Two men sought after Coralville robbery

Police are investigating an apparent armed robbery Sunday night at Bonanza Family Restaurant, Coralville, in which some employees of the restaurant were reportedly locked in the business's freezer.

Details at press time were sketchy, as police were still investigating the matter and were not prepared to release a statement.

Around 10 p.m., police were called to the scene by a report of two African-American males robbing the restaurant with a 9-mm gun and locking people in the freezer, located at the back of the restaurant. Exactly how many people were in the restaurant is unknown. The restaurant closes at 9 p.m. Sundays.

At 11 p.m., Coralville police and Johnson County Sheriff's officers had sealed off the perimeter of the business to make sure possible evidence inside was not touched.

System crash mutes I.C. phones

Tom Schoenberg

The Daily Iowan

A failure of the Iowa City and Coralville phone system Saturday afternoon caused confusion for residents, problems for businesses and a shutdown of emergency services for more than four hours

Around 3:30 p.m. Saturday, US West Communications' central office, corner of Linn and Burlington streets, experienced a failure in its switching equipment, causing an outage for Iowa City and Coralville customers, in Iowa.

"Customers had no dial tone," Gippel said. "They could not make or receive any calls."

Any electronic system connected to the central office through a phone line was affected by the outage, Gippel said. Therefore, credit card services, modems and most ATMs were unusable.

The problem was diagnosed as an internal power problem in the central office switching equipment, and technical experts from Des

U.N. gives go-ahead for raids on Serbs

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - Renegade Muslim forces and Serbs were attacking government soldiers Sunday in northwest Bosnia, apparently trying to recapture lost territory before the United Nations could react Senior U.N. officials met in Zagreb, Croatia, to consider using NATO warplanes to attack Serb forces under expanded powers granted Saturday by the U.N. Security Council.

Government troops in Bihac, in Bosnia's northwestern corner, were under attack by rebel Muslim forces and Serb armor, according to the United Nations and both sides in the fighting. Serb artillery in neighboring Croatia was firing across the border at the government forces.

Serbs captured the waterworks for Bihac, a city of 48,000 people, giving them control of the water supply, said U.N. sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The assaults reflected the determination of the Serbs and of Muslims loyal to warlord Fikret Abdic to the recent government offensive, hopes of averting a NATO attack.

Oakdale construction to foster new businesses

A $3.8 million privately owned complex is being built at the UI Oakdale Research Park in Coralville to add high-tech business growth to the area and more job opportunities for UI students.

The 45,000-square-foot, multiunit project will provide additional office and laboratory space for companies graduating from the Technology Innovation Center, the UI's business incubator, educational and research priorities," said David Skorton, UI vice president for Research. Construction is under way for phase one, which consists of two buildings totaling 24,000 square feet of laboratory and office-space. It is expected to be completed in May.

UroSurge Inc., which develops and markets medical devices for the treatment of urinary problems, is leasing the first building. The company is outgrowing the Technology Innovation Cen-ter, Bauer said.

"Students sometimes graduate with strengths that don't match up with industries in Iowa. We're addressing that by helping spinoffs from the UI's business incubator and recruiting new companies."

Tom Bauer, manager of corporate relations for the Oakdale Research Park or for companies considering locating in the area, said W. Bruce Wheaton, director of the research park.

"The availability of space on the park — or the ability to build it quickly - will help attract and retain companies that require sustained university relationships," he said.

The new companies moving to the research park will also provide more job-placement opportunities for students graduating from the UI, said Tom Bauer, manager of corporate relations for the Oakdale Research Park.

"Students sometimes graduate with strengths that don't match up with industries in Iowa," he said. "We're addressing that by helping spinoffs from the UI's business incubator and recruiting new companies."

The complex, the fourth privately owned development at the research park, will be built in three phases on land owned by Myriad Developers L.C. of Cedar

"The new Myriad development will be an asset as we foster economic development related to relationships.

"We're excited about the opportunity for our company to grow in this area," said UroSurge Presi-dent David Maupin. "I can't say enough about the encouragement we've received from the city of Coralville and the university.'

Other technology-based busi-nesses are being lined up for the econd phase-one building.

Plans for phases two and three are complete, and the buildings will be constructed quickly as the space is needed, Bauer said.

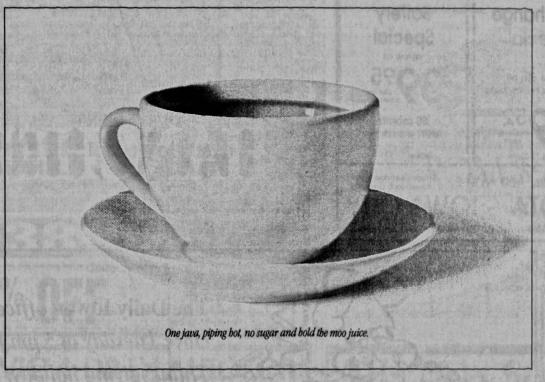

The Oakdale Research Park

was established in 1989 to create an environment providing corporations with easy and sustained access to UI research programs and facilities.

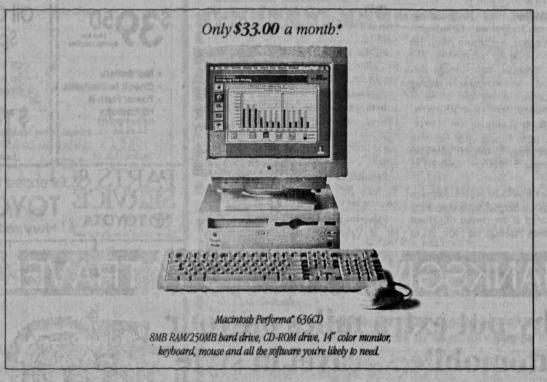

The three privately owned buildings already located at the research park are the Multi-Ten-ant Facility, the Computer-Aided Design Systems Incorporated Building and the Neural Applications Corporation Building.

FORUM FOR I.C. RESIDENTS HELD

Officials clarify need for new water system

Sara Kennedy The Daily Iowan

City officials explained Iowa City's need for new water and wastewater facilities to about 20 residents in an educational program held Saturday in the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn

"I don't want to editorialize and tell you if this is good or bad. It's a decision each person needs to make for themselves," said Dave Elias, superintendent of the Iowa City Water Division.

The purpose of the new facilities is to benefit public health, he said. The city's oldest plant, constructed in 1935 and designed for 20 years of service, is still in operation today.

"We've certainly gotten our money's worth," Elias said. "But concrete and steel don't last forever. The infrastructure is deteriorating. Maintenance is an important part of our activity, but maintenance can't keep something going forever."

FREEZING WEATHER PREDICTED

Fears of frigid season boost business sales

Randolph E. Schmid Associated Press

WASHINGTON - From miners digging road salt under Lake Erie to homeowners buying record numbers of snowblowers, Americans are gearing up for what they fear could be another tough winter.

Sales of warm outerwear started early, said Catharine Hartnett of L.L. Bean, the Freeport, Maine, catalogue dealer.

"Our sense is that outerwear items, which are always popular at this time of year, are even more so," she said, adding that parkas and fleece pullovers have been especially strong sellers.

Snowblowers are also a hot item. Peter Dobbins, vice president of Crandall-Hicks, a wholesale distributor in Westboro, Mass., said sales are up 400 percent over last year at this time.

Sears, Roebuck and Co., based in Chicago, also reports an early rush on snowblowers. Already this year sales have topped the entire 1992

"A lot of people are saying, 'Hey, I'm not going to shovel like that again this year," said Jet Jackson, co-owner of Jackson's Outdoor Sales in Schenectady, N.Y.
"Snow shovels and blowers are going very well; that's happening across the country. Customers are buying early and often," agreed Bob Butler of Hechinger's hardware stores, based in Landover, Md.

People remember last year's nightmare and they want to be prepared, said Butler. The chain of hardware stores, stretching from New York to Virginia, has sold 270 times the volume of snow-melting chemicals as it had at this time a year ago and six times as many ice scrapers, Butler added.

REPUBLICAN FANTASIES

Democratic realities

Republicans couldn't elect one of their own to the White House two years ago, but after their recent elevation to power in Congress, they now seem willing to bypass the executive

The president is no longer the country's leader; congressional Republicans are acting as though that job now belongs to the Republican Party.

House Speaker-to-be Newt Gingrich of Georgia apparently thinks it's now his job to set the nation's social and economic agenda. Speaking before The Heritage Foundation last week, Gingrich said, "It is impossible to maintain civilization with 12year-olds having babies, 15-year-olds killing each other, 17year-olds dying of AIDS or 18-year-olds getting diplomas they can't read. So we are really in a crisis in America, and in every state in the country our civilization is decaying."

He's absolutely correct. But President Clinton is no more responsible for bringing on this crisis than President Bush was responsible for the fall of the Berlin Wall or the collapse of communism. It just happened to make the headlines during his

Our national decay has been creeping for a long time. Republicans have set the national agenda from the Oval Office for 12 of the past 14 years. Had the Republican presidents of the past decade supported rather than opposed sex education and condom distribution in schools, perhaps today there would be fewer 12-year-old mothers and 17-year-olds dying of AIDS.

It is a mind-numbing hypocrisy for any Republican to criticize a 12-year-old mother while at the same time opposing sex education, abortion and the Head Start program.

Republicans could have focused on compassion rather than condemnation. They could have encouraged growth in our schools rather than in our businesses and profits. Republican President Ronald Reagan could have encouraged education through Saturday morning television rather than allow the relaxed standards approved by the Federal Communications Commission he appointed.

Republicans allowed the national decay to grow. How can they now be expected to stop it?

Republicans, and Gingrich in particular, don't really care about the moral rot that is now a "crisis in America." They have proven that through more than a decade of inaction. They sound the alarm now simply because it is politically expedient.

The 9 million children on welfare today will not be helped by a capital gains tax cut. It will be a Republican rallying cry in the next few months and will only serve to show how little congressional Republicans care about the country's children.

Former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, a Republican, said the country couldn't have 536 individual hands on the tiller of the ship of state. He recognized that it was up to the president to chart the nation's course in both foreign and domestic issues.

For the past two years, President Clinton has repeatedly referred to a place called Hope, and through his actions he has brought reality to the abstract concept. Clinton's administration proposed immunizing every child in the country. President Reagan's administration attempted to classify ketchup as a vegetable for school lunch programs.

Which political party really cares about children?

No training received To the Editor:

Dean Aikin must be seriously out of touch with the various departments that comprise the College of Liberal Arts when she says in her Nov. 11 letter to the DI that the number of students in the college who do not receive TA training " ... should be nil and is extremely small." I am now nearing the end of my second semester as a TA in the art history department, and I have received no training at all, nor have my in-class teaching skills been monitored by a faculty member. Thrown to the wolves, you

Stephen Perkins

TA defends professor To the Editor:

Karl Hejlik's article titled "Students call it quits for class" (DI, Oct. 31) is truly a document of our times. It belongs in a time capsule with the recent "Doonesbury" series about the student who sued his college after getting a B+ in math. I am a TA in the history department. I have worked with Professor David Schoenbaum for several years, and I am currently assisting him with the class in question: Historical Perspectives I in the Unified Program. For the record, let me state that I am not writing at the behest of Schoenbaum or anyone else.

The thrust of the DI article was that Schoenbaum's "abrasive style" was the reason why three-fourths of the students originally enrolled chose to drop the course. There were quotes to the effect that Schoenbaum had called the students stupid and had blown up at them. The first charge is untrue, and the second an exaggera-

Ah, you may say, but statistics don't lie. Why then have so many dropped the course? Well, it must be because of "the professor and his attitudes." A far more telling explanation of the dropout rate would be the students and their attitudes.

The students in this course and in others I have led or assisted do have high expectations of themselves, but mostly superficial ones. The course is difficult but worth it - which many of the students were willing to concede — unless you're too busy.

Here is the real story, the one that author Hejlik missed in his shame-and-blame character assassination of Schoenbaum. The students are too busy because: a) the college degree has become in effect a middle-class entitlement, yet b) it is a very costly entitlement, so c) students are in a big hurry to finish, and thus d) they take more courses per semester than even the better-prepared among them can handle properly, much less e) the average high-school graduate who has been shortchanged at the secondary level because f) among other reasons, the high-school diploma is now merely a pre-entitlement entitlement, so that g) when a professor lays on a real meat on the bone college syllabus, even the top students cry bloody murder, and h) sign of the times, guess who gets pilloried?

There are many topics here for a serious college newspaper to investigate. Make it so.

DUANE NOLLEN

Playing 'Hardball' to make it to the top

Socialist Organization (IISO) held a discussion about Generation X at its Nov. 13 meeting. I wanted to hear what Karl Marx had to say about this phenomenon since I am an Generation Xer and proud of it. The night played out as I expected: I was the only non-Marxist there, and everyone else was patting themselves on the back for being good Marxists. The IISO advocated fighting "the system," while I put in my two cents' worth at the end, contending learning the system and working it was the way to go. Though they were civil, I feel my point of view is more constructive in today's world.

The IISO's rhetoric mirrored political science Professor Douglas Madsen's Oct. 13 Political Behavior class lecture about militant ideological parties. Madsen was right: Though the Soviet Union is gone, there are still communists.

The IISO framed Generation X as a struggle against the "ruling class." The media, as the lap dog of the ruling class, created the Generation X myth to divide the working class while making a profit on the side; the image of a Generation X member portrayed in the media is a lazy slacker who sits around getting wasted and listening to Nirvana. The grunge craze fed on this image, and the "ruling class" got rich.

Another classic Marxist message - "It's not your fault things are the way they are, it's the system" - was a major theme of the discussion. The IISO contends the system keeps X-ers down through providing only low-paying jobs and creating competition for these jobs between highschool graduates and college students. Of course, this led to a side discussion about redis-strong Marxist theme.

During the discussion, the IISO rhetoric turned to advocating a violent overthrow of the system. The call to fight back was sounded, advocating smashing the system. At the end of the presentation, IISO members were bragging about the various strikes they supported. Their overarching theme was to bring about change from outside the system.

The IISO views the world as being against it and no one can be trusted. Its amusing critique of President Clinton as the guardian of the status quo and accusations of the media bowing to the government's wishes were worth a few

The IISO presentation was a lot of warmedover Marxism. I am not belittling its personal convictions. It is the fact that Marxism is passé and not the solution for X-er problems that I want to address.

I have gone through the experiences of most X-ers, and I feel I am now on the road to success. I graduated from the UI in 1991 with a bachelor's degree in history. My goal was to attend graduate school to study military and diplomatic history. However, my Graduate Record Exam (GRE) scores were not adequate. and I was locked out of graduate school. Instead, ended up working at a local "discount retailer" for almost two years. My job did not pay well, I could not stand the work environment and the management was annoying.

No one told me what I had to do to be successful; I had to find out on my own. Rather than going through life feeling self-pity and resentment, I decided to do something to redeem

While I was slaving away stocking shelves, I chose to go back to school for a degree in journalism and political science. I figured these

During this time, I read "Hardball," a book my roommate read for Introduction to Political Thought and Action. The themes in this book are what it takes to be a success in the real world and a more practical way for X-ers to succeed, rather than following the Marxist attitude of fighting the system and being bitter when nothing changes for the better.

At the UI, students have access to resources people in the real world do not. X-ers should take advantage and use the system, not fight it. In order to be a success, you have to have a lot of ambition, perseverance and patience. This book illustrates how some ambitious people started from nothing and created successful political careers.

The first chapter, "It's Not Who You Know, It's Who You Get to Know," explains how to network. This is a vital skill you need to develop to let employers and other academics know who you are and what you are capable of doing, rather than being just another Social Security

Another important chapter for X-ers is "Only Talk When it Improves the Silence." This chapter illustrates how listening to people is important in gaining information, identifying key players and knowing the environment you are operating in. This way, X-ers can plot a strategy to work their way out of poverty.

These are only a few valuable lessons to be learned from "Hardball." The only way for X-ers to compete in the job market is to be aggressive and develop powerful friendships. This is a more realistic and emotionally rewarding method of changing your life than thinking everything is stacked against you as the Marxists do.

GUEST OPINION • SHELLEY HUTH

Looking optimistically toward the future

An unforeseeable pain enters the heart of a daughter when she learns her mother has been diagnosed with breast cancer or a granddaughter when she is told that her grandmother, whom she has begged for the past 15 years to stop smoking, is now dying of lung cancer.

Although there is no particular point in time that the feelings of helplessness, loss or fear associated with a disease like cancer disappear, there is a definite instant in which they begin. The moment it is discovered that a loved one, a friend or an associate has become ill, something happens to change the life of everyone involved.

The discovery of the breast cancer gene has stirred controversy over testing for defective genes and the rights of children and their parents to be informed if such genes are found.

The presence of the gene BRCA1, discovered by the federally sponsored Human Genome Project, means there is an 85 percent chance the carrier will one day develop cancer. But one of the major concerns surrounding the discovery is the fact that presently there is little to nothing that can be done to prevent or treat such a disease. Therefore, there is absolutely no reason to tell a child or the family of a child that he or she has the potential to develop cancer years down the road.

carrier does not actually have the cancer yet. He or she is likely to develop it later in life, but even this is not definite.

It is unethical and unfair to expect a person to live for years with such a weight on his or her shoulders. All individuals are entitled to the same right to be able to get up in the morning and feel that their whole lives are ahead of them. We will all die someday; we are fully aware of that. But the key here is that we don't

We live each day of our lives to the fullest and firmly believe in our tomorrows. If we were to wake up each day and think to ourselves, "OK, I have 10 years until I am scheduled to develop cancer," we would all be living very depressed lives. We would get less enjoyment out of our lives, not to mention the fact that we would always be wondering if what we were doing would really be worth it in the end. Like most people, if I knew I was going to contract a terminal illness in five years, I highly doubt that I would choose to spend my days in windowless lecture halls and my nights in front of a

Everyone deserves the same opportunity to live a "normal" life. For most, this includes a childhood, an education, a career, relationships, children and an outlook for the future. If a The disclosure of this type of medical information could have extremely negative effects on was 14 years old that she had an 85 percent Shelley Huth is a senior at the UI.

the life of the potential victim. Remember, the chance of developing breast cancer, it would affect her emotional attachments in relationships and might weigh heavily on her decision whether or not to bear children. This is significant, given the fact that if she is a carrier of BRCA1, she stands a good chance of passing the gene on to her children.

> Another aspect to consider is the effect such a test would have on the lives of children. A child should be able to live a life full of playgrounds and picnics, free of all cares more important than which kind of ice cream to choose. Not only would it be an enormous burden for a child to be told something of this magnitude, it would be very difficult for him or her to comprehend.

> Is it really worth it? Why not just enjoy the time we have and worry about such problems as they arise? The feelings of helplessness and distress begin only when a person is diagnosed with a terminal disease. Those feelings never completely go away. Why should we put ourselves and our children through unnecessary and premature anguish, especially since these defective genes are not guaranteed to become a problem? We have to look optimistically at our future. Until we are able to alter the possible effects of cancerous genes, we should keep our futures out of the reach of human hands and in the palm of our creator.

Insignificant in the scheme of animal rights To the Editor:

I am writing in response to a guest opinion titled "UI Animal Coalition examines the facts behind hunting" (DI, Oct. 18). I'm responding to these so-called "facts behind hunting."

Fact one has to do with hunters not being conservationists. This is a blatant generalization. The statement "Natural orests are also clear cut or burned to allow hunters easy access to certain 'trophy game' " is a fallacy. Neither wildlife management nor hunters themselves are authorized to take such drastic measures. The only group for whom it is ever lawful to do these types of things is the logging industry. It s ludicrous to think that such methods would be beneficial to hunting because clear cutting and burning forests destroys natural habitat.

Fact two: Hunters claim they pay for conservation by buying licenses and other paraphernalia. Actually, this is fact. As of right now, very little of taxpayers' money goes toward conservation. If it weren't for wildlife management, there would not be the wildlife refuges set aside where hunting is pro-

Fact three: Certain species — such as wolves, cougars and bears - have been eradicated because of irresponsible hunting policies, forcing the ecosystem to be disrupted. This is definitely a myth. Hunting alone has not caused the disappearance of these species in lowa; population and the ricultural industries have. The reason why they are gone is because there is no habitat for them here.

Fact four: Doing away with the population controls of hunted species would restore the natural balance between the species and their food, thus eliminating future starvation. This is a misinformed statement. Hunting is not the main population control with any of these animals. The number of animals that die each year from being hunted is insignificant here.

Fact five: Hunting weakens the gene pool. Yes, it is true that hunters want to kill the largest and strongest animals. The true fact, though, is that this is idealistic. Rarely are hunters skilled enough to kill the biggest and best animals. These animals are obviously the smartest ones because they have avoided being killed in previous years and therefore are probably older and have already reproduced.

The purpose of this response is to show that in the scheme of animal rights, hunting is insignificant. I can think of many other ways that cruelty is inflicted upon animals that deserve more attention than this issue does.

Additional hunting facts offered

In the Oct. 18 DI, Abigail Leisinger presented her guest opinion on the "facts" behind hunting. These "facts" were actually her own misinformed generalizations perpetuated by her, as well as her fellow UI Animal Coalition members.

Leisinger's fact: "Hunters only care about 'conserving' certain 'game' species and increasing their populations to protect their right to kill the very same wildlife

The truth: Hunters' money helped bring the American bald eagle back from near extinction to the point that it is no longer considered an endangered species.

Leisinger's fact: "The relatively small amount each hunter pays does not cover the cost of 'nongame' wildlife pro-

The truth: The "relatively small amount" hunters and shooters contributed to the U.S. economy last year was $14

Leisinger and other members of the UI Animal Coalition favor the introduction of contraceptives as a method of controlling deer populations, yet they are worried about hunters killing healthy deer and weakening the gene pool. However, introducing chemicals into the gene pool have catastrophic effects. Look at what happened when we introduced a harmless little pesticide called DDT

As you can see, Leisinger's "facts" are a bit misleading at best, if not outright lies. Let me present you with a few facts

America's 20 million hunters and 6 million target shooters annually fund more than 75 percent of the cost of wildlife management in the United States through license fees and excise taxes. In 1992, the cumulative economic benefit of the hunting and shooting sports in this country was estimated to be more than $35 billion and 680,000 jobs.

The efforts and contributions of shooting sports enthusiasts in 1994 alone helped buy more than 4 million acres of wildlife habitat and lease an additional 50 million acres. Nearly 70 percent of the usage of these habitat areas is for activities other than hunting, such as camping, hiking, bird watching and nature photography. Hunters are safe — all 50 states have some form of hunter safety course, and all but two require the course before purchasing a hunting license.

To the Editor:

In one year, $615,329,000 was spent by persons hunting in Iowa. This is a staggering figure; it is also my first rebuttal to the guest opinion titled "UI Animal Coalition examines the facts behind hunting" by Abigail Leisinger (DI, Oct. 18). This fact comes from the 1991 National Survey Of Fishing, Hunting and Wildlife Associated Recreation by the U.S. Department of the Interior's Fish and Wildlife Ser-

Leisinger stated that hunters only only pay for conservation, but they bring a large amount of revenue to our state. It is not just the contribution made by the purchasing of licenses and stamps, but it's the gas they pump, the food they buy, the restaurants they visit and the countless pieces of clothing and equipment they purchase right

Another fact the author stated was: "Hunters like to kill the healthiest, strongest and largest animals." According to a study conducted in 1993, of the 194,000 deer hunted and tagged, only one was of record book standards. This clearly defies that fact. The article goes on to explain that this weakens the gene pool. There are regulations in effect that prevent this from

This article makes it clear that hunters are not conservationists and claim to pay for conservation. They not certain game populations to protect their right to kill these animals. The vast majority of hunters would be offended by a statement like this. I asked an avid hunter about this very topic. He felt you cannot be a true hunter without being a conservationist. He said you have to love nature and have an appreciation for it to be a

Hunters are not always the barbaric animal slaughterers they are sometimes made out to be. The article explains that most hunters kill for recreation. There are other aspects that need to be explored as well. One of these is that people hunt for food as well as for sport. The meat that comes from game is most often eaten, and the hides and pelts are sold. Another aspect is that many young people are picking up on the idea of hunting as a sport. This is a habit that society should support. It gives young people something to focus on and keeps them from falling prey to some of the other bad habits exhibited by the youth of today.

I am writing in support of the guest opinion written by Mike Nixon about the seven RAs that got fired (DI, Oct. 17). In the article, Nixon stated he was in favor of Burge / Daum Residence Hall Coordinator Cheryl Hoogerwerf-Reardon's decision. She has been highly criticized for the action she took against the seven RAs.

Although three of the RAs have been reinstated since that time, I still have a strong opinion concerning the issue. I totally agree with the editorial written by Nixon. He brought out many excellent examples that sparked my

In his editorial, Nixon wrote about how this act by the seven RAs has put a damper on the position of being a RA in general. He said residents will no longer respect or look up to their RA as an authority figure. I have seen a specific example of this disrespect.

On Friday, Oct. 21, I was walking down a hallway in Currier Residence Hall. I peeked in an open door and I saw an RA I recognized talking to a resident in his room. I stopped after I passed the door because I heard the resident yelling at the RA. The resident must have gotten caught with alcohol in his room because that was the sole subject of their conflict. I overheard the resident telling the RA he didn't care what the rules were, he wasn't going to pour his beer down the sink. I also heard the resident say, "Everybody drinks, even RAs" in a cocky, sarcastic voice. I asked myself if this would really have happened if those seven RAs had not gotten caught. In this specific situation, I can see how the respect is not there anymore. I felt bad for this RA. What did he do? Seven RAs screw up, and this RA

In his editorial, Nixon writes the RAs were knowingly breaking a policy and now they are being punished for it. RAs, just like all the residents, all have got to uphold the policies of residence halls

Students living in the residence halls are supposed to look up to RAs. RAs like Nixon have a difficult job which requires a lot of patience and understanding. When an innocent RA gets blamed for the act of seven others, it is

Kevin Wobig, manager of Pizza Pit, 214 E. Market St., said they had planned to be busy because of the UI football game, but the outage caused business to lag during the game.

"Things got real slow, but we waited around hoping a lot of other pizza places would close and we would stay open," Wobig said. "When (phone service) came on, we had to turn the phones off because we had so many orders."

Despite inconveniences caused by the outage, the telephone systems are now stable, Gippel said. However, US West Communications will analyze the system today to find out exactly what caused the problem.

"This happens very infrequently," Gippel said. "We have had cables cut before, but to have a central office down is very unusual."

Each semester, the Academic Programs Office handles fewer than two dozen cases in which students are told during their final year that they are short credits, Flaherty said.

Counselors are careful to avoid mistakes, said Juliet Kaufmann, director of the Undergraduate Academic Advising Center.

"It's a complicated issue because in some departments there's numeric order, but in other departments there's no numerical order," Kaufman said. "It's actually confusing."

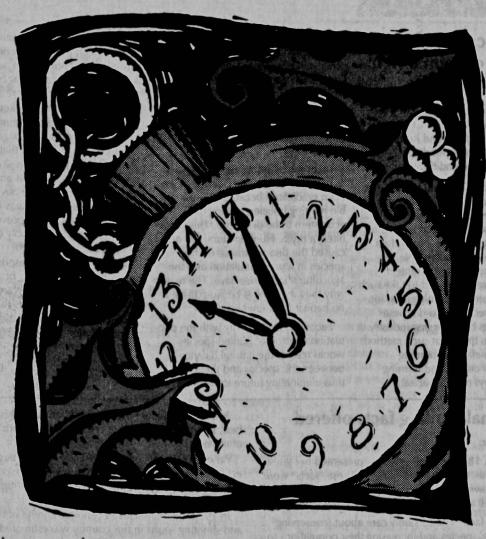

The Educational Policies Committee voted to make the language about duplication and regression in the Schedule of Courses more explicit for the fall 1995 guide.

Degree evaluations help keep students on track, although there are still some mishaps, Flaherty said.

"I was very pleased to see how far the UI is with degree evaluations," he said. "One big area students get caught in is when they take math levels at the basic level that don't count toward graduation.'

Minnesota ends up last in league after 49-42 loss to Hawkeyes

Patrick Regan The Daily Iowan

MINNEAPOLIS - The defenses took the night off Saturday at the Metrodome as Iowa out-gunned Minnesota 49-42 in the highest scoring contest in the history of the 103-year football rivalry.

With the victory, Iowa finished seventh in the Big Ten Conference at 3-4-1, 5-5-1 overall.

Minnesota had a chance to tie or win the game late in the fourth quarter. But thanks in part to a sack by Parker Wildeman, Iowa's defense held the Gophers when it counted.

"I really think we're a bowl team and anybody who wants to argue against that is crazy because we

Hawks fight off late Marathon comeback

David Schwartz The Daily Iowan

MOLINE, Ill. - It may have only been an exhibition game, but the Iowa men's basketball team's 94-92 victory over Marathon Oil Sunday afternoon brought out all of the fight and character in the Hawkeyes

Intense, smothering defense and smart play down the stretch provided Iowa the edge over a Marathon team, which had earned victories over Kansas State and Iowa State in the past week

"We've been stressing defense," Coach Tom Davis said. "The first half, especially, from the 3-point line. We put pressure on them and they didn't shoot very well." The Hawkeyes led most of the second half until Marathon tied the score at 74 with eight minutes remaining. The score remained tied until Marathon's

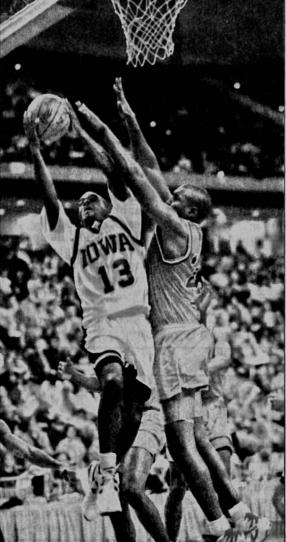

Kevin Lynch, a former guard at Minnesota, hit a 3pointer to give Marathon an 82-79 lead. Marathon's lead was four with one minute remaining when Kenyon Murray's fast break dunk brought Iowa to within a basket and the crowd to its feet.

The mood was quickly reversed, however, when Marathon's Derek Rucker buried a 3-pointer with 45 seconds remaining.

But The Mark erupted once again as sophomore forward Jess Settles retaliated with 3-pointer of his own to bring Iowa within two points.

Goalkeeper Jessica Krochmal had 10 saves for the Hawkeyes. North Carolina's Jana Withrow and Michelle Kelley had two saves

The Iowa volleyball team extended its winning streak to six matches last weekend with a pair of road victories over Northwestern and Wisconsin.

In arguably the most important match the Hawkeyes have had to date, Iowa edged the Badgers, 6-15, 16-14, 18-16, 14-16, 15-13 Saturday night to move the Hawkeyes' conference record to 12-6.

Friday the Hawkeyes (22-8) defeated Northwestern, 15-10, 11-15, 11-15, 15-9, 15-13. Leading the Iowa charge both nights was sophomore Jennifer Webb. Webb recorded a career-high 25 kills on Friday and another 22 on Saturday, both team-highs. Sophomore Katy Fawbush added 19 and 21, respectively.

Webb said that despite the inconsistent play, the team remained confident.

"It didn't really seem like we were ever at a deficit," she said. "At one point we were down 12-4, but we didn't feel like we were down.

We played a little sluggish this weekend. We had to turn ourselves around more than once," she added. "We'll need to be a little sharper this weekend, espe-

son," Wildeman said. "We had a mediocre season but this just isn't a mediocre team." A crowd of 53,340 witnessed 12 touchdowns and 997 yards of total offense, 560 by the Gophers.

"How you can have 560 yards of offense and score 42 points and lose will drive you nuts," Minnesota coach Jim Wacker said.

The game was a see-saw battle as the lead changed hands four times and both squads had an answer for every scoring threat.

Minnesota running back Chris Darkins broke free for 188 yards rushing and three touchdowns. Iowa answered with Sedrick Shaw, who scored twice and totaled 156 yards of offense including 73 on the ground. The sophomore finished with 1,002 for the season.

"He did a lot of things that you'd never ask a freshman to do and he did it extremely well."

Iowa coach Hayden Fry was impressed with Sherman, a redshirt freshman who made his second career start. "In two ball games he has played like a veteran. That's the best compliment I can give Matt," Fry said. "He did a lot of things that you'd never ask a freshman to do and he did it extremely well."

A 21-point scoring explosion in the final 71/2 minutes of the third quarter by the Hawkeyes proved to be the difference.

Trailing 32-28, Sherman hit Demo Odems on a 34-yard scoring strike to give Iowa the lead. Following an interception by Iowa's Kerry Cooks, the Hawkeyes scored again on one of the most improbable plays of the season.

With Iowa at the 9-yard line, freshman Tim Dwight took a pitch from Sherman, rolled to his right,

"We were fortunate enough to catch them in man coverage," Fry said. "Obviously you don't have anyone of defense assigned to play pass defense on the quarterback."

After the catch, Sherman hoisted the ball in the air and looked up towards the Metrodome ceiling in disbelief.

"It's my first touchdown reception ever and it's something as a quarterback you don't get too many chances like that and I was excited for it," Sherman said.

Iowa found yet another way to score on the ensuing kickoff. A hit by Mick Mulherin forced Minnesota's Rishon Early to fumble at the 10-yard line and Bo Porter scooped the ball up and returned it for the score, putting the game out of reach at 49-32.

It was the second week in a row that Porter scored a touchdown.

Dramatic comebacks are quickly becoming a trademark of this year's Iowa men's swimming team.

After defeating Minnesota on the last event of the day Nov. 12, the Hawkeyes 400 meter freestyle relay team did it again. Jim Mulligan, Erik Marchitell, Rafal Szukala and Krzysztof Cwalina teamed up and swam a 3:01:12 to help the Hawkeyes move ahead of Texas A&M, 335-330, and win the Husker Shootout.

"I was really proud of them for that. They had an unbelievable swim," coach Glenn Pat-ton said. "They're developing a lot of pride in both our 200 free relay and the 400 free relay. They think they're unbeatable in that. That's good that they think that, and they are showing that they are unbeatable in that."

The Hawkeyes had three individual champions on the day in Krzysztof Cwalina, who won the 100 freestyle, Tete Gil in 3-meter diving and Rafal Szukala in the 200 butterfly.

"We had an absolutely great weekend," Patton said. "We started out a little sluggish Friday night, but we came in Saturday and got after it. The guys swam with a lot more aggression. It was a long and very tiring meet, but the guys swam very well."

At Friday's Sprint Classic, the Hawkeyes finished tied for second place with Kansas. Nebraska was the winner, with Texas A&M and Missouri rounding out the field.

Cwalina won the 50- and 25meter freestyle events. He was also a member of the winning 200 freestyle relay team.

'Stomp' pounds out hit show

Paul Ferguson The Daily Iowan

Banging, clicking and clapping their way into Hancher Auditorium, the eight British performers behind "Stomp" delivered an amazing performance and a rollicking good time this weekend.

The sparse stage, which included a junkyardlike urban backdrop composed of a metal framework, sheet metal siding, fences, ladders and an assorted collection of scrap metal, was the only contextual grounding for an extraordinary mixture of postmodern tap dance, industrial symphony and cathartic noise.

The show began as director Luke Cresswell pushed a broom onto the stage with a look of boredom, evidently resigned to the task at hand. As though just discovering the interplay of the sounds of his work, he got a little rhythm going, which seemed to brighten his mood. The rhythm became increasingly complex as he was joined, one by one, by five men and two women, each of whom added slightly to the joyful cacophony. By the end of the first scene, the performers had introduced rhythm to a captivated audience as a celebration of life and sound, borne on the simplest of noises from the crudest of instruments. Anyone who witnesses what "Stomp" does with common household items will probably never look at housework the same way again.

Each scene of "Stomp" explored the noise-making potential of a dif-ferent type of makeshift instrument in an increasingly complex percussive excursion. Matchboxes were tapped and shaken, rubber pipes of varying lengths were beaten on the floor, producing odd, hollow notes. Even Zippo lighters were turned into instruments, opened and lit in quick, clicking

In one of the most inventive scenes, four of the performers entered the stage with kitchen sinks chained around their necks, and Cresswell proceeded to bang out a basic rhythm as the other three squeaked wet rubber gloves along the metal surfaces and banged on pots.

Tight, masterful choreography was the key to the flawless performance and the backbone of "Stomp" 's sound. The eight percussionists each played a small but crucial part, and together they functioned as a single noise organism, or perhaps a well-oiled machine. Positioned on different parts of the stage, each performer created a unique rhythm that interacted with the rest, either physically or musically, in delightfully unexpected ways. The performers also took on character roles that added a comic dimension to their performance. While their characters were rough archetypes - one was overly aggressive, another was a vain performer, a third was a perpetual underdog - they contributed a human element to a somewhat mechanical show. The characters frequently tried to outdo one another, engaging in mock battles when the competition became heated and scoffing when the others showed off.

TONIGHT

Beware, America: David Letterman is doing a special

Frazier Moore Associated Press

NEW YORK - David Letterman crashes CBS prime time at 9 CST tonight with his "Late Show Video Special." All normal Americans stand back.

Reprising classic video segments from 15 months of "Late Show," Letterman's prime-time hour includes such favorites as Letterman and Paul Shaeffer golfing with a Sumo-wrestler caddy, Letterman and Zsa Zsa Gabor on an L.A. fast-food pig-out and a bluesmocked Letterman filling drive-up orders at McDonald's.

It may be just what CBS needs to shore up its prime-time ratings. "I won't lie to you," said Letterman, who has taken frequent jabs at the network's ratings plunge. "Things don't seem to be as strong as everybody would like them to ... Prime time scares the wits out of me. I've never felt that I was really what people were interested in seeing in prime time. You've got time to even pay the light bill, so it's scary to me.' Of course, prime time has been pretty scary for CBS, too, at least until last week, when the network saw its prospects improve with the miniseries "Scarlett."

to attract large numbers in prime

But "Scarlett" is a sore subject with Letterman. Few viewers know he was up for the Rhett Butler

"I came very close," he said.

Lois Greenfield/Boneau/Bryan-Brow

"Stomp," the British percussion group with an abiding love for brooms, trash cans and kitchen sinks, thrilled a packed house at Hancher Auditorium this weekend.

worked best in one scene in which several of the characters sat in the center of the stage, trying to read newspapers but were distracted by the others' nervous habits. As usual, a rhythm arose out of their a mess was immediately followed twitching and crinkling, but the by one that cleaned it up. way they bickered without words "Stomp" 's combination of charac-made it one of "Stomp" 's most ters who interacted with the audiamusing scenes.

"Stomp" expected a bit more of its audience than most Hancher performances. After pausing the show to give a nasty look to two late-comers, Cresswell made the first of several attempts to get the audience to repeat a simple twoclap rhythm. He became mockexasperated with the audience's idea that the group played on throughout the performance.

Images of work permeated the show and provided the setting for several of the scenes. Sweeping, washing dishes, mining and other forms of labor turned into musical most rousing experiences ever to work less tedious. Their method and class-hurdling event that

The character interaction class life, and it ascribed a certain feeling of purpose to otherwise menial tasks that normally just seem like work. The work ethic was also integrated into the show's structure, as any scene that made ence and the idea of rhythm as a strategy for combating the boredom of physical labor put it somewhere between real-life entertainment and fiction. While the characters were clearly trying to make the audience laugh, it wasn't difficult to envision them as a group of workers who decided to make a game of their work, becoming their inability to get it quite right, an own audience. The mild feeling that the audience was eavesdropping added yet another level to the performance.

The enormous success of "Stomp" in America and Europe only underscores the fact that it is one of the activities, suggesting that getting a grace a stage. It may not be fine rhythm going is one way to make art, but "Stomp" is an age-, race-
