added team in the country this year," Beglin said. "They only have one loss. They've been heavily favored to win everything the whole year. They have a great team, I think one of the best they've ever had."

"People aren't giving us much of a chance. In many ways, we're going into the Carolina game just like we went into the Old Dominion game."
The winner of that game will face either James Madison or Northwestern on Sunday for the national championship.

Hawks win third straight

If you limited your sports experience to Kinnick Stadium and Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Saturday, chances are you missed the most exciting finish of the day.

After escaping with a 132-111 victory over Purdue on Friday, the Hawkeye men's swimming team shifted into high gear, defeating Minnesota, 145-138.

Minnesota finished second in the Big Ten last year, and it is considered by some to be the favorite this year.

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Rafal Szukala swims to a second-place finish in the 200 backstroke Friday against Purdue at the Field House Pool.

The meet came down to the final event, the 400-yard freestyle relay. Iowa held a two-point lead and sent its fastest squad of Jim Mulligan, Tim Schnulle, Erik Marchitell and Krysstof Cwalina against Minnesota's Darren Heydanek, Matt Schlessman, Scott Walker and Derak Williams.

It was a close battle to the finish, but Iowa was too strong and held on for its third straight victory this season.

Coach Glenn Patton said he was pleased with leadership from the captains, B.J. Blair, Marchitell and Mulligan.

"We were really upset with our lack of family and our lack of togetherness in the Purdue meet," he said. "We decided we really had to come out and be really supportive of one another (against Purdue), and we had an unbelievably great dual meet. I'm just really pleased with our entire team effort."

The Gophers led the Hawkeyes early by as many as 15 points, but victories by Iowa's Marchitell in the 200-yard individual medley and Tete Gil in 3-meter diving gave Iowa the lead.

Cwalina won the 50 and 100 freestyle events both days and Rafal Szukala took the 200 freestyle on Friday and the 200 butterfly on Saturday. Gil defeated defending NCAA champion P.J. Bogart in 3-meter diving.

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Like a sleeping giant awakening from a long nap, the Iowa men's cross country team flexed its muscles and crushed several opponents at the NCAA District IV Championship in West Lafayette, Ind., Saturday.

The Hawkeyes showed no after effects of a dismal Big Ten Championship performance as they stormed to a 10th place district finish in a field of 32 teams.

Iowa's performance matched Coach Larry Wiecek's best district finish ever. Iowa finished with 270 points and was only two points behind eighth-place Central Michigan.

Iowa pounded Minnesota, Michigan State, and Purdue which it had lost to at the Big Ten Championships. Iowa defeated Ohio State for the second consecutive race.

"In the Big Ten meet, I didn't feel like we competed and here we ran up to our capability," Wiecek said. "It's a real credit to the team that they bounced back. They could have just gone through the motions, but instead they rose to the occasion."

Wisconsin won the title by capturing four of the top 10 positions. The Badgers won with 33 points, followed by Michigan with 55 and Notre Dame with 104.

The Hawkeyes were led by senior Matt Gerard, who finished 35th in a time of 32:03. Senior Troy Hollatz finished 56th. Most importantly, Iowa received strong performances from freshmen Jared Pittman, Mike Bakker, and Chad Feely. They finished 51st, 60th, and 75th respectively.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

The women's cross country team didn't provide enough fireworks in its season finale, but it provided a glimpse of an encouraging future at last Saturday's District IV Championship.

Iowa finished 11th out of 31 teams at the district meet to finish its season. Michigan won the district title by capturing four of the top 10 positions.

Wisconsin's Kathy Butler was the individual winner, but her efforts weren't enough as the Badgers had to settle for second place. Michigan had 32 points followed by Wisconsin (54) and Illinois (128).

The race marked the end of a distinguished cross country career for senior Erin Boland. Boland led the Hawkeyes with her 35th-place finish in a time of 18:17, but failed in her bid to qualify for the NCAA Championships. Boland finished the season with all-conference honors and finished no worse than sixth in any of her races prior to the district meet.

Boland was forced to contend with a case of bronchitis, and she said it hampered her race performance.

"I didn't really have anything in me. I just felt really bad," Boland said. "I have similar goals for the track season and hopefully I'll be healthy by then."

Pauling and Coleman finished 40th and 45th, respectively. Sophomore Brianna Benning and freshman Nicole Brown also ran personal bests.

"I can't say I've seen the team run really well this season. We've lacked the total team performance," Hassard said.

"If we use the track season to develop, we should be able to produce a stronger effort next year."

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

The Iowa women's swimming team fell to 0-5 in the Big Ten Conference after losing to Ohio State and Indiana last weekend.

The Hawkeyes were nipped by Ohio State on Friday, 141-139, then shut down by Indiana on Saturday, 185-107.

This was Iowa's first road test of the season and the Hoosiers and Buckeyes weren't very gracious hosts.

Ohio State took first in every event while Indiana placed first in 13 out of 16 events.

Iowa coach Pete Kennedy said he was pleased with the overall effort.

"This was a real tough weekend for us," Kennedy said. "We came out and held our own, but just came up short on the scoring end. We swam better the first day than the second, but I think it was due to the fact that we were a little fatigued."

The Hawkeyes are still looking for their 100th dual meet victory, but have to wait until Dec. 2-4 when they host the Iowa Invitational for another shot.

NFL ROUNDUP

Bledsoe passes up Minnesota in overtime

Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Drew Bledsoe broke out of his slump in a big way Sunday, while Jeff Blake still doesn't know what one is like.

Bledsoe's 14-yard scoring pass to Kevin Turner 4:10 into overtime brought New England back from a 20-point deficit and gave the Patriots a 26-20 win over the Minnesota Vikings.

The winning pass capped a record performance for Bledsoe, ineffective the past two weeks. He set NFL marks of 45 completions and 70 attempts in throwing for 426 yards and three touchdowns.

Bengals 34, Oilers 31

At Cincinnati, Blake was blessed again in leading the Bengals (2-8) to their second straight win and leaving Houston (1-9) as the NFL's worst team.

Blake (23-of-33 for 354 yards) bounced off the X-ray table and led two late drives on his bruised left ankle.

As Houston took a 31-24 lead with 5:51 on Billy Joe Tolliver's 5-yard TD pass to Webster Slaughter, Blake was in the locker room being X-rayed.

Chargers 14, Chiefs 13

At Kansas City, San Diego (8-2) bounced back from a 13-0 deficit late in the third quarter when Stan Humphries (21 of 36 for 206 yards) threw TD passes of 52 yards to Sean Jefferson, and 5 yards to Duane Young with 6:41 left in the game.

Joe Montana (20 of 46 for 178 yards) was intercepted by Darren

Carrington, who took the ball to the Chiefs' 8 to set up the winning points. The Chiefs (6-4) fell two games behind the Chargers in the AFC West.

Saints 33, Falcons 32

Morten Andersen kicked his sixth game-winning field goal against Atlanta (5-5), this one from 39 yards with eight seconds left, to lift New Orleans (4-6).

LAST GAME AT HOME

Seniors exit with strong showings

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's seniors made the most of their final game at Kinnick Stadium Saturday.

After being honored in a pregame ceremony, the Hawkeyes' senior class put on a show in Iowa's 49-13 win over Northwestern.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry said he couldn't be more pleased for his seniors close their home careers with a big win. Fry thought the Hawkeyes' final home game inspired them.

"That was extremely important to our seniors. They have a lot of pride," he said. "When they came in we went to the Rose Bowl, and

"The fans are unbelievable. I don't think a college player in the United States can play at a better place than Kinnick Stadium."

they went to the Holiday Bowl and they went to the Alamo Bowl. So they've been around and they've seen the good days.

"They really wanted the game today."

Harold Jasper got things started in the first quarter when he reeled in a 26-yard Matt Sherman pass for his 100th career reception. While reaching the century mark was a milestone, Jasper's 101st catch was bigger. Two plays later, Jasper made a diving grab in the end zone for the Hawkeyes' first score of the afternoon.

The seniors also shined on the other side of the ball. Free safety Bo Porter led Hawkeye defenders with 10 tackles and one interception. Porter also scored his first career touchdown when he picked up a punt blocked by Jason House in the third quarter and carried it into the end zone.

"The punt was blocked and it was sitting right there in front of me," Porter said. "I scooped it up and wanted to stay on my feet. I didn't really know where I was at on the field but I looked up and I was in the end zone."

Defensive lineman and team captain Parker Wildeman also was impressive in his final performance at Kinnick. Wildeman tallied seven tackles, including a sack in shutting down the Wildcats' offense. He extremely valuable," Fry said. "He's got such a beautiful touch when he throws the football, a good tight spiral, right on target."

Iowa's passing game was stagnant in its last three games, totaling only 191 yards. But Sherman surpassed that by halftime with 231 yards through the air.

"Everything went right for me," Sherman said. "It seemed like when we were throwing, people were open and all I had to do was lay the ball in there."

Sherman also created big plays with touchdown strikes of 38 yards to Harold Jasper to open the scoring and a 51-yarder to Demo Odems to make it 21-0 in the second quarter.

"I always knew he was good, but he just needed his time to shine," Jasper said.

Sherman was not sacked in the game, and had as much time as he needed in the pocket.

"That's to be expected from our offensive line," Sherman said. "They're getting better every game and as a quarterback you really appreciate that. They work harder than anyone else on the team."

Nearly everything went Iowa's way, forcing five turnovers and scoring in the third quarter when Jason House blocked a punt and Bo Porter picked the ball up and returned it one yard for the touchdown.

Porter's score put the Hawkeyes in control to stay with a 28-7 lead.

"That blocked punt was about as critical as anything that happened," Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said. "It was a case of miscommunication on our part. The crowd noise hurt. Our left end didn't hear the call and he blocked the wrong man."

Once the Hawkeyes got out to a comfortable lead, the running game took over.

Sedrick Shaw rushed for 92 yards in the second half en route to 114 for the game, including a 19-yard touchdown run to make it 35-13 in the third quarter. Shaw needs only 71 more yards to reach 1,000 for the season.

"I guess for the first time all season (1,000 yards) really crossed my mind because I was so close," Shaw said. "It would be a great accomsaid winning his last game in front of a home crowd was important.

"It feels great. The fans are unbelievable," Wildeman said. "I don't think a college player in the United States can play at a better place than Kinnick Stadium."

Fry said he wanted to give all the seniors a chance to play. Quarterback Jefferson Bates, who has been limited this season with an elbow injury, replaced starter Matt Sherman in the fourth quarter. He completed a 10-yard pass to Tavian

Banks in his only attempt.

Ryan Terry gave the seniors' farewell an appropriate ending. After being held to just three yards on six carries, Terry broke away and took the ball 71 yards for the Hawkeyes' final touchdown.

Lollapalooza vets set to freak out I.C.

Ian Corwin

The Daily Iowan

Freakshow-starved Iowa City music fans are in for a seafood extravaganza tonight at the Union Bar & Grill, 121 E. College St. Hard-core ska-funksters Fishbone are going to bone in I.C.'s yard starting at 8, and it's a buffet those in the mood to mosh won't want to miss.

Fishbone's rough-hewn blend of rock, funk, ska and jazz has been around for nearly a decade, taking innumerable twists and turns as the times change. But from the horn-drenched funk of 1991's The Reality of My Surroundings to the razor-edge harshness of their newest release, Give a Monkey a Brain and He'll Swear He's the Center of the Universe, the Los Angeles-based group has always kept one thing unchanged: their inherent ability to rock the house during live gigs.

On the 1993 Lollapalooza tour, Fishbone ground young moshers' faces into the dirt with their vehemently anarchic and audacious live style. During the Des Moines stop on the tour, frenetic lead vocalist and saxophonist Angelo Christopher Moore took time out from playing six saxophones at once to crowd-surf, mosh in the pit; and venture all the way back to the light tower, which he proceeded to climb, singing an entire verse from the top. Meanwhile, bassist John Norwood Fisher, decked out in a vinyl jester's cap, made his physical endowments known to the crowd through his penchant for public exposure.

The band's playful on-stage anarchy, although wildly entertaining, never outshines Fishbone's tight, thumping sound. A seven-piece ensemble which performs as a well-oiled machine without fail, Fishbone's success at rendering their organic, pulsing sound in a live setting seems to be the one thing that's kept the band's fans kicking while adding more admirers to the list with each new tour. Moore grows out his ferocious vocals, Fisher slaps his bass furiously and the Fishbone horn section (Christopher Dowd and Walter Adam Kibby II) fills it all out with blow-hard virtuosity.

With Give a Monkey a Brain Fishbone has broadened its already wide appeal, thanks mostly to producer Terry Date, who has worked with tough-edged acts like Soundgarden and Pantera. Date, co-producing with Fishbone, found an organic core in the band's music which has in turn spun a new thread for Fishbone to pull in its live act.

Tonight's show is a rare chance to see a time-tested rock and ska band at the peak of its powers. Fishbone has always known which direction to go, and its sidetrip into the boneyard of Iowa City is definitely something to wake the neighbors over.

Tickets for the Fishbone show are $11 at the door.

Francois Duhamel/Warner Bros.

Tom Cruise stars as the vampire Lestat in "Interview With the Vampire," Neil Jordan's intense, brooding, vastly entertaining adaptation of Anne Rice's best-selling novel.

Thundering, moody 'Interview' improves on Anne Rice's novel

Ian Corwin

The Daily Iowan

A vastly engrossing morality play which hides behind a triple-whammy thematic shroud, "Interview With the Vampire" pulses and thunders on so many different levels that one is apt to lose track of its best feature: The film is fantastic entertainment.

Brooding in the desaturated atmosphere of Philippe Rousselot's exquisite cinematography, "Interview" is first and foremost, like Anne Rice's novel, a splendidly gothic tale of a vampire who still clings to the human inability to rationalize blood lust. A European earthiness and sensibility, no doubt courtesy of director Neil Jordan, keeps the tortured posturing of the vampire Louis (Brad Pitt) in check. Jordan lets Pitt's moodiness wind poetically in and out of the film's more emotional moments but never lets it overflow into the foreground to eclipse other goings-on.

That philosophical shadow falls over most of "Interview" is length, but Jordan and screenwriter Rice blend in a whiplash dose of suspense and tightly controlled drama to keep it in check. The result is an emotional impact equivalent to several perfectly timed punches to the head. The novel languishes in a visceral core that provides a more drawn-out, syrupy effect. The film, however, condenses this into intermediate wallops, smacking audiences dead in the face every 10 or 15 minutes.

"Interview" is third gift — a jet-black sense of humor that sneaks in and hurls the film over the top — is a pleasant surprise. It's a trait conspicuously absent from Rice's novel, and it makes the book seem a little heavy-handed by contrast.

Tom Cruise, whose casting as the formidable vampire Lestat caused upheaval among Rice's loyal fans, is indispensable to "Interview" in total impact in that regard. He may not be the tall, overbearing and graceful rogue whom Rice had envisioned in her books, but Cruise knows it and works with the flow of his limitations. Instead, he plays Lestat's elitist outlook and bratty pretty-boy charm right up to the "ways of her kind" while she impatiently whines, "I want some more!"

Onscreen, the responsibility for controlling all of these components and creating a cohesive heart for "Interview" falls to Pitt, who rises to his challenge remarkably. His portrayal of Louis, whose moral misgivings about vampirism Lestat describes as "whining," could have drowned the film in excess.

The mere casting of Pitt is a brilliant move to dodge that bullet. Pitt's inherent likability keeps Louis from turning into a plaintive bore; he creates a heart in Louis that beats strongly for the sensual pleasures in life, giving him equal phases of wonderment and shame. His guilt soars in some scenes, but it's checked by a poignant wit which bears itself in others, most notably during those between Louis and his biographer, the interviewer Malloy (Christian Slater).

Of the rest of "Interview" is many components, only the best can be said. Elliot Goldenthal's haunting and provocative musical score is one of the best and most enduring this year. Dante Ferretti's richly detailed production design — lush visions of 19th century New Orleans and spectacular renderings of Parisian nightlife — will undoubtedly garner him an Oscar nomination, as will Sandy Powell's stunning costume designs.

"Interview With the Vampire" exceeds as many expectations as it lives up to — on both literary and cinematic grounds. That's great news for anyone who's read the rest of Rice's "Vampire Chronicles"; judging by "Interview" is cunningly ambiguous ending and its artistic and box-office success, a sequel is something both critics and fans can look forward to eagerly.

edge of pure camp. Essentially, he makes Lestat a threat by transforming him into a first-class nag who can tickle an audience's lust for dark humor as well as frighten them into fits with his tenacity.

Cruise has a perfect sidekick in 12-year-old Kirsten Dunst as Claudia, the little orphan girl whom Lestat endows with immortality while trapping her in the body of a child forever. Dunst plays Claudia for savage laughs as often as she does for poignant drama. She has the cunning of a vampire, yet she possesses the selfish, insatiable appetites of a child. This makes for some truly hilarious scenes in which Cruise, playing a twisted father figure, must show her the

WEEKEND PERFORMANCE

Dance Gala focuses on abstraction

The UI dance department's annual evening of student-performed dance featured the usual variety of artistic images, but concentrated on large-scale all-female ballets.

Tasha Robinson

The Daily Iowan

It was a female-intensive, ballet-heavy year for the UI dance department's annual Dance Gala this weekend. The evening showed a concentration on longer, abstract pieces and a distinct shortage of male performers, but no lack of ingenuity or creativity.

Jeffery N. Bullock's three-act ballet "Bach I" set the stage for the evening with its 13-to-1 female-to-male ratio. Basic was the key word for "Bach I," which featured simple black costumes, a simple blue background and a simple theme. The piece featured a sweeping group of women clustering together until divided by the single male performer.

"Out of the Blue," by UI dance faculty member David Berkey, was both more prosaic and more visually complex. Three couples performed a sequence of evolving solos, duets and ensemble works to torch songs including "Some Enchanted Evening" and "Unforgettable." Flowing costumes, subtle lighting and a triptych of softly curved stone monoliths enhanced the piece's gentle feel, but the graceful flow of the dance's progressions and the poignant and simple romantic images made "Blue" one of the evening's most memorable works.

The highlights of "Falling For Angels," UI dance faculty member Alan Sener's contribution to the evening, were a soaring, ethereal musical score and David Thayer's amazing lighting design, which had the piece's 15 female dancers seeming to appear out of thin air. The choreography was beautifully suited to the soaring 13th century music performed by Anonymous 4, but like many pieces of the evening, the intent was abstract and the execution long.

Guest artist Douglas Nielsen's comic "Ladies and Gentlemen" was another highlight of the evening. As Gala's only comic piece, "Ladies" broke the flow of abstract imagery and emotional appeals with a hilarious series of vignettes halfway between vaudeville and Chaplin-esque slapstick. The piece featured seven women alternately dressed in baggy pants and sheer negligees tussling over a hat and a robe while tumbling in a profusion of configurations about the stage.

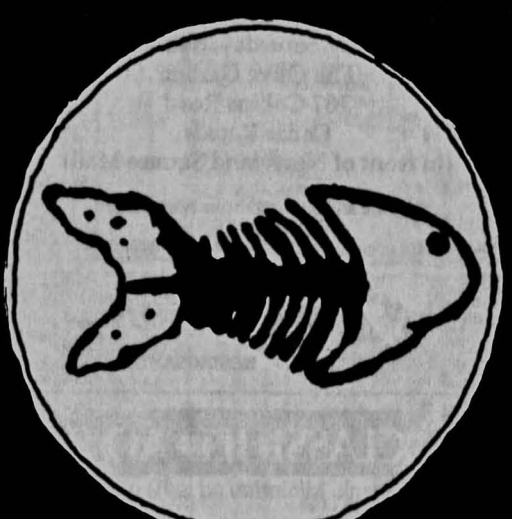

"Pedra," UI dance faculty member Armando Duarte's earth-themed solo dance, was performed winningly and powerfully by Bullock, but again was both long and abstract. A stark set and light design highlighted the beauty of Bullock's sparse, tight dancing, but the piece was especially notable for the beautiful, gliding melodies written by UI graduate student James Romig and performed by Emily Truckenbrod.

The evening ended, unfortunately, on a flat note with George Balanchine's technically awe-inspiring but visually and emotionally flat ballet "Stars and Stripes." Two of the piece's campaigns featured a crowd of ballerinas in eye-popping pink, white and blue costumes cavorting to marches from "Corcoran Cadets" to "Liberty Bell." An admirable but again emotionally flat pas de deux separated the two.

While less accessible to the casual audience member than previous years' works, Dance Gala '94 again gave the spotlight to up-and-coming dancers showing the power and capability of the UI's dance department. As always, stunning imagery and capable production made the evening worth the price of admission.

Radio comedy play highlights festival of indigenous artists

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

"Indian Radio Days," a dark, comedic play that examines racial stereotypes, is one of the highlights of a weeklong celebration of American Indian artists sponsored by the UI's Bureau of Indigenous Artists.

The festival begins tonight and continues through Saturday, with "Indian Radio Days" Wednesday night. Written seven years ago by Roxy Gordon and LeAnne Howe, the play is a somewhat conceptual exploration of the treatment and images of American Indians throughout history. The play spans time from the beginning of the universe through the present day, as well as hinting at the future, humorously debunking various myths and stereotypes along the way.

"We wrote it because we were pained by various stereotypes in history," Howe said. The absurdity of the stereotypes led them to make the play a dark comedy.

The unconventional structure of the play adds a strange but effective dimension to its message. It is performed in the style of an old live-audience radio show, complete with scripts in hand, commercials and weather announcements. The performers take advantage of the concept to poke fun at stereotypes and perceptions of American Indians in commercials and popular culture.

The structure is utilitarian as well, as the live stage show is also perfectly suited for radio. A performance of the play on Columbus Day last year was broadcast on WSUI, WOI in Ames and on National Public Radio.

The performers, collectively the Wagonburner Theater Troope, have some breadth in interpreting their roles, making the performance different each time. "It's a lot of fun for me as a playwright to see people do other things with (the roles)," Howe said. "That's why I do what I do."

The play itself is described as an "ever-evolving saga," and its content has changed with the times. The current manifestation includes such recent issues as racist sports team mascots and high-profile "advocates" such as Jane Fonda, who Howe said claims to support American Indian rights while perpetuating racist representations like the "tomahawk chop" of her husband Ted Turner's Atlanta Braves.

"Stereotypes are not valid no matter who they are coming from," Howe said.

"Indian Radio Days" is funded by a grant from the Iowa Arts Council, and proceeds will help fund other projects of the Bureau of Indigenous Artists.

The bureau's native arts festival, titled "BIA Does CIA" ("Celebrating Indigenous Artists"), will include a variety of arts and crafts from American Indians from Iowa City and elsewhere. All events except "Indian Radio Days" are free and take place in the lounge of the International Center, except where noted. The schedule includes:

- A multimedia show and art exhibition tonight at 7. The art exhibition will remain open throughout the week from 5-7 p.m.
- A workshop on Lakota art and repatriation issues at 12:30 p.m. Thursday, followed by a bead workshop by Linda Walking Woman.
- A screening of "The Gathering," a film by Doyle Robertson and Greg Jarelzeck about the Two-Spirit movement in American Indian culture, at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Moving 1st novel from Caribbean writer explores inevitable pain of adolescence

Lisa Anne Taggart
The Daily Iowan

Caribbean-born writer Kelvin Christopher James has produced a tragedy of the classic kind in his first novel, "Secrets."

James, who will read from his work tonight at Prairie Lights Books, pushes his characters toward their inevitable, ironic fates with the resigned determination of a Greek chorus.

Set in his native Trinidad, "Secrets" is the story of Uxann, a lonely, overweight young girl on the verge of womanhood. Living alone with her overseer father, Seyeh, in the only house in town with indoor plumbing, Uxann has experienced an idyllic, though mostly solitary, childhood. Isolated from the other children because of her status and her weight, Uxann retreats to the lush, vividly described world of the Trinidad forest, with its colorful and lively wildlife, furtive sounds and tantalizing fruits.

"Freed from the sense of eyes on her, Uxann relaxed into herself. Her short-stepped mincing gave way to a loose stride. ... And because not always sight gave secrets, she kept her passage nearly soundless and listened to the forest be alive. Heard its breathy leaves whisper. Heard private talk in whistles and tweets and chirps and squawks of tensions and territories, and rituals and harmonies."

But Uxann cannot hide in the forest forever. "Secrets" traces her reluctant and painful growth into adulthood, facing the complexity and deception that a sexual world offers. Her first period, "the high point of embarrassment in her life," is a moment full of pain: "A stab like a pitchfork swung wild in her underbelly. She moaned in terror as the violence inside clenched longer, biting and wrenching and twisting."

The pains of adulthood only multiply for Uxann. When Keah, one of the pretty girls from Uxann's school and her closest friend, begins a secret affair with the rum-swilling Seyeh, Uxann is mortified, outraged and jealous.

Like those of a Greek tragedy, the dramatic events of "Secrets" are predictable. Yet James seems interested not in surprise, but in creating a fable of Caribbean coming of age. His tragic story of fate operating on people unaware might also be read as an allegory for Caribbean colonial history.

James, whose first book, an anthology titled "Jumping Ship and Other Stories," was published in 1992, has chosen an ambitious topic for a male writer, describing menstruation, emerging female sexuality and childbirth. But by centering his drama of destiny and irony around the life of a lonely young girl, James has added freshness to his hero's tale.

Now a resident of East Harlem, N.Y., James' generally spare prose, which is only occasionally overwritten, highlights the lush sensory detail of the story. With its evocative descriptions and allegorical implications, the book, first published in 1993 and just released in paperback, has the rich feel of myth.

James will read tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. The reading will be broadcast live on WSUI (910 AM). Admission is free.
