Clinton unveils tax cut plan

Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bill Clinton joined the bidding war for middle-class support Thursday, proposing a $60 billion mix of tax cuts to help millions of families bear the cost of raising and educating their children.

He laid before the country a proposed $500-a-child tax credit for households earning up to $100,000 a year, said college tuition should be tax-deductible and called for expanding the tax advantages of individual retirement accounts.

"I challenge the new Congress to work with me," Clinton said. "I know some people just want to cut the government blindly, and I know that's popular now, but I won't do it. I want a leaner, not a meaner, government."

The president outlined deep cuts in government programs to help pay for the tax cuts. Republicans immediately retorted that Clinton was following their own proposals for tax relief and that he was welcome to the crusade.

Clinton's 12-minute prime-time address was designed to revive his administration after voters abandoned the Democratic Party and delivered Congress to the Republicans. The president said the economy is booming, but "more jobs are not enough. We have to raise incomes."

Clinton's plan would provide a $500-per-child tax credit for all children age 12 and under in families with incomes of up to $60,000 a year.

Families earning between $60,000 and $75,000 a year could claim a reduced child credit. Those earning over $75,000 would not get any credit.

The president's plan also would allow middle-income parents to deduct up to $10,000 a year in tuition for college or other postsecondary education. The deduction would begin to phase out at

Middle-Income Family Tax Cut

Tax cut plans offered by President Clinton, House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt and the Republican "Contract with America," championed by incoming House Speaker Newt Gingrich:

Clinton:

A $60 billion plan. Includes a $500-per-child tax credit in families with up to $60,000 annual income. Families could deduct $10,000 a year for college. Funds to come from cutting back federal agencies and extending a federal spending freeze.

Gephardt:

Offers an unspecified tax cut to any family earning less than $75,000 annually whether they have children or not.

GOP plan:

Offers a $500 tax credit for children in families with income up to $200,000 annually. The Republicans estimate their plan would cost the government $107 million over five years.

Apprehensive alcoholic dies ditching surgery

CINCINNATI (AP) — A patient terrified of undergoing surgery apparently hid in a hospital for two days before he died, officials said. Another patient found the gown-clad body in a stairwell.

Richard Dwight Jackson, 41, was admitted Dec. 5 to Bethesda Oak Hospital for dehydration and alcoholism, said hospital spokeswoman Lisa Zimmer. He had been scheduled for surgery this weekend to remove a bowel obstruction.

Jackson had said he was afraid to have the operation. He was reported missing Saturday.

A patient found Jackson's body Monday, police said.

Principal booted for shacking students

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A middle-school principal who admitted handcuffing 16 students since September has been removed from his job.

Blow Middle School principal Larry Pulos exercised poor judgment and created a climate "counterproductive to effective learning," superintendent David Mahan said Wednesday.

Pulos was reassigned to the district's library department starting Thursday but hasn't worked with children since Nov. 21.

Teachers claimed Pulos ordered special education students handcuffed, refused to allow students to use the rest room during the last school hour and berated teachers in front of students.

LARGE POPULATION DEEMED DANGEROUS

Prison officials rally against overcrowding

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

Overcrowding Iowa's prison system has led to unsafe conditions for both inmates and staff, said correctional officers of the Iowa Medical and Classification Center at Oakdale on Thursday.

Around 25 officers and members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 2985 gathered in front of the Oakdale center, asking the governor and legislators for emergency funding for more officers and support staff to help them through the crisis.

Marty Hathaway, president of the union and a correctional officer for 16 years, said the Oakdale facility was designed to house 520 inmates but presently holds 920 inmates. The situation leaves the staff overburdened with work and allows less protection for inmates and officers.

"When you have an institution (which has grown) from 520, where it should be, to 920, then it creates more tension," Hathaway said. "The whole system is just overtaxed. (Legislators) have got to look at some creative solutions to help relieve some of that pressure."

The overcrowded conditions at the facility have led to low morale among the staff because much of the work has doubled or even tripled, said Peter Schmalz, head of the Local

DES MOINES — This was not the year to be a Democrat in politics, Bonnie Campbell said, but she's proud she stuck to her principles, even if it cost her the Iowa governor's race.

"The people spoke with some clarity. And I wouldn't want to be governor if I had to confront signing the death penalty."

Bonnie Campbell, former gubernatorial candidate

"One thing about losing in a landslide is you don't have to go back and do that second-guessing," she said in an interview with the Associated Press. "The truth is, if I was a man with probably a million more dollars, I probably wouldn't have won this year."

"My main crime this year was being a Democrat. And I've done that for too many years to change."

Campbell is nearing the end of her term as Iowa's attorney general after losing 57 percent to 42 percent to Gov. Terry Branstad in the November general election.

"For some people, winning is the end, and anything to reach that end will do. For me, serving with honor is the end, and I've done that," she said. "Winning would have been a nice byproduct of that, but I didn't get to make that choice."

"The people spoke with some clarity. And I wouldn't want to be governor if I had to confront signing the death penalty. So it all worked out for the best in the end,

Student sues Metallica over concert injuries

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

After allegedly getting kicked in the head, passed over a crowd and dropped on his head at a Jan. 28, 1993 Metallica concert at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, UI student Todd Miller is suing the band for negligence of security.

Miller, who was three rows from the stage at the concert, is also suing Jam Productions, the promoter of the concert, and the state of Iowa, which owns the arena and sponsored the event through the UI Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment (SCOPE).

Court documents said Miller decided to move to the back of the crowd after being kicked in the head by people being passed over the crowd. As he walked back, Miller was allegedly picked up, passed forward and dropped over the railing separating the crowd from the stage where he landed on his head.

Miller claimed in the documents that Metallica had a duty to stop the body passing but made no effort to do so. He also alleged that all three defendants failed to provide adequate security at the concert.

Because of this alleged negligence, Miller suffered injuries to his head, back, shoulder and legs as well as permanently losing his sense of smell, the court records said. Miller is seeking compensation for his injuries and damages from all three defendants.

A representative of Electra Records, Metallica's recording company, refused to comment on the lawsuit.

Union files grievance over unpaid holiday

The Daily Iowan

The Local 12 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, the labor union which represents some UI employees, is awaiting the outcome

"I think this was done with a lot of poor forethought and some insensitivity to the rights of merit employees."

Steven O'Donnell,
union president of a grievance it filed in August against the UI, saying the decision to celebrate Martin Luther King Jr. Day was made with "poor forethought and some insensitivity."

The outcome of the complaint will be announced within a week.

The grievance charges the UI with failing to give merit employees (technical, clerical and security workers) sufficient notice about the decision to observe the holiday.

The union also charged that the UI did not formally meet with it before making the decision, union president Steven O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell, an engineering research development machinist with the UI College of Engineering, said the state is taking a day's wages from merit employees since they will not be paid for the day.

He said the UI did not act in the best interests of merit employees in the decision to celebrate the date of King's birth.

"I think this was done with a lot of poor forethought and some insensitivity to the rights of merit employees," O'Donnell said. "We feel that the UI arbitrarily designated this holiday, and we feel our employees are being harmed because they are losing vacation time."

"Iowa is similar to Arizona in

TV fan tunes in to favorite compulsion

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

Most students don't have time to watch TV during finals week, but self-proclaimed television addict Aaron Jones said his TV set is on six to seven hours a day despite his finals in the UI School of Business. "It's always on," Jones, a UI junior, said. "It's on before class, after we get back and I even study with it on."

DAY IN THE LIFE

Jones said he prefers TV to other forms of media.

"TV's better than reading a funny book because I don't have the mental capacity to picture the scenarios in books," he said.

Like many students at the UI, Jones said his favorite show is "Beverly Hills 90210" because he's familiar with the characters and he enjoys the interesting twists in plot. However, the show holds hidden treasures for Jones and his friends.

"We have a drinking game that we play when we watch '90210,'" Jones said. "Whenever a cliché part of the show comes on, we drink."

Some of the clichés Jones and his friends drink to include Brandon saying "Hey, bro," Steve hitting on any woman, a gentle scolding from parents and firm male handshakes. All of these warrant at least one drink each, Jones said.

Although Jones enjoys "90210," he does have a wide range of television interests, including other shows on Fox and channels such as HBO and NBC. He said they offer myriad choices of visual fare, including sitcoms, cartoons and movies.

"The Simpsons" is a ritual for us, and I'll watch any crappy movie on HBO. It doesn't even need a plot," Jones said, adding that his movie genre of choice is early '80s spring break flicks.

Although HBO and movies are much of what Jones watches, network programming has a place in his schedule. "Seinfeld," "Friends" and "Mad About You" on NBC are regulars for him. However, not all of his network show choices are so mainstream.

Jones is also a closet "Blossom" watcher, but it's not just the hip, happening female lead who attracts him to the show.

"Whoa!" Jones said in his best Joey Lawrence voice. "Every episode is a very special 'Blossom.' Six's drinking problem was a big part of my life," Jones said, referring to a "Blossom" character's escapades.

Television is the background noise for most of Jones' day. He said he usually eats, watches TV, plays with the cat, watches TV, studies and watches TV. Most of what Jones does around the house is done while watching TV.

Jones does participate in other activities in Iowa City. He is a business major and a member of the UI water polo club. However, neither of these takes a back seat to TV for him.

"Once in a while, if there's a good movie on, I'll be a little late for class," Jones said. "And I'm only late for polo on Thursdays because of 'Seinfeld,' unless there's a really good 'Roseanne' on Tuesday."

"Television isn't just an escape for Jones, it's also where he gets his day-to-day knowledge.

"I really need MTV to help me make my social and political decisions for me," Jones said.

'Pulp Fiction' 's Tarantino awarded best director prizes

NEW YORK (AP) — Quentin Tarantino won the New York Film Critics Circle's directing prize Thursday for "Pulp Fiction," sweeping the three major year-end movie awards announced this week.

The critics named "Quiz Show" the best movie of 1994. It was directed by Robert Redford.

Since the weekend, the Los Angeles Film Critics Association and the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures have voted Tarantino top director.

Best actor awards went to Paul Newman for "Nobodies Fool" and Linda Fiorentino for "The Last Seduction."

"Hoop Dreams," about aspiring high-school basketball players, also completed a sweep of the three awards, winning as best documentary.

Other winners:

- Supporting actor — Martin Landau, "Ed Wood."
- Supporting actress — Dianne Wiest, "Bullets Over Broadway."
- Screenplay — Tarantino, "Pulp Fiction."
- Foreign-language film — "Red."

Songwriter teams up with Lloyd Webber for musical remake

LONDON (AP) — Composer and lyricist Jim Steinman, who has collaborated with such stars as Bonnie Tyler and Meat Loaf, is working on a film musical with Andrew Lloyd Webber.

"I'm hoping this will evoke something totally new," the 47-year-old Steinman said of "Whistle Down the Wind," a $15 million production of the 1961 British movie that starred Alan Bates and Hayley Mills.

Steinman is writing the lyrics and co-writing the screenplay. He and Lloyd Webber are scouting for directors and have mentioned Johnny Depp and Kirsten Dunst —

Griffith, Johnson reunite once again

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — The on-again, off-again relationship between Melanie Griffith and Don Johnson apparently is on again.

Griffith told TV Guide in its Dec. 24 issue that the twice-married pair has reconciled once again.

"We've gone through hell this year," she said. "But everything is fine now. We've just decided not to talk about it in public."

Griffith is at a Santa Fe, N.M., ranch, filming the CBS miniseries "Buffalo Girls." Johnson has been a frequent visitor to the set, director Ron Hardy said.

"I can always tell when Don's here because Melanie is so happy," he said.

Griffith said she and Johnson underwent family counseling at the Betty Ford Center. She filed for divorce in March, withdrew the papers and refiled them in June.

the young costar of "Interview With the Vampire" — as possible stars.

Away from the movies, Steinman is best known for composing songs such as "Total Eclipse of the Heart," for Bonnie Tyler, and for the Meat Loaf album "Bat Out of Hell."

Jerry Lee Lewis rings up phone charges to pay tax debt

NESBIT, Miss. (AP) — Great balls of fire! The Killer has a 1-900 number.

Jerry Lee Lewis' phone line carries recorded messages from the rock 'n' roller and "celebrity guest talent" at $2.75 a minute.

The 1-900 line is another of Lewis' attempts to raise $560,000 to pay off his tax debt.

Kerrie McCarver Lewis, his wife, said through the phone line that she and Lewis are "trying to pay the tax man so we can die happy."

The 59-year-old Lewis worked out an agreement with the IRS earlier this year to pay his tax debt through concerts, book sales and other means.

"The thing is, you're actually getting to hear Jerry in his own words, and it's not a script," McCarver Lewis said.

In one message, Lewis reminisces about fights he got into as a young man and discusses his first date and love affair. On another, he talks about the time he got kicked out of the seventh grade for fighting with a teacher.

The messages also include a pitch for a $24.99 package that includes an autographed photo of Lewis and a concert video.

'Dumb and Dumber' star relishes moronic film role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jeff Daniels isn't smarting over having to play dumb.

The costar of "Dumb and Dumber" said he enjoyed acting brainless with Jim Carrey in the new comedy.

"Even my wife found it frightening to see how well I could play dumb," he said. "But you know what? It was easy to play."

Daniels' movies include "Terms of Endearment," "The Purple Rose of Cairo" and "Gettysburg."

"It broke every rule in the book on what you're supposed to do after a movie like 'Gettysburg,'" Daniels said. "You're supposed to continue looking for quality dramatic parts like that, not jump into a silly comedy like this. But I like throwing people a curve."

In the movie Daniels and Carrey play two foolish men on a cross-country trip to return a briefcase.

SYSTEM HELPS TRACE THIEVES

ID check instituted at book buy-back

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to reduce book theft, the University Book Store is requiring UI students to show current student identification cards before they sell their books.

Officials can determine if a book being sold has been stolen by using a cross-check computer system. When an student's identification number is typed into a computer, the system records the books which were sold.

This way, if someone files a complaint of theft with the Department of Public Safety, the department can contact University Book Store administrators who will call up the stolen book number and identify the possible thief.

University Book Store manager George Herbert said he hopes the system will curtail book theft by preventing nonregistered and registered students who steal books from trying to sell them.

"At this time of the year, theft from this store and other stores goes up," Herbert said. "There is an increase in books being stolen from other students, and we are hoping this new system will act as a mechanism to control or actually get rid of book theft."

Public Safety officer Joe Lang said if someone is caught trying to sell a stolen book, he or she will be charged with theft. The minimum charge is a fifth-degree simple misdemeanor resulting in either a $100 fine or up to 30 days in jail.

"If someone is caught with a reported stolen book, the degree of penalty would be determined by the value of the book," Lang said. "A court appearance is required, and the magistrate with Johnson County will assess the fine."

Students selling books to the University Book Store had mixed reactions on whether the new system will be beneficial.

UI sophomore Kristen Maher said she approves of the new policy requiring students to show their IDs.

"I think it's a good idea because people are getting their books stolen from them out of the library," she said.

UI junior Thad Roffey said he thinks the system will help prevent theft.

"I guess for the most part it's OK because it keeps somebody from off the street from grabbing our books and selling them," he said.

But UI senior Peter Mygdal was skeptical that having students show their IDs would be a deterrent to theft.

"I think it's a good attempt to regulate (thefts)," he said. "But it is a futile attempt without photo IDs because anyone can sell a book back with (someone else's) ID."

COLLEGE PRESSURES STRESS STUDENTS

Experts debunk holiday blues myth

H. Fields Grenée
The Daily Iowan

The widely held conception that the holiday season and depression go hand in hand is not true, according to regional experts.

"It is a myth that more people seek out help lines around the holidays," said Carole Campbell Yack, coordinator of services at the Crisis Center, 321 E. First St. "Those people who do call and are depressed may mention the holidays, but we don't see an increase in calls regarding holiday depression."

The added stress that college students experience due to papers and finals may contribute to mood swings around the holidays.

"College students are away from home, and the bonds that their family provided aren't as evident," said Jason Penchoff, staff assistant at the National Public Education Campaign on Clinical Depression Network. "It is a challenging time because (students) are starting anew and building new friendships, which can be stressful and scary."

If students are experiencing mood swings, including depression, anxiety, anger, fear, sadness or remorse, there are professionals who can help.

Kathleen Staley, assistant director of UI Counseling Service, said students visit the organization to seek help for problems with self-growth and discovery, as well as for more stressful or anxiety-filled difficulties.

Staley said having a support group in college is important. Although friends tend to form the core of a support group, it often helps to have someone who can offer an unbiased opinion.

"It's important to be a good friend, to be caring and listen and give feedback when asked. But there comes a time when you realize that the difficulties your friend is referring to are more than you are equipped to handle," she said. "So you should refer them to the appropriate place. The University Counseling Service is certainly one of those agencies."

Staley said most college students tend not to seek counseling because of the perceived social stigma attached. She said they may feel people will look at them differently or they may believe they're taking time away from those who "really" need it.

One UI senior majoring in psychology, who wished to remain anonymous, said she is taking antidepressants due to a recent bout with Post Traumatic Stress Disorder.

"The most effective way for me to deal with depression when I'm feeling it is to sit down and write about it so I can get it down and be objective about it," she said. "Also exercise, getting enough sleep and socializing with people that I like to be around helps."

The Crisis Center has programs which include around-the-clock crisis line; information and referral services; crisis-intervention counseling and nonjudgmental, confidential support to all callers.

LACK OF MONEY CITED

Foreign students opt to stay for break

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Winnie Chan, a native of Hong Kong, will be staying in Iowa City during the Christmas break to relax and study for the January round of the GMAT, the test required by graduate business schools.

"I'm going to try to take a break because I'm kind of sick of school," she said. "I'll just take a rest and be ready for next semester. Hopefully, I'll find something fun to do during break."

According to statistics compiled by the Registrar's Office, about 1,700 of the UI's 27,000 students are from foreign countries. Although some of them will be returning to their native countries for the break, many will be staying in Iowa City.

Mushin Ezer, a UI graduate student and a native of Turkey, is one of those who will be staying. He said he might go to Chicago for a few days and will spend time with Asian and Turkish friends.

"I think we will celebrate New Year's," Ezer said. "We don't celebrate Christmas."

Ezer said he will also pass the time studying, as well as working out and playing basketball at the UI Field House.

UI graduate student Nanthakumaran Manickam, a native of Malaysia who has been in Iowa City since August, said he will look for a job and spend time with his two children over break.

"Everything is new to me," he said. "One month is a way for me to get adjusted for next semester."

Since winter is new to Manickam, he may take his kids sledding or skiing, he said. Manickam said he will also celebrate the holidays.

"In Malaysia, we welcome the new year," he said. "We will be joining friends here and celebrating Christmas and New Year's."

Chan said lack of money was a factor in her decision not to go to Hong Kong over the break. She said in order to get a reasonably priced airline ticket, she would have had to buy one at the beginning of the semester.

"I haven't spent my break in Iowa City the last two years, so I really don't mind it," she said. "I may take some short trips to Chicago or Minnesota. It's kind of boring here since everyone is leaving."

Ezer said returning home is not an option.

"I cannot go to Turkey right now because I'm on scholarship," he said. "I have to be successful here before I return. Also, summer is better for me because most of my friends in Turkey will have vacations then."

Ezer said the idea of spending the break in Iowa City doesn't bother him.

"I don't mind," he said. "It's not a big difference for me. If I go to Turkey, there won't be anybody to talk to and have fun."

STUDENT INFLUENCE FLUCTUATES

Local businesses weigh finals week effects

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

As finals week draws to a close, Iowa City businesses are preparing to return to normal after a week of fluctuating sales and swarms of patrons.

Restaurants and coffee shops have stayed busy during finals week, benefiting from the flocks of students looking for a place to study and eat.

"Basically, the students come in and drink all our coffee," said Julie Blakely, general manager of Bruegger's Bagel Bakery, 225 Iowa Ave.

Most of the increase in business has come early in the morning, Blakely said. This trend is also noticeable at other popular dining spots, like Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., 214 N. Linn St.

"When we open (at 5 a.m.), there are about five or six people out there," Hamburg waitress Irene

Lewis said. "It's twice as busy here during finals week."

The crowds that come in for lunch arrive at 10:30 a.m. to eat and study, which initially caught Hamburg employees off-guard, Lewis said.

"Being in a small restaurant, it really takes a toll," she said. "We haven't been prepared for the number of customers, but we made up for it now with twice as many employees."

One of the more popular places to study in Iowa City is The Java House, 211 1/2 E. Washington St., which is sometimes so packed that customers are asked to share tables, manager Keith Chivetta said.

"We don't want people to be offended if they're asked to share a table," he said. "We're constantly busy."

Other restaurants being taken over by waves of studying patrons are those open 24 hours a day, like the Country Kitchen in Coralville. Dining room manager Angela Krob said the restaurant's business has almost tripled between the hours of 11 p.m. to 3 a.m.

"We try our best to accommodate anything they need," she said. "We don't give them any studying rules either."

The finals crunch has caused Country Kitchen some problems, however, because it has been understaffed during the normally quiet early morning hours. One or two employees have been added to each night shift, Krob said.

"We're getting better at being prepared," she said. "When we're out of tables, though, we're out of tables. Usually, people aren't waiting for long, though."

While most eateries have enjoyed an increase in business, retail sales in downtown Iowa City have remained the same or even dropped.

"It's very spotty," Discount Records, 21 S. Dubuque St., manager Dave Hansen said. "Normally, there are two or three people in here all the time."

Nonstudents are taking advantage of the absence of student shoppers, Hansen said.

"We seem to have a little bit older clientele right now," he said. "Not the college crowd or studiers who normally come in."

Popular clothing stores like Ragstock, 207 E. Washington St., are nearly empty during finals week, but manager Teresa Welsh said that is not unexpected.

"It's not a surprise to me," she said. "Normally, people are trailing in. We usually have sales all the time."

Welsh said she isn't worried about the lack of business, though.

"It will probably stay this way during finals weeks and even through winter break," she said. "But everyone knows they can get things here."

STEEL BAR SERVED AS WEAPON

Dahmer's alleged killer reveals method used

Michael C. Buelow
Associated Press

PORTAGE, Wis. — The lifer held in the slaying of Jeffrey Dahmer told investigators he bashed Dahmer's head in with a steel bar from a prison weight room and left him gurgling on the floor because "God told me to do it."

Christopher J. Scarver, a 25-year-old killer who once claimed to be the son of God, was charged Thursday with murdering Dahmer and fellow inmate Jesse Anderson while the three cleaned a gymnasium Nov. 28 at the Columbia Correctional Institution.

Dahmer, 34, died on the way to a hospital after guards found him in a pool of blood. Anderson, another notorious Wisconsin killer, died two days later.

Dahmer, who killed 17 young men and boys in an orgy of necrophilia, dismemberment and cannibalism, had been serving 16 consecutive life sentences. Anderson was serving a life sentence for killing his wife.

Investigators said they aren't ruling out the possibility that other inmates in the area at the time were involved in the slayings, but Scarver, according to court papers, said they were innocent "because I did it."

According to the criminal complaint, Dahmer and Anderson were killed with a bar from a machine inmates use to do sit-ups. Scarver told investigators he slipped the 20-inch bar in his pants when he was alone in a weight room on the day of the killings.

Scarver said he attacked Dahmer first, while Dahmer was cleaning a staff locker room. He said Dahmer was facing him and didn't yell out as Scarver struck him on the side of the head. Scarver said he heard Dahmer making a gurgling sound before Scarver left the locker room.

Scarver said he then found Anderson in an inmate locker room. He said Anderson turned to him as he hit him on the forehead.

After the attack, Scarver put the bar in his jacket, returned it to the weight room and went back to his cell, the complaint said.

Asked by a guard why he was back early from his work detail, Scarver said, "God told me to do it. You will hear about it on the 6 o'clock news. Jesse Anderson and Jeffrey Dahmer are dead."

At first, the complaint said, Scarver said he didn't know why he attacked Dahmer and Anderson. But almost two weeks after the killings, he said during interrogation that "the spirit" had come upon him "right there."

He said he had no regrets because he was simply a tool of the spirit.

incomes of $100,000 a year and would be eliminated at incomes of $120,000.

And it would allow individuals with household incomes under $100,000 to take tax deductions of up to $2,000 apiece for money put into individual retirement account funds. The law would be changed to allow money to be withdrawn from any IRA without a tax penalty if the money goes to education, first home purchases and catastrophic illnesses.

"Everybody knows that all is not well with America," Clinton said as he dusted off his abandoned 1992 campaign pledge for middle-class tax relief.

Responding for Republicans, newly elected Sen. Fred Thompson of Tennessee said Clinton was playing catchup with Republicans.

"Until a few weeks ago, they were saying we didn't even need a tax cut," Thompson said. "Yet from what we heard tonight, the president's vision for the future now looks a lot like what Republicans just campaigned for — at least until we start looking at the details."

"We welcome the president to help us lead in a new direction," Thompson said. "But if he will not, we welcome the president to follow because we're moving ahead."

Incoming House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas scoffed at Clinton's central proposal. "He gives a $500-per-child tax credit until the child is 13. Lord have mercy, it's just at that point that they start getting really expensive."

Criticism of Clinton's ideas came from his left, too. Rhode Island Sen. Claiborne Pell, a liberal Democrat, said, "It reminds me of 1981, when we Democrats entered into a bidding war with President Reagan to see who could produce a bigger tax cut. ... As a result of policies of that era, we ended up with $2.6 trillion added to our national debt."

But House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri praised Clinton's performance, calling his speech "right on target."

To pay for his proposed tax cuts, Clinton proposed trimming or eliminating scores of programs — housing and energy were especially targeted — but he stopped short of abolishing any Cabinet department.

In addition, the government's air traffic control system would be converted to a private commercial operation, with safety oversight remaining under federal control. The Naval Petroleum Reserve would be sold to private industry.

Clinton called his proposals "a middle-class Bill of Rights."

The Republicans are readying a tax proposal of their own, and House Democrats announced their plan earlier this week.

Other major tax cut plans already on the table:

• The Republican "Contract with America" plan for a $500-per-child tax credit for families earning up to $200,000.

• A House Democratic plan unveiled by Gephardt to give an unspecified tax cut to all workers — not just those with children — who make up to $75,000.

• A proposal by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, that would cut $124 billion in taxes over five years by doubling the dependent exemption for children — from $2,500 to $5,000 — regardless of a family's income.

"The president is not going to come in here now and hijack this train," Gramm said earlier.

But Clinton took a swipe in his address at GOP plans, which he said can't be afforded and favor the wealthy. "I won't support ideas that sound good but aren't paid for," he said.

Even though Clinton was staking out a more centrist position, he asserted, "It's not about moving left of right but about moving forward."

"It's not about the next election ... that's in your hands," he added, sitting at his desk in front of an American flag, holiday decorations and family photographs.

Clinton also said he would ask Congress to pass lobbying and campaign reform and to live under the laws it imposes on others and said he would call for welfare and health "reforms that work."

HOLIDAY

that they say, "We'll honor this man's birthday, but you'll have to pay for it," O'Donnell said.

Arizona recently agreed to recognize the holiday after pressure from private and public groups which accused state leaders of being racist.

He said although union workers are among the most adamant supporters of the holiday, they want it to be a paid day off.

"People forget that Martin Luther King was killed in Memphis supporting union employees in that city," O'Donnell said. "No one wants to honor that man more than union workers. He was a great supporter of organized labor."

Mary Johanna Small, associate vice president for Finance and University Services, said the grievance has gone through a hearing process and the union will receive a decision soon.

"If after (the union) receives the decision and are not happy with it, the grievance can go into the fourth step, which is arbitration," Small said.

An arbiter is a disinterested third party chosen to decide the outcome of a dispute. The disputing parties are obligated to accept the decision of the arbiter.

Some of the confusion over a formal meeting between the UI and the man's birthday, but you'll have to pay for it," O'Donnell said.

"I spoke with the then-president of the union in January," she said. "I thought that if they wanted a formal meeting, they would have requested it then, but they didn't. Had there been a request to have such a discussion, we would have been willing to do that."

One of the union's complaints is that it was not given enough notice about the decision to observe the holiday. The union contract states the UI must give employees at least a year's notice for a new holiday.

The decision to observe the holiday was made by the UI in January and approved by the Iowa state Board of Regents in April.

O'Donnell said the grievance hearing process has not been effective.

"We fail in trying to solve problems when there isn't a disinterested third party involved," he said.

O'Donnell said Martin Luther King Jr. wouldn't want people inconvenienced when celebrating his date of birth.

"Martin Luther King would roll over in his grave if he knew people had to give up a paid day off to celebrate his birthday," O'Donnell said.

"But I couldn't do it any other way," she said. "The people evaluate you on a number of factors. One of them is integrity. If I would have held a news conference and said, 'Try them all, hang them all high,' no one who is close to me would have believed me. I couldn't do that."

"There are other things more important. You have to be able to sleep at night. I have to be able to go to church."

Campbell still believes the death penalty is wrong and that it will end up taking innocent lives while costing taxpayers millions of dollars.

"When you're in the criminal justice system, if you're a court worker or you're a police officer, people are willing to believe you're always right — it's blind faith," she said.

Campbell said the death penalty comes "way too late" in the criminal justice process and hopes society will eventually focus on preventing the crime in the first place.

"The answer to crime lies within the human heart. We've got to rebuild the family. No governor can stop crime. No attorney general can stop crime. Community response is what stops crime."

Campbell believes the death penalty will be passed by the 1995 Iowa Legislature and signed into law by Branstad, but she hopes that lawmakers remember they need something more to go along with it.

"I think the message is balance," she said. "Punishment, absolutely. People have to know that there are parameters and rules, and when you violate the rules, you get punished. But remembering the expression 'Trying to catch the horse after it's already out of the barn,' we've got to focus on prevention."

She's still pushing for truth in sentencing, so criminals actually serve the amount of time they were sent to prison for, and for the state to abolish parole. She says she told the truth about the death penalty while she campaigned.

"It won't make us safer, it will make us less safe," she said. "When you have the death penalty, juries are less likely to convict and then dangerous criminals are back out on the streets."

She said she just doesn't know how to make people understand the truth about the ramifications of the death penalty.

"You can talk until you run out of breath, and that won't do it because people don't hear," she said. "I suppose they'll have to see examples of people wrongly executed. They'll have to see the deadlocked juries and the criminals going free. They'll have to see a mom on TV watching her son being executed. They'll have to see how the death penalty really is degrading humanity."

Campbell says she still doesn't know what she'll do after leaving office or if she'll stay in Iowa.

"I have a number of options I'm exploring, and I don't want to jinx any of them by talking about them. But I do know that wherever I go, I'll be working in my quiet little way to make a difference for people. If I've got something to give to society, I'll give it."

SCENE OF DISASTER OPENED THURSDAY

Officials comb airplane crash site for clues

Christopher Sullivan Associated Press

MORRISVILLE, N.C. — Screaming downward at 200 mph, American Eagle Flight 3379 cut a wedgelike swath through the dense woods, shearing off the tops of tall pines before it crashed and burned in heaps of mangled metal and ashes.

Wooden stakes marked the spots where 15 people, including both pilots, died Tuesday night when the plane crashed about four miles from Raleigh-Durham International Airport in rain and fog. Five aboard survived.

Investigators, some in white plastic protective suits, searched Thursday for new clues in the fiery crash, which National Transportation Safety Board officials said came after the crew reported engine trouble.

The plane, a twin-engine 19-seat Jetstream 3200, was on a short trip from Greensboro to Raleigh when it went down. A different type of plane was involved in an American Eagle crash Oct. 31 in Indiana that "Once the airplane starts hitting the trees, it's no longer an airplane. It's just a bunch of mass."

Roff Sasser, National Transportation Safety Board official killed all 68 people aboard.

Following the latest accident, the Transportation Department said Wednesday it is toughening safety standards for commuter airlines. They will now be required to meet the same standards as major carriers. The Federal Aviation Administration said the new rules probably won't take effect before 1996.

On Thursday, the crash site was opened to reporters for the first time.

Pieces of the plane were scattered over an area about the size of a football field.

Part of the word "Eagle" could be seen on the crumpled rear section of the fuselage, while much of the cockpit and tail sections were reduced to debris and ashes.

Seconds before impact, the plane dropped sharply and suddenly, a survivor told investigators.

As the pilots apparently struggled to regain control, the plane veered to the left, according to the flight data recorder.

"Once the airplane starts hitting the trees, it's no longer an airplane. It's just a bunch of mass," said the NTSB's Roff Sasser.

NTSB officials said two black box recorders in the cockpit showed the pilots had talked of an engine "flameout" just before the crash.

Stuart Matthews, president of the Flight Safety Foundation in Arlington, Va., said power loss in one engine alone should not have caused the accident.

With one good engine, even with a heavy load, "it can even continue climbing instead of descending," he said.

John Mazon, a spokesman for the Airline Pilots Association, agreed. "If nothing else happens, that's what it's supposed to be able to do," he said.

"So often in accidents, there are complications," Mazon said. Matthews would not speculate on what might have caused the plane to go down.

The plane's two engines, made by Allied Signal Inc., had 200 and 500 hours of use since overhauls earlier this year, the NTSB said. Regulations allow 5,000 hours between overhauls, said Bill Reavis, a company spokesman.

The plane that crashed was registered in 1991 and since then had made four unscheduled landings for engine power surges and one case of smoke in the cockpit, the FAA said.

American Eagle, sister company of American Airlines, has been involved in at least four other fatal crashes in the past seven years.

Vanessa Lowe, Oakdale correctional officer

ative and take care of the inmates and staff, or the inmates will take care of it," Schmalz said. "We need money and the bodies."

Finding additional space for inmates has forced officers to use areas not designed to hold prisoners. In some instances, an officer must watch over 100 inmates with no backup and no place to lock them up, correctional officer Vanessa Lowe said.

"We're making space available which isn't available for housing inmates. In some areas, we have one officer to over 100 inmates, and basically, they don't have a backup and we don't have a staff to back them up. And if there is a problem with one of the inmates in those areas, they can't lock them up because there is no room to lock them up in," Lowe said.

The problem lies with legislators who pass laws but never see the consequences those laws have, Lowe said.

"They're passing these laws and they're making these decisions, but they don't have to live with their decisions," Lowe said. "We do."

Officers said the overcrowding can lead to dangerous situations, especially during the night shift, when only four officers keep watch over 450 inmates.

"You can compare it to baby-sitting," correctional officer Lew Vyrostek said. "Imagine trying to take care of two newborns. Now imagine trying to take care of eight newborns at the same time."

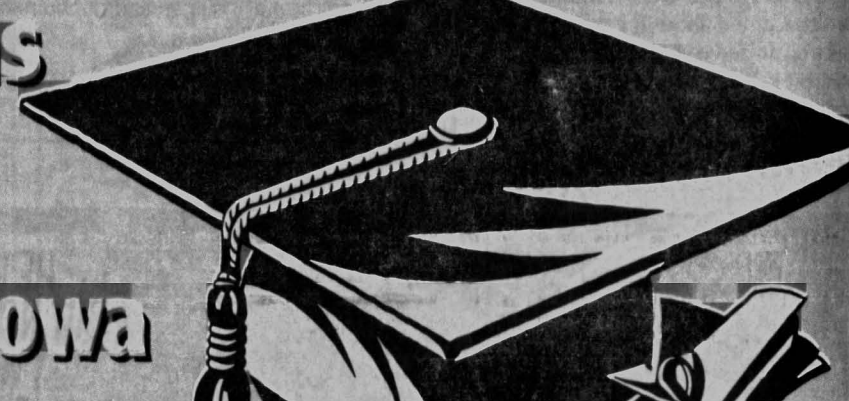

The situation is dangerous and tough for the officers, but Schmalz said they are too dedicated to keeping the public safe to institute a "walk out."

"This is not something that's going to go away tomorrow; it's not going to go away next week," Schmalz said. "It's going to be there, and this union is committed to keep fighting until they either build more prison space or find alternative solutions."

Schmalz said he hopes no one gets hurt or a riot occurs before legislators wake up and address the problem.

"People who come to work deserve to feel safe on the job," Schmalz said.

Owners approve sale of Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Major league baseball owners on Tuesday gave the go-ahead for television producer Tom Werner to buy the San Diego Padres to Texas software millionaire John Moors.

The sale is expected to be completed in the next few weeks, said Larry Lucchino, a former president of the Baltimore Orioles who is assisting Moors.

A source close to the negotiations said Moors will pay approximately $80 million to majority owner of what was the worst team in the big league during the strike-interrupted 1993 season.

Werner and 14 other Southern California businessmen, including 10 from San Diego, bought the Padres from Joan Kroc for $100 million in 1990.

Knicks waive veteran Rivers

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks' muddled backcourt situation became clearer Tuesday when the team waived veteran Doc Rivers.

Rivers, 33, had played surprisingly the last two games with Greg Anthony sat on the bench. Questions swirled about whether New York's point guards would be the odd man out.

It turned out to be Rivers' starter until he tore ligament in his left knee last December. Rivers then obtained Derek Fisher, who led the team to the NBA Finals.

"We were overcrowded in the backcourt and needed to make a roster decision," general manager Ernie Grunfeld said.

After rehabilitating his knee, Rivers injured his ankle, forcing him to start the season on the injured list.

Activated Nov. 29, Rivers played in three games, averaging 15.7 minutes.

He was 4-for-13 from the line and 8-for-11 from the line and had eight assists.

Els takes first-round lead at World Championship

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica — Ernie Els found his groove on Tuesday, but he couldn't even a four-putt double bogey could take him out of contention.

The U.S. Open champion seven birdies on the back nine, overcoming a double-bogey on the 11th hole to shoot a 7-par 64 and take a three-shot lead after the first round of the Johnnie Walker World Championship.

He rarely found trouble with his irons where critical close — he had six birdies from inside 12 feet and two putted from 35 feet for birdie on the par-5 17th.

His only trouble was a nudge in what he called one of his best rounds ever.

Back-to-back birdies got him to 3-under, but he pushed the iron off the tee on No. 11, 342 yards the shortest par-4 on the course — and his wedge just off the right of the green.

Iowa proves vulnerable to unranked teams

Roxanna Pellin
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's basketball team shouldn't have any trouble getting fired up if it plays Stanford this weekend.

Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said there's something called "name recognition" that will make the Hawkeyes come ready to play.

A win over Northwestern Louisiana Saturday could match Iowa against Stanford at the Fry's/Cardinal Classic this weekend.

Stanford needs to beat St. Mary's in the second game Saturday night to advance to the championship Sunday.

"We do know who Stanford is," Stringer said.

"We did not know who Creighton was or Southwest...I do think that when you know you're playing USC, Stanford or Tennessee, you're going to do a little more than you need to do than you are against other teams."

The No. 24 Hawkeyes have lost to three unranked teams: Southwest Missouri State, Stephen F. Austin and Creighton this season. Iowa beat then-No. 20 Southern Cal for the Hawkeye Classic title, 65-55.

The No. 6 Cardinal have won the last seven tournaments they have hosted. Iowa is ranked 24th after dropping to Creighton 63-53 Dec. 8 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Stanford is 4-1, while Iowa stands at 3-3.

But the Hawkeyes need to beat the Lady Demons before they can look ahead to the Cardinal.

Iowa tips off against Northwestern Louisiana at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

"This is a team that doesn't have name recognition, and we're proving ourselves vulnerable to that," Stringer said.

"I hope we can mature to a point where we can play without regard to the name of the institution, but to the level of expectation of our own play."

Stringer said she expects the Hawkeyes will hold a height advantage over the Lady Demons, who are 2-2 on the season.

"They're going to run hard and they tend to have more finesse," Stringer said. "They run the floor real well. We probably will be bigger. But I don't know that bigger is always necessarily better. We were bigger than Creighton."

The Hawkeyes will open their Big Ten Conference season during winter break, Dec. 28, against Illinois at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

With a .500 non-conference record, Iowa is tied for eighth in the league with Michigan and Minnesota.

Indiana is the only undefeated Big Ten team at 7-0.

Iowa's Davis may juggle lineup

Roxanna Pellin

Veteran players helped Iowa State knock down Iowa last Saturday. But the Hawkeyes will look like an experienced ball club next to Long Island this weekend.

Long Island's lineup includes eight freshmen, four sophomores and one senior. The Blackbirds are 2-3.

The Hawkeyes' roster includes two juniors and three seniors. Iowa fell to 5-1 after losing to Iowa State, 76-63 last Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

But Iowa may have some lineup changes Saturday because of injuries to freshman Ryan Bowen and sophomore Jess Settles. Bowen hurt his hip against the Cyclones last week. Settles has been hampered by back and hip injuries this season.

Bowen said he hoped to practice today so he can play against Long Island.
 "I'll just go into it like any other game and work as hard as I can," Bowen said. "I won't light up at all, actually I'll try to go harder to get my conditioning back a little bit. I hope to gain a lot of confidence with this game."

Owners hold off on salary cap

Ronald Blum
 Associated Press

CHICAGO — Like everything else about this baseball season, the tortured tale of the salary cap took a surprising turn just when it looked like a done deal.

For whatever reason, owners decided Thursday not to impose the cap for another week, instead giving the sport's executive council authority to declare an impasse if there isn't an agreement by Dec. 22.

It may be posturing. It may be hesitation. Or it may be a genuine desire to settle.

"We want to reach a negotiated settlement, and we say that with every ounce of sincerity we can put forth," management negotiator John Harrington said after the owners' four-hour meeting. "And this gesture is just that, it's the olive branch to say, listen, let's make peace for now and many ball, to open the camps and have spring training," Usery said from Alexandria, Va.

"I'm very happy with the decision."

Owners approved their decision by a 25-3 vote, according to several participants, with the Baltimore Orioles, New York Mets and Toronto Blue Jays in opposition.

"If the union really wants to reach an agreement, we're going to give it more time," acting commissioner Bud Selig said.

"But it must address ... our central issue: establishing a relationship between revenues and salaries."

Owners, who are threatening to open the 1995 season with replacement players, want players to accept a predetermined percentage of revenue or agree to a tax mechanism that will penalize clubs with high payrolls. The union, which won free agency prior to the 1976 season, says caps and punitive taxes would crush the market for players.

years to come."

Union head Donald Fehr said talks probably will resume Monday in the Washington area, but wouldn't predict if players would make a new proposal.

"While we do not agree that we are at an impasse, we do agree that it is appropriate to continue talking, and we are encouraged by that," Fehr said by telephone from his office in New York. "Obviously, if they are willing to negotiate, so are we."

Talks broke off Wednesday at Rye Brook, N.Y., and mediator W.J. Usery predicted then that the sides might return to the table as soon as this weekend.

If owners impose a cap, it would lead to lawsuits and perhaps the game's most chaotic offseason this century.

WRESTLING

Iowa to match up against nation's best

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa wrestlers will look forward to stuffing their opponents rather than their stomachs this holiday season.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Evanston, Ill., Dec. 29-30 for a showdown with the nation's finest in the Midlands Open. The two-day tournament will showcase the talents of more than 80 of the country's nationally-ranked wrestlers. Each wrestler will compete in five or six matches in hopes of capturing the individual title for their weight class.

The team is fired up about having the opportunity to compete in the Midlands, which the Hawkeyes feel is a warmup for the national championships.

"It (Midlands) excites me because you know if you can win at the Midlands in this difficult of a year, than you can probably win at the Nationals," Erik Stroner said. "It's a very big tournament because all of the big national wrestlers will be there."

Iowa currently has three wrestlers ranked No. 1 in the country. They are Mike Mena at 118 pounds, Lincoln McClravy (150) and Joel Sharratt (190). Jeff McGinnis is ranked second at 126 pounds. The Hawkeyes will try to improve on last year's performance at the Midlands, in which they failed to capture any individual titles.

The Hawkeyes conclude their team practices today, but will continue to work out individually over the break until practices resume. The wrestlers said they are working hard to maintain their proper weights as the season progresses and officials become stricter about weight requirements.

"Our biggest problem is keeping our weight under control," Stroner said. "This isn't a time when we can take a break. We will have nine or 10 days off, but we can't take nine days off from practice. We have to continue to do our weight training and running."

Mike Mena said he is excited about the Midlands, but said it's a difficult time to focus on wrestling.

"It's kind of a bad time for a tournament. The tendency is to want to take a break after Christmas. It's hard to be in a mode, where you're eating, breathing, and sleeping wrestling," Mena said.

Iowa will start out 1995 at home with dual meets against Clarion and Arizona State. Both teams have returning all-Americans that the Hawkeyes will have to contend with. The meets start at 7:30 p.m. on Jan. 7 and Jan. 14.

"The home advantage is a big factor for us. It's so hostile and we pack about 10,000 people into Carver-Hawkeye Arena each time," Mena said. "That's always a nice atmosphere."

this semester, will dress against the Black Birds. Helmers has practiced all season.

The Hawkeyes have relied on Bowen, Settles and senior Jim Bartels inside.

Bartels leads Iowa in rebounds, averaging 7.8 per game. Settles and Bowen average 6.7 and 5.7, respectively. Settles is the team's leading scorer with 19.7 points per game.

Settles could even be out until the Duke game Dec. 27.

"I don't know yet just how long Jess is going to be out, but we certainly aren't going to jump back in because it's something he's been playing with now for some time," Davis said.

"When we had a bunch of games at the beginning of the season, there wasn't a lot of time for him to recover. Hopefully, now he can get healthy."

PRO BOWL

selected for the NFC team on offense were Dallas' Mark Stepnoski, Nate Newton, Jay Novacek and Daryl Johnston.

Smith, Newton, Stepnoski, Haley, Lett and Woodson all will be starters.

"Tuinei thought he had been the victim of a practical joke.

"I always go home to Hawaii anyway, but this year it will be even more special," Tuinei said. "I was surprised. When I heard it, I thought they were kidding. It's just amazing that I'm still around after 12 years."

San Francisco's Jerry Rice will be making his ninth appearance, and will have with him teammates Steve Young and Brent Jones on offense, Deion Sanders and Merton Hanks in the secondary.

The backups from the 49ers were Jesse Sapolu and Bart Oates on the offensive line, Dana Stubblefield and Tim McDonald on defense.

Six Pittsburgh Steelers led the voting for the AFC squad, four of them starters: Dermontti Dawson on offense; Rod Woodson, Carnell Lake and Greg Lloyd on defense. The backups were guard Duval Love and linebacker Kevin Greene, who leads the NFL with 14 sacks.

Two players chasing NFL records also will start for the NFC. Minnesota's Cris Carter, whose 111 receptions is one short of Sterling Sharpe's single-season mark, will be at wide receiver along with Rice — Green Bay's Sharpe will be a backup.

And Detroit's Barry Sanders, the league's leading rusher with 1,721 yards and within reach of Eric Dickerson's 2,105, will start alongside Smith in the backfield. It will be the sixth straight season in the Pro Bowl for Sanders.

The rest of the NFC starters on offense will be New Orleans' William Roaf and Detroit's Lomas Brown at tackle, and Minnesota guard Randall McDaniel. On defense, it will be Green Bay's Reggie White and Bryce Paup; Minnesota's John Randle; Washington's Ken Harvey; Detroit's Chris Spielman; and Arizona's Aeneas Williams.

Selected as specialists were Washington punter Reggie Roby, Minnesota placekicker Fuad Reveiz, kick returner Mel Gray and special teamer Elbert Shelley of Atlanta.

The NFC backups included Minnesota's Warren Moon and Jerome Bettis of the Rams on offense; Philadelphia's William Fuller, Arizona's Seth Joyner, Atlanta's Jessie Tuggle and Philadelphia's Eric Allen on defense.

In addition to the six Steelers, the AFC team had five Miami Dolphins: Starters Dan Marino, Keith Sims and Richmond Webb, reserves Irving Fryar and Bryan Cox.

As an indication of their slide this year, the four-time

Carter eyes league record for catches

Ron Lesko
Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Asked his thoughts on the top receivers in the NFL, Detroit coach Wayne Fontes named five players. None of them was Minnesota's Cris Carter, who is about to set the league record for catches.

That doesn't bother Carter, who needs two catches against the Lions on Saturday to surpass Sterling Sharpe's year-old record of 112 receptions.

"No big deal," Carter said Thursday. "I think I've had a good opportunity. I've been in a situation where I could be successful week in and week out."

The record will come, and the recognition already has started. Carter was named a Pro Bowl starter Thursday for the first time in his eight-year career.

Even Fontes, whose oversight came last week, didn't waste a second chance to give Carter his due.

"I've been very fortunate to coach two Pro Bowl games, so I've been around Jerry Rice and Sterling Sharpe and all the great receivers in the league," Fontes said this week. "Cris Carter is a fine superstar receiver."

Nice recovery, coach. Carter, who the Vikings got for $100 off the waiver wire after Philadelphia let him go in 1990, is not a flashy receiver with break-away speed.

Even with 111 catches, he is just fifth in the NFL in receiving yards and his 10.4-yards-per-catch average is easily the lowest among the league's top pass catchers.

Associated Press

Cris Carter has 111 receptions this season and needs two catches at Detroit on Saturday to break Sterling Sharpe's record of 112.

But he has outstanding hands, a 36-inch vertical leap and, for the first time since coming to the Vikings, a reliable quarterback. Warren Moon, whose 4,078 passing yards lead the NFL, was named a Pro Bowl backup.

"He doesn't have the speed that some of the other guys have, but he makes up for it with his caginess, because he's very smart and knows all the holes in the defense," Moon said. "And he's very good after he catches the football."

NHL meetings could extend to weekend

Ken Rappoport
Associated Press

NEW YORK — With NHL commissioner Gary Bettman and union boss Bob Goodenow on the sidelines for the time being, the spotlight in the league's labor dispute has shifted to a smaller arena.

For the second straight day, lawyers for both sides met Thursday in an attempt to find a common ground so the main negotiators can continue bargaining.

"They could still be meeting this weekend," a management source said of the lawyers.

As of Thursday afternoon, Bettman and Goodenow had not been in communication and no talks were scheduled.

Meanwhile, the owners lockout reached its 76th day with time quickly evaporating to save the season.

At a public forum Wednesday night in New York with commissioners Paul Tagliabue of the NFL and David Stern of the NBA, Bettman reiterated there was no reason to continue bargaining talks "until there is a genuine willingness to get together and solve (the labor) problems."

Bettman has been empowered to cancel the season unless a new collective bargaining agreement can be reached ensuring a 50-game schedule and full playoffs before July 1.

So far, the NHL has canceled 24 games for each team to cut the schedule to 60. The last cut was on Nov. 17.

FOR MINOR LEAGUER

McDowell traded from Sox to Yankees

Adam Nazimowitz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Acquiring Jack McDowell was the easy part. The hard part for the New York Yankees will be fitting him into a new salary structure.

With the baseball strike continuing and the threat of a salary cap at hand, the Yankees are betting that no matter what happens, they can agree with McDowell on a long-term deal.

On Wednesday night, less than 24 hours before the owners were expected to implement a salary cap, New York acquired McDowell, one of baseball's best pitchers, from the Chicago White Sox for minor league pitcher Keith Heberling and a player to be named.

McDowell would become a restricted free agent if the salary cap is imposed, and he could sign an offer sheet with any team. But the Yankees would have 10 days to match any offer.

Another risk is how he would fare in the Big Apple. The Yankees have signed a number of high-profile players who failed to cut it in New York. And McDowell was once so fed up with his situation in Chicago that he said it was becoming "a mini-New York."

Not promising words for someone headed to the media capital of the world, but the 28-year-old McDowell is no ordinary pitcher.

McDowell, a right-hander, throws a mean fastball and plays guitar in a hard rock band called V.I.E.W. He goes by the nickname "Black Jack," wears a goatee and stares down hitters from the mound.

"We were only looking at top pitchers, and he was one of them," Yankees general manager Gene Michael said. "Hopefully, we can sign him. You have to take chances in this world. He's a good one to take a chance on."

The 1993 AL Cy Young Award winner was 10-9 last season with a 3.73 ERA.

After a rough start, McDowell proved his toughness.

On May 13, he was 2-7 with a 7.54 ERA. But over his last 10 starts, McDowell went 7-2 with a 1.81 ERA, allowing just 17 earned runs in 84 2/3 innings. He threw three consecutive complete games to end the season.

Steelers' defense to rattle Browns

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Sunday's matchup between the Steelers and Browns may go a long way in showing that the AFC can produce hard-hitting games, too.

"They say the AFC isn't as physical," says Browns safety Eric Turner, referring to the NFC's reputation as the tougher conference. "But I know the Browns play physical football. And we went out and showed that."

The Browns may be boring, but they aren't passive. Neither are the Steelers, especially on defense as coordinator Dom Capers sends Greg Lloyd, Kevin Greene, Rod Woodson and Carnell Lake flying at quarterbacks from all angles.

That and the home field make the Steelers 3 1/2-point favorites to win.

Both the Steelers' running backs, Barry Foster and Bam Morris, are banged up, although both are likely to play. Woodson is also sore.

But the Browns, who lost to the Steelers 17-10 on Sept. 11, have a problem.

He's Vinny Testaverde and he's never been great at reading defenses. So imagine what Testaverde will see when he starts trying to call audibles.

So figure Pittsburgh for a touchdown, a field goal and a safety. That should be enough.

Farewell finals, hello holidays! It's time to crank up the tunes

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

"Oop-ahhh!" — Bugler blowing taps over the grave of finals week just as he slips on an empty Jägermeister bottle, swallows his horn and cartwheels into the open hole.

It's dead! Finals week has just taken a bullet in the back of the head, and for those students who plan on getting good and canned before making the great trek home, Iowa City's night spots are gearing up to offer snookered study hounds one last hurrah and plenty of dirt to shovel into the waiting tomb.

Perennial favorites House of Large Sizes thunder down from Cedar Falls tonight with a heapin' load of heaviness to dump on the crowd at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. Truck Stop Love and Fish Puppet will do the opening honors. With House's patented screech-and-stomp sound and opening acts that sound like titles of Jack Kerouac novels, this show speaks for itself. Saturday night, Gabe's invites everyone back into the sweat shack to cure their hangovers with the soothing grooves of Sheltering Sky and opens Steeplejack. Anyone still standing after the show will be rewarded with enough Sominex to knock out an adult yak.

For those planning to drive home this weekend, a mellow evening at the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., is recommended beforehand to soothe those caffeine-stretched nerves. Tonight and Saturday, local jazz impresario Andrew Parrott and his trio take the stage with original tunes and a laid-back vibe. A word of advice: The Sanctuary's atmosphere could soothe the weary into falling asleep at the wheel. (Those long trips are great for catching up on missed sleep, but watch out for careless truck drivers when swerving into oncoming traffic and bring earplugs to guard against those bothersome airhorns.)

The Metro, 121 Iowa Ave., flips finals week a farewell bird tonight as it features the dizzying, fuzzy funk of Dagobah. Jedi mantras punctuated by noodle grooves and light-speed visuals will abound, so bring your "Yoda sez, 'Party till u puke'" T-shirts. Saturday night, Chicago natives Junction will tool into town. If you're driving home to Chicago on Interstate 80 Saturday and you happen to pass these guys going the other way, do them a favor and keep those open containers of Zima under the seat and to yourself.

Minnesota folk-pop band Steeplejack opens for Sheltering Sky Saturday night at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. When you drop by to celebrate the end of finals week, say hi from the DJ Arts staff. Happy holidays.

The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., closes out the semester with a weekend of local artist showcases. Tonight, The Blues Instigators do it to it in a blue way, while Saturday sees Divin' Duck do it again with a groovy touch. Those planning to burn their textbooks later today would do well to extinguish all smoldering outerwear and exposed body hair before entering The Mill's laid-back atmosphere — smoking is permitted, but only to an extent.

And that's a wrap for this semester at the weekend love shack. Remember, if you're headed home in the next few days, drinking and driving simply do not mix — unless you're planning on getting there aboard the Exxon Valdez. Have a funky yule.

traffic and bring earplugs to guard against those bothersome airhorns.)

Good Wood — Iowa City Acoustic Compilation 1994

In Iowa City, if you have the strength to heft a 12-string guitar, then you're part of the "music scene." Some wise folks at Beaten Path and Young Productions have narrowed that field down a little with Good Wood, a "who's who" of local acoustic talent.

And fortunately, it's also a "best of the best" effort.

Well-produced by Kelly Pardekooper, with evenhanded mixing and engineering from Stu Mullins, Good Wood is a sharp, crisp-sounding box of surprises from some of the area's darriest guitarists and songsters.

On an entire disc of standout material, "Catch the Time," a wise and engaging vocal/guitar performance from Sheltering Sky percussionist Chad Scott, grabs the ear straight away with some stretched vocals, smart lyrics and hefty guitar. Mara McCann's powerful Natalie Merchant-esque emoting on "Shelter" by Plain Jane is also a keeper, as is "Decimal," a percussion track in which some of Good Wood's musicians band together to do some first-class, highly atmospheric drum jamming.

Until now, The Mill Restaurant and the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub have offered the only way to absorb Iowa City's glut of fine acoustic material in its truest form — a live setting. Good Wood may not be absolutely live in that sense, but it is entirely enjoyable.

The Cult

The Cult

A strange music purgatory exists for new albums from bands that have lasted longer than five years. The fight to avoid a stylistic rut competes with the need for innovating until the band ends up alienating its entire base of fans. For The Cult, this netherworld status lies somewhere between the heaven of 1985's Love and the automaton hell of 1991's Ceremony.

The Cult's eponymous new CD comes after three years of almost no activity except for bits and pieces, such as a romping tune on the "Cool World" soundtrack. The dynamic duo of lead singer Ian Astbury and guitarist Billy Duffy is together again like a latter-day Mick and Keith, this time with a fairly new rhythm section: bassist Craig Adams and drummer Scott Garrett.

The usual Cult familiars — sex, drugs, mysticism, more sex and rock 'n' roll — prowl around like cagey bedfellows. Hurting off into the hard-rock stratosphere with the CD's first single, "Coming Down (Drug Tongue)," the group manages to ease away from its Sonic Temple sound in a groovy middle section of three songs. "Naturally High" praises endorphin stimulation over artificial kicks, while "Joy" continues the theme of chemical alteration with a Bo Diddley riff and some Doors-esque synthesizer action. The CD's most glittery little gem, "Star," is a catchy, whammy-funky psychedelic cap on the set as the album's tone becomes more somber toward the end. "Saints Are Down" is the obligatory, epic Astbury dirge of hard times and harder luck and leaves a nice aftertaste.

Some fans may feel The Cult hasn't bought its way out of purgatory yet. But resting on its very formidable laurels is easy for a band that simultaneously eschewed and pirated hard-rock music industry standards way before "alternative" was a genre.
