Reagan turns 84

Reagan blew out three candles atop the cake after devouring his favorite meal — meat loaf, mashed potatoes and macaroni and cheese — at the private Regency Club party with nine staff members, said Cathy Busch, Reagan's spokeswoman.

Blaze chars college fraternity house in Ohio

ADA, Ohio (AP) — Flames swept through a fraternity house at Ohio Northern University early Monday, injuring 15 people, and authorities did not immediately know the cause.

"There was just fire all over me," said Christopher Cole, who escaped uninjured.

The fire erupted on the second floor of the three-story Sigma Pi fraternity house. The brick building housed 25 students. Two were in serious condition Monday.

Denise Brown detailed the day her sister was murdered, saying O.J. Simpson had a "frightening" look in his eyes at a dance recital that day for the couple's daughter.

Brown continued emotional testimony of her sister's relationship with O.J. Simpson. She said he berated Ms. Simpson, calling her a "fat pig" while she was pregnant.

The defense showed a video taken by a parent at the dance recital in which Simpson is smiling and joking. Lawyers noted the contrast between his demeanor in the video and in descriptions from witnesses.

Committee OKs presidential criteria

Jen Dawson
and Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The person who replaces UI President Hunter Rawlings must have a solid background in health sciences, the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee decided after a heated debate Monday night.

The search committee approved a list of 17 criteria that will determine candidates to replace Rawlings, who will leave the UI to become chancellor of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., on July 1.

The list of criteria must be submitted to the Iowa state Board of Regents by 2 p.m. today for consideration. The regents will discuss the list and vote on it at their Feb. 15 meeting.

The health sciences issue elicited a heated response from search committee member John Men-

"I think they are very good criteria, and I'm confident the regents will appreciate the great thought and care that has gone into the criteria."

ninger, a UI professor with the Department of Biological Sciences. "It's being singled out for special praise; it's being singled out for special treatment," he said, pointing out differences between health sciences and biological sciences.

A UI president with experience in health sciences is needed because a large amount of the UI's resources is centered around this area, said UI Professor Alan Goodridge, head of the Department of Biochemistry.

"Nearly half the budget and practically half the faculty are in these units," he said. "They represent a major portion of the university."

The search committee met for the second time Monday night, spending the majority of the two-hour meeting discussing the wording and implications of the 17 criteria. A four-member subcommittee

- An appreciation of the national responsibilities of the UI
- An understanding of the varied disciplines at the UI, including teaching, research and patient care of the health sciences

GOP HOPES TO CUT

President presents budget to Congress

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton unveiled a $1.61 trillion budget for 1996 on Monday that mixes mild tax relief and spending reductions with a sharp message to Republicans commanding Congress: You want deeper cuts, go find them.

GOP leaders said they eventually would do just that to finance their exceedingly expensive promises of even bigger tax reductions while balancing the budget. And in their own political attack, they accused Clinton of failing to rein in red ink.

"Without the president's leadership, I don't know where we are going," taunted Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M. "You will not get a balanced budget without the leadership of the president."

In the first fiscal outline that a Democratic president has sent a GOP-controlled Congress since 1948, Clinton heeded the popular mood by emphasizing downsizing and efficiency. There is no general tax increase, the Energy Department and four other agencies are

$5 CHARGE CONCURS WITH CLASS CHANGE

Students run to make drop / add deadline

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Weeks of procrastination cost hundreds of UI students $5 and up to a 30-minute wait in line as they rushed to add or drop classes.

At times, up to 40 people were in line at the Registration Center of Calvin Hall Monday afternoon as students raced to turn in add / drop slips before 4:30. Monday was the last day for students to add a semester-length class and to drop a class without receiving a W on their transcript. Students are allowed 5 W's; after that, they are not allowed to drop after the UI's designated drop date.

Some students grumbled as they clutched their wrinkled slips, but some opted to use the time more constructively.

"I thought maybe there was a line, so I brought my crossword puzzle in," UI graduate student Jennifer Joslin said. "I saw the cars parked out on Jefferson (Street)."

The Registration Center had about a dozen workers processing

Sara Teasdale

When Rich and Nord Brue brought bagels to downtown Iowa City in 1983, they wanted to offer a healthy alternative to greasy hamburgers and french fries. After opening 132 stores nationwide, they have begun to achieve that goal.

"We are successful because people will always find a fresh bagel and a friendly smile," Nord Brue said from company headquarters in Burlington, Vt.

Their downtown store, Bruegger's Bagel Bakery, 225 Iowa Ave., was one of five original stores along with three in upstate New York and one in Cedar Rapids. The Brues, brothers and co-founders of Bruegger's Bagel Bakery, are now looking for buyers who want to franchise their own bagel store.

Each store averages about $900,000 per year, Nord Brue said. There are three Bruegger's stores near the UI campus. This week, the downtown store will celebrate its 12th anniversary by giving away free bagels.

One year ago, the Brues, who are Iowa natives, decided to sell area development contracts to preferred stockholders in the company. The contracts allow stockholders to develop Bruegger's bakeries on predetermined areas of land, said Rich Brue,

Veteran bounty hunter always gets his man

Arthur H. Rotstein
Associated Press

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. — Bob Burton, the nation's premier bounty hunter, has been punched, shot and had his head bashed. He describes his sometimes lucrative job as "97 percent boredom and 3 percent terror."

Burton travels nationwide in

DAY IN THE LIFE

search of people who got bondsmen to post their bail and then skipped out on court appearances.

"You're sitting in the car in a bad section of town, drinking cold coffee, talking to stupid people and there's not much romance," Burton said. "But there is adrenaline."

Adrenaline?
"I've been punched, had human waste thrown at me. I've picked up a 400-pound biker to have his 120-pound wife hit me in the back of the head with an iron. Knocked me out. He escaped."

With a life like that, Tombstone — "the town too tough to die," with its image of desperadoes and the lawmen who might cut corners to catch them — was an irresistible address for Burton.

"This town has got a romance to it," he said of the one-time frontier mining boomtown where Wyatt Earp shot his way into legend at the OK Corral.

Bounty hunters — some prefer the term "bail enforcement agents" — collect 10 to 30 percent of a fugitive's bail amount from the bondsman who was left on the hook. Burton says a full-time agent could easily make $50,000 to $60,000 a year; he won't say what he earns.

Burton said he gets his man, or woman, nearly nine times out of 10. He handles up to 200 cases a year and said only 3 percent to 7 percent of fugitives resist arrest.

"On the professional level, he has no peer," said bounty hunter Alan Jacobs of Greensboro, N.C., who trained under Burton.

Burton, an ex-Marine, ex-insurance agent and one-time writer for Soldier of Fortune magazine, started chasing fugitives in 1959 and went into the business full time in 1981.

He trained under the late Ralph "Papa" Thorson, inspiration for the Steve McQueen movie "The Hunter." Burton himself was a technical adviser on the Robert DeNiro film "Midnight Run" and has written two books on bounty hunting.

For police agencies, bounty hunters can be a help as long as they operate professionally, said Sgt. Bob Casey, a fugitive specialist with the Santa Barbara County sheriff's department in California.

"When they do the right thing, they're a great help because they help us get people off the street," said Casey, adding that Burton is probably more active in the business than anyone else.

Jacobs acknowledged there are some "bad apples and cowboys" but said they don't last long. "We weed them out ourselves," he said.

Burton moved to Tombstone last year from West Palm Beach, Fla., bringing along his school, the National Institute of Bail Enforcement.

He offers a 23-hour course on techniques for finding fugitives and the legalities of the trade, which is allowed in every state except Illinois, Kentucky and Oregon.

Outside those three states, federal court rulings allow bounty hunters acting for a bondsman to enter a fugitive's home without a warrant and take him or her across state lines without going through extradition. Bounty hunters and bondsmen account for 22,000 fugitive arrests a year, Burton said.

Burton also heads the 700-member National Association of Bail Enforcement Agents. About 50 to 70 of the members are full-time bounty hunters.

Despite his rough-and-ready image, Burton says he prefers to get the job done with "trickery and mental work."

Associated Press

Bob Burton, president and chief instructor of the National Institute of Bail Enforcement, seen Monday in Tombstone, Ariz., is a modern-day bounty hunter. Burton teaches five students a month how to be bounty hunters, which includes everything from surveillance and interviewing to interrogation and prisoner transport.

He once mailed a woman a phony letter granting her presidential amnesty, enclosing round-trip plane fare from Detroit to New Orleans.

She was arrested at the New Orleans airport.

Burton made $8,000 without leaving home.

Jackson supporters denounce molestation charges

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Michael Jackson fans are loyal.

Allegations that the singer molested a 13-year-old boy prompted supporters from around the world to deluge Santa Barbara courts with letters and petitions of support.

"You know he is innocent," wrote Wendy Martin from England. "Yet Jackson you continue to persecute the poor man when there are criminals to be caught."

The fan mail and petitions were part of sealed court papers that were made public last week, the Santa Barbara News-Press reported Sunday.

Jackson's accuser claimed the entertainer molested him at Jackson's Neverland Ranch in Santa Ynez in 1993. Jackson denied the allegations, then settled a lawsuit with the teen in January 1994 for an undisclosed sum believed to be in the millions of dollars.

Heinz moves up the pet food chain

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Move over, Morris the cat. Here comes the Gravy Train.

H.J. Heinz Co., the maker of best-selling 9-Lives cat food, said Monday it will add Gravy Train, Ken-L Ration and other brands to its menu by buying Quaker Oats Co.'s North American pet food operations for $725 million.

The deal gives Heinz 20 percent of the U.S. pet food market with $1.14 billion in sales. Only Ralston Purina Co. and Nestle Holdings Inc. are bigger.

The agreement essentially gets Quaker Oats out of the pet business to focus on people food. Quaker, which bought Snapple Beverage Co. for $1.7 billion last year, said last week it was selling its European pet food business to Dalgety PLC of Britain for $700 million.

The deal is the latest in a series of consolidations in the food industry, where it has become increasingly hard to make a big profit without a large share of the market.

Boston Pops acquires new conductor

BOSTON (AP) — Keith Lockhart took the helm of the Boston Pops on Monday, claiming a baton held by just two other men in the last 65 years: the legendary Arthur Fiedler and renowned composer John Williams.

At 35, Lockhart is the same age Fiedler was when he took over in 1930.

His introduction at Symphony Hall followed a week of speculation about his likely appointment. "Surprise!" he said, laughing.

Williams formally passed the baton to a grateful Lockhart.

"The Boston Pops is truly America's orchestra," Lockhart said. "For millions of people, myself included ... some of our first tastes of the grandeur and the excitement of symphonic music were through listening to this orchestra."

Lockhart, Williams and Boston Symphony Orchestra music director Seiji Ozawa shared conducting duties Monday night at an orchestra performance.

Fiedler died in 1979, and Williams retired as conductor of the 110-year-old orchestra in 1993. Guest conductors have filled the void since then.

Previously, Lockhart was associate conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony and the Cincinnati Pops orchestras.

Ollie North's secretary reveals former cocaine addiction

LOS ANGELES — Fawn Hall, best known as Col. Oliver North's document-shredding secretary, says she became addicted to crack cocaine after leaving Washington and was hospitalized for an overdose.

"I hated myself so much because I couldn't even kill myself. I wanted to die, but I didn't have the courage to kill myself," Hall told the syndicated TV show "Inside Edition" in an interview for broadcast Monday.

Hall said she only began to fight her addiction after the overdose and later entered a drug rehabilitation program.

During her addiction, she holed up in her Los Angeles home for months at a time, never answering the phone and barely eating, she said.

Stalking victim of former judge will disclose experience

NEW YORK — Joy Silverman, the New York socialite who was stalked and terrorized by the state's former chief judge, is going public with her ordeal: She's a spokeswoman for the National Victim Center, which provides support to crime victims.

Silverman will deliver the keynote address next summer at a police conference on stalking in Los Angeles, The New York Times reported Monday.

"Stalking is a form of violence. ... My goal is to get tough laws passed that will keep stalkers in prison and protect victims before physical harm is done," she said.

Sol Wachtler, the state's top judge and a potential Republican candidate for governor, admitted terrorizing Silverman after she broke off their affair, at one point threatening to kidnap her daughter. He was paroled last year to a halfway house after serving an 11-month prison term.

FAMILY MOURNS

UI student missed after fatal wreck

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

UI junior Stephanie Gamble will be remembered by her family and friends as a hard worker who didn't like to give up.

Gamble, a computer science major, was killed Dec. 25, when the driver of the car she was riding in attempted to pass another car on the right shoulder of a road and lost control of the vehicle. The car then rolled several times, and Gamble was thrown from the vehicle.

Gamble's mother, Lucille Gamble of Pocahontas, Iowa, said her daughter was a determined woman whose education came first in her life.

When Gamble received an ACT score that didn't satisfy her, she was determined to improve her results.

"She said, 'I'm not going to accept that.' She retook it in her senior year and came up with a score of 32," Lucille Gamble said. "She did not give up easily."

Gamble was very involved as a high-school student and held three different jobs while putting herself through college.

This fall, Gamble changed her major from business to computer science.

"She wanted to go as far as she could with computer science," Lucille Gamble said.

When the accident occurred, Gamble was on her way to Kansas City, Mo., to take her best friend back to Pocahontas for Christmas.

Lucille Gamble said her daughter will be remembered for her friendly personality.

"She could make friends real easily," Lucille Gamble said. "She was an encouraging person to her fellow students."

"She was very friendly to everyone and pretty much an all-around nice person," said UI junior Stephanie Conner, who was a friend of Gamble's. "She was always open to meet new people and always in a happy mood. I never really saw her down."

Annie Rhodes of Pocahontas had known Gamble since kindergarten, and they had also been roommates in Slater Residence Hall. Rhodes said they would take turns doing each other's laundry.

"Stephanie was a generally really good person," Rhodes said. "You could trust her with anything; she'd never purposely hurt anyone. I've never known her to do anything devious."

Death penalty clauses scrapped

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A legislative subcommittee Monday rejected a proposal that would have allowed judges to set aside a death penalty sentence if they found it was imposed because of racial bias.

Supporters of the provision said it would protect against racial bias, but those opposed said it wasn't necessary and said judges who oppose capital punishment would use it as a way to overturn death sentences.

"It's happened in the past," said Rep. Steve Grubbs, R-Davenport, head of a subcommittee crafting a bill that would reinstate the death sentence.

Rep. Jack Holveck, D-Des Moines, was trying to include the proposal as an amendment to the bill making its way through the subcommittee.

Holveck said letting judges set aside death sentences if they determine racial bias would protect against juries that act out of racism.

"There are parts of the state and people of the state who are more tolerant," Holveck said. "I think it's a protection, a safety valve."

But Grubbs said judges can order a new trial if race is a factor in a jury decision.

He worried that many judges would routinely set aside death penalties "because of their personal feeling about the death sentence."

About Holveck said the state Supreme Court would closely watch capital cases and would step in when judges circumvented the law.

"I have faith in our Supreme Court," Holveck said.

The subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee rejected Holveck's amendment on a 3-2 vote.

Holveck also wanted to require the state Supreme Court to begin gathering racial data about capital cases, including the race of those sentenced to death and the racial makeup of people involved in cases where prosecutors choose not to seek the death sentence.

That was also rejected on a 3-2 vote.

The subcommittee was spending much of the day Monday wading through a long series of amendments sought by Holveck and Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, both opponents of the death penalty.

Those moves were generally aimed at narrowing the proposal and were rejected on identical 3-2 votes.

The proposal is broader than the capital punishment bill that Gov. Terry Branstad asked the Legislature to approve.

Branstad wants the death sentence to apply in cases of multiple violent felonies, such as when a rapist kills his victim.

The bill being assembled by the subcommittee also covers such crimes as killing a child or killing some law enforcement officials.

REVITALIZING ADVERTISING

Speaker glorifies computer era

Tracy Naden
The Daily Iowan

As people operate in an increasingly fast-paced society, UI alumnus Timothy Sickinger said the only way advertising agencies can keep up with the hectic pace is to start speeding down the information superhighway.

Advertisers are preparing for interactive television, which would allow consumers to electronically communicate with advertising executives and companies about publicized products, said Sickinger, an executive vice president and general manager of the Bozell Worldwide office in Omaha, Neb.

"The technology is there to create a mannequin of yourself and try on clothes at local stores through your computer," Sickinger said during a presentation at the Pappajohn Business Administration Building Monday night.

The electronic interchange will develop in the near future, he predicted.

Interactive television would allow advertisers to measure sales results immediately since consumers could shop without leaving their homes.

One of the biggest challenges advertisers face is persuading audiences to take time out of their hectic schedules to pay attention to advertisements, Sickinger said.

"You have to catch them on the fly," he said. "These days both parents work, making it impossible to target specific television audiences."

Anticipating the public's response to a specific ad is difficult to measure, so research and strategy become very important. Advertisers first attempt to make audiences aware of the product and then encourage them to part with some money.

"By being more scientific, advertisers can strategically eliminate every piece of guesswork, mapping out every execution, so the job can be done correctly the first time," Sickinger said.

Appealing to customers through reasoning, emotion and image is most effective, Sickinger said. He showcased commercials for Eastman Kodak Co., AT & T and Apple, who have successfully used all three advertising techniques.

"Advertising is about selling, period," Sickinger said. "By its nature, it can't be neutral or objective, but it has to be informative, entertaining and has to sell," Sickinger said.

UI students interested in a marketing career received encouragement from Sickinger. The market for job searchers has improved since the 1980s, during which many advertising agencies consolidated, he said.

"It's always a struggle, but jobs are available," Sickinger said. "It's a young person's business, but you have to push for your ideas and be persistent."

UI senior Kerri Leistikow, a journalism and communication studies double major, said advertising is a promising career choice.

"I'm interested in advertising because society is becoming more fractionalized, and it will be exciting to see how advertising will reach these specialized audiences," Leistikow said.

Sickinger said only positive changes will occur as advertising agencies jump onto the information superhighway.

"This is the most exciting era in the advertising business," he said. "My only regret is not being born 30 years later."

CIA releases report detailing human crises worldwide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 39 million people in 30 countries or regions are at risk of dying from starvation or disease this year because of civil unrest and other emergencies, the CIA estimates.

Much of the danger is concentrated in Africa, but the threat is also severe in other parts of the world, including Afghanistan, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Haiti, Iraq and several former Soviet republics, the CIA says.

The estimate was completed in December 1994, so it does not address the likely human toll in Chechnya, the separatist republic in the Caucasus Mountains invaded by Russian forces in December. Tens of thousands of Chechens are fleeing to neighboring Ingushetia.

The CIA does a yearly assessment of existing and likely humanitarian emergencies around the world and for the past two years has publicly released a summary of its projections.

Financial instability jeopardizes Russian loan negotiations

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia and the International Monetary Fund suspended talks on a $6 billion loan Monday amid soaring inflation and skepticism about the 1995 Russian budget, Tass news agency said.

The report, attributed to Finance Ministry officials, said the talks would resume later this month.

IMF officials suspect the government's 1995 budget is based on overly optimistic assumptions about inflation and spending and fear the deficit will be much bigger than planned, the report said.

Russia's war in separatist Chechnya and a budget-busting minimum wage increase approved by the lower house of parliament also are fueling doubts about the government's anti-inflation program, it said.

The government says it plans to bring inflation down to an average of 3 percent per month. Last year, the average rate was 10 percent per month.

But inflation soared in January to 17.8 percent, its highest level in 12 months, Tass said.

The government had forecast a jump in inflation in January because of seasonal factors and economic instability aggravated by the war in Chechnya, and was sticking to its 3 percent inflation target for 1995.

Neo-Nazis deface Hungarian physician's office

BERLIN (AP) — Police blamed extreme rightists for an arson attack Monday on a Hungarian doctor's office in southern Germany. No one was hurt, but the office was badly damaged and a swastika and anti-foreigner leaflets were left behind.

The doctor, whose name was not released, had not reported threats before the predawn attack in Guenzburg, hometown of the infamous Nazi doctor Josef Mengele who ran ghoulish experiments on inmates in the Auschwitz death camp.

Police set up a 10-member squad to investigate the attack in Guenzburg, 55 miles west of Munich in Bavaria.

Police said the anti-foreigner leaflets were signed by a group calling itself Defense Group South, and the attackers ransacked the doctor's files and sprayed SS symbols and a swastika before setting the office ablaze.

At least 30 people have died in neo-Nazi violence since 1990.

The Social Democrats, Germany's main opposition party, said Monday the attacks — mainly against foreigners — fell from 2,232 in 1993 to 1,345 last year. But anti-Semitic crimes — mainly the desecration of Jewish cemeteries — doubled to about 1,150, they said.

Man claims sheik sanctioned terrorist activities

Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The alleged mastermind of a plot to wage a war of urban terrorism using bombings and assassinations pleaded guilty Monday, saying he was carrying out a religious order from extremist cleric Omar Abdel-Rahman.

Speaking in court, Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali said the blind sheik had given him a fatwa, or religious order, to kill Egypt's president and to bomb sites such as the United Nations and New York City's Hudson River bridge and tunnels.

Siddig Ali said he and government informant Emad Salem originally planned to bomb "military targets," according to a court transcript.

However, "after hearing a sermon by the sheik regarding the United Nations, I asked the sheik for a fatwa to attack the United Nations, and I was told by the sheik it was permissible," he said.

Siddig Ali said he then proposed to Salem that they change their targets from military targets to the United Nations, and that he later added the Holland and Lincoln tunnels, the George Washington Bridge and the federal building housing the FBI's New York office.

Siddig Ali also said Salem had told him he had been making bombs "at Nosair's request," a reference to co-defendant El Sayyid Nosair.

He concluded his speech with an apology, saying the terror plan did "not reflect Islam at all because God did not tell us to kill innocent people for his sake."

Siddig Ali, who once said the plot would show Americans "we can get you anytime," signed a cooperation agreement with the government and pleaded guilty to all the counts against him.

He did not say if prosecutors had made a deal with him in exchange for the plea.

Siddig Ali, 34, of Jersey City, N.J., was accused of conspiracy to wage a war of urban terrorism; solicitation and conspiracy to murder Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak; the attempted bombings; and shipping a firearm, using and carrying a firearm and carrying destructive devices for that bombing plot.

BIPARTISAN VOTE ACCOMPANIES FINAL PACKAGE

House OKs bill for line item veto

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hailing it as one more win for the Gipper, the House approved line item veto legislation Monday designed to strengthen a president's ability to cut wasteful federal spending.

Final passage, timed to coincide with former President Reagan's 84th birthday, came on a strong bipartisan vote of 294-134. Opponents have vowed a vigorous fight in the Senate.

The measure is an element of the House GOP's "Contract With America" that the leadership has vowed to press to a vote within the session's first 100 days.

In a speech a few moments before passage, House Speaker Newt Gingrich stressed that majority Republicans were acting "without any gimmicks" to bestow increased power on President Clinton.

"President after president has said it was something that would be good for America because it would allow the president to cut out some of the worst in spending," said Gingrich.

Clinton is among them. He has called for passage of the measure that would enable him to veto individual items within larger spending critics. Critics say the measure would tip the constitutional balance of power too heavily in the president's favor at the expense of Congress. Other lawmakers said it would do relatively little to rein in deficits now running at roughly $200 billion annually.

As an example of the type of spending that could be cut, Rep. Joe Knollenberg, R-Mich., said a bill to provide California earthquake relief last year grew to encompass $10 million for a train station in New York and funds for sugar cane growers in Hawaii.

"This week, we're going to give the president, whoever the president is, the tools to help balance the budget," said Rep. Bill Baker, R-Calif.

On final passage, 223 Republicans and 71 Democrats voted in favor of the measure, while 129 Democrats, four Republicans and independent Bernard Sanders of Vermont were opposed.

Clinton is the most recent in a line of presidents dating to Ulysses Grant who favor the line item veto — a power that 43 governors possess.

"Ronald Reagan campaigned on it," said Gingrich. "But frankly, Jimmy Carter used it when he was governor of Georgia, and Bill Clinton used it when he was governor of Arkansas." Reagan, who served two terms ending in 1989, is suffering from Alzheimer's disease, an irreversible neurological disorder. An actor before he entered politics, Reagan was sometimes referred to as the Gipper for a role he played in a movie about a Notre Dame football hero, George Gipp.

The House bill would let a president kill individual sections of spending bills rather than accept or reject an entire measure. A president also could kill any tax benefit that would assist 100 or fewer taxpayers.

Congress could vote to overturn a president's action, but the president, in turn, could veto the bill — an action then subject to a congressional override. That means it ultimately would take a two-thirds vote of both houses to reinstate spending a president wanted to strike.

Current law permits the president to propose individual spending cuts, but those changes die unless both houses approve them within 45 days.

The House-passed bill would apply to regular spending bills, which spend more than $500 billion a year, but not to benefit programs such as Social Security and Medicare.

PRESIDENT PHONES CONGRATULATIONS

Shuttle liaison reaps success

Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Two 100-ton spaceships — the biggest ever to converge in space — flew in formation just 37 feet apart Monday in the first U.S.-Russian rendezvous in 20 years.

"Unbelievable," Discovery's commander said.

"Almost like a fairy tale," Mir's commander said.

It almost didn't happen. Russian space officials gave in at the last minute, allowing Discovery and its crew of six to creep close despite fears that a leaking jet would damage equipment on Mir.

"We are bringing our spaceships closer together. We are bringing our nations closer together," Discovery's commander, James Wetherbee, said at the moment of closest approach in the mission, a dress rehearsal for the first shuttle-Mir docking in June.

Wetherbee repeated his message in Russian for the benefit of the three Mir cosmonauts, and station commander Alexander Viktorenko replied that all nine space travelers were involved in the "greatest profession God could give anyone."

The moment was "almost like a fairy tale ... almost too good to be true," he said.

Later, after it was all over, President Clinton called Discovery from the Oval Office to congratulate the astronauts.

"We're all so impressed," Clinton said. "This really proves, I think, that Russians and Americans can work together and that we can make this international space station project successful. I can't tell you how much I appreciate all the work that all of you have done to that end."

The encounter began 245 miles above the Pacific Ocean and lasted just 13 minutes, climaxing at 1:20 p.m. as both spaceships circled Earth at 17,500 mph.

At the same time, Discovery's cameras zoomed in on Mir. NASA simultaneously broadcast both images on its television circuit.

Discovery's Russian crew member, Vladimir Titov, was seen smiling and waving from a shuttle window at the Mir cosmonauts.

It was the first encounter between U.S. and Russian spacecraft since the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking and required some of the most precise steering in 14 years of space shuttle flight. The Apollo and Soyuz capsules were considerably smaller.

APARTMENT-HUNTING WOES

Searching for property

It's the time of year again when it's too cold to ride a bike, but students do anyway; spring break is still two months away; and professors are already giving midterms. It's also the time of year when instead of studying or partying, we're all trying to figure out where and who we will live with next year. Who'll be that clean yet crazy roommate, and where will that perfect apartment to study at but also have the best afterhours party at be?

Thinking back to the big move in August can be depressing, but to have to plan for it again when it's only the beginning of February is absurd. Some rental agencies have already sent their tenants notices about renting for next year. If you're going to live at the same residence with the same people, then you've got it made. Many of us, however, have a graduating roommate or an annoying one that we would prefer not to live with. Even if your roommates are great, you might live in a place where nothing ever gets fixed, and it seems the landlord is not quite sure where you live.

This desire of rental property owners to lease early causes unwarranted anxiety as students debate about who they are going to live with. Your old roommates might be great, but other friends may want to live with you, and you feel torn between your loyalties. Pick a roommate based on their living habits, not on how great a friend they are. It will never work, and a year later you'll be the one begging someone to live with you.

But finding good roommates is the easy part, and finding a place to live can be time-consuming. When apartment owners send out lease notices seven months in advance, renters are forced to start looking early. Decisions have to be made about whether to stay or whether to look for a better place for less money. Renters think if they give up their apartment, they'll end up with nowhere to live. They don't have to worry because with the abundance of apartments in Iowa City, they'll probably sign a lease in May and be overjoyed they found the place.

Pick a roommate based on their living habits, not on how great a friend they are.

GRADUATION ANXIETY

Future plans not solidified

From the time that we embark on our academic career in this fine institute of higher learning, we are hounded by the question: "What are you planning on doing when you get out of here?" As one nears graduation, the inquiry is posed so frequently that it becomes akin to Poe's "The Tell-Tale Heart." We can sense its pulsations in the minds of those with whom we share even amicable conversations: It lingers quietly at first as a dull ringing, then quickens, causing us to go pale and gesticulate wildly, for surely they are about to ask the unanswerable. The pulsing steadily increases until the fury is too great. "Villains!" you shriek. "I admit it! I have no freakin' idea what I'm going to do!"

The reason for such madness is that the future, in no uncertain terms for most of us, is entirely uncertain. Yet we are constantly prodded by questions — from our families, our peers and our own psyches — regarding that uncertain entity. The more that we ponder it, the more we become awash in stress as it becomes clear: There is just no way of deciding what we want to do for the rest of our lives.

There are, however, a few ambitious souls who feel that they have it all laid out. These are usually forward-thinking business students who thrive on organization and structure, inspired by their pursuit of the American dream: power, wealth and material items. These plans often play out something like this: land a $32,000-a-year job after graduation; accrue by age 30 fine material items like a spouse, a child and an import sedan; become a partner in the firm by age 35; undergo a messy divorce prompted by a midlife crisis at age 45; die from a stress-induced heart attack at age 53, after which the children go to court to haggle over the estate with the latest lover of the deceased.

Unfortunately, those with less solidified aspirations are forced to contemplate what lies ahead. In doing this we ponder our past — either reminiscing or badgering ourselves about what we could have done differently. Or perhaps we worry about the future, pressuring ourselves to find an answer to the question that is unanswerable. In one of these two realms we fret, finding little solace and no solutions.

We would all do well then to consciously refocus our thoughts and energy to the present. It's a simple solution, yet one we often lose sight of. We spend all our time thinking about the past or the future when it is now that the future and the past are created. While the answer to everyone's question won't come as soon as we would like, if we can manage to concentrate our energy on today only, the uncertainty of what lies ahead takes on much less significance.

LEA HARAVON

Consider a new tactic for conflict resolution

My college boyfriend (and current friend) and I were both debaters and were both interested in conflict resolution. So when we fought, we found ourselves anywhere along the spectrum from encouraging and validating discussions to fiery and polemical sophistry. Often, we invented creative tactics to deal with our conflicts.

One time, John and I tried having a fight while holding hands — nonverbally affirming our affection for one another while verbally acknowledging and working through our disagreement. It didn't work for too long (I am pretty sure I let go first).

Another time, to avoid interrupting each other, we took turns speaking for one minute each. I remember getting so distracted watching the clock that I could neither listen to what he was saying nor concentrate on my own thoughts.

Sometimes, though, we would just have regular old-fashioned rip-roaring fights. My New York Jewish background made me more of a rip-roaring fighter than he, a Californian Quaker, but his calm demeanor enabled him some times to hold his ground against me quite well.

One of the most effective tricks that John and I used to deflect arguments was the use of the phrase "stupid or malicious" in response to a hasty jump to an unwarranted conclusion. For example, let's say that John is cooking dinner for us and a few other friends. I stroll by the stove only to see him dousing the steaming meal with cayenne pepper. I cannot eat spicy food. In fact, I cannot even eat black pepper. So when I see this, I immediately think, "John is putting something that I cannot eat into tonight's meal. Either he doesn't want me to eat it, or he, the moron, forgot that I don't eat spicy food."

AMY RESEWEHR

Reissuing blame isn't unique to our generation

I was flipping through endless channels of talk shows the other day when one in particular caught my eye. I don't believe it was the intellectual importance of the subject matter that struck me but rather the novelty of it. It was like standing in line at the grocery store, and the Star magazine in front of you reads: "Loni Anderson gives birth to two-ton twins." While the possibility of its accuracy is slim, you still can't help but look at the picture.

The topic on that particular day was people who love to drink blood. Dressed in black robes, a dozen or so men and women with alabaster skin and random piercings took turns defending their individuality and spiritual reasons for sucking the blood of other people. The host, of course, attacked the guests by asking repetitive stupid questions like "Well, do you like animal blood?" Once the offensive response was given, the host would turn to the audience as if to say "Aha!" And so it went. It was only a matter of time before a belligerent audience member rose from their seat to make an all-encompassing statement about the defensive, whacked-out Generation X these macabre panel members represented.

Generation X has become the catchall phrase for anything any person over age 30 does not understand. As I sat there wondering how easy it would be to peel an egg with the long sculpted fingernails some panel members possessed, I could not have identified myself with Generation X any less. While the panel was exhorting defenses of spirituality, I was thinking about AIDS. After all, as all modern, correct propaganda would remind us, the direct exchange of bodily fluids — especially blood — is a high-risk behavior.

Generation X exists only in the minds of those who seek to categorize it. The mere suggestion that sucking blood is just one of "those things" that anyone between the ages of 16 and 25 does is representative of the generalization that young people today can't possibly be doing anything useful. Instead, Generation X is blaming everyone else for their problems, smoking crack, getting multiple tattoos and planning drive-by shootings.

My friends and I were distinguishable counterparts of a separate movement that worshipped Winona Ryder, baggy pants and Kurt Cobain.

I used to talk about Generation X as if I were not a part of it. My friends and I were distinguishable counterparts of a separate movement that worshipped Winona Ryder, baggy pants and Kurt Cobain. I never thought of myself as one of those people my parents pointed at in shopping malls and had no problem ridiculing within earshot. Those people were unbridled youths who were so heavily weighed down by drugs, AIDS, violence and masses of other societal garbage that they hated the world and being in it. Never mind that these were issues I thought about every day. Then, at one point a friend of mine said to me, "I just know too many people doing such incredible things with their lives. I just can't feel that negative about our generation." It was the word "our" that I grappled with. I was born alongside millions of other people, and therefore we were a group, united somehow by experience and social climate.

Lately I have learned of another tactic to use in situations in which I am unsure of another's motives. This is the "not enough data" strategy, and it is the hardest, but I think possibly the best, one for me to try and use. Here's how it works: Someone says they will call me, and they do not. I could assume that they forgot (stupid), that they deliberately lied to me (malicious) or that they got held up someplace (generous interpretation). Or I could simply withhold judgment, deciding that I simply don't know why I was not called and that there is no reason for me to try to interpret this event until I have more information (the not enough data tactic).

While I am intrigued by this idea of withholding judgment until I know more, I do find myself to be rather quick to interpret others' actions, even if I have no data at all. But when I think of the strategy I would most like others to use when they do not understand my actions, I know that it is this latter one. I would rather have someone ask me why I did something that they do not understand than to have them interpret it as stupid, malicious or even benign. And I would like to do the same for others.

Today is my friend John's birthday, and I am going to send a copy of this column to him in New Mexico. I wonder what he will think of this newly discovered tactic for conflict resolution. I could guess, but really I don't have enough information. If he has a problem with it, I will just hold his hand and give him one minute to respond.

Lea Haravon's column appears alternate Tuesdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

TRIAL WEARS ON

Brown offers tearful testimony

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson had a "spooky ... frightening" look in his eye during a dance recital hours before Nicole Brown Simpson was slain and sat by himself in the back of the auditorium, staring at his ex-wife, Brown Simpson's sister testified Monday.

Defense attorneys, trying to blunt the damning testimony from Denise Brown, the sister of Brown Simpson, and friend Candace Garvey, showed the jury a home video of a jovial Simpson immediately after his daughter's recital.

On the tape made outside the girl's school by another parent, a laughing Simpson scoops up his son, kisses Brown and her family and jokes with a friend.

Jurors watched a large video screen as the tape was repeated again and again, even freeze-framed at some sections during questioning.

"To see that videotape is an amazing difference," Garvey said.

"He had a very bizarre look in his eyes; it was a very faraway look. It was actually really kind of spooky. It was a frightening look."

Denise Brown, Nicole Brown Simpson's sister

Then referring to Simpson's role as a spokesman for Hertz Corp., she said, "I guess that's why he's a spokesman."

Garvey, who attended the June 12 recital with her husband, former baseball player Steve Garvey, had testified that Simpson almost seemed to be "simmering" during the recital.

"When he stared at me, I felt like he was looking right through me, and it scared me a little bit," she said.

When the tape was first shown, outside the presence of the jury, Simpson rocked back in his chair and gestured toward his face as if to point out that he looked neither glazed nor spooky, as his former sister-in-law had claimed.

Brown, who dissolved in tears almost from the moment she began her second day of testimony, gave a heart-rending account of her last moments with her sister, their last farewell and her claim that Simpson behaved strangely at the recital, in which his daughter, Sydney, then 8, participated.

"He had a very bizarre look in his eyes; it was a very faraway look," Brown said. "It was actually really kind of spooky. It was a frightening look."

As she spoke, Simpson shook his head and smiled in disbelief.

Brown continued to describe his look as "glazed over, kind of frightening dark eyes. It just didn't look like the O.J. we knew."

Associated Press

Denise Brown, sister of murder victim Nicole Brown Simpson, cries on the witness stand as she testifies in the double-murder trial of O.J. Simpson Monday in Los Angeles.

In the recital hall, she said, Simpson did not acknowledge his ex-wife but greeted other family members. He took a chair and sat in a corner apart from the others, she said.

"Every time I turned around he was staring at Nicole," Brown said.

Brown, 37, has publicly declared her belief that Simpson killed her sister and Ronald Goldman hours after the recital.

As Brown described her sister's last hours, tears streamed down her face. In the courtroom's front row, her father, Louis, took off his glasses and wiped away his tears.

Brown, whose testimony was stopped repeatedly by defense objections and private conferences at Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's bench, testified that after the recital the family went to dinner at Mezzaluna, the restaurant where Goldman was a waiter.

At the end of the evening, Brown kissed her younger sister goodbye for what would be the last time. "The last thing I told her is that I loved her," Brown said, weeping uncontrollably.

Brown wept harder as she said of her sister, "She was happy."

"We'd made so many plans," Brown said. "We were going to take the kids on a camping trip, we were going to go to Yosemite and we were going to a Club Med. We were going to just do everything with the children."

Then in calm cross-examination, defense attorney Robert Shapiro began his effort to show jurors that Brown had changed history in her mind after the murders and was exaggerating the problems of Simpson and her sister.

He suggested some of her recollections would be contradicted by others who were present during three incidents she described, including Brown's former boyfriends.

Prosecutor Christopher Darden was the first to mention that Brown is a recovering alcoholic, and under cross-examination she acknowledged she could not remember how many drinks she had on the nights of the three key incidents.

Last week, Brown told jurors that an enraged Simpson hurled his wife against a wall and tossed her and her friends out of his house when Brown accused him of taking her sister for granted.

She also described a scene at a restaurant where she said Simpson grabbed his wife's crotch and declared, "This belongs to me."

Resuming her account of the blowup at Simpson's mansion in the early 1980s, Brown said Monday that Simpson's face was contorted with rage that night.

"His whole facial structure changed; everything changed about him," Brown said. "It wasn't as if it was O.J. anymore."

She also said that Simpson berated his wife as "a fat pig" when she was pregnant.

"She'd just sit there," Brown said. "She really didn't do anything. She got quiet."

After her children were born, Brown Simpson began running and lost weight, Brown said, and her husband was pleased.

"He loved it," she testified. "(He'd say) 'Look at her. She looks great. She's mine.' She was always like a possession."

At one point, Darden flashed onto a giant courtroom screen a Polaroid of Brown Simpson with a black eye.

The defense objected vehemently, and after a conference the judge told jurors to "unring the bell" and disregard the picture. He said prosecutors had failed to establish where or when the photo was taken and who took it.

Darden, who was allowed to show two other photos from 1989 of Brown Simpson with bruises and swelling on her forehead, said the picture of the black eye was found in her safe-deposit box after her death. He said she had left it as a message.

"What Nicole Brown did was identify her future murderer, her future killer," he said.

who lives in Iowa City and owns the franchise for the 24 stores in Iowa and Minnesota.

Bruegger's recently sold area development contracts to build two bakeries in Des Moines, where it is already building four more stores.

"We only sell to people who own or are investors in our company," Nord Brue said. "This is to ensure they're interested in the franchise and not in just their little bit of the world."

Excellent customer service and high-quality products made fresh each day attribute to the company's success, said Rich Baker, manager of the Bruegger's on Iowa Avenue. Company incentives include a 401 K plan and health packages for full-time employees.

Flexible schedules and a 50 percent discount on food for part-time employees add to the company's success.

Before Bruegger's expanded, the bagels, soups and cream cheeses were prepared each day at the downtown location. When the two additional Bruegger's locations were built at 715 Riverside Drive and Coralville, the soups and bagels would come prepackaged from the corporate office in North Liberty.

Last Sunday, when Baker took on the role of bagel maker after an employee called in sick, he made 4,700 bagels by 2 p.m. They take 25 to 30 minutes to cook, and 30 dozen bagels can bake at once. Before the bagels go in the oven, they are put in a kettle for 1 1/2 to two minutes, which along with excellent ingredients separates Bruegger's bagels from the others, he added.

"Putting the bagels in the kettle gives the bagel its shiny shell," Baker said. "Econofoods and places like Hy-Vee don't have this because they don't kettle their bagels. With places like this, though, they just don't have the room or space for it."

Training employees to prepare bagels and greet customers is part of the package when operating a Bruegger's, Baker said. Employees at Bruegger's must take an extensive written exam before they can welcome customers.

Twenty-five employees work at the downtown location. They can earn between $4.85 and $5 an hour.

SEARCH

help to match the student with scholarship options.

Kastner said a student must fill out an application and return it to the consulting firm with a $50 check for processing fees. The application is sent to the College Academic Services in Utah, where computer searches are used to match the student's application with companies which may be possible scholarship-funding sources.

The service sends the lists of companies to Kastner, and she forwards the lists to the student. The student then contacts the private companies for a scholarship application.

"We guarantee that the student will receive six sources of potential funding or at least $50 in aid, or they will get their money back," Kastner said. "If the company rejects the student's application, then the student can also get their money back."

Kastner said even if students cannot supply a rejection letter, her agency can phone the company and verify if the student actually approached them for aid. If the business affirms the student was rejected, the $50 will be refunded.

"I've never had anyone call me back and ask for a refund since I started doing this in August of 1994," Kastner said. "This is a good way for students to augment their existing financial aid and explore another option. If they can spend $50 and make $100, then it's worth their time."

According to a reliability report by the Better Business Bureau, RK Consulting has never received a customer complaint since its establishment in late 1994.

A reliability report was also available for the College Academic Services. According to the bureau, the service is normally responsive to consumer complaints. Since the business was established in April 1991, one dispute has been filed as a closed complaint. That means that a customer was dissatisfied with the initial response to the complaint.

No further charges were brought against the service.

Although scholarship agencies like RK Consulting may be legitimate, Cathy Wilcox, associate director of the UI Office of Student Financial Aid, said students should be wary of advertisements claiming millions of dollars in financial aid are waiting to be tapped.

"It's always the same pitch," she said. "It makes students wonder how in the world would all this money go unclaimed."

CRITERIA

drew up a draft of the list Saturday and distributed it to members of the 22-person search committee for input and possible changes.

The list will probably receive support from the regents when it comes up for a vote, said Steve Collins, chairman of the search committee and UI professor of electrical and computer engineering.

"I would always hesitate to make predictions about the board of regents," he said. "I think they are very good criteria, and I'm confident the regents will appreciate the great thought and care that has gone into the criteria. I hope they find them acceptable."

A record of success in higher education administration is another quality hoped for in Rawlings' successor.

The search committee also discussed the role of the search firm

Korn / Ferry International of Dallas in the recruitment process. Bill Funk, managing vice president of education practice for Korn / Ferry, said the UI will compete with Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and the University of California system during its search for a new president.

LINES

slips throughout the day.

UI junior Jeremy Ehrhardt said he hadn't anticipated standing in line for so long.

"I expected about five or six people when I got here," he said.

Some students were unaware Monday was the last day to drop or add classes.

"I was at work this morning," UI junior Jodi Yocom said. "I was reading the paper and it said today was the last day to drop without a W, and I can't have any more Ws."

The lines, the rush and the added expense aren't worth the trouble, UI senior Travis Remmert said.

"I think it's a crock that the date is so early," Remmert said. "You know some people are going to drop; it should be later in the week."

An added hassle is having to obtain the signatures of one's adviser and the instructor of the class being added or dropped.

Students who are overly creative or too lazy to get authentic signatures sometimes resort to forgery, UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said. Signatures which are suspected forgeries are investigated, he said.

"If we see a signature which is not a signature, we send it to the adviser or the dean's office, and the dean's office contacts the student," Dallam said.

BUDGET

reduced, and more than 400 mostly small programs are slashed or combined.

"We're not cutting government blindly," Clinton said. "We're clearing away yesterday's government to make room for the solutions to the problems we face today and tomorrow."

The budget's centerpiece is $144 billion in savings for the next five years, when the government will spend nearly $9 trillion.

Clinton would use $63 billion of the reductions to lower taxes for millions of middle-income families, and the remaining $81 billion to steady annual deficits at about the $200 billion level through the decade.

The bottom line for 1996 is the red ink of $196.7 billion, $4.2 billion more than is expected in 1995.

Yet the savings yielded are but an anthill compared with the task Congress's new Republican chieftains have set for themselves.

Clinton extends deadline by one day

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton gave baseball one more day to settle its strike after mediator W.J. Usery said Monday he needed more time to complete his own proposal to end the six-month walkout.

The president hoped the additional time would allow players and owners to settle things themselves, but there appeared to be little chance of that.

"On this 100th anniversary of Babe Ruth's birth, the Babe would not be enormously optimistic for any quick settlement right now," Labor Secretary Robert Reich said after Clinton extended the deadline.

Usery, a former Labor Secretary appointed to mediate by Clinton last Oct. 14, said he would again try to cajole the sides into a voluntary solution.

"I refuse to be pessimistic," Usery said, "although it is very difficult to seem to find a voluntary agreement between the parties."

Neither side knew what Clinton would do if they rejected the plan. The president could propose special legislation to enact terms of a settlement or binding arbitration, but both types of bills would have to be approved by the House and Senate.

Strawberry waived by Giants after suspension

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Darryl Strawberry's second chance is over.

On Monday, the San Francisco Giants' troubled outfielder was suspended for 60 days for violating major league baseball's drug policy and terms of his aftercare program. The Giants followed suit by ending Strawberry's 29-game career with the team.

The Giants, who gave Strawberry a reprieve after the Los Angeles Dodgers released him early last season, told him last June that "any violation of this nature" wouldn't be tolerated, general manager Bob Quinn said.

"We are deeply saddened by today's news," Quinn said. "Over the past nine months, we have come to know Darryl not only as a baseball player, but as a warm and caring person."

NBA

Jabbar heads list of Hall of Fame inductees

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer who played on nine championship teams in college and in the pros, was voted into the Basketball Hall of Fame Monday along with six others.

Also voted in were women's stars Cheryl Miller and Anne Donovan, former Soviet coach Aleksandr Gomelsky, former NBA official Earl Strom, forward Vern Mikkelsen and coach John Kundla.

"Six world championship rings. Six MVP awards. I can't think of anyone, who could be more deserving," Lakers owner Jerry Buss said of Abdul-Jabbar.

Run-down pool rails recruiting

Photos by Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

The UI Fieldhouse Pool, once the largest indoor swimming facility in the United States, is now struggling to keep up with more modern Big Ten complexes in the recruiting race.

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

Once one of the premier swimming facilities in the country, the UI Fieldhouse Pool has sunk to one of the oldest and run-down pools in the Big Ten Conference.

After 68 years and numerous patch-work renovations, it can no longer compete with other pools in the Big Ten.

"It's just old. I don't know how to put it any plainer than that," Iowa diving coach Bob Rydze said. "Its outdated and there are numerous things wrong with it. The real problem is the fact that things aren't fixed, they're just bandaged up and forgot about."

The UI Fieldhouse Pool was constructed in 1926 at a cost of $620,000. Measuring 150 feet long and 60 feet wide with the capacity to hold 3,500 fans, it was, until 1943, the largest indoor pool in the world.

But today the glaring problems continue to plague the pool and Iowa swimming.

"The diving well was deepened in '79, but the real problems haven't been dealt with," Rydze said.

"The three-meter diving tower is rusting out. The 10-meter diving tower is only nine meters. Heck, the pool doors aren't even big enough to get the equipment in here to fix the problem."

The pool is only 43.22 meters long, while other schools have pools that measure 50 meters in length.

Iowa women's swimming coach Pete Kennedy said the size of the pool was definitely causing problems for Iowa swimming.

"It's just not fair to the kids. They come here and work hard and they should have the best possible facilities and they don't."

Bob Rydze, Iowa diving coach

"If you have a recruit who wants to be able to swim in an Olympic style pool, we can't offer that to them," Kennedy said. "The bottom line is it really hurts our recruiting. We can't compete with the other schools who have modern facilities."

The pool was last renovated in 1979 when it was deepened by eight feet at a cost of $350,000. Iowa men's assistant athletic director Larry Bruner said the real issue is money and there are no plans for renovation anytime soon.

See POOL, Page 2B

Pool Problems

Since it was built in 1926, the UI Fieldhouse Pool has fallen from one of the premier swimming facilities in the nation to one of the worst in the Big Ten. Some of the problems at the pool:

Cracked Tiling

Rusted Diving Tower Support

The base of the platform diving boards (below) is covered with rust and peeling paint.

PHOENIX FORWARD

Knee injury sidelines Manning for season

Mel Reisner
Associated Press

PHOENIX — Danny Manning tore a knee ligament during practice Monday and the Phoenix Suns star will miss the rest of the season.

Manning fell during the morning workout and had to be carried from the court. Team doctor Richard Emerson said the 6-foot-10 forward tore the anterior cruciate ligament of his left knee.

He is to undergo surgery at an unspecified date. Such an injury can sideline a player for a year.

"It certainly Manning gives us a big hole to fill," said coach Paul Westphal, whose team has been hit by injuries. "You really can't replace a guy like that, but we'll do the best we can."

Manning's rookie season with the Los Angeles Clippers was cut short at 26 games when he injured the anterior cruciate ligament of his right knee on Jan. 4, 1989.

Manning had played in all 46 games this season, his first with the Suns after leaving the Atlanta Hawks.

A former No. 1 draft pick (1988) and two-time All-Star, Manning passed up his chance to command an estimated $5 million per year as a free agent and signed a one-year contract with the Suns for $1 million during the offseason.

He started 19 games this season, including two at center and the last four in a row, averaging 23 points and 8.8 rebounds in those contests.

Earlier, Westphal liked Manning coming off the bench.

His shooting improved throughout the season, markedly in the last 16 games, when he hit 57 percent of his shots. For the season, Manning ranked 10th in the NBA at 55 percent.

Westphal said he hadn't decided on an alternate lineup. Danny Schayes, Charles Barkley, Dan Majerle and Elliot Perry started the last two games with Manning, but Wayman Tisdale was in the post the first two.

Tisdale separated rib cartilage Wednesday night against the Los Angeles Lakers and has missed the last two.

To compound the Suns' problems, Tisdale aggravated the injury again early Tuesday when he sneezed while at his wife's bedside as she gave birth Monday to their fourth child.

"(Trainer) Joe Proski said that's the worst thing you can do is sneeze," said Tisdale, who will be out at least through the All-Star break.

A.C. Green, one potential replacement for Manning, said he was ready if Westphal decides to increase his playing time.

Familiar path leads Hawkeyes toward NIT

As Yogi Berra would say, "It's like deja vu all over again."

Those fans that jumped on the Iowa football bandwagon after consecutive blowouts of Central Michigan and Iowa State, only to have their hearts broken by a mid-season losing streak, are suffering the same heart-break from the men's basketball team.

After starting the season 11-3 and breaking into the Associated Press Top 25, the Hawkeyes have ridden six losses in their last eight games all the way to ninth place in the Big Ten Conference, a position only admirable to Northwestern fans.

As the Hawkeye hardwood horrors continue, a trip to the NCAA tournament that seemed inevitable

"Yes, I agree that the pool should be renovated and that it is a detriment to recruiting. But let's be realistic, a pool renovation would cost somewhere in excess of $10 million," Bruner said.

"It's just not in the budget right now and I don't see it in the near future. But I do believe the pool does put Iowa at a competitive disadvantage when it comes to recruiting athletes."

Kennedy said he knows realistically nothing will be done, but he added that the swimming programs will suffer because the pool

COLLEGE POLL

Tar Heels supplant UMass as No. 1

Jim O'Connell
The Associated Press

For the second time this season, North Carolina has replaced Massachusetts as the No. 1 team in The Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Tar Heels (18-1) moved into the top spot Monday, two days after Massachusetts was beaten 78-75 by George Washington.

UMass (17-2) spent four weeks at No. 1, one shorter than North Carolina's run when it took over the top spot in early December.

The Tar Heels received 48 first-place votes and 1,629 points from the national media panel, while Kansas (17-2) moved up one place to second with 17 No. 1 votes and 1,598 points.

The No. 1 spot is far from foreign territory for North Carolina. This was the Tar Heels' 59th poll over the past 21 seasons as No. 1 — 13 weeks more than runner-up Duke.

Connecticut (17-1) climbed one place to third, and was followed by Massachusetts and No. 5 Kentucky (15-3), which received one first-place vote.

UCLA was sixth, was followed in the Top Ten by Michigan State, Maryland, Arizona and Syracuse.

There were three new teams in the poll, two making their first appearance of the season in the rankings.

Mississippi State and Purdue made their debuts at No. 21 and No. 25, respectively, while Oklahoma State was 24th — the Cowboys' first ranking since the initial poll of the regular season, when they were 19th.

Wake Forest led the Second Ten, followed by Arkansas, Missouri, Arizona State, Stanford, Villanova, Virginia, Georgia Tech, Iowa State and Georgetown.

The final five teams were Mississippi State, Oregon, Alabama, Oklahoma State and Purdue.

Falling from the rankings were Nos. 23-25: Cincinnati, Oklahoma and Florida.

Arkansas (17-5), the defending national champion, is out of the Top Ten for the first time since the preseason poll of the 1993-94 season.

The biggest jump of the week was Missouri's rise from 18th to 13th after the Tigers (16-3) beat Iowa State and Kansas State.

The biggest drop was Iowa State's fall from 11th to 19th with Georgetown's drop from 13th to 20th just one place off. Iowa State (17-5) lost three games last week, all to ranked teams — Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas — while the Hoyas (14-5) lost to Syracuse and Miami.

Mississippi State (14-4) came into the rankings after a win over Arkansas and a 70-47 thrashing of Florida.

The Bulldogs were last ranked in the 1990-91 season — when they were in the poll for five weeks — their only appearance ever except for one week during the 1978-79 season.

Oklahoma State (15-6) entered the poll on a five-game winning streak, all Big Eight games, after a one-point road loss to Michigan State.

Purdue (15-5) was ranked all last season and got as high as No. 3. The Boilermakers lost player of the year Glenn Robinson to the NBA as an underclassman, but they are back in the poll having won four straight Big Ten games.

Cincinnati (15-8), ranked as high as 10th earlier in the season, lost last week to Memphis and Marquette. Oklahoma (16-5), in the rankings for one week, beat Iowa State last week, but lost to Nebraska. Florida (10-7), joining Duke as unranked teams from last year's Final Four, was routed by Mississippi State in its only game last week.

WEEKEND TOURNAMENT RACKS UP WINNERS

Association names new pinball wizards

Jerry Markon
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The athlete crouches, his shoulders bent forward, lips pursed in concentration. Rocking slowly back and forth, he wipes his sweaty hands on his pants. The hushed crowd watches intently.

The seventh game of the World Series? The Super Bowl? No, it's the world championship of pinball, a game so intense its devotees can be driven to raging tantrums when they lose.

Amid the clang and whir of 67 pinball machines spread around a hotel ballroom, about 700 would-be wizards competed in the fifth annual World Pinball Championships, held Friday through Sunday at a Manhattan hotel.

When it was over, a 25-year-old movie theater manager with icy concentration had won the coveted title of "world's greatest pinball player." He also took home $2,000 and a new pinball machine.

"This is the Super Bowl of pinball," an exhausted Paul Madison of Minneapolis said after racking up the winning score of 3.2 billion on four machines. "Everyone around you gets blocked out. ... It's just you and the game."

Finishing up on a "Dirty Harry" machine emblazoned with a menacing image of Clint Eastwood, Madison never let his eyes wander toward the 50 other players intently watching him from behind.

When he won, Madison merely turned, smiled briefly and acknowledged the whoops and cheers. Madison had edged Lyman "Silk" Sheats of Chicago.

Natalie Baker of New Haven, Conn., took the woman's division

Associated Press

Dr. Nick McKinney, 48, a pathologist from Little Rock, Ark., warms up prior to competing in the World Pinball Championships at New York's Park Central Hotel Sunday. McKinney was the oldest competitor in this year's tournament.

with a score of 1.5 billion, beating last year's women's champ, Ellen "Nails" Frankel of Pittsburgh.

"I'm overwhelmed. It's unbelievable to me," said Baker, 24, who attends Southern Connecticut State University. "Last year, I was too nervous, but this year it was less pressure."

The women's division winner got $1,000 and a trophy. The prize is smaller because the women's division had only 60 entries in the 700-person field, said tournament spokeswoman Sharon Kahn.

For Baker and other players, pinball is serious business. Organizers use nicknames like "Iceman" and "Zen master" to describe participants. The best can easily keep a ball going for more than 10 minutes. Sometimes, the pressure of flicking those flippers can get intense.

"I've seen people cry, pull their hair out, hit the machine and pound their hands into the ground," said John Borg, who designed one of the machines used in the final round, "Mary Shelley's Frankenstein." It features a plastic model of the creature that turns its head and groans.

Overall, the players "are incredibly talented. They have achieved an extraordinary degree of expertise," said Steve Epstein, founder of the tournament's organizer, the Professional and Amateur Pinball Association.

Dead Eye Dick

Dead Eye Dick members Caleb Guillotte, Billy Landry and Mark Miller brought a whole lot more than their hit single, "New age girl" with them to Iowa City Sunday night. The band swung through the Union Bar & Grill, 121 E. College St., to play a pulsating set that kept the crowd on its feet.

This was the first time Dead Eye Dick played in Iowa City, but the band isn't a stranger to Iowa.

The band's current video for "New Age Girl" was filmed at People's Bar in Ames.

The band just finished up a successful European tour supporting the motion picture soundtrack for "Dumb and Dumber."

After a few more shows in the Midwest, the members of Dead Eye Dick will return to their hometown of New Orleans to play the mother of all parties — Mardi Gras.

MOVIE REVIEW

Film explores tensions leading to Holocaust

Jonathon Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

"Ivan and Abraham" is a strange Holocaust movie. Set in Poland during the 1930s, the film is quiet, slow and effective, even though the Holocaust never even figures into the plot.

The movie is set in a small Jewish community near the eastern border of Poland. Ivan is a Christian boy who lives as an apprentice with a Jewish family.

Among the family's members are the patriarch Nachman, who helps manage the affairs of the feudal prince that owns the vil-and cultural groups without sentimentality. The film reminds us that the Holocaust didn't spring out of nowhere and is not the result of one evil dictator.

Rather, the prejudice and poverty that allowed the Holocaust to occur were already deeply rooted in the uneasy peace of villages like the one presented in "Ivan and Abraham."

The film is slow — especially

Although the film has some dull spots, viewers are rewarded for sticking with it until the end. The film's final shot captures just about every emotion one might associate with this period of European history — doom, hope, love and death. And it does all this in the simple composition of two boys embracing.

in the first half — and some of the characters are not fleshed out enough. The friendship between Ivan and Abraham, for instance, is not explained. It isn't until the two run away from home that we get to see them bond.

"Ivan and Abraham" is shot in black and white and presented in Yiddish, Polish, Russian and Gypsy dialect. This gives the film an immediate, realistic ambience. The strength of the film, however, is that it never reaches for anything epic or lush. The fact that the look of the film is not particularly noticeable works to its advantage. The film's ending will stick with you for weeks.

It will leave viewers wondering what Holocaust we are preparing for now in our own time and whether our own lives will become battlefields.

Rather than depict all the sound and fury of the Holocaust a la "Schindler's List," director Yolande Zauberman chose to show us the lives of people before the war broke out.

The village people are caught up in their own loves and prejudices (bad occurrences are always blamed on the Jews or Gypsies), and all the while the audience knows that none of it matters much. The whole place will soon be a battlefield.

That knowledge gives the film an uncomfortable existential feeling. Zauberman never once gives in to pretension or any little post-modern nod that would allow the characters to have awareness of their doomed situation. Instead, we get a realistic portrait of nearly forgotten Eastern European pre-World War II peasant life.

Zauberman, whose previous films have been documentaries, presents the clashing religious
