MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Jeffrey Dahmer was attacked and killed while cleaning a prison bathroom Monday in a gruesome end for the man who strangled and dismembered 17 boys and men in Dahmer's slaying and the severe beating of another prisoner at Columbia Correctional Institution. The suspect, Christopher J. Scarver, is serving a life sentence for murder, authorities said. They wouldn't speculate on a motive.

"It's not as brutal as what he did to our children," said Shirley Hughes, a mother of one of Dahmer's victims. "This was just a quick way out."

Dahmer had been in prison since July 1991, when a handcuffed man who had escaped from him led police to an apartment containing body parts packed in oil drums, skulls saved as mementos and one or two hearts Dahmer said he had know that he didn't have the gumption to do it himself, so I had predicted that the day would come when he would be killed in prison," said Gerald Boyle, Dahmer's lawyer at his trial.

The 34-year-old former chocolate factory worker, who was serving 16 life sentences, had been attacked in prison once before. In July, an inmate tried to cut his throat during a chapel service, but the razor blade attached to a plastic handle fell apart before it could hurt Dahmer.

Monday's attack occurred as all three men were working on a cleaning detail in the recreation area of the maximum-security prison. Scarver was convicted in 1992 of murdering Steve Lohman, who was shot in the head at the Milwaukee office of the Wisconsin Conservation Corps, where he worked. Scarver isn't eligible for parole until 2042.

A bloody broom handle was found at the scene, but Corrections Secretary Michael Sullivan said he didn't know if it was the murder weapon.

Flag to fly at half-staff for UIHC employee

The flag atop the Old Capitol will fly at half-staff for UI Hospitals and Clinics employee Jareen A. Carney Ames today.

Ames, 36, and her husband were killed in a car accident on Nov. 18 in Moberly, Mo. She worked at the UIHC Neonatal Intensive Care Unit blood gas lab.

A memorial fund has been established at the Stacy-Lewis Funeral Home in Columbus Junction, Iowa.

Survivors include Ames' stepson, Matt; and her daughter, Megan Carney.

Stringer sues husband's doctor for negligence

UI head women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer is suing the doctor who treated her husband, William Stringer, claiming the physician negligently caused her husband's premature death. William Stringer was treated in November 1990 and again from October to November 1992 by Dr. Fred Ovrom. William Stringer, 47, died on Nov. 26, 1992 of a heart attack. Towncrest Internal Medicine, 2460 Towncrest Drive, where Ovrom practices, is also named in the suit.

Stringer

Stringer and her children claim they lost William Stringer's companionship and support because of his premature death. The amount of the suit wasn't disclosed, but records submitted to the court included medical, hospital and funeral expenses, as well as the loss of his future earnings.

UI junior Leah Goodman lights a Menorah at the Hillel Foundation, 123 E. Market St., as UI freshman Daniel Orenstein, UI sophomore Ian Dubin and UI sophomore Adam Fox look on.

Monday marked the second day of the traditional Hanukkah celebration. Dubin, president of the Hillel Student Board, expects 30 to 40 students will attend the group's Hanukkah rituals this year.

Hanukkah illuminates Jewish traditions

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

Although many Jewish UI students are away from home during Hanukkah, which began Sunday, the Hillel Foundation offers the chance for them to celebrate together by lighting a Menorah and eating latkes tonight.

Ian Dubin, a UI sophomore and president of the Hillel Student Board, said the foundation, 123 E. Market St., expects that 30 to 40 students will attend to observe traditional Hanukkah rituals.

"Anytime we have a holiday and celebrate, it provides a sense of community," Dubin said. "It's a way to be with other people, rather than lighting the candles by yourself and saying, 'Oh, that's nice.'"

Rabbi Jeff Portman of the Agudas Achim Congregation, 602 E. Washington St., said Hanukkah isn't a major holiday for Jews.

"Hanukkah is thought to be a major holiday only because of its close proximity to Christmas," Portman said.

The tradition comes from A.D. 165 when the Jewish nation, after years of religious persecution by the Syrians, rebelled and entered their Jerusalem temple to rededicate it. Upon entering, Jewish leaders found only enough oil to light the Menorah, the ceremonial candelabrum, for one day. After lighting it, however, the oil burned for eight days. Hanukkah celebrates the "miracle of the oil."

In addition to lighting the special ninebranched Menorah, the oil is used to cook latkes, the potato cakes that are a traditional Hanukkah food. In Israel, oil-cooked doughnuts are also enjoyed this time of year, Portman said.

Although Hanukkah is a minor celebration in the Jewish tradition, Portman said it serves an important function for Jewish people in the United States.

"For American Jews, Hanukkah is important because it allows them to celebrate being different," Portman said, adding that religious freedom in America has had a positive influence on the Jewish tradition.

UI sophomore Josh Kamen celebrated Hanukkah every year with his family until he came to college. He said he doesn't celebrate it now because it usually ends before he gets home for winter break.

"We lit the Menorah every night for the eight nights and gave gifts each night also," Kamen said. "My parents also told us the story of Hanukkah, about the eternal flame and

REGISTRATION DRIVE ATTACKED

Auditor defends voter recruitment

Mick Klemesrud
The Daily Iowan

The cost of the $5,110 UI student voter-registration drive didn't fuel complaints, said Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett — it was that conservatives wanted to suppress student turnout.

In late October, the Auditor's Office used county funds to mail 14,165 voter-registration cards to UI students not registered to vote in the county.

Slockett defended the registration drive for the Nov. 8 election at last Tuesday's Johnson County Board of Supervisors' meeting after Johnson County Board of Supervisors Co-chairman Steve Foss, a Republican, charged it was a "waste of money."

"It's all part of a campaign by Republicans and conservative Democrats endorsed by the Republicans to beat up on the students," Slockett said.

Foss said Slockett's arguments are "a farce."

"In my view, it is simply a matter of cost; $5,100, in my view, was a waste of money," Foss said.

There are a number of post-card registration stations in the area, and anyone can call the Auditor's Office if they're not sure where to go, Foss said.

Subleasers prove difficult to come by

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

UI students graduating in December may be busy planning their futures, but many are also thinking about what they're leaving behind: apartments they need to sublease.

UI senior Grayson Higby and UI graduate Trish Bryant have been trying to sublease their apartment since the week before Thanksgiving. Despite many interested callers, Higby said they have not hooked anyone.

"We're in kind of a bad situation because we live in a one-bedroom apartment for $520," Higby said. "The location is great — we're right next to Gabe's Oasis — but it's unattractive to pay $520 dollars just for one person."

Almost everyone who has called was looking for a single room but not to share, he said.

Higby said he plans to go to graduate school at the UI but wanted to go back to his hometown of Davenport for a while. He said if he can't sublease the apartment, he may just stay and begin graduate school next semester.

Higby and Bryant aren't the only residents trying to rent an apartment. AUR Downtown Apartments, 414 E. Market St., is looking for roommates for 20 apartments and is trying to sublet 22 apartments. AUR owns about 2 percent of the apartments in Iowa City.

Westgate Villa, 600-714 Westgate, and Emerald Court Apartments, 535 Emerald St., had nine apartments available for sublease, said Michelle Holcomb, resident manager of the two complexes. She said she expects 12 to 15 apartments to become available by the end of January.

"Subleasing can be difficult at this time of year," Holcomb said. "It's a cooperative effort between the residents and myself."

The approximately 200 students who leave the residence halls during the school year usually can't fill all the apartment vacancies, said

Professor zooms in on messages in photography

UI art and art history Associate Professor Margaret Stratton gets inspiration for her work from a number of sources, whether they be of this world or the next. Stratton, who has been teaching at the UI since 1985, is a photographer and videographer whose work has been screened at Harvard Uni-

"Let me see, I used to do portraits. What should I do with my hands?" art and art history Associate Professor Margaret Stratton asked herself when she suddenly found she was at the other end of the camera. Among other classes, Stratton teaches Intermediate Photography this semester and next spring.

do," she said. "If you have a high-quality means of producing your work, you're going to be taken more seriously."

Stratton also stresses the importance of critical interpretation of photography.

"I try to teach ways of looking at photographs and media so students are not passive observers, so they can understand the prejudices," she said. "I think everything is propaganda; photographs are all propaganda in one way or another."

Stratton patterns her classes around the work of other photographers and challenges her students to build on the ideas presented.

"I show slides by other people and then I say, 'Now think of this in terms of what you could do in response to this idea,'" she said. "I show them what other people have thought about."

Stratton's advice to her students is to try new angles — literally — in their work.

"The only advice I give is to use the camera. Put the camera on the ground, stick it up in the air, turn it sideways," she said. "Move the camera. Get it off the tripod."

Stratton, who was a visiting professor at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago for the 1992-93 school year, said she took her childhood inspiration from photojournalists.

"When I was a kid, my hero was (Life magazine photographer) Margaret Bourke-White. She shot everything," Stratton said. "She was running around in khaki pants with her camera and she had short hair."

She said her inspiration now comes from filmmakers, most notably Yvonne Rainer, director of "Journeys to Berlin."

UI sophomore and art major Trey Runcie is in Stratton's Intermediate Photography class and said Stratton is matter-of-fact in her teaching and that she explores the meanings behind photographs.

"She's a straightforward teacher," he said. "We're learning the different ways photography can make statements."

Stratton's work is exclusively black-and-white, and she said she uses that format because it is beautiful and captures places in time that cannot be visited again.

"Black-and-white is a beautiful system. I just really love black-and-white," she said. "Black-and-white is so elegant and is also more nostalgic."

Stratton said her love of photography stems from a love of observation.

"You really have to enjoy looking at things," she said. "Photography is pure visual pleasure."

versity and is currently on display as part of the National African-American Museum Project of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

Stratton's latest project, a video titled "Kiss the Boys and Make Them Die," was screened at Harvard last week. In the video, Stratton used the story of a voyeuristic ghost that haunted her childhood home to explore invisibility, desire, lesbianism, women in psychotherapy and memory. She was especially concerned with how people remember events and what events people choose to remember.

"I used the ghost as a metaphor to talk about the authenticity or lack of authenticity in memory," Stratton said. "Because what do you remember? Do you remember what really happened or do you remember what you think happened?"

Although the project took a year and a half to complete and was a large part of her life, she said she tries to keep her artistic and teaching lives separate.

"My artwork is separate from my teaching," she said. "My artwork is personal; my teaching is professional."

Stratton said her teaching style emphasizes two points: the technical aspect of photography and a critical interpretation of the purpose and impact of photography.

"I teach an absolute sense of techniques — that's just how to make a photograph. That's what I'm here to Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci and former U.S. gymnastics champion Bart Conner get engaged Monday in a church during a symbolic religious service in front of a Romanian Orthodox priest in the town of Deva, Romania, 180 miles from Bucharest. Comaneci and Conner traveled to Deva, Romania's famous gymnastics training center, five years after Comaneci left Romania and defected to the United States.

Dive operator Chris Sawyer took the Gores on two 20-minute dives on shallow reefs.

Between dives, they chatted about the history of the islands, the environment and — what else? — local politics, Sawyer said Monday.

"It's something I'll remember for a long time," Sawyer said.

Sawyer, who normally charges $595 for a half-day dive, would not say what he charged the vice president.

The Gores arrived Wednesday, stayed on St. Thomas and left Sunday.

Japanese royalty visit Poland for art center opening

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Prince and Princess Takamado of Japan are on an artistic mission.

The first members of Japan's royal family to visit Poland were invited by President Lech Walesa to open a Japanese art and technology center.

The prince, a cousin of Emperor Akihito, and his wife arrived Sunday. They met with Walesa and other dignitaries on Monday then presented 15 grand pianos to the Frédéric Chopin Music Academy in Warsaw.

Today they are to visit Krakow, where they are to open the $5 million art center.

The center was designed by Japanese architect Arata Isozaki to house exhibitions of Japanese art from the $50 million collection of turn-of-the-century Polish traveler Feliks Jasienski.

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — The notion might have driven Coco loco: Danny Aiello attired in a lovely little Chanel outfit.

"I look like Margaret Thatcher," the actor said of his cross-dressing performance in the upcoming Aiello Robert Altman movie "Pret a Porter."

Aiello plays a fashion director for a Chicago department store who has a secret penchant for wearing women's clothes.

"Altman says to me, 'Danny, I want to bring you out of the closet,'" Aiello told The Record of Hackensack. "I said, 'Bob, no way. I am the last of the heterosexuals, and I am standing firm.'"

But Aiello, star of "Moonstruck" and dozens of other movies, went along in the end.

The movie also stars Teri Garr, Julia Roberts, Sophia Loren and Lauren Bacall.

Worker error faulted for phone outage

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Nov. 19 Iowa City telephone failure was caused by phone company employees who accidentally removed a grounding cable while dismantling old equipment last summer.

Around 3:30 p.m. on Nov. 19, the switching equipment at the US West Communications central office, 302 S. Linn St., shut down. Customers in Iowa City and Coralville were without phone or emergency service for more than five hours.

The shutdown also caused problems for local businesses that could not verify credit cards, and many automatic teller machines in the Iowa City-Coralville area were also down during the outage.

A state-of-the-art digital switching system was installed in July to prevent such outages. When the old system was changed over, an electrical grounding cable was accidentally removed, causing improper grounding for the new switch, US West Communications said.

In the past year, Iowa City has experienced a partial loss of phone service two other times. Lynn Gipple, spokeswoman for US West Communications, attributed the outages to bad luck.

"It is unusual," Gipple said. "Sometimes there are human errors that do happen, but I could take another town in another area in Iowa and they would say they haven't had phone problems for a long time. It just happens to be this year that Iowa City has felt it."

Iowa City was without long-distance service and 911 service on May 12 for about four hours when a fiber-optic cable was cut by a construction crew.

The city was also without 911 service on Aug. 30 for about two hours due to an electronic failure in US West's Cedar Rapids office.

Rebel Muslim soldiers loyal to Fikret Abdic man a miles north of the besieged U.N.-declared enclave bunker outside the town of Velika Kladusa, 25 of Bihac Sunday.

Serbs close in on Bosnian 'safe area'

Srecko Latal
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Rebel Serbs were reported in hand-to-hand combat Monday with defenders of the last government stronghold in northwest Bosnia. Western diplomats, stung by the United Nations' inability to save the "safe zone," scrambled to broker a cease-fire.

There was little sign that Bosnia's Serbs would agree to one — except on their terms. They have seized up to 40 percent of the safe zone in the Bihac enclave that was declared off-limits to combat by the United Nations, and they were intent on forcing the government garrison there to surrender.

The Serbs' war gains have created a crisis for the international community. Three NATO air strikes on Serb positions last week were ineffective, and more than 400 U.N. peacekeeping troops have been detained by the Serbs to ward off more attacks.

Britain's defense secretary criticized remarks by Senate Republican leader Bob Dole that Britain and France were partly to blame for the failure of the U.N.-NATO mission in Bosnia. Both countries fear NATO attacks would trigger Serb retaliation against their peacekeeping troops.

The Serbs launched the war 2½ years ago when they rebelled against a move by Bosnia's Croats and Muslims to secede from Yugoslavia. The war has left 200,000 people dead or missing.

Diplomats renewed their emphasis on a negotiated settlement after the NATO secretary-general, Willy Claes, and U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry acknowledged Sunday that NATO was powerless to stop the Serbs.

U.N. officials have been pressing the Muslim-led government to accept a peace settlement offered by the Serbs on condition they keep the 70 percent of Bosnia they now hold.

A U.N. official traveled to Bosnian Serb headquarters in Pale, just outside Sarajevo, to discuss cease-fire terms. Diplomats at a foreign ministers meeting of the European Union in Brussels, Belgium, said a cease-fire was being discussed there as well.

Members of the so-called Contact Group — representing the United States, Russia, Britain, France and Germany — were meeting with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the traditional patron of Bosnia's Serb minority.

The Bosnian Serbs have rejected a Contact Group peace plan that would give them 49 percent of Bosnia instead of the 70 percent they hold. The government has accepted the plan.

In Bihac, Serb forces were 250 to 500 yards from the town's center and moving house to house, Mayor Hamdija Kabiljagic reported. He claimed hand-to-hand combat occurred in some cases, but there was no independent confirmation.

"We don't know how long we can hold out," Kabiljagic told foreign journalists in a conference call.

The commander of the government's 5th Corps in Bihac, Gen.

Atis Dudakovic, reported 114 government soldiers were killed or wounded on Monday in the 32-square-mile Bihac area and that there were 94 casualties Sunday. There were no casualty figures from the Serb forces.

U.N. spokesman Maj. Herve Gourmelon said one civilian was killed Monday when two 120mm mortar rounds struck a neighborhood inside the safe area.

Dr. Bekir Tatlic of the Bihac hospital said that an explosive device fired from the Serb side struck near the hospital's entrance Monday, blowing out windows and forcing Bangladeshi peacekeeping troops to take refuge behind the building.

Tatlic said staff had run out of bandages and plasma to treat the injured, including 64 children.

Bandages were being washed out and reused, he said in a conference call from a bunker near the hospital. With only 700 beds and nearly three times as many people needing care, he said victims packed the floors.

Muslim villages have been set ablaze by the advancing Serbs from Bosnia and their Serb allies in the Krajina region of neighboring Croatia.

HOUSE PASSAGE EXPECTED TODAY

Clinton rallies for GATT approval

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton assembled the economic stars from eight previous administrations Monday to give a final push for congressional approval of a 123-nation trade agreement. "We have to do it now. We can't wait until next year," he declared.

Supporters predicted that the rewrite of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade would sail through the House today with perhaps as many as 60 votes to spare. The fate of the trade deal was far less certain in the 100-member Senate, where it must win 60 votes on a procedural question of waiving the Senate's budget rules.

The 22,000-page agreement slashes tariffs by an average of 38 percent worldwide and expands the rules of world trade into new areas such as agriculture, services and the protection of copyrights and patents. It creates a more powerful World Trade Organization to referee trade disputes and eliminates the power of any one country to block an adverse trade ruling.

During a crowded GATT pep rally in the East Room, the administration produced a letter signed by two former Republican presidents, Gerald Ford and George Bush, and Democrat Jimmy Carter, urging congressional approval.

Clinton acknowledged fears that the agreement, by lowering U.S. trade barriers as well as those of other countries, would mean U.S. workers would face even more competition from low-wage workers in other countries.

He said in an increasingly integrated global economy, all countries had to be willing to compete internationally.

"There is no other way to deal with this. There is no easy way out," Clinton said. "This will help to solve the underlying anxiety that millions and millions of Americans face."

At a Capitol Hill news conference, a leading Senate opponent, Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., asked if it was fair to make American workers "compete against a 12-year-old working 12 hours a day for 12 cents an hour."

GATT opponents, however, all but conceded defeat in the House. Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., said anti-GATT forces hoped to get possibly 150 to 180 votes in opposition, far short of the 217 they would need to kill the deal.

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., acting chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, told reporters GATT should clear the House with 270 votes.

Consumer activist Ralph Nader said that opponents were concentrating most of their efforts on the Senate, where the deal must first win 60 votes to waive Senate budget rules because the pact covers only about one-fourth of the estimated $40 billion in tariff revenues that will be lost over 10 years.

"Let's meet under the mizletoe."

COMPENSATION FOR 1984 ACCIDENT DELAYED

Misery persists for Indian gassing victims

BHOPAL, India — It is Bhopal's second disaster.

Ten years after a cloud of toxic chemicals killed thousands of Indians in the world's worst industrial accident, a half-million people are still seeking compensation and suffering the effects of the gassing.

India's slow-moving courts are overwhelmed with the claims. Corruption riddles the bureaucracy and the judiciary. Hospitals are inefficient. Doctors demand bribes for adequate care.

Every day brings new patients with lung diseases, cancer, cataracts, gynecological disorders or psychiatric problems.

The chemicals that leaked from an underground storage tank at a Union Carbide pesticide factory choked about 4,000 people to death in the adjoining town the night of Dec. 2, 1984. Nearly 3,000 more died slowly and painfully from methyl isocyanate poisoning.

Shyam Lal's lungs were permanently scarred. Lal, 80, coughs incessantly, tires if he walks a few feet and is often ill.

"Every time I go to the court, it's the same story. The judge has not come, or the doctor has not come or they can't find my records. ... I will never get justice," he said.

Gas victim and tuberculosis patient Vimal Kumar recovers in Bhopal's main tuberculosis hospital Nov. 7. Bhopal, site of the Dec. 2, 1984 Union Carbide gas disaster, has a half-million people seeking compensation and suffering the effects of the gassing. Although the company paid $470 million in a 1989 settlement, only a minority of claims have been settled.

Conn.-based company sold off the last of its Indian holdings this summer.

Victims built a monument to remind people of the disaster — a concrete statue of a mother and two children. The government banned the monument but left it alone after citizens put it unobtrusively on a sidewalk outside the abandoned factory.

In 1989, Union Carbide paid $470 million — one-twelfth of India's original claim — in an out-of-court settlement that guaranteed immunity from prosecution for the company's executives. The government has paid out only $20 million so far, and the balance has grown to $516 million.

Two years after the agreement, India's Supreme Court struck down the immunity clause, while allowing the financial settlement to stand. The money has been locked in banks while bureaucrats and judges sort out the claims.

Eight officials of Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary were charged with manslaughter for alleged negligence, but no cases have been brought to trial.

An Indian court order to try the then-chairman of the parent company, Warren Anderson, has shuffled between various government departments while India's leaders decide whether to seek his extradition from the United States.

"Everyone blames me for the delays" in paying compensation, said Welfare Commissioner A.G. Quereshi. "They forget that the case against Carbide dragged on for years and the settlement money was made available to me only two years ago."

Quereshi's office has settled 94,000 cases, less than half his target. Of the 56 judges who were supposed to deal with claims, only 13 are now working. Many of the others retired, were transferred or were dismissed on suspicion of corruption.

Studies have found that the gassing victims have three times more respiratory problems than the national average, get cataracts 15 years earlier and have more gynecological complications. Nearly all the victims have low immunity, and growth of affected children was slower than normal.

The lone psychiatrist at Jawaharlal Nehru Hospital has so many cases that he can give just 10 minutes of counseling to women and children suffering from hallucinations, anxiety and depression.

PUBLIC BUGS COMPANY FOR CAR

Associated Press

This Jan. 5 photo shows the Concept One, Volkswagen's new version of its legendary compact Beetle, on display at the Detroit Auto Show.

Volkswagen ready to roll with reincarnated Beetle

Mark Helm
Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — Is it a bug or isn't it?

"Well, yes, but ..." Volkswagen responded Monday when asked if a new car the company plans to produce is indeed a reincarnated Beetle.

The new car, to be sold in the United States, Canada and South America, will have the familiar domed chassis. Instead of the old rear-mounted, air-cooled engine, the car will have a lean front-mounted engine and new safety features.

"This is a whole new car," company spokesman Matt Gennrich said. "The only similarity to the Beetle would be from an aesthetic point of view."

With the new car, Volkswagen hopes to cash in on American nostalgia for a legend on four wheels that during the 1960s came to symbolize cheap, reliable transportation.

Gennrich said VW asked its California design studio in late 1992 to come up with a new car that would appeal to Americans. The car, called Concept One, was introduced at the Detroit Auto Show in January.

"Everyone said, 'That's the Beetle of the future,'" said Gennrich. Volkswagen was deluged with thousands of letters from bug fans asking that the car be built.

"We didn't call the new car a Beetle, the public did," said Gennrich, confirming that Volkswagen's supervisory board had decided Friday to go ahead with production.

Volkswagen plans to begin building the car before the end of the decade, he said. The company has previously indicated the new Beetle might be built in Mexico and be priced between $12,000 and $13,000.

The Beetle, the "people's car" that VW was created to build, was designed by German engineer Ferdinand Porsche in 1934, shortly after Hitler came to power.

European production stopped in 1978, and the model was pulled from U.S. auto showrooms more than a decade ago after costly air pollution and safety requirements made it obsolete.

The Beetle is still made in Mexico and Brazil.

MARKETING A COMMODITY

Notes can be beneficial

Much has been written about the I Notes controversy that has embedded itself in the UI community. The unethical nature of a business that sells lecture notes for a profit and in effect influences students to avoid going to class is obvious. The benefits of such a service, however, have been unfortunately overlooked.

Most students who come to the UI have no prior college experience. Unfamiliar with the fast-paced lectures, the format of a discussion section or the onslaught of reading that is placed on freshmen the first day of class and which doesn't subside until the last day of senior year, students no doubt find themselves overwhelmed and understandably frustrated.

It is well-understood that lecture notes for sale are no substitute for class. Simply because fairly comprehensive notes are available without ever having to sit through a lecture is no excuse for slacking off and skipping class. It should be obvious that students who rely solely on the notes will not do any better than students who attend class every day. But because such notes are available, why is it assumed that every student who purchases them intends to spend their afternoons reclining in a bar nursing a beer instead of sitting in a classroom utilizing a pen?

In the uproar surrounding this dispute, dedicated students have been lost in the shuffle. Perhaps it is idealistic to believe that such students exist, but we must remember that academics is the reason some of us came to college in the first place. Is it really so far-fetched to believe that some students are actually purchasing I Notes to supplement their own notes?

Such a concept is feasible. They are the same students who buy the professor's lecture notes from a local copy store. They are the same students who study with friends or borrow a classmate's notes if a day of class is missed. They are the same students who buy tests from previous semesters (available in the Union for many courses) to get that extra edge before their own tests. And they are the same students who purchase "Cliffs Notes" — an accepted collegiate commodity that is marketed within 100 feet of the original texts — so they can better understand a book that they may or may not have had time to read.

True, there is no substitute for the emphasis provided by a real live professor. But there is a such a thing as a supplement which may answer questions for which there was no time in class or during office hours. Students should not automatically be condemned for using something that, if employed properly and with the best intentions, can only stand to help them.

NIN paid damages

To the Editor:

There seems to be some confusion as to the actions of the crowd and the damage done at the Nine Inch Nails concert at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Nov. 6.

The patrons of this concert were extremely well-behaved as they waited an extra hour for the doors to be opened. They were submitted to a visual and sometimes metal-detector search before being allowed to enter and still kept a good attitude as they passed through the doors. Most patrons followed the rules set forth by SCOPE and the University Box Office, as well as the arena staff (save the rule of a maximum number being allowed on the floor). SCOPE and the University Box Office expected a floor rush; it happens at almost every popular music show. Unfortunately, the way that the arena is built — there is not a lot that can be done to stop those that wish to jump the railings.

It is, in our opinion, a high estimate to say that there were 4,000 patrons on the floor or Carver-Hawkeye Arena during the NIN portion of the show. We feel the damage to Carver has also been misrepresented in the reporting in The Daily Iowan. The band settlement did include payment for damages that were assessed by the arena management staff; this damage is not being paid for by the UI. Instead, the band takes responsibility for the actions of its fans. It would be a shame for this misrepresentation to damage the ability of SCOPE to attract shows that are beneficial to both the UI and the Iowa City/Coralville community.

As the group of people responsible for sales, ticket security and seating operations at all of the shows produced by SCOPE, it is our opinion that this crowd was no worse than any other concert that we have done in the past few years. In fact, it was better than many have been as far as following UI policies set forth by the various organizations in charge.

Open to suggestions

To the Editor:

After seeing your column in the Nov. 2 "Readers Say..." ("Who should SCOPE bring in for the UI's next concert?"), we here at the Student Commission On Programming and Entertainment (SCOPE) welcome any and all suggestions on our programming. We have several avenues by which the concertgoing populace of Iowa City can get in contact with us

Preventing crimes

To the Editor:

I am very concerned with all the crimes against women and children that are occurring in Iowa. There is a newspaper story or a news report nearly every day about a woman or a child being assaulted, kidnapped, raped or murdered.

I grew up in Windsor Heights, Iowa, (a suburb of Des Moines) when Johnny Gosch disappeared. Also, my brother was a newspaper carrier when Eugene Martin disappeared a few years later. So our carefree innocence of childhood disappeared with Johnny Gosch and Eugene Martin.

The result of these tragedies was the enactment of many laws and changes in police procedures to protect women and children. However, this doesn't appear to be enough when a Grinnell College student is abducted from her disabled car and murdered, a grade-school girl is raped in her school bathroom and a young girl is kidnapped from a relative's home and murdered.

Since the elections are over, I'm concerned that the public and lawmakers will forget these tragedies or bury their heads in the sand and hope that crimes like these won't happen again.

I believe it's important to keep up the public awareness on the issue of protecting women and children. Maybe we can prevent crimes such as these from occurring in the future.

No guilt: Be satisfied, grateful and merry

I spent some time with a friend of mine who has lost a lot of weight in the past year or so. We only get together every few years and seeing her thin was quite a shock. I was used to her round body and face and here she was — a thin, "fit-looking" figure I did not readily recognize. The only thing about her that looked the same was her fine, long hair.

It is hard for her to keep this weight off. She does not eat fat, and since fat is what makes us feel satiated when we eat, she is often hungry. She eats plenty of vegetables, but she is still hungry.

When I asked her why she lost the weight, she said that, frankly, she did not want to be alone for the rest of her life. The unspoken assumption here is that being fat means being alone. While I would like to tell her that her beauty and intelligence and engaging personality will surely be the determining factors in her finding a life-partner, I cannot honestly say this is so because I do not know.

Part of me wants to condemn her for not accepting herself as she was and demanding that others do, too. But I can't do that, either. I have never been fat, so I don't know how she felt. All I do know is that whatever fears of aloneness she had were strong enough to result in her radical body change and her forever-forgoing pecan pie, ice cream and other earthy delights. I see how hard it is for her to restrict her diet as rigidly as she does, and I see her continue these restrictions in spite of the stresses of living constantly on a diet.

Perhaps some would congratulate her on her discipline and be impressed with her fortitude. While I recognize that my friend is doing something difficult, I do not readily join in on these congratulations because I am not sure that difficult actions that require discipline are to be congratulated unequivocally.

I wonder what my friend could be doing with all the energy it takes her to stay thin if she lived in a world where fat didn't matter. If women in general spent less time counting the number of bread slices they consume, calculating calories, searching labels for fat content and reading those omnipresent "Nutrition Facts" affixed to every food product, what could we be doing instead? Many women spend more time looking down at their bellies than they do looking out at the world. How we look to others, how fat we are and other body-maintenance questions take up a sizable portion of our time and energy. If my friend were a man, would her fat be as much a source of concern and of potential aloneness?

I wonder what prevents us from eating as much as we want of whatever we want, whenever we want. And don't tell me it's health. Don't even think that. Fitness and the slim body ideal have nothing to do with health. How many women do you know who, rather than gain weight, take up smoking? What about all the artificial sugars and chemically processed low-fat foods eaten by those who are on a quest for thinness? And the fanatical exercisers who run with shin splints, and the aerobicians who work out with sprained ankles? These do not seem to me to be healthy choices.

Health is about listening to our bodies. When they are hungry, we should feed them (and not calculate the number of calories we ate that day and then "decide" to eat), and when they are tired, we should rest (and not work out because we said we would work out three times a week). Being healthy is about letting our bodies have a say in what we are doing with them.

Disciplining the body takes a lot of energy. Some are proud of the results they obtain by dieting and exercising hard, and I will not begrudge them that. However, I do think that the phenomenon of a guilt-free feast with friends is an endangered one in this age of hypervigilance of the body.

I love eating with friends who eat a lot, encourage me to eat more and take delight in these oral pleasures. Those who judge my alimentary habits, count my calories for me and comment on the "healthiness" of my choices do not make for pleasurable company at mealtime. Food can be a joy, a communication and an expression of love. It can be fun, creative and celebratory. My advice to you this cold-weather holiday season is to eat, drink and let that make you not guilty, but satisfied, grateful and merry.

Pulling myself up by my own bootstraps

So it is the day after Thanksgiving, and I am sitting in front of my apartment because I am locked out because I don't have my keys because they are in my purse which is in a kitchen in Muscatine.

I have been here since 1 this afternoon, which is when my stepmother dropped me off after a rousing 24 hours with her family in a large (but not large enough) house in Muscatine which is, incidentally, the Button Capital of America. (My stepmother claims that in its heyday they used to pave driveways with the rejects.) As for the dinner, I am not allowed to write about my family until after they're dead, but let's just say that I never knew that marshmallows could be incorporated into so many courses of a meal.

It's 1:30 p.m., and I don't have my landlady's phone number (it's inside the apartment) or the number where my stepmother is staying (it's inside the apartment) or the number in Muscatine (I never had it), and everyone in my building has gone home to have great big marshmallow-free meals. I have already trudged down to the nearest pay phone and then to the next-nearest pay phone (people who rip off public phone books should be stabbed) to try to look up my landlady's number (not listed), and everyone else I call is mysteriously and suspiciously not home. To make matters worse, I am not wearing socks, and my feet are beginning to turn the color of Barney. I hate Barney.

At 2:10 p.m. I console myself by inventorying my survival supplies: a New Yorker magazine, a tin of Altoids peppermints and 73 cents.

By 2:30 p.m. I am frustrated and I try to shimmy up the fire escape. I make it after falling twice and nearly severing my left breast, but the window has a screen and a storm window and my "Charlie's Angels" Breaking and Entering Kit" is back in my purse which is, at this moment, warmer than I am.

It is now 3:11 p.m., and I've looked at all the cartoons in the New Yorker and eaten 13 pepper-mints. I can't feel my tongue. I consider writing a note for my neighbor Eliot to find pinned to my dead body: "Eliot, Hope you had a nice Thanksgiving. Chelsea."

At 3:15 p.m. I steal Eliot's new J. Peterman catalog out of his mailbox and decide that I need an Otavalo Mountain shirt because it will make me look narrow-waisted and innocent. Then I decide that what I really need is a burnoose shawl in blood red with a 7-inch tassel attached to the hood because Edith Wharton would want me to have it. Then I decide that what I really need is to get into my apartment.

Around 4 p.m. I think that I am coming down with the plague, but I decide to walk to the next-nearest phone booth again, where I valiantly attempt to telephone all my former friends. No one answers, and I visualize them all standing by their ringing phones, laughing like Peter Lorre. I leave two messages and eat four more mints, leaving me with six peppermints and 3 cents. I begin to wonder how hard it would be to catch and skin a cat.

By 4:55 p.m. I am back at my apartment and have made friends with a spider who I have named Friday, but I am having difficulty teaching him to be my manservant.

At 5:11 p.m. there is hope. My landlady's husband's brother stops by to paint an apartment, and after some prodding he remembers his brother's number. I write it in lipstick on a Hot Ticket that has been littering the hall for two weeks and trek down to the phone booth for the third time. I borrow money from a stranger who looks at me like I am going to spend it on heroin and call my landlady, who — surprise! — isn't home. I leave a message and decide that if she doesn't come and open my door within an hour I am going to walk back to California.

At 6:15 p.m. I decide that it is too cold to walk to California and instead attempt to pick my lock with a bent paper clip. When that doesn't work, I consider throwing my weight against the door but conclude that there is too great a chance that I will bounce off and be sent hurtling off the landing.

At 6:50 p.m. I reach desperation. I have read my New Yorker from cover to cover and am beginning to eye the rest of Eliot's mail. I have also taken to circling my apartment building in search of any structural vulnerability I can exploit, and a police car has driven by three times very slowly.

At 7:30 p.m. I realize I have two mints left and have lost one of my pennies in a failed attempt to balance on a plastic garbage can in an effort to peak into Apartment 5 to make sure that there isn't someone in there who just isn't answering the door. Paranoia is the first symptom of serious psychosis. It strikes me that my life is turning into a William Faulkner novel. Having grown more and more despondent, I huddle up against my apartment door and try to get some sleep.

By 7:35 p.m. I am craving Prozac. It has been six and a half hours, and I realize that all I have eaten today is a banana and 19 mints. My jaw is so tense I can't open my mouth, and I have bitten my tongue twice in the past 20 minutes.

At 7:40 p.m. I decide to walk back to the telephone booth to try my landlady again, and on the way I see that lights are on at my friend Frank's house. I knock, and he comes to the door and I am very brave and manage not to cry. He gives me a pair of teal socks and 11 individually wrapped packages of Tylenol and a glass of orange juice and I tell him about my day. He says that if I were a Republican I would have pulled myself up by my own bootstraps.

At 8:15 p.m. I call my landlady from Frank's. She is home, and her husband has just gotten back from opening my apartment. I think that maybe I don't have the plague after all.

It's 8:19 p.m., and Frank has just dropped me off. The first thing I do is turn on the TV because I am a member of Generation X and that is what we do, but the only thing on is sports. So I try to finish my column, but I am too weary and worn and I end up crawling into bed, which, when it isn't my bed, is also my couch.

Tomorrow, I tell myself, I will find a way to blame the whole thing on Newt Gingrich.

She said there are five reasons that students are allowed to ski out on their residence hall contracts: catastrophic financial situations, marriage, a health release transferring to another college and the "buy-out" clause, which let students pay 80 percent of their contract.

Outside of marriage, the buy-out clause is the most reasonable option students can use if they want to get out of the residence halls, but Van Oel advised against that avenue.

The other victim in Monday's attack was Jesse Anderson, who was serving a life sentence for stabbing and bludgeoning his wife to death. Anderson's case drew widespread attention in Wisconsin because of his claim that two black men attacked him and his wife, both white, as they left a restaurant.

Dahmer was found in the staff's bathroom and shower area next to the basketball court. Anderson was found in the prisoners' bathroom across the court and was hospitalized in critical condition with head injuries.

A guard overseeing the three inmates had just left the basketball court when the attack occurred, Sullivan said. He did not know the whereabouts of another guard assigned to watch the prisoners.

"He never expressed fear," his stepmother, Shari Dahmer, told WJW-TV in Cleveland. "From the day he was arrested, he felt he deserved anything that he got."

Dahmer's father, Lionel Dahmer, told TV's "A Current Affair" his son feared for his life when first jailed in Milwaukee. "But he felt that he was well-protected at that high maximum-security prison," Lionel Dahmer said.

If he could speak to his son again, he said, "I would want Jeff to know the only real consolation I have is that he is with our creator. He was recently baptized into Christ, and I do believe that he is with God forever."

Dahmer's gruesome past came to light in 1991 when a handcuffed man flagged down police and led officers to Dahmer's reeking apartment. Within days, the sandy-haired man had confessed to killing 17 men and boys since 1978 in Milwaukee and Ohio.

Dahmer drugged, strangled and dismembered his victims, having sex with one corpse and eating parts of others. He flushed brains down the toilet, kept skulls and other parts as mementos and saved one or two hearts "to eat later."

Dahmer pleaded guilty by reason of insanity to 15 Wisconsin slayings at his 1992 trial, but the jury found him sane on all counts. He later pleaded guilty to a killing in Ohio. He wasn't charged in one other Wisconsin slaying because of a lack of evidence.

Michael McCann, the district attorney who prosecuted Dahmer, said that he was saddened and distressed by the slaying and that authorities should have known Dahmer's life was in danger because of the July incident.

"That's not justice. This was murder. I'm hoping that whoever did it doesn't emerge as a folk hero," McCann said.

The grandmother of one of Dahmer's victims thinks his murder may finally bring peace to her family.

For a year, Dahmer was kept in isolation at the prison in Portage, about 40 miles north of Madison; then the staff determined he could mix with other prisoners, Sullivan said.

The slaying came as relatives of Dahmer's victims try to auction off his possessions as partial payment for the judgments they have won against him. The contents of his apartment included a lava lamp, a toothbrush, homosexual pornographic items and an 80-quart kettle.

I WANTED DEATH

Dahmer desired friends, at any cost

Sharon Theimer
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Friends were hard to come by for the solitary Jeffrey Dahmer. So when he invited attractive young men he met at shopping malls and gay bars home for drinks, he wanted them to stay. Forever.

Even if he could keep only parts of them.

When police finally burst into Dahmer's apart-

Neighbors at the low-income apartment building just northwest of downtown had long suspected something was seriously amiss. For months they had heard sawing, scuffling and screaming coming from Apartment 213. For a year they had complained among themselves about the smell.

No one called police because people in the neighborhood believe it is better to mind one's own business, they said.

Glenda Cleveland did call police after her daughter and niece told her of the naked boy. She repeatedly asked an officer if he was certain Sinthasomphone was an adult.

"As positive as I can be," the officer said. Police recordings also reveal that one officer laughed as he reported finishing his investigation.

"Intoxicated Asian, naked male," the officer said. "Was returned to his sober boyfriend."

"My partner is going to get deloused at the station," he said with more laughter.

Dahmer was arrested two months later when a handcuffed man managed to escape from the apartment and flag down police. The officers who handled the Sinthasomphone investigation were fired but won reinstatement after a two-year court battle.

Although Dahmer often targeted homosexuals and minorities, he said race and sexual orientation had nothing to do with his preference for victims.

"My only objective was to find the best-looking guy that I could. I went to bath houses, I went to bars, shopping malls," he said in a jailhouse interview broadcast last March on "Dateline NBC."

"Their sexual preference didn't matter to me," he continued. "Their race didn't matter to me. The first two young men were white. The third young man was American Indian. The fourth and fifth were Hispanic. So, no, race had nothing to do with it. It was just their looks."

He didn't lure them to his apartment specifically to kill them, he said.

"The killing wasn't the objective. I just wanted to have the person under my complete control to do with as I wanted," Dahmer said.

Eating parts of his victims "made me feel like they were a permanent part of me," he said. "And it gave me a sexual satisfaction to do that."

Dahmer pleaded guilty but insane, but a jury found him sane on all counts. He said he had hoped to learn why he had been "so bad and evil."

"I didn't ever want freedom. Frankly, I wanted death for myself," Dahmer said.

Jeffrey Dahmer

ment on July 22, 1991, they found torsos soaking in acid, severed heads in the refrigerator and the freezer, skulls in boxes, a hand and a genital organ in a 80-quart kettle pot, and photos of victims in various stages of dismemberment. Two human hearts and a bicep muscle Dahmer said he planned to eat were in the freezer.

A sickening stench permeated the whole scene.

"I should have stayed with God," Dahmer told a judge at his sentencing in February 1992. "I tried and I failed and created a holocaust."

As gruesome as the discovery was, it merely swung wide a door into a secret, murderous life Dahmer had been living for 13 years, during which he claimed 17 victims. The nation was stunned by the depravity of the murders, the dismemberments and the cannibalism.

In Dahmer's neighborhood, that shock was tempered with rage. He killed his four final victims only after a close call with police in May, when two officers returned to his custody a 14-year-old Laotian boy found staggering naked in the street.

Dahmer told police the boy was his homosexual lover and had drunkenly wandered out of his apartment. After his arrest two months later, he admitted killing 14-year-old Konerak Sinthasomphone moments after police left.

Officers had dismissed a witness's concerns that the boy was really in trouble and had joked about the incident over their radios. In the poor, largely minority neighborhood, the actions confirmed suspicions that police were indifferent to the disappearances of young homosexuals and minorities.

"It's an awful high price to pay for a three and a half-month period," she said.

Some students are forced to sublease when they study abroad.

UI junior Rachel Proffitt is going to Ireland next semester. She put the word out about her apartment to friends and on computer bulletin boards, but she hasn't had any luck.

"To be completely frank, I'll go completely insane if I stay here longer," she said.

The trip to Ireland will take place whether she sublets her apartment or not, Proffitt said, adding that she will reimburse her parents for paying the rent if she can't sublet.

Sometimes the way to successfully sublease is not through ads or flyers but through connections.

UI senior Josh Welp distributed the obligatory materials but said he found someone to rent his apartment through his roommate, whose friend is coming from Colorado to enroll at the UI.

"It's scary at first because not many people sublease in December," Welp said.

The Campus Information Center keeps a notebook where renters can also advertise for subleasees.

UI junior Jamie Shapiro described himself as "sort of Jewish," having grown up with a Jewish father and a Christian mother.

"We had one orthodox Hanukkah, but since my mom's Christian, we usually just exchange gifts at this time of year,"

Shapiro said. "We have kind of an 'areligious' celebration."

This year Shapiro said he'll be visiting his father in New York during winter break and will celebrate a late Hanukkah then.

"We may go out for dinner or something, but it won't be very traditional," Shapiro said.

better in elections with low voter turnout, and Slockett said there has been a local campaign against student participation in the political process.

"Their representation that this is a cost issue is a distraction from their real agenda," Slockett said.

"We're talking about 36 cents per student to mail them a registration card and have them respond."

Students are smart and well-informed, and it's the responsibility of the parties to influence how students vote, Slockett said.

"If Mr. Foss is concerned that students are voting, then his party ought to appeal to them for support," Slockett said.

Instead of fearing student involvement, Foss ought to welcome it and encourage students to support the Republican Party, Slockett said.

Sending letters to students telling them how to register isn't necessary, Foss said.

"I don't care if a person is a Republican, Democrat or another party," he said. "I want everyone to turn out and vote; I don't care what age they are."

Krissy Worden has signed a national letter of intent to play golf at Iowa.

Worden, a native of Cobourg, Ontario, is currently ranked sixth in junior competition in Ontario. She tied for 16th in the 1994 Canadian Junior National Competition. She won the 1993 Provincial Tournament of Champions crown, the 1992 Ontario Junior Provincial competition and was captain of the 1992 Provincial Team for Canada.

"I've watched Krissy develop the past three summers," Iowa coach Diane Thomason said. "She will be a strong addition to our team. She has had lots of experience throughout Canada and the U.S. and she is excited about being a Hawkeye."

Colorado hires Neuheisel to replace McCartney

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Rick Neuheisel, an assistant football coach at the University of Colorado, was hired Monday night as the school's head coach, replacing Bill McCartney.

"I believe truly no one has more capability to lead this team to new success than Rick Neuheisel," university president Judith Albino said.

Neuheisel, a 33-year-old lawyer, is the school's quarterbacks and receivers coach. His hiring was approved by the university's Board of Regents on Monday night.

The regents had met Monday to evaluate candidates for the job and then conferred privately with Neuheisel, who flew to Colorado on Monday from a recruiting trip in California.

"Elation would be a word that would come to mind," Neuheisel said. "This is a dream come true."

McCartney, 54, resigned Nov. 19, saying he wanted to spend more time with his family. The starting announcement followed Colorado's 41-20 victory over Iowa State that ended the Buffaloes' regular season at 10-1 with a No. 5 ranking.

McCartney, who compiled a school-best 92-55-5 record in 11 years, will make his last coaching appearance Jan. 2 when Colorado faces Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl.

Neuheisel has seven years of assistant coaching experience.

Sophomores spark Iowa volleyball

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Oh, what a difference a year can make.

On one end of the spectrum is the "sophomore slump" and on the other end is the Iowa volleyball team. Led by six sophomores and only three upperclassmen, the Hawkeyes have gone from last place in the Big Ten to Iowa's winningest team of all-time.

Wednesday night the 24-8 Hawkeyes will host Pittsburgh (20-10) in the first round of the NCAA tournament. The match is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"Last year we started four freshmen. It was our first year and we were so young, anything could happen," sophomore Jill Oelschlager said. "Then we came into this year and we were just ready to go. I think our success is due to the fact that we just seem to bond so well together."

Oelschlager and fellow sophomores Katy Fawbush and Jennifer Webb have provided a solid nucleus for the 24-8 Hawkeyes. The trio has combined for more than 1,400 kills this season, more than 70 percent of Iowa's offense.

Fawbush led the pack with a season total of 523 kills, just 45 shy of the all-time Hawkeye record. Fawbush was not among the freshmen on Iowa's young squad last season. She joined the team this year as a transfer from the University of Arizona.

"Katy has been huge," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "There are very few players that can average over four kills per game. Katy's a workhorse and she's been a great addition."

Fawbush transferred to Iowa in search of more playing time. What she got was more than she hoped for.

"I didn't expect this kind of personal and team success. I just wanted to do the best that I could and I'm still trying to do that," Fawbush said. "Linda had recruited me out of high school and I wanted to go somewhere that I was familiar with. Just having someone believe in you really boost your confidence. I keep getting better as I gain more experience."

Oelschlager also said one of the reasons she chose Iowa was playing time.

"I wanted to play," she said. "At first I didn't know what to expect as far as success, but once we started playing together as freshmen I

Big Ten coaches honor Schoenstedt

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

After leading the Iowa volleyball team to the biggest turnaround in conference history, Coach Linda Schoenstedt has been voted Big Ten Coach of the Year by her peers.

"I'm just grateful I'm in a league where I have colleagues who challenge me day in and day out," Schoenstedt said of the award. "As a program, we've been trying to prove to people that it hasn't been an accident. "It's incredible. The last thing I really thought about is where I fit in everything, but rather where the players fit in to be successful."

"As a program, we've been trying to prove to people that it hasn't been an accident."

Linda Schoenstedt, Iowa volleyball coach

Iowa will host Pitt in the first round of the NCAA tournament at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawkeyes have advanced to the NCAA tour-namment one other time in school history. In 1989, Iowa lost to Ohio State in the first round.

The Hawkeyes finished 7-27 overall in 1991, Schoenstedt's first season at Iowa. The next season Iowa improved to 13-19 before an 11-21 finish last year.

"I've learned that people in Iowa will support you win, lose or draw as long as you are making an effort," Schoenstedt said. "That's meant a lot to me. People could have totally abandoned us and they haven't."

This season the Hawkeyes are the winningest team in school history with a record of 24-8 and a winning percentage of .750. Iowa

BULLDOGS OPENER

Davis expects dogfight at Drake

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

The way Iowa coach Tom Davis is shuffling the Hawkeyes' lineup, he'll be dealing cards in Vegas by the end of the season.

Davis has sent three different lineups to the floor in each of the Hawkeyes' two exhibitions and their regular season opener.

Davis will have another opportunity to shift the lineup tonight when the Hawkeyes take on intrastate rival Drake in the Bulldogs season opener. Tipoff at the Knapp Center in Des Moines is scheduled for 7 p.m.

Davis said Andre Woolridge, Chris Kingsbury, Jess Settles, Kenyon Murray and Jim Bartels would be the starters prior to the Hawkeyes' first exhibition game. But Nov. 20 against Marathon Oil, Monter Gasper started in place of Kingsbury. Friday in the Hawkeyes' 126-79 victory over Morgan State, freshman Ryan Bowen got the call ahead of both Gasper and Kingsbury as Bartels moved to guard.

Regardless of whom is on the floor for the tipoff tonight, Drake should prove to be a tougher test for Iowa than Morgan State.

The Bulldogs gave the Hawkeyes a scare last year at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. After Iowa built a considerable lead, Drake put together a late run but fell short 90-86. Davis said he expects a similar game this season.

"I recognize that there's a lot of work ahead of us over at Drake on Tuesday night. I'm trying to make the players aware of that," Davis said. "Drake's given us real good ball games the last two years and there's no reason to expect anything different going into Tuesday night's game."

Drake has intangibles on its side. A victory would mean more to the Bulldogs than it would to the Hawkeyes. Iowa comes into the game as a heavy favorite. Former Iowa assistant and current Drake

SETTING GOALS EARLY

Wrestlers focus on national titles

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The challenge has been issued by Iowa coach Dan Gable: "Come join us." At least two Iowa wrestlers feel they are ready.

Jeff McGinness and Daryl Weber are ready to join teammates Joel Sharratt and Lincoln McLlrvay as national champions.

McGinness, a sophomore from Iowa City, recorded a 36-9 record last season wrestling as a true freshman. He finished second at the Big Ten Championships and fifth at nationals.

Weber, a junior from Gilbertville, Iowa, was 26-13 last year, splitting time between 142, 150 and 158 pounds, finishing sixth in the Big Ten and the NCAA meet.

But this year, the two feel they are ready to win it all.

"The main thing I'm focusing on is winning the national title in March," Weber said. "I'm just making sure I compete hard all season long and wrestle my best."

At the Northern Open in Madison, Wis., last weekend, McGinness won the 126-pound championship. Weber lost to teammate Joe Williams for the 158 title by default.

McGinness is still a bit disappointed that he didn't win a championship last year, but is ready to take another shot at it.

"I think I was ready last year," he said. "It was my own fault that I didn't win it. Whether it was lack of mental preparation or the fact that I was a little immature coming in. I really didn't know what to expect. This year, I've matured a lot physically and mentally and I think I'll be right in there."

McGinness came to Iowa after a successful prep career at Iowa City High School. The ninth four-time state champion in Iowa high school wrestling history, McGinness finished his high-school career unbeaten at 172-0. He was named to Wrestling USA's all-American team and 13-member Dream Team at 130 pounds.

Weber finished his career at Don Bosco High School with a record of 128-19-2, a two-time state champion. He was twice named an all-American, at 135 pounds in 1990 and at 140 pounds in 1991.

Weber, now starting his fourth year in the Iowa program, is ready to assume more of a leadership role this season.

"I tried a little bit last year, especially when I was cutting weight, to set examples for other guys. I think I can do that again this year," he said.

With a career mark at Iowa of 45-21, Weber wants more than a winning record this season.

"I'm working on dominating my matches more, winning by bigger

FORGETFUL COACH

Walsh steps down after three years at Stanford

Rob Gloster
Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — Bill Walsh, who returned to Stanford "to find my bliss" after coaching the San Francisco 49ers to three Super Bowl titles, was set to resign Monday after two straight losing seasons.

Stanford called an afternoon news conference at which school spokesman Gary Migdol said Walsh would announce he was leaving as coach.

The departure of Walsh, who turns 63 Wednesday, had been rumored in recent weeks. He often seemed distracted this season, and repeatedly had trouble remembering the names of his players and opponents' players during his weekly news conferences.

Walsh had two years remaining on a five-year contract. The San Francisco Examiner said he plans to remain at Stanford as a special assistant to athletic director Ted Leland.

Walsh returned to Stanford three seasons ago after compiling a 102-63-1 record in 10 years as coach of the 49ers, including Super Bowl crowns in 1981, 1984 and 1988. He was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1993.

He spent three years as a pro football analyst for NBC, through the end of the 1991 season.

The Cardinal slipped to 4-7 last season and went 3-7-1 this year.

EIGHT TEAMS AT .500

Parity, streaks riddle NFL

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

It's not parity anymore. It's parody.

With four weeks left in the regular season, take Dallas and San Francisco out of the mix and the NFL is the ultimate parody of Pete Rozelle's vision "on any given day."

To put it another way, one man's "competitive balance" is another's mediocrity.

For example: Fifteen teams, more than half the NFL, are between 7-5 and 5-7 and eight are at .500. If the playoffs started next week, a .500 team would qualify in each conference — the Jets in the AFC and the Packers or Falcons in the NFC.

Philadelphia and Minnesota, two teams that seemed a month ago to have a shot to challenge the 49ers and Cowboys in the NFC now have lost three straight. Each is in that 7-5 pack and each could easily miss the playoffs, as could Kansas City, another 7-5 team with Joe Montana's ankle injury a major question mark.

Pittsburgh and Cleveland, with nobody yet established at quarterback, are tied at 9-3 with San Diego for the best record in the AFC. Chicago, with Steve Walsh 7-0 as a starter replacing the high-priced Erik Kramer, is atop the AFC Central at 8-4, about the reverse of what it was expected to be.

Here's how bizarre it gets. The Browns moved to 9-3 Sun-

Associated Press

New York Jets head coach Pete Carroll, right, can't watch the action during the fourth quarter against the Miami Dolphins as his Jets squandered an early 24-6 lead over the division leading Dolphins to eventually lose 28-24. The Jets had the opportunity to share first place with the Dolphins if they won, but now stand two games behind the first-place Dolphins.

day by beating Houston 34-10 with Vinny Testaverde back at quarterback after owner Art Modell made it clear to coach Bill Belichick that he wants one quarterback, not a revolving door between Testaverde and Mark Rypien.

Pittsburgh beat the Raiders 21-3 with Mike Tomczak at quarterback, but coach Bill Cowher said Neil O'Donnell, his leg healed, would be back this week when the Steelers visit Cincinnati.

"I've played enough to satisfy my ego," said Tomczak, who had 343 passing yards in last week's win over Miami and two TD passes in the win over the Raiders.

But the Steelers may be glad next week's game is on the road — Tomczak is the favorite of Pittsburgh fans.

"Everybody has an opinion," he said.

"If they didn't, life would be pretty dull. Sure, some people will be disappointed, but I'm sure we'll keep everybody's support if we keep on winning."

But will they? Pittsburgh is the "hot" team in the AFC now, primarily because of its defense.

But the Vikings and Eagles were the "hot" teams three weeks ago at 7-2 and are suddenly groping for identities.

Why?

"I wish I could pinpoint why we've lost three in a row. We're all frustrated right now," said the Eagles' Rich Kotite, a candidate for coach of the year a month ago; a candidate for a new job next year.

The new salary cap-free agency system may be a reason why winning and losing is a matter of a play or two a game.

When the Vikings were winning, they were scoring off turnovers — cornerback Anthony Parker had three TDs in three games. In three losses, they're minus-five in turnover ratio.

MEN'S BASKETBALL POLL

Upset pays off for No. 1 Massachusetts

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

Massachusetts, which shocked the college basketball world by trouncing Arkansas in its season-opener, took over the No. 1 ranking for the first time Monday.

The Minutemen, who beat the top-ranked defending national champions 104-80 in the Tipoff Classic, received all but seven of the 65 first-place votes cast by the national media panel.

"It doesn't help this early," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said Monday. "If Arkansas had played and lost to Duke or North Carolina they'd be No. 1. We took a challenge and played and gained by doing that."

"We put our necks out because we were willing to take the chance of being blown out by 40 which we could have been. We put ourselves in a position where we could have gained absolutely zero."

Instead, the Minutemen moved up two spots in the poll, leapfrogging North Carolina, which received six first-place votes after beating Texas in its season-opener.

Kentucky, which had the other first-place vote, moved up one spot to third and Arkansas, which bounced back with a 97-79 victory over Georgetown, dropped to fourth.

Calipari said being ranked No. 1 never was on his list of goals for the program that he has turned around in his six seasons.

The Minutemen got as high as No. 6 last season and this year's No. 3 ranking were their highest ever.

"I never even thought about it," he said of No. 1. "I only wanted the bat in our hands, swinging to win the national title. If you don't have the bat you can never hit a homer."

Every year there is talk of 10, 12, 15 teams who can win it all. If you're up there enough maybe you'll get lucky and bunt one out of the stadium one time."

It doesn't get easy for Massachusetts as it faces No. 7 Kansas on Saturday and then plays No. 11 Maryland the next weekend.

"I told them this could make you mentally soft," Calipari said. "So we're having practice at 5:30 in the morning this week to make sure we stay focused on what we have to do especially with the semester winding down."

"The team was great this morning. I told them that a lot of people had said they would have a problem embracing success. All I can say is I didn't see it and believe me if I did I was not going to let it happen."

Three teams used early season tournament victories to vault into the top 15.

Arizona State, which beat Michigan and Maryland in winning the Maui Invitational debuted in the poll this season at No. 12.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL POLL

Foster welcomes challenging schedule

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

Don't look for Cupcake U. on the Vanderbilt women's basketball schedule. Or Soft Touch Tech or Patsy State.

As long as Jim Foster is coach, the Commodores are going to play tough teams in tough places. They've played three challenging road games already, the latest a 72-52 victory at Purdue that sent them from 12th to ninth in The Associated Press poll, and they've got another one coming up Tuesday night at No. 7 Penn State.

It's all part of Foster's plan to have his team, now 4-1, as ready as possible at tournament time in March.

"I think coaches fool themselves if they sit at home and play a soft schedule," Foster said. "If your intention is to play in March, you better go out and find out how good you are and what areas you need to improve on."

"Only good teams can create those scenarios and the best situation of all is to play good teams on the road."

Vanderbilt's first road game was a 69-65 victory before a noisy crowd of 4,080 at Montana in the preseason NIT. The Commodores then faced a hostile crowd of 5,366 in the NIT semifinals at Texas Tech and lost 86-81 in overtime after leading late in regulation.

"We literally handed that game to them," Foster said. "We were tentative. But again, within the framework of learning and experiences, you can't create situations like that in the gym. I know the next time we walked on the court, we were a much better basketball team."

Indeed. Playing before a crowd of 8,129 at West Lafayette, Ind., last Friday, Vanderbilt got 23 points from Sheri Sam and dominated a Purdue team ranked fifth at the time. The Boilermakers, 0-2 for the first time since 1977, dropped to 13th Monday.

The moves by Vanderbilt and Purdue were part of a major shuffle in the AP poll brought about by the first full weekend of competition. There were no changes up high, though, as the top four teams remain the same.

Tennessee (2-0) is still a unanimous No. 1 in the voting by a nationwide media panel after a 95-66 victory over Memphis. The Lady Vols again are followed by Stanford (2-0), Connecticut (2-0) and Louisiana Tech (1-1). Tech's loss was to Tennessee.

Some changes at the top are possible next week, however, because Tennessee plays host Thursday to Stanford.

With Auburn joining the poll at No. 25, the Southeastern Conference has seven teams in the rankings.

'Dame' has more of almost everything

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Comics veteran Frank Miller is keeping busy these days, which is no bad thing — his "Martha Washington Goes to War" and "Sin City" series both continue to be highlights of the monthly welter of comics titles.

This month sees the release of Miller's latest graphic novel, the compilation of his "Sin City" story arc "A Dame to Kill For." Like Miller's previous hit book, "Sin City," "Dame" is film noir in comics form (comics noir?), from the sometimes cheesy, metaphor-littered dialogue to the stark visuals to the inevitable evil women and their patry men. But "Dame" features more of practically everything that made "City" such an amazing work.

"Dame" follows the life of Sin City resident Dwight McCarthy, an amateur photographer who spends most of his time shooting clandestine pictures of adulterers as evidence for divorce cases. He spends the rest of his time on an interior monologue about "the monster" inside him and how he mustn't give in to it by drinking, smoking or beating the crud out of anyone in his way.

Unfortunately for Dwight and his monster, a bombshell named Ava is about to resurface and enlist their aid in her private war against her rich, apparently abusive husband. It's classic noir cinema, right down to the relatively obvious plot twists. (Hint: Ava's not all she appears to be.)

"Dame" takes "City" a few steps further, with more sex, more character development, more graphic art, more intricate plotting and more melodramatic dialogue. Like "City," "Dame" features a lot of text that would sound silly if it didn't blend so seamlessly into Miller's pulp-fiction sensibility.

The book also features a lot more self-referentialism, with Miller throwing in a number of scenes that have nothing to do with "Dame." Some of these images — sometimes just an unexplained piece of dialogue in a panel or the reappearance of a familiar character — are "Sin City" references; others are apparently from future projects. At times, the asides give "Dame" a more complex feel because they make it clear Dwight's not the only one with problems and that the world's continuing to progress no matter how often he stalls out. At other times, they just clutter the story.

Miller's stunningly precise black-and-white art, on the other hand, doesn't look nearly as cluttered as in "City." The entire book could well be a textbook on ways to handle dense, complex heavy-line art with no shades of gray — a daring experiment, but one Miller's well-capable of handling.

Frank Miller follows up his hit book "Sin City" with "A Dame to Kill For," another graphic, intense comic noir.

The one thing "Dame" lacks — and it's debatable whether this could be considered a flaw — is "Sin City's" grotesquerie. "City" featured torture, mutilation and cannibalism among its more pedestrian violence, but "Dame" sticks to a few graphic beatings and the occasional murder. As a result, "Dame" is a less edgy, uncomfortable book to read, but anyone who doesn't repeatedly watch the ear-slicing scene from "Reservoir Dogs" for fun isn't likely to mind.

Miller starts up a new "Sin City" story arc this month and has promised a lot more to come — an alluring pledge, given his work to date. Classic film fans and experimental comics fans alike will be eagerly waiting for him to continue making this kind of magic.

Tim Allen ("Home Improvement") takes over for comedy is just one of a number of family-oriented feel-good films — from "Junior" to "The Lion King" rerun — taking advantage of the holidays.

Family flicks, Oscar hopefuls to dominate next few months

John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It's warm, fuzzy and jolly and arrives in shopping malls at Christmas.

Not the Santa Claus armada — the holiday film lineup.

From the gushy star-studded adaptation of "Little Women" (Winona Ryder, Eric Stoltz, Susan Sarandon and Kirsten Dunst are on the cast list) to Michael Keaton and Geena Davis as dueling speechwriters, feel-good films are the trend in another particularly competitive holiday season.

"Christmas movies are about laughs," said John Pasquin, the director of "The Santa Clause." "But you have to feel a little gooey at the end."

It's apparently the right formula; the Tim Allen comedy was No. 1 at the box office this weekend.

Since many families come together at Christmas for the only time all year, Hollywood is courting them with movies geared to "all together now" outings.

"Families are looking for something to do together," said Ivan Reitman, who directed Arnold Schwarzenegger and Danny DeVito in "Junior." Reitman said the movie can be enjoyed by all of his children — ages 17, 13 and 6.

"It's always tough finding something that works for everybody," the director of "Twins" and "Kindergarten Cop" said.

Said Pasquin, the father of sons ages 4 and 7, "It was really important for me to do something both kids and parents could enjoy. People like to go out with their kids and go see a movie over the holidays."

"What seems to work best this time of year is a fusion of comedy and emotion. The result is often naked sentimentality, but if that's what the audience wants, so what? Look at "Home Alone." The fourth highest-grossing film of all time came out in the winter of 1990, and it was heavy with gushy, uplifting emotions.

To make sure audiences leave theaters upbeat, MGM at some expense reshot the ending of "Speechless," which romantically links Keaton and Davis. The movie's theme is that love can bring together two people with divergent political beliefs. (Any similarities to the James Carville and Mary Matalin romance are coincidental, MGM said.)

"This is light romantic comedy that makes you feel good," said Ron Underwood, the film's director and the maker of "City Slickers."

"It's a very optimistic viewpoint — a more hopeful look at life. It's "Christmas movies are about laughs. But you have to feel a little gooey at the end."

John Pasquin, director of "The Santa Clause"

definitely not a political story," he said. "It takes place against a backdrop of a political campaign, but these two characters could be in the advertising business or in the textile business."

In the reworked "Miracle on 34th Street," a new antagonist emerges, making Kriss Kringle's (Richard Attenborough) struggle more gripping, and mom (Elizabeth Perkins) has a new set of contemporary worries.

Writer-producer John Hughes said less than 5 percent of the dialogue from the 1947 original remains. "It was in that 1940s lingo — it just didn't ring true," Hughes said.

"It's really interesting," Hughes said of the new version. "If you run it side by side with the original, most of it is changed. But the (new version) feels the same — it embraces you."

With the year's end quickly approaching, a number of high-quality projects will unspool one after another and sometimes on top of each other. (A film must debut in the United States before Jan. 1 to qualify for Academy Awards.)

These are the major films scheduled for release during the holiday film season, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc. Some release dates may change.

Several movies will play only for one week for Academy Award qualification and will be rereleased in the first quarter of 1995:

- Dec. 2: "Trapped in Paradise," Nicolas Cage; "Cobb," Tommy Lee Jones; "Tom and Viv," Willem Dafoe.
- Dec. 9: "Drop Zone," Wesley Snipes; "Mixed Nuts," Steve Martin; "Disclosure," Michael Douglas, Demi Moore.
- Dec. 14: "Nell," Jodie Foster.
- Dec. 16: "Speechless," Michael Keaton; "Immortal Beloved," Gary Oldman; "Dumb and Dumber," Jim Carrey; "Camilla," Jessica Tandy.
- Dec. 21: "Richie Rich," Macaulay Culkin; "Pret a Porter," Lauren Bacall; "A Man of No Importance," Albert Finney.
- Dec. 23: "Little Women," Winona Ryder; "Streetfighter," Jean-Claude Van Damme; "Restoration," Meg Ryan; "Mrs. Parker and the Vicious Circle," Jennifer Jason Leigh; "Colonel Chamber," Gerard Depardieu.
- Dec. 25: "The Jungle Book," Jason Scott Lee; "Safe Passage," Susan Sarandon; "I.Q.," Tim Robbins; "Nobody's Fool," Paul Newman; "Legends of the Fall," Anthony Hopkins; "Death and the Maiden," Sigourney Weaver.
- Dec. 26: "Queen Margot," Isabelle Adjani.
- Dec. 28: "The Madness of King George," Helen Mirren.

CORAL IV GETS DTS

Coralville theater's new sound system brings digital sensory overload to films

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

The addition of a Digital Theatrical Sound (DTS) system to one of the projectors at the Coral IV Theatres in Coralville has dragged local moviegoers to the brink of digital sensory overload. The system opens up a technologically amazing box of experiential wonders for avid filmgoers, bringing vivid new meaning to "being in the middle of the action."

"Star Trek Generations," showing currently, is the first film with a DTS-compatible soundtrack to be projected using the new system. An overbearing, slam-bang science-fiction extravaganza, "Trek" is clearly the best choice to christen the theater's new web of sound and experience. It illustrates vividly the vast difference between DTS and standard Dolby stereo theater sound.

Lasers crackle, bristling the hairs in audience members' inner ears. Clear and visceral bass tones low enough to rattle the spinal column rumble down the aisles, while the debris from exploding Klingon warships seems to whiz by at top speed and clanks into the rear wall with nearly tangible force.

The whole package brings to mind the primitive "sense-surround" sound systems installed in select theaters back in the 1970s for such huge epics as "Earthquake" and "The Towering Inferno" — mere gimmicks to rattle the floors and shake the teeth of glib theater patrons. But DTS is much more than a sideshow. The audio imaging is crystal-clear and astonishingly realistic. The irksome hiss and pop of worn optical and magnetic soundtracks has vanished — the whole thing puts standard Dolby sound out to pasture for good.

But the DTS system itself, brought in by the Central State Theater Corporation, which owns Coral IV Theatres, is not much to look at, according to theater manager Vickie Schleif.

"We still use the same speakers," Schleif said, referring to the system that was originally installed when the theaters were built. "DTS just allows more of the soundtrack to be read during projection."

According to Schleif, the DTS system is comprised of a "little black box" which houses a computer chip that is hooked into the projector's existing sound system. Aided by two CDs which are shipped in with the print of the film, the chip reads the soundtrack, paying more attention to detail than a Dolby system and taking more care in deciding "which sounds go where" in the audio-imaging scheme.

"Standard Dolby theater sound just has a left and a right channel, but the DTS chip reads the soundtrack and separates more than just left and right," Schleif said.

Essentially, the chip is a "cleanup crew" for the existing soundtrack, providing more depth and definition to sound that would normally come out flat and hollow on a Dolby stereo system.

Schleif said the chip is one of four that she knows of which are currently in use in Iowa theaters associated with the Central State Theater Corporation. Because the installation cost was picked up by the Des Moines-based theater owners, Schleif couldn't estimate its worth.

But with audience reactions to DTS ranging from "positive" to "blown away," and with many moviegoers sitting through films they wouldn't normally see, just to experience the DTS system, it shouldn't be very long before more theaters go the digital route.

"People tell me that there are a lot of (DTS) films out there," Schleif said. She said last year's "Jurassic Park" had a DTS soundtrack, but area theaters weren't equipped to show the film with full DTS sound when it was released.

"I'm sure there'll be a lot more DTS films," Schleif said. "(DTS) is definitely here to stay."
