First presidential search meeting open to public

The UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee will meet for the first time tonight.

The meeting, which is open to the public, will be in room S401 of the John Pappajohn Business Administration Building at 5:30.

The 22-member committee will be instrumental in choosing the successor to UI President Hunter Rawlings, who will become chancellor of Cornell University on July 1. The committee will offer the names of four finalists for the presidency to the Iowa state Board of Regents, which will then name the new president.

The meeting agenda will cover mostly the administrative issues of initiating the search process and the committee's role in it.

Woman blames castration on sexual, physical abuse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Choking back tears, a woman who used a pair of scissors to castrate her sleeping husband testified Tuesday that he often forced her into sex and beat her repeatedly during their 17-year marriage.

Aurelia Macias, 37, who has reconciled with her husband, told jurors in her second trial that he sometimes threw meals she prepared in her face and pounded her with his fists.

Macias contends she was desperate after enduring years of physical, mental and sexual brutality. At her first trial, Macias testified she cut off her husband's testicles because he was about to rape her and she feared for her life.

Prosecutors say Macias acted in a jealous rage after her husband, Jaime Macias, danced with another woman earlier in the evening.

In her first trial, she was acquitted of mayhem and assault with a deadly weapon, but the jury deadlocked on a battery charge. Over her husband's objections, prosecutors decided to retry her on the lesser charge.

Bill aims for college time limit

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

Students who have difficulty breaking ties with the UI will have an incentive to graduate earlier, if an Iowa representative has his way this spring.

Rep. Robert Brunkhorst, R-Waverly, introduced House File 56 to the Iowa House of Representatives, which states that any undergraduate student at a regents institution or community college who earns an excess of 160 semester hours will be charged out-of-state tuition for the extra credits.

Most students need 124 hours to graduate. The exceptions are students with double majors — a bachelor of science and a bachelor of arts — who must obtain 154 hours. The bill was introduced Jan. 19.

Brunkhorst said the purpose of the bill is to anger the residents of Iowa, whose taxes foot the bill for much of the state's education costs.

"Our regents institutions are not bending to the demands of the consumers," Brunkhorst said. "This is an aim at getting the consumers mad."

"If this were to pass, students would have to have a pretty good idea when they come to college what they're going to major in."

Rep. Robert Brunkhorst,
R-Waverly

Many students are staying at college longer than necessary, while they decide on a major and Iowa residents foot the bill, Brunkhorst said.

"If this were to pass, students would have to have a pretty good idea when they come to college what they're going to major in," he said.

Brunkhorst said he preferred to focus on the dialogue the bill initiates instead of when the bill might be passed. This is the second time he has introduced the bill, which is currently buried in House committees.

The bill will be voted on by the House of

New GRE peeves some UI students

By 1997, UI students will have to take the new higher-priced computerized version of the Graduate Record Examination. However, the UI will not have the facilities to offer the test required for admission to graduate schools.

The GRE, which is taken annually by nearly 500,000 graduating college students nationwide, used to have a written format. Since it became a computerized test in 1991, possible flaws have been detected.

Officials at Kaplan Educational Center, a company that offers preparatory classes and study guides for the GRE, said the test was an easy target for would-be cheaters because the pool from which exam questions were taken was too small.

Until recently, students had the option of choosing between taking

Some facts about the GRE:

NEEDS 38 STATES' APPROVAL

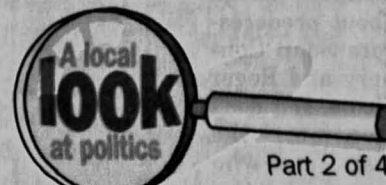

Budget amendment terms remain vague

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

Although the balanced-budget amendment survived the House of Representatives Thursday, a UI political science professor calls the measure merely a "smoke and mirrors trick."

The House approved the amendment that would prohibit the federal government from spending more money than it takes in. The vote tally was 300 to 132, which was 10 more than the two-thirds majority required to pass a constitutional amendment. The proposal will now move to the Senate in the next two weeks, and if passed, must then be ratified by at least 38 states.

"I think the possibility of (the amendment) being passed out of the Senate is better than it becoming ratified by 38 states," said UI political science Professor Arthur Miller. "For the Republicans, it's a smoke and mirrors trick. It's a political game to get Congress off the hook and pass the responsibility out to the states in order to put pressure on the governors and state legislators."

The amendment, intended to reduce the federal deficit, has received criticism from Democrats because it would entail spending cuts for entitlement programs. However, even with strict budget cuts, the budget would only be balanced from a congressional perspective: receipts equal spending.

"If they ratify (the amendment) and hold to it, they will eliminate the deficit as they recognize it,

Detective's testimony claims severe abuse

LOS ANGELES — With giant photos of a bruised Nicole Brown Simpson projected on a courtroom screen, a police detective told jurors Tuesday how Brown Simpson collapsed in his arms in the New Year's darkness of 1989, shaking and hysterical, crying, "He's going to kill me!"

"I said, 'Who's going to kill you?'" Detective John Edwards recalled.

"She said, 'O.J.'"

"I said, 'O.J. who? You mean the football player?'"

"She said, 'Yes, O.J. Simpson the football player.'"

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark was allowed to reopen her statement to jurors as punishment against the defense. She told jurors they would learn that key defense witness Mary Anne Gerch was a "known liar and a Simpson case groupie." Clark said prosecutors would also counter defense claims that O.J. Simpson suffered from debilitating arthritis and that his attorney was barred from a police interview.

Detective John Edwards testified that Nicole Brown Simpson told him that she was beaten by Simpson on Jan. 1, 1989.

Candy vendor closes shop with sweet memories

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Life is like a box of chocolates, and Bruce Sorrell might know it even better than Forrest Gump.

Tuesday evening, Sorrell closed the doors forever on his business, Candy Malts News, 127 E. Washington St., which opened three years ago.

DAY IN THE LIFE

On the way out of the store Tuesday, customers read a sign above the exit which read, "I appreciated your business and your friendship. I'll miss you all! Goodbye and thanks! Bruce."

As patrons laid greeting cards, newspapers and candy on the glass counter top, most seemed as nostalgic as the owner.

"Thanks for everything, Bruce," one woman said. "We'll miss you."

"Thank you, Candy," he answered, without an ounce of irony in his voice. "Take care."

Sorrell said he made the decision to close Candy Malts News in December when he could not afford to pay his rent, which was to be raised in the next lease. He said his is a common story among small-business owners across the country and especially locally.

"I have a lot of admiration for small-business owners because it's not easy to make it," he said. "It's much harder than I ever imagined. There's so much more to it than meets the eye."

Next door at 125 E. Washington St., Stewart Shoes is also closing due to the owner's retirement — leaving the first floor of the Jefferson Building empty except for Herten & Stocker Jewelers, 101 S. Dubuque St., on the corner.

"I think there are a number of factors that contribute to making it very difficult for the small independent business to survive — especially in downtown Iowa City," Sorrell said. He cited high rent, low traffic and lack of parking as problems.

Bruce Sorrell, owner of Candy Malts News, 127 E. Washington St., closed his doors for the final time Tuesday evening. After three years in business, Sorrell cited a rent increase as his reason for calling it quits.

Still, Candy Malts News leaves him with "1,000 anecdotes" about dealing with the public, he said. One customer in particular will stand out, he said.

"We had one person who was in all the time wanting to know if we had any free coffee for sale, and then when we told her we didn't, she'd ask if we had any free candy for sale," he said. "Sometimes (customers) can be a real pain, but that's also the best part. I've made a lot of friendships since I've been here."

Still straightening candy jars and displays, Sorrell seemed to make a special effort to wait on all of his customers personally Tuesday.

Almost everything in the store was 50 percent off, and it was full throughout the day, he said. Empty glass jars marked "chocolate-covered raisins" and "bridge mix" lined the walls. The magazine rack sat only half-full.

Sorrell said he plans to stay in Iowa City, but he does not know what the future holds in store for him.

"I haven't the slightest idea of what I'm going to do now," he said. "I think I'm just going to kind of kick back for a couple of weeks — recharge and then charge ahead."

Some might say there are few more depressing thoughts than watching a candy store close down, but Sorrell was introspective and somewhat optimistic the hour before his final closing.

"I have no regrets," he said. "I've loved every minute of it and hope to do it again. I probably will do it again."

Newest Bond reflects on 007 forerunners

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Pierce Brosnan, the latest James Bond, raves about predecessors Sean Connery and Roger Moore. But don't mention the man who snatched the character from him eight years ago.

"I never saw it," Brosnan quickly responded Tuesday, when asked about Timothy Dalton's interpretation of agent 007. Dalton got the role when Brosnan was tied up in the television series "Remington Steele."

Brosnan spoke at a news conference during a break from filming scenes in Puerto Rico for "Golden-Eye."

Brosnan said his portrayal of the British secret agent is "a little Sean Connery, a little Roger Moore and a lot of Pierce Brosnan."

Cincinnati conductor to harmonize with Boston Pops

BOSTON (AP) — Keith Lockhart, associate conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony and Cincinnati Pops orchestras, will succeed

John Williams as conductor of the renowned Boston Pops, The Boston Globe reported Tuesday.

Lockhart, 35, will conduct the opening of the Boston Pops season May 10, the newspaper said.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Inc., which runs the Pops, said no appointment had been made.

But spokeswoman Bernadette Horgan acknowledged that Lockhart was a top choice for the post. An announcement is expected in about two weeks, she said.

Lockhart would be the 20th conductor of the Pops, which has played popular and light classical music for 110 years.

Williams, a noted composer of theme music for films, retired as Pops conductor last year. He succeeded the late Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Pops for 50 years, in 1980.

Lockhart is touring Europe with the Cincinnati Symphony and did not return telephone messages to his hotel in Vienna.

Liberty Records chief steps down after health problems

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jimmy Bowen is retiring as head of Liberty Records after a career of producing records for stars ranging from Frank Sinatra to Garth Brooks.

The 57-year-old Bowen told the Nashville Banner he was retiring for health reasons. Doctors removed a cancerous tumor from Bowen's thyroid in December, EMI Records Group, parent company of Liberty and Patriot Records, said Tuesday.

Bowen produced Dean Martin's 1964 hit, "Everybody Loves Somebody"; and Sinatra's "That's Life," "Strangers in the Night" and "Softly As I Leave You."

He headed several record labels before taking over Capitol Record's Nashville label, which became Liberty Records in 1992. Liberty's roster currently includes such artists as Tanya Tucker, Willie Nelson and Billy Dean.

Actress Stone demands right to privacy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — From now on, Sharon Stone said, her private life is off-limits.

"My new policy is this: I have a life of my own. Just a little tiny one, but it's mine," Stone told the syndicated TV show "Entertainment Tonight" in an interview to be broadcast today.

The actress, whose latest movie, "The Quick and the Dead," opens Feb. 10, said her new policy is the result of being "incredibly stupid in public" in matters of personal relationships.

"You realize that, 'Oh, I might not be very good in this area. I just better work that out at home,'" she said.

TRIAL ARRANGED

Man says he didn't harass president

Associated Press

SIoux CITY, Iowa — Paul Cook, 34, of Sioux City denied in federal court Tuesday that he threatened President Clinton.

At the preliminary hearing, U.S. District Court Magistrate Paul Deck Jr. ruled probable cause existed to hold Cook for trial on the charge. He also ordered that Cook be given a psychiatric evaluation.

Threatening the president is a federal crime carrying a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a fine of $250,000.

During the hearing, Secret Service special agent Plez Transou testified that an anonymous call to Sioux City

"I don't even know Bill Clinton. I see him on television and understand that he's the president."

police alerted authorities to Cook's threats against the president.

Cook said he "wanted to meet President Clinton, on his own terms, inside the White House" during a planned trip to Washington, Transou testified. Cook had his bags packed and planned to leave around Feb. 3, Transou said.

When Assistant U.S. Attorney Willis Buell asked Cook if he had threatened President Clinton, Cook said no. "I don't even know Bill Clinton. I see him on television and understand that he's the president."

Transou also read a statement he attributed to Cook, "If Bill Clinton will deny me my constitutional rights of freedom of religion, truth, justice and my liberty, he will be shot for treason by a military firing squad according to due process."

Transou also testified that Cook identified himself as the Antichrist, at various times during his life thought he was Hitler, Jesus Christ and Ricky Nelson's son and now carries a crystal ball for consultation.

PUBLIC SIDETRACKS PROCEDURE

Housing decision put on back burner

Tom Schoenberg
and Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

After hearing the public's concerns about a proposal to use land for low-income housing, the Iowa City City Council voted unanimously to send the proposal back to the Planning and Zoning Committee for re-evaluation Tuesday night.

The 4-acre tract of land, located east of Harlocke Street and north of Highway 1 West, has been proposed for use in low-density single-family residential housing. Although the Council has been deliberating on the project for some time, it has yet to come to a decision because of the general interest of the public.

The public expressed concern that the project is being rushed and that environmental hazards, such as waste disposal and traffic congestion, had not been fully investigated.

Councilor Jim Throgmorton proposed that the city conduct a traffic count of all local streets in order to speculate what traffic would be like on Harlocke Street if the project is approved.

"We would have a sense of where a street like Harlocke fits," he said. "We would have something to compare it to."

Although Harlocke Street residents expressed concern about the dangers of heavy traffic, Councilor Naomi Novick said the amount of traffic on a street wouldn't necessarily make it a dangerous place. Rather, she said, the issue is one of safe drivers.

"It isn't the numbers that make it safe," Novick said. "It's safe drivers."

Throgmorton said the large number of people involved in the project has made it difficult for the Council to reach a solution.

"There are so many parties involved that it's hard to come to an agreement," he said.

Although the project has been sent back to the Planning and Zoning Committee, Iowa City Mayor Susan Horowitz said the Council must make a decision in the near future, regardless of whether all parties involved are satisfied.

"At some point, the Council has to make a decision, even though some members may not like the decision," she said.

FORUMS ON STUDENT ATHLETICS PROPOSED

Gender equity gains attention

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The inequality of funding for men's and women's athletics dominated discussion at the UI Faculty Council meeting Tuesday.

Funding for women's athletic programs falls far behind that of men's programs on a national level as well as at the UI, said Christine Grant, an associate professor of sports, health, leisure and physical studies.

Citing National Collegiate Athletic Association gender equity statistics from 1992, Grant said 80 percent of athletic programs' funds are spent on men's programs.

Statistics also showed men's athletic programs received 72 percent of available scholarship money. Grant said she is conducting a study about how athletic funding is split between men's and women's athletics at the UI. She said UI female athletes are getting more money than the national average.

Grant also cited statistics showing that 62 percent of Division 1A schools with large football programs have an annual deficit of $1 million. Grant said she was concerned that the effort to balance budgets around these expensive football programs would eclipse issues of gender equity.

"We are fearful that gender equality will go by the wayside when schools are trying to balance budgets," she said.

Private fund raising for athletics is a large part of both men's and women's athletics, but men are getting far more funding than women, Grant said.

"Women's athletics get $400,000 a year through private funding. That is to be compared with $4 million for the men," Grant said. "This is a direct result of a hundred years of promotion of men's programs by the university."

Associate athletic director Fred Mims proposed a series of forums to involve coaches, athletic administrators, faculty members, students and student athletes. The forums would allow communication among the groups about the issues surrounding student athletes, he said.

One specific issue addressed in the forums would be the feeling among some nonathlete students that student athletes get preferential treatment at the UI.

"Students sometimes feel that student athletes get things that regular students don't get," Mims said. "With open communication, some of these perceptions can easily be put to rest."

The forums, which would include video presentations, may begin as soon as spring, Mims said. UI athletic coaches would be particularly targeted for participation, he said.

"Coaches have a unique perspective on the situation of the student athlete," Mims said. "All the coaches will have a chance to participate, not only the most notable ones."

EDITOR WANTED

Iowa City's morning newspaper is also Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 50 young professionals, an editorial budget of more than $200,000 and circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 1995 and ending May 31, 1996.

The editor of the DI must have strong journalistic abilities and dedication, as well as skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily such factors as scholarship, previous news writing and editing experience (including work at the DI or another daily newspaper), and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate degree program at the University of Iowa. Deadline for the candidate's submission of completed applications and supporting materials is noon, Friday, February 24, 1995.

Computerized GRE faces criticism

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The new computerized version of the Graduate Record Examination is more expensive than the old written format, is available at fewer locations and may have major security bugs, according to a national test preparation service.

The computerized GRE has been criticized as faulty and an easy target for cheaters, since it draws from a small pool of questions in the computer's memory, according to officials at Kaplan Test Preparation, a company that offers students preparation courses and guides for the GRE.

Educational Testing Services, located in Princeton, N.J., administers the GRE, which is required for admission to graduate schools. The written version of the test will be phased out and replaced with the computerized version by 1997, said Tom Ewing, a spokesman for the testing service.

The computerized GRE, which costs $40 to $96 more than the written version, has been at the center of controversy over the past few months.

Criticism of the test has revolved around the fact that questions used on the computer tests are "recycled" and can reappear on later tests, something not done on the written version.

Theoretically, test-takers could memorize test questions and share them with friends who might see the same questions on a later test.

In the fall, in an attempt to prove the potential for cheating on the computerized GRE, Kaplan sent people to take the test and try to memorize exam questions.

The undercover test-takers memorized as many questions as they could and reported back to Kaplan. Kaplan then was able to compile a sample GRE test which contained 80 percent of the types of questions found on the official computer-based test.

Kaplan presented the sample test to Educational Testing Services, and the ensuing battle that has raged for the past few months equaled nothing short of a cat fight, complete with lawsuits and name-calling.

After taking the computerized test off-line for a week in late December to examine the security problems exposed by Kaplan, Educational Testing Services sued Kaplan for copyright infringement, saying Kaplan stole the test questions.

Although Kaplan had taken the results of its investigation to Educational Testing Services and placed the original copy of the sample test in a locked vault, the testing service insists Kaplan was "out to get" the GRE, Ewing said.

"For the average student, the question of stealing the answers by memorization isn't an issue," he said. "Kaplan did (the investigation) with the sole intention of shutting down the test."

The small pool of test questions in the computer's memory may make cheating easier and is a cause for concern, said James Jakobsen, an associate dean for the UI Graduate College.

"It's important that GRE take steps to prevent cheating," he said. "I hope they increase the pool of questions so students can't cheat."

The lawsuit by Educational Testing Services was a ploy to cover up embarrassment over the investigation's findings, said Melissa Mack, a Kaplan spokeswoman.

"The sole purpose of this investigation was to bring our findings to ETS in order to help make an argument about the security of the test," Mack said.

Educational Testing Services is attempting to blame someone for the alleged flaws in the test, she said.

"Clearly, (ETS) had a test that was not secure," Mack said. "Suing us is really like shooting the messenger."

Educational Testing Services changed its pool of GRE test questions too infrequently, a practice Mack said practically invites cheating.

"The last question pool was being changed every six months," Mack said. "There's no way to avoid students cheating."

Educational Testing Services has not revealed the size of the new question pool it has created.

Sylvan Learning Centers are under contract with Educational Testing Services to administer the computerized tests; the nearest center is in Cedar Rapids.

Having the centers as part of the GRE test process is an indicator that profit is the motive driving the testing service, Mack said.

"They've invested tens of millions of dollars in creating this test," Mack said. "ETS has a real financial interest in making sure this test flies."

Educational Testing Services, on the other hand, said financial gain was not a factor in the decision to computerize the test.

"This venture has cost us a lot of money," Ewing said. "We haven't broke even on this project yet."

MEASURE INSPIRES 3-HOUR DEBATE

Notification bill set for House vote

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A legislative committee Tuesday refused all efforts to ease a bill requiring a young girl notify a parent before getting an abortion.

After an emotional three-hour battle over abortion rights, the House Human Resources Committee approved the parental notification bill on a 13-8 vote.

The vote sends the issue to the full House for debate. Leaders said they would schedule that for next week. It's virtually certain to pass the Republican-dominated House, but differences with a Senate-passed ver-child's health."

But critics said the requirement would leave many young girls too frightened to talk to a parent and force them into back-alley abortions or suicide.

"There are some girls who are so traumatized, they can't go to their families," said Rep. Mona Martin, R-Davenport.

Rep. Dick Myers, D-Coralville, said parental involvement is a laudable goal, but legislators have to face reality.

"Every family is not a version of 'Ozzie and Harriet,' or 'The Brady Bunch,'" Myers said.

Myers said the Legislature needs to worry most of all about the health of young women and less about their own biases on abortion.

Rep. Chuck Hurley, R-Fayette, dismissed that view.

"If we really cared about the trauma of pregnant minors, we would be talking about getting rid of abortion," Hurley said.

"We are seeing government intrusion into the lives of the young men and women of this state," said Rep. Michael Moreland, D-Ottumwa.

With Republicans running the House 64-36 and generally opposing abortion, the parental notification bill is almost certain to be approved there.

The Senate has passed a sharply different version that allows other close relatives to be notified instead of a parent.

Senate leaders have sent mixed signals as to whether they are willing to negotiate a final version or will insist on theirs, a move that could bring gridlock and lead to nothing being approved.

"If we really cared about the trauma of pregnant minors, we would be talking about getting rid of abortion."

Rep. Chuck Hurley,

sion leave the issue's future in doubt.

The bill approved by the House committee requires that at least one parent be notified before a minor has an abortion.

The only way to avoid that notification would be allowing a judge to waive the requirement in cases where there are troubled families and a girl was frightened to notify her parent.

"This is a parent's right to know," insisted Rep. Dan Boddicker, R-Tipton, the bill's main supporter. "It's parents' involvement with their

There must be some way to avoid doing the same thing for the next forty years.

Life's been pretty good so far. You've kept moving—taken all the right steps along the way (for the most part). And now you're ready for the biggest step.

You'll be getting your degree from a top school. You're about to find a great job.

The question is: which job? And will it have the potential to interest you for a whole career?

You've probably heard the story of the job applicant who said he was a shoe salesman with fifteen years experience. "No," corrected the recruiter interviewing him, "you've had six months experience thirty times." Isn't there some way to keep challenging yourself in new and different areas?

Andersen Consulting offers you the opportunity to work on a variety of projects—with clients in a wide range of industries.

We are the leader in helping organizations apply information technology to their business advantage. Every hour of every business day, we implement a solution to help one of our more than 5,000 clients worldwide.

What makes that possible is the quality of our people. And the quality of our training. We're known for both.

Because business and technology are ever-changing, we see training as a continuing process. And our $123-million Center for Professional Education in St. Charles, Illinois, is just one measure of our commitment. We train you for a career—not just a job.

Does the idea of forty years of knowing exactly what you'll be doing each week scare you? Then don't settle for that. Demand challenge and variety. Come talk to us. And find out more about a career with Andersen Consulting.

A smashing success

UI sophomore Travis Anderson practices his racquetball game Tuesday at The Field House. The new year has sparked renewed interest in the sport. Jody Scott, a UI freshman and clerical staff member at The Field House, has noticed a definite increase in court use lately. The 21 racquetball courts were booked solid Tuesday afternoon and evening.

College freshmen tend toward apathy

Tim Howe
The Daily Iowan

Their activist predecessors of the 1960s marched through the streets in storms of political protest, but today's college freshmen are indifferent to Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, President Clinton and most other players in the power game of Washington politics, according to a recent survey.

The survey, done by the Higher Education Research Institute at the University of California at Los Angeles, said today's college freshmen are less interested and less involved in politics than any other class surveyed since the study began 29 years ago.

The survey indicates that because they possess little political knowledge, most freshmen may never know the difference between the "Middle Class Bill of Rights" and the first 10 amendments to the Constitution. No, Ross Perot isn't president, and the Whig Party disappeared sometime during the 19th century.

UI political science Professor Arthur Miller said the lack of interest and involvement among students is indicative of larger trends.

"My feeling is that the decline in interest in politics and willingness to be involved is certainly a reflection of the past 20 years in the general public," Miller said.

He said the apathy can be attributed to several factors, including government scandals; unfulfilled campaign promises; and public perception of an unfair, irresponsible government.

According to the survey — based on responses from 238,000 freshmen entering a national sample of 461 two- and four-year colleges and universities — an all-time low of 16 percent of the freshmen said they frequently "discuss politics," while only 32 percent called "keeping up with political affairs" important.

"I couldn't care less about politics right now," UI freshman Jill Hetland said. "I've never had an interest in it and don't plan to in the future."

More needs to be done to encourage young people to vote and become involved with the political system, UI freshman Andrea Bernardi said.

"I feel they're not encouraged, especially on a college campus," she said. "I would probably have voted if I were back home with my family (in Illinois)."

Recent political scandals have made students cynical about government and unwilling to get involved, Graduate student Julian Allison said.

"I think there's a general distrust for government, even more so beginning with the Reagan administration," he said. "Today, students see politicians as clowns. ... It's like a side show."

UI professors are doing their best to remedy the situation, said Mike Remer, a UI freshman majoring in business.

"The professors are pushing politics more now," he said. "My professors are asking us to all read the papers daily, and all of my classes seem to be based on recent world events. Let's hope it helps."

UI STUDY REPORTS FIRST RESULTS

Bone mass peaks during teen years

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

Preliminary results from a UI study indicate maximum bone development occurs in the late teens, suggesting that the prevention of bone fractures as a person grows older should be given attention earlier in life.

Healthy children between the ages of 8 and 18 were studied, said Dr. Janet Schlechte, the principle investigator of the study.

"Bone density is a major part of bone strength," Schlechte said. "What we hope to determine is what is important in reaching peak bone mass."

Factors such as calcium, the general diet and exercise may be major contributors to bone mass, Schlechte said.

Peak bone mass had been thought to occur in a person's 20s or 30s, which would give an individual more time to increase bone mass. But the study showed after age 17 or 18, both males and females added no more bone mass.

Marta Tullis, a research nurse working with Schlechte, said counseling parents on how to feed their children and keeping children active is important to healthy bones.

"It's very important to have a good diet and exercise to build and maintain strong bones," Tullis said. "You can't wait until they're a teen-ager to say maybe they should be eating right."

The study has particular concerns for women, who generally have a lower bone mass than men, Tullis said. Osteoporosis, a disease that weakens the bones, affects 6 million Americans a year. Strenuous exercise and lack of nutrients are factors that may lead women to develop the disease.

"Osteoporosis is something that hits all of us as we get older," Tullis said. "Women tend to experience it earlier."

Although Schlechte said there is no direct connection between the study's findings and osteoporosis, healthy bones are still important in preventing the disease.

"If an individual starts with a higher bone mass at the age of 17 or 18, perhaps it is less likely developing significant osteoporosis," Schlechte said.

New developments in radiation scanning techniques to measure bone content allow researchers to study premature bone loss directly, Tullis said. The new level of radiation is safer and lower. Previously, the level of radiation was too dangerous.

"We can look at different sites in the body," Tullis said. "It's safer for patients."

Ecuador calls truce in border dispute

Monte Hayes
Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador — Ecuador announced a cease-fire Tuesday to end border clashes with Peru over a remote jungle region, but Peru kept sending in troops and refused to confirm any agreement had been reached.

No fighting was reported Tuesday. Ecuador's armed forces said several skirmishes erupted Monday, wounding one Ecuadorian soldier.

More Peruvian troops — including crack counterinsurgency forces — traveled toward the border by riverboat and trucks, even as diplomats gave mixed signals about whether Peru would accept the cease-fire, which Ecuador said took effect at noon.

In Lima, Rosa Jimenez, a Foreign Ministry press official, said Peru had not yet accepted the truce. But Vicente Rojas, Peru's acting ambassador in Quito, overrode Jimenez's comments, saying Peru had made no "official statement" on the cease-fire.

Ecuador said the truce was reached through the mediation of the United States, Argentina, Brazil and Chile, guarantors of a 1942 treaty that was supposed to define the border.

Diplomats from those four countries met Tuesday in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and representatives from Ecuador and Peru were expected later.

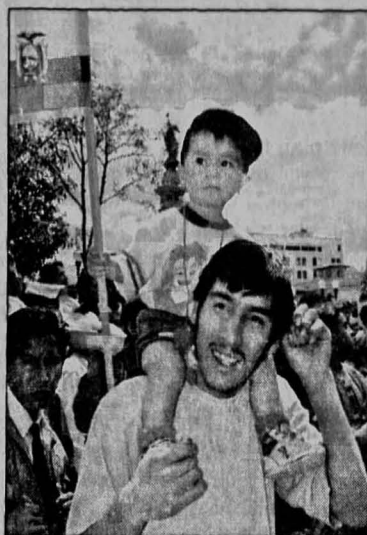

Ecuadorian President Sixto Duran-Ballen warned that Ecuador would boycott the talks if there was no unconditional cease-fire.

Yet Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori, who is up for re-election in April, may be concerned that any show of weakness could undermine his re-election chances.

"Fujimori can only produce a cease-fire if he can convince the population that Peru has effectively recovered some ground," political analyst Mirko Laurer said in Lima.

Peruvian media reported that Peru — with a much bigger and better equipped military — continued reinforcing the border. Among those dispatched were jungle warfare experts who have been fighting guerrillas and drug traffickers in the Huallaga Valley.

The 50-mile section of unmarked border was left over from a 1941 war lost by Ecuador, which was forced to give up its claim to a swath of jungle that would have doubled its Colorado-sized territory.

Associated Press

A man carries his child and the Ecuadorian flag during a demonstration in the streets of Quito, Ecuador, Tuesday.

Six deaths have been confirmed since fighting began last week, fueled by nationalistic passions on both sides.

But news reports say at least 30 Peruvian and Ecuadorian soldiers have died in the clashes in the Cenepa River region 220 miles southeast of Quito.

'SUICIDE' GENE WORRIES DOCTORS

Scientists home in on AIDS vaccine

Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Researchers searching for a safe AIDS vaccine said Tuesday they have created one with a built-in time bomb — a gene that will cleanse the HIV virus from the body on cue.

Scientists believe the most effective AIDS vaccine is likely to be a live virus, which will prime the body to mount a spirited reaction to HIV. Many, though, worry about giving healthy people even a weakened form of the virus, since it might cause cancer, immune suppression or even AIDS.

So now a team from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases has come up with a novel strategy: a live but weakened HIV virus that can be killed off once it does its job.

A team headed by Dr. Kuan-Teh Jeang created a form of the virus that carries an extra gene taken from the herpes virus. Because of this gene, cells that become infected with the HIV virus can be selectively destroyed with Ganciclovir, a widely available herpes medicine.

"We attempted to improve the safety of an HIV vaccine using a suicide gene," said Dr. Stephen Smith, who presented the results at an AIDS meeting sponsored by the American Society for Microbiology.

Smith said the approach looks promising in the test tube. But much more testing, including extensive use on monkeys, will be necessary before it can be tried on people. He said human studies are at least three years away.

"It's a terrifically imaginative approach and one we need to follow closely," commented Dr. William Paul, director of the U.S. Office of AIDS Research.

While other experts at the conference found the idea intriguing, some were skeptical.

Dr. Ronald Desrosiers of the New England Regional Primate Center is one of the country's leading advocates of a live AIDS vaccine. He is developing versions that will produce a chronic infection but not sickness because one or more of the genes have been crippled.

Desrosiers said he doubts the suicide gene will work. HIV is likely to mutate quickly inside the body and lose the extra gene, thereby making it unkillable, he contends.

"When the virus has a gene that it doesn't need, it will just spit it out," Desrosiers said.

Dr. Lawrence Corey of the University of Washington, a herpes expert, raised the possibility the vaccine might not work in people who already have herpes. He worried that the body might kill off an HIV virus that carries a herpes gene before it can trigger an immune response.

In testing so far, Smith said, researchers have shown that Ganciclovir can destroy the virus-infected blood cells if given quickly after the cells are exposed. But within 48 hours, the virus has already begun to shed its extra herpes gene through mutation.

He said the next step is to re-engineer the virus, putting the extra gene in a spot that is less likely to be dropped through random mutation.

Clinton forges new fiscal plan for Mexico

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Facing unyielding opposition in Congress, President Clinton scrapped a $40 billion rescue plan for Mexico Tuesday and hurriedly assembled a substitute package combining U.S. money with international aid. "We cannot risk further delay," Clinton said.

The proposal was a gamble for Clinton, drawing on money that usually would be used to defend the value of the U.S. dollar. It also means he shoulders all the political risk of supporting Mexico's nose-diving peso rather than sharing it with Congress.

"This is in the interest of America, contrary to what some have said," Clinton asserted, answering criticism that his proposals amount to a bailout for U.S. banks and Wall Street investors with millions tied up in Mexican bonds.

The new plan offers direct loans of up to $20 billion from Washington — and $27.8 billion from international agencies — to help Mexico through its economic crisis. It replaces a proposed $40 billion loan guarantee program that would have made the United States, in effect, a co-signer for Mexico's borrowing.

Unlike Clinton's earlier plan, the new version does not require congressional approval. The Treasury Department said repayment of any U.S. loans would be guaranteed by revenue from Mexican oil exports.

Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Texas, complained that Clinton "bypassed Congress and the American people.

... The American taxpayer is still on the hook if Mexico defaults."

And at the Senate Banking Committee, the chairman, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said he thought "people will find it a bit disquieting" to have the loan guarantee package dropped.

Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot told the committee that Clinton's new plan "isn't going to work either." He said the Mexican government should work out terms with its creditors without the intervention of the United States.

Clinton adopted his new approach after an emergency White House meeting with Republican and Democratic leaders of Congress. They grimly told him it would be weeks — if ever — before Congress might approve a loan guarantee program.

The retreat was a stinging political setback both for Clinton and for the GOP Congress, whose leaders supported the politically unpopular bailout plan but were unable to successfully sell it. Some Republicans bitterly complained that Clinton failed to rally Democrats.

Clinton had argued that thousands of American jobs and billions of dollars of American exports depend on the stability of Mexico's economy. Further, he cited a risk that financial instability would spread through Latin America and that the problem of illegal immigration to the United States would worsen.

The latest version was the administration's fourth effort to help Mexico since the crisis started Dec. 20 with the collapse of the peso.

Station fires forecaster for racist remark

DETROIT (AP) — A white TV meteorologist was fired for some on-air banter in which she likened a gorilla to a black man.

WDIV dismissed Michelle Leigh on Monday, a day after the remark aired.

Leigh, 27, a weekend weather forecaster at the station since July, apologized but said she believed her punishment was too severe.

"My mouth got ahead of my brain," she said.

Near the end of Sunday's 6 p.m. newscast, WDIV ran a preview for a report about "most eligible bachelors." In the preview, a black woman said she preferred "chocolate-skinned" men.

That was followed by a report on a birthday party for a 415-pound gorilla at a zoo. Then Leigh turned to anchors Emery King and Asha Blake and asked, "Does that qualify as chocolate-skinned?"

King, who is black, and Blake, whose family is from India, looked at Leigh in silence for a few seconds, then signed off.

"We felt she crossed the line," Alan Frank, vice president and station manager, said in announcing Leigh's firing. "Her comments last night violated our policies, and clearly, they're against our beliefs."

Leigh said she meant no harm and was trying to improvise on live television.

Texas performs double execution

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Eighty-eight minutes and a clean sheet separated the deaths of two killers given lethal injections in Texas' first multiple execution in 44 years.

Clifton Russell, condemned for the 1979 robbery-slaying of an air traffic controller in Abilene, was executed first early Tuesday. He had been on death row for 15 years.

"I would like to thank my friends and family for sticking with me through all of this," he said in his final statement. "I would like to encourage my brothers to continue to run the race. I thank my father in heaven for the grace that he's granted me."

Corrections officials removed Russell's body from the death chamber, replaced needles and tubes used for his injection, changed the sheet on a gurney bolted to the floor and waited for Willie Williams to be driven 15 miles to the death chamber.

Williams, convicted in the 1980 murder-robbery of a Houston convenience store clerk, had spent 14 years on death row.

"What is remarkable about this situation is not that two people were executed this evening, but that for a combined 29 years the people of the state of Texas were waiting for justice to be done," said Drew Durham, an assistant attorney general.

Texas resumed capital punishment in 1982 and has executed 89 men — more, by far, than any other state.

Texas officials said the double execution was a coincidence; judges set execution dates. Russell was executed first because he arrived on death row first.

Super Bowl scores paltry Nielsen rating

NEW YORK (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers' rout of the San Diego Chargers drew one of the smallest TV audiences in Super Bowl history.

About 39 million households tuned in to the 49-26 victory Sunday on ABC for a 41.3 rating and a 63 share, Nielsen Media Research said Tuesday.

Of 29 Super Bowls, only seven have drawn lower ratings.

Each ratings point equals 1 percent of the estimated 95.4 million TV homes in the United States, or about 954,000 households.

The highest-rated Super Bowl was in 1982, when San Francisco defeated Cincinnati in a game that gave CBS a 49.1 rating. The lowest-rated Super Bowl was the first, in 1967, when CBS and NBC both broadcast the game. CBS got a 22.6 rating, and NBC got an 18.5 rating.

Author slaps Grisham with plagiarism lawsuit

Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A lawyer who represented executed serial killer Ted Bundy wrote a book about it is suing best-selling novelist John Grisham for copyright infringement, claiming "The Chamber" — Grisham's latest work — "was copied largely" from her book.

The lawyer representing both Grisham and his publisher, Doubleday, on Tuesday called the lawsuit by attorney-author Polly Nelson "frivolous" and "a hustle."

Nelson, who wrote "Defending the Devil: My Story as Ted Bundy's Last Lawyer," bolstered her federal court claim with a lengthy list of "striking similarities" in the two books.

"Each tells exactly the same story: the tale of a new lawyer in an establishment law firm who, to meet her or his own personal needs, volunteers to take on the representation of the most notorious killer on death row," Nelson's lawyer, Patricia Douglass, wrote in a letter to Doubleday.

"The inmate faces execution within a few weeks ... (the two lawyers) must also contend with state politics; the politics of her or his law firm; a restless, marginally cooperative client unwilling or unable to inspire a sympathetic response," Douglass wrote.

Grisham

Bundy, a law school dropout, confessed to the gruesome killings of 23 women in four states. He was executed in the electric chair six years ago in Florida, where Bob Martinez, governor at the time, had commented, "If there's ever been anyone on Florida's death row that deserved the electric chair, Ted Bundy was that individual."

"The Chamber" 's fictional protagonist is a Ku Klux Klan member in Mississippi who is convicted — 20 years after the event — of bombing the law offices of a Jewish civil rights activist. The story involves a young lawyer who tries to save him from the gas chamber.

"Mr. Grisham must have seen and studied Ms. Nelson's manuscript of 'The Devil' before completing 'The Chamber,'" Douglass said in the letter to Doubleday, three weeks before filing suit.

"There is no other rational explanation for the striking similarities in plot, character and description. ... We have discovered Polly Nelson's literary 'fingerprints' throughout 'The Chamber' in Mr. Grisham's use of her distinctive words and phrases," she wrote.

Attorney Bruce Sanford, who represents Grisham and Doubleday, said in an interview Tuesday, "It's such a frivolous lawsuit that Doubleday will seek attorney fees as well as dismissal."

The suit was filed Jan. 20 in U.S. District Court in Washington, where Nelson practices law. The case was assigned to U.S. District Judge Royce Lamberth.

administers the exam.

The cancellation of the written exam made taking the GRE an inconvenience for UI students since the UI does not have the computer facilities to offer the computerized version, said James Jakobsen, associate dean for the UI Graduate College.

The computerized GRE, very different from its written counterpart, is a computer-adaptive test, meaning its level of difficulty adapts to the skill level of the student being tested. The test doesn't favor certain students, said Tom Ewing, an Educational Testing Service spokesman.

"I wouldn't say the test favors the student in general, but it does tailor the test to the student's abilities," he said. "Let's say if you're smarter than I am and I answer the first few questions wrong and you get them right, your questions get more difficult very quickly. It adapts back and forth depending on how you answer the first few questions."

The computer monitors the test-taker's score during the exam. If the person gets the first few questions wrong, the computer increases the test's level of difficulty more slowly than it would if the person had answered the questions correctly.

When taking the computerized test, students need to adapt to the different form, Jakobsen said.

"A lot of it depends on whether or not the student is familiar with the computer and comfortable with reading material off a computer screen," he said.

Reaction from UI students to the computerized version has been overwhelmingly adverse, said Criss Gilbert, coordinator of testing programs at the UI Evaluation and Examination Service.

"Students I've seen have reacted negatively in that you can't back up and change answers to questions; the test keeps going," he said. "It bothers people that they can't go back and fix mistakes."

Even with the problems and controversy surrounding the computerized version, Gilbert said some people may prefer the new format.

"I know that there are people out there who are real pleased with it," he said. "It does have the convenience that students can come in at any time."

Although the computerized version is administered at 75 percent fewer locations than the written version, students can make appointments to take the test at their convenience. Dates for the written version are scheduled periodically throughout the year.

The computerized test is offered at only two sites in Iowa — Sylvan Learning Centers in Cedar Rapids and Des Moines. Sylvan has a contract with Educational Testing Service to administer the computerized test.

The Cedar Rapids center, the nearest testing site to the UI, can accommodate up to seven students per test session and can have up to three sessions a day, according to a Sylvan spokesperson.

The UI can accommodate almost 23 times that number of students for the written exam, Gilbert said.

During the mayhem of GRE testing sessions, hundreds take the GRE on an average test day at the UI, he added.

"We have two testing centers — Van Allen Hall and Phillips Hall. We use all the lecture halls and all the classrooms in whichever building we're using," Gilbert said. "Our average is between 450 to 500 people, but we've gone as high as 600."

He said Educational Testing Service rejected an offer from the UI to buy and install computers and software for a testing center.

"I got the cold shoulder from ETS; they said, 'No, you have a Sylvan center 25 miles away,'" Gilbert said. "They said we didn't need one."

Some UI students may be upset about next Saturday, the date a written test was supposed to take place, he said.

"I think some people expect to show up next Saturday and take the test," he said. "There have been people who have called me over the months saying they plan to take the February written test but can't find it on the schedule. Then they find out it's been canceled."

of-state students pay full tuition," he said.

The other two-thirds of in-state students' tuition is funded by taxpayers and federal grants.

Communication is the core of the UI's advising program, said Juliet Kaufmann, director of the UI Undergraduate Academic Advising Center.

Students and advisers work closely in the center to find the most suitable courses for students, she said. Kaufmann said accumulating fewer than 160 credits is difficult for some students.

track," said regent Tom Collins.

Collins, who is chairman of a regents committee researching the possibility of a four-year track, said the committee is looking at all ways to accomplish this goal.

"I'm sure what (Rep. Brunkhorst) is trying to do is encourage students to follow the four-year track," Collins said.

The role of Iowa residents in the education of university students was reiterated by Collins.

"An in-state student pays one-third of the tuition cost, whereas out-

Iowa Sen. Mary Neuhouser, D-Iowa City, voted for the bill but said the possibility that the definition of "parent" may be changed in the House and limited to "mother or father" is a concern.

"If the House narrows the definition of 'parent' too much, it is possible there will be no bill at all," she said. "I couldn't support it."

Neuhouser said the bill needs to be adjusted with regard to the videotape.

round for the prosecution's double-murder case against one of the nation's most famous athletes.

He described Brown Simpson's beaten face, cut left lip and bruised forehead and told jurors how Simpson drove off in his blue Bentley after being told he would be arrested.

Brown Simpson told the officer the beating was part of a fight that started when Simpson had sex with another woman in their home, then came to Brown Simpson's bed.

"She said there was two other women living in the house and that O.J. Simpson had sex with one of them prior to going to bed that night with her," Edwards said, adding that he asked for no names.

Simpson appeared surprised by Edwards' revelation, laughing and shaking his head. In cross-examination, Johnnie Cochran Jr. provided the information that a maid and a nanny lived at the Simpsons' house.

Detective Mike Farrell, who investigated the case days later, testified that Simpson expressed regret and was "really remorseful."

As Farrell left the stand, Simpson was heard to mumble, "Thanks for being honest."

Moments before the first witnesses were called, Deputy District

Attorney Marcia Clark was granted an unprecedented opportunity to reopen her statement to jurors so she could comment on evidence belatedly disclosed by the defense.

She used the time to berate a key defense witness, calling her "a known liar and a Simpson case groupie."

The witness, Mary Anne Gerchias, told the defense she saw four men driving away from the Brentwood neighborhood late June 12, the night Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were murdered. But Clark said testimony will show Gerchias told her friend, Sheila Carter, that she wasn't in Brentwood that night and "was glad because there had been murders committed there the night before."

"Ms. Gerchias was obsessed with this case," Clark said. She wanted "every Enquirer, every Star and every tabloid pertaining to this case, anything that talked about the Simpson case."

Clark also promised jurors the prosecution would show Simpson was not denied an attorney in an initial police interview and that he was fit enough to make an exercise video two weeks before the killings, contradicting his lawyers' claim that he suffers from debilitating arthritis.

"There are legitimate educational reasons for a student to be classified as an undergraduate and have what some might think of as excessive hours."

"Special nondegree students may already hold a bachelor's or master's degree," she said. "Many of them have to take special courses to prepare them for graduate programs."

abortion should not be the sole responsibility of the Legislature.

"There are better ways to go about it," she said. "Parents should address sex issues early on. In terms of education, they need to know the facts about abstinence and birth control — how not to get pregnant — and videos should be included in health-ed classes in the ninth grade."

The bill will be debated in the full House next week and the GOP body is expected to pass it. However, Iowa Sen. Bob Dvorsky, D-Coralville, said it is unlikely the new bill will get by the Senate. Dvorsky voted against the bill.

Representatives if passed in the House Education subcommittee and then the House Education Committee, which has until March 17 to act on it. If the bill passes through the House, it will follow the same procedure in the Senate. The Senate Education Committee will have until April 7 to deliberate the bill.

Brunkhorst's other goals for the bill are to attack the issues of Teaching Assistants who speak English poorly, weak advising which results in students not knowing what courses to take and professors who spend too much time researching and not enough time teaching.

"This bill is trying to force the regents institutions to get teachers teaching and advisers advising," he said.

The bill has not escaped the attention of the Iowa state Board of Regents, which has been working toward shortening students' careers at the three state universities.

"I think (the bill) addresses the overall situation we're looking into, which is how to get as many students as possible on a four-year

track," said regent Tom Collins.

Collins, who is chairman of a regents committee researching the possibility of a four-year track, said the committee is looking at all ways to accomplish this goal.

"I'm sure what (Rep. Brunkhorst) is trying to do is encourage students to follow the four-year track," Collins said.

City, said she will not vote for the bill because regulating communication between parents and children is not the responsibility of the federal government.

"I am really opposed to the bill," Mascher said. "I feel strongly about not legislating parenting. Of course I want girls to talk to their parents, and counselors encourage girls to do so, but passing the bill would be like victimizing them twice."

Parental notification will only hurt those it is meant to protect, she said.

"There are two groups of girls who would be affected by the bill: girls that are scared to death of their parents and those that are really close to their parents and don't want to disappoint them," Mascher said.

The bill also requires young women to view a videotape of alternatives to abortion, such as adoption or keeping the child. Mascher said the videotape is a point of contention for her.

"I'm concerned that there are no provisions for males," she said. "They are not required to watch the videos. They need to be held accountable; the girls didn't get pregnant by themselves. They need to hear loud and clear that they are responsible."

Iowa Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-

Iowa City, said she would never support the parental notification bill because it is an issue of the government legislating control over women's bodies.

"The core basis of parental notification is to control women; that is for the right wing," she said. "They don't want us to be feminists, they don't want us to have equal wages, they want to keep us barefoot and pregnant."

Doderer said parents have the right to know if their daughter is planning to have an abortion, but it isn't the government's place to force them to divulge that information.

"Eighty-five percent of teens who recession, Pogue said.

"It opens the possibility that we'll fail to act decisively to reverse the downturn which would come along if we have a serious recession," he said. "It would be a lot harder if we don't have unemployment compensation."

However, the advantage of having a balanced budget is a stable economy with stable interest rates, which is good for private investors, Pogue said.

"The big advantage of reducing the deficit is the kind of period when the economy is running to its fullest employment," he said. "Higher borrowing by the government pushes up interest rates a bit," he said.

Pogue said the balanced-budget amendment will not bring about the anticipated changes.

"People looking at this being a big change in the system are incorrect," he said. "It would be a small change which would put more pressure on Congress and may be a good change."

ASSUMPTIONS ARE QUESTIONABLE

Caliber of military questioned in report

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Military commanders believe the Clinton administration has overstated the nation's ability to fight two nearly simultaneous regional wars, a key element of the administration's military strategy, according to a congressional report released Tuesday.

In planning military strategy into the next century, Clinton's civilian team at the Pentagon made assumptions about equipment and response capabilities that commanders in the field are questioning, said the report by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm.

At issue is the 1993 "Bottom-Up Review," which has formed the basis for the administration's long-term defense planning and budgeting. Then-Defense Secretary Les Aspin headed the review. His successor, William Perry, played a key role in his previous job as Aspin's deputy.

Some of DoD's (the Department of Defense's) assumptions are questionable," the GAO concluded. "War-fighting command officials believe that DoD's concept for responding to two nearly simultaneous conflicts ... may not be the best approach." The estimates of these commanders about how quickly they might respond to a second war threat and what equipment they might need "differ significantly from DoD's estimates."

The review envisions a military large enough and agile enough to fight two major regional wars nearly simultaneously — in Korea and the Persian Gulf, for example. The idea is that potential adversaries should be discouraged from believing that they could launch a war with impunity if the United States was already fighting elsewhere.

The report indicates that military commanders are questioning whether existing airlift and sealift assets would suffice to move forces to two battlefronts and whether unique military assets — such as special operations forces or Stealth bombers — could be quickly shifted from one conflict to the other.

SPEEDY OK EXPECTED

Helms signals assent to arms control pact

Donald Rothberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Prospects for quick Senate approval of a treaty reducing U.S. and Russian nuclear arsenals got a boost Tuesday when Sen. Jesse Helms indicated no strong objections to the pact.

As chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the North Carolina Republican — who has consistently opposed arms control treaties — could have been a major roadblock to ratification of the START II agreement.

But when Secretary of State Warren Christopher presented the administration's case for ratification, Helms signaled he wasn't inclined to fight this one.

Helms said he was concerned about reducing the U.S. arsenal to the point that "a future leader of Russia or any other nuclear power may decide foolishly that it is safe to risk war with the United States."

"I'm persuaded that the 3,000 to 3,500 nuclear weapons allowed Russia and the United States in this START treaty does meet reasonable standards of safety."

The administration hopes to obtain Senate approval of the treaty this spring. Christopher told the committee that President Clinton and Russian President Boris Yeltsin have agreed to move quickly to bring about the reductions called for in the agreement.

"We should not wait until 2003 to obtain the full benefits of START," Christopher said.

Under the agreement, both countries would scrap all multiple warhead missiles by 2003 and reduce their land-based warheads to no more than 3,500 each.

Christopher said the two governments also were committed to seeking further reductions.

In what could be read as a symbolic gesture of his benign attitude toward the agreement, Helms turned the gavel over to Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., to preside over the ratification hearing. Lugar promptly voiced his strong support for the treaty.

THE POLITICAL BLENDER

Media should be accurate

On Friday, KRUI broadcast its weekly political call-in show, "The Political Blender," for the first time since classes resumed. The hosts of the program, Chad Rickey and Bob Stein, were more than just a little rusty.

As the two chatted idly, the topic of what Iowa politicians were doing in Washington arose, and it became clear that neither host knew who Iowa's senators or representatives are. The two hosts were also at a loss when it came to identifying the home state of the current speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich (which is Georgia, not South Carolina, as Rickey and Stein would have one believe).

Mistakes such as these might be excusable if committed in a casual conversation by someone who is not interested in politics, but this was not the case. These errors were committed by the hosts of a political call-in show and were broadcast throughout the UI community. As the hosts of such a program, Rickey and Stein have a responsibility to their audience and should be able to demonstrate at the very least a cursory knowledge of their subject. On Friday afternoon, it was glaringly obvious they could not.

Their ignorance was broadcast while they tried to make the point that the work of Iowa's politicians in Washington is overshadowed by their larger-than-life colleagues from Georgia (Gingrich) and Kansas (Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, for the record) and that media coverage of local politicians is insufficient. Apparently local newspapers, whose coverage of Washington with a local-interest angle is more than sufficient, are not an ingredient in their political milk shake. At one point in the course of their one-hour show, they informed their audience that someone had called in and corrected them. It is surprising that no one went on air to take the two to task. Perhaps the audience just tuned out.

What does all of this mean? Well, only 47 percent of Iowa's 2.1 million eligible voters actually bothered to vote in the November election. Of those people who actually did turn out to vote, citizens in the college-age bracket had the lowest turnout by far. Many students said in The Daily Iowan that they did not vote because they were not aware of issues or did not know enough about the candidates. Political illiteracy of this nature is inexcusable and should not be fostered by talk show hosts.

While it was clear that Rickey and Stein meant no harm on Friday afternoon, attitudes like theirs help create an atmosphere of voter apathy. Before railing against the media for covering one issue or another, perhaps Rickey and Stein should try to be as accurate as the media they were so quick to criticize Friday. All media, be it "Primetime Live," The New York Times or talk-radio bombast, should try to be as accurate and knowledgeable as possible.

NO JOKE IN THIS REALITY

Abusing the 'N word'

It starts with the letter N and ends in a catastrophe. The word is used humorously in rap songs but abused by a race to which it does not even belong. Many people lose sight of its true meaning by excusing it with the context in which they use it. If you haven't caught on yet, the commonly misused word is "nigger."

The word dates back to the days of slavery and is still kept alive, despite advancements in civil rights and race relations. There are disgraceful whites who still use the word for its original derogatory meaning, while there are whites who think they use it in good taste and humor. They claim no offense in its use and defend themselves with the excuse of having African-American friends. It only means that they should know better than to insult an entire race with a term that Webster's defines as "a vulgar, offensive term of hostility and contempt."

The term is so blatantly ignorant that it's still a shock to hear it used so frequently and carelessly in a town as friendly and liberal as Iowa City.

Yes, African-Americans use the word among themselves, as many whites are so quick to point out. But when spoken between African-Americans, the term takes on a whole new status because it is part of their own language and culture. Whites don't have the right to invade a space where they have no place or business being. African-Americans have reclaimed the term and shouldn't need an excuse to use the language however they choose.

We cannot erase time or make up for mistakes of the past. What we can do is either ignore or stand up to those who choose to act out of ignorance or lack of respect for another race.

It's mind-boggling that certain whites claim to innocently use the term for fun around their African-American friends. What is so conceivably funny about a term that was originated by their own race through the horrors of slavery? There's simply no joke in this reality.

We cannot erase time or make up for mistakes of the past. What we can do is either ignore or stand up to those who choose to act out of ignorance or lack of respect for another race. If you do nothing else, don't use the disgusting, disrespectful, dehumanizing "N word."

CHELSEA CAIN

Even Walt Whitman had to start somewhere

I like Bill Clinton. Not in the same way I like William Burroughs or even Jimmy Carter, but for the same persistent, allusive reason I keep eating those packages of cheese-cracker and peanut-butter sandwiches, even though I know the preservatives are killing me.

Politically, Clinton is going to have to make some tough decisions in the coming months. He is going to have to cater to the whims of Republican zealots while attempting to hold on to some of us downtrodden liberals as we try to wiggle away in terror.

This will not be easy as I, for one, will be on a flight to Ottawa the day Congress succumbs to school prayer.

There is also the problem of welfare reform, which Clinton has said he supports. Speaker Newt Gingrich and his cronies have come up with a plan that, among other things, makes women who have a baby before the age of 18 permanently ineligible for assistance. This is supposed to deter teen-age pregnancy. Obviously, Gingrich didn't date much in high school, or if he did, he didn't date any of the teen-agers I knew. Welfare needs reforming, but not by people who think that teens are going to pause during the heat of passion to consider the economic consequences of making whoopee.

Meanwhile, Clinton's pasty face has lost a little of its pudge, and his hair is getting darker, the way it does when he wants to remind people that he once met John Kennedy. He's so morose, he makes even Henry Kissinger look giddy. If the Clinton presidency was a movie, it would be "The Birds," and Clinton would be Tippi Hedren — not a particularly sympathetic character, but you have to feel bad for someone who is getting her eyes mauled out by 100 pissed-off crows.

If his administration was a book, it would be one of the "Hardy Boys" series, with Clinton as Chet — Frank and Joe's fat friend who always gets left behind while they go roaring off on their mo-peds in search of really big adventures.

If the White House was a musical, it would be "Grease," and Clinton would be Guy With Sweater No. 4 in a hall scene, but on opening night he would get sick and not be able to go on.

If Clinton were a car, he would be my tan 1983 Honda Accord which, despite my denial, has begun to bounce noticeably whenever I accelerate.

My cousin (nearly slamming into the dashboard after a particularly hard jolt): "How's the car, Chels?"

Me: "Oh, fine."

You get the point.

Now if Clinton really wanted to be remembered fondly, he would save "My So-Called Life" or maybe feed some of the million more kids under 6 who fall below the poverty line between 1987 and 1992. But he won't do either.

He is so fixated on getting out of the bad publicity trap he's found himself in that he is willing to chew off his own leg to do it. Personally, I don't want to watch the gore.

As for Hillary Rodham Clinton, who is looking more and more like Jennifer Flowers, I'm beginning to think that she has left Clinton for George Stephanopoulos (both have been missing from the newspapers recently) and he just can't bring himself to make the public announcement.

Of course, he is still president, the way that O.J. Simpson is still, for thousands, a sports hero. And despite the fact that more than a dozen Republican members of Congress had the gall to walk out of his State of the Union address, Clinton still commands a little attention, in jogging shorts especially.

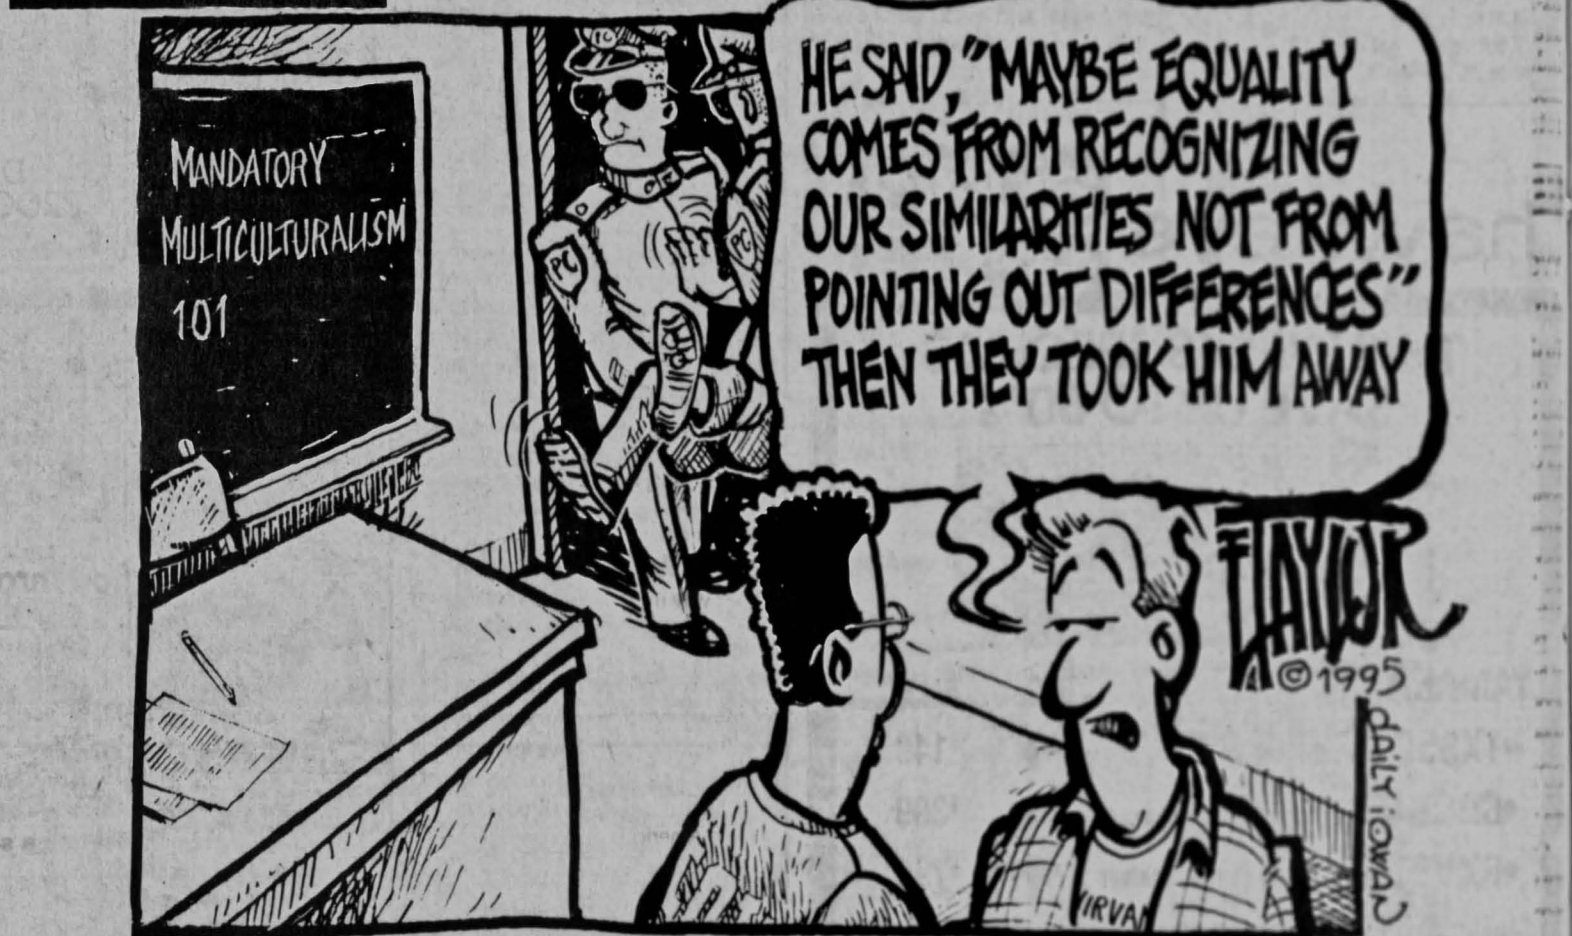

Here's hoping that he stops thinking about the next election and starts doing what he should, rather than what Dan Quayle's "unilateral majority" wishes he would.

Hey, if worse comes to worse, he can always pull a Jimmy Carter and publish a book of poetry. Here's one to help get his creative juices flowing:

*I wanted to pass health care,
but Dole gave it the boot.
I wanted to please the people,
and now I'm stuck with Newt.
So if you know a good PR firm,
tell them I'm taking calls.
My opinion polls are dropping,
and Quayle's touring malls.
(Even Walt Whitman had to start somewhere.)*

A blurred line: censorship and degradation

I had a discussion with some friends about pornography. We talked about what we've read or seen, what we've studied in classes, what we've been told by adults. We realized, however, that we weren't prepared to make a definitive statement about its role in society because none of us had been exposed to enough of it.

We talked about the blurred line between censorship and degradation against women and the differences between naked people in pictures who touch each other or tell stories (acceptable) vs. women who are photographed in rape scenes or other violent poses (not acceptable).

We talked about Susan Griffin's novel, "Pornography and Silence," which we all had read in a class last spring. The book had graphic details and heavy-handed observations, but something missing for me — I wasn't disgusted enough with pornography when I was through reading. The formality of her words separated the reader from the true vulgarity and reality of pornography; it was a distraction.

Perhaps it was the ultraintelligent, almost austere style in which Griffin wrote that left me cold. She didn't spark anything in me. I spent too much time rereading passages that seemed to fly over my head.

Perhaps it was also the setting. I sat in Great Midwestern or The Cottage and read, getting up every once in a while for a pastry or a refill. I was never emerged in the text.

And as the only book like this I've encountered in a class at this university, I think that's a problem.

I thought it was important that I pay attention and not hide from anything presented. I've always felt confident that I could handle any idea. My parents raised me in a very open home. There was never a movie I wasn't allowed to see at any age. There was never an issue I couldn't bring up at the dinner table. When AIDS made the news, my father ran to my sister and I and said, "Condoms! You must have condoms. It is death without condoms." He held the Time or Newsweek article about Rock Hudson in his arm. I was 11 years old and my sister was 16. That is an open family.

So what's the problem? The problem lies in the overintellectualization of pornography. I'm not saying that all of Griffin's ideas, or any other intellectual discussion, are not accurate; they are. But a book like hers does not reach the right people. Those who already know and understand the possible demons in pornographic material are going to read that book and agree with it and nod their heads happily.

But students like me, or teen-age boys and girls who like pornography, are not going to understand a word she wrote. Intellectually I get it, but in practice — in the flesh, as they say — it's a whole other ball game.

The men who push a woman onto a pool table and write jokes about it in Playboy magazine need a book a bit simpler than Griffin's.

The parents of all teen-agers need to explain sex and include pornography as a reality of sex. They should explain what it supposes women to be.

And I would say that they need to show their 13-year-old kid an explicit image so he knows exactly what it is and what is wrong with it. Hiding behind words perpetuates the problem because it is not just a theoretical issue — it needs to be more tangible than that. Vulgar and disgusting images need profane language. It will not do to say, "Sometimes people make women look as though they're useless, and that's wrong." Kids need to look at the picture and see an example of what is wrong. Show the difference between naked women and women who are depicted violently. Show him which is OK and which is wrong — there is vast difference.

I wish someone had done that for me — not about pornography, but about related issues.

In all of my family's open conversation, we never discussed the reality of a bad situation happening to us. Everything was in the abstract, the third person. It was assumed that we were smart enough to know, after reading about Rock Hudson, that of course you always use a condom and there will never be a mistake. We'll never get any disease. We're too smart. We're too open. Bad things only happen in repressed households.

But male violence against women can be difficult to recognize if one has never seen it. Rage, deeply hidden anger that festers in his gut, is a mystery to most women until they are confronted with bits and pieces that over time suggest an unhealthy man or at least a man who has not yet learned to control his rage.

And that is what a lot of pornography is about — men who cannot control their rage against women, men who need to shove objects inside women, hit them or tie them up.

Pornography needs to be more explicit in sex education classes or at least in some type of course. History classes shows photographs of the Nazi destruction — dead ravaged bodies piled into heaps or in ditches. These are images that I find extremely disturbing. Yet I look because I don't want to misunderstand or undervalue the enormity of the destruction in World War II. I think the same principle applies here. There exists a desecration of women, and though an intellectual portrayal may be necessary in understanding the roots of evil, it does not explain the daily practice of that evil, which is exactly the destruction.

Julia Cibul's column appears alternate Wednesdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

A group called Iowans Against the Death Penalty has proposed a series of community debates with Gov. Branstad throughout the state before the death penalty is reinstated. How do you feel about statewide debates?

Bill Cooney, Iowa City resident

"I think they should just reinstate it without a debate. If someone drove by and killed your parents, that's exactly how you'd feel."

Janette McMahon, UI senior majoring in sociology

"That's a good idea. You need to know what the actual people think. There's not enough education on it out there, so people need to know what's going on."

Jason Goldberg, UI junior majoring in economics

"I definitely agree. We need to make an educated decision on the death penalty so we don't have any problems later."

Sylvia Fierro, UI freshman majoring in computer science

"I believe it's a good idea because if you are going to pass something so serious, people should have a say in it."

Country is in need of a defining moment

We are a nation with a penchant for labeling things, usually with very little allowance for middle ground. One is either Republican or Democrat, gay or straight, ethnic or Caucasian. Polarizations like these are perpetuated tirelessly and ceaselessly. We apply these divisions to ourselves, develop ideologies and categorically evaluate everyone else as different or same.

Such separations occur naturally in our country. Some even address them as healthy because they are the result of freedom of thought among a diverse people. However, our tendency to intellectually define one another has led to prejudice, tension and disdain — all characteristics of closed and entrenched minds.

What this country is in dire need of, then, is a defining moment — an event that brings us to a unanimous feeling that transcends all our notions of difference. One remedy that comes to mind would be a mandate for every citizen to simultaneously chomp about four squares of Ex-Lax. Consider the benefits of this prescription for a moment. Not only would it dramatically reduce some of the anal attitudes prevalent here, it would also present a situation where no one could possibly condescend to another. After all, everyone would just be regular.

What this country is in dire need of, then, is a defining moment — an event that brings us to a unanimous feeling that transcends all our notions of difference.

Alas, given the state of these United States, this mandate would never get off the ground. Ex-Lax's rivals would quickly protest the leverage gained against them in the constipation industry. Special-interest groups whose whole modus operandi are based on their right to anal-retentiveness would picket Capitol Hill and maybe gun down a few doctors who agree to dispense the Ex-Lax squares. And, of course, the bill would be filibustered in Congress for so long that its effectiveness would be lost. No, we need something immediate and dramatic.

History has shown that defining moments do happen, even without government approval. These moments, like our labeling tendencies, come in only two forms: tragedy, such as the assassination of John F. Kennedy and the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger; or triumph, like Neil Armstrong's stroll on the moon and the 1980 U.S. hockey team's incredible Olympic victory over the Soviets at the height of the Cold War. Each of these events riveted the attention of this country's citizens, eliciting a unified emotional response that for a brief period brought this country to a collective consciousness.

For these brief moments, we are no longer muddled by opinions, ideologies, prejudices or any other divisive products of thought. We are instead unified by the emotion inspired within us — a product of the heart.

Why are these defining moments so important to us? Because they inspire us, we believe in ourselves and we believe in the power of the human spirit. For these brief moments, we are no longer muddled by opinions, ideologies, prejudices or any other divisive products of thought. We are instead unified by the emotion inspired within us — a product of the heart. These events leave us in awe of forces that are much greater than us, forces that we cannot label. More importantly, they serve as a reminder that we are human, and that is the only label that truly defines us.

Working toward the American dream

To the Editor:

For the last 40 years, our country has been controlled by a Congress that has had a basic premise that the United States has a limited amount of potential and limited amount of wealth. Therefore, in trying to be fair they have felt justified in taking from the "haves" and giving to the "have-nots."

This has resulted in our present mess of high deficit, low morale and despair about our inability for everyone to obtain wealth. The "have-nots" have resented the "haves" because Congress has made it difficult for them to join the "haves."

Congress should have realized that the wealth of our nation can grow if it stays out of the way. This is because every time you add innovation and hard work to a product, service or resource, you actually make it more valuable, thus creating more wealth. As wealth grows, more people can have a bigger piece of the pie.

John F. Kennedy realized this, and unlike President Clinton, Kennedy asked Congress to lower taxes to stimulate the economy to provide more people with jobs who will pay more taxes and therefore lower the deficit.

It should go like this: With a low flat tax, everyone would have more money to spend. Some of that money will disappear and not accomplish much except misery and poor health because it will be spent on items like drugs, alcohol and cigarettes. But some of that money will be spent on products and services. Those producers will need to produce more products and services to meet the new demand. The producers will hire more workers, who will then be able to buy more products and services and also pay more taxes.

Notice that this process can continue without the government doing any more than making sure that everyone plays fair.

Picture the great demand for workers. Work dispels despair and creates self-esteem and hope for becoming one of the "haves."

When people realize that they can obtain the American dream by working their way up to more wealth and not to more taxes, then there will be fewer people out there thinking that their only way of advancement is to steal something from someone else. We will automatically have less crime.

Let's get back to the place where we can all have our God-given opportunity for the American dream.

Middle class not forgotten

To the Editor:

I am writing to respond to Randy Fordice's editorial titled "Clinton leans to the right" (DI, Jan. 27). Fordice claims that in last week's State of the Union address, Clinton walked toward the right and deserted the people who elected him. I strongly disagree.

In order to determine if Clinton is abandoning the people who elected him, we first need to determine exactly who those people were who elected him in 1992. Throughout the 1992 campaign, Clinton claimed that he was fighting for "the forgotten middle class." Clinton knew that in order to be elected, he had to win middle-class voters. These were the middle-class people who abandoned the Democratic Party by voting for Ronald Reagan in 1980 and 1984 and for George Bush in 1988. In 1992, Clinton convinced a large number of these middle-class voters that he was on their side. As a result, the middle class put Clinton in the White House.

Next, we must examine Clinton's State of the Union proposals to see if such proposals run counter to the interests of the middle class. Clinton proposed giving middle-class families a $10,000 tax deduction for college tuition. He proposed allowing people to take money out of IRA accounts tax-free in order to pay for educational expenses or for the care of an elderly parent. Finally, he proposed a $500-per-child tax deduction for middle-class families with children. Clinton is clearly not abandoning the people who elected him. Instead, he is trying to remind them that he is on their side.

Fordice concludes his editorial by stating that Clinton must learn that "the road to four more years is not to the right. Clinton needs to take a hard left to get there." Obviously Fordice has forgotten about Michael Dukakis and Walter Mondale — two Democratic presidential candidates who thought that "the left" was the way to go in order to win an election. Fortunately, Clinton seems to have remembered that a candidate must win the middle class in order to win a presidential election and that a turn to the left will result in driving the middle class back to the Republican Party in 1996.

'Eye for an eye' is not the teaching of Jesus

To the Editor:

Concerning the death penalty, it bothers me a great deal that proponents continue to use the Old Testament's "an eye for an eye" to justify their beliefs. Aside from the fact that the quote is blatantly out of context (in actuality, God is pleading for moderation — the usual penalty for putting out someone's eye might be wiping out a whole tribe), it is very clear to me that when Jesus came, a whole new covenant was established with God's people.

Jesus' overall message is one of love and forgiveness. He even addresses the very quote: "You have heard that it was said, 'An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth.' But I say to you, do not resist him who is evil; but whoever slaps you on your right cheek, turn to him the other also. ... You have heard that it was said, 'You shall love your neighbor, and hate your enemy.' But I say to you, love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you" (Matthew 5:38-39; 43-44). Where is the justification for the death penalty in this? Does anyone truly believe that Jesus would inject anyone with a fatal combination of drugs, stand by while someone else did or even condone such a practice in any way? On the contrary, Jesus himself was the victim of a death penalty — an innocent victim. Let us not be so naive as to think that could never happen in Iowa; it could. And it will unless we do something now to stop death penalty legislation from being enacted.

Please call or write your legislators today and tell them you don't want the death penalty reinstated in Iowa.

P.E. requirement unnecessary

To the Editor:

The UI has no concern for the physical fitness of its students. Rather, the UI is concerned with the financial fitness of the physical education department. The requirement exists to produce two things. The first is a pool of money from which the department may pay its graduate student Teaching Assistants. This pool is fed by the fees charged to students before they may participate in certain gym classes. The second is a pool of students needing to take gym classes, which in turn provides something for the graduate students to do so that the department may justify paying them.

I recently decided to avoid feeding this system and took the exemption test for jogging. The physical test went well enough, but when I went to the library to study for the written portion, the materials that were to be on reserve could not be found. Instead, it took two employees 15 minutes to locate the five bound texts on jogging that I was to study. Since this is a heavier course load than most semester-length academic courses and I was given two days to complete the reading, I decided to rely on my innate knowledge of running to pull me through.

I showed up at The Field House at 7 p.m. The examiners, however, did not. When they finally did show up 20 minutes late, they had no tests, though they did have a pizza. As they apologized for any inconvenience, I realized that when it came to doing their jobs, punctuality meant nothing. But punctuality was all that seemed to matter when it came to procuring a pizza.

By the time these nincompoops finally found the test, it was 7:30. As if I hadn't been through enough by this time, one of my examiners accused me of cheating.

I am not in the habit of cheating, and I doubt that I will begin on a P.E. test. These events have proven to me that it is not worth remaining quiet on this issue any longer. It is time the UI and all its students took a good look at what is being accomplished by requiring all students without adequate excuses to complete a four-hour P.E. requirement. Are we helping shape up the campus with classes in badminton, relaxation techniques, ballroom dancing and the like? Or are we simply feeding our P.E. department so that it will thrive, producing more classes, requiring more students to enroll, being taught by more TAs who require more money, leading to more classes, which require more students, etc.?

Player contracts may be in jeopardy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball players decided Tuesday to continue their freeze on signing contracts, jeopardizing deals negotiated between restricted free agents and several clubs.

"It's appropriate that contracts be signed only under a system everyone agrees to," union head Donald Fehr said after a meeting of the union's executive board.

One day before negotiations resume, the board decided to continue the freeze that began Dec. 23, the day management implemented its salary cap plan.

Thirty-eight restricted free agents have until Monday to sign offer sheets under the new rules. Among those believed to have oral agreements are Marquis Grissom and Ken Hill of the Montreal Expos, who are said to be willing to sign with the Florida Marlins.

The 46 players attending the executive board meeting voted unanimously to continue the ban.

IOWA STATE

Feds cite Cyclones for gender inequity

AMES, Iowa (AP) — A federal review found major differences in what Iowa State does for male and female athletes in several areas, including travel allowances, pre-game housing, locker rooms and recruiting budgets.

The report from the Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights, released Tuesday, also noted that Iowa State has agreed to correct those differences and will fully comply with gender equity in athletics by 1998.

In addition, it said Iowa State already was in compliance in many areas, including modes of team travel, the quality of practice and game facilities.

NFL

Broncos court Shanahan for head coaching job

DENVER (AP) — Mike Shanahan, arriving by private jet and carrying credentials as the league's hottest coaching prospect, met Tuesday with Denver Broncos owner Pat Bowlen in hopes of settling a contract.

Shanahan, the offensive coordinator of the San Francisco 49ers, was offered the Broncos' coaching job six hours after the 49ers won their record fifth Super Bowl on Sunday.

Neither Bowlen nor Shanahan would comment Tuesday on their talks. But Monday, Bowlen said his two-hour discussion with Shanahan after the Super Bowl convinced him "Mike definitely wants to be the head coach here. I'm certainly not taking anything for granted, but I think things are moving in a very positive direction."

Shanahan acknowledged Denver was his top choice.

"I think the world of Denver," he said. "It's a great opportunity. But at the same time, is it done? No, it is not."

Bowlen reportedly has offered Shanahan a five-year, $6 million contract.

Desperation drives Hawks, Illini

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Two weeks ago Lou Henson and the Fighting Illini found themselves perched atop the Big Ten Conference at 4-0.

But since then, Illinois has fallen on hard times, losing three games in a row, two at home. Now they find themselves crammed in the middle of the Big Ten race.

So when Illinois (13-6, 4-3) invades Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight, it will be as hard-pressed for a victory as Iowa.

Henson and company are coming off of a 75-67 home loss to Michigan State.

Meanwhile, Iowa has lost four of its last six games, all by one point.

"When you look at Illinois, they had really good shots at beating Michigan State," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said. "When you look at the box score, it doesn't look like a nip and tuck game, but that was a one-point game down to a minute to go."

Illinois is led by its starting backcourt of Kiwane Garris and Richard Keene, who have combined to average just over 26 points per game.

Garris has led the Illini in assists in 12-of-19 games, while Keene has upped his scoring average by nearly three points since Big Ten play began.

Robert Bennett and wide-body

Shelly Clark have hauled down a combined 14 rebounds per game and figure to give Iowa fits underneath. Clark outweighs Iowa's leading rebounder, Jim Bartels, still ailing from an injury suffered against Minnesota, by nearly 90 pounds.

"(Illinois is) strong. I don't know if they have as many big bodies rotating in there as Minnesota does, but Clark is as strong as any player in the league, and Bennett is quick, as well as pretty strong," Davis said.

The Hawkeyes head into tonight's game with their frontcourt depleted by injuries. Bartels'

FRESHMAN LEADS IOWA IN SCORING

Gooden lives up to top billing

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

During the summer before her senior year in high school, Tiffany Gooden was dreaming about playing alongside the NCAA women's basketball greats that she had watched for so many years on TV.

The Fort Wayne, Ind. native may have dreamed that she was a year away from being one of the top five scorers in the Big Ten Conference.

She may have dreamed about scoring 36 points in one game. And she may have even dreamed about meeting college basketball stars such as Purdue's Glenn Robinson and USC's Lisa Leslie.

"I'm willing to do whatever it takes to win. If I need to score 30 points in order for us to win, I'll try to do that. If I need to get 20 rebounds, I'll try to do that."

Tiffany Gooden, Iowa freshman forward

But something stood in her way. During that same summer, Gooden tore her anterior cruciate ligament, and her thoughts turned to rehab and just being able to play again.

"I didn't really think about being National Player of the Year. I was trying to recover from my ACL," she said. "That was very devastating for me. The doctors told me I would never play basketball again and things like that."

"For a 17-year old to hear, those are very difficult things to swallow."

That wasn't enough, however, to keep her from realizing her goals.

After three months of rehab, Tiffany went on to average 29.9 points and 9.5 rebounds per game in her senior year at R. Nelson Snider High. She was named Parade magazine and Naismith player of the year. Her mug was put in Sports Illustrated's Faces in the Crowd. And she did meet Robinson and Leslie.

"For the Naismith Award, I went to a banquet in Atlanta at the Omni," she said. "And that's where they hand out the college awards, so I got to meet Robinson and Leslie, as well as Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson and Tennessee coach Pat Summitt, who were the men's and women's coaches of the year."

"It was a very neat and nerve wracking experience. I had to go up and give a speech in front of about 6,000 people and it was broadcast live on television in Atlanta."

For Gooden, 19, a return trip is entirely possible, but it is not on the top of her agenda.

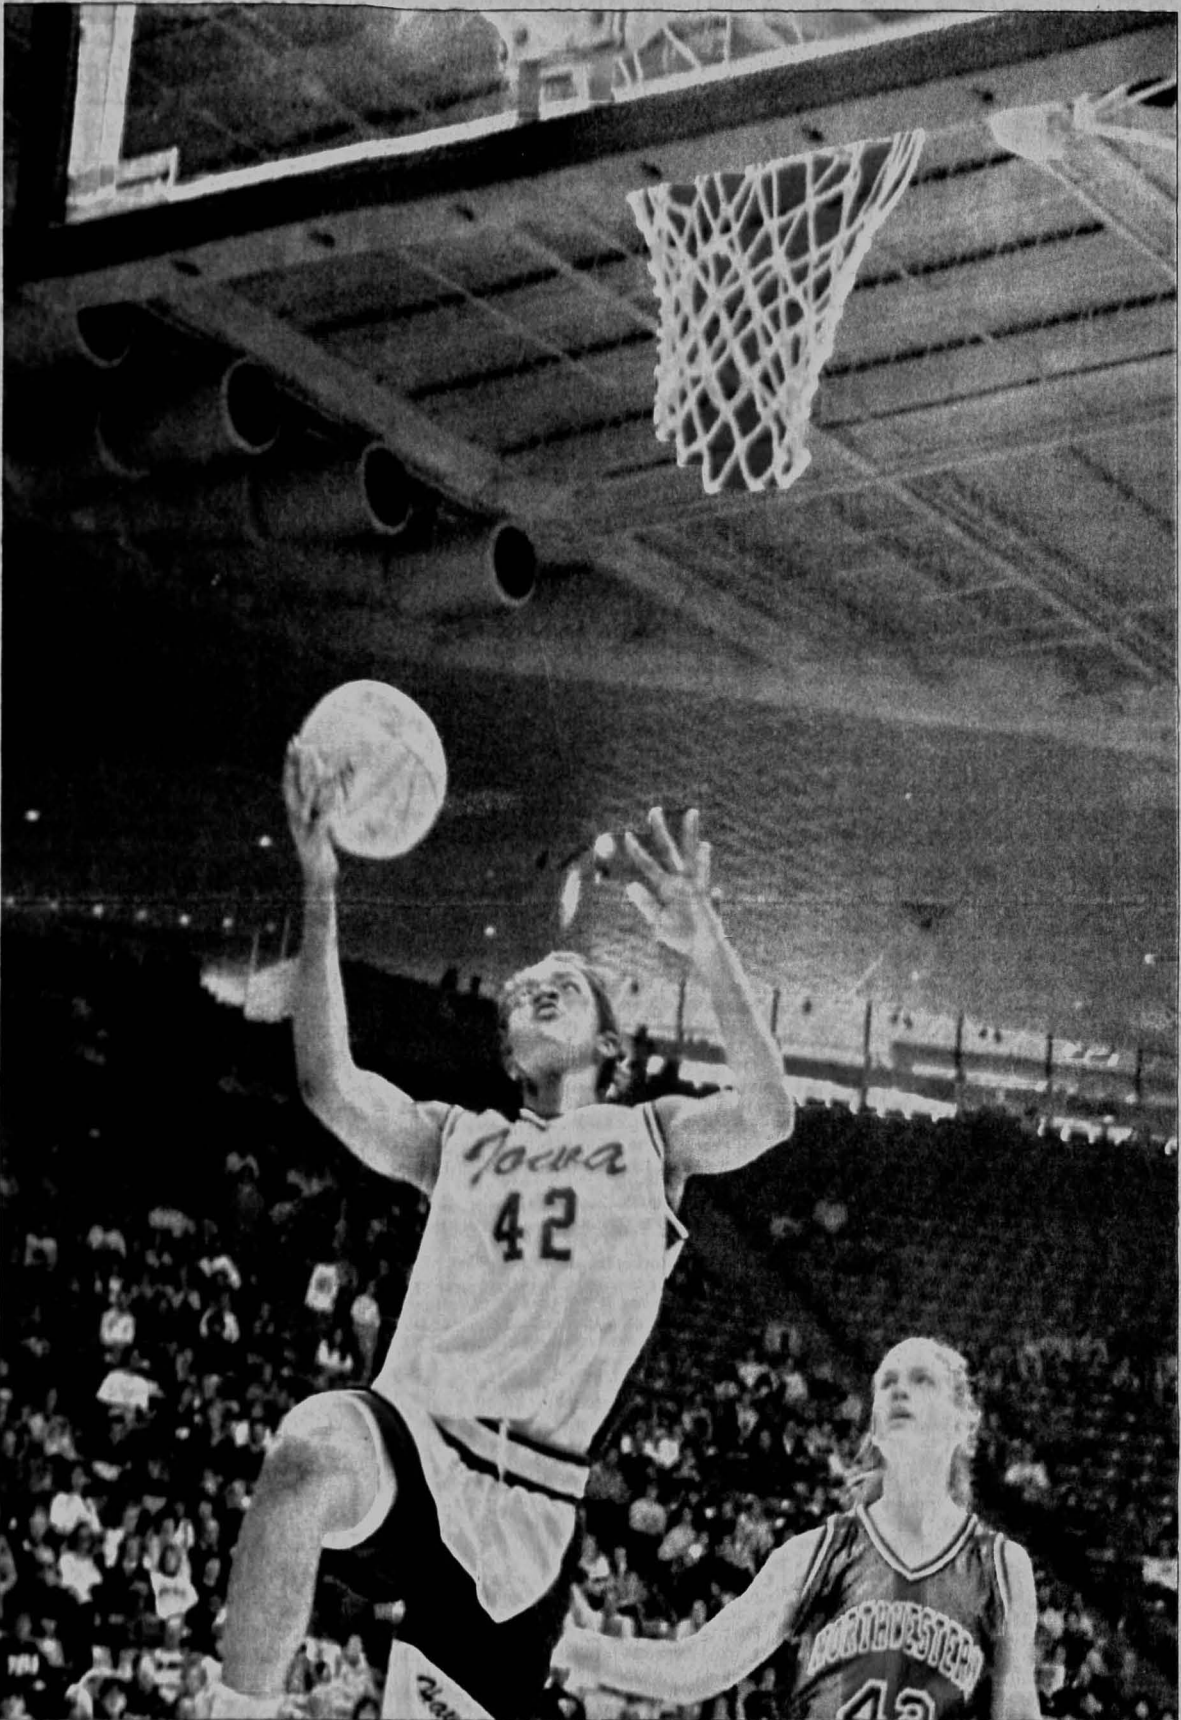

"Right now I think I'm at the stage where I want to do whatever it takes to win," she explained, "because I scored 36 points against Michigan State and I had a great game offensively, yet we came up one point short."

"I'm willing to do whatever it takes to win. If I need to score 30 points in order for us to win, I'll try to do that. If I need to get 20 rebounds, I'll try to do that. If I need to get assists, I'll try to do that. I just want to do whatever it takes to win, because we need wins right now."

The 6-foot forward is currently averaging 16.4 points per game in Big Ten play, good for fifth in the conference. Unfortunately, though, the team is not putting up wins. Iowa is 7-11 right now, and 3-5 in the Big Ten.

"It's been frustrating so far, because I see a lot of potential on this team. It's just hard when you're practicing day in and day

Freshman forward Tiffany Gooden goes up for a layup against Northwestern Jan. 22 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Gooden's 16.4 points-per-game average leads Iowa and is fifth in the Big Ten.

Barros, Hill rise from obscurity to All-Stars

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dana Barros of the Philadelphia 76ers and Tyrone Hill of the Cleveland Cavaliers were among 14 reserves added to the NBA All-Star teams today for next month's game.

Neither Barros nor Hill was on the All-Star ballot and both were picked for their first All-Star team.

Added by the coaches with Barros and Hill as Eastern Conference reserves were Patrick Ewing of the New York Knicks and Alonzo Mourning of the Charlotte Hornets at center, Larry Johnson of Charlotte and Vin Baker of the Milwaukee Bucks at forward and Joe Dumars of Detroit at guard.

Karl Malone and his Utah Jazz teammate, John Stockton, again were picked for the Western Conference team.

Seattle SuperSonics also were tapped for two reserves, Gary Payton and Detlef Schrempf. David Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs was added as the West's reserve center, Cedric Ceballos of the Los Angeles Lakers as a forward and Mitch Richmond of the Sacramento Kings as a guard.

Ceballos is another first time All-Star, as is Baker for the Eastern team.

The reserves were selected by the 27 NBA head coaches, each of whom voted for seven players from his conference. Coaches selected two guards, two forwards, one center and two wild cards.

A coach could not vote for players on his team.

The starters were selected in fan balloting and were announced last week.

Picked as West starters were Charles Barkley of Phoenix and Shawn Kemp of Seattle as forwards, center Hakeem Olajuwon of the Houston Rockets, and guards Latrell Sprewell of Golden State and Dan Majerle of Phoenix.

Voted to the East starting team were rookie Grant Hill of the Detroit Pistons and Scottie Pippen of the Chicago Bulls at forward, Shaquille O'Neal of the Orlando Magic at center, and guards Anfernee Hardaway of the Magic and Reggie Miller of the Indiana Pacers.

The game will be played Feb. 12 in Phoenix.

FREE THROWS LIFT BOILERMAKERS

Purdue jolts Indiana, 76-66

Steve Herman
Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Cuonzo Martin redeemed himself at the free throw line.

The Purdue senior was perfect on 12 foul shots and scored 23 points to lead the Boilermakers over Indiana 76-66 Tuesday night. As a team, Purdue made an incredible 29-of-31 free throws.

"It's just one of those games where we knew free throws were going to win this ball game," Martin said. "Myself, personally, I wanted to make some free throws. I didn't shoot well at Penn State so I had to step up and knock down those free throws, and I was able to do that."

Purdue (15-5, 6-2 Big Ten), which trailed only once, took a nine-point lead early in the second half. A miss by Roy Hairston midway through the period was Purdue's first after 20 straight free throws, then a basket by Steve Hart and a 3-pointer by Brian Evans brought the Hoosiers within 53-51.

Indiana (12-8, 4-4) still trailed by only two before a basket by Martin and two free throws by Brandon Brantley started a 12-3 run that put the game out of reach.

Associated Press

Brandon Brantley (42) tries to drive between Indiana defenders.

The Boilermakers' biggest lead was 73-60 after two free throws apiece by Martin and Brantley with just over two minutes remaining. The only other missed free throw by Purdue was by Matt Waddell with 16 seconds left.

ALL-TIME ASSISTS MARK

Stockton moves in on Magic record

Bob Mims
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — John Stockton likely will break Magic Johnson's career assist record at home tonight against Denver — and the Utah Jazz guard can't wait to be finished with all the hype surrounding his chase.

It began with the start of the season, his 11th with the Jazz. Stockton had 9,383 assists, 538 short of Johnson's mark.

What had been a trickle of requests for interviews has now become a flood.

After 14 assists in Monday's 115-80 victory over Minnesota, Stockton was 11 shy of the record by the former Olympian and Los Angeles Lakers great.

"As a player, I expect more out of Stockton than any of my other teammates. I sort of expected him to be the best at what he does."

Karl Malone, Utah Jazz forward

Associated Press

Utah Jazz guard John Stockton passes over the top of Minnesota Timberwolves guard Winston Garland for one of his 12 first-half assists in the first period Monday in Salt Lake City. Stockton likely will break Magic Johnson's all-time assist record tonight against Denver.

Wash., 859 games over 10½ seasons — the past seven as the NBA's assist leader — to reach Johnson's record, set in 874 games from 1979 to 1991.

Karl Malone, a favorite target of Stockton's passing artistry, said the assault on the record has made him realize just how special his fellow All-Star is.

"I don't know if I appreciate Stockton as much as I should because I expect so much out of him," Malone said. "As a player, I expect more out of Stockton than any of my other teammates. I sort of expected him to be the best at what he does."

When Stockton does overtake Johnson, can he rightfully be called the greatest point guard the game of basketball has ever known?

"If you are talking about a point guard, I think he's the best I've ever seen," says Utah coach Jerry Sloan.

Jazz guard Jeff Hornacek, who recalls trying to play against Stockton in years past, also counts himself a believer in his backcourt mate.

"You want to get up on him and pressure his passes, but he'll just drive around you," Hornacek said. "He gets true assists; he's not just passing the ball ... he has to anticipate a little bit more because of his size."

Stockton would have none of it, however.

"No! No, no, no," he moaned. "It's just a stat. It doesn't mean you're the best or anything like that."

"Magic, he was just fantastic, whether it was assists, points or rebounds. Everything he did in the league was something special."

Stockton insists winning is much more important to him than the assist title, and the Jazz have done a lot of that lately.

A victory against the Nuggets would give the Jazz 14 wins in a row. Utah also can match the NBA's consecutive road victory record of 16 on Thursday in Houston.

"We have a game against Denver, a tough team, and we need to come out and win that game," Stockton said.

"(The assist mark) is kind of all for naught if you don't win the game. We'll let the numbers take care of themselves."

IOWA STATE AT OKLAHOMA

Floyd, Sampson get rematch in Norman

Associated Press

Kelvin Sampson was asked what it was like when he coached at Washington State and his good buddy Tim Floyd was at Idaho, only 10 miles away. Before answering, he had to make a correction.

"Actually, it's about 6½ miles," Sampson said. "You can go into the tallest building at Washington State and see the Idaho campus."

Sampson and Floyd will meet as coaching rivals for the first time since those days when Floyd's Iowa State team goes against Sampson's Oklahoma squad in Norman, Okla., tonight.

Floyd coached at Idaho from 1986-88 and was in his second season there when Sampson became the coach at Washington State. Because they were so close in age — Floyd is one year older — and their schools were so near to each other, they became friends, even though they faced each other only twice.

"Back in those days, the scores of my games were 50-something to 40-something," Sampson said. "He was really a high-scoring coach. He scored in the 60s and high 50s. I told Tim he just cut loose with his team."

Sampson isn't exaggerating. In their two meetings during the 1987-88 season, Floyd won the first one 53-49 and Sampson's team took the second 56-43.

"There's a lot of similarities in the way we attempt to do things," Sampson said. "I have a lot of respect for Tim and the way he does things."

"He'd come over and spend time with me in Pullman and I'd make the trek over to Idaho. Sometimes after games, we'd cry on each other's shoulders."

Floyd said it was only natural that he and Sampson became friends.

It's no typo: Towson St. upset Louisville, 81-69

David Ginsburg
Associated Press

TOWSON, Md. — The score, printed in tiny type on the agate page of the sports section, almost certainly required a second glance.

Surely, numerous college basketball fans must have figured it was a typographical error or perhaps a mistake by the copy desk. Maybe it belonged in the section under women's scores.

The particulars surrounding the non-league matchup between Louisville and Towson State were strange enough, but not nearly as extraordinary as the outcome:

Towson State 81, Louisville 69.

Believe it. It really happened Monday night before a near-capacity crowd of 4,281 on this tiny campus north of Baltimore.

Louisville, a two-time NCAA champion led by Denny Crum, scored only nine points in the final nine minutes and got blown away by a sub-.500 team that had lost to Radford and Winthrop.

Louisville went 24-6 last season and reached the Sweet 16 of the NCAA tournament. Although this season's squad doesn't have a senior for only the second time in Crum's 23-year tenure, the Cardinals (12-8) had won 11 of 15 games before Monday, including a squeaker over Kentucky on national TV.

The upset of the highly ranked Wildcats might have done more harm than good for a brash young team that figured to blow past the unheralded Tigers.

"These guys, they just don't listen. They think that one good game makes them a great team," Crum said. "I guess they'll just have to take their lumps until they get it figured out."

The game against Towson State was set up in November when Crum realized that Louisville's participation in the Great Alaska Shootout did not count toward the regular season.

ANTHEM'S 10TH ANNIVERSARY MARKED

Boyz II Men dominates with 3 wins at 22nd American Music Awards

John Antczak
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Boyz II Men capitalized on all but one of their four nominations at the 22nd annual American Music Awards. Ace of Base, Michael Bolton and Reba McEntire received two trophies apiece.

"I'll Make Love to You" brought Boyz II Men honors for favorite single in the pop-rock and soul-rhythm and blues categories, and the vocalists won top soul-R & B group. They lost only a bid for adult contemporary artist.

"It's something we believe in — romance and falling in love," group member Shawn Stockman said backstage.

Monday night's awards show honored such American Music Awards veterans as McEntire and Alabama, along with new stars ranging from Counting Crows to Snoop Doggy Dogg.

Top male artist awards went to Michael Bolton in pop-rock, Babyface in soul-R & B and Garth Brooks in country. Favorite female artists were Mariah Carey in pop-rock, Anita Baker in soul-R & B and McEntire in country.

Bolton also collected the award for favorite adult contemporary artist.

McEntire's other victory was in the country album competition for her Read My Mind, which beat the popular compilation work Common Thread: Songs of the Eagles and Alan Jackson's Who I Am.

Capping a phenomenal rise to popularity, Sweden's Ace of Base quartet was named pop-rock's favorite new artist over All-4-One and Counting Crows, and favorite pop-rock group over Pink Floyd and Stone Temple Pilots.

Comparisons to Sweden's earlier export, ABBA, were inevitable, but Ace of Base member Buddha didn't mind.

"I think ABBA did a great thing for Sweden, so to be the new ABBA is great I think," he told reporters.

Country winners also included Tim McGraw as favorite new artist; Vince Gill's "Whenever You Come Around" as favorite single; and the venerable Alabama, which picked up its 13th consecutive favorite group trophy.

Toni Braxton's Toni Braxton aced the album competition in soul-R&B, and the youthful vocalists of All-4-One won the category's new artist honor.

The Lion King soundtrack was chosen over Counting Crows' August and Everything After and Carey's Music Box as favorite pop-rock album.

Counting Crows did collect a trophy for alternative music artist, and in a bitersweet victory, Nirvana was top heavy metal-hard rock artist. The band's lead singer Kurt Cobain committed suicide last year.

Snoop Doggy Dogg, the rap star accused of murder, won his first American Music Award as favorite rap / hip-hop star.

Egos rise in 'We Are the World' tribute

Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It was a salute to one of the music industry's proudest moments. Apparently, though, no one bothered to tell the artist formerly known as Prince.

As dozens of singers at Monday night's American Music Awards came on stage to sing "We Are the World," the ex-Prince stood there silently sucking a lollipop.

At one point, Quincy Jones handed him a microphone. The artist responded by pulling the lollipop out of his mouth and shoving it in Jones' direction.

Maybe Jones should have kept the sign he posted above the door 10 years ago — on Jan. 28, 1985 — when 45 artists entered A & M Studios in Hollywood to record the song that would eventually raise more than $60 million for African famine relief.

The sign read: "Check your egos at the door."

"That night was an emotional roller coaster for all of us," said Kenny Rogers, who was host of Monday night's 10th anniversary tribute to the song, along with Jones and Harry Belafonte, who conceived the idea.

The song was written by Lionel Richie and Michael Jackson and produced by Jones.

It "had to be more than just a pop hit, it had to capture a special emotion," Jones said.

"We Are the World" was recorded immediately after the 1985 American Music Awards show in an all-night recording session that included Bruce Springsteen, Tina Turner, Huey Lewis and Diana Ross.

Among the artists who sang the song 10 years later were Michael Bolton, Faith Hill, Vince Gill, Paula Abdul and Anita Baker.

Tian Zhuangzhuang's "The Blue Kite" begins play- is set in Beijing during the tumultuous period of ing at the Bijou tonight. The film, banned in China, 1953-65.

DIRECTOR BANNED FOR EFFORTS

'The Blue Kite' plumbs depths of China's Cultural Revolution

Jonathon Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

Quietly, fiercely, Tian Zhuangzhuang's film "The Blue Kite" drifts into the imagination and sticks there.

Set in Beijing during the tumultuous period of 1953-65, the film is both a small story of a child and his mother and a full blown epic, the emotions of which would cram a weeklong PBS drama.

The story centers on the family of a young boy, Tietou. The family copes and sometimes survives the major binges and purges of this period of Chinese history. The story follows them from the heady days of a young new country with a purpose to the chaos and horror of the Cultural Revolution.

Chen Kaige's "Farewell My Concubine" covered much of the same history, but with an overdramatic sweep that took power away from the story. Zhuangzhuang took a different approach with his material, treating the story with complete reality and sincerity.

The stories told in "The Blue Kite" are real: Young women forced to go to "dances" with powerful cadres, school principals herded out before the schoolchildren and tortured, loyal revolutionaries sent to prison camps for voicing opinions during the notorious "Hundred Flowers Movement."

Sadly, it is this realistic approach that got the film banned in China. The film was shot in 1992 and then went before a review board which blocked its completion. The film sat in limbo for a year before finally being edited in the Netherlands, using Zhuangzhuang's notes (he is not allowed to leave the country).

"The Blue Kite" has still not been shown in China, and Zhuangzhuang is barred from making more films.

"The Blue Kite" is not only a remarkable film, but a testament to the passion of its cast and director. With all of the emotion surrounding the film, it might be aspirations and go so wrong?

It is the slow, inexplicable dive into insanity that gives the film its power. It is the best movie yet to portray these events not as frightening aberrations, but as logical steps down the wrong path.

The story cannot be sloughed off as a "Chinese" story, just as the horrors of World War II are not exclusively "German" stories. The film suggests that this sort of draconian craziness may wend its way into any society.

While the movie is based on real events, it is also highly visual and stylized. "The Blue Kite" mixes socialist realism with high modernism to create a film that is both a character study and an image poem.

Blue kites, bright lights, a toy horse — all are metaphors in the film. It is the presence of these recurring metaphors that give the film a feeling of hope. They suggest that now, with movies like this, some sense may be made out of the chaos of those times.

It is ironic that a movie like this, which could help to heal wounds and make sense of the disaster of the Cultural Revolution, is banned in China. Just as America needed "The Deer Hunter," "Apocalypse Now" and "Platoon" to help come to grips with Vietnam, China needs brave artists like Zhuangzhuang to start creating discussion about the Cultural Revolution.

"The Blue Kite" plays at the Bijou tonight at 6:45, Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Friday at 7 p.m., Saturday at 8:45 p.m. and Sunday at 6:45 p.m.

expected to be a huge spectacle, but it is the quiet family moments that make it the most striking.

Tietou is not only one of the most realistic intelligent kids to be in a movie recently, but he is also one of the strangest.

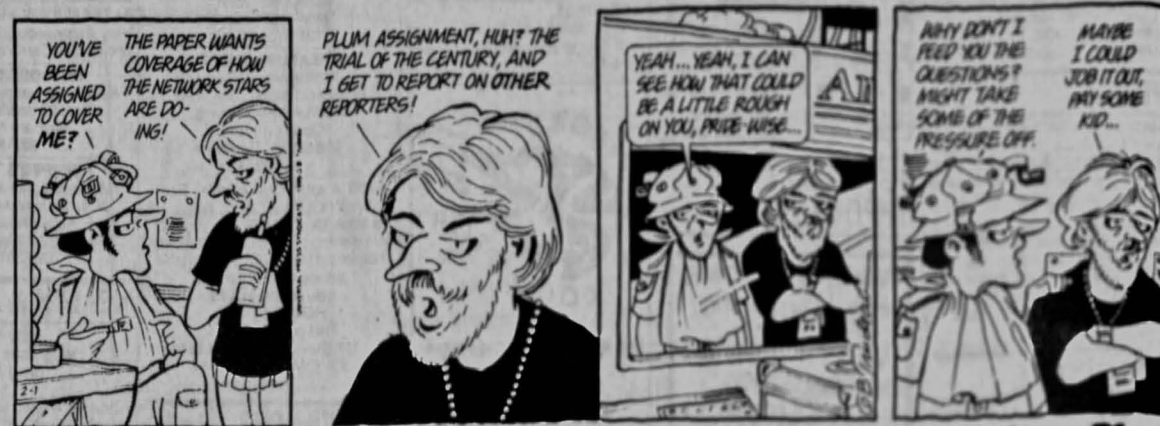

Appearing both adult and childish, his chilling remarks, such as "Daddy's bad. I'm going to kill him," turn his character into a creepy metaphor. He is the spoiled, troubled child of good parents. How could a well-raised child be so impetuous, so thrilled at his own principal's torture? How, indeed, could a country have such good

Think Fast!

30 MINUTE RECIPE

Think Beef.

Cooking Made Easy From Cub!

Italian Beef Stir Fry
 Preparation Time: 24 minutes
 1 pound beef round steak, cut 1/2 to 3/4 inch thick
 2 cloves garlic, crushed
 1 Tbsp. olive oil
 2 small zucchini, thinly sliced
 1 cup cherry tomato halves
 1/2 cup reduced-calorie bottled Italian salad dressing
 2 cups hot cooked spaghetti
 1 Tbsp. grated parmesan cheese
 Cut beef steak crosswise into 1-inch wide strips; cut each strip crosswise in half. Cook and stir garlic in oil in large non-stick skillet over medium-high heat. Add beef strips (1/2 at a time); stir-fry 1 to 1 1/2 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Remove with slotted spoon; keep warm. Add zucchini in same skillet; stir-fry 2 to 3 minutes or until crisp-tender. Return beef to skillet with tomato halves and dressing; heat through. Serve beef mixture over hot pasta; sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. 4 servings.
 Serving suggestion: Toasted garlic bread.
