Bakker returns to pulpit

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker stepped from his shadow of shame to the spotlight of his former glory.

The deposed head of the PTL ministries returned Sunday to the former Heritage USA Christian complex he founded to eulogize Henry Harrison, a longtime friend and staunch supporter.

"I'm scared to death right now," Bakker told the nearly 1,500 people at the memorial service. "I'm just going to open my mouth and hope the words come out. It's the first time I've been back to preach from this pulpit, and only Uncle Henry could've gotten me off the farm."

Harrison, known to PTL supporters as Uncle Henry, was Bakker's televangelist sidekick. Harrison died Feb. 5 at age 67.

An unusual Sunday session, jurors toured four key sites in the J. Simpson murder case. The sites visited were Ronald Goldman's apartment, the Lazzarini restaurant, Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium and O.J. Simpson's Brentwood mansion.

The jurors were accompanied by Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, Simpson and an entourage of police and attorneys.

Although Simpson participated in the trial, he remained in a car while jurors were led through Brown Simpson's condominium.

Regents expected to OK criteria

One board member raises questions

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The list of 17 criteria proposed by the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee for the next UI president will be voted on at the Iowa state Board of Regents meeting Wednesday, and at least one regent said revisions are necessary.

The committee drew up the list of presidential criteria on Feb. 6. Since the criteria must be approved by the regents, the list may be subjected to change at the meeting.

Regent John Tyrrell said although the criteria were well thought out by committee members, he has two problems with the list. "First, the criterion about being in cooperation with regent universities needs to be broadened," Tyrrell said. "Second, there is no mention of the alumni and friends of the university, except as a source of funds. They work as visitors in the business school and mentors in the medical school, and I think this needs to be addressed." Criterion No. 9 on the list states the new president should understand "the value of cooperation among the regents institutions."

Steve Collins, chairman of the committee and UI professor of radiology and electrical and computer engineering, said the list sufficiently addresses Tyrrell's concern about the role of UI alumni.

"I would point out that criterion four addresses the ability to listen to and inspire the confidence of alumni and friends of the university," he said.

Regent Nancy Pellett said if the committee is happy with the criteria, the regents will probably

The Criteria for a UI President

The Iowa state Board of Regents will approve the criteria for the next UI president at their monthly meeting in Cedar Falls on Wednesday. A summary of the presidential search committee's recommendations:

- An understanding of the UI's mission
- Appreciation of the need for strategic planning
- Faith in the values of academic freedom and diversity in the UI community
- The ability to listen to and lead the UI community
- Good problem-solving skills
- The ability to work with administrators, faculty, staff and students
- The ability to plan and direct the UI's academic and financial affairs
- An understanding of the value of cooperation among the regents schools
- Outstanding fund-raising skills
- An understanding of the conditions in which academic research flourishes
- An appreciation of the national responsibilities of the UI
- An understanding of the varied disciplines at the UI, including teaching, research and patient care of the health sciences
- An earned doctoral degree, advanced professional degree or equivalent
- A record of success in higher educational administration
- The ability to resolve controversy fairly and constructively
- Unquestionable personal integrity

Tax whizzes give pointers on filing

As students begin to trudge through complicated W-2 forms in the hopes of getting some extra spring break cash from Uncle Sam, local experts are offering tips about getting fair and speedy tax returns. Though many UI students fear the columns of numbers and dollar signs on tax returns as much as the Black Plague, small budgets often prevent them from taking the easy way out by hiring an accountant. With a quick trip to the library, students unfamiliar with the do-it-yourself method of filing tax returns can overcome the first hurdle blocking their way to an easy refund. Both the 1040 form and the shorter 1040EZ are available free at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.

TRADITIONAL MESSAGES STILL SELL BEST

Risque sentiments vie with romance on cards

Jill Groenenboom

Twelve red condoms and a red carnation are available for $2 from the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St. A Valentine's Day card costs about the same.

Is there a difference in the message sent? Not really, considering some of the sexy valentines UI students are buying at local stores.

"Valentine, I love you madly! I love you completely! I love you desperately! But more than that ... I love you naked" was the message in a card made by Recycled Paper Products Valentine. UI sophomore Lee Hodson bought the card at the University Book Store for his girlfriend.

"There was a variety offered; it was all right," he said. Buc's, 112 E. College St., offers cards that whistle, sing or possibly offend. The more offensive cards are in the adult section, where the cards are "pretty risqué," said assistant manager Heidi Hausman.

"The ones labeled 'Adult' have either bad words, bad pictures or bad meanings. Some say they are disgusting," Hausman said.

Other risqué cards sprinkled throughout local stores are a touch daring, some telling why cucumbers are better than men and extending kinky wishes for a happy Valentine's Day.

"Some (stores) sell more risqué cards, but we try to keep an equal mix. We sell humor — See VALENTINE, Page 12A

Bike race called off after funds fall short

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

And it's off ... This year's Old Capitol Criterium bicycle race, sponsored by The Daily Iowan and Iowa State Bank & Trust Co., 102 S. Clinton St., has been canceled because of a shortage of funds. The cancellation will be announced formally today.

"Basically, we just don't have the funds this year," said Joanne Higgins, race promoter and day production manager at the DI. "We lost some sponsorship dollars, and we just were not able to recoup them."

The bicycle race, which was scheduled for April 29 and 30, originated in 1976. Last year, 240 cyclists made their way around the Pentacrest — up Jefferson Street and down Washington Street — in 11 separate races.

Higgins said race costs were rising. Expenses include prize money, equipment rental costs and advertising outside the DI. Race organizers tried to solicit last-minute sponsors but finally decided to give up on additional funding and instead look ahead to the 1996 race, she said.

"So far, everyone has felt very, very badly about canceling the race," Higgins said. "It's kind of a time to sit back and re-evaluate the race and figure out what we want to do for next year — maybe figure out what we may need to do to make it more of a community event."

The United States Cycling Federation had named the race a site for the 1995 Junior Olympic Race Program for the second year in a row. Higgins said the federation was also disappointed with the news.

"The USCF feels bad. As far as

Rodeo antics lasso in risk-loving spectators

CEDAR RAPIDS — Wrangler jeans, cowboy boots and belt buckles the size of Texas flooded Cedar Rapids this weekend as the World's Toughest Rodeo galloped into town.

The Five Seasons Center was the meeting place for 270 cowboys and cowgirls eager to rope, ride and wrestle their way to more than $50,000 in prize money. The events began Friday and ended Sunday.

Riders competed in six events, including bull and bronco riding; calf roping; and steer wrestling, an event in which the cowboy jumps off his horse and wrestles the animal to the ground. The danger of his being gored by the steer's horns kept spectators on the edge of their seats.

The rodeo was a steppingstone on the road to the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association's main event — the national finals. At each association rodeo, contestants are awarded points for each dollar won. Points are tallied at the end of the season, and those with the most points will advance to the nationals in Las Vegas.

Reaching the city of bright lights and high rollers is the dream of bull rider Ted Slather, a Minnesota native.

"My primary goal is to make it to the national finals," he said. "I've qualified in the Great Lakes circuit every year since I started in '89."

World championship bull riding was the crowd-pleaser of the rodeo as rock music blared and riders clung to the animals with all their strength.

The cowboys ride for eight seconds, and those who aren't thrown off the bull are judged for their performances. Two judges award up to 50 points for the contestant's skill and 50 points for the bull's bucking.

Once the buzzer marks the end of the eight seconds, riders scramble to dismount the bulls and broncos with the aid of two horsemen and two clowns trained to urge the animal back into the pen.

Clowns and judges were routinely chased up onto the side rails as angry bulls charged toward them.

The scene created excitement for the crowd but fear from all who were in the ring. Alarm is a common feeling for bronco and bull riders.

"I'd be a liar if I said I didn't get scared," Slather said.

The danger of the sport results in high rates of injury for the participants, he said.

"I've had stitches from head to toe," Slather said. "If you went from my feet to my head, you couldn't go a foot without running into stitches."

Slather lifted his black cowboy hat to reveal a deformed right ear where a scar extended across his cheekbone to the middle of his right cheek.

"A bull jerked me down and stepped on the side of my face," he said. "That kept me out for a while."

With reconstructive surgery

Slather's ear was reattached to his head, but the scar is a constant reminder of the danger he faces every time the starting gate is lifted.

Slather's rodeo days reach back to early childhood. He was named Minnesota state champion in 1982 and in 1988 qualified for the college national finals.

"I went to a rodeo school when I first started to learn the basics," Slather said.

Riders may compete in 120 rodeos per season, but Slather attends 60 to 70 each year.

The Cedar Rapids event was produced by veteran cowboy Steve Gander, who has promoted the World's Toughest Rodeo for 18 years.

After beginning his career as a bull rider in Williamsburg, Iowa, Gander chose to step out of the ring and work behind the scenes.

"I wanted to be the world's biggest rodeo producer more than the world's best bull rider," he said.

Gander chuckled as he pointed to a name on Saturday night's roster of calf ropers.

"The calves are twice his size, and he has to pick them up and rope them," he said of the rodeo's smallest calf roper.

The rodeo is a lucrative business for the handful of cowboys who excel at their sport.

"There's a group that are making $200,000 to $300,000," Gander said.

Many riders get their start in the "little britches" class, then move up through high school and college rodeos.

"Most of the guys that are really good in the sport of rodeo are a product of college rodeo," Gander said, adding that 90 percent of riders have college degrees.

Also participating in the weekend's festivities were three rodeo clowns, on hand to entertain the crowd and assist the riders.

The self-described actors provided comic relief in the form of Richard Simmons and Energizer bunny parodies, horse tricks and banter with the announcer during lulls in the performance.

The clowns are also competing when they are in the ring. The highest honor in the world of the rodeo clown is to be chosen to perform at the association's national rodeo.

Keith Isley, a 22-year veteran of the rodeo, said making the nationals is his dream. Clowning has taken Isley across the United States and to Canada and Puerto Rico, but he said the work he does is no vacation.

"Last year, I was gone 218 days, and the year before that it was 228 days," he said.

Isley said one of the most challenging aspects of his job is to develop material that will entertain the crowd.

"It's hard to come up with good stuff," he said. "I came up with an act a couple years ago I thought would be hilarious. I was the only one who thought so."

METHODS SPUR CONTROVERSY

Animal rights activists protest local exhibition

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

While thousands of excited fans watched the final day of events at the World's Toughest Rodeo Sunday at the Five Seasons Center in Cedar Rapids, 15 animal rights activists urged spectators to boycott future events.

The UI Animal Coalition and People Against Animal Cruelty, a group from Cedar Rapids, protested the treatment of rodeo animals.

Grace Trifaro, president of the UI Animal Coalition, said the protest was aimed at end-

Trifaro said. "Some people really don't care about the animals; they just want to have a good time."

Bull rider Ted Slather said no cruelty is involved behind the scenes of the rodeo.

"Most of these bulls and horses are bred to buck," he said. "People have the misconception that we put straps on them to make them angry."

Slather said the rodeo producers have the difficult task of finding animals which will buck continuously. If a bull or bronco does not have the right disposition, no amount of prodding will force it to do so.

The animals exhibit a love for competition similar to that of the cowboys, he said.

"They have the same desire to compete that we do," Slather said. "They love their job."

Calf roper B.J. Ragetz said the animals do not suffer from participating in rodeo events.

"It doesn't hurt them," he said. "These animals eat better than I do."

The Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association has established fines for mistreatment of animals both in and out of the ring, including jerking a calf down or dragging it through the ring during an event.

Ragetz said $250 fines have been incurred for beating horses outside the ring.

Although the riders defended the sport, Trifaro said cruel practices still exist in the rodeo world.

"That's typical of (cowboys) to say that," she said. "To demean these animals into doing tricks is cruel. It's just really cowardly and pitiful."

"Most of these bulls and horses are bred to buck. People have the misconception that we put straps on them to make them angry."

Ted Slather, bull rider

ing the cruelty to animals that exists on the rodeo circuit.

The group cited electric prods, sharp sticks, caustic ointments and bucking straps as "torture devices" used to make the animals agitated.

The activists distributed fliers outside the center's doors, urging rodeo fans to boycott future events.

"We had some thumbs up from people walking by," Trifaro said. "Some people weren't aware of the cruelty behind rodeos."

Some who passed by weren't as receptive to the activists' message.

"We had some negative reaction from people who are into the fantasy of being a cowboy,"

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, gestures as he speaks to welfare recipients and providers at the headquarters of the Hawkeye Area Community Action Program in Coralville Saturday afternoon.

Harkin touts Iowa plan in welfare-reform talk

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, talked to welfare recipients and providers about welfare reform and bashed Republican plans to change or eliminate parts of the aid program during a visit to Coralville Saturday afternoon.

Harkin spoke for an hour, answering questions and taking suggestions from the 40 people who attended the discussion at the headquarters of the Hawkeye Area Community Action Program. The Coralville stop was part of a trip to discuss welfare reform issues with Iowans. Harkin also stopped in Davenport Saturday and flew back to Washington, D.C., that night.

Harkin began by complimenting the Family Investment Plan, an Iowa welfare plan that began in January 1994. Harkin hyped the plan in terms of its being less demeaning to recipients.

"The Iowa plan is less punitive than other states'. You don't need many sticks — people on welfare are getting beat up enough as it is," he said. "What people need are more carrots, so they can see how they're going to get off welfare and that they're going to get somewhere."

The plan asks aid recipients to give specific dates of when they expect to be off welfare.

A topic of concern at the meeting was the capability and training of caseworkers. One recipient, a mother trying to get her degree in social work, said her caseworker told her she should get married to avoid being on welfare. The caseworker had a degree in English, not social work.

Harkin said the need for more caseworkers is an urgent one and would have to be addressed by the Iowa Legislature.

"If we took all the present caseload and dumped it on the present number of caseworkers, the plan is not going to work," he said.

Talk quickly turned to House Speaker Newt Gingrich and the "Contract With America" and a subsection called the Personal Responsibility Act. Harkin lambasted the plan, which calls for the elimination of benefits to teen-age mothers and the creation of "group homes" for needy children. The plan is supposed to give states more leeway in creating their own welfare plans.

Welfare recipients spoke about the difficulties of trying to go to school and take care of children. Harkin said he thought once welfare recipients had agreed to go to school, they were guaranteed child care. However, Art Mason, a supervisor for the Linn and Benton Counties Promised Jobs program, said there is a waiting list for care because there isn't enough money to go around.

"The main problems are funding for child care and transportation," he said. "In order to get a well-paying job, people need an advanced degree or vocational training. Without child care, they just can't do it."

There are 300 people on the current waiting list for child care and other services in the six-county area Promised Jobs covers. John Lee, an Iowa City resident who is on the list, put the program's problem in simple terms.

"There's just no money," he said. Harkin said the House of Representatives will "ram" welfare-reform legislation through as early as the end of this week. The Senate won't deal with the issue until after Easter.

He said logic and compassion will be the only way Congress will be able to draw up a comprehensive welfare-reform plan.

"Newt Gingrich needs to see his plan is outdated and is old thinking. We have to train people to be self-sufficient so they will be marketable in the job sector," Harkin said.

Rawlings assistant to direct UIHC program

David Lee

The Daily Iowan

As UI President Hunter Rawlings prepares to leave for Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., a member of his staff will make a career change of her own.

Mary Ameche, who has provided administrative support as program associate to Rawlings for seven years, will begin directing the volunteer program at UI Hospitals and Clinics on March 1.

"Volunteering is something I've believed in all my life," Ameche said. "I was raised on the spirit of volunteerism."

The role of the UIHC volunteer program director is to make sure volunteers are recruited, well-trained and properly matched to their abilities within the UIHC. Volunteers help take care of patients and maintain the UIHC.

The position has been empty since the beginning of the year, and a selection committee was created to search for a new director. The decision to choose Ameche came in less than a month, UIHC director R. Edward Howell said.

Ameche

Ameche has all the ingredients to be the leader of the program, which has 1,020 volunteers from the state of Iowa who annually provide more than 60,800 hours of service to patients and their families at the UIHC, Howell said.

"Mary not only has valuable professional experience, but also the enthusiasm, creativity and energy that is essential to provide leadership to this vital program," he said. "This is a key position, and we're fortunate that Mary has accepted the challenge."

Ameche said she has been on the UI staff for 16 years and has worked with many different types of groups, which has given her plenty of experience in dealing with every constituency at the UI.

Aside from her position with Rawlings, Ameche was also part of the administrative staff of the Union for nine years.

She decided to take the UIHC position because of Rawlings' upcoming departure.

"Now that (Rawlings' staff is) going to leave, I'll try something new," Ameche said. "I feel really fortunate to be going into this."

She said her experiences working at the Union and with Rawlings will help her in leading the volunteer program.

"I'm most impressed by the high regard people have for the volunteer program and its importance to the hospital," Ameche said. "I look forward to working with such a diverse group of people."

Clinton tries to mend Middle East differences in peace process

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton implored balking Arabs and Israelis on Sunday to go beyond rhetoric and move quickly, despite terrorism, to expand Palestinian rule on the West Bank.

"We are at a critical moment in the peace process," Clinton said as he opened a meeting of foreign ministers and other representatives on the Middle East peace process.

Afterward, the group reiterated its commitment to fighting terrorism. "There can be no real peace in the region without security and stability," the communique said.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher ended the meeting on an optimistic note. "Beyond the continued violence ... there still lies the opportunity to secure what President Clinton once called a quiet miracle of a normal life," he said.

Quoting Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Clinton said earlier, "We cannot allow (rising terrorism) to kill the Palestinian dream."

Clinton sat at the head of a long polished table in the Garden Room of Blair House, the presidential guest quarters across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

Attending the one-day conference were Foreign Ministers Shimon Peres of Israel, Amre Moussa of Egypt and Karim al-Kabarti of Jordan and Nabil Shaath, a senior PLO official.

Christopher presided, with Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Viktor Posuvalyuk representing his government. To help give the meeting a high profile, Vice President Al Gore and national security adviser Anthony Lake joined in the opening.

Talks between Israel and the PLO to expand Palestinian authority on the West Bank are at a standstill. Stung by militant Islamic terror, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has been reluctant to go forward and risk the displeasure of an angry Israeli public. Meanwhile, the PLO objects to Rabin's closing of the Gaza border, depriving tens of thousands of Palestinians access to jobs in Israel.

Religious faction finds pop stars corrupt

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Madonna and Michael Jackson are terrorists just as much as people who set off bombs and should be brought to Pakistan for trial, a small but influential Pakistani religious party demanded Sunday.

The demand appeared to be a reaction to the extradition of Ramzi Yousef, a suspect in the World Trade Center bombing.

"Michael Jackson and Madonna are the torchbearers of American society, their cultural and social values ... that are destroying humanity," said Nematullah Khan, a divisional chief of the anti-American Party of Islam group.

"They are ruining the lives of thousands of Muslims and leading them to destruction, away from their religion, ethics and morality," he said.

"Terrorists are not just those who set off bombs; they are also those who hurt others' feelings," he said.

Khan also called on Britain and Sweden to extradite authors Salman Rushdie and Taslima Nasrin, both sentenced to death by fundamentalist Muslims for insulting Islam.

White House sticks with Foster

Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House repelled growing opposition to its surgeon general nominee Sunday, accusing Republicans of pandering to anti-abortionists and scolding slow-to-help Democratic lawmakers.

"We will fight for this nomination," chief of staff Leon Panetta said.

But the GOP pushed its case against Dr. Henry Foster, who performed abortions as an obstetrician-gynecologist and conducted hysterectomies on severely retarded women in the 1960s and 1970s.

Republican lawmakers insisted that Foster's having performed abortions wasn't the only issue; they blasted the White House for misleading Congress about his record on abortions and sterilizations.

"I don't think he will be confirmed," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. Referring to the folksy television doctor, Gramm added, "I think people are ready for a Dr. Welby, M.D."

"The White House did not do its homework. This was handled poorly, and it shows incompetence," said former Vice President Dan Quayle.

While his selection dominated TV news shows in Washington, Foster attended church at home in Nashville, Tenn., and asked the congregation to pray for him. The Rev. Sherman Tribble's sermon at First Baptist Church deplored "the high-tech lynching" of public servants.

Foster, who built a reputation battling teen-age pregnancies, at first said he had performed fewer than a dozen abortions. After reviewing his records from Tennessee, he corrected the statement to say he had performed 39 abortions and supervised a drug trial in which 55 more women ended pregnancies. Foster has not said whether he performed abortions before moving from Alabama to Tennessee in the 1970s.

But the steady drip of revelations gave Republicans the opportunity to oppose the nomination without seeming to wade into the divisive abortion debate. "This is a litmus test not on abortion; this is a litmus test on the truth," Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., said Sunday.

Although he objected to the abortions, Quayle emphasized the White House's failure to get Foster's record clear. "They've just basically hung Dr. Foster out to dry," he said.

Ito calls jurors for unusual Sunday session

Linda Deustch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson visited his estate Sunday for the first time since his arrest eight months ago but decided against joining jurors for a tour of the spot where the bodies of his ex-wife and her friend were found.

Simpson, not wearing handcuffs or apparently any other restraint, stood in the front yard of his Brentwood mansion and chatted with lawyers while jurors walked around his property. A few plainclothes deputies stood near him.

On the last stop of their daylong tour, jurors were escorted through Simpson's bedroom, bathroom, closet, kitchen, garage, laundry room and trophy room. They also poked into the room used by former Simpson guest Brian "Kato" Kaelin, a witness in the trial.

Eight months to the day after the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito convened an unusual Sunday session for the tour.

Traveling in a motorcade of presidential proportions, jurors arrived at the murder scene at Brown Simpson's Brentwood condominium. They stepped out of their bus with smoked-glass windows and were escorted in groups of four in and around Brown Simpson's condominium.

Simpson stayed a block away in a police car.

Jurors took copious notes of their observations where the slashed, crumpled bodies of Brown Simpson and Goldman were found in pools of blood. Their reactions inside weren't known because reporters were barred from the house.

After leaving the courthouse earlier Sunday, the motorcade of one bus and 13 other vehicles rolled through downtown Los Angeles and across freeways en route to Simpson's upscale Brentwood neighborhood.

Crowds gathered along the way, mostly people out walking their dogs or riding bikes on the sunny morning.

As the jury bus passed, people were calm and didn't shout. Many people snapped photographs or videotaped their brush with the trial of the century. There were a few waves — and a few signs.

A man who was giving out orange juice was told to remove his sign that read, "Free O.J."

"This is incredible," said police officer Art Holmes. "People are pretty much dumbfounded by what's happening here today. I don't think anyone's ever seen anything like this as a result of a court case."

Security was tight. Police said 250 police officers were working in Brentwood, many on overtime. Streets were barricaded, airspace was restricted to keep news helicopters at a distance and some residents were escorted by police to their homes.

The tour came during the prosecution's presentation of evidence against Simpson. It was intended to give jurors a firsthand look at locations that have or will come up in trial.

The first stop was Goldman's apartment, where the bus stopped for about two minutes. Jurors didn't get out.

The caravan then traveled past Mezzaluna, the restaurant where Goldman worked and Brown Simpson ate dinner hours before her death.

Then it was on to Brown Simpson's condominium. Police have reported finding Simpson's blood there as well as a bloody glove and a knit hat.

The tour also included a stop at Simpson's Brentwood mansion, about two miles away. Prosecutors allege Simpson returned home after committing the murders, dripping blood along the driveway and dropping behind a guest house the mate to the glove found at the murder scene.

During a brief morning court session, lawyers made last-minute arguments about the trip's details.

Jurors were not allowed to ask questions or to touch anything. Signs posted at certain points explained the relevance of what they saw.

Deputy District Attorney Cheri Lewis wanted to make sure jurors would not be allowed to linger in Simpson's trophy room, which prosecutors contend is "highly prejudicial."

"It is a shrine to the defendant," Lewis said. "It does have obvious appeal to sympathy and pity for the defendant."

The judge said he would have jurors simply pass through that room, and he also said a sheet would be thrown over a life-size statue of Simpson in a football uniform.

The judge turned down a prosecution request to put the victims' names on the ground where their bodies were found. Prosecutors had argued that Brown Simpson's abandoned and up-for-sale house was now sterile.

"Isn't it equally stunning for a jury to see a completely vacant home, knowing that had once been the home of a vibrant person and children?" Ito asked. "I mean, isn't that stunning as well?"

How to worship your Valentine's feet.

GERMANS PORTRAYED AS VICTIMS

Dresden memorial encounters protest

Terrence Petty
Associated Press

DRESDEN, Germany — Ten young leftists disrupted a Sunday prayer service marking the 50th anniversary of Dresden's destruction by British and U.S. bombers, rushing the altar and shouting "Germans were the criminals, not the victims."

Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other dignitaries seated in the cathedral watched in disbelief as the protesters tried to unfurl a banner and tossed leaflets saying that commemorating the Dresden firebombing insults the Jews murdered at Auschwitz. Church ushers ejected them after a scuffle.

The disturbance aptly illustrated the moral complexities of paying homage to an estimated 35,000 Germans who died in the air raids that leveled this city on Feb. 13-14, 1945.

Church and government observances portray Dresdeners not as victims of the World War II Allies but of a war begun by their own country.

The anniversary is being observed in lavish style. The German government, snubbed at some Allied commemorations, has never marked a World War II event on such a grand scale.

Britain's Duke of Kent, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth II, will arrive today for a wreath-laying ceremony at Dresden's main cemetery, where fire-bombing victims lie.

American and British diplomats and military brass will also be on hand. Orchestras will play classical requiems. Historians, poets and novelists plan readings and lectures.

But not everyone is happy. Outside the Dresden Cathedral, a group of Catholics protested that too much attention was being paid to German civilians killed a half century ago — and too little to people dying in Chechnya today.

Unlike the leftists who caused the stir inside the cathedral, these were mainly middle-aged Catholics quietly carrying posters demanding that Kohl tell his friend Russian President Boris Yeltsin to leave Chechnya

Associated Press

Citizens of the German city of Dresden light candles in front of the ruins of the Frauenkirche, the Church of Our Lady, Sunday night, the eve of the 50th anniversary of the city's firebombing during World War II. At least 35,000 people died in the air raids, which set off fires that burned for seven days and razed much of Dresden.

alone. The demonstrators received icy stares from about 100 Dresdeners waiting to greet Kohl. Many don't like it when they think someone is trivializing the firebombing.

Dresden was leveled by two formations of British Lancasters during the night of Feb. 13 and by American B-17 bombers in a Feb. 14 daylight raid. The attack has been likened to Hiroshima because of the carnage and civilian casualties.

The British raids unleashed a firestorm that swallowed most of Dresden's famed architectural splendors, including the 18th-century Church Of Our Lady, the 16th-century Dresden Palace and the Semper Opera.

BALLOT INITIATIVE SCRIPTED

Calif. prepares for affirmative action vote

Ann Bancroft
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Fire-fighter Ray Batz calls himself a liberal Democrat and says he's voted Democratic since John F. Kennedy ran for president. But when it comes to affirmative action, he veers more toward Rush Limbaugh than Jesse Jackson.

It's unfair, he said. "I've watched my department become demoralized, downgraded, debased, demeaned," Batz said recently of the San Francisco Fire Department. "Everybody falls into one or even more than one protected class. That is, everybody except white males."

"We're hiring tiny women. Size is no longer a criterion" for firefighters, Batz said. Diversity "doesn't carry grandma down the stairs in the middle of the night."

The issue likely will appear on the California ballot next year in the form of a plan to end race or sex preferences in hiring government workers. It could be as divisive as last year's Proposition 187, which stripped illegal immigrants of many government benefits.

The GOP-backed Proposition 187 became a major issue in California's 1994 campaigns and was overwhelmingly passed by voters during a general rout of Democrats.

The initiative to end preferences in state hiring and college admissions has not yet qualified for the ballot. First, it must pass a legal test from the attorney general's office and then gather more than 600,000 signatures.

But both sides are already acting as if it will appear on the November 1996 ballot.

"This is one of the most significant attacks on our rights that has come through our state in recent history," said Elizabeth Toledo, California president of the National Organization for Women.

Public opinion polls say Californians oppose race- or gender-based preferential treatment in schools and the workplace. And most voters are white and conservative.

But Democrats have long championed affirmative action and risk alienating minorities and women if they drop their support.

"Most Democrats I've talked to are just averting their eyes and hoping it goes away," said Duane Garrett, a Democratic political strategist who favors abolishing affirmative action.

State Democratic Chairman Bill Press said his party must stand up for its principles.

"Affirmative action has been an extraordinarily successful program that has benefited millions of women and members of ethnic minorities across this country," Press said. "I, for one, am not willing to throw it away."

However, Press said if affirmative action "is being used as a different form of discrimination, it's got to be fixed." He said the Legislature should craft "something that fixes the problem without destroying the program."

Two college professors crafted the ballot initiative, called the California Civil Rights Initiative. Professors Glynn Custred and Tom Wood insist they are nonpartisan and driven by desire to create a "colorblind" society.

"If a legal code places emphasis on ethnic, racial and religious differences, people will identify themselves along those lines, and eventually it will tear the country to pieces," said Custred, an anthropology professor at California State University-Hayward.

Gov. Pete Wilson has not endorsed the initiative but has indicated he supports the concept.

ATTITUDES HAVE CHANGED

Solution to labor surplus

The current rage to get students through college as fast as possible is lousy social policy. The Iowa state Board of Regents and members of the state Legislature are ignoring one of the major functions of education in this country.

It is, among other things, a solution to the problem of surplus labor in a society characterized by plenitude rather than scarcity.

At the turn of the century, progressive reformers were rather overt about education as an alternative to starving people whose labor was not needed. Edward Bellamy, in his best-selling utopian novel, "Looking Backward," envisioned a future paradise in which machines did most of the drudge work, and people engaged in educational and artistic pursuits. More pragmatic reformers argued that mandatory education was the one sure way to keep children out of factories and mines, opening up jobs for unemployed adults.

After World War II, schooling paid for through the GI Bill provided the government a way to manage the sudden re-entry of 12 million veterans into the job market. This continued on into the 1980s as more than 70 million baby boomers came of age in an economy which could not absorb them all.

But attitudes have changed. Education, once seen as a good in and of itself, is now seen as a burden; the more than 15 million people now enrolled in postsecondary schools are a parasitic and unproductive drain on those who work and pay taxes. Students, and all the others on the government dole, are being told to get out, find a job and work for a change.

Where these jobs are to be found is anybody's guess. In an economy in which both business and government are rewarded for "downsizing" — throwing people out of work — in which 6 percent unemployment is considered healthy and wages in real terms are at their lowest point since the Great Depression, what are we to do with the unneeded and unwanted?

Conservatives, as one would expect, have the answer. We dismantle welfare, cut back on education and build prisons and orphanages instead. Let's not kid ourselves that these are cost-cutting measures; they're not. Warehousing an individual in either of these institutions costs more than sending that same individual to Harvard University. They do solve the problem of surplus people.

Prisons and orphanages are expensive, inhumane, destructive and downright sick. But they are among the few viable alternatives to welfare or schooling in a society that has determined that 6 percent — that's 8 million people — of its work force shall not work.

Unless we as a society are willing and able to provide decent jobs at decent wages for everyone who wants to work, we shouldn't be so quick to shove people out into a market that doesn't want them.

Unless, of course, the agenda is to force wages down even further — and some Republicans would like to abolish the minimum wage — as millions of desperate people underbid each other or turn to crime in order to eat.

BASEBALL'S EXEMPTION

Antitrust law under fire

This will be an interesting week for baseball.

On Tuesday, Senate Judiciary Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., are expected to introduce legislation to partially repeal the team owners' antitrust exemption.

In 1922, the U.S. Supreme Court held that baseball is not a business and is not subject to antitrust regulations. The court upheld the decision 50 years later, when player Curt Flood challenged baseball's reserve clause. It wasn't until arbitrator Peter Steitz struck down the reserve clause in 1975 that veteran players had a choice of which team they played for and how much they earned. Free agency was born.

It's this control players have over their own careers that the owners are now trying to take away. The courts and lawmakers can do nothing because the billion-dollar industry of major-league baseball isn't considered a business. Just recently, appeals courts in New York and St. Louis ruled that unions can't file antitrust suits because of baseball's exemption.

Hatch and Moynihan are trying to change this. Their bill would make owners subject to some antitrust laws, allowing players to file court challenges against unilateral changes like salary caps.

"This is now a bipartisan effort in the Senate, and the momentum is building quickly," Moynihan said.

If momentum is building quickly, someone needs to tell the congressional leaders. Both House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said last week that they had no intention of getting involved in the dispute.

Hatch doesn't have a problem with getting involved. On Wednesday, the Judiciary Committee's antitrust subcommittee is expected to begin hearings — better 73 years late than never. Union head Donald Fehr has promised to end the strike if the bill becomes law.

The latest owners' proposal, presented Wednesday, includes a so-called luxury tax on salaries rather than a salary cap. Teams whose payrolls range from $35 million to $42 million would pay a 75 percent tax on the amount exceeding $35 million. The tax would rise to 100 percent when salary level tops $42 million.

In 1989, 12 teams had payrolls of less than $14 million. That same year, CBS paid $1.08 billion for the exclusive noncable rights for four seasons. Ticket sales bring in approximately $400 million a year. In this climate, what's wrong with players getting as much as they can?

The strike forced the cancellation of the playoffs and World Series for the first time since 1904. If players are willing to give up the World Series, then they shouldn't be bothered by a few minor-leaguers trying to cross the picket line.

There was a Republican-controlled House in 1922 when the chattel status of players was first established, and there was a Republican speaker in 1904. Republicans now have the opportunity to knock baseball from its protected perch and drag it kicking and screaming into the free market.

Waging a campaign of fear over nomination

Dr. Henry Foster seemed the perfect choice to send shooting through the perilous rapids of the nomination process. The two following quotes from the Sunday edition of The New York Times illustrate why.

On the issue of sex education, which indirectly led to the downfall of his outspoken liberal predecessor, Foster said, "I think that these issues have to be addressed at the family level. I do not feel schools or the health department can unilaterally do this without the involvement of parents."

Asked for an opinion on providing teen-agers with condoms, he said, "I favor abstinence. Abstinence, that's what I favor. We teach people abstinence. That's our first route."

To President George Bush, Foster was a point of light. Bush honored Foster with a citation for his aggressive self-esteem program called "I Have a Future," which encouraged initiative in the young while discouraging early pregnancy for obvious economic and educational reasons.

In spite of his initial appeal to both parties, Foster's nomination has become a mess. The impending confirmation fight has already ended a shaky pro-choice vs. pro-life truce within the Republican Party. In addition, some senators openly say their vote in the confirmation hearings will be cast against the managerial incompetence of the executive branch rather than for or against Foster. How did this happen?

There are many contributing factors, but the most logical starting point is the pro-life jihad that has been declared against abortion. America has grown eerily accepting of this pro-life holy war in recent years. Shootings, bombings and other violent tactics of intimidation have become commonplace. Doctors are under the 24-hour surveillance of loopy lurking right-wingers within the pro-life movement. Families of doctors and other service-providers endure ongoing harassment. Fanatics go so far as to publish the names of young women seeking abortion services, causing untold emotional devastation. All this in America, a country in which it is a woman's legal right to have an abortion.

Foster, pressed to give a number, first said he'd performed "fewer than a dozen" abortions. But documents list him as the physician of record on 39 abortion procedures. Foster's contention that his memory is dim on this issue does not seem contrived; he practiced obstetrics for 38 years, most of them years in which abortion was not the heated topic it has become in the past decade or so. It was a medical procedure, and not an uncommon one. It is hardly Foster's fault that abortion has been turned into a shameful secret within the medical profession by a bunch of religious hooligans and their political whores. Yet that's precisely what Foster has unwittingly come up against, and it is religious hooligans and political whores who will oppose his nomination.

In 1972, Foster became the youngest person ever admitted to the National Academy of Sciences; he was 39. Eight national associations of medical professionals staunchly back their colleague's nomination. Clinton, the marshmallow president, actually coughed up a pugnacious paragraph or two in support of his embattled nominee, urging people not to "reduce a man's entire career to a cardboard cutout."

Sen. Joseph Biden, Democrat and accused plagiarist of note from Delaware, sniped at the administration Friday, calling the nomination "a political blunder in the extreme." He has since changed his mind and no longer claims to oppose the nomination.

Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont, a moderate Republican, highlighted the GOP fissure over the abortion issue when he said, "I have a feeling myself that there's still time to straighten out this mess. I'm ready to go to a hearing."

Meanwhile, Ralph Reed, executive director of the Christian Coalition, threw gasoline on the fire of Foster's nomination by stating, "Pro-life and pro-family voters — a third of the electorate — will not support a party that retreats from its noble and historic defense of traditional values and which has a national ticket or a platform that does not share Ronald Reagan's belief in the sanctity of innocent human life."

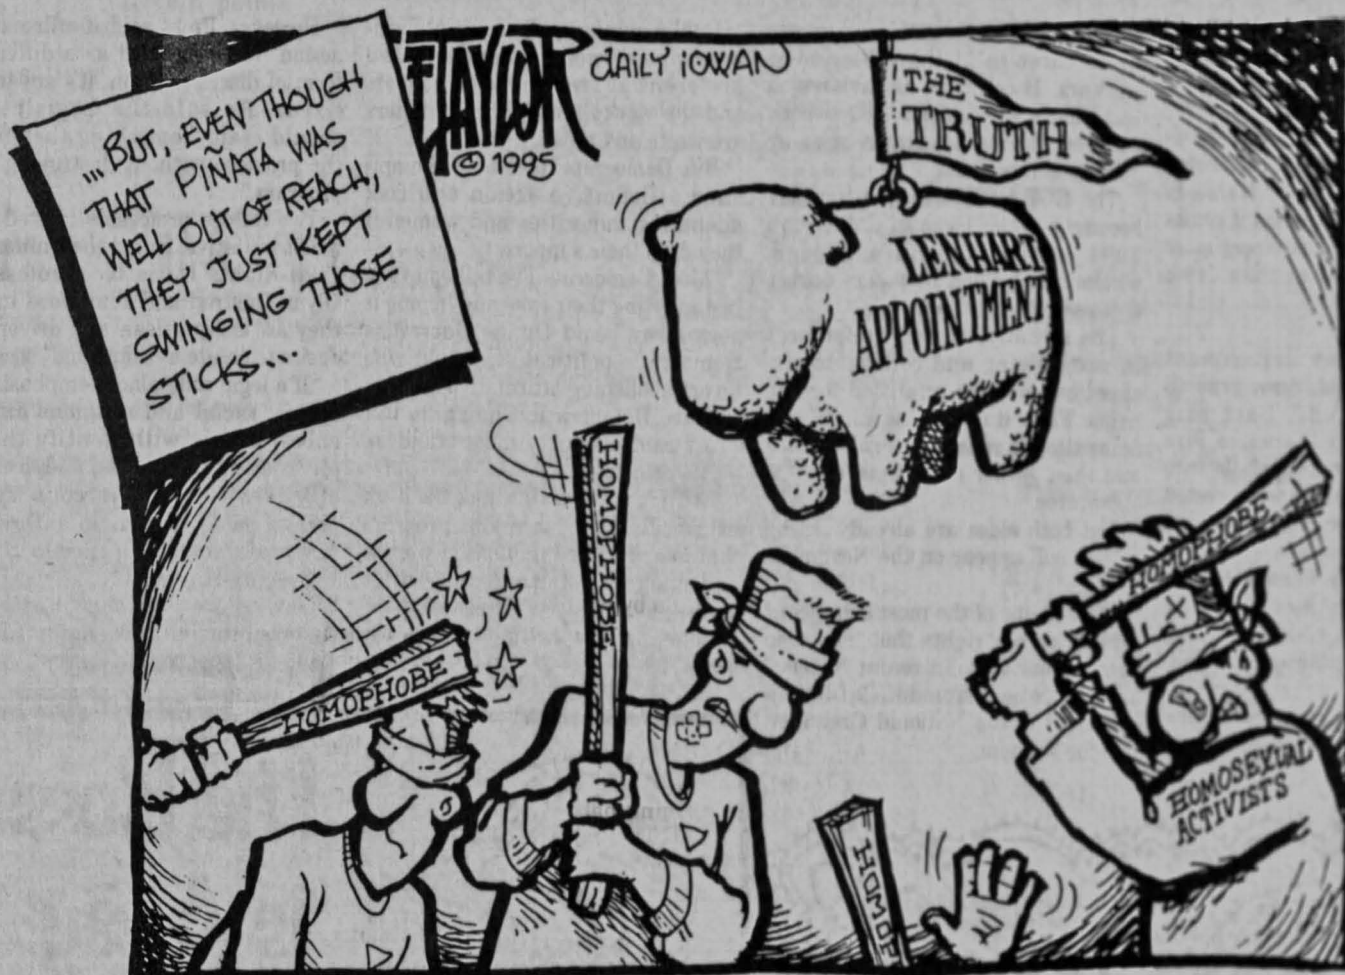

Social moderates within the GOP were quick to respond. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Penn., said, "The Republican Party will not be blackmailed by any special-interest group." William Weld, governor of Massachusetts, said it was "intellectually dishonest" for conservatives to advocate less government "while keeping a foot on individual liberty."

If all these comments and responses read like the script of a soap opera, we shouldn't be surprised. We have invited a group of melodramatic right-wing terrorists into the heart of one of our two major political parties. The price we pay for making peace with their jihad is that people like Reed end up in positions of influence.

At the moment, it is likely that both Foster's confirmation hearings and the presidential nomination scramble within the GOP will be partly dominated by people who got to the top by waging a campaign of terror. If both Republicans and Democrats fail to stand up to them now, we are in for more lawlessness and death. Stack up the record of Dr. Henry Foster against the antics of his detractors first — then decide where you stand.

DUANE NOLLEN

Cut sacred cows, government dependency

In 1981, David Stockman, President Reagan's budget director, said, "The budget is a rolling history of decisions. All kinds of decisions made five, 10, 15 years ago, are coming back to bite us unexpectedly."

A lot of Washington fat cats have earned their spurs through getting goodies for their constituencies or agencies thrown into the budget at Uncle Sam's expense. This pursuit of self-interest leads to a lot of programs evolving into sacred cows that drain the treasury. The only way to get the deficit under control and to make any progress in reducing the debt is to cut these sacred cows hard.

Most of today's budget woes stem from President Johnson's Great Society program to combat poverty. Though nice and egalitarian, these programs have made the public too dependent on the government. Many of these programs have evolved into bloated bureaucratic machines with a myriad of interest groups and voter blocks to protect them.

The debate over balancing the budget centers on discretionary vs. mandatory spending. Discretionary spending — 1/3 of the budget — is the part of the budget that gets the ax, yet mandatory spending — more than 2/3 of the budget — is left alone because it takes a new law to alter its spending level.

Most of the automatic nondiscretionary spending items in the budget are Great Society programs.

The sacred cows in the budgetary pasture are Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, unemployment benefits, government pensions, public assistance, student aid, food and nutrition programs, farm price supports and interest on the debt.

The American people need to understand the reality of balancing the budget — it requires cutting LBJ's sacred cows. It is going to hurt, but it has to be done.

The budget is the No. 1 political document in the land; it sets the federal government's priorities for the fiscal year. A lot is at stake: agency budgets, pork barrel projects for the folks at home and political agendas. Thus, the president, Congress, bureaucrats and lobbyists are involved in a melee.

When Gingrich says, "We are going to rethink Medicare from the ground up," he has the right idea.

The president submits his budget proposal in February, and Congress then takes it and does what it wants. Congress makes its budget resolution on April 15. The House can then take action on appropriations bills after May 15. The House and the Senate work on a compromise conference bill that is sent to the president for his signature before the start of the next fiscal year, Oct. 1.

President Clinton's fiscal year 1996 budget is not up to snuff with Congress' new budget-cutting agenda.

According to the Office of Management and Budget, the $1.6 trillion Clinton budget has $1.1 trillion in mandatory spending, $283 billion for defense and international discretionary spending, and $266 billion for domestic discretionary spending. In mandatory spending, interest on the debt is only $257 billion, and Social Security takes $351 billion. The projected budget deficit is still around the $200 billion mark and will fluctuate up and down for the next five years, according to the office's projections.

Both Congress and the president agree that Social Security is not to be touched, and it is dumb to blow off paying interest on the debt. President Clinton does not want drastic cuts in entitlements. Therefore, the 1996 budget does not contribute much to reducing the deficit.

Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich and the Republican leadership are feeling the heat from whining Democrats about not disclosing the specific cuts needed to balance the budget. They are not disclosing any specific cuts; you can't predict specific cuts because subcommittee chairpersons have the power to grant or deny funds to programs. The details of funding for specific programs are in the minutes of committee testimony and not in the actual spending bill presented on the floor of the House. Thus, it is impossible to say in advance, "We are cutting X dollars from program A."

When Gingrich says, "We are going to rethink Medicare from the ground up," he has the right idea. The sacred cows in the mandatory spending category of the budget have to be scaled back in order to balance the budget. It has made the American people, from inner-city poor to farmers and retired people, too dependent on the government.

Congress deceived on coed tents

Congress should deal with the problem that the U.S. Armed Services are encouraging sexual misconduct and other social problems that result from immoral behavior. In our present mission in Haiti, some male and female soldiers of all four services are required to sleep side by side in small tents without any separation between the cots.

When women began to advance closer to the front lines last year, the advocates of a gender-neutral military stoutly maintained that such extreme social experimentation would never take place. Defense Secretary William Perry wrote Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., on Sept. 28, "Under no circumstances will male and female service members be berthed in the same compartment. Field operations will apply this same guidance, tailored with common sense to meet the specific situation."

Isn't that chummy? Boys and girls are reaching out and touching everybody.

Was Perry misleading Congress then or has Pentagon policy dramatically changed? Maj. Cindy Soto, a U.S. Army spokeswoman in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, says the coed sleeping arrangement is used "because we like to maintain unit integrity."

She added, "In my opinion, it's easier to run a unit if you're able to reach out and touch everybody."

Isn't that chummy? Boys and girls are reaching out and touching everybody.

Some enjoy the new close quarters. Army Spc. Christopher Moran blurted out, "Some of the women are a little uptight about it, but it really doesn't bother us."

Other Army spokesmen who commented on this policy tried to shift responsibility to commanders in the field or onto servicemen and women themselves. Lt. Col. Charlotte Kimbal, who runs the division's supply center, commented, "Some choose to segregate; some do not."

But it's not that simple. What if those who "choose to segregate" are stuck in the same coed tent with fellow soldiers who do not choose to segregate?

The men and women in the Army are in their years of peak sexual interest and desires. Some are married; some are not. The Haiti assignment includes periods of unpleasantness, loneliness and boredom. It is wrong from every point of view to expose these soldiers to maximum temptation in close quarters during long hours of darkness.

The Presidential Commission on the Assignment of Women in the Armed Forces heard testimony on the sexual problems that resulted from the assignment of men and women to Saudi Arabia. Sgt. Mary Rader testified, "It was very heavy."

Pentagon officials argue that the coed tents in Haiti do not represent a big change from past practices, but that's not true. As recently as the Persian Gulf War, for the most part men and women in the field were housed in sleeping quarters that afforded minimal privacy.

The U.S. Navy is going to enormous expense to reconfigure berthing areas on ships so male and female sailors can be separated. If it is not OK for males and females to sleep together at sea, why is it OK on land?

In addition to the obvious possibility of something less than "good order and discipline" under the sheets, there are also problems of sexual harassment and (the reverse side of the coin) false claims of sexual harassment. Coed tents afford opportunities for both.

Servicemen and women probably run the gamut of different standards of behavior, from those who feel the lack of privacy acutely to those who are trying to remain faithful to their spouses despite temptation; to those who think casual sex is run-of-the-mill behavior; to those who would use the opportunities afforded for free sex, preferential treatment or malice.

Of course, the servicemen and women can't complain. This is the Army, remember? You do what you are told and don't complain (or file a lawsuit) about conditions. Furthermore, any complaint that has anything to do with gender is sure to result in demerits on your conduct record, especially if you are a man.

The new policy is hardly a winner with the wives of the men assigned to Haiti. One, whose letter has been made public, said bluntly, "Our military spouses give our country sacrificial gifts by willingly being separated from their mate and actively supporting their mission. In return, we must honor this gift by not unnecessarily tempting their spouse or ordering them to live in a manner that they cannot morally approve of."

The Army shocked the American people during the Gulf War by deploying to Saudi Arabia mothers of 6-, 8- and 10-week-old nursing babies. That nonsense was the direct result of the feminist ideology of gender equality which teaches that there isn't any difference between the mother and the father of a 6-week-old baby.

A war or an international police action that requires sending mothers out to fight or requires male and female soldiers to sleep together isn't worth fighting.

In Haiti, the U.S. Armed Forces have advanced to the next stage of gender-neutral nuttiness. A war or an international police action that requires sending mothers out to fight or requires male and female soldiers to sleep together isn't worth fighting.

Congress should terminate this social experimentation and investigate the Pentagon's dishonest answers about women in the U.S. Armed Services.

LETTERS

Bible and Constitution not read thoughtfully

To the Editor:

The Viewpoints section of Jan. 20 The Daily Iowan contained Jonathan Lyons' "Pro-life advocates peddle pro-death jihad." Lyons had the following statements in that article: "One cannot both advocate and protest against bloodshed" and "According to Christian scripture, the Christian god is no fan of cold-blooded murder."

Also in the Letters section of the DI of Feb. 1, Pat Minor-Nidey's "Eye for an eye" is not the teaching of Jesus" had the following statements: "Jesus' overall message is one of love and forgiveness" and "Where is the justification for the death penalty?"

The Bible and the U.S. Constitution have this in common: Everybody refers to them daily, but nobody has ever read them thoughtfully. Lyons and Minor-Nidey, please read the following passage from Matthew. Ask yourselves whether it advocates both love and hatred, forgiveness and revengefulness, them and us, Jewotripism and Gentileotripism, and homotripism and heterotripism:

"The twelve disciples Jesus sent out with the following instructions: Do not go among the Gentiles or enter any town of the Samaritans. Go rather to the lost sheep of Israel. Whatever town or village you enter search for some worthy person there and stay at his house until you leave. As you enter the home, give it your greeting. If the home is deserving, let your peace rest on it; if it is not, let your peace return to you. If anyone will not welcome you or listen to your words, shake the dust off your feet when you leave that home or town; it will be more bearable for Sodom and Gomorrah on the day of judgment than for that town. Do not suppose that I have come to bring peace to the earth. I did not come to bring peace, but a sword. For I have come to turn a man against his father ... a man's enemies will be the members of his own household. Do not be afraid of those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul. Rather, be afraid of the One who can destroy both soul and body in hell. Whoever finds his life will lose it, and whoever loses his life for my sake will find it" (Matthew, Chapter 10).

The event of Sodom and Gomorrah is in Genesis, Chapter 19; every group (men, women and children) suffered the divine retributive vengeance.

Miami showmen sweep All-Star events

PHOENIX (AP) — After Glen Rice swished 'em, teammate Harold Miner slammed 'em.

On the NBA's annual day of hype and music known as All-Star Saturday, Miami players swept the skills competition. Rice beat Reggie Miller in the long-distance shootout, then Miner won his second slam dunk championship after missing last season's contest with an injury.

The Heat may be one of the league's worst teams, but Miner and Rice showed their entertainment value.

Rice warmed up with his first 3-point title, then Miner provided the only sparks of the day with his power dunks.

The rookie game showed off the league's new talent and the shootout was close, but the crowd at America West Arena didn't really get going until Miner started doing his thing.

The best of his muscular dunks was one in which he approached the basket from the left side, spun 180 degrees, lowered the ball to his knees and slammed it backward through the basket.

His second move was a flying left-handed jam, and he completed his routine with a 360-degree spin and slam.

With rap music as the background, Miner's acrobatics made this one a no-contest. Last year's winner, Minnesota's Isaiah Rider, missed two of his four attempts in the finals while Miner hit three of four.

Jacobsen wins second straight tournament

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Peter Jacobsen shot a 4-under-par 68 to win the Buick Invitational by four shots Sunday, giving him consecutive PGA Tour victories for the first time in his 19-year pro career.

Jacobsen birdied the par-5, 498-yard 18th hole to finish with a 72-hole total of 19-under 269.

One week earlier, Jacobsen won the AT&T National Pro-Am at Pebble Beach with a tournament-record 17-under 271.

Jacobsen won $216,000 from the $1.2 million Buick purse.

West All-Stars: In your face

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

PHOENIX — The outcome was decided and the crowd was bored. Then the NBA's two best centers decided to step out of character, helping to save an otherwise uninspiring All-Star Game.

Before the West completed its 139-112 rout of the East on Sunday, things got downright silly. Like Shaquille O'Neal trying a 3-pointer. Like Hakeem Olajuwon making one.

The West was already comfortably ahead, 115-92, when O'Neal fired from long range. Predictably, the 7-foot-1 Orlando center hit nothing but ... air.

"It slipped," he said.

Olajuwon, a 7-footer, attempted a 3-pointer his next trip down the floor. He made his, though.

It was that kind of night for the Western All-Stars, who showed why their conference holds the balance of power in the NBA.

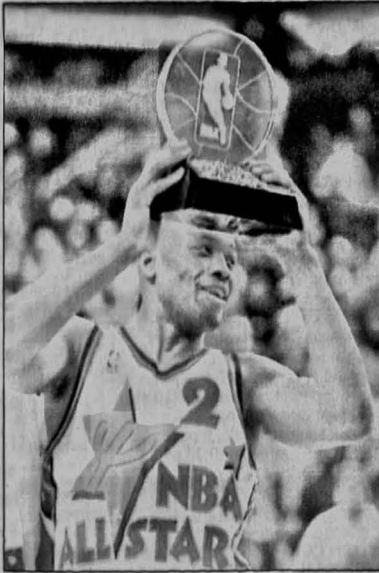

"I got that idea from Shaq, when he shot that three," Olajuwon said. "I said, 'Oh, that's a good idea! so I went for a three also.'"

Mitch Richmond, the Sacramento guard who was the game's most valuable player, was the perfect example of why the West is best. His 23 points led all scorers, and he shot 10-for-13, including all three of his 3-pointers, in his third All-Star Game.

"Mitch is great shooter who knows how to come off picks and when to shoot," said Seattle's Gary Payton, who had 15 assists.

Even O'Neal's first good performance as an All-Star — 22 points in 26 minutes — couldn't match the West's firepower.

Utah's Karl Malone and

Associated Press

The West's Mitch Richmond, of the Sacramento Kings, holds up his trophy as MVP of the 1995 NBA All-Star Game.

Phoenix's Charles Barkley had 15 points apiece. Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon had 13 points and 11 rebounds.

With teammate Anfernee Hardaway to get him the ball, O'Neal looked comfortable and made 9 of 16 shots, banishing memories of his 2-for-12 performance last year.

Despite his efforts, though, the East was never really in this one, falling behind by 16 at halftime.

A 3-pointer by Joe Dumars made it 79-69 with 6:18 left in the third quarter. Then O'Neal grabbed a rebound, dribbled the length of the floor and drove to the basket, drawing the foul and cutting the lead to eight.

That was as close as the East got. The West proceeded to outscore the East 25-10. Richmond led the way with 10 points, including two 3-pointers, and the West capped the spurt with 3-pointers by Richmond and Detlef Schrempf.

By the end of the period, the West was up 104-81, and that was that.

"When it got to be 20 points it was ridiculous," San Antonio's David Robinson said. "Some players started goofing around, and I think the crowd was a bit disappointed. But it got back on track."

In the fourth quarter, things started to get ragged, and the crowd lost interest before some hijinks by Barkley woke them up.

During a timeout with 5:50 left, the Suns' gorilla mascot was dunking off a springboard, and Barkley wanted to join the fun. But as he took the ball in his hands, teammate Dan Majerle pulled him back, and West coach Paul Westphal came running on the court to stop him, too.

For the East, Hardaway and Chicago's Scottie Pippen had 12 apiece, and Hardaway added 11 assists. Dumars scored 10, and his

Losses continue to pile up for Iowa

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

It's hard to get used to losing.

But it's becoming a familiar pattern for the Iowa women's basketball team, which fell to 8-14 and appears headed for its first losing season in a dozen years after a pair of 62-55 losses at Carver-Hawkeye Arena last weekend.

Iowa fell to Michigan State on Friday and Purdue Sunday.

In order to finish the season with a winning record, the Hawkeyes (4-8 in the Big Ten) must win their remaining four games and then win the Big Ten Tournament at the end of the year.

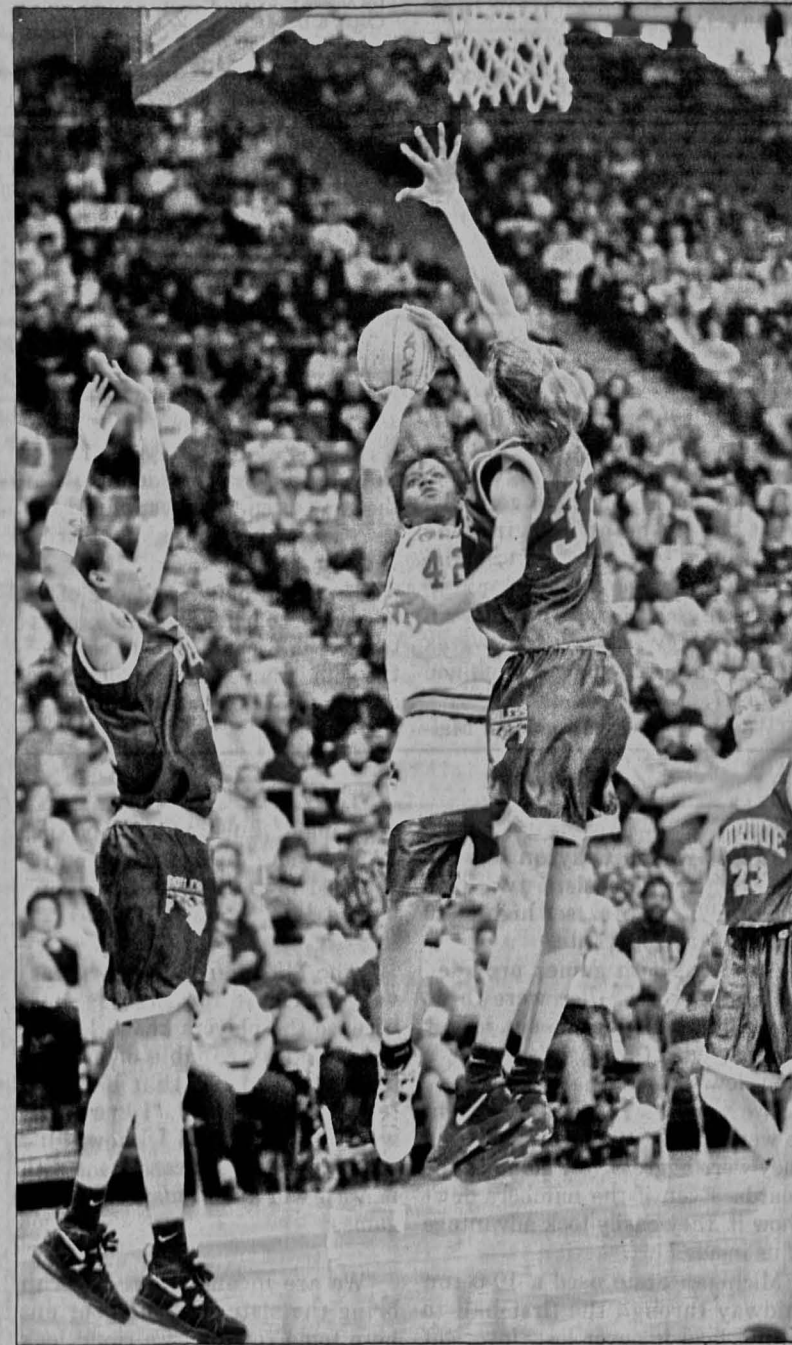

While that may seem like an unrealistic goal, Iowa proved Sunday that they can hang with anybody the Big Ten has to offer.

The Boilermakers, No. 17 in the country and in sole possession of first place in the Big Ten, came to Carver-Hawkeye Arena having already beaten Iowa by 18 earlier in the year.

Iowa came into the game having lost eight of its last 10 and armed with only nine healthy players.

But it was the Hawkeyes that led by four points with just over three minutes remaining before Purdue scored 12 unanswered points to steal the victory.

"We've lost some credibility in terms of what the Hawkeyes have been all about. But we're always capable," Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said after Sunday's game. "It could be a whole different show."

Freshman Tiffany Gooden attempts a shot over Purdue center Stacey Lovelace Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Purdue won 62-55.

I mean, we can go to the Big Ten Tournament and we could win. We're certainly capable of that."

Purdue coach Lin Dunn agreed.

"Everyone would be very apprehensive about playing Iowa," she said. "They're big, they're fast, they're strong, they're quick. They're very good."

Iowa seemed to fall apart after an officials' time out with 3:19 remaining. The Hawkeyes led 50-46 at that time, but didn't score again until the final seven seconds.

Purdue came out of the time out smoking. In the next minute and a

Then Iowa's Jenny Noll missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw opportunity that could have brought the Hawkeyes within one. On the next possession, Iowa's Tangela Smith threw a pass that never made it to Noll.

With 43 seconds remaining, Iowa began fouling. The Boiler-makers made five of six free throws in the next 30 seconds to go ahead 60-50.

"We got a little bit tentative. There were a couple of stretches there for a couple of minutes where I didn't think we were coming strong," Stringer said. "It didn't happen long, but in a game like that, a minute or two is enough to

Iowa upends second-ranked Illinois

In what figured to be a tight showdown, the Iowa men's gymnastics team dominated second-ranked Illinois Friday, 227.3-223.4.

The win makes Iowa the team to beat in the Big Ten Conference, and perhaps the nation. "We should be number one," junior Aaron Cotter said. "I think we're the best team in the country."

Iowa used a balanced team effort to humble Illinois.

Sophomores Dave Nemovitz (still rings), Pete Masucci (horizontal bar), juniors Hugh Lau (parallel bars) and Jay Thornton (floor exercise and parallel bars) all finished as individual champions. Thornton also finished first in the all-around (56.85).

Other strong efforts came from Cotter and freshman Travis Rosen. Cotter finished third all-around (47.1), while Rosen placed seventh with a 37.3.

Lau scored a career best on the parallel bars (9.65) despite suffering a sprained ankle before the meet.

Women's track

The wheels of improvement keep on turning for the Iowa women's track team.

Iowa used a scorching sprint attack to its advantage as it turned in another solid performance at the Iowa State Classic on Saturday.

Yolanda Hobbs led the Hawkeye attack with her wins in the 55- and 200-meter dashes. Hobbs' time of 6.83 seconds in the 55 automatically qualified her for the NCAA Championships in March.

She also ran a personal best in the 200 with a time of 23.66 seconds.

Brianna Benning cruised to her second straight victory in the 800-meter run with a personal-best time of 2:11.35.

The mile relay team consisting of Benning, Wynsone Cole, Tanja Reid, and Maria Philip finished second to Illinois State with a season-best time of 3:49.28. No team scores were kept.

Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said the team is running well in competitions and should be competitive at the Big Ten Championships Feb. 24-25.

"We're going to be able to score in a few different events that have developed through the season," Hassard said. "Earlier in the season I was less optimistic, but a lot of improvement has taken place this year." —Shannon Stevens

One month into the season, Iowa men's track coach Ted Wheeler is starting to see the pieces come together.

Specifically, Wheeler is happy with the progress shown this weekend at the Iowa State Open.

No team scores were kept, but the Hawkeyes held their own against some tough competition from all across the country.

"I thought overall the team made fairly significant improvements," Wheeler said. "We're moving in a competitive direction. I'm quite pleased."

The Hawkeyes were once again led by team co-captain Andre Morris, who took part in the Hawkeyes only two top-three finishes of the day. After finishing third in the 400 meters with a time of 47.62 seconds, Morris ran a 46.5 split to help lead the 4 X 400 team to a first-place finish.

Men's swimming

The final dual meet of the season was more than just a warm-up before the Big Ten Championships for the Iowa men's swimming team.

The No. 12 Hawkeyes put their undefeated record on the line when they traveled to Lawrence, Kan., Saturday, to take on the No. 22 Jayhawks.

Led by double winners Jory Blauer, Krzysztof Cwalina and Rafal Szukala, the Hawkeyes defeated Kansas by a score of 139-104 to finish the season a perfect 8-0.

"I was very pleased to get out with a solid win over a strong Kansas team," Iowa coach Glenn Patton said.

Blauer took first in the 200 backstroke and swam on the winning medley relay squad. Cwalina won the 50 freestyle and also swam on the medley relay squad.

Szukala won the 200 butterfly and the 200 freestyle.

Overall, Iowa took first in nine of 13 events en route to the victory.

Women's gymnastics

Despite several outstanding individual efforts, the Iowa women's gymnastics team came up short in two meets over the weekend.

On Friday, Southeast Missouri State defeated Iowa, 191.375 to 188.55.

The loss overshadowed a career-best performance by junior Jodie Gray on the balance beam. Gray finished with a 9.80, good for a first-place tie with freshman Stephanie Wesely.

"It's very frustrating (to come up short)," Gray said. "Still, as long as we feel like we performed well as a team, we'll be okay."

Junior Kim Baker continued her string of strong performances. She finished first in the uneven bars (9.80), and placed second in the vault with a 9.80. Baker also placed second in all-around with a 38.10.

"We're doing well in placings, we're just lacking in depth and it's taking a toll," Iowa coach Diane DeMarco said.

Saturday, Iowa (0-6) finished third in a triangular with Iowa State and Northern Illinois. Despite the losses, DeMarco remained upbeat.

"We have a great team, and the quality of the team doesn't always show up based on wins and losses."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Women's tennis

The Iowa women's tennis team had an up and down weekend as it was dominated by Michigan Saturday, losing 7-2, but then swept Michigan State on Sunday 9-0.

The Hawkeyes ran into a Wolverine buzz-saw in Ann Arbor, losing all six singles matches. Iowa managed to salvage the doubles competition, winning two of the three matches.

The highlight of the match for Iowa was senior Laura Dvorak and junior Nikki Willette's doubles victory over Michigan's Sarah Cyganiak and Tara Graff, 6-2, 6-7, 6-1.

Iowa turned things around on Sunday, sweeping all six singles matches and all three doubles contests. The Hawkeyes evened their Big Ten record at 1-1, 4-4 overall.

Men's tennis

The Iowa men's tennis team had a reality check this weekend as it was swept by No. 27 Kansas 5-0.

The Hawkeyes dominated their first dual meet of the season, but Kansas was just too much for Iowa as they swept all nine matches.

Bryan Crowley, Iowa's top singles player, did not compete in his singles match but did team up with teammate Bob Zumph in doubles action. Zumph and Crowley fell 8-6 to Kansas' Enrique Abaroa and J.P. Vissepo.

Iowa dropped to 1-1 while Kansas stayed a perfect 6-0.

IOWA-ILLINOIS

Iowa's Settles blames self for overtime loss

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — When the going gets tough, Iowa has a tough time getting going.

The Hawkeyes haven't been able to make key plays at the end of games all season, losing four times by one point, and they failed again Saturday at Illinois. They frittered away a four-point lead in the final 20 seconds of regulation and lost 104-97 in overtime.

Iowa (14-9 overall, 4-7 Big Ten) lost despite shooting 78 percent in the second half and getting the best game in a month from Jess Settles, whose sore back has hampered his play measurably. The 6-foot-7 sophomore scored 17 points and grabbed six rebounds but blamed himself for allowing Illinois to send the game into overtime.

The Hawkeyes were leading 86-82 when Jerry Hester hit a 3-pointer to bring Illinois to within a point with 19 seconds left. Settles then was double-teamed in the corner and he threw an errant pass that Illinois' Robert Bennett picked off.

"The play was to get the ball to Andre Woolridge, but I lost my balance a little," Settles said. "I was kind of falling out of bounds. If I was going to throw the ball, at least I shouldn't have thrown it under the basket."

All in all, Settles said, it was a "dumb play."

Woolridge fouled Bennett and he made one of two free throws to tie the score.

Iowa coach Tom Davis said his team still has trouble putting a full game together.

"But we're better than we were a week ago," he said. "Part of that is we're getting back together health-wise. Hopefully, we can keep that going. Whether that will be good enough to go to a postseason tournament, we don't know."

Woolridge led Iowa with 18 points, while Chris Kingsbury and Jim Bartels each scored 15. Russ Millard added 13 points and a team-high seven rebounds.

Kingsbury made three 3-pointers to raise his season total to 73, a school record.

MOVIE REVIEW

Simple 'Quick and the Dead' lacks originality, packs in fun

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

Don't expect any brash new revelations about the Western genre with buxom bombshell Sharon Stone's latest cinematic foray, "The Quick and the Dead."

This is no "Unforgiven" and no "Once Upon a Time in the West." It has more in common with "Bad Girls" and "Young Guns II" in terms of originality and dramatic insight.

Stone

to match its comic-book feel.

Stone, also the film's co-producer, seems to sink comfortably and easily into the role of Ellen, a mysterious, often-frowning gunslinger who could be a feminine clone of Clint Eastwood's spaghetti Western hero in "The Man With No Name."

Ellen is a woman with a simple mission: exact revenge for her father's death on John Herod (Hackman), a brutal former outlaw now dominating a small town on the fringes of nowhere.

As luck would have it, Ellen rides into town just in time to enter a gunslinging competition of which Herod is the sponsor and running champion. A big chest of loot is the grand prize.

Sitting in a saloon sipping whiskey and scowling at Herod, Ellen fits right in with the other contest entrants — never mind that Stone's clothes look suspiciously Armani-designed or that her good looks don't quite mesh with the inbred-looking faces of the scum around her. Suspend that disbelief.

Ellen's competitors include "The Kid" (DiCaprio), a wisecracking teen-ager with shiny six-shooters; "Ace" (Lance Henriksen), a greasy assassin who likes to unfurl playing cards in people's faces; and Cort (Russell Crowe), a hated local preacher who used to ride with Herod but has "redeemed" himself.

Ellen is linked first to The Kid and then to Cort, who is forced by Herod into the contest, but we're welcomed denied any obligatory sex scenes, which is fine — they just wouldn't have fit in.

We see these fellows and others doing their dandiest to survive in the ensuing elimination dueling rounds — exciting sequences filmed vividly and brilliantly by veteran cinematographer Dante Spinotti.

Stone is at her fiery best, matching the ferocity of her "Total Recall" performance, while Hackman is suitably ominous, in essence reprising the evil viciousness of his sheriff in "Unforgiven."

Raimi, best known for his "Evil Dead" series and the abominable "Darkman," does audiences a favor by cranking up the action, highlighting the archetypal aspects of his characters and, most important, not taking his film too seriously. That's why "The Quick and the Dead" works — there are no pretensions to wade through, just a great ride to enjoy.

The Quick and the Dead

Director: Sam Raimi
Screenwriter: Simon Moore

Ellen Sharon Stone
John Herod Gene Hackman
The Kid Leonardo DiCaprio

Rating: R

 out of ****

Nevertheless, "The Quick and the Dead" is still a surprisingly entertaining flick, surging along with an engaging kinetic energy. Director Sam Raimi breathes life and humor into his mythic gunslinging yarn, making it campy, cheesy, popcorn-chomping fun.

He's got help from an equally enthusiastic and extremely talented cast that includes Gene Hackman and Leonardo DiCaprio, and his film has an edgy, atmospheric look

DANCE PERFORMANCE

Susan Marshall & Company dazzle Hancher 'spectators'

Molly Faulkner
The Daily Iowan

Armed with a corps of eight incredibly gifted dancers and 26 Iowa City residents, Susan Marshall & Company waged a small war on the evils of complacency Friday night at Hancher Auditorium.

The first piece, "Spectators at an Event," put the audience in the unsettling position of being both the spectators and the event — sometimes at the same time.

The mere fact that audience members were sitting and watching placed them into the role of spectators, and when the dancers ran and looked pointedly into the darkened auditorium, the audience became the event. Then video images of people sitting in the auditorium flashed onto a on-stage screen, and the audience became both.

This, coupled with the interactive way the dancers used the aisles as usable dance space and the way several dancers whispered names as if calling out for someone, made the production an audience-participation spectacle — like it or not.

It was uncomfortable not knowing whether the whispering was part of the show.

Christopher Kondek's raw video design incorporated 1930s and '40s tabloid photographs of Arthur Fellig — better known as "Weegee." Fellig's work is famous for capturing disaster and human suffering on film, and the footage of these old photographs created a dance of eerie black-and-white faces around the stage.

Marshall recognized the power of these images, and in a brilliant choreographic move she left them to speak for themselves several times.

The second half of the show, "Fields of View," was a celebration of individuality. Dancers continually moved in and out of the group to follow their own movement patterns.

Little vignettes sprung up unexpectedly, and the only consistent movement was the set designed by Judith Shea — a paper snowstorm happening stage right. The stage became covered with "snow," and the patterns the dancers made in it became as much a part of the dance as the steps.

This work was more about movement than message and other than the costumes, it was a welcome change from recent choreography.

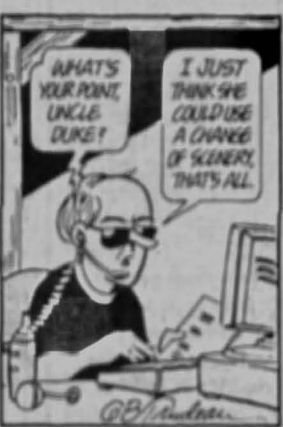

Susan Marshall & Company presented an evening of dance that was refreshingly nonpolitical. There were no sweeping statements about human behavior, and without a political agenda to fulfill, Marshall was able to get back to the wonder of dance and explore the subtleties of ideas through movement.
