Snowstorm bombards I.C.

Tim Howe
The Daily Iowan

Winter weather returned with a vengeance Thursday as high winds and heavy snowfall transformed an unseasonably mild January into an icy wonderland.

The snow was expected to taper off Thursday evening and end today. As much as 10 inches of snow fell in the area while north winds of 15 to 25 mph caused considerable drifting.

"This morning we were telling people not even to make the trip," said Iowa highway patrol Sgt. Bill Hampton. "There were many accidents today and there will be on any day with this kind of weather."

Although no weather-related accident figures were available, Hampton said Interstate 80 near Iowa City was closed for a brief period Thursday morning because of poor driving conditions. He said people were encouraged to drive with caution until snowplows finished clearing streets.

"We plow bus routes and major arteries first," said Bud Stockman, superintendent of streets. "The (snowplow) drivers have been out since 5:30 this morning, and we will run a team up to 16 hours."

The winter storm slowed down the Campus system to the disappointment of several passengers.

UI freshman Megan Knapp waited over 15 minutes in the snow and wind to catch the Pentacrest bus for a 9:30 a.m. class. She ended up skipping the class.

"I was mad I waited for so long because I got ready for nothing," she said. "The snow ruined my hair. I was cold. I was tired."

Residents waiting outside the residence halls were no happier than Knapp.

Lawyers in Simpson trial debate instructions for jury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The two sides in the O.J. Simpson murder trial disagree over whether the jurors should be told from the start that they must feel a "moral certainty" in order to convict Simpson.

The lawyers met privately with Superior Court Judge Lance Ito Thursday to debate the instructions that will be given to the jurors before they hear opening statements, and court papers outlined the point of contention.

It was among the last pieces of unfinished business before opening statements begin on Monday.

The discussions were adjourned after two hours without a resolution.

Normally, instructions are not given to the jury until testimony is over and deliberations are about to begin.

However, Ito decided to give instructions right away to offer the jurors some guidance during the months before they hear the case.

Report cites Delta Air in rights infraction

ATLANTA (AP) — Delta Air Lines violated the Civil Rights Act by intimidating, demoting and firing women flight attendants because of their weight, a federal commission found.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission agreed with 61 flight attendants who claimed they were unfairly punished for exceeding weight limits, which were based on height.

Some of the women were fired for exceeding the limit and others were grounded. Delta dropped the policy in April.

"The pattern of evidence ... overwhelmingly demonstrates that (Delta) implemented discriminatory policies or practices which adversely affected females as a class," Chris Roggerson, commission district director, said in one of the letters.

While Delta had weight requirements for men and women flight attendants, those for women were more limiting, he said.

Shelters frown on using pets as gifts

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

Giving a dog or a cat as a gift may seem fun, personal or romantic, but many animals given as gifts wind up in shelters or unhappy homes.

Since the year began, 16 animals have been taken to the Coralville-Iowa City Animal Shelter, 111 Kirkwood Ave. Most of the animals were Christmas gifts which came with too much responsibility for their owners, said Lisa Goodman, shelter supervisor.

"Between the week of Jan. 5 and Jan. 12, we were inundated with animals given as gifts," she said.

The problem with giving a present of dogs, cats or other animals is that the recipient is either not prepared to care for the animal or doesn't want one in the first place, Goodman said.

"It's a tremendous responsibility that people are not willing to take," she said. "If someone says, 'That puppy's real cute,' it doesn't mean they want one right then."

Workers at the shelter feel so strongly about not giving animals as gifts that they don't allow the adoption of animals for the purpose of giving them as gifts, Goodman said.

"We recommend that people give the person a gift certificate or card which says, 'I want to do this for you if you're ready, and I'm willing to pay all the costs.' Then the person can make the decision if they want one or not and get it themselves," she said.

The Humane Society has an adoption-screening process for people wanting to adopt dogs and cats to secure the animals' welfare, said Janet Ashman, president of the Iowa City Humane Society.

"We first do a screening on the phone to establish if the person is living in a place where they can have animals," she said. "We then establish lifestyle, time and level of commitment. We're looking for people to give the animals a lifetime of commitment, which for dogs and cats can be up to 20

Exile bars potential Simpson jurors

Patricia Harris

The decision to sequester the jury in the O.J. Simpson case may have resulted in a jury which is not representative of the Los Angeles community, according to local legal experts.

Sequestration results in a jury that does not accurately represent a community because not everyone can afford the time and money necessary to be away from their jobs and families, said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

"You can't sample the community and then tell them that their life is going to be put on hold for a month," he said.

Jurors in the Simpson case do not have to pay for their hotel stays, and some employers will (but are not required to) pay compensation for lost work. Los Angeles County jurors are paid $5 per day plus 15 cents per mile (one See SIMPSON, Page 10A)

FEW MEDICAL SCHOOLS PROVIDE TRAINING

Groups advocate abortion proficiency

Michael Landweber

WASHINGTON — Abortion training should be required for medical students specializing in obstetrics and gynecology, groups favoring abortion rights said Thursday, asserting that "reproductive health care is a basic health care."

"We physicians are working hard to see that safe abortion services remain accessible to the women we serve," said David Grimes, chairman of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists' Task Force on Violence.

His organization is urging the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education to make abortion training mandatory "for resident physicians in our area," he said.

He added that medical students with a moral or religious objection to abortion would not be forced to participate in training.

"Our ultimate goal is to encourage medical students to become abortion providers and to support their colleagues who do."

Medical Students for Choice

Among the other groups pushing for the curriculum change are the Feminist Majority Foundation, the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy, the National Abortion Federation and Planned Parenthood.

At a press conference, the groups introduced a new organization called Medical Students for Choice to help lobby for the change and encourage other students to become abortion providers. Abortion training is now required by 12 See ABORTION, Page 10A

Video store manager faces cameras on weekends

Forty hours a week, Jeff Engle is surrounded by movies and three weekends a month he stars in them.

Jeff Engle, 21, is second in command at one of Coralville's greatest entertainment centers, where film buffs or bored folks

He has been working at Movies To Go for the past year and a half and has labored his way to the position of assistant manager.

"It's a suspense film," Engle said. "The Japanese hire the American Mafia to steal the chip. Basically, I get shot at a lot."

His weekends start at 5 a.m. Saturday when the film crew begins shooting, and he works on the set until 5 p.m. Engle said the same routine is followed on Sunday.

"That constitutes my two days off," Engle joked.

On a typical day at the video store, one would find him dressed in his assistant manager's uniform: pants, shirt, bright tie and earrings.

He starts his day at 10, making lists of things that need to be done, like ordering more movies and Milk Duds. He said he spends a lot of time on the phone executing administrative duties.

"It usually involves a lot of schmoozing and other stuff I don't like to do," Engle said.

Apparently, the office perks make up for any amount of schmoozing Engle might have to do because he said this is the longest job he's ever held.

"I love being in the entertainment industry," Engle said. "And I get to bring home free movies."

During a good week with ample free time, Engle said he will bring home 15 movies to pop in his videocassette recorder and said he still finds time to go to the theater.

Engle's passion and excitement for the movie industry does not stop him from experiencing mixed feelings about the incredible growth of video sales.

"America is definitely getting lazy," Engle said. "They're getting very comfortable sitting on their couches."

New Year's Eve was the busiest night of the year for Movies To Go. Although the night is traditionally wild and social, Engle said the video store made most of its money from customers spending the holiday in front of their television sets.

But he said he takes pleasure in the growth of the store and benefits from the profit it makes.

"We got 96 copies of 'The Mask' in yesterday," Engle said. "That

However, the capitalization of film will not deter Engle from trying to make it in the business.

"I can't wait to meet some of the people I see on film," Engle said. "My job gives me the perfect opportunity to check out my competition."

And what could possibly be the all-time favorite movie of a tired and true film connoisseur?

"Weird Science," he said. "I guess I haven't grown up that much."

VH1 hawks Tom Petty concert tickets via live TV

NEW YORK (AP) — The multimedia age is upon us: Tickets to Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers' tour will be sold on live TV before they become available at the usual outlets.

The tickets will be sold to VH1 viewers calling an 800 number, starting Friday. Moon Zappa will be among those answering the phone.

"This event will mark the first time in history that tickets for a music event are sold via live television before going to the public anywhere," VH1's Renee Koblenz said.

Telephone company offers free anti-Gingrich calls to Congress

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Left-ringers with a gripe about Newt Gingrich are getting 10 free phone minutes to complain to Congress.

The first 10,000 people who dialed (800) NIX-NEWT by Thursday evening were to get a "Stop Newt" calling card with the House speaker's picture.

The card entitles the holder to 10 minutes of calls to Congress to protest Gingrich's "Contract with America."

Working Assets Long Distance, a phone company based in San Francisco, made the offer. In a full-page ad in The New York Times, Working Assets said Gingrich wants to cut school lunches, food stamps and other basic aid for 5 million children.

Working Assets is already giving its 200,000 customers 10 minutes of free anti-Gingrich calls daily through April 30.

Working Assets donates 1 percent of its revenue to groups supporting the environment, human rights, peace and economic justice.

Garth Brooks call-in promo ties up phone lines for 2 hours

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Fans trying to talk with Garth Brooks overloaded telephone lines in two Dallas-Fort Worth suburbs for two hours.

Callers in Grapevine and part of Irving weren't able to get a dial tone Wednesday during a call-in promotion for Brooks' TV special later that night.

"It's pretty darn irresponsible to take a system and allow it to be abused like that when somebody's life could be in danger," City Manager Trent Petty said.

Grapevine's top cop took it in stride.

"What can I do about it? I guess I could go out there and arrest Garth Brooks," Police Chief Tom Martin said.

UI senior communications major Julie Berkland and 8-year-old Curtis Rains of Iowa City were paired together as part of the Group Activity Program, a division of the Iowa City Big Brothers / Big Sisters.

UI students pair up with kids

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

UI students aren't usually found playing on swing sets, finger-painting and playing Candyland, but one local program is out to show them how to be kids again.

For five years, the Group Activity Program, a division of Iowa City Big Brothers / Big Sisters, 3149 Old Highway 218 South, has been teaming UI students with local children to provide after-school activities for the kids.

Program coordinator Angie Kenna said the program has proven beneficial to both volunteers and children.

"When you're a college student, you have all of this pressure on you to achieve and to spend two hours with a kid is a definite benefit," she said. "I think volunteers can be very good role models because they're another adult in (the child's) life who takes interest in them."

Kenna said the program was created with college students in mind.

"It started in the early '80s because there were potential volunteers from the university who called about being big brothers and big sisters but found out they would have to make a one-year commitment," she said.

Children on waiting lists for big brothers and big sisters also benefit from the program, she said.

"It takes a while for a child to be matched with a big brother or big sister, so this is a way to bridge that time to have an activity for a child to be involved in while waiting," Kenna said.

UI senior Julie Berkland participated in the program during the fall semester after several of her sorority sisters who had participated encouraged her to join.

Part of the structure of the program is to provide large-group activities with 10 children and their college student partners every other week and individual activities on alternate weeks.

"Every other week we'd meet with the larger group and do crafts; we went outside and played football and frisbee," Berkland said. "On alternate weekends, it would be Curtis (Rains, Berkland's partner) and I, and we usually paired up with other people in the group."

Berkland and several friends often teamed up with one another to go on fishing trips, carve pumpkins for Halloween and tour the fire station with their partners.

"I haven't been around kids (Curtis' age) for so long," she said. "It was fun — very fun."

Berkland's partner, 8-year-old Curtis, has been involved in the program for two years.

"I like that I get to learn new games, and I get to meet new people and make new friends," he said.

The second-grader said the opportunity to meet new people has been the greatest reward of the program.

"Once I didn't have very many friends, but now I have a lot of friends because I've been going to GAP," he said.

Curtis' mother also benefits from his and his older brother's participation in the program, he said.

"She's just glad that we get out of the house, so she can have some peace and quiet," Curtis said.

His mother, Kathy, entered her sons in the program to give them fun activities after school.

"They needed a little extra activity," she said. "I'm a single parent, and so they needed something to do after school to keep them occupied. This is a very, very good program to do that with."

Woman hit by Cambus may sue

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Cambus could face a lawsuit from an Iowa City resident who was struck by one of its buses while crossing the street during the winter break.

Pamela Lindley-Smith, 44, is threatening to sue Cambus through the state of Iowa after being hit by a bus driven by Jeanne Bosecker, 22, a UI senior.

According to a UI Public Safety report, at 6:13 p.m. Jan. 10, Lindley-Smith was traversing the crosswalk at the intersection of Hawkins and Stadium drives. The "Walk" sign was flashing.

Bosecker stopped the bus for the red light and, when she did not see any pedestrians, proceeded to make a right turn. Lindley-Smith was hit by the bus and reportedly fell but was not rendered unconscious.

Bosecker was charged by Public Safety with failure to yield to a pedestrian.

Lindley-Smith was transported by ambulance to the UI Hospitals and Clinics where she was treated for back pain and released, the report said.

Attorney Nester Lobodiak of the Tom Riley Law Firm, 1210 Highway 6 West, said Lindley-Smith plans to file a lawsuit. He added there is a possibility the situation might be settled prior to a complaint being filed. Lindley-Smith is still being treated for back pain suffered in the accident, he said. He did not cite the amount Lindley-Smith seeks in damages.

Lobodiak said the state of Iowa would be named defendant in the suit.

"I anticipate a suit will be filed to the (Iowa) appeals board," he said. The appeals board process may take up to six months, he explained.

"The state of Iowa is responsible for Cambus," Lobodiak said. "It is the owner and, essentially, the operator."

Cambus suffered several accidents in 1994 with damages totaling more than $45,000. This incident marked its first accident this year.

Brian McClatchey, Cambus coordinator, said Bosecker has worked at Cambus for two years and holds the positions of dispatcher and driver. She has not been fired by Cambus, he said.

McClatchey said the procedure for investigating accidents starts "from the ground up." It includes examining a driver's record, traffic conditions, vehicle problems and circumstances and whether there was negligence involved.

He said he believes Bosecker was not negligent, citing poor visibility due to darkness and placement of the crosswalk on a curb. He added that weather conditions were "sloppy."

"We didn't feel she was driving inappropriately or in a manner that compromised safety," McClatchey said. "She made an error — a very significant error — but she was driving in a difficult area."

He said all Cambus drivers involved in accidents are subject to investigation and sometimes retraining is suggested. He said Bosecker would not be reprimanded.

STUDENTS CITE TUITION COSTS

Junior colleges become hot prospect

Paul Michas
The Daily Iowan

The idea of attending the same college for four consecutive years is losing popularity as more and more students are considering the possibility of attending a community college first.

The popular view that only those refused admission to four-year universities attend community colleges is also fading. Community college students are transferring to four-year institutions more often and excel on par with the other students, said Tom Sabotta, director of research at Kirkwood Community College in Cedar Rapids.

Applications to the UI Admissions office from students wishing to transfer from a community college have increased recently, according to Pat Wynn, assistant director of Admissions in charge of transfer relations.

Sabotta said he finds that students who transfer to the UI fit right in with average GPA and ACT scores that are only slightly lower than those of the average UI student.

"They have the experience of having some courses under their belt," he said. "It seems that people who would appear pretty marginal have gotten to the point where they can be reasonably successful."

A study published recently in the Journal of Higher Education found that students who attended a community college for two years and then transferred to a four-year university had the same job status and income as students who attended only a four-year university.

A major reason why many students are attending community colleges before transferring to the UI is because tuition at community colleges is considerably cheaper than at the UI.

Average tuition for a full-time student at the UI is about $2,290 for an in-state resident and $8,150 for an out-of-state resident. The average tuition at Kirkwood for a full-time in-state student is $1,530 and $3,060 for out-of-state students.

With tuition increases every year for the last 11 years, students are trying to find an alternate route — the community college — to get a degree without accruing tens of thousands of dollars in debt.

"It's a cheaper way to get general classes out of the way," said UI freshman Tina Espinosa, who transferred from Harper Community College in Palatine, Ill.

She said attending a community college for a year helped her.

"A lot more people are doing it now," she said. "When I was there, I worked full time. I matured a lot. I visited other schools and found out what college life is about."

Some students prefer to attend community colleges because they feel the smaller schools offer a more personable environment where students get more attention from instructors.

"The classrooms are smaller and there's a smaller student-to-teacher ratio," said Jennifer Severns, a student at Kirkwood.

In actuality, that perception may not be true. The current student-to-teacher ratio at Kirkwood is 22.5 to 1. In the UI's College of Liberal Arts the figure is 22 to 1.

Severns said she does not believe her marketability in the job force will be considerably lower because she is attending a community college.

"I don't necessarily believe you get more money with a four-year degree," she said.

SERVICE ORIENTS STUDENTS TO UNIVERSITY

UI program allays newcomers' fears

Paul Michas
The Daily Iowan

The UI Special Support Services office helps those who come from a culture or background that sets them apart from the majority of students on campus.

Students who belong to a minority group, have transferred from another university or are the first in their family to go to college are eligible for the service.

Special Support Services helps students adapt to their new environment by giving advice on various UI programs and policies while helping them cope with the challenges of college.

Esther Materon-Arum, coordinator of Academic Affairs for Special Support Services, said the service offers advice on every aspect of the UI from choosing a class schedule to finding students who share similar interests.

"We are a support unit where all the help at the university is centralized," Materon-Arum said.

Ken Cocio, a freshman who participates in Special Support Services, said the program has helped him in many ways. He has been able to meet students who share similar interests and problems.

"I couldn't have gotten through this past semester without them," he said.

The service introduced Cocio to others who enjoy the same sports and social activities as he does and informed him about the UI's financial aid program and how to approach student life.

Students are invited to join Special Support Services based on their admissions application. If the optional portion of the application describing race and background matches the requirements of being eligible for the service, students are sent a letter inviting them to join.

After students take this first step, they are given information about the different ways in which they can use the service to help them through their first month of college or throughout their college careers.

There is a peer assistants program which matches new students with a UI student employed by Special Support Services, who helps introduce them to the UI.

"Sometimes you want to talk to a peer rather than an adult because it's less intimidating," said Demetrius Hughes, a peer assistant who works at Special Support Services.

Hughes' responsibilities include keeping office hours every week where a student can come in and talk, calling the students he is responsible for at least twice a month and keeping a journal on the students' problems and solutions.

"I give advice on understanding the financial aid system, how to approach professors and what to do for fun," Hughes said.

Politics

GOP opposes anti-crime statute

Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans attacked crime prevention programs in the 1994 anti-crime law and touted their new bill Thursday, saying it would deter more violent crime by building additional prisons.

But Attorney General Janet Reno said she'll fight to preserve funding created by the law for 100,000 new local police officers. Reno also expressed concern that the Republican plan to fold police and prevention programs into block grants could lead to waste.

"I want 100,000 police officers on the streets of America because ... it's making a difference" in areas that already have received grants for them, Reno said at her weekly news conference.

"When somebody proposes a block grant ... I'm not sure where the money's going to go," she said. "Are all the cities going to get it? Is it going for police officers or is it going for ... some fancy piece of equipment that's going to sit on the shelf?"

As part of their legislative blueprint called the "Contract With America," the Republicans are seeking to kill many of the crime prevention provisions, letting communities decide whether to hire police or spend the money in other ways.

Democratic lawmakers want President Clinton to threaten to veto any new crime bill that eliminates or substantially cuts the crime prevention money.

The House Judiciary Committee's crime panel opened hearings Thursday on the GOP bill that would spend more on prison construction but provide it only to states that jail violent criminals for at least 85 percent of their sentences.

The legislation "gets the federal government out of the way of state and local law enforcement" in fighting crime, said Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., the subcommittee's chairman.

Rep. Charles Schumer of New York, the panel's senior Democrat and a leader of last year's crime bill effort, said the Republican bill "is full of old worn-out ideas and so stuffed with political fat that it ought to be called 'Jurassic Pork.'"

"The crime bill we passed guarantees 100,000 new police officers on our streets; this crime bill guarantees pork barrel spending by cash-starved mayors," Schumer said.

Associate Attorney General John Schmidt testified that in some respects, the Republican bill "does strive to move forward and build upon" the 1994 anti-crime law by dealing with such issues as stronger federal death penalty procedures, increased penalties for firearms offenses, restitution by criminals to their victims and streamlined procedures for deporting criminal aliens.

However, Schmidt said, "It would be a terrible mistake to repeal a program that puts 100,000 new police officers into our communities ... and replace it with a plan to pass out $10 billion of taxpayer money in a way that does not guarantee even one new officer on the beat."

An array of witnesses appeared at Thursday's hearing, including state and local law enforcement officials, mayors, police officers and sheriffs, prisoners' rights advocates and academics.

HOUSE IS UP IN ARMS

Gingrich receives more flak

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attacking his attackers, Newt Gingrich accused Democrats Thursday of seeking his "personal destruction." A Republican ally warned that the assault on the House speaker's book contract could jeopardize passage of President Clinton's bill to rescue Mexico's economy.

"In this setting, comity on controversial legislation is difficult to obtain," House Banking Committee Chairman Jim Leach, R-Iowa, wrote the White House in a politely worded note that injected domestic political controversy into the world of international finance.

If anything, Democrats sharpened their criticism of the man whose political acumen helped engineer last fall's Republican Party election sweep. "It makes every member of the House look like a money grubber," Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin said of Gingrich's book contract, which initially would have paid him a $4.5 million advance.

Ironically, the developments came on a day when Gingrich and Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri met to discuss appointment of members to the House ethics committee. The panel could investigate allegations that improper tax-deductible contributions were made to finance a college course taught by Gingrich and question his book deal with a company owned by media magnate Rupert Murdoch.

After meeting for an hour, neither Gephardt nor Gingrich would comment. Appointment of the panel has been an awkward affair. As speaker, Gingrich has the power to name the panel's GOP members, who might then have to turn around and investigate him.

Tensions boiled over on the House floor Wednesday, when Democrats attacked the book contract and Republicans sprang to Gingrich's defense. On a party line vote, the GOP struck from the Congressional Record comments made by Rep. Carrie Meek, D-Fla.

Leach's note to White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta, dated Wednesday and obtained from congressional sources, touched directly on the controversy.

With the proposed Mexican bailout legislation buffeted by criticism, Leach wrote, "The atmosphere ics have gone from bad to worse. ... In the wake of White House attacks on the speaker this weekend, House Democrats launched an ad hominem criticisms of the speaker today."

Leach added, "Nevertheless, there is still some prospect of early consideration of the bill, which at the moment reflects extraordinary accommodation with the administration."

Gingrich has strongly proclaimed his innocence of any wrongdoing and moved earlier to defuse the book controversy by renouncing a $4.5 million advance he had won from HarperCollins, the publishing house owned by Murdoch.

LIST LAUDS PRESIDENT'S WINS

President revamps press policy

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House began a public relations drive Thursday to revive Bill Clinton's beleaguered presidency, asserting he has fulfilled most of his campaign promises halfway through his term even if voters don't give him credit.

The administration distributed a 37-page packet claiming what Chief of Staff Leon Panetta called "an unrivaled record of accomplishment with substantial benefits for millions of American families."

At the top of the list were a string of economic achievements: the creation of 5.6 million new jobs, the lowest unemployment rate in four years and passage of a $700 billion deficit reduction plan.

The document acknowledged no failures, even on health reform — Clinton's signature proposal which was shelved by Congress last year. Its status was listed as "proposed." The middle-class tax cut that Clinton delayed proposing for two years was listed as "pending."

Clinton himself staged a ceremony in the Roosevelt Room to call attention to a little-noticed bill he signed in early December to keep chronic pension underfunding from developing into another savings and loan debacle.

"We used the power of government to avert a potential crisis, protecting millions of retirees, corporate pension plans and the taxpayers from huge potential losses," the president said.

Making his debut in the briefing room, Clinton's new press secretary, Mike McCurry, said many Americans aren't aware of the administration's record, in part because the White House has done a poor communications job and hasn't been focused.

"We've had so many exciting things to talk about in the first two years that sometimes you ... maybe get lost in the forest when you're trying to talk about all the individual trees," he said. He promised to do better.

The White House said that of 58

major policies listed in Clinton's campaign manifesto, "Putting People First," some action had been taken on 98 percent. There has been substantial or partial accomplishment on 78 percent of the pledges, it said.

Today marks the second anniversary of Clinton's inauguration, and the political climate has changed dramatically since power in Congress has shifted from Democratic to Republican hands.

Republicans are closely watching Clinton's rehabilitation effort and they give him credit for proving his resiliency in the past. But Republican National Chairman Haley Barbour said Thursday that voters last year "rejected Bill Clinton's policies" in favor of the GOP's agenda of lower taxes, smaller government and less spending.

In an interview earlier this week, Barbour said it was astonishing to see "how much the initiative has shifted from the White House to the new Republican Congress. It used to be that the president proposes and the Congress disposes, but that isn't the case right now."

Fighting to get back in the game, Clinton will go before Congress — and the nation — next Tuesday night with his annual State of the Union address.

Frustrated Cowboys fan fires on 49ers followers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A stranger approached a group of men and asked them if they were fans of the hometown team. When they said yes, he opened fire, killing one and seriously wounding another.

Police assume the gunman in Monday night's shooting was a fan of the Dallas Cowboys, defeated Sunday in the playoff that sent the San Francisco 49ers to the Super Bowl, homicide inspector Napoleon Hendrix said Wednesday.

The assailant walked up to the group of men standing on the street and asked if they were for the 49ers, Hendrix said. They yelled "Yeah!" and he made an obscene remark and then began shooting.

A 21-year-old man was shot in the head and killed. A 29-year-old man remained in serious condition Thursday with three gunshot wounds.

The dead man's friends gathered at the same spot the night after the killing for a beer-drinking memorial, Hendrix said.

Norwegians may lift ban on Easter revelry

OSLO, Norway (AP) — For the first time in 260 years, Norwegians may soon be able to dance during Easter without having to ask for police permission.

The government on Thursday proposed lifting the ban, a move backed by Parliament and the Lutheran Church of Norway.

The 1735 church decree, made law in 1965, barred dancing, concerts, entertainment, sports events or "excessive festivities" during Good Friday and Easter Sunday.

Only local police were able to grant exemptions.

Thom Rafter, of the Norwegian Ministry of Churches and Education said the ban will be lifted "very soon." But that doesn't mean Norwegians can cut completely loose.

The new law will still require calm at certain times, such as between 6 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Easter. And noisy activities such as mowing the lawn or sawing logs still wouldn't be allowed on religious holidays.

TRIBUTE MARKS POE'S BIRTHDAY

Admirer keeps up tradition of gothic gifts for writer's grave

Shawn Donnan
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Like a stealthy raven out of a misty night, a mysterious stranger wearing a dark coat and fedora swooped down on the grave of Edgar Allan Poe Thursday morning to once again mark the poet's birthday.

Four hours after a midnight dreary, the stranger deposited a half-empty bottle of French cognac and three white roses on Poe's headstone.

"It's just so Poe-esque," said onlooker Chris Densham, a 30-year-old Poe devotee from Toronto. "It's something he would have written. It's a perfect tribute to this man."

Since 1949, a stranger has marked Poe's birth on Jan. 19, 1809 with a half-bottle of Martell cognac and roses.

The wily visitor has remained anonymous even though crowds have sometimes gathered to wait for him. True Poe fans refuse to

The three roses are thought to represent the poet, his wife and her mother — all of whom are buried in the tiny brick-walled Westminster Hall cemetery downtown.

The significance of the cognac is unknown. Although Poe was known for bouts of hard drinking, no one knows if he favored cognac.

The author of macabre tales such as "The Raven" and "The Fall of the House of Usher" died in 1849 after he was found deliriously wandering the city's streets.

The bespectacled younger man who left the tribute Thursday morning appears to be replacing an older man who carried out the

The stranger tipped his hat to the dozen people who waited all night with Jerome in the church adjacent to the cemetery.

"I've seen this tribute for many years and it never loses its magic," Jerome said.

Dead man's sperm grants hope

Beth J. Harpaz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A woman whose husband of 2½ years died in a scuffle with police had sperm extracted from the corpse in hopes of having the children they had dreamed of.

Maribel Baez, 29, made the request while the body of her husband, Anthony, lay in the morgue during an autopsy.

"It was seeing my brother on the table that hurt so much," Anthony Baez's sister, Elizabeth, said Thursday. "That's when Maribel said, 'I want his baby. I want it now. I'm not going to let him go.'"

Anthony Baez, a part-time security guard from Orlando, Fla., died Dec. 22 during a visit with relatives in New York City. Like his wife, he taught Bible school in Orlando.

The 29-year-old man was arrested for disorderly conduct after a football he and his two brothers were tossing, in a street of his native Bronx, hit two police cars in the middle of the night.

Susan Karten, a lawyer for the family, said an officer restrained Anthony Baez with a chokehold banned by the Police Department in 1993.

The medical examiner said the cause of death was asphyxiation "due to compression of the neck and chest" and asthma and classified it as a medical homicide, a ruling that fixes no blame. The death is under investigation by the district attorney.

Sperm extraction from a corpse, performed in the Baez case by urologist Dr. Peter Schlegel, has been done before.

Last summer in Titusville, Fla., Dr. Mark Jutras extracted sperm from the body of 22-year-old Emanuele Maresca, who was killed in a car accident, at his widow's request.

Thirteen hours after Anthony Baez's death, Schlegel inserted a needle into the vas deferens, the tube that carries sperm out of the testes, and retrieved a sample that had tens of millions of live sperm. Viable sperm can be retrieved up to 24 hours after death, Schlegel said.

"Basically I just did this in the same way I would do it for any man who is alive," Schlegel said of the procedure normally used on men with infertility problems.

Anthony Baez's sperm was stored in plastic vials, driven to a Manhattan laboratory and frozen in nitrogen. In that form, it can last 20 years.

Russians capture palace in Chechnya

Candice Hughes
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — Russian troops drove Chechen fighters from the presidential palace Thursday and hoisted Russia's flag over what remained of the rebels' stronghold and symbol of their defiance.

While the victory in Chechnya's capital was a rare boost for Russian morale in the 5-week-old war, rebel fighters said it only signals a new guerrilla phase of their campaign to win independence from Moscow.

They abandoned the charred, smoking skeleton of the palace and also pulled back from the train station, another base of their resistance in the center of Grozny.

Until now, the war had been almost entirely centered on the palace. Now Chechens deny the palace had much military significance and promise to defend their capital inch by inch.

"Our new headquarters is set up and the fighters are in their positions," Chechen Defense Minister Aslan Maskhaev said at a news conference in Nazran, capital of neighboring Ingushetia.

"We're ready to continue our fight for freedom."

The Russians said the loss of the palace signaled the end for the separatists.

"I would like to inform everyone that the military phase of restoring the Russian constitution in Chechnya is now practically over," President Boris Yeltsin said in a statement.

"The subsequent mission to restore law, order and civil rights will lie with the Interior Ministry," the president said.

If the Chechens carry out their vow to defend Grozny, Russian commanders will face a tough choice.

Associated Press

They can oust the rebels from the rest of Grozny the way they ousted them from the palace — by destroying from a distance with their immense firepower — or they can try to nudge their so-far reluctant ground forces into taking on the Chechens in house-to-house fighting.

If Grozny falls, the Chechens have vowed to take to the surrounding countryside and mountains to defend their home villages.

"Even if they occupy all of Chechnya, even if they destroy all our villages, we'll never give up," said Chechen nurse Zina Labazanova.

Many analysts, however, say it would be difficult for the Chechens to wage a successful guerrilla campaign against the Russian army, much less force its retreat from Chechnya.

Even Maskhaev, the Chechen commander, said, "I know Russia has a great army. We don't want to say we will defeat it."

The Kremlin sent tens of thousands of troops into Chechnya on Dec. 11 in a bid to end its 3-year-old drive for independence. The Chechens are believed to have just several hundred fighters in Grozny and a few thousand nationwide.

An initial failed Russian ground assault on the palace on New Year's Eve was costly both in lives and prestige for the army. Russian dead and burned-out tanks still litter the city, and green young recruits surrender to the Chechens on an almost daily basis.

Quake death tally continues to climb

P.H. Ferguson
Associated Press

KOBE, Japan — Swiss rescue dogs led search teams to more entombed bodies Thursday as the earthquake death toll swelled past 4,000, and the bark of a pet dog led to one woman's rescue after more than two icy days in the wreckage.

New fires burst out around the shattered city and firefighters' efforts to douse them were stymied by crushed water mains. With government relief efforts falling far short of victims' needs, thousands more gave up hope of finding food and shelter and joined the stream of residents abandoning the city on foot.

By early today, confirmed deaths totaled 4,047, making Tuesday's 7.2-magnitude earthquake the worst in Japan in more than 70 years.

Another 727 people are still unaccounted for, and freezing temperatures have made relatives more desperate about finding missing friends or family members alive. But several rescues on Thursday revived hopes.

In one Kobe neighborhood, a barking pet dog led rescuers to his owner, 65-year-old Chiyoko Amakawa, who had been buried for 53 hours, Kyodo News Service reported. Doctors said she was badly bruised but suffered no broken bones.

"It was pitch dark and my leg hurt so much and I was thirsty, but I called to Pochi and told him I was in pain and needed help," Amakawa told Kyodo. "I just wondered over and over when I was going to die."

Japanese Emperor Akihito

Others rescued alive in Kobe included a 9-year-old boy and a 94-year-old man.

More than 21,600 people were injured, and more than 30,400 homes and buildings were damaged or destroyed in and around Kobe, a once vibrant port of 1.4 million people.

Six U.S. Air Force C-130 transport planes flew supplies to nearby Osaka, including 15,000 blankets for survivors huddled in emergency shelters. More flights are planned today.

Switzerland dispatched a team of rescuers with trained dogs, which discovered four dead bodies by Thursday night.

The death toll surpassed the official tally of 3,769 in a 1948 quake in Fukui, but still paled in comparison with a 1923 quake that killed more than 100,000 in and around Tokyo.

The U.S. Embassy in Tokyo said two Americans died in Kobe's quake, a woman English teacher whose name wasn't released and another teacher — Voni Lynn Wong, 24, of Los Angeles.

Temporary shelters were jammed with 270,000 people, many of whom had fled homes they feared may yet collapse. More than 800 aftershocks have rattled the Kobe-Osaka region.

Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama visited the area 280 miles southwest of Tokyo and described the devastation as "much worse than I had expected ... a disaster that nobody could even imagine."

Emperor Akihito, in his first public statement since the quake, expressed condolences "from the bottom of my heart" and said he was praying "for the earliest recovery" of the injured.

"I truly hope everyone can overcome this unfortunate period through strong solidarity and cooperation and that our wisdom will be brought to bear to make our country stronger and safer against disasters," he said.

Criticism is growing that Japanese authorities were unprepared for the disaster. After a period of indecision, the government agreed Thursday to accept international aid.

It was unclear whether the criticism would translate into political trouble for Murayama. The enormous damage and casualty toll, for the moment, muted political attacks on his coalition government.

Rivals in Murayama's Socialist Party had planned to quit the party on Tuesday, the day of the quake. But they postponed the plans, fearing that maneuvering would appear unseemly.

SPORADIC VIOLENCE BREAKS OUT

Respite in Bosnia turns to violence

Aida Cerkez
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — More than 400 shells rained down in just four hours Thursday near a northwestern Bosnian town, illustrating that the latest cease-fire has done as little as countless previous truces to stop the fighting.

Trouble was reported along several other fronts. Elsewhere, heavy snow appeared to be doing as much to silence guns as U.N. peacekeepers and foreign mediators.

U.N. spokesman Paul Risley said more than 400 detonations were reported between 8 a.m. and noon near Velika Kladusa in far northwestern Bosnia, a chronic trouble spot, during a truce that went into effect Jan. 1 and was meant to last four months.

It was not clear who was firing. Velika Kladusa is in an area where Croatian Serbs and rebel Muslims are fighting Muslim-led government forces.

The fighting, far heavier than any during the past week, could push the combatants closer to resuming full-scale warfare.

The four-month truce accord is far from fully implemented and already fraying. Bosnian Serbs and Muslim-led government forces have returned to the sporadic fighting and pressure tactics seen throughout the war.

And basic political discord remains. On Thursday, Bosnian Foreign Minister Irfan Ljubijankic reiterated that his side will not re-enter peace talks unless Serbs accept a peace plan they consistently have rejected.

The plan would give 51 percent of Bosnia to Muslims and Croats and 49 percent to the Serbs, who currently hold 70 percent.

Last week, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said he could agree to negotiations on the basis of the plan.

Officials from the five countries that authored the plan, however, failed to persuade him to accept it.

"The Bosnian government is looking for greater signs of movement on the Bosnian Serb side, and that's very legitimate and understandable," said Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, the outgoing U.N. commander in Bosnia.

But the Bosnian Serbs equally "don't trust the other side and think they may try to whip up their military activity while everyone pretends to talk peace," Rose said.

The failure to win peace is now compounded by a threat of renewed war in neighboring Croatia. President Franjo Tudjman last week demanded the departure of U.N. peacekeepers who have kept an uneasy three-year truce between the Croatian army and rebel Serbs holding a third of the country.

U.N. officials also reported scattered shelling and exchanges of gunfire in northeast, northwest and western Bosnia, as well as around the besieged capital, Sarajevo. All such exchanges violate the truce.

Serbs set up a roadblock leading into the government-held enclave of Srebrenica in eastern Bosnia, said a U.N. spokesman, Lt. Col. Gary Coward.

NO ATTEMPT TO REHABILITATE

Jailing drug offenders

How would you like to spend the rest of your life in jail because of a mistake you made when you were 18 or 19 years old? Gary Fannon of Detroit, Mich., introduced an undercover cop to the wrong guy and is now spending his new year as he will spend the rest of his life: locked up without possibility of parole.

Fannon is a victim of the war on drugs. He didn't even have to actually sell any drugs to be put in jail for the rest of his life; he just had to know someone who wanted to sell some.

Mandatory minimum drug-sentencing laws are the judicial holocaust of the last two decades. Strict sentences have done nothing but inflate the U.S. prison population and bring us to a crisis in the overcrowding of prison facilities.

A perfect example of the effects of bloated prisons was the escape of five convicted murderers in Florida earlier this month. The prison was far beyond its capacity, and guards had little time to supervise all inmates. Because of this, inmates were left unsupervised for extended periods of time — apparently enough time to formulate and execute an escape plan that worked to perfection.

Mandatory minimum sentences can be partially to blame for this episode because the majority of recently incarcerated citizens were arrested for drug violations — a large percentage of them first-time nonviolent offenders.

Strict sentencing laws are opposed by all 12 Federal Judicial Conferences and by such groups as the American Bar Association, the United States Sentencing Commission and the Federal Courts Study Committee. Why, then, are there more and more of these laws being enacted (66 federal mandatory sentencing laws at last count)? The answer is politics as usual.

Jonathan Turley, professor of law at George Washington University, explained to the Los Angeles Times, "Politicians are now running the prison system by sound bite."

Catch phrases that sound great on the evening news do not make for fair and equal treatment. They don't even come close to justice and do virtually nothing to stop rising crime rates or drug use. They are a drain on the public and a burden on the taxpayer. Annually, it costs Americans $20 billion to keep people locked up, often because a DEA agent who needed to make his quota lured some poor kid to within 100 yards of a school to buy a bag.

Another reason mandatory minimum sentences are a source of injustice is that they are often based on how much information a suspect can provide to the prosecution. If an informant is willing to roll over on his supplier, he will get a reduced charge and, therefore, a smaller sentence. Someone with no information to sell winds up sitting in jail looking at the sun with no chance to better himself and no chance to atone for his mistake.

A few years ago the United States passed Russia and South Africa with the second-largest number of citizens in prison (we ranked behind China). The New Yorker estimates that 70 percent of those inmates are drug offenders. That means almost 1 million people are in jail because of drug offenses. How can we even attempt to help people if we treat them like animals and put them in a cage, especially at the cost of $20 billion a year?

WHERE THE WORLD IS HEADING

Something to pray about

A lot of talk on Capitol Hill has centered on bringing back voluntary school prayer. Ordinarily, prayer has absolutely no place in any public school, but recent events seem to give us reasons to think twice.

- Joycelyn Elders was fired for supposed lascivious comments about teaching masturbation (did anyone really take her literally?), yet Kathleen Gingrich can repeat what her son, the speaker of the House, allegedly said about Hillary Rodham Clinton with no apologies or denials from Newt Gingrich.

- David Duke and Dan Quayle, among others, are already rubbing their hands together gleefully in anticipation of running for elections in 1996. If you hurry, you can still make it across the Canadian border.

- A man goes on a killing spree in two Brookline, Mass., reproductive health clinics. He releases a statement requesting to be interviewed by Barbara Walters when all is said and done. Is he feeling sorry about what he did? Well, hindsight is 20/20.

- Five escaped and dangerous criminals utilize 20 days to dig an underground tunnel out of a maximum security prison in South Florida, and they succeed in escaping. Doesn't it just make you feel warm and safe to know that five criminals could disappear for a while to dig a large underground tunnel and flee into society without one prison official noticing anything from any one of the five criminals during their 20 days of suspicious activity?

- O.J. Simpson has published a book, titled "I Want To Tell You." A writer was allowed to come to his jail cell to put together this little publication, and Simpson can use whatever money is raked in for his defense fund. Between Simpson and the five escaped prisoners, jail is looking more and more like some kind of resort where people and prisoners are able to come and go as they please.

- Newt Gingrich touts orphanages as a program worth bringing back. Of course, between his chain-smoking mother and his winning comments about Hillary Clinton, the alternatives to being raised in environments such as Gingrich's may be worthy of a second look.

- The U.S. Postal Service raises the price of stamps by 3 cents and, in a classic Postal Service organizational move, is unprepared for the deluge of people who are ready to buy them. Still, they claim the increase in price is justified. So this now means that your mail will be six days late instead of seven.

The next time you hear talk of school prayer returning to the national agenda, take a moment to read the above list of events. They're frustrating enough to make the most vehement opposers to prayer in schools get down on their knees and wonder where the world is heading just five years short of the 21st century.

JONATHAN LYONS

Pro-life advocates peddle pro-death jihad

The pro-life movement has once again proven the pro-life portion of its self-aggrandizing title to be false: Another middle-class white male decided that taking the lives of fully realized adult humans was a reasonable step to take in the ongoing effort to remove from women reproductive control over their bodies.

As most people who come out from under their rocks to look around from time to time will realize, this isn't the first of the casualties in the fundamentalists' jihad. Dr. John Britton and his bodyguard, James Barrett, were murdered in cold blood in Pensacola, Fla., by martyr wannabe Paul Hill. This time the victims were receptionists and security workers. The martyr wannabe du jour, who allegedly attacked clinics in Brookline, Mass., has asked that he be either honored with priesthood if exonerated or put to death if found guilty.

And therein lies part of the difficulty with the pro-life / pro-death mindset. If one believes one is acting on behalf of one's deity and that one will be rewarded by that deity for acts of violence against others, little will be able to stand between those whose logic depends on the so-called leap of faith and their law-abiding victims.

This deranged point of view is unfortunately granted a sense of acceptability with the spread of voices clamoring for these murders in media coverage. In a Jan. 17 report from The Associated Press, seeming advocacy for further bloodshed was expressed by Roy McMillan, head of the Christian Action Group of Jackson, Miss.

Asked on the news magazine "TV Nation" whether it would be acceptable, in his view, to "slit the throat of an abortion doctor," McMillan responded, "Well, it certainly would not be out of the word of God."

Certainly pro-death pro-lifers cannot be said to be representative of any but a morally palsied handful of Christians.

In Iowa, unfortunately, we have little in the way of support from our governor.

In the short amount of time that has passed since the Brookline murders, Gov. Terry Branstad managed to both offer state protection for some clinics providing the abortion option to women and to rescind that offer when grateful clinic officials attempted to take him up on it.

Of Branstad, the denial of state protection says only one thing: The governor of the state of Iowa refuses to help protect women's clinics from those whose jihad slings both Bibles and guns.

One must wonder whether Iowans will demonstrate the clarity of mind to remember this the next time Branstad runs for public office (which seems likely despite previous promises to the contrary).

Calling oneself pro-life while advocating murder is a positively unreasonable dichotomy; it is only the most profound intellectual obstinacy to ignore the contradiction. One cannot simultaneously claim the moral high ground and encourage or commit acts of murder.

Praying for a god's support in the jihad against a woman's right to choose to have an abortion simply cannot be resolved when those supporting the jihad also advocate bloodshed; one cannot both advocate and protest against bloodshed. Fundamentalist Christians certainly should be aware that one cannot simply pick and choose between the commandments and edicts of one's god. Generally speaking, gods — particularly the Judeo-Christian deity — do not appear to be interested in those who honor them only insofar as it pleases an individual cause.

Those who are simultaneously pro-life and pro-death must ask themselves if it is worth murdering fully realized individuals to protect fetuses, masses of human cells which can hardly be described as anything but potential life.

The most obtuse must see the difference between an individual and a potential individual, lest they fall to feuding over semen and oocytes. Even the most stubbornly unlearned must see that murder cannot be resolved as being in some way holy or righteous.

To the very, very religious in the pro-life movement, an appeal must be made that you judge not, lest you be judged. And according to every Christian scripture I have been exposed to, the Christian god is no fan of cold-blooded murder.

Finding the missing pieces of the universe

I know you probably have a lot on your mind already, but you should be aware that 90 percent of the universe is missing.

At least that's what astronomers are claiming. I personally wouldn't know. My only exposure to the universe was an astronomy course I took in my sophomore year at Haverford College (motto: "We never heard of YOU, either"), and the only astronomical principle I learned was that because of the rotation of the Earth about its axis, astronomy class started way too early in the morning to actually attend in person.

I needed to sleep late in college because I usually stayed up very late working with my roommates, Rob Stavis, Bob Stern and Ken Stover, on important academic projects such as ordering pizza or assembling the legendary Two-Man Submarine. This was a miniature submarine that we obtained by sending $9.95 away to a company that advertised in Marvel Comics. It came in a small, lightweight, very flat box, but when we assembled all the parts, we had an actual working two-man submarine in every possible respect except that 1) The two men could not be in it simultaneously, and 2) being constructed entirely of cardboard, it was not ideally suited for an underwater environment.

But it was perfect for the dormitory environment. We used it to impress women. On Friday nights, we'd spray plenty of Right Guard deodorant in our armpits and then go over to Bryn Mawr College, pick up our hot dates and bring them back to our dormitory room, which was romantically illuminated by an orange flashing light that was originally part of a traffic barricade. The theory was that our dates would take one look at this flashing light reflecting off of the Two-Man Submarine and be driven wild with sexual desire. For reasons that are still not clear, this never happened. Maybe we didn't use enough Right Guard.

But the point is, what with one academic activity or another, I failed to learn much about the universe, or anything else, which is why I went into the field of journalism. We journalists make it a point to know very little about an extremely wide variety of topics; this is how we stay objective. We are also extremely impressed with scientists, and frankly, we will print just about any wacky thing they tell us, especially if it involves outer space.

For example, we're always printing stories about "black holes," even though nobody here in journalism (and we travel extensively) has ever actually seen a black hole, which is this alleged object that sucks everything into itself and never lets anything back out, like a vending machine or Sen. Ted Kennedy. We journalists love astounding astronomical things like that. If astronomers announced that they had detected, by squinting really hard through their telescopes, a harmonica measuring 67 light-years across in a distant galaxy, we'd print this on the front page with a little chart converting light-years to football fields so that you, the layperson, would have a better grasp of the story.

This is why many newspapers devoted front-page space to the story a couple of months ago — you may have seen this — reporting that two teams of astronomers who have been using the Hubble Space Telescope have announced that they're unable to locate 90 percent of the matter that's supposed to be in the universe.

Of course your immediate reaction, as a layperson, is to say to these astronomers, "Of course you've been unable to locate it, you idiots! You're using the Hubble Space Telescope, which needed $500 million in repairs before it could distinguish a star and a dead bug on the lens."

Well, I don't think we should be so harsh. If trained astronomers equipped with pocket protectors say that 90 percent of the universe is missing, then I say we should believe them, and I say we should help them find it. I'm guessing that a good 60 percent to 70 percent of it can be found in my office. I have accumulated a lot of stuff over the years, including (I am not making any of this stuff up) 12 different types of beer, including "Bone Beer" and "Jumping Cow Amber Ale"; a can of pork brains in milk gravy, a year's supply of anti-flatulence products; several dozen miniature replicas of the Oscar Mayer Weinermobile; a toy gun that makes rude bodily noises; and the entire preserved reproductive tract of a cow. (I'm saving this last item for exactly the right prank concept — it will probably involve Newt Gingrich.)

So let's say 65 percent of the universe is in my office. Even when we add the 10 percent that the astronomers found, we're still missing 25 percent. I don't know where it went, but I have a pretty good idea who is responsible: dogs. The person who tipped me off to this is Darrell Libby of Spokane, Wash., who wrote me a letter pointing out that when dogs dig in yards, they produce holes, but they do not produce piles of dirt. There might be a little dirt lying around, but never enough to fill in the holes.

Libby's theory is that "the dirt is being pawed into the ozone layer," or that "enough dirt is being tossed into the sky that another planet will be formed somewhere between Earth and Mars." Thanks to the Hubble astronomers, we now know that this is not the case. A more logical explanation is that dogs have somehow figured out how to paw the dirt into (speaking of Newt Gingrich) a completely different dimension.

Clearly, they must be stopped before they paw the entire universe out of existence. This is a time for all humans to set aside their petty differences and join together to combat this deadly menace, each of us contributing what we can. I'll throw in some pork brains in milk gravy.

If you could pick anyone to be Hunter Rawlings' replacement as president of the UI who would it be?

Laura Beadle, UI sophomore majoring in history and sociology

"I'd pick Jesse Jackson because we need someone who's more willing to go out on a limb and change things."

Tan Ho, UI senior majoring in pharmacy

"Charles Barkley, because he'd bring some excitement, and he seems to be getting involved in politics anyway."

Sonya Lane, UI junior majoring in premedical technology

"I don't want Hunter to leave. I don't know him personally, but I met him during my freshman orientation, and he was really a great guy. I have a lot of respect for him."

Todd Kilpatrick, UI sophomore majoring in political science

"Jack Nicholson, because he's got that special panache. He's got that style and that smile. He'd get the job done, even if he has to kill someone to do it."

Map was erroneous

To the Editor:

The Dec. 12, 1994 issue of The Daily Iowan showed a map of New York and surrounding states on Page 1A as a part of the article about President Rawlings' departure from the UI. As a UI graduate (1962), I have frequently met Easterners who did not know where Iowa (or is it Ohio or Idaho?) is located. My daughter often has to explain in explicit detail just where she is going to school. Sadly, I see that this disease of geographic challenge has progressed westward. While the state of New Hampshire might like to border New York, it is Vermont which has the honor (such as it is), contrary to the depiction of your map.

Whether you approve of this geographic arrangement or not, I do not believe it appropriate for you to misinform more than 26,000 students (to say nothing of the faculty) about the current naming of states. I understand that college students often take up causes at the leading edge of current theory. However, to rename a state without first discussing the implications with the residents is the type of arbitrary action which gives political correctness such an odious reputation.

Until such time as we Vermonters have an opportunity to vote upon such a name change, could you please print a corrected map and an apology to those in Vermont who think they are not living in New Hampshire.

Public radio should be supported

To the Editor:

I am writing to you with regard to Rep. Newt Gingrich's comment recently on his weekly cable television program that "one of the things we're going to do this year ... is zero out the Corporation for Public Broadcasting."

Hearing this from one of the new congressional leaders is alarming. The CPB provides one of the few outlets those of us who live in rural areas have for quality and culturally stimulating radio programming, which includes in-depth coverage and commentary on what's going on in Washington and the world. I realize that cuts are necessary, but until some of the ludicrous projects and grants funded by the government are dealt with rationally in relation to everything but a representative's or senator's pork barrel interests, CPB deserves financial support.

Public radio, which is available to nearly all Americans, is the public library of the air and is free, universally accessible and offers high-quality programming. The stations carrying CPB are beacons of public service in an evolving telecommunications environment. The service is portable and available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

I urge all concerned Iowans to write or call their senators and congressmen to voice their opinion regarding this matter before a House vote on the matter, which is scheduled on Jan. 30.

Minister questioned

To the Editor:

I read the letter (DI, Nov. 11) from Tom Miller, a campus minister with Campus Bible Fellowship, and had the strange feeling I was reading a rendition of logic out of "Alice in Wonderland." I wasn't exactly sure what his point(s) was, so I passed it around to several colleagues to see if a group could come up with a consensus of what he was trying to say. Here are the results: No one was willing to bet his/her life on how to interpret the part about "the survival of the fittest" and skin color. However, the general consensus did conclude with a fair degree of certainty that Miller is in favor of the death penalty. Furthermore, he seems to have employed a bizarre form of logic to argue that the Bible gives an "authoritative body" the right to execute a murderer "for the sake of revenge." A minister friend of mine once told me that anybody who knows his Bible can use it to work up a fairly convincing argument for any preset viewpoint he might happen to have. Well, that is probably true, but really, I think Miller stretched his logic beyond the "outer limits."

I would like to put forth three questions and give him an excursion in the realm of a more traditional form of logic (and please, the "three" has no esoteric connection to the Holy Trinity). Whether you agree or not, Hitler's Nazis, who executed millions, were the empowered "authority" at the time of his rule in Germany. Did the Bible give the Nazis the God-given right to exercise Hitler's wrath? (And please don't answer, "Well, if some of those executed were believed to be murderers, yes, of course!") Read up on criminal law to get a general understanding of the differences between manslaughter, second-degree murder and first-degree (premeditated) murder. Then (your "Alice in Wonderland" argument aside) considering the state, which has unquestionable physical control over the prisoner with years to contemplate the taking of that human's life, can you explain to me in "planet Earth" terms why state-sanctioned executions do not fit the definition of premeditated murder to a tee? Can you deduce from my letter where I stand on the death penalty? (Hint: Read Matthew 25:40. It's not the Old Testament, but it will give you a clue.)

Breaking the chain of violence

To the Editor:

"Violence begins when the lives of others have no longer any value but become cheap and expendable." Those are Archbishop Rembert Weakland's words in a commencement address at Siena Heights College last summer. "We all know that violence begets violence. Our anguish lies in seeing no end to the chain, no way of breaking it."

We Iowans have a way to help break that chain of violence by demanding that our state legislators say no to legislation that would re-establish the death penalty.

Death penalty queries

To the Editor:

Would you rape a rapist or light a match to burn an arsonist at the stake?

Or press the button or plunge the needle that would give the last gasp to the man who murdered?

You might ask these questions of your Iowa senator and representative as they consider their vote on the death penalty this month.

Capital punishment: 'Spare them all'

To the Editor:

I am concerned that the ugly specter of capital punishment has again surfaced in the political arena in Iowa.

For those of us who profess to be Christians, the idea of capital punishment should be particularly repulsive. For a moment, close your eyes. Try to picture Jesus Christ walking into the prison at Fort Madison, slipping a noose around a condemned man's head, then kicking a stool out from under him. Or try to imagine Jesus strapping a man into an electric chair and throwing the switch.

As Iowa law now stands, we have life imprisonment without chance of parole for persons convicted of the most heinous crimes. This is as good a deterrent as a civilized nation can devise and passes muster on moral and religious grounds.

A few years ago there was a bumper sticker that read, "Kill them all and let God sort 'em out." That has a certain perverse humor to it, but a more appropriate saying for Christians would be "Spare them all and let God sort 'em out."

Martin Luther King Jr.

To the Editor:

As your readers reflect on their efforts to bring peace and harmony to their streets and come together to observe Martin Luther King Jr. Day, please let me share one of the accomplishments of our city to do the same. We have dedicated a stately memorial and garden to Dr. King.

This memorial was conceived so that each day of the year, school children and civic leaders alike can come and speak of peace and understanding. We have joined to honor a fallen patriot who helped lift the burden of sanctioned bigotry from one group and the burden of hypocrisy from another. To combat the bigotry and hypocrisy that remains we must challenge ourselves to be so dedicated. At this memorial, our citizens can pledge themselves to the unfinished causes of peace and freedom that he so nobly advanced.

Perhaps in your reflections you also may find a need to further come together to build an inspirational place (with an audio history as well). Each day, hundreds, perhaps thousands, could come to hear King's call to humankind for peace and understanding. "All God's children ... join hands ... be free at last ..." Come together to do this for him now, so when young men and women shout out in hurt or anger from your streets or campuses, "I am someone," King's spirit of freedom will ring back to them, not only from our distant plain, but from your city — a spirit flowing not from the "cup of bitterness and hatred," but founded upon the "stone of hope."

His is a spirit needed not just one day each year, but his is a spirit for all seasons.

"I waited for the bus outside Rienow (Residence Hall) this morning and was late to class," said UI freshman Lisa Munoz. "I would have been better off just walking."

Cambus could have alleviated the problems by planning ahead, said UI sophomore Curt Mercadante.

"If they knew they were going to be behind all day, maybe Cambus should have started their routes a little earlier," he said.

However, Mercadante said that although his trip from Rienow Residence Hall to Phillips Hall took nearly 30 minutes, he appreciated the safety measures taken by Cambus drivers.

"Our drivers are late, but we are trying to maintain 10 minute service by holding them at points," said Cambus dispatcher Horace Tseng. "There's more stress for the drivers, but we've coached them to be slow and that's why we aren't exactly on schedule."

At least one driver wasn't overly worried about safety problems.

"Driving a bus on days like this isn't as bad as people think because the buses weigh 26,000 pounds and stick to the road pretty well," said Cambus driver and UI junior Jason Fitzgerald. "Passengers have to know that safety is the No. 1 concern of Cambus and that getting somewhere on time is secondary. Cambus does its best to provide a safe ride."

"We always like to talk to the people before they do it to see if there's something we can do to keep the animal in the home," she said. "We try to deal with people about animal behavior problems."

Humane Society workers have heard many excuses — ranging from allergies to moving — from people wanting to give up their dogs or cats, Ashman said.

"Some people develop allergies to the animal," she said. "I have a hard time believing that it happens at the rate it's been happening, but it's a pretty easy excuse to use. The thing we hear the most is 'We're leaving.' I would hope that a move would not make a difference."

Ashman said people should call the Humane Society or the Coralville-Iowa City Animal Shelter rather than thinking of abandoning an animal.

"Some people actually choose to abandon their animal," she said. "At least an animal has a 50-50 chance in the shelter to be adopted, and if not, then it would at least die with dignity, with someone holding it, and not alone."

way) for transportation expenses.

Since they must live in a hotel during sequestration and put their everyday activities on hold, White said the process automatically decides what type of people will be able to serve.

"It skews the panel of jurors," he said. "If you took just two weeks and asked people to put their lives on hold for that length of time, you just wouldn't get people with an average kind of life."

Sequestration allows for certain types of people to serve on the Simpson jury, UI law Professor Michael Saks said.

"We can make an educated guess that the type of jury in affect their decisions. Jurors in the Simpson case are supervised constantly and can only contact their families two or three times a week. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito also ruled Wednesday that conjugal visits would be arranged for jurors requesting "private time" with their spouses.

In Lee County, Iowa, jurors in the case of Lary Lane Morgan, who was found guilty Jan. 12 of kidnapping, sexually abusing and murdering 9-year-old Anna Marie Emry, were not sequestered but were asked to avoid the media blitz that accompanied the high-profile trial.

However, sequestration would not have made a difference in the outcome of the trial, said Gordon Lisles, one of the prosecuting attorneys in the case.

"In the Morgan case, the judge ordered the jury not to follow news accounts, media reports or listen to the radio about the case," he said. "I assumed they followed that order. Sequestering them wouldn't have made a bit of difference. The verdict would have been the same."

Lisles, one of three prosecutors in the case, agreed with White that sequestration closes the door to many people who would like to be jurors.

"There is a possibility that a lot of people who wanted to serve on a jury couldn't if it was sequestered," he said.

Sequestration is something judges would rather avoid, but it is better than having a case influenced by media reports, said Associate Professor Jeff Smith of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

"Sequestration is something judges do not like to do, but it's better than having a verdict overturned later because of pretrial publicity."

Jeff Smith, professor in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication

"Sequestration is something judges do not like to do, but it's better than having a verdict overturned later because of pretrial publicity," he said. "Locking up a jury in a hotel for months runs up enormous bills for hotel rooms and expenses."

The extensive media coverage of the Simpson case is partly the result of the public's overwhelming interest in the case, Smith said.

"The massive coverage of the Simpson case is not that surprising. When a well-known, genial celebrity is accused of butchering people and he denies it, there is a lot of drama there," he said. "This is a soap opera with all the lurid details and more interesting to a lot of people because it's real."

About 70 Japanese students attend the UI, according to the Office of International Education and Services. However, the office was not sure how many students had relatives from or near Kobe.

Yoshiko Jo, a visiting instructor with the Department of Asian Languages and Literature, easily reached her family in Kobe but said she didn't realize the magnitude of the quake until after speaking with them.

However, after talking to her family, Jo said she realized how terrified they were.

"My father said people were trapped in their houses," she said. "I had planned on going back for spring break, but my mother said she doesn't want me to see the city."

Jo said Kobe was a beautiful city before the earthquake, but after seeing pictures of the damage, she doesn't believe it will ever be the same.

"I saw the theater I used to go to as a kid — ruined — on TV," she said. "Kobe is still there, but it's not my city anymore."

"Our ultimate goal is to encourage medical students to become abortion providers and to support their colleagues who do," the MSFC said in a press release. "In order for choice and access to be a reality for women, doctors must be well-trained to provide abortion services."

National Right to Life spokeswoman Michele Arocha Allen called required abortion training an "absurd proposition," saying the decision not to teach the curriculum has come from within the medical community, not because of outside pressure.

"(Abortion rights groups) are always doing everything in their power to increase the number of abortions in this country," she said.

Bowden quiets rumors about Miami job

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Terry Bowden became the most prominent coach to rebuff the Miami Hurricanes, quickly quashing speculation Thursday he might be interested in the job.

The Auburn coach denied a published report he was interviewed by Miami. Hurricanes athletic director Paul Dee also denied the report.

"I have not been contacted by anyone at the University of Miami," Bowden said. "They have not asked me to interview for the job, nor would I interview for any job at all."

Youngstown State coach Jim Tressel, meanwhile, withdrew from consideration. That left Miami Dolphins offense coach Gary Stevens as the lone confirmed candidate to succeed Dennis Erickson.

At 1-3 and ninth in the Big Ten Conference, Iowa is in a near must-win situation Saturday against Wisconsin if it hopes to make a serious run at the league title.

The Hawkeyes are in position to put a winning streak together with three of their next four games at home. Their lone road game in that stretch is at conference doormat Ohio State.

But Iowa will have to get by Wisconsin before it can worry about anyone else and the Hawkeyes may have to do it without leading scorer Jess Settles.

Settles sat out Iowa's last game against Purdue and the sophomore's nagging back injury makes his availability day-to-day.

"Hopefully he'll be back in there before too long," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "We do miss him. There's no question that we're not quite the same ballclub without him."

With or without Settles, Iowa will have to find a way to contain the Badgers inside-outside duo in Rashard Griffith and Michael Finley. Finley is third in the Big Ten averaging 21.6 points per game and is a dangerous threat from beyond the 3-point arc.

Griffith, a sophomore center, is atop the league in rebounding, grabbing 10.6 boards and scoring 16.5 points per game.

The return of 6-foot-8, 220-pound Russ Millard will be a key for the Hawkeyes in containing Griffith.

"(Griffith's) a real tough matchup for us," Davis said. "Maybe Russ' experience as well as his size can be a factor in that game."

Millard has proven in the past that he can perform against top competition. The junior forward had 25 points and eight rebounds against Duke's Cherokee Parks last season.

"He'll make a difference. He'll be in there early and he'll be in there often," Davis said. "Especially if

Hawks face toughest test yet

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

It's exam time and the top-ranked Iowa wrestling team better be ready.

The Hawkeyes will face their most difficult challenge to date as they travel to Lincoln, Neb., to compete in the National Duals on Saturday. The two-day tournament will feature 16 teams including powerhouses Oklahoma State, Penn State, and Iowa State. Eleven of the teams participating in the tournament are ranked in the nation's Top 20.

Iowa coach Dan Gable said the National Duals arrived sooner than he expected, but the tournament would help him to determine his team's standing.

"The last meet (Arizona State) was really kind of a wake-up call for me more than anything. I had some things happen during that match that really kind of opened my eyes about my kids. That's why I wish I had a little more time between that and the National Duals," Gable said. "If we come out of this tournament like we should, as champions, then I'll have a real good read on where my team is and how they'll stack up in the national tournament."

The Hawkeyes (5-0) are scheduled to take on Oregon State in the first round. If they advance to the second round, they will take on either Pittsburgh or North Carolina. The later rounds could pit Iowa against Iowa State or Oklahoma State.

However, Gable said he isn't overlooking Oregon State.

"I didn't anticipate wrestling a team like Oregon State in the first round of the National Duals considering we're the top-ranked team. Going into the season, I felt Oregon State and Oklahoma State would be the two teams we might battle for the national championship," he said.

The Hawkeyes will have to wrestle three matches on Saturday, but Iowa will counter fatigue with added reserves. Iowa will take 15 wrestlers to the tournament in case of injuries. Mark Ironside is likely to share action with Kevin Hogan at 134 pounds. Either Ray Brinzer or Tony Ersland will back-up Curt Heideman at 177. Jesse Whitmer, Mike Uker, and John Degl will provide added depth.

Heideman said the team is anxious for the competition to begin.

"We've wrestled pretty well so far, but I don't know if we've put it all together yet," Heideman said. "There's going to be some good teams there and I think it will be like a benchmark to see where we're at."

Hawks hope for spark at home

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Although the Iowa women's basketball team has gotten off to a shaky start, it's not too late to turn things around. And when the Hawkeyes return home this weekend, they will have a chance to improve their conference record to 4-3.

Tonight Iowa (6-9, 2-3 Big Ten) will host Indiana in its first home game in nearly a month. The game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Sunday the Hawkeyes will face Northwestern. That game is scheduled for a 2 p.m. start.

Iowa will welcome the return home. The Hawkeyes have yet to win this season in seven attempts on the road.

The Hoosiers (13-2, 3-2 Big Ten) will be a dangerous opponent for the Hawkeyes. And Iowa head coach C. Vivian Stringer knows it.

"That's the one team last year we had fits with and we continued to have," Stringer said. "I'm greatly concerned. We don't normally talk about a specific team until at least Wednesday, but I'm so worried about their quickness, that we already studied and discussed them (at the beginning of the week)."

"I hope they don't do well against us, but I think you would admire their ability."

Stringer specifically mentioned guards Emma Urzua, a senior from Mexico, and Tatijana Vesel, a sophomore from Yugoslavia.

"They are two of the quickest backcourt players in the country, and two of the finest shooters," she said. "(Indiana) brings that European flavor."

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Iowa freshman Tangela Smith goes up for a shot in an exhibition game at Carver-Hawkeye Arena against the Puerto Rican nationals.

Junior forward Lisa Furlin and senior forward Shirley Bryant are providing most of the scoring. Furlin is averaging 18.3 points per game, while Bryant is averaging 17.4.

The Hoosiers are currently in a four-way tie for second in the Big Ten, but they have the best overall record in the entire conference. Last season Indiana was the only team to sweep the Hawkeyes.

Northwestern also knocked off Iowa last season. The Hawkeyes and Wildcats split last year, each

Big names available in expansion draft

Associated Press

The list includes a Super Bowl MVP, a Heisman Trophy winner, a six-time Pro Bowl selection and more than 600 pounds of Perry brothers.

Mark Rypien, Desmond Howard, Chris Doleman, and William and Michael Dean Perry are among the players who will be available in the NFL expansion draft.

On Thursday, the league released the list of players who can be picked in the Feb. 15 draft by the expansion Carolina Panthers and Jacksonville Jaguars, who will both begin play next season.

Each of the 28 established teams must make six players available in the draft. All those teams submitted their lists except Super Bowl opponents San Francisco and San Diego, which don't have to send in their names until Jan. 31.

Rypien, who quarterbacked the Washington Redskins to victory in the 1992 Super Bowl, was Vinny Testaverde's backup at Cleveland last season.

"He knows the Browns are committed to Vinny Testaverde," said his agent, Ken Stanning. "He was a bit frustrated he didn't get to contribute more. Carolina or Jacksonville are certainly attractive to him."

Howard won the 1991 Heisman Trophy at Michigan, but the wide receiver has been a disappointment during his three seasons with the Redskins.

Doleman was 1992 NFC defensive player of the year with Minnesota, which traded him to Atlanta last season. Although he's on the expansion list, his $2.7 million salary may scare off the Panthers and Jaguars.

William "The Refrigerator" Perry rose to fame in 1985 as a member of Howard Chicago's Super Bowl champion team. After being released by the Bears in 1993, the 335-pound defensive lineman signed with Philadelphia.

Michael Dean Perry is smaller (285 pounds) than his brother, but is considered a much better lineman. A five-time Pro Bowl choice with the Cleveland Browns, he had 69 tackles and four sacks this season.

Fourteen former Pro Bowl players and 12 first-round draft picks were on the expansion list.

The other Pro Bowl selections were Rypien, Doleman, Arizona's

Iowa kicks off track season

The women's track team will be kicking it into high gear when they open their season at the Wisconsin Invitational on Saturday.

Iowa will try to make some noise against Big Ten rivals Wisconsin and Minnesota. Both are armed with a new high intensity training program.

"We're doing a lot more speed-work, Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said. "We're doing a lot higher percentage of race pace-and under race pace-running."

Hassard hopes this new program will increase speeds over shorter distances and will have a chance to evaluate the programs results Saturday.

The runners say they're ready to kick off the season.

"I think the first meet is exciting because we haven't competed in awhile. It's good just to see where everyone is at and the results of hard practice," sophomore Briana Benning said.

The Hawkeye sprinters will feature newcomers Coretta Clarke, Maria Phillip, and Wynsome Cole. Senior sprinter Yolanda Hobbs will also be a key contributor.

Briana Benning and Nicole Brown will compete in the middle distance events.

The long distance events will be run by Becky Coleman, Kiersten Pauling, and Shawn Fleck. All-Big Ten Conference cross-country runner Erin Boland will sit out because of an injury.

"There's a lot of excitement in the air. We have some new people joining the ranks this year and we're excited to see them getting ready for the meet," Hassard said. "It's always nice to open the season with a meet like this. It gives us a chance to look over the team and find out how the training has benefited them."

Men's Track

Fresh off its second place finish at last weekend's Illinois Invitational, the Iowa men's track team returns home to host their first meet of the young season.

The Hawkeyes will host Augustana and North Central College Saturday afternoon at the Recreation Building.

With a long season ahead, Coach Ted Wheeler is simply looking to see improvements over last weekend's performance when his team takes to the track Saturday.

"It's very early in the year, but I'm optimistic. I think we have a team that is very young and developing," Wheeler said. "We have some freshmen that are performing very well."

Among the freshmen that have impressed Wheeler so far are Jared Pittman and Chad Feeldy in the 1500 meters. Ed Rozell in the 55 meters and long jump. Chris Davis in the 600 meters and Dion Trowers in the high hurdles.

With a young team, Coach Wheeler has turned to his two senior captains, pole vaulter Chad Ohly and sprinter Andre Morris, to lead the team.

"We look to those two guys to lead us on the field and in the classroom," Wheeler said.

Preliminaries and field events will begin at 11:30 a.m. Saturday, with finals starting at noon.

Women's swimming

The Iowa women's swimming team returns to action today when it travels to Champaign, Ill., for the Illinois Invitational.

The Hawkeyes are fresh off a 170-128 rout of Illinois State and hope to carry that momentum into the invitational.

Iowa joins Illinois, Illinois State, Illinois Wesleyan, and Augustana College in this weekend's tournament.

With the Big Ten Championships less than a month away Iowa coach Kennedy said his team has improved tremendously and should be completely healthy by the time the conference meet rolls around.

"We've come a long way and we get better each time out. The Big Ten meet is going to be a real test and you should expect that from the best conference in the country," Kennedy said.

Senior J.J. DeAth said this weekend's tournament should be a good tuneup before next month's championships.

"I like these type of meets because it gives you a chance to work on some things. We won the invitational last year, so hopefully we can go down there and swim as good as we did last year," DeAth said.

This will be the second time that Iowa has faced Big Ten rival Illinois. The Illini competed in the Iowa Invitational back in December and finished second. Kennedy said he looked forward to facing the Fighting Illini again.

"They swam well up here, so hopefully we can return the favor at their place."

Hawks prepare for round three

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swim team dives into the second half of the 1994-95 season tonight as they host Nebraska.

The Hawkeyes come into the meet ranked No. 13 in the nation, a perfect 4-0 in dual meets. The Huskers are ranked No. 19, having won 15 straight Big Eight Championships.

The two schools have met twice already this season, finishing first and second in the Nebraska Invitational and the Husker Sprint Classic. Iowa took first in the Invitational and Nebraska won the Sprint meet.

"This meet is always one of the finest intercollegiate dual meets of the year," Coach Glenn Patton said of tonight's contest.

The meet marks the final home dual of the season for Iowa and the final home dual of their career for five senior Iowa swimmers. Seniors B.J. Blair, Erik Marchitell, Krzysztof Cwalina, Jim Mulligan and Rafal Szukala will all be honored at Iowa's Fieldhouse pool tonight for their accomplishments as Iowa Hawkeyes.

"This is a really very good senior class for us. We have received tremendous leadership from our three senior captains—B.J. Blair, Erik Marchitell and Jim Mulligan—this year," Patton said. "I'll also remember (this class for) the exciting performances at the Big Ten's and the NCAA's, certainly highlighted by Rafal Szukala's NCAA Championships."

In all, the five seniors have accounted for five individual Big Ten event championships, 30 NCAA All-American honors, three relay Big Ten championships, as well as a 24-7 record in dual meets.

But the seniors aren't the only ones who need to be honored. Once again, the Hawkeyes have earned honors outside of the pool, this time in the classroom.

Iowa ended the first semester of the year by reaching one more of their team goals for the season. With 15 individual athletes receiving a grade point of 3.0 or higher and a team G.P.A. of above 2.85, the Iowa swim team was named NCAA team academic all-Americans.

Having reached all of their goals for the first half of the season, the Hawkeyes hope to excel even more in 1995.

"We'll try to continue our success on the national level as a swimming and diving powerhouse," Patton said.

The meet will begin tonight at 7 p.m. in the Fieldhouse Pool.

Chicago faces reality at 18-19

Mike Nadel

Associated Press

DEERFIELD, Ill. — There's no use pretending any more. These Chicago Bulls aren't champions. Unlike last year, they aren't even decent imitations.

Only one season removed from its third consecutive NBA title, Chicago is just another struggling, sub-.500 team.

"Reality stinks, doesn't it?" coach Phil Jackson said Thursday. "You just have to accept what we are now."

Some of his players already have.

"We're right where we're supposed to be," B.J. Armstrong said. "We're not the most talented group. It's a struggle. We're just over-matched."

The Bulls went 55-27 last season because they had enough firepower left to survive Michael Jordan's retirement. This season, however, they haven't been able to survive the additional departures of Horace Grant, Bill Cartwright and Scott Williams to free agency, and John Paxson to retirement.

Wednesday's 97-93 loss to Milwaukee was Chicago's fourth straight. The Bulls (18-19) haven't been below .500 this late in a season since finishing 40-42 in 1986-87.

"It is disappointing," Scottie Pippen said. "This organization has always been able to win. As a player who's dedicated myself to winning and been around winners, it's a tough situation."

Players like Pippen and Armstrong never experienced a four-game losing streak when the Bulls were winning championships in 1991, 1992 and 1993.

Boston's Ray Bourque steps onto the ice at Boston Garden Thursday during an intrasquad scrimmage. The Bruins open their 1995 season Sunday in Boston.

Shortened season begins today

Ken Rappoport
Associated Press

After fighting in the board rooms, players will be battling on the ice as the NHL season opens today.

Their labor dispute behind them, NHL teams will finally get their season under way with eight games tonight — including a long-awaited opening night at Madison Square Garden where the New York Rangers will raise their Stanley Cup banner.

The same kind of excitement that surrounded the seventh game of the Stanley Cup Finals last spring, when the Rangers beat Vancouver for the title, has surrounded this game. It has become as much an event as a sporting contest.

A sellout crowd will be on hand to watch the ceremony celebrating the Rangers' first Cup since 1940. The banner will join the three others the Rangers have hung in the rafters.

The Rangers open against the Buffalo Sabres.

In other games tonight, it's Pittsburgh at Tampa Bay, Chicago at Detroit, Calgary at Winnipeg, Anaheim at Edmonton, Dallas at Vancouver, St. Louis at San Jose and Toronto at Los Angeles.

The remainder of the NHL's 26 teams will start the league's abbreviated 48-game schedule with seven games Saturday and six Sunday.

Teams have had only a week of training camp following more than three months away from the ice because of the owners' lockout. Many players practiced informally, however, and some played competitively in Europe and in the minors.

"To be perfectly honest with you, our team is practicing better and is sharper than it was three months ago," Blackhawks coach Darryl Sutter said.

"I think they have good jump. A couple of guys have struggled, but overall, I haven't been disappointed at all. I don't think it'll be as bad as everybody's saying, that's for sure."

"You're going to see some good hockey and some sloppy hockey. But I think on the most part, it's going to be upbeat and intense."

Jeremy Roenick, Chicago Blackhawks forward

Chicago forward Jeremy Roenick was another one who didn't think the long absence away from the ice will affect the quality of play.

"I don't see us being out of sync at all," he said. "There could be some sloppy parts to the game, but that happens at midseason in a normal year. You're going to see some good hockey and some sloppy hockey. But I think on the most part, it's going to be upbeat and intense."

The NHL's 78th season was originally scheduled to open on Oct. 1 before being postponed by the labor dispute.

The Rangers will feature some new faces in their lineup, particularly Petr Nedved, whom they obtained in an offseason trade with the St. Louis Blues. The center was sent to New York for Esa Tikkanen and Doug Lidster as part of the settlement in the Mike Keenan case.

Keenan had four years to go on a five-year contract with the Rangers when he left for St. Louis one month after winning the Cup.

In St. Louis, Keenan replaced Bob Berry as coach and also became general manager. But he was fined $100,000 by the league and forced to sit out most of training camp.

The Rangers weren't the only team involved in a trade featuring big names.

Luc Robitaille went from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh for Rick Tocchet; goaltender Mike Vernon went from Calgary to Detroit for defenseman Steve Chiasson; Al MacInnis went from Calgary to St. Louis for Phil Housley in a swap of high-rated defensemen. Wendel Clark went from Toronto to Quebec in a multi-player deal involving Mats Sundin, another top forward.

Washington sent Mike Ridley to Toronto for Rob Pearson in a trade of forwards.

Montreal traded Guy Carbonneau to St. Louis for Jim Montgomery in a swap of centers and Boston traded defenseman Glen Wesley to Hartford for three first-round draft picks.

AUSTRALIAN OPEN

Agassi survives heat to advance

Steve Wilstien
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — The crowds on the roof cawed like crazed ducks, the blowflies made a nuisance of themselves, and the searing sun turned the Australian Open courts into green griddles.

Then just as Andre Agassi started to play under pink and charcoal clouds at sunset, the weather bureau issued an urgent alert about a midsummer hailstorm on the way.

It was another typical day Thursday at the Australian, where Patrick McEnroe had to be treated for heat exhaustion after winning in muggy, 96-degree weather, players peeled themselves off the courts, and a few fans fainted from the heat.

Agassi, in a minimalist mode with his shorn hair and white sneakers, got on and off long before any hail or rain or snow showed up. Flexing his muscles — literally once after a 126-mph serve — Agassi dispensed with French qualifier Jerome Golmard 6-2, 6-3, 6-1, in 93 minutes of baseline bashing.

"In a Grand Slam, especially with the conditions like they are here," Agassi said, "it's just good to get through as efficiently as possible ... It was hot out there, really humid, even at night."

Agassi, the No. 2 seed, hasn't been challenged yet in his first two straight-set matches, both against qualifiers.

But he seems to be working his way into the form that gained him the U.S. Open last fall, and he's being cheered by fans as if he were born in Melbourne. A couple of Australians even held up an American flag for him at court-side.

"Tonight was the first glimpse of it feeling like a big tournament to me," he said.

"You get out there and the stadium's full and people are excited to be there and they're into it from start to finish. That's the way it should be. It's quite the opposite at the U.S. Open. The beers kick in, they enjoy themselves for a little while, but then you get up two sets and a break and the stadium starts clearing."

RON LUCIANO

Umpire's death deemed a suicide

Associated Press

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — The death of former major league umpire Ron Luciano, whose theatrical style made him a favorite among baseball fans, was classified Thursday as a suicide, police said.

In a brief statement, Endicott police said an autopsy performed by Broome County coroner Dr. Michael McCarville concluded that Luciano, 57, died from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Lt. Harlan Ayers said no additional information or details would be released by authorities.

A woman who answered the phone at the Luciano home but who would not identify herself said the family had no comment.

"The family is not taking this well," Ayers said.

Luciano's body was discovered by a hunting friend Wednesday in the garage area of his home.

Ayers declined to confirm whether a suicide note was found. Luciano was an American League umpire for 11 years, retiring in 1980.

He worked the 1974 World Series and AL championship series in 1971, 1975 and 1978.

In a profession that traditionally demanded an unobtrusive presence, Luciano was colorful and animated. He called out runners with a flick of his fingers as if an imaginary pistol were in his hand.

Super Bowl XXIX

NATIVE OF TONGA

Pupunu
spices up
Charger
offenseBernie Wilson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — If Alfred Pupunu of the San Diego Chargers catches a touchdown pass against the San Francisco 49ers in the Super Bowl, he'll bring a taste of Tonga to the NFL's big game.

Pupunu is one of San Diego's young, unsung heroes who have brought the Chargers to their first Super Bowl. Normally he can be found blocking in San Diego's power running game. But he's got a nice touch as a receiver, too, and occasionally gets to display his unique end-zone celebration.

Pittsburgh Steelers fans might still be wondering what Pupunu was pretending to do after catching a 43-yard touchdown pass from Stan Humphries that began the Chargers' comeback for a 17-13 win in Sunday's AFC championship game.

It's simple. Pupunu, who was born in Tonga in the South Pacific, twists at the top of the football and acts like he's taking a swig. Since it was a big game, he added a little jig he calls the Bolt Dance.

If he were in Tonga, he'd actually be opening a coconut shell and taking a drink of kava juice (Bolt Dance not included).

"All South Pacific Islanders do it. It's like a ritual type deal," Pupunu said. "It's something special. It's a culture thing, know what I'm saying?"

As an NFL thing, it means that Pupunu has scored.

Pupunu's first professional end-zone celebration was in the season opener at Denver, after catching a

Associated Press

22-yard TD pass from Humphries that started a rally from a 17-0 deficit.

"I didn't know what the heck he was doing, opening a can of beer, or whatever," said offensive coordinator Ralph Friedgen.

"I really don't care as long as he gets in the end zone. He's really a good guy, who's just coming into his own."

At Pittsburgh, Pupunu got wide open when the Steelers' secondary bit hard on play-action.

"We call that the Tonga pass," Friedgen said.

Pupunu, a third-year pro who is 6-foot-2, 265 pounds, said he will be the first Tongan to play in the Super Bowl.

"My uncle did some research. There's not very many of us in the league, you know. Vai Sikahema just retired."

His relatives back home might get to see the Super Bowl two weeks later, once someone in the States sends them a videotape.

"I don't know if they have power out there yet, to tell you the truth," he said. "I know they have a VCR. No, they don't have live TV."

Although he was born in Tonga, he and his family moved to the United States when he was only 2 months old.

He grew up in Utah, and first did his end zone ritual at Dixie Junior College in Utah. As a senior at Weber State, he was a Division I-AA All-American after setting school and Big Sky records with 93 catches for 1,204 yards and 12 touchdowns.

He signed as a rookie free agent by Kansas City in 1992, but was waived at the end of training camp and picked up by the Chargers.

The highlight of his rookie season was when Junior Seau, a Samoan, picked him up at the airport.

He then plunged into the anonymity that usually comes with being a Chargers tight end or H-back (a hybrid tight end-fullback).

He didn't catch a pass his rookie season. He did, however, throw the "wham" block that sprang Marion Butts on a 54-yard TD run in a 17-0 playoff win over the Chiefs.

A "wham" block is against a down lineman, usually from motion.

SAYS HISTORY COULD REPEAT

Namath gives underdog a chance

Hal Brock
Associated Press

Joe Namath, football's patron saint of lost causes, has some advice for the 19-point underdog San Diego Chargers, facing the longest odds in Super Bowl history. Relax. Anything's liable to happen.

Until now, Namath's 1969 New York Jets were the Super Bowl's biggest underdogs, given no chance against the Baltimore Colts, who went into the 1969 game as 18-point favorites.

Final score: Jets 16, Colts 7. "First of all," Namath said, "the Chargers have a little advantage. They know a heavy underdog can win. History says that and history can repeat. They were angry going into Pittsburgh (for the AFC championship game) because they felt they were not getting respect. If they handle it right, they can use that anger, make it an advantage rather than a negative."

Namath, speaking by conference call, believes the Chargers' cause isn't quite as hopeless as the betting odds might suggest.

"It's happened before," he said. "I know it can again. Who knows what will happen? What if, on the second play, somebody twists his knee? Who knows who's going down? That's why they play the game, because we don't know what's going to happen."

Namath, though, insisted he knew against the Colts. He had so much confidence in those Jets he guaranteed the victory. And climb-

"First of all, the Chargers have a little advantage. They know a heavy underdog can win. History says that and history can repeat."

Joe Namath, former New York Jets quarterback

ing out on that limb didn't worry him one bit.

"I was angry," he said. "The guarantee stemmed from that. We felt we had done a great job when we beat Oakland to win the AFL championship. Those guys were good. Then they tell us we're 17-, 18-, 19-point underdogs to the Colts. It was a real insult. To begin with, we felt we were gonna win. We wanted respect."

So Namath spoke out. Coach Weeb Ewbank wasn't thrilled about giving the Colts bulletin-board material, but the quarterback shrugged off his complaint.

"I knew what I said. I wasn't scared or afraid," Namath recalled. "I felt bad upsetting Weeb but I told him if they need clips to get fired up, they're in trouble. It was just the way I felt. I liked the idea of letting the fans know how I felt."

For years after the game, Bubba Smith, centerpiece of the Colts defense, refused to accept the loss.

"The last time I saw him," Namath said, "he was still insisting it was fixed."

What if Namath had failed to deliver on the guarantee?

"If we had not won, I know what I would have done," he said. "I'd go back to work hard. Bite the bullet and take it. You've got to do that or dig a hole and hide."

Namath said he has never watched a full tape of the Jets' Super Bowl and never mentioned it to people like Don Shula, who coached those Colts.

"I never talked to anybody from Baltimore about it," he said.

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore.—The NBA suspended six Portland Trail Blazers and Sacramento's Oden Polynice for one game each today for their fight in Tuesday's night game at Sacramento.

Polynice and Portland point guard Rod Strickland also were fined $5,000 apiece.

In addition, Blazers Clyde Drexler, Mark Bryant, James Edwards, Harvey Grant and Jerome Kersey were

Bijou features disputable 'Taxi zum Klo'

Jonathon Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

The controversial 1981 German film "Taxi zum Klo (Taxi to the Toilet)" is playing this weekend at the Bijou. If it sounds familiar it's because this is the movie that kicked off the "academic freedom" debate that has flooded the UI campus.

Frank Ripploh and Bernd Broderup star in the controversial German film "Taxi zum Klo (Taxi to the Toilet). The film is playing at the Bijou tonight through Sunday.

In the fall of 1991, the film was shown to two UI German classes and the ensuing hubbub reached all the way to the state Legislature and national media. At the time, the state attorney's office called the film "disgusting." Raymond Legeschulte, an Iowa state legislator, went so far as to say that the "whole German department" might be "cut out or cut back" as a result of the incident.

So what exactly is "disgusting" in this film? Well, be warned that it contains graphic depictions of sex, an abusive situation with a young boy and older man, and a man urinating into another man's mouth. If golden showers aren't your cup of tea, you may want to skip this movie.

"Taxi zum Klo" is the story of "Peggy" Ripploh (played by director Frank Ripploh), a Berlin school-teacher by day and sexual thrill-seeker by night. It is a pre-AIDS look at the promiscuous homosexual "bathhouse" lifestyle.

Peggy meets Bernd (Bernd Broderup) at a theater and the two develop an intimate relationship. This sets up the film's major conflict: Peggy's desire for any man that moves vs. his desire to stay in a loving relationship with Bernd.

Unfortunately, "Taxi zum Klo" probably won't offend anybody on the grounds of being "outrageous, unusual or unexpected." The run-of-the-mill love story is so bland and passionless that viewers are likely to be bored. Only the occasional graphic sex keeps the minutes going by.

At no point is the viewer clued in to what could possibly be so lovable about Peggy that would cause anyone to want to move in with him after one night of sex. Neither is Bernd any prize worth crying about. He is quiet and rather whiny as underplayed by Broderup.

The entire brouhaha over the movie could be described as "Much Ado about Anuses." That is really what is at issue here and the only reason the movie is still playing.

The best thing about the movie is the sex. Having actors in all of their hairy, acne-scarred glory go at it with such abandon is certainly refreshing.

For the art house crowd, the movie contains many jump cuts between the story and what look like old black-and-white porno films. The reason for this is as mysterious as why we really need to see Peggy's entire proctology exam in such close-up detail. This movie contains many gratuitous scenes stuck in, seemingly only for shock value.

This movie, along with other controversial works ranging from "Lady Chatterley's Lover" to Robert Mapplethorpe, leaves one lauding the boldness of it while at the same time asking, "But is it really any good?"

Watching this movie is kind of like swallowing a nasty pill — you know it's good to be supporting First Amendment rights, but it doesn't really go down so well.

And for those who can't stand the fact that some of their student fees are helping to fund the showing of two grown men going at it on a large screen, I suggest simply staying away and being happy that you live in a country where mediocre movies of all kinds — from "The Mighty Ducks" to "Taxi zum Klo" — have a right to shown.

"Taxi zum Klo" will be shown tonight and Sunday at 9:15 and Saturday at 7 p.m.

Pitt makes good as lead in 'Legends of the Fall'

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

"Legends of the Fall" star Brad Pitt is Hollywood's newest homeboy, thanks to the resounding success of last fall's "Interview With the Vampire."

His performance as the bloodsucker Louis won wide critical praise and Pitt

Stab (Gordon Tootoosis), an American Indian scout loyal to Montana rancher William Lockley (Anthony Hopkins), a former Army colonel. Raising his three sons alone in the middle of the wild, Lockley is the epitome of the doting father — a pillar of strength and support for his boys, especially after his wife abandons him and returns east.

Tristan (Pitt), a loner, bonds with nature and relentlessly hunts the bear who tears up his arm as a boy. Brothers Alfred (Aidan Quinn) and Samuel (Henry "E.T." Thomas) are more culturally refined, though Alfred broods a bit too much and Samuel's a little too patriotic and

Thus far, Pitt's most memorable performances have been his most unobtrusive ones — the limbo-brained stoner with the Honey Bear bong in "True Romance" or the drawing, sugar-talking cowboy who teaches Geena Davis to be a lover and a robber in "Thelma & Louise."

With "Legends," a turbulent Western epic with a heavy dosage of melodrama and high-caliber talent, Pitt's dramatic talent finds yet another enabling outlet. He's become a capable leading man, able to carry a film from beginning to end. As in Robert Redford's "A River Runs Through It," Pitt is completely in tune with his character; whip-smart intelligence and humor gleam behind his surfer-dude good looks.

"Legends" is director Edward Zwick's second shot at a period piece; his last film was the resoundingly powerful Civil War drama "Glory." Hoping to duplicate that film's emotional wallop, he cranks up the sentimentality and angst, drowns us with a sweeping musical score and utilizes breathless cinematography.

Zwick was also the brains behind the oozing sap of TV's "thirtysomething."

The film is narrated by One naive.

Trouble rears its sneaky head in the Lockley homestead when Samuel returns from college with fiancée Susannah (Julia Ormond) in tow. Alfred is immediately gaga over the cultivated Susannah; Susannah is immediately gaga over the wild and woolly Tristan. It's a vicious circle that is to go around and around, even as "Legends" follows the brothers to World War I, where tragedy befalls one of them and rends the others apart.

"Legends" screenplay writers Susan Shilliday and Bill Wuttiff, adapting a novella by Jim Harrison, milk this weepy ménage à trois dry over the course of the film, but the bumpy stretches in the story line are repeatedly smoothed by the fine efforts of the excellent cast, most notably Pitt, Quinn and Ormond.

'Tale of Winter' ponders problematic love

Jonathon Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

For a real unusual and unexpected treat this weekend, check out Eric Rohmer's "A Tale of Winter" at the Bijou.

Rohmer ("Boyfriends and Girlfriends"), part of the original "French New Wave" filmmakers, is nearing 75 and still making movies. If this one is any indication, he is aging with grace and wisdom.

"A Tale of Winter" is about Félicie (Charlotte Véry), a young woman living in Paris, who is torn between three lovers. Maxence (Michel Volet-ti), who is stable and honest, owns a string of beauty shops. Loïc (Hervé Furic) is the sensitive thinker whom she loves, almost enough. And Charles (Frédéric Van Dren Driessche) is a man she hasn't seen or heard from in five years, yet her passion for him has never waned.

"A Tale of Winter" is the rare love story where the viewer doesn't know who will end up together at the end and, more importantly, who should. There is no clear-cut winner in the race for Félicie's heart. Charles would be, but the chances of Félicie seeing him again are very slight.

The film is full of questions about love, faith and resurrection. It contains no explosions, car chases or even music. The pace is not quick, but the film is never boring. What is highlighted are the words — the normal everyday conversations between people.

This film suggests everything "Sleepless in Seattle" might have been. The stories are set up similarly, but whereas "Seattle" came off as two-dimensional and predictable, "A Tale of Winter" is actually about real love.

"A Tale of Winter" will be shown tonight and Sunday at 7 and Saturday at 8:45 p.m.
