Last day to add a class, drop without a W

Today is the last day for all UI students to add courses. It is also the final day for undergraduate students to drop classes without receiving a W.

Students wishing to add or drop courses must obtain an add/drop slip from the Registration Center in room 30 of Calvin Hall. The slip must be signed by one's adviser (except for students in the College of Business Administration) and the instructor of the course in order to add or drop a course.

Graduate students may drop courses through April 11.

'Les Miz' breaks Hancher attendance record

"Les Misérables," the No. 1 musical in the world, has also hit the top of the charts at Hancher Auditorium.

The show broke the auditorium's attendance record for a single engagement.

From Jan. 24-29, "Les Miz" sold 18,871 tickets. The previous record, also set by "Les Miz" during a 1991-92 visit to Hancher, was 18,508. This year's total accounted for 97 percent of the seats available for the eight-performance run.

Guards end prison uprising

CHICAGO (AP) — Calm returned to Cook County Jail on Sunday, one day after inmates faced down guards and battled authorities with homemade weapons.

About 230 inmates were involved, Sheriff Michael Sheahan said. The fracas began Saturday morning with a protest in the jail's maximum-security section.

Twenty-one inmates and four guards were injured, Sheahan said. Three inmates were admitted to a hospital and were in fair condition, he said.

Crowd eats up diversity day

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

Sounds of bagpipes, drums and maracas echoed through The Field House Sunday afternoon as Iowans munched on baklava and learned how to write their name in Japanese at the sixth annual UI Cultural Diversity Day.

The festival, which began at noon, kicked off with a cultural parade of about 100 people in native clothing as Koreans, American Indians, Nigerians, Indians and others circled the Main Deck of The Field House.

Katie Ryken, 6, of Coralville, said she thought the parade was interesting.

"I liked all of it," she said. "It was good, and the people were neat."

Her brother, Joe, 3, also enjoyed the parade.

"I liked the drums and the (Chinese) dragon," he said.

About 5,000 Iowans participated in the festival. Proceeds will benefit the student organizations that sponsored the booths.

"The community support amazed me," said Warren Slebos, co-chairman of Cultural Diversity Day. "We had a good turnout. Iowa City was really involved with making the festival a success. A lot of parents brought their children to it to expose them to different cultures."

Games, entertainment, music, an international fashion show and activities for children were a few of the offerings.

UI junior Lisa Sikorski said the festival gave Iowans a chance to experience different cultures.

"This really educated the community about the diverse groups at the university — groups you wouldn't know were actually here," she said.

A series of international cooking demonstrations included sessions on Indian, Turkish and African cooking. Food, ranging from 50 cents to $3, was served at various booths and included curried chicken, egg rolls and tamales.

Marianne Magnusson, a visiting research fellow from Sweden, said she thought the food was the highlight of the festival.

Members of the West Liberty Folkloric Ballet perform in the North Gym of The Field House Sunday. The performance was one of many events which were part of the sixth annual UI Cultural Diversity Day.

"There was a lot of variety, and people could try many different kinds of food at one time," she said. Cultural dances and presentations such as a sari demonstration, a piñata-breaking and aikido were also featured.

UI sophomore Sejal Sura, a participant in the sari demonstration, said the festival gave international students at the UI an opportunity to share their culture and background with the community.

"It was a good exposure to a variety of exotic cultures," she said. "It gave people the chance to share their heritage with others and take part in a variety of cultures at once. It's a way to unite the students."

UI freshman Ramy Abu-Yousef, who is from Palestine, said cultures are underexposed in Iowa City and the festival was a step in the right direction.

"In Iowa City, where there is a university, there aren't enough opportunities for people to see different cultures," he said. "There are a number of cultures at the university, but they are not exposed except during an event like this."

Activities to fill up Black History Month

Sara Teasdale
The Daily Iowan

February marks Black History Month, but Asabre Agyeman doesn't believe the celebration should be limited to 28 days.

Agyeman, a UI senior majoring in Spanish and graphic art, said black history should be taught 365 days a year. He plans to attend some of the events scheduled at the UI this month.

"I have been planning on going, but black history really should be incorporated with American history," Agyeman said. "If we started teaching black history at the same time we started teaching our children American history, then there wouldn't be a difference between American history and black history months."

GOP criticizes pick for surgeon general

Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans predicted trouble for President Clinton's surgeon general nominee Sunday and chastised the White House for not telling Congress sooner that the doctor performed abortions.

"Will it be in some difficulty? Yes," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said, when asked about the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster Jr., 61.

Foster

"I do think it is in serious trouble," Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said in a separate interview.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, D-Utah, said on CNN's "Late Edition" that the nomination is in trouble "to a degree, but I don't think it's fair to judge him until he has a chance to testify, and I suspect that he'll come off pretty well."

The Tennessee gynecologist-obstetrician came to Clinton's attention through a teen-age pregnancy program he founded in Nashville's housing developments. It urges teen-agers to delay sexual activity by building their self-esteem and does not provide abortions.

After Foster's selection was announced, Sen. Dole said, "I don't think it's fair to judge him until he has a chance to testify, and I suspect that he'll come off pretty well."

Financial aid services deliver meager payoff

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

From the college coupons handed out at the Union to fliers posted on bulletin boards across campus, scholarship-search agencies use eye-catching sales pitches to convince students they are eligible for billions of unclaimed financial aid dollars.

But promises of easy money don't always pan out.

Three years ago, UI senior Brian Fritz paid $75 for a scholarship agency to send him a list of about 20 private corporations he could apply to for financial aid.

The agency responded quickly, but it took them two months to send Fritz the information he requested. When Fritz tried to apply for some of the private scholarships, he was told many of them were already taken or that he did not meet requirements. Some of the scholarships' criteria included having a certain grade-point average, having a specific financial need or having a father who is a war veteran.

"I didn't think I'd been ripped off," Fritz said. "By going through one of these scholarship agencies, I thought it would be timesaving for me because they used computer searches to find their information. I thought this would increase the likelihood of me finding a match with a company. "They did guarantee that if I applied to all the places and still didn't receive any aid, then they would pay me $100 back. At the time, I didn't think it would be hard on my part to prove that I'd actually done all I could to get the money."

Although Fritz was never awarded any of the "unclaimed billions," he doesn't hold a grudge against the agency or feel bad that he's lost $75.

"Although I've lost the money, I

Scholarship options offered at no cost

Sheba Wheeler

Applying for financial aid can be a frustrating process of filling out complicated forms, wading through long processing delays and trying to bypass governmental restrictions.

Scholarship-search agencies around the country make big promises to strapped college students. They claim that for a fee — sometimes hundreds of dollars — they will send students lists of where to obtain billions of dollars worth of unclaimed scholarship money.

However, instead of relying on the efforts of scholarship-search agencies, Cathy Wilcox, associate director of the UI Office of Student Financial Aid, advised students to take the initiative in researching all available options for monetary assistance.

"Now is the best time to apply for (federal) financial aid because the application to apply for aid is free and other sources of information for aid are available," she said.

According to the Des Moines Better Business Bureau, the lists of scholarship sources the search agencies sell are available at no cost from university financial aid

36 minors nabbed in weekend bar patrols

Kathryn Phillips

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police began sweeping through downtown bars Thursday looking for minors, and by the end of the weekend 36 bar patrons were issued tickets for possession of alcohol under the legal age.

For UI minors determined to down a cold one, East College Street proved to be a risky watering hole.

The Field House bar, 111 E. College St., and the Union Bar & Grill, 121 E. College St., were hit the hardest, with 24 underage drinkers written up.

Despite the number of citations, Lt. Dan Sellers, Iowa City police evening watch commander, said the amount of alcohol-related citations wasn't outrageous.

"To write 60 drinking citations in three days is not uncommon," Sell-

Old Capitol guide conducts landmark tours

What used to be a building full of politicians running the state of Iowa and the UI is now a serene empty landmark entered only by the occasional group of tourists following UI freshman and Old Capitol tour guide Raechel Sittig. Sittig, who has been a tour and sporting stickers from all over the world. Sittig explained that the hatbox's owner must have been a wealthy person who did a lot of traveling.

taking the visitors to all the lower- and upper-level rooms.

"Usually, I go the set way because it's the way that the book teaches us," she said. "It's really the easiest way to get around the building."

To amuse herself during tours, instead of simply telling people about objects in the room, Sittig often asks people to guess about an object she holds up, she said.

"I just ask people questions about items because I get tired of telling them, 'This is what people back then used to ... blah, blah, blah,'" she said. "It's a lot more interesting to ask because sometimes people come up with some interesting guesses."

A pair of scissors with a pan attached to one blade was once used to cut and trim candles, but some visitors have guessed the contraption is for trimming moustaches.

"I don't know why they would have moustache scissors in a library," Sittig said.

A laptop desk, which Sittig tells visitors is an ancestor of the laptop computer, usually draws some chuckles.

The most interesting answer Sittig has heard was when she asked a group what a ceramic bowl with a hole on top of it is.

"It's a spittoon for chewing tobacco," she said. "But someone guessed that it was a bedpan once. He just went, 'Oh!' with that nervous little laugh when he found out what it was."

As the tour drew to a close, Sittig's eyes opened a little wider and her voice became more excited as she described her favorite item on the tour: a hatbox.

Picking up the round leather box, she told the group how important hats once were as status symbols. The box is covered with stickers from all over the world, but the person who owned it remains a mystery.

"I like talking about the hatbox because it's probably one of the most interesting things," Sittig said. "The initials on it are R.J.F., and we have no idea who it was."

Sittig's shift ended when the group left and she locked the doors, a task which would seem routine for most businesses.

For Sittig, however, it was a bit different; the original locks are still used, and she has to use a little more strength to turn the 4-inch key.

Director improvised scenes in 'Before Sunrise'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ethan Hawke said director Richard Linklater made some scenes up as he went along in "Before Sunrise."

Hawke, who co-stars with Julie Delpy as love-struck travelers in the new movie, said Linklater honed his ideas for the film during a four-week rehearsal in Vienna, Austria, where the action takes place.

"There were a lot of things where Rick would say in the script, 'Scene 17, funny scene where Ethan and Julie meet up with a Viennese local,' and we didn't know what that would be."

"And then Rick would meet these weird guys who were in a play, and Rick would say, 'Why don't you come be in this movie and hand out fliers for your play?' There were a lot of scenes like that."

Hawke

"It was mostly scripted improv. We would improvise, talk about it and Rick would go home and write a scene."

'Days of Our Lives' diva sues for loan repayment

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — No cameras were rolling as soap star Deirdre Hall tearfully recounted how she loaned all her money to her cancer-stricken therapist.

The "Days of Our Lives" star was in Orange County Superior Court to reclaim the $800,000 that George Barkouras got before his death in January 1992. "That was all the money I had," the actress testified Friday.

Hall, who paid for Barkouras' advice from 1982 through 1991 and said the loan was her way to help in his battle with cancer, is suing his family and former associates.

"I think everybody around Dr. Barkouras was dedicated to his recovery, his peace of mind and his comfort," she said. "I don't think anyone who knew him would have done less than I did."

Country star never spied husband drinking

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Lorrie Morgan says that even though her husband, Keith Whitley, died of alcohol poisoning, she never saw him drink.

"I knew things were wrong when I didn't hear from him or if he was late coming home. He would show up at the house, not like falling down drunk, but I would know that he had been drinking," Morgan said in an interview to be broadcast Wednesday on cable TV's The Nashville Network.

"We didn't have liquor in the house. He would keep it somewhere; I didn't know where it was."

Whitley, also a singer, died of an accidental overdose of alcohol in 1989 at age 33.

Morgan, whose hits include "What Part of No" and "Dear Me," was a co-host of last week's American Music Awards.

Ray Charles ranks career above matrimony

VANCOUVER (AP) — Marriage is like milk to Ray Charles.

"Milk is a great drink, but not everybody can drink it," he says. "It's the same with marriage. Marriage is a great institution. I have tried it, but I cannot handle it."

Charles, who acknowledges nine children by seven different women, was married twice. "I figure that was enough," he said. "I don't want to give anyone else any more misery."

The 64-year-old Charles, now single, said his work is his life and that can be pretty hard to take.

"I'm not the kind of man who can take my wife with me everywhere I go," he said. "I cannot stand the pressure of the two things, making sure that she is this and that. You're too busy and your wife gets lonely. It can create havoc unless a person really understands."

Charles will make his annual appearance Saturday on the Variety Club Telethon in Vancouver.

BOTH SIDES AIRED OVER WEEKEND

Death penalty debate heats up in conference

Mike Glover
Associated Press

JOHNSTON, Iowa — Both sides of the effort to reinstate capital punishment head back to the Statehouse today armed with emotional arguments gathered during an extraordinary statewide hearing.

With anger and sorrow — and plenty of biblical references — supporters and opponents made their case to lawmakers, who are crafting an end to the 30-year ban on the death sentence.

Relatives of victims of gruesome murders demanded those victims not be forgotten. Ministers urged tolerance, while legal experts sparred over the effectiveness of capital punishment.

Emotion was the order of the day Saturday during a gathering where hundreds of Iowans jammed into 19 high-tech conference rooms around the state to listen and argue about whether the state should end its 30-year ban on capital punishment.

"We are not here for sympathy or revenge. We are here for justice," said George Colthurst, whose daughter and her family were murdered in a high-profile Indianola case.

"Our faith calls us to break the cycle of violence," countered David Janes, a minister from Forest City.

The event was a two-hour public hearing by the House Judiciary Committee on a proposal it's considering to reinstate the death penalty. The hearing was carried over the state's fiber-optic network, and cable television companies beamed the event into 48 cities on public access channels.

As the debate swept around the state, hearing rooms were generally jammed as both sides traded arguments, held signs and pressed their points of view on lawmakers.

From Guthrie Center, Daniel Daggett Sr. described in a halting voice the brutal murder of his granddaughter.

"Each one of our family members died partially that day," he said. Those who would commit such crimes "should be put to death."

His wife, Laura, said simply, "I can't bury another grandchild."

Marcia Sanghold, a Methodist minister from Wall Lake, said everyone has sympathy for those who lose relatives to criminals.

"Killing their killers to teach the world that killing is wrong will not restore your loved ones," she said.

Lois Laughlin said she also lost a child to murder but opposes capital punishment.

"Killing the killer does nothing to restore the loss," she said. "Is this push a political ploy to convince citizens it is doing something about crime?"

"If I thought it deterred today, I would be a supporter instead of an opponent," said David Baldus, a UI law professor who is one of the nation's leading experts on capital punishment.

"It is a false promise; it will not have an impact on violent crime," he said.

From Indianola, the Rev. Norm White said returning to the death sentence would brutalize society, and he sarcastically suggested that executions be public to all.

"I suggest we use the guillotine on the Capitol steps in Des Moines," he said.

From Bettendorf, Cheryl Jensen haltingly told of the slaying of her daughter, and she urged that lawmakers not limit the death penalty solely to adults.

"If they are tried as adults, they should be eligible for the death penalty," she said.

Forest City Police Chief Doug Book said, "I stand in support but not fanatical support" for bringing back the death sentence. He said the legal system currently ignores those who are victims of crime.

"I deal with the victims," Book said. "I can't forget the victims."

Police pursue possible lead in Tammy Zywicki murder

Associated Press

Two killings, 16 years apart. Both victims were young women. The body of one victim was found in a ditch in rural Dubuque County. The body of the other victim was found alongside an interstate highway in Missouri.

Could there be a connection?

"Anytime there's any kind of incident that's at all similar or if people don't think it's similar and we get called, we're going to investigate no matter what the call is," Illinois State Police Master Sgt. Dave Spahn said Sunday.

Spahn said police are investigating a possible link between a man arrested for a 1978 Iowa killing and the 1992 slaying of Grinnell College student Tammy Zywicki.

Tom Paul Van Skike, 42, of Maquoketa, Iowa, was charged last Friday with first-degree murder in the death of 17-year-old Lynda Rae Manuel of Anamosa, Iowa, in June 1978. Her remains were found almost a year later in a ditch along a gravel road in rural Dubuque County.

Zywicki, 21, was last seen Aug. 23, 1992 on Interstate 80 near Utica, Ill., where a truck driver reportedly stopped at her stalled car. Zywicki was on her way back to school in Grinnell from her New Jersey home. Her body was found wrapped in a blanket Sept. 2, 1992 along Interstate 44 in southwest Missouri.

Spahn said officials are investigating Van Skike in the death of Zywicki.

"It's being looked into like every other lead we've had on that case," he said. "Everything is considered a lead."

Since Zywicki's killing, police have had dozens of leads, but no charges have been filed.

STUDENTS PROCRASTINATE

Stalling hinders success of at-home course work

Shayla Thiel

The Daily Iowan

Although correspondence-course assignments can be turned in at the student's discretion, UI officials say most students tend to procrastinate and may never complete the pricey classes.

Correspondence courses allow students to receive UI credit hours without ever entering a classroom. Instead, students sign up for courses in the Center for Credit Programs in the International Center, look up assignments in a course pack and send completed assignments via mail or fax to an assigned UI professor.

Students may start the classes at any time and are given nine months to complete a course. At $71 per semester hour, failing to make the grade can be expensive, according to some correspondence-course instructors.

Students do not receive a refund for courses they do not complete.

According to Beth Hill, assistant director of student services for the Division of Continuing Education, about 5,200 UI students are enrolled in 160 correspondence courses ranging from calligraphy to calculus.

A majority of the students enrolled in May, and the March deadline to complete the courses is fast approaching, she said. However, many teachers agreed most students will not turn in assignments on time.

"I'd say close to 75 to 80 percent never complete a course," said UI sociology Teaching Assistant Bill Montgomery, who teaches a correspondence course on criminology. "I can always tell when someone is about to graduate because I start to get assignments all at once and letters asking me to expedite the process of sending their work."

When students fail to control their pace, drop slips become common, Montgomery said.

"Unfortunately, it's not an infrequent thing, but I guess it goes along with the territory," he said.

Hill blamed student procrastination, not course structure.

"I don't think it has anything to do with correspondence courses," she said. "It has to do with personality types."

The advantage of unbiased personal instruction makes correspondence study appealing to a number of students, Hill said.

"It is a very egalitarian form of education because the instructor is not sitting there looking at you and making a judgment," she said. "It's also a one-on-one type of education."

UI senior Andy Scott, a journalism major, signed up for two political science correspondence courses when he began an out-of-state internship in September.

"I thought I'd try and do them when I didn't have to work, but I didn't get that much finished," he said. "I'll get it done before May, but it's just not real exciting."

Getting motivated to tackle the class work is the hardest part, said UI mathematics Professor Dan Anderson.

"The biggest problem is kids never actually getting started," he said. "A lot of students sign up and never even begin."

Anderson said students who take his correspondence courses often let the work pile up.

"Many students realize with two weeks to go before deadline that they haven't done anything," he said.

It's tough for students to go above and beyond a normal course load on their own time, said Marilyn Rose, an adjunct assistant professor of anthropology.

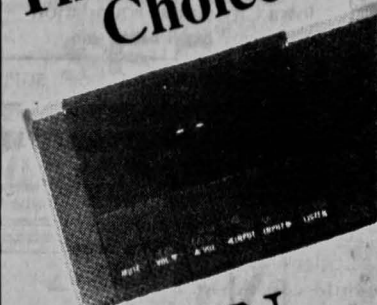

"It takes a lot of self-motivation to complete a correspondence course," she said.

Scott said correspondence courses have given him an appreciation of the conventional classroom.

"It kind of makes you appreciate being able to go to class and sleep through it and sort of pick it up through osmosis," he said.

Simpson lawyers dredge up witnesses' flaws

Julia Prodis
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The sometimes sordid personal lives of witnesses and potential witnesses in the O.J. Simpson murder case are facing minitrials themselves as relentless lawyers expose skeletons in their closets.

"You drink a lot, don't you?" defense lawyer Carl Douglas asked witness Ronald Shipp.

"I used to," Shipp responded from the witness stand.

And, Douglas asked, what about taking a dip in Simpson's Jacuzzi with a 6-foot-1-inch "blond female" who was not Shipp's wife?

Yikes! Is anything off-limits as lawyers try to shoot down the believability of witnesses?

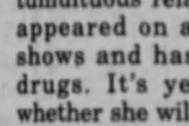

With questions like these, could you pass the credibility test?

Whether Rollerblading down Bundy Street that fateful summer night, collecting evidence at the murder scene or having a heart-to-heart conversation with the former football star, witnesses better be prepared to have their dirty laundry hung out to dry in front of the jury and millions of TV viewers.

Faye Resnick, one of Nicole Brown Simpson's best friends, wrote a book about the Simpsons' tumultuous relationship. She has appeared on a number of talk shows and has admitted using drugs. It's yet to be decided whether she will be called to testify.

Police Detective Mark Fuhrman, who found a bloody glove on Simpson's property, has been accused by the defense of being a racist.

Jill Shively, who said she saw Simpson driving erratically near Brown Simpson's condo the night of the murders, accepted $7,600 from supermarket tabloids and "Hard Copy" for her story. She wasn't called as a witness during his preliminary hearing.

Simpson

Mary Anne Gerch, who says she saw four men — none of them Simpson — near Brown Simpson's condo the night of the slayings, has a list of civil lawsuits filed against her for failing to pay suppliers for her jewelry store business. One prosecutor referred to her as a "known liar."

Shipp, who endured intense cross-examination, testified that after Brown Simpson was dead, Simpson confided that he had had dreams of killing her.

Although he concluded his testimony for the prosecution last week, sources said the defense is probing further into Shipp's background and might recall him to testify.

Just what part of witnesses' personal lives are relevant to what they saw or heard the night of the murders? And does having a history of alcohol abuse or getting paid to tell your story to a tabloid TV show make you a liar?

The scrutiny of witnesses is an age-old legal tactic, but the international publicity and gavel-to-gavel TV coverage of the trial seems to have taken it to new heights.

Simpson's defense lawyers have private investigators checking into the backgrounds of witnesses. Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden told Superior Court Judge Lance Ito he needed 30 days to investigate a list of 14 surprise defense witnesses he said included "heroin addicts, thieves, felons ... (and) a court-certified pathological liar."

"I think there's a lot of pressure in the Simpson case to attack with absolutely every weapon you have instead of selecting and crafting your weapon," said Tom Hoopes, a Boston criminal defense lawyer and former prosecutor.

And he said that has pushed lawyers "not to necessarily follow their best trial instincts" and instead be led by pressure and "the fear they will leave something out."

Lawyer Harvey Levin, who represents Gerch, said the attacks against his client have been heartless. "This is a woman that came forward, and she's being crucified by the press and the prosecution," Levin said. "That's not the way to try a case and expect people to come forward."

"This is just what people are afraid of when they say, 'I don't want to get involved.'"

Whether people's personal backgrounds are significant or not, legal experts say one thing is sure: Lawyers better choose their battles carefully, or their attacks could backfire and leave jurors angry at mean-spirited attorneys and sympathetic to the witnesses.

"It's always a boomerang when you throw something at a witness like ... 'Do you have a drinking problem?'" said lawyer Gerry Spence, who successfully defended Imelda Marcos.

"It destroys not the witness, but the lawyer because there are people on the jury that have drinking problems or have people they love that have drinking problems."

Dole proposes potential vice presidents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole said Sunday he "has been tested in a lot of ways," giving him a sound background for his upcoming run for president. He mentioned several possible running mates, including Jack Kemp, Colin Powell and governors from California and several other states.

The Kansas Republican said he will formally announce his candidacy in April, around the 50th anniversary of one of his most severe tests: a World War II injury.

Dole will be 73 years old in 1996, making him older than any president at the start of his first term if he is elected. In light of that, he was asked on NBC's "Meet the Press" whether he would commit to only serve one term as president.

"Well, I must say that's an option that people have talked about," he said. "But ... we have not made a decision. I assume we will make that decision before we announce so the American people will know it."

Dole sought to identify himself with the ideas of Kemp, the conservative who says Republicans should create economic opportunities and reach out more to minorities.

Dole went on to mention former Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell and Gov. Pete Wilson of California as possible running mates.

Dutch head home after massive flooding

TIJEL, Netherlands (AP) — Flood evacuees poured back into their precarious home region Sunday, grateful their centuries-old dams held and relieved to see their houses above water.

The largest evacuation in Dutch history ended when authorities determined centuries-old dikes would hold, allowing 250,000 people to head home.

Flooding on the Netherlands' major rivers during the past two weeks forced residents to seek higher ground. About 70,000 had returned to their homes in previous days, and authorities gave the remainder the green light Sunday.

Returning refugees clogged roads in the low-lying region. Many pulled their most treasured belongings in trailers. Some recovered truckloads of possessions they had parked on bridges to keep dry. One bridge was lined with new cars parked there by an auto dealer.

"You just feel powerless and scared of the water," said Klaas van Dee, who owns a woodcutting business in the village of Echeld, near Tiel. "It was really frightening."

"When we got back and saw a sign saying 'Welcome back to Echeld,' tears were streaming down my face."

Heavy rains and melting snow caused flooding in Germany, France and Belgium. The run-off coursed through Dutch rivers, causing some to overflow their banks.

Astronauts Michael Foale, left, and Eileen Collins, the first woman shuttle pilot, work in the middeck of the space shuttle Discovery in this image from NASA-TV Sunday. The shuttle and its crew are scheduled to rendezvous with the Russian space station Mir today. Mission Control monitored one remaining leaky jet aboard Discovery early Sunday while considering whether the seepage will affect a close encounter with the space station.

Leaky jet hampers shuttle rendezvous

Maria Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The message from the Russian Space Agency to NASA was clear Sunday: No way can your leaking shuttle come near our Mir.

With time running out, NASA ordered Discovery's astronauts to shut down and depressurize repeatedly a leaking jet in a long-shot effort to stop the drainage and permit a close encounter today with Russia's orbiting Mir station. It didn't work.

Russian officials insist that unless the steering jet stops spewing fuel, Discovery must stay at least 400 feet from Mir — 365 feet farther than planned. They fear small chunks of frozen propellant might damage critical optical sensors on a Soyuz capsule attached to the station and needed by the three Mir cosmonauts to return to Earth next month.

Mission operations director Randy Stone said NASA engineers believe the leaking nitrogen tetroxide would not attach to anything and poses no danger. But the Russians aren't convinced, "and it's their call," he said.

"They don't fully understand all of the capabilities of our vehicle. ... It's mostly just the very methodical and conservative engineering approach that they take to things when they don't have a full knowledge of the system," Stone said.

"It's probably the same approach that I would take if I were on the other side," he said.

The original plan called for Discovery and its crew of six to fly within 35 feet of the station as a dress rehearsal for the first shuttle-Mir docking in June. NASA wanted to see how well the shuttle handled next to a 100-ton station and test navigation and communication systems.

"Obviously, the closer we can get, the better it will be," said Discovery pilot Eileen Collins. "But even if we only go to 1,000 feet ... we will still be getting a lot of good information."

At the end of his workday, shuttle commander James Wetherbee thanked flight controllers for all their hard work.

"You all know how much I would like to approach to 10 meters (33 feet) because I think it's valuable. However, if we can't then we're confident ... it's the right answer," he said.

Months before the mission, the U.S. and Russian space agencies agreed that Discovery would forego the close encounter if any one of seven critical steering thrusters failed.

One of those key thrusters began leaking Saturday, but the five Americans and one Russian aboard Discovery stopped the seepage by turning the jet off and depressurizing it. They tried the same thing Sunday on the thruster that began leaking shortly after Friday's liftoff, but to no avail.

Later, they reduced the pressure even more in a last-ditch attempt to eliminate contaminants and thereby close that jet's valve and again had no luck.

While the leaking jet is not crucial for a close approach to Mir, it is linked to two other jets, one of which is. To turn off one jet in the cluster knocks out all three.

BUDGET BATTLE CONTINUES

GOP belittles Clinton's deficit cuts

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The battle lines on President Clinton's $1.61 trillion budget formed Sunday, with Republicans attacking Clinton for "taking a walk" on the hard choices needed to control the deficit.

The GOP's top budget officials in both the House and Senate promised to be more courageous by tackling popular entitlement programs, focusing particularly on Medicare, which provides health coverage for the elderly; and Medicaid, which does the same for the poor.

Top administration officials countered that Clinton had cut the deficit more than any president in history. They accused Republicans of hiding from the American people the painful spending cuts that will be needed to meet the Republican goal of a balanced budget by 2002.

Both sides sought to score political points as the administration prepared to release its 1996 budget today. While Clinton's plan may not be dead on arrival, the intensity of the criticism showed the Republican-controlled Congress clearly intended to pursue its own strategy as laid out in the "Contract With America."

White House budget director Alice Rivlin said Clinton had made hard choices by pushing a $605 billion deficit-cutting program through Congress during his first year in office without the aid of any Republican votes. She said the 1996 document will build on that success.

"We cannot be faulted for not taking the deficit seriously. When we came in it was out of control," she said. "This budget keeps the deficit under control. We've gotten it under $200 billion."

According to documents obtained by the Associated Press, Clinton's budget will cut government spending by $144 billion over the next five years and use $63 billion of the savings to provide middle-class tax relief and the rest to lower the deficit.

The administration shows the 1996 deficit falling for a third straight year to $192.5 billion, then starting to rise and hovering close to $200 billion for the rest of the decade.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici said the 1996 deficit in Clinton's budget is $30 billion higher than Clinton projected a year ago and without drastic action would top $450 billion shortly after the year 2003.

"This budget does not go far enough. Essentially what (Clinton) did was take a walk on the deficit."

MASSACRE RECALLED

Bosnians worry world has forgotten

Srecko Latal
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The mortar shell that exploded in Sarajevo's marketplace and killed 68 people made the world take notice. The bloody scene was televised around the globe.

But a year later, many in the Bosnian capital worry that the bloodshed has become another forgotten chapter in a sad continuing book. And Senad Karavdic wonders if his wife's death had any meaning at all.

"We hoped it would be the last massacre," Karavdic, 35, said Sunday, his voice trembling as he placed a paper wreath on a grave at the mud-churned Lion's Cemetery near downtown Sarajevo.

Karavdic's 34-year-old wife, Hasnija, died in the blast, and he said he hoped international outrage would silence the guns forever. Now, with fighting in its 34th month and Sarajevo still under Serb siege, he cannot hide his desperation.

"The massacre was the chance for the world to finally do something, but nothing has changed, and this will never end," he said.

Families of the 68 dead paid their respects at the graveyard Sunday, letting the pain of lost husbands, wives and children wash over them again. Some cried senselessly. Others wailed and keened as friends and relatives propped them up. Thick snowflakes shrouded the graves.

Karavdic's bitterness contrasts sharply with the rare glimmer of optimism that shimmered across the Bosnian capital last February even amid the pain left by the massacre.

The scenes recorded by television crews at the marketplace — the bodies of the dead and more than 200 wounded lying in blood amid twisted metal and shredded fabric — brought the world into increased involvement.

Even though it was never clear who fired it, the single 82mm mortar shell succeeded where reports of Serb prison camps, systematic rapes and mass killing had failed.

For a few months, "robust peace-keeping" by the United Nations appeared to work. Serbs took the threat of NATO air strikes seriously, pulling heavy guns out of Sarajevo's immediate vicinity. Streetcars trundled along Sniper Alley again as an eerie air of quasi-normality suffused the shell-scarred streets of the city.

But dreams of peace eroded when warring parties failed to agree on a final peace deal, increasing Bosnian Serb defiance.

In April, NATO proved ineffective in stemming a Bosnian Serb assault on the eastern government-held enclave of Gorazde. The Serbs called the world's bluff, shrugging off several small-scale NATO air strikes and the threat of others that never materialized.

Today the wounds and memories of the marketplace shelling still hurt, while a sense of international betrayal and helplessness colors the thoughts of most of Sarajevo's remaining 280,000 residents.

Sunday's edition of the daily Oslobodjenje reserved its last five pages for obituaries for the dead of last Feb. 5.

"Markale (marketplace) was perhaps the only time the heartless world seriously threatened the criminals," the paper said. "If the criminals could have truly been made scared, Sarajevo would not be a besieged city any longer, and Bosnia would be a free country now."

GOODS SLAPPED WITH HIGH TARIFFS

U.S., China face off over trade

Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The warning shots have been fired in the U.S.-China trade war, but both sides are leaving room for a truce before real damage is done to one of the world's most important trade and political relationships.

The United States, exasperated by China's failure to crack down on intellectual property theft, on Saturday announced 100 percent tariffs on $1.08 billion worth of Chinese products.

China promptly retaliated, claiming its national dignity had been violated. It placed 100 percent tariffs on a variety of U.S. products, including video games, compact discs, cigarettes and alcohol.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor's pronouncement that "we are drawing the line here today" on trade came just three days after an annual State Department report faulting China as an authoritarian state that had failed to improve its record of "widespread and well-documented human rights abuses."

Both were admissions that President Clinton's decision last spring to remove the link between trading privileges and human rights had done little to promote improvements in either area. China's trade surplus with the United States was nearly $30 billion last year, second only to Japan and growing rapidly.

The trade dispute is serious. It could, for example, result in China turning to Europe for billions of dollars worth of future aircraft purchases.

But both sides are likely to work hard to keep it within manageable limits.

"I was surprised by the Chinese reaction; I thought it would be much worse than it is," said Robert Dernberger, professor of economics at the University of Michigan's Center for Chinese Studies.

"Who cares if they slap tariffs on U.S. cigarettes?" he asked. "The restrained nature of the Chinese reaction indicates they want this resolved."

Both countries put off the effective date of the tariff increases until Feb. 26, providing a three-week grace period. Only last week, Kantor said the tariffs would go into effect "just a few days" after Saturday.

Even as he announced the trade sanctions Saturday, Kantor praised the Chinese for making some progress in enforcing a 1992 agreement on copyright and trademark protection. "China has begun to make important changes in its enforcement system. It has launched nationwide raids — but so far only against retailers and, frankly, the little guys," he said.

The higher tariffs directly affect only about 5 percent of total bilateral trade, which reached $46 billion last year.

Winston Lord, the State Department's assistant secretary for East Asian and Pacific affairs, stressed last week that "we are determined to keep our relationship on a positive note, and we'll keep working at it."

He noted that China helped ease dangerous situations in North Korea and Cambodia and said some of the current U.S.-China difficulties may be related to the domestic political situation in Beijing.

PUNISHING POOR STUDENTS

Tuition rebate is wrong

A special Iowa state Board of Regents committee is considering a 5 percent tuition rebate for students who graduate from state universities in four years.

This is not only a bad idea, it is an exceptionally bad idea.

The purpose behind the proposal is really very simple and honorable: The rebate is expected to serve as an incentive for students to graduate from college in four years and make seats available for other students — other cash-paying students. This idea sends a very sad and very dangerous message.

The idea says that learning isn't as important as speeding students through the mass-production sheepskin machines that are today's modern universities. The proposal sends the message that a degree with a minimum number of credit hours is more important than knowledge for knowledge's sake. Undergraduates are welcome to stay at the UI and sate their thirst for knowledge, but they have to pay 5 percent more than students who get a piece of paper and leave.

The journey is no longer as important as the goal. How much and what students learn isn't as important as how quickly the students learn it.

The idea is patently unfair and discriminatory, not only to students who seek to stay in school and learn, but also to students who can't afford to graduate in four years.

Approximately 75 percent of the undergraduates at Iowa's three state universities take more than four years to graduate. The committee has yet to determine why. Some students stay in school because colleges and universities are usually the only places to learn from professors and doctoral degree holders. The vast majority of students who stay in school for longer than four years do so because they can't afford to graduate in less than four years.

Even when parents or student loans pay for tuition, students are still responsible for rent, books and other living expenses. Very few students can independently afford the cost of a four-year degree. An additional few affluent families can finance a four-year degree.

Under the proposal, these are the students who will be rewarded for speeding through college. A tuition rebate will serve as a monetary punishment for financially challenged students who must work between classes or semesters.

Apparently, the committee hasn't fully considered how to finance what amounts to a 5 percent tuition discount for the students and families who can afford four uninterrupted years of college. If the idea is implemented, the tuition payments of poorer students will be used to subsidize the education of rich students.

A tuition rebate is wrong and should not be adopted. If course availability is the goal, more summer classes should be offered. If funding is a problem, the regents should consider consolidating and combining redundant courses and degree programs offered at the three state universities.

Whatever the solution, rewarding rich students and punishing poor students isn't the answer.

AN UNFORTUNATE METAPHOR

'Consumers' demanding

In the old days, students took four years to complete what was supposed to be a four-year degree. These days, however, students can take five, six or seven years — or forever.

Many think it is a problem.

But a solution is on the way in the form of bill proffered by Rep. Robert Brunkhorst, R-Waverly. The bill, if passed into law, would help convince students to finish in due time by charging in-state students enrolled at regent universities or the state's community colleges out-of-state tuition once they pass the magic number of 160 undergraduate credits.

How this would nudge students who take extra time because they are short on credit hours or not penalize returning older students is anybody's guess. It's a crackpot idea and hardly worth an argument.

Or it would be if it weren't for Brunkhorst's rationale. "Our regents' institutions are not bending to the demands of the consumers," he claimed.

The consumers?

The bottom line is that education is not a hamburger, and human beings are not commodities.

OK, with the invasion of standard business practices into the hallowed halls of ivy came the invasion of standard business jargon. In the business world people do not exist — only those who sell and those who buy and consume. The UI, like some gigantic Burger King, exists to make the consumer happy. Generally speaking, the student is seen as the consumer. But in Brunkhorst's reformulation, the taxpayer is the consumer.

This makes the UI a factory extruding a product. But the UI is not spitting out its product fast enough, and this is making the consumer both impatient and very unhappy.

Brunkhorst's unfortunate metaphor, evoking as it does images of cannibalism, can be dismissed as just that — an unfortunate metaphor. But unfortunate metaphors have a habit of exposing how people feel about things.

The bottom line is that education is not a hamburger, and human beings are not commodities. In the coming dialogue on these matters, could we try to keep that in mind?

America's congressional 'Christmas Carol'

It has been my unhappy but oft-noted experience that in those very moments in which we feel most strongly the sense of our own virtue, we are behaving like cads. So pardon my suspicion of America's infatuation with the robust, do-something, "Contract"-minded 104th Congress. The "Newt-onian" emphasis on building character (to redeem us from whatever liberal vortex it was presumed we were drifting toward) seems to me composed of equal parts stubbornness and miserliness. In fact, we are living out the instructive story of Ebenezer Scrooge at the nation's highest levels these days.

You remember Scrooge — Charles Dickens' perfectly rendered, miserably wealthy miser of the heart and pocketbook. He is perhaps best known for an outburst that Newt Gingrich mirrored in his moment of electoral triumph. One day during the Christmas season, two solicitors came to Scrooge seeking monetary assistance on behalf of the poor, particularly children in poverty. (The following is an approximation, not a direct quote.)

"What?" he howled. "Do we not have workhouses for the poor?" The solicitors dolefully assured him that these hellish dens were still being kept up and were stunned to hear his expression of relief in response to the news: "Fine. Then you have no need of my charity. Good day, gentlemen."

Gingrich will go down in history as the upstanding fellow who reminded us that we have orphanages and expressed his feeling that these are the perfect places in which to warehouse children of the poor for the sake of the state. While the dastardly character of his remark has been given ample comment, the inherently interventionist and big-government move it would represent has not been noted as sharply as it deserves.

Gingrich apparently believes it is perfectly fine — positively virtuous, in fact — for government to tear like a lion into the heart of the lives of poor families, as long as we stop pestering huge corporations with such bothersome expectations as payment of a decent level of tax on their multinational pilferings. This is the same fellow who called Robert Dole the "tax collector for the welfare state"! What that might make Gingrich is something to ponder — the warden of the workhouse state, I suppose.

The belief that all work has the power to infuse people with character and initiative is a hallmark of the new crop of Republican revolutionaries. I personally enjoy abundant doses of hard work. But I am lucky and conscious enough to recognize my good fortune. I have work that keeps my mind moving in many directions at once (some would say too many), work that does not keep me chained constantly to one spot on a factory floor and work that gives me some say-so in policies and procedures that I help develop and implement. Not everyone is so lucky.

The fact of the matter is, much American work is pretty vile. The poultry industry has been exposed as an especially horrific blot on the national employment landscape. It is well-documented that poultry workers, in return for the stirring sum of $6 an hour and up, live working lives that would shame Scrooge. For example, they often develop medical problems as a result of being forced to abstain from going to the bathroom because they are not allowed to leave the work floor without replacement. The companies will tell you that there are replacements available as needed. The men and women on the line — and their infected bodies — will tell you otherwise.

Then there is the crushing physical toll exacted by repetitive motion — slashing open birds, pulling out their guts or just throwing them into the Styrofoam packaging so familiar to us all. Every day, human beings lose the feeling in and use of their limbs from such endless exertion. The body, treated like a machine, reacts like one. It creaks, the person aches and there is no oil to regrease damaged joints. The human body demands humane treatment. For millions, such treatment on the job remains a tantalizing dream. Instead, work reduces them to a series of moving parts. This is what supposedly elevates humanity to the levels of decency envisioned by Republicans. This is what builds character: to be a grown woman or man forced to wet yourself for $6 an hour.

America is feeling powerfully virtuous right now, however. No amount of truth is likely to stop the "work makes us better" juggernaut, however heartbreaking that truth may be. It doesn't matter that more children live in poverty now than ever; nor do we care. According to the Children's Defense Fund, the "Contract With America" will result in "at least 5 to 6 million children facing greater hunger, homelessness, neglect and violence."

One hopes all members of Congress look at the world they are busy creating. One hopes they do not turn away from the human results of their pocketbook-saving policies. They must not merely look, however. They must listen. All tucked in beneath their blankets at bedtime on a cold winter's night, they may hear a sound like the rattle of a long chain — a chain of human devastation forged link by link by their very own hands throughout their lifetimes. That chain is being forged in the busy furnace of America's house of government right now, and unless Congress has a Dickensian visitation on par with Scrooge's, we will drag it along behind us for decades.

Another look at 'the boy who cried wolf'

A mischievous boy who was sent to mind some sheep often amused himself by calling "Wolf, wolf!" just to see the people at work run to help him. After he called this more than once for a joke, they grew angry.

Anger is a good word to describe what a lot of people are feeling as accused Long Island Rail Road gunman Colin Ferguson begins his absurd defense in the Nassau County Court. Ferguson is accused of murdering six people and wounding 19 others on the 5:33 p.m. train out of Penn Station. Despite overwhelming evidence against him — including eyewitness accounts from victims — Ferguson maintains that his arrest and this trial are part of a massive conspiracy against him because he is black. He said the case against him "is a conspiracy to destroy a black man, nothing more."

Ferguson would have us believe that a white man did the shooting, although everyone on the train identifies Ferguson as the killer. Even his former attorney, Ron Kuby, calls Ferguson's argument "an exercise in madness." Ferguson, of course, represents himself since Kuby and another lawyer, William Kunstler, suggested an insanity defense. Can the defense that Ferguson is using instead be called sane? I think not.

You could call Ferguson's defense many things, but I would call it dangerous. This man would have us believe that not only are police who arrested him racist conspirators, but the victims and other eyewitnesses on the train are as well. Ferguson cross-examined Maryanne Phillips, who was shot in the chest on the train, claiming that she couldn't identify him since she had her eyes closed and was playing dead after she had been shot. Her answer? "I didn't want you to shoot me again. I saw you shoot me, and I played dead."

Ferguson's unbelievable and appalling disrespect for the survivors of the bloody assault astounds me, to say nothing of the memory of the six people who were killed on the train. Their families were present in the courtroom, watching this unfortunate spectacle. "It's obvious that he's enjoying this," said Jacob Locicero, whose daughter was killed in the shooting spree. "They say a person who defends himself has a fool for a client." Never has that saying been more true.

Ferguson claims to be a victim of racism. I am not naive to the fact that racism does exist. The hateful ignorance that lies behind racism has far too much bliss in this country, and it is a sad commentary indeed to think that we cannot overcome its atrocities even in our modern civilized world. It is a safe bet that Ferguson was a victim of some type of racism in his life, but no amount of racism makes violence an alternative. This indeed is a tragic case unfolding in the Nassau County Court on many levels. It is tragic that six people are dead and 19 others were wounded. It is also tragic that racism did in fact play a role in this horrible murderous rampage, but certainly not the role that Ferguson claims it played.

What is likely to happen in this trial is that the true role of racism is bound to be overlooked largely in part to Ferguson's absurdity. Something drove him to carry a 9mm pistol onto that train out of Penn Station. Racism does not excuse him for this — he is entirely responsible for his actions. Instead, Ferguson is in fact making a sick joke out of racism, conjuring up some half-baked conspiracy theory that not even hardcore John F. Kennedy buffs would buy into. A white man did the shooting, he claims. An invisible white man, I guess, since none of the witnesses on the train seems to remember a white man shooting anyone. But rather than search for the real killer, the police are content letting Ferguson go to jail for life just because he is black.

It has been a little more than a year since the Long Island Rail Road massacre took place. In that time, Ferguson has seen a white woman claim that a black man abducted her two children, when she had actually killed her children herself. Ferguson has also seen the O.J. Simpson saga unfold, which uses a similar defense strategy that the accused Long Island Rail Road gunman now uses. Apparently, "The butler did it" type of defense has now been modified to "The butler of the opposite race did it." That's what makes this all so dangerous — it's certainly not an attempt at solving the problem of racism, but instead it only makes a bad situation worse.

All of this brings the age-old fable of "The Boy Who Cried Wolf" to mind. No one believed the little boy when the wolf finally did come calling. Colin Ferguson is no boy — he is a man calling wolf in the faces of victims' families. The wolf will come; in fact, the wolf does come often in our world. Too many Colin Fergusons unfortunately will make many people nonbelievers.

Contract on older Americans

There seems to be a certain euphoria in some quarters about the "Contract With America" and some of the changes it promises. Don't all of these things sound grand? It's like apple pie and motherhood — welfare reform, middle-class tax cuts, family values, balanced-budget amendments, etc.

The trouble with some of these ideas, like most "feel-good" ideas, comes when one gets past the catchphrase titles and gets down to reading the fine print of the proposed legislation. For example, one of the 10 "Contract With America" bills now being considered in Congress proposes that all Older Americans Act nutrition programs (congregate and home-delivered meals) be block-granted with other "food" programs. This bill is called the "Personal Responsibility Act," and though it has been receiving a great deal of press lately, 70 percent of the people in this country have never heard of it. As drafted, congregate, home-delivered and school-based meals; USDA commodities; food stamps; and the Women with Infant Children nutrition program would be combined into one big program and handed over to the states to administer.

One might ask, "What's wrong with that? Doesn't it make sense for the federal government to let the states decide where their priorities are?"

There are three crucial problems with this bill if you are, or will ever be, an elderly person. First, the overall amount of money is going to be cut by up to 20 percent. So the states are not really going to have all the cards necessary to reshuffle the deck. Congress just wants to pass the buck to the states and say, "Here's part of the money and all of the problems!" This is not a responsible way to deal with the growing nutrition problems faced by all seniors. We know, for example, that eight of the 10 leading causes of death in the United States are related to diet and nutrition. Obviously, low-income and socially isolated seniors are very vulnerable to chronic health problems caused by poor nutrition.

Second, this proposed block grant will also tend to pit seniors against children for scarce nutrition funding. It will pit the schools against programs for expectant mothers and both against senior centers. Yet older Americans will not be on a level playing field with the other groups competing for these shrinking funds. The "Personal Responsibility Act" requires states to continue spending a certain share of the funds — rightly so — for the school lunch and WIC programs. But it does not require the states to spend a single dime for senior nutrition services. This is unconscionable and may very well spell the death of many senior centers and home-delivered meal programs throughout the country, especially in Iowa's rural communities. Further, once the money comes to Iowa, it will not stay here. The bill provides that the money can be shifted to larger populated states during the second year and succeeding years!

For many of the folks who come to senior centers or who receive a home-delivered meal, the act's nutrition program provides the only meal they can count on eating that day.

The third big problem with the "Personal Responsibility Act" is that it separates the meal programs from the other Older Americans Act programs (thereby gutting the act itself) and thereafter turns them into mean-tested welfare programs like food stamps. The senior nutrition programs, if they continue to be funded at all, may be taken away from the local senior centers where they have successfully served millions of older Americans for more than 20 years and be given to some other youth-focused organization to operate. This could destroy the services that thousands of seniors depend on by eliminating senior centers as a possible focal point for coordinated senior services in any given community. For many of the folks who come to senior centers or who receive a home-delivered meal, the act's nutrition program provides the only meal they can count on eating that day. Think about this: the Heritage Area Agency on Aging and its various subcontractors serve 2,000 meals a day to senior citizens in this area.

Congress should not be playing political games with something this important — especially those congressmen and senators who represent Iowa, the state with the highest percentage of persons 85 and older in the nation. Fortunately, the "Personal Responsibility Act" is not law yet. Seniors still have time to let their representatives in Congress know how they feel about the planned destruction of the Older Americans Act programs. This bill is the first attack on senior programs. Watch out for Medicare and Social Security!

Thomas Miskimen is the director of the Heritage Area Agency on Aging, a department of Kirkwood Community College, in Cedar Rapids. Heritage serves the 58,000 persons in this region who are 60 or older.

Bill designed to inform

To the Editor:
Kathryn Phillips' article titled "Abortion proposal elicits gripes" (DI, Feb. 1) was erroneous. Phillips claims that the House Human Resources Committee "agreed pregnant minors must notify at least one parent before having a legal abortion" and that the "bill also requires young women to view a videotape of alternatives to abortion, such as adoption or keeping the child." Where did Phillips get her information? From Democratic Rep. Mary Mascher?

I attended the parental notification hearing. The bill actually requires the physician, not the minor, to notify the parents of their daughter's invasive surgery. Also, the bill does not require that a young woman view a videotape about abortion alternatives. The bill requires doctors to offer a minor a videotape about the procedure she is about to undergo, but the minor may refuse to watch the videotape. Also, the video will be produced by a panel whose members will have widely divergent views; at least one of the panelists must be an abortion provider.

This bill was designed to inform young women and their legal guardians about an invasive surgery. If the young woman does not want her parents to know, she can simply go to a judge. If she chooses to, the minor can circumvent the notification law and obtain an abortion without viewing any videos or telling her parents. Perhaps Phillips should have attended the committee meeting; or if she did, she should have taken better notes.

Give credit where credit is due

To the Editor:
Jonathan Lyons' editorial on Friday, Jan. 20 was titled "Pro-life advocates peddle pro-death jihad." "Jihad" — what better way to characterize your opponents as barbaric than to associate them with Muslims who, as we are told every day, are unfeeling, irrational religious fanatics. Barely a week later, a letter in the Jan. 26 Daily Iowan was titled "Pro-choice is real pro-death jihad." I didn't know that the problem of receiving safe abortions in the United States was a Muslim cause. I suppose in this country if it's violent and religious, it has to automatically be associated with Islam.

Perhaps "Christian Holy War" or "Christian religious fanaticism" would be more appropriate terms. It seems to me most people involved with this issue, in particular the pro-life side, claim very strongly that they are Christians. Let's not confuse this fact by using misleading terms. Muslims get enough bad press in the United States as it is without having to be associated with those lunatic fringe people (radical fundamentalist Christian terrorists?) who claim to be pro-life and then go on to kill people. Give credit where credit is due.

Morality is blurred

To the Editor:
I hope I am not the first person to respond to Amy Resewehr's article titled "Making legal choices without living in fear" (DI, Jan. 24). Her article starts out noble enough — disgruntled employees are going crazy in the work place, college campuses are scenes of carnage, McDonalds isn't safe anymore. Our governor is out marching for what he believes in. He doesn't value life. How can he when he's carrying those signs with slogans filled with the care of innocent babies? Why, he should be guarding those clinics himself, despite his views. It's time to wake up to reality. Gov. Branstad is standing up for principle. After all, he's an American. And as an American he can protest laws he doesn't believe to be moral. Uh oh, there's that word Resewehr so fears. Was she just being ironic when she said, "Morality is now just a standard justification for anyone who has a difference of opinion" and "The issue no longer is whether abortion is right or moral. Abortion is legal." Imagine that. It's legal. Is she arguing that morality is subjective these days? Since morality is so blurred we must rely on the law?

Let's take this a little deeper. Let's say I felt like cleaning a bank of all its cash. I've seen it done in the movies. I'll need a gun, maybe some sort of note explaining my intentions and a black ski mask. I drive to the bank, put my mask on and head for the lobby. But wait. I can't do that. It's illegal to rob a bank. I had heard that somewhere. Gee, glad I remembered.

Folks, does it happen like that? Of course not. People as a rule don't rob banks because they know it is wrong — morally wrong. Our parents, our churches, our schools (at one time) taught us these things.

The point is, our laws are not just rules society needs to live by. Our country made this law for moral reasons. We attempted to make laws and morals, as defined in the Judeo-Christian tradition, synonymous. They weren't wholly successful. They left some freedom to decide questionable practices. Slavery was legal. Was it right? No. Who was President Lincoln to question the law? While he was writing some important stuff, he could have been pushing legislation to keep slaves in check. The nerve of that guy. I hope I've proven my point. The existence of a law does not prove something is right in any sense of the word.

Will your company grow as fast as you do?

Almost every company's recruiting ad promises you rapid growth. But before making any decisions, ask them how fast they're growing. After all, you're going to have trouble moving up if your company isn't.

Over the last five years, while economic conditions have stalled many organizations, Andersen Consulting grew on the average of 20% per year.

Compare that figure to any other firm you're considering. It could be the difference between getting ahead. And banging your head.

ers said. "It's really easy if you think about the thousands of drunken people in the establishments. Logic dictates some of them will be underage, especially in a college town. We could send the whole department downtown and watch the doors and probably still not get all of them."

Most UI students use a creative approach to get past the bar bouncers and present a barrage of obviously fake IDs, said Todd McManus, head bouncer at The Field House bar.

The most commonly used phony IDs are Ohio, Indiana and Michigan driver's licenses that have large red block letters printed across the top.

"Those are the ones that are a given," McManus said.

Students who think they are being sly with their fake IDs are usually off-base because the police are one step ahead, Sellers said. Police and local bouncers joke about the majority of students possessing a "fake of the week."

"Officers out working notice patterns — like 'Oh, everybody is from Kentucky or Indiana this week,'" Sellers said. "What happens is some kid in the dorm figures out how to print up IDs on his computer, and he sells a few of them. Computers are wonderful things; they make the most wonderful IDs. There are some young aspiring American entrepreneurs out there turning a nice profit."

Hopeful fake ID users often don't know the basic information printed on the license. Students are notorious for reciting their Social Security numbers perfectly but drawing a blank when asked about the ZIP code, McManus said.

"You ask them one thing, like 'How do you spell your last name?' and they'll just walk away and say, 'I give up,'" he said.

Blatantly altered licenses are the most annoying, McManus said.

"What the Illinois kids do now is put a piece of Scotch tape over the year and then pencil it in," he said. "It's really annoying because they'll be like, 'What's the problem?' I'm just like, 'Don't insult my intelligence.'"

Other students attempt to convince McManus they forgot to bring an ID because they're from out of town.

"That doesn't make sense because if you were going out of town to drink, then you'd obviously bring your ID with you," he said.

Ben, a 19-year-old UI sophomore who was busted Thursday night at The Field House bar, said although the bar was crawling with police, the officers were lenient.

"Actually, when I got busted it was the second time the police came to my table," he said. "The first time he told me and my friends just to get rid of the beer. Later, we were sitting at the same table, not drinking, and a girl set her beer on our table. The same policeman saw it, so I got busted for a beer that wasn't even mine."

The police often give warnings to underage drinkers, and if the minors ignore the warnings, they deserve to be ticketed, Sellers said.

"Students are playing Russian roulette that they won't get (their ID) checked because it's physically impossible to check everyone," he said. "If the officers give you a break, then don't throw it back in their face."

The police would rather concentrate on more serious law offenders, but underage drinkers can't be ignored, Sellers said.

"The idea isn't to bust everyone who drinks underage," he said. "The purpose is to have some control. My watch can't be committed to just beer enforcement; there are more pressing issues."

can achievement.

The 28-day commemoration began Friday with the Miss Black and Gold Pageant, sponsored by the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. On Sunday, African-American sororities and fraternities, the Black Student Union and the African Student Association participated in Cultural Diversity Day.

Other highlights later this month include a lecture sponsored by the Black Student Union titled "Where Is the Love: Absence of Black Love at the UI" on Feb. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in room W151 of the Pappajohn Business Administration Building. The Black Student Union will also host a unity meeting at 7 p.m. in the same location.

Throughout February, the UI Museum of Art will display the "Stanley Collection of African Art." The exhibit is relevant to Black History Month because it explores the Western style of depicting African art, said Model Akyea, a museum employee and UI junior majoring in psychology.

"This deals with arts and culture and the facts about art that has been taken out of the context and are now being displayed in a Western form," he said.

In March, the museum will deliver a presentation titled "Jouneys: Life Stories of African Art," which will discuss whether the Western depiction of African art distorts its real meaning or in some way supports it, Akyea said.

Lashundra Hill, a UI senior majoring in journalism, is upset by fliers roaming UI residence halls calling February "Human Relations Month." She said the title incorporates the entire UI student population during a time that for years has been designated Black History Month.

"This month is not about exclusion," she said. "But the truth is we're not being recognized for our achievements all the time. They could make Human Relations Month any other month besides February."

announced last week, the White House revealed that he performed fewer than a dozen hospital abortions, mostly to save the mother's life or in cases of rape or incest. An unspecified number apparently were elective abortions.

White House spokeswoman Dawn Alexander said Sunday that Clinton knew about the abortions before the nomination and "thinks Dr. Foster's enormously impressive history will stand him well in the confirmation process."

Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., issued a statement in support of Foster, denouncing suggestions that performing abortions should disqualify him. "The majority of Americans who are pro-choice will not allow a narrow band of extremist special-interest groups to derail this nomination," she said.

Despite White House efforts to focus on the 10,000 babies he delivered and his teen-age pregnancy program, conservatives and anti-abortion groups are mounting an aggressive campaign against Foster.

Dole, who hopes to shore up support from conservatives in his own party for the 1996 presidential race, said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that he had not decided whether to oppose the nomination, which must be confirmed by the Senate.

SCHOLARSHIPS

don't have any hard feelings as someone might if they felt they could have used the $75 for something else," he said. "I just thought I could make up for it later and learn from the experience."

Sales Pitch vs. Reality

The Better Business Bureau said the companies are selling students information they could just as easily find through research for free.

The Better Business Bureau in Des Moines advised students in a memo titled "Tips on Bogus College Financial Aid and Scholarship Offers" to use "extreme caution in dealing with computerized financial aid source offers for 'guaranteed' scholarships, grants and loans."

Bureaus located across the country can give consumers reliability reports about companies.

According to the Des Moines bureau, the companies are primarily concerned with "filling their own pockets at the expense of students."

Cathy Wilcox, associate director of the UI Office of Student Financial Aid, said several students have questioned her about the legitimacy of scholarship-search agencies.

"Students will tell us about their experiences and say, 'I got nothing, but I paid $75!' and the student ends up without any financial benefit," Wilcox said. "I know some students think, 'I'd rather have someone else do the work for me,' but there is a price to pay."

With initial fees ranging from $20 to hundreds of dollars, the agencies promise that students can obtain college funding regardless of academic qualifications, scholastic credentials or family economic status, the bureau warned in its memo.

In exchange for an up-front fee, students receive lists of possible scholarship sources. Although the companies promise that scholarships are guaranteed, the bureau said students should be aware that only the private organizations actually paying out the financial aid can make guarantees.

UI senior Christopher Uhlenhopp said a scholarship-search agency "suckered him" into disclosing his checking-account number during the application process.

"I saw this ad in the DI about how I could be immediately eligible for thousands of dollars worth of aid," Uhlenhopp said. "The ad said I could qualify for college loans without repayments. Since I was already taking out some high-interest rate loans, I was curious and decided to try it."

The agency charged an $80 fee, and Uhlenhopp said he began to feel nervous. He called the Better Business Bureau to see if the agency was trustworthy.

"(The Better Business Bureau) basically told me that these scholarship-search agencies sell you worthless information," Uhlenhopp said.

"The loans are out there and are easily accessible through computers. So I didn't send the money, and I had my checking account changed."

The bureau also advises students to beware of literature concerning money-back guarantees.

The search agency may require students to prove thorough documentation that they were denied a scholarship by every source on the list. The list may contain hundreds of sources, making it difficult for students to qualify for the refund.

which is designed to help students gain access to scholarship sources other than those offered at the federal, state or university level.

"Fund Finder," which is free, has a database which contains information on more than 3,000 scholarships. The program can be accessed on Fantasia under the title "Scholarships and More: Finding Money for College." It is accessible on IBM computers only.

Clinton calls for strike settlement today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only hours after mediator W.J. Utery said baseball players and owners were unlikely to strike a deal on their own, President Clinton ordered the sides to try for a settlement this afternoon.

Utery said at a news conference Sunday that he would make his own recommendation to Clinton today — the president's deadline and the 100th anniversary of Babe Ruth's birth. But after a 45-minute meeting with the president in the Oval Office, Utery returned to the negotiations with a mandate to bring about an agreement by 4 p.m. today.

White House officials admitted an agreement might be too much to ask for.

"It's not at all clear that we can get them to settle," Clinton spokesman Mike McCurry said, "but we are hopeful."

Clinton hopes the sides can settle the strike on their own, White House aides said. But players and owners have made little progress since the strike started Aug. 12.

"Obviously, it's a big order to accomplish," Utery said. "I know we must try to do the job."

Labor Secretary Robert Reich attended the White House meeting and stood at Utery's side during a news conference to dramatize the importance of a settlement to the president.

"He emphasized the urgency of bringing this problem to a rapid settlement," Reich said. "He wants to make sure there is a 1995 season, to make sure there is spring training."

Martin lifts U.S. to Davis Cup victory

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Todd Martin, who struggled from the baseline in his first match, charged and volleyed past Guy Forget on Sunday to lift the U.S. Davis Cup team to a first-round victory over France.

Martin served 20 aces and came to the net 63 times in a 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (7-5) triumph that moved the United States to the next round against Italy.

The victory gave the United States a 3-1 lead in the best-of-5 format, rendering the last singles match between Jim Courier and Cedric Pioline absolutely meaningless.

"I did what I think I should, get to the net as much as possible," said Martin, who rarely left the baseline in a straight-set loss two days earlier to Pioline.

Hawks' tournament hopes fading after 74-64 defeat at Penn State

Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Add another game to the loss column for Iowa's basketball team and another name to the injury list.

Penn State kept the Hawkeyes sliding with a 74-64 victory Saturday — their third straight loss and sixth in eight games since beating Indiana in their Big Ten opener.

At 13-8 overall and 3-6 in the Big Ten, Iowa's hopes of getting into the NCAA tournament are fading fast. The Hawkeyes will have to turn things around quickly just to get into the NIT.

"Everybody is looking around and wondering what's gone wrong. Some players are questioning themselves. Some are taking more blame than they should."

Kenyon Murray, Iowa junior forward

"We've got to regroup, get some guys healthier and get to another level if we possibly can," Iowa coach Tom Davis said.

With several players already hurting, including top scorer Jess Settles, Iowa suffered another casualty Saturday.

Forward Kenyon Murray strained his neck when he blindly slammed into 6-foot-10, 270-pound John Amaechi as the Penn State center was setting a pick near mid-court.

"I didn't see him coming," Murray said. "All season long I've been able to play defense like that and not have to worry about picks. But it was loud in here. I guess my teammates were yelling, but I didn't hear anything. I turned around and someone was there."

Murray sat out the final 9:37 and wore a soft protective collar around his neck after the game.

Doctors in Iowa City examined Murray

when the team got back into town Saturday evening.

"He'll be treated conservatively," said Dave Johnston, Iowa's team doctor. "Hopefully, he'll be all right in a few days."

Murray said he wanted to go back into the game, but Davis wouldn't let him.

"The doctor and trainer thought it was such a serious blow to the head area that we'd better be resting him," Davis said.

Penn State (13-5, 5-4) won because of its strength inside and defense. Amaechi had 16 points and 10 rebounds to lead the way and the Nittany Lions held Iowa to 37.9 percent shooting.

Guard Dan Earl also scored 16 points and Rahsaan Carlton added 15 as Penn State shot 58.3 percent — its best since joining the Big Ten Conference three seasons ago.

"I'm elated with the victory," Penn State coach Bruce Parkhill said. "Iowa does more things than any other team in the league, so it takes longer to prepare for them. And we didn't have adequate time to get ready."

Penn State had lost by 20 at Michigan State on Thursday night.

Andre Woolridge led Iowa with 20 points but reached that figure only by hitting three late 3-pointers after the game was out of reach.

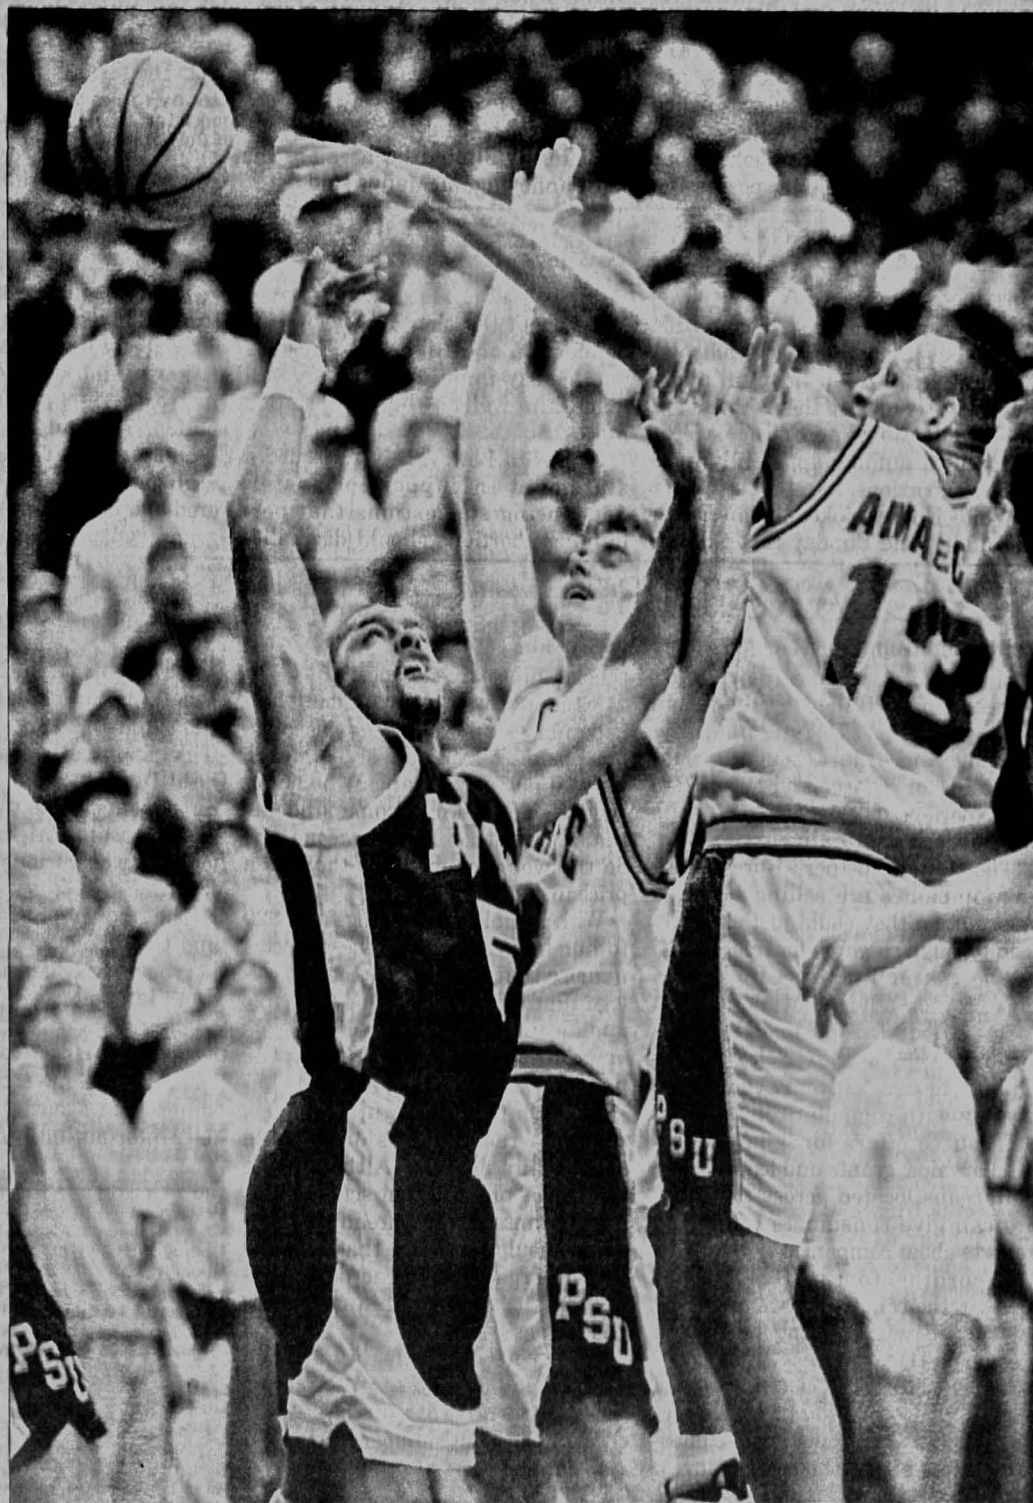

Chris Kingsbury's recent shooting woes continued but he scored 11 points.

Settles, who had played respectably against Illinois on Wednesday night after missing four straight games because of a sore back, made only one of six shots and grabbed just two rebounds.

"Hopefully, we can go home and re-evaluate not only our ballclub as a whole, but our individual performances," Murray said.

"Everybody is looking around and wondering what's gone wrong. Some players are questioning themselves. Some are taking more blame than they should."

Iowa will be at home against Northwestern on Thursday night, then play at Illinois next Saturday.

The Daily Iowan

C. Vivian Stringer got her wish last weekend, sort of.

The Iowa women's basketball coach said earlier that she wanted to take care of business at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, which the Hawkeyes did in a 67-61 victory over Ohio State Friday night.

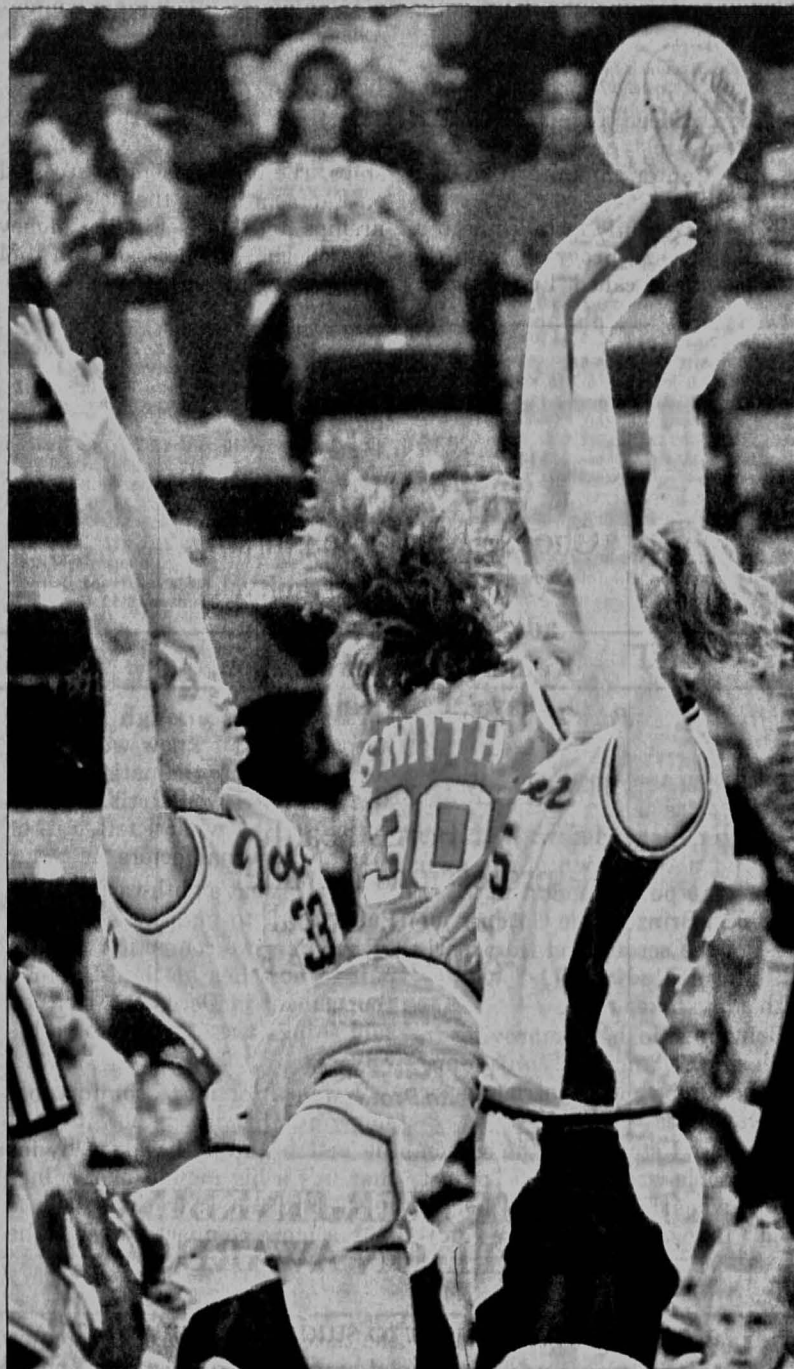

Stringer also said that a win on the road at Indiana Sunday would be a real big boost. Iowa didn't get that boost. What Iowa did get was its ninth loss of the season at an opponent's home court.

The Hoosiers defeated Iowa 57-49 in a game that saw Stringer ejected on a double-technical foul.

With the .500 weekend, the Hawkeyes moved to 8-12 on the year, 4-6 in the Big Ten.

Friday night Iowa showed glimpses of the team it hopes to be. The Hawkeyes overcame deficits with runs of 14-0, 9-0 and 15-2. But more importantly, they held on to a close lead at the end of the game, something the Hawkeyes have had trouble doing this season.

"We needed to win," Stringer said. "We need to win these close ones and we need to win in a certain kind of way a couple times so that we can be confident in our-

In Iowa's previous home game, the Hawkeyes overcame a 10-point, last-minute deficit to take a one-point lead over Northwestern, only to see that lead disappear on a last-second shot by the Wildcats. It was Iowa's fourth loss in either the final seconds of a game or overtime.

"Maybe the one element that was different (against Ohio State), I thought, was that we not only stepped it up defensively, but we were very, very patient offensively," Stringer said after Friday's game. ## No. 12 Iowa rolls past OSU

The Iowa men's swim team just keeps rolling.

In arguably its toughest test of the season, No. 12 Iowa passed with flying colors, defeating No. 17 Ohio State 132-111 in Columbus, Ohio, Friday night.

Leading the charge for the Hawkeyes were triple winners Krzysztof Cwalina and Rafal Szukala.

Cwalina took first in the 50 freestyle, the 100 freestyle and swam the anchor leg of Iowa's first-place 400 medley relay team.

Szukala won the 200 butterfly, swam the third-leg on the 400 medley relay team and the first-leg of the 400 freestyle relay team.

But Iowa's success didn't stop there. On Saturday, the Hawkeyes traveled east to Evanston, Ill., to do battle with Northwestern.

The Wildcats gave the Hawkeyes very little to worry about as Iowa cruised to a 164-112 victory.

Senior Jim Mulligan led the charge this time, capturing first place in the 50 freestyle, the 100 freestyle and swimming the second-leg of Iowa's first place 400 freestyle relay team.

Other winners on the day for the Hawkeyes were Jory Blauer in the 100 and 200 backstroke, Marco Minnone in the 100 breaststroke, Steve Rivers in the 1,000 freestyle, Rafal Szukala in the 200 individual medley, B.J. Blair in one-meter and three-meter diving and Tyler Holcomb in the 500 freestyle.

"It was a great meet for the Hawkeyes," Coach Glenn Patton said. "We had a very successful road trip. With more training, the team will be right where we want them for the Big Ten meet."

Men's tennis

Heading into Sunday's dual tennis meet with Northern Illinois, Iowa coach Steve Houghton wanted his team to put forth a better effort than they did at the Big Ten Singles Championship Jan. 28.

The Hawkeyes didn't disappoint as they rolled over Northern Illinois 5-2 Sunday afternoon at the UI Recreation Center. Iowa won seven of the nine matches, including a 3-0 sweep in doubles action.

Iowa stormed out of the gate as seniors Bryan Crowley and Bob Zumph came back from injuries to defeat Northern Illinois' Marty Engel and Sunu Thomas 8-4 in doubles play.

Juniors Mattias Jonsson and Marcus Eckstrand defeated the Huskies' Mark McGren and Corey Westphal 8-6, and Hawkeyes Tom Derouin and Todd Nelson completed the sweep with an 8-4 victory over Northern's Peter Berka and Ryan Rader.

Coach Steve Houghton said he

was pleased to see Crowley and Zumph return to the court with a bang.

"I was glad to see those guys come back and play well," Houghton said. "Crowley just played doubles, but it was good to see him in action. Zumph's back was bothering him but he still played well, which is always encouraging."

Even though Iowa dominated, Houghton said he was a little worried before the match.

"Northern Illinois scared me a little when I saw the schedule. I knew they would have a strong team and they came in here ready to play," Houghton admitted. "But we came out and jumped on them early, which may have disheartened them. I think it's a credit to us to be able to do that to a team like Northern Illinois."

Zumph capped off his fine afternoon by defeating the Huskies' Sunu Thomas in singles play. Thomas was ranked No. 56 in the country. The only down note for the Hawkeyes was an injury to sophomore Tom Derouin in the third set of his singles match.

Overall Houghton said it was a vast improvement and a good early season win.

"We came out focused and ready to play and I think if we can be consistent we could make some noise come Big Ten time," Houghton said.

Women's swimming

The Iowa women's swim team ended the dual-meet season on a down note last Friday, losing to Southern Illinois 169-124.

The Hawkeyes ended the dual meet season at 1-7, while the Salukis improved to 7-6. Iowa will take two weeks off before The Big Ten Championships in Indianapolis Feb. 16-18.

Sickness took its toll on the Hawkeyes as sophomores Kristen Belleson, Sonja Statham and Jami Strauss were out with the flu.

Coach Pete Kennedy said such factors were typical of how the season has gone.

"We go out and swim tough, but it just seems like we can't catch a break. I'm not saying having those swimmers would have won the meet, but I think it would have made a difference," Kennedy said.

Junior Rachel Bayster led the way for the Hawkeyes, taking first place in the 500 freestyle and 200 individual medley.

Iowa's divers had a strong weekend. Sophomores Kelly McCready and Jessica Riccobono finished one-two in the three-meter diving competition with scores of 247.72 and 233.70 respectively.

Hawkeyes J.J. DeAth, Mary Rhodes, Andrea Smetana and Jennifer Maehl teamed up to grab first place in the 400 freestyle relay, clocking in at 3:43.46.

Kennedy said despite the hard luck, he is still optimistic about the Big Ten Championships in two weeks.

"The kids have worked real hard and they will continue to work hard no matter how things are going. Hopefully some things will roll our way when we go to Indianapolis in two weeks," Kennedy said.

Women's gymnastics

The Iowa women's gymnastics team dropped its third straight meet Sunday, falling to Northern Illinois 191.375-188.55.

With the loss, the Hawkeyes (0-3) will still be looking for their first win of the season when they host Southeast Missouri State next Friday.

Competition is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. in the UI Fieldhouse.

"I think the team looked pretty good," freshman Grace Lee said. "I really don't feel the scoring showed how we really did."

Leading the way for Iowa was junior Kim Baker, who took first on the balance beam with a 9.85. Baker also took second on the vault with a 9.65 and second in the all-around with a 38.25.

Northern Illinois' Margaret Mroz took first-place honors in the all-around event with a score of 38.80.

Hawkeye gymnasts dominated the balance beam, as sophomore Stephanie Wesely placed second behind Baker, posting a 9.825.

"I was only supposed to compete in exhibition, but then Molly (O'Connor) hurt her knee," Wesely said.

"The whole thing was pretty weird."

Junior Jodie Gray and sophomore Tawna Rathe tied for fourth on the floor exercise, giving the Hawkeyes their highest finish in that event.

Other Iowa finishes included a fifth-place finish in the all-around for Lee, a tie for fifth on the uneven bars for Rathe and O'Connor and a fourth-place finish for senior Cathy Terrell on the balance beam.

WOMEN'S TRACK

Purdue outlasts host Hawks

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

They were strong and they were swift, but in the end the race went to the team that endured.

Iowa's women's track team turned in another impressive performance Saturday, but it wasn't enough as Purdue captured the Iowa Invitational with 61 points.

The Boilermakers used victories in three long-distance events to pull away from Iowa. The Hawkeyes finished second with 40 points, followed by Missouri with 27 points.

Western Illinois finished fourth with eight.

The Hawkeyes were led once again by a potent sprint attack. Yolanda Hobbs was a double winner for the third time this season, as she captured victories in the 55-meter dash (7.14 seconds) and the 400-meter dash (56.98).

Wynsome Cole captured a victory in the 200-meter run with a time of 24.9.

The 4 x 400 meter relay team consisting of Cole, Maria Philip, Hobbs and Briana Benning cruised to victory in 3:53.6.

Newcomer Katie Fawbush won the 55-meter hurdles in 8.45 seconds. Fawbush, who also plays for the Iowa volleyball team, said she was nervous about her first competition.

"I was really nervous because I haven't competed in track since high school," said Fawbush, a junior.

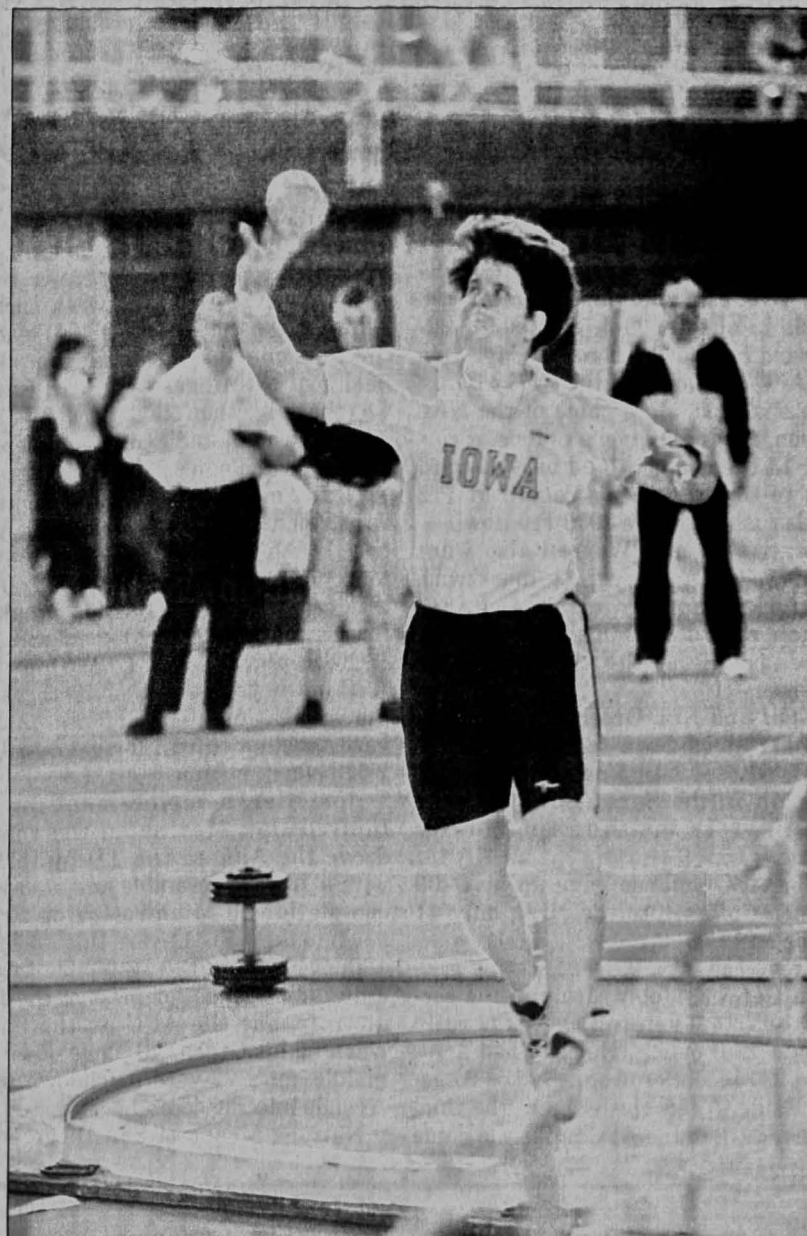

"But once I got in the blocks for the hurdles it didn't seem like so long ago."

In the field events, Iowa's dynamic freshman duo continued to look impressive.

Megan Maurer threw a personal best of 43 feet, nine inches to capture second place in the shot put. Becky Kaza jumped a personal best for the third straight week.

Her leap of 5'9" landed her a third place finish in the high jump event.

Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said he was impressed with his team's performance.

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye freshman Megan Maurer finished second in the shot put with a personal-best throw of 43 feet, nine inches Saturday.

"We had another good meet and even though we didn't win the meet, I thought there were some highlights and good performances," he said.

The middle-distance and long-distance events proved to be trouble spots for the Hawkeyes.

Benning won the 800-meter run in 2:18.86, but the other Hawkeye runners couldn't quite go the distance up front.

Hassard said a new speedwork-oriented training program was taking some of the starch out of the runners' legs.

Hassard said the results from the training would come about slowly throughout the season for the middle-distance and distance runners.

"I made the mistake of expecting them to compete at a level of competition that they shouldn't have been expected to be ready for. This type of training isn't conducive to performance," Hassard said. "We'll take it on the chin indoors, but things should start to come around in this area during the outdoor season as the results of the training start to show."

MEN'S TRACK

Hawkeyes edge Tigers for first win

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The fourth time was the charm for the Iowa men's track team.

In competition for the fourth time this season, the Hawkeyes captured their first team victory.

Iowa scored 67 points Saturday at the UI Recreation Center to edge out Missouri's total of 62. Western Illinois finished third with 27 team points.

"I thought we made a very good turnaround," Coach Ted Wheeler said.

"Everybody wanted to have a victory and we were able to have that. We had good performances in the sprint events and an outstanding performance by Chris Peters in the 3,000 meters. It was a pleasant surprise to see."

Peters, a junior from Naperville, Illinois, won the 3,000 meters in a time of 8:39.86.

The Hawkeyes were also sparked by the return of Scott Hudek and the Iowa debut of Arizona transfer George Page.

Hudek, who missed the start of the season recovering from an injury, took first place in the high jump with a jump of six feet, 9½ inches and Page won the 55 meters in a time of 6.37 seconds.

"George Page and Scott Hudek were a real surprise," Wheeler said. "They really uplifted the rest of the team."

In all, the Hawkeyes crowned eight individual champions on the day.

Ed Rozell captured his third championship of the season in the long jump, jumping 22' 9".

Co-captain Chad Ohly won the pole vault with a vault of 15 feet and fellow captain Andre Morris won the 200 meters in a time of 21.9 seconds.

Jon Tullett took the 55-meter dash in a time of 7.73 seconds and freshman Chris Davis won the 400 meters in a time of 49.84 seconds.

The Hawkeyes travel to Ames next weekend to do battle in the Iowa State Open.

Competition is scheduled to begin Friday night and conclude on Saturday.

PRO BOWL

Colts' rookie runs over NFC

Associated Press

HONOLULU — Marshall Faulk, the only rookie in the game, ran for 180 yards to shatter O.J. Simpson's 22-year-old Pro Bowl record Sunday when the AFC overpowered the NFC 41-13.

In the concluding game of the NFL season, the Indianapolis Colts star carried 13 times and scored on a 49-yard run to top Simpson's record of 112 yards rushing in the 1973 Pro Bowl.

Seattle's Chris Warren also went over the previous rushing mark with 14 carries for 127 yards for the AFC, which rolled up 400 yards on the ground against the NFC's all-star defense.

Tight end Eric Green of Pittsburgh had two touchdown receptions as the AFC, whose champions have lost 11 straight in the Super Bowl, won the Pro Bowl for the third time in five years.

The AFC defense gave up just 209 yards of offense to the NFC, only 41 yards rushing.

Green caught a 22-yard scoring pass from Denver's John Elway in the second quarter, helping the AFC rally from a 10-0 deficit. He then had a 16-yard TD reception from the Los Angeles Raiders' Jeff Hostetler in the final quarter, when the AFC broke the game open with three touchdowns.

Steve Young of San Francisco, the MVP of the 49ers' 49-26 Super Bowl victory over San Diego a week earlier, helped stake the NFC to a 10-0 lead in the first quarter, but a third-quarter field goal by Minnesota's Fud Revez was the only other NFC scoring.

Young completed 8 of 15 passes for 129 yards and one score in the loss.

Faulk made several spectacular runs, including a 41-yard early in the fourth quarter. On his 49-yard touchdown, off a fake punt, he stripped tacklers in the secondary in breaking free for his team's final touchdown.

Cleveland's Leroy Hoard put the AFC in front to stay when he threaded his way through the defense on a 4-yard touchdown run for a 17-10 lead 2:07 before halftime.

Hostetler, a replacement for the injured Dan Marino on the roster, drove the AFC to the TD by Hoard, with a 10-yard scramble and a 35-yard completion to Miami's Irving Fryar down to the NFC 11-yard line.

Denver's John Elway, unable to generate any offense for most of the first quarter, put the AFC on the board when he hit Green, all alone down the middle, for a 22-yard touchdown in 43 seconds into the second period.

Natrone Means of San Diego broke loose outside on a 41-yard run to the NFC 47 on that Elway-engineered 88-yard touchdown march.

Arts &amp; Entertainment

Warner Bros.

Whoopi Goldberg, left, Mary-Louise Parker, center, and Drew Barrymore star in "Boys on the Side," a drama about the friendship created by three very dissimilar women.

MOVIE REVIEW

Road-tripping 'Boys on the Side' proves pleasant, but not plausible

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Despite all appearances, Herbert Ross' chick-bonding flick, "Boys on the Side," is not an attempt to make "Thelma and Louise."

The film may start out as a three-woman road trip, complete with soul-baring and man-bashing, but "Boys" rapidly wanders into deeper territory.

Whoopi Goldberg stars as Jane, a club singer about to make her break from New York. Trolling for a companion for a road trip to Los Angeles, Jane meets up with Robin (Mary-Louise Parker, "Fried Green Tomatoes"). The two immediately fail to hit it off, for any number of reasons.

Jane is a lesbian, while Robin says her mother told her not to trust other women. Jane is sharp-edged and street-smart, comfortable in her blanket of cynicism; Robin is anal, repressed and thoroughly white-bread. But, of course, circumstances force them together, and off they go down the road.

Jane schedules a stop in Pittsburgh to visit her old friend Holly (Drew Barrymore, "Bad Girls"), only to find that Holly is in a destructive relationship with a raving physically abusive drug dealer. So Jane and Robin rescue her, and off they go down the road again.

This cursory road trip is the film's biggest flaw. Somewhere between New York and Arizona, Jane, Robin and Holly apparently become best buddies so close they'd walk through fire for each other.

But Ross skims over the bonding scenes, offering up only a brief montage of group giggling and lip-synching shots in place of lasting character development. As a result, when screenwriter Don Roos ("Single White Female") abruptly steers the story into pathosland, it's hard to understand why any of the three sincerely cares about the others.

Their off-putting personalities certainly don't help. Jane is snappish and brusque, Robin is tight-lipped and standoffish, and Holly only too willing to dump the other two to run off with any man who looks her way. As a result, the film's protracted life skirmishes seem oddly shallow.

As Holly struggles with her past, Robin struggles with a deadly disease and Jane struggles with unrequited love. Roos and Ross assure us all that these are the best of friends and that they really, truly love each other. But neither the screenwriter nor the director ever bothers to explain why.

To their credit, all three actresses bring reasonable amounts of depth to their roles. Between them, they make the film genuinely touching and often fun to watch. Goldberg is as suited as ever to her sassy smart-mouthed role, while Parker is heartbreaking.

Even Barrymore, who hasn't had a hit in some time, is well-suited to her role. But all three are overshadowed by Anita Gillette ("Moonstruck"), who, as Robin's homophobic, repressed but loving mother, offers up a character more complex and genuine than any of the film's stars.

In making "Boys on the Side," Ross seems to have had in mind a sort of politically correct tear-jerker showing how women of different races, mindsets and sexual preferences can pull together under stress, overcome their differences and all just get along.

But neither he nor the film's stars seem sure how such a thing should be done. As a result, "Boys" is a collection of touching moments that, like its characters, never truly seem to fit together.
