TV fan tunes in to favorite commercials

"It's not so much the shows themselves that I usually watch," Jones said, "but the commercials make up a goodly part of my viewing time." Jones said he enjoys the commercials in Fox and channels such as NBC.

"Whenever a best director finalist in the UI student awards announced this week, I am always excited to hear who has been chosen," Jones said. "It's a great way to support the filmmakers and their work." Jones and his friends enjoy the commercials because they provide a break from the shows and allow them to catch up on the latest news and events.

Although Jones enjoys watching commercials, he also enjoys the shows themselves. "The shows are what keep me coming back," Jones said. "I'm a big fan of 'Friends' and 'Seinfeld,' and I always look forward to watching them each week."

Jones is also a fan of 'Buffy the Vampire Slayer,' which airs on Fox. "I love watching this show because it's so much fun," Jones said. "I always look forward to the next episode and the cliffhangers that keep me guessing."

Jones and his friends also enjoy the commercials that air during book buy-back at the University of Iowa. "We always watch those commercials," Jones said. "They're so funny and it's a great way to see what's new in the world of books."

COLLEGE PRESSURES STRESS STUDENTS

Experts debunk holiday blues myth

H. Fields Greene

The Daily Iowan

As the holiday season approaches, students are faced with the challenges of both school and family. The combination of exams, papers, and social events can be overwhelming. However, there are ways to cope with the stress and enjoy the season.

It is important to remember that everyone is in the same boat. Many students share the same concerns and feelings. By reaching out to friends or family, students can find support and share their thoughts.

Exercise and physical activity can also help to reduce stress. Activities such as walking, yoga, or even dancing can have a positive impact on mood and overall well-being.

Scheduling time for relaxation and self-care is crucial. This could include things like taking a warm bath, reading a favorite book, or simply practicing deep breathing exercises.

It is also important to set realistic goals and expectations for the holiday season. Students should prioritize their tasks and focus on the things they can control rather than worrying about what they cannot.

Finally, seeking help from a professional counselor or therapist can also be beneficial. They can provide strategies and techniques to manage stress and increase coping skills.

With these tips in mind, students can learn to enjoy the holiday season while also managing stress and maintaining their mental health.

The final week to buy a show, Iowa City businesses are preparing to close their doors as time runs out for last-minute shoppers and gift-givers looking for a place to study and eat.

"Basically, the students come in and drink all our coffee," said Dale Henry, general manager of Brox-"s Happy Path. 50 Iowa Ave. "Our sales have even come to the evening. Obviously, the trend is not limited to other popular dining spots, like the Hamburger Inn No.2 Inc., where customers are asked to share tables, and eat.

"We open (at 5 a.m.), there are about five or six people in.

"It's not surprising to us," she said. "We usually have quite a few customers in the morning hours. It's very sparsely.

Lobbyists exhibit fruitful gift-giving skills

In a climate where gift-giving is under scrutiny, lobbyists find creative ways to keep the channels of influence open. With the arrival of the holiday season, gift-giving becomes a significant part of the traditional lobbying efforts. This year, however, legislators and lobbyists are bracing for changes in gift-giving regulations.

This week, Iowa Sen. Jim Drinkard started the process by introducing bills that would ban most gift giving by lobbyists. He is one of many lawmakers who are trying to enact lobbying and gift legislation. According to the Associated Press, "It's not the first time for gift-giving season on Capitol Hill. It's going to be a busy lobbying and gift legislation this year that could ban most gift giving by lobbyists."

Sen. Drinkard's legislation is one of the many proposed this year to reform lobbying and gift laws. "It's getting harder to find English mistletoe," said Nick Chapman, an attorney in the country's largest market for the evergreen, mistletoe. A recent news article observed, "The French are sending as much mistletoe to their relatives that they're driving the price back down."

In the meantime, the practice of giving Christmas gifts is still prevalent, although legislators and lobbyists are adapting to the new regulations. The Teamster's Union, which has given out wool blankets as gifts, is giving $250 gift cards to members of Congress for Christmas, according to a spokesman. "The teamsters have always been good to our lawmakers," he said. "We want to show our appreciation for their hard work."

Knocks waiver veteran Rivers

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks' strugging situation got worse Thursday when the team waived 12-year veteran Doc Rivers.

Rivers, 33, had played substantial parts of the last seven games while Greg Anthony sat on the bench as questions swirled about what New York's point guard would be.

It turned out to be Rivers, a starter the last 12 games, who was the lone player brought to the Nets.

New York, which had a day off Wednesday, said it would not comment on its decision.

The team is expected to waive another player, which would bring the roster down to the league minimum of 12.

Actualized Nov. 29, Rivers went scoreless in his final 13 games.

He finished in a sand trap on the third hole for a triple bogey, but his lead was never in jeopardy.

Player, 49, who has won more majors than any other golfer, is now leading by one stroke in the field of 60 golfers.

Player was able to make four birdies on the front nine, but he also bogeyed the first hole and parred the second on his way to a one-over total of 73.

Carter eyes league record for catches

By BRISTOW BEASLY
Associated Press

NEW YORK — For a change, Jack McDowell got the easy part.

The Chicago White Sox pitcher was the easy part. The negotiations that will determine whether he remains in Chicago are likely to be anything but.

After a rough stretch, McDowell has gone 11-17 since Jan. 1 with a 5.93 earned run average. But in his last 11 games, he is 7-5 with a 2.48 ERA.

"It's a tough business," McDowell said.

So he is not surprised that the White Sox have not made a contract offer. He is not surprised that the Sox are shopping for other pitchers.

"I've seen it before," McDowell said.

"They got me two years ago," he added.

Another risk is how he would fit on a new team.

A battle of two young defenses will take place Sunday when the Steelers host the Browns. The Steelers defense is averaging 10 points per game, while the Browns offense is averaging 28 points per game.

The Steelers defense is led by linebacker James Farrior, who has 12 sacks this season. The Browns offense is led by quarterback Josh McCown, who has 16 touchdowns and 12 interceptions this season.

This game will be a good test for both teams, as they are looking to prove their worth in the division.

The game will be played at Heinz Field in Pittsburgh. Kickoff is scheduled for 1:00 PM EST.

Bills' quarterback Jim Kelly will miss Buffalo's game with New England Sunday. The Bills are favored by one point.
