Steinem forced to call off lecture

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

Less than a week before she was to stop at the UI during her promotional book tour, renowned feminist author Gloria Steinem canceled due to a neurological illness.

Steinem was scheduled to read from her latest work, "Moving Beyond Words," Friday in the auditorium of Macbride Hall as part of the "Live from Prairie Lights" reading series. The reading was expected to draw more than 800 people, but Steinem canceled the tour after her first appearance in Philadelphia.

"It is disappointing," said Jim Harris, owner of Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. "Authors generally don't reschedule. Her calendar is filled up in advance."

Kate Larkin of Simon & Schuster publishing company said Steinem is suffering from trigeminal neuralgia, a neurological disorder.

"It is not life-threatening," Larkin said. "It causes her intense facial pain, making it hard for her to speak."

Ann Houlihan, a neurological nurse at UI Hospitals and Clinics, said trigeminal neuralgia is a recurring condition which affects facial nerves.

"It is very debilitating," Houlihan said. "It can last a half-hour, or it can go on and on. The pain is usually only on one side."

Steinem is the second speaker to cancel an appearance at the UI this year. Former Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun, famous for the court's decision of Roe vs. Wade, canceled an appearance scheduled for this semester due to prior commitments.

Monique DiCarlo, director of the Women's Resource and Action Center, said she was disappointed by Steinem's cancellation because Steinem is an inspirational figure in women's liberation.

"Her appearance would have brought more attention to feminist issues in general and created a dialogue for the feminist agenda," DiCarlo said. "She brings a wealth of historical perspective to the women's movement, which for younger students is invigorating and insightful."

The founder of Ms. magazine, Steinem last visited the UI in 1993 to talk about her book "Revolution from Within: A Book of Self-Esteem." Drawing a primarily female crowd of nearly 1,000, she led an open discussion about the origins of female oppression and how self-esteem can be traced to childhood.

Classes likely to be held, despite storm

Tuesday night's freezing rain caused havoc for travelers and caused a number of accidents, but conditions probably won't warrant the cancellation of UI classes.

Although Tuesday night's conditions were similar to those that caused classes to be canceled Jan. 27, today's classes will most likely meet as scheduled, said Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations.

"Last time, it might not have been the right decision," she said. "It caused a lot of confusion. Conditions would have to be pretty bad to cancel classes."

Rhodes said there wouldn't be an official decision on the status of classes until the morning.

The Cambuses were still in service at press time. Cambus officials said the decision on whether to run buses today couldn't yet be determined, but service would probably continue as scheduled.

The Iowa City Police Department reported at least 20 accident calls by 9:20 p.m. Tuesday night, most within a span of an hour and a half. Accident reports were still coming in to police at press time.

Defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey delivered his first cross-examination, questioning Sgt. David Rossi about his actions at the crime scene the morning of the murders. He said the police were too slow in notifying O.J. Simpson, although he could have been a target of killers.

Officer Robert Riske said he didn't preserve a cup of ice cream or check the temperature of Nicole Brown Simpson's bath water. That evidence could have been used to fix the time of death.

Tomorrow: Rossi will return to the stand

House approves anti-crime legislation

Largely party-line vote gets sixth and final part of crime bill through the House.

WASHINGTON — The House passed the centerpiece of the Republican anti-crime package Tuesday, voting to create block grants for local governments while eliminating President Clinton's program to hire more police.

"I'm not going to let them wreck our crime bill, which is putting 100,000 new cops on the street," Clinton said Tuesday in an interview with Huntington, W.Va., television station WSAZ-TV.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the Judiciary Committee he chairs will have to rewrite the House package to secure Senate passage and come up with a bill that Clinton will be compelled to sign.

The sixth and final bill in the crime package, passed by a 238-192 largely party-line vote, replaces crime prevention programs and a commitment to help put 100,000 new cops on the streets — two cornerstones of the 1994 anti-crime law — with a $10 billion block grant that local governments can use as they see fit to fight crime.

CEDAR RAPIDS — After making valentines with children at Linn County Day Care, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton promised that her husband would not cut federally funded child care.

Rodham Clinton visited the center for about an hour Tuesday morning to show her support for child care. After taking some time to make a valentine for her daughter, Chelsea, Rodham Clinton met with about eight parents to get their input about federally funded child care.

She said she understands the importance of the issue and promised her husband wouldn't cut funding, but instead would propose increases for the program.

"In my husband's budget proposal, he actually suggested slight increases in funding," she said. "If we want these people to go to work, you have to find a place for the children."

Rodham Clinton, who heard of the Linn County Day Care program through Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, listened to success stories from parents who related how child care has helped them get an education and take control of their lives.

One mother, Kim Ritzman of Cedar Rapids, said Linn County Day Care has helped her to get through school and become financially independent.

"With great child-care funding, I was able to go back to school," Ritzman said. "I am now ready to start with my family being self-sufficient."

OWNERS FRET OVER RISING COSTS

Soaring rents imperil downtown businesses

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's picturesque downtown, known for its quaint cobblestone streets and small-town atmosphere, may be in danger of losing its traditional mom-and-pop shops if rent costs continue to soar.

A number of independent downtown entrepreneurs say the increasing rental rates in the downtown area might drive them out of business and attract larger corporate-owned stores to the area.

In recent weeks, two downtown businesses have shut their doors for good, and a third is moving to the outskirts of town. Many other store owners say they are struggling to keep their businesses afloat.

The future of Iowa City's downtown could be on rocky ground, said Leah Cohen, owner of Bo-

James restaurant, 118 E. Washington St.

"Looking at the future and all the expansion taking place outside of town, I think (the survival of the downtown) is a real viable concern," she said. "Something is going to have to happen with the rent because the downtown is beginning to be all restaurants and bars as the retailers are disappearing."

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

The high cost of rent in downtown Iowa City is forcing independent businesses to make room for chain stores. Candy Malts News, 127 E. Washington St., was one of the stores that fell victim to rising costs. The store went out of business on Jan. 31.

Rental costs in the Iowa City downtown area are climbing at the rate of approximately 3 to 5 percent every year, according to the consumer price index.

Downtown businesses should cater to the population Iowa City is most famous for — students — said one local development expert.

Marty Kelly, president of the Iowa City Area Development Group, 325 E. Washington St., said downtown businesses can best thrive by accommodating the needs of Iowa City's younger population.

"We have the University of Iowa, so we have a built-in market of 27,000 or 28,000 students here to challenge our direction," he said. "I personally see the downtown in general as catering to the young people."

Man stays in touch with weekend adventuring

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

Although many people go rock-climbing, ski or kayak for recreation, one lucky UI staff member gets paid to participate in these events.

Planning outdoor recreation weekends and many of the physical education skills courses offered by the UI is one of the jobs of Wayne Fett, program coordinator for the Division of Recreational Services.

DAY IN THE LIFE

Fett's job includes coordinating all aspects of the UI's Touch the Earth outdoor recreation program, from developing course curriculum to purchasing rental equipment for participants.

"It is my job to run the outdoor program. Cross-country skiing happens to be one of the things I enjoy the most, so I help teach it," Fett said. Fett, 41, teaches several courses not only for the enjoyment of the sport, but also to keep his skills in top shape.

"I teach as much as I can possibly teach," he said. "You can't stay in touch if you're sitting behind your desk all the time."

Because Fett's job includes selecting and training course instructors, he can be seen evaluating his staff during many of the UI's recreation weekends.

"I try to visit each one of my instructors at least once or twice a semester while they're teaching, and I try to stay there all day," he said. "I like to make sure my instructors are current with their techniques so nothing slides."

When he first joined the staff, doing evaluations meant Fett had to attend 125 trips each year. Now that Fett's two daughters — who are in the fifth and eighth grade — are involved in school activities, he limits himself to six annual excursions.

On all excursions, Fett said he and his staff encourage program participants to have a good time while they learn.

"The experiences that we do are fun — that's the bottom line," Fett said. "We put the learning in there to make sure you get something out of it. If it's not fun, you're not going to learn, anyway."

Fett's love for outdoor sports has touring, high ropes, flat-water canoeing, white-water canoeing, rock-climbing or kayaking, he can be found at The Field House.

created an awareness of the importance of environmental consciousness.

"I think outdoor recreation is really important not only because it's a fun way to get fit; it's also an important way to learn about the environment and take care of it," he said. "All of these activities that we do would not be possible if we don't take care of the resource areas."

The Touch the Earth staff teaches weekend courses and offers trips to the public in mountain biking, bike touring, high ropes course, flat-water canoeing, white-water canoeing, rock-climbing and kayaking.

Some trips take Fett and his staff out of state for white-water canoeing, backpacking or mountain biking.

"Every other year I'll do one to two weeklong trips that I don't have qualified instructors for or I'm trying to teach one of my instructors to take that kind of program," Fett said. "It's something I may do in my spare time, anyway."

Fett trains new instructors by having them watch other leaders and practice teaching during his trips.

"We basically use the mentoring system to teach our instructors," he said. "That way we don't throw anybody into teaching anything until my lead instructor and myself are comfortable with them teaching."

Fett said safety problems are the least of his worries, as the list of injuries from weekend trips remains short. He said the worst injury he's seen was a broken arm acquired while a ropes course student was playing a game of tag.

Instructors are taught to be prepared for the worst and make sure safety comes first.

"Three times a year, we update everyone on CPR and first aid," he said. "That's the bare minimum of certifications that I require for my staff."

Fett meets regularly with instructors to ensure they are using current methods.

When he's not out in the field with course instructors, Fett spends his days in his office in The Field House. Photographs of mountains and streams line his walls — an attempt to bring the outdoors to the windowless room.

Fett routinely rounds his day out with trips escorting his daughters to practices or performances. He said as his children grow older, he finds himself striving to be more involved in their lives than in his work.

Although Fett's goal is to become a director of recreational services, he said he is content with where he's at now.

"Being a director at a major university is one of my goals," he said. "But what I'm doing makes me very happy. I'm very happy in Iowa City."

Mom of 'Pulp Fiction' star approves of son's profession

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Elizabeth Jackson wanted her son to have the word "doctor" in front of his name. "Oscar nominee" will do, she said.

Samuel Jackson was nominated for an Academy Award on Tuesday for his supporting role in "Pulp Fiction."

"I always wanted him to be a doctor," Elizabeth Jackson said. "He didn't, but I couldn't be more proud."

In "Pulp Fiction," Jackson plays a gangster partner of John Travolta in a journey through the Los Angeles underworld.

News anchor gives students morality tips on journalism

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Dan Rather said would-be journalists should stick to the basics: Fairness, accuracy, integrity and good language skills.

The "CBS Evening News" anchorman told Texas Christian University students that journalists can stop declining standards by "staying true to the idealism that got most of us into journalism in the first place."

"American journalism ... is increasingly straying from its mission of public service and from its standards of fairness, accuracy and integrity," Rather said Monday.

He said entertainment values are rapidly overwhelming news judgment, citing O.J. Simpson's murder trial as a big story with important elements but one that has been overcovered.

He also advised the students to "learn to write and read."

The Texas native graduated from Sam Houston State Teachers College, now Sam Houston State University, in Huntsville, then worked in Dallas and Houston early in his career.

Republican candidate takes over radio show after loss

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ellen Sauerbrey couldn't be the next Christine Todd Whitman. So she wants to become the next Rush Limbaugh.

The Republican lost her gubernatorial bid by fewer than 6,000 votes. But she kept pushing her tax-cutting, government-shrinking theme Monday during her first radio talk show on WBAL.

"I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to be part of America's voice of democracy because I think talk radio is just that — it's America's electronic town hall," Sauerbrey said.

Topics of discussion during the first show included taxes, socialism and comparisons of her campaign to that of New Jersey Gov. Christine Todd Whitman, who also promised to lower taxes.

The show airs from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. weekdays until the start of the baseball season in April.

Former governor misses chauffeured lifestyle

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Former Gov. William Donald Schaefer says being a private citizen is a tough break. Make that brake.

The man who had drivers at his disposal for more than two decades as Baltimore's mayor and then Maryland governor said he is getting the hang of going without chauffeurs.

"It's difficult," he said Tuesday. "Driving yourself is an ordeal."

What about parking?

"I haven't done any parallel parking yet."

Schaefer, who spoke with reporters after testifying before state lawmakers, said people have been friendlier since he retired Jan. 18.

When he walked into an Annapolis restaurant recently, a man looked up and said, "Look what the cat dragged in."

"Everybody got up and came over and shook hands," Schaefer said.

80 TO PARTICIPATE IN UI STUDY

Researchers investigate new Tourette's medicine

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

People suffering from Gilles de la Tourette's syndrome — a neurological disorder that causes twitches and vocal outbursts — may soon be treated with a medication expected to cause fewer side effects than drugs currently prescribed.

Researchers from the UI College of Medicine will be among the first in the United States to study risperidone, a drug yet to be tested, said Samuel Kuperman, UI associate professor of psychiatry and co-investigator of the study. The study is scheduled to begin once eligible participants are found.

Kuperman said haloperidol, the main drug currently used to treat

"We're using a medication that affects a neurotransmitter called dopamine," Kuperman said. "It's a known transmitter in the brain that works with motor functioning."

He said 40 percent to 80 percent of Tourette's patients also suffer from obsessive-compulsive disorder, the irresistible impulse to repetitively perform certain acts or carry out certain rituals.

Kuperman said risperidone might also be effective in treating obsessive-compulsive disorder because it affects serotonin, the neurotransmitter involved in the disorder.

Four in 1,000 people suffer from Tourette's syndrome, which is inherited; four in 10,000 people suffer severely enough to require medical help, Kuperman said. Symptoms include motor tics such as eye blinking, head nodding and facial grimaces, as well as vocal tics such as humming, gulping and yawning.

More complex symptoms include squatting, touching things and repeating words or phrases.

Swearing is commonly associated with Tourette's syndrome, but Kuperman said only about one-third of the patients may develop a swearing pattern in the course of the disease.

Since Tourette's syndrome is an inherited disorder, Kuperman said symptoms may change from one generation to the next. He also said about 80 percent of Tourette's patients can live normal lives, while 20 percent have a more chronic form of the disease.

"The majority of people who have it by the time they approach young adulthood are better," he said.

Kuperman and Perry will be testing 80 people with Tourette's syndrome. Forty will be given haloperidol, and the rest will receive risperidone.

"This drug will be effective to treat Tourette's patients, rather than the multidrug treatment used for Tourette's patients today."

Paul Perry,
UI professor of psychiatry

Tourette's patients, causes side effects such as fatigue and mental cloudiness.

Paul Perry, UI professor of psychiatry and co-investigator of the study, said risperidone offers an advantage to people with Tourette's syndrome.

"This drug will be effective to treat Tourette's patients, rather than the multidrug treatment used for Tourette's patients today," Perry said.

Kuperman said risperidone is available to psychiatric patients such as psychotics who suffer from delusions and hallucinations. He said Tourette's sufferers are not psychotic, but the drug affects the same area of the brain.

I.C. welfare program set to close

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City office that helps welfare recipients become self-sufficient will shut its doors by March 1 due to a lack of participants.

The Iowa Invest Volunteer Mentor Project, 2105 Broadway, isn't serving the Iowa City and surrounding communities as well as another location — such as Cedar Rapids — might.

The goal of the project was to provide supplemental assistance and possibly help people gain independence from welfare more quickly.

"The Legislature believes that people on public assistance, if they had someone to be a mentor during this period when they are moving from welfare to self-sufficiency, it will help them succeed," said Norma Hohlfield, Promise Jobs coordinator in the division of economic assistance in the Department of Human Rights and Services.

As far as the Iowa City office is concerned, not enough matches were made. As of Feb. 7, matches totaled 45 in the six state offices since the program's formation.

"We had a real small referral. We couldn't legitimately run the office. It's a better use of taxpayers' money," said Jane Schockemoehl, state volunteer mentor coordinator with the Iowa Commission on the Status of Women in the Department of Human Rights and Services.

The program will not be deserted. Brooke Hanna, who was a Volunteers In Service To America volunteer in Iowa City, will move to the Des Moines office, where she will follow up on them.

The volunteer program, which is in its first year, has offices in Des Moines, Davenport, Waterloo, Sioux City and Council Bluffs.

"The idea of the program is to provide mentors to reach women in the community who have been on welfare and are now actively employed in the community. It is to recruit and train them and match them up, providing mentors for women to make the transition (from welfare to self-sufficiency) easier," said Mary Rosette, VISTA leader in the Des Moines office.

VISTA leaders coordinate matches with mentors and those needing mentors. Two are positioned at each office, with three at the Des Moines office. The main responsibility of the offices is to recruit both volunteers and those needing mentors.

Recruiting is done statewide and nationwide to find individuals who have received aid and are now independent of Family Investment Plan.

"We recruited those individuals who have been in public assistance before and are successful now," Schockemoehl said. "A volunteer is an advocate, a support person, a friend, an encourager, a community resource person, an adviser and a coach."

Job fair showcases positions

Paul Michas
The Daily Iowan

UI students hoping to get a leg up on their job search for this summer can attend the UI Summer Jobs Fair today in the Main Lounge of the Union.

The fair will host 71 representatives from businesses and day camps who are interested in hiring college students for summer positions, said Jane Schildroth, director of the fair and associate for career planning at the UI Center for Career Development and Cooperative Education.

"There will be representatives from Iowa and most contiguous states as well as Colorado, Wyoming, Pennsylvania and even Massachusetts," Schildroth said. "There will be about half from day camps and half from various other businesses."

About 1,000 UI students are expected to attend this year's fair, which will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. In recent years, the fair has been visited by 900 to 1,200 eager job hunters, Schildroth said.

Some of the camps and businesses which will be at the fair include the YMCA and Liz Claiborne Inc.

For students who are planning to stay in Iowa City this summer, representatives from the Iowa City personnel department and the Iowa City parks and recreation department will be on hand.

"We'll be looking for somewhere between 500 and 600 employees for this summer, including camp instructors and leaders as well as lifeguards and water-safety instructors," said Joyce Carroll, program supervisor for the parks and recreation department.

For students who feel they have enough experience to obtain an internship, the fair may be useful although its focus is on part-time summer help.

"Representatives will be covering primarily summer jobs, but there will be some internships," Schildroth said.

The fair will not help spring graduates who are looking for career-placement opportunities unless they are willing to work as an intern this summer, Schildroth said.

Report: Prophylactics use is on the rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-nine percent of American women and teens in their childbearing years use contraception, and condoms are winning wider acceptance, a federal health agency reported Tuesday.

In a survey released on Valentine's Day, the National Center for Health Statistics said condom use increased from 9 percent to 11 percent, while use of the pill declined from 19 percent to 17 percent between 1988 and 1990.

Nine percent of the nearly 5,700 women surveyed said they had never had sexual intercourse.

The center said 71 percent of young unmarried women used contraception the first time they had sex in 1988-90. At the start of the 1980s, a similar survey found only 53 percent of the women ages 15 to 19 used contraception the first time they had sex.

Among sexually experienced teens, contraceptive use declined from 61 percent to 58 percent.

Among single women using contraception, the proportion using condoms increased from 20 percent to 30 percent, and the proportion using the pill dropped from 59 percent to 51 percent.

The study was based on surveys of 5,686 women ages 15 to 44 in 1990 and 5,359 of the same women in 1988.

Democrats unveil plan to boost minimum wage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supported by pleas from low-wage workers, Democrats introduced legislation Tuesday to raise the minimum wage and said they would try to attach it to Republican welfare-reform and tax-reduction bills.

"It's time ... to lift up those who are falling behind," said House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., speaking at a news conference with more than a dozen Democratic lawmakers and four minimum-wage workers.

The sometimes teary-eyed workers — from Florida, West Virginia, Ohio and Maryland — described how they are barely making ends meet.

"Right now my children are laying on the floor because we don't have enough money for a bed," said Leticia Garza, a cashier in Toledo, Ohio, who earns $4.25 an hour.

Her husband makes $5 an hour as a forklift operator. They have two children, ages 6 and 2.

The increase, proposed a week and a half ago by President Clinton, would raise the $4.25 minimum wage to $5.15 over two years.

Siberian ozone depletion reaches 35 percent

GENEVA (AP) — Scientists say the Earth's protective ozone layer has shriveled to a record low over Siberia and has shrunk about 10 percent over the western United States.

Measurements taken over the last two weeks show the ozone layer is a record 35 percent below normal over the mountains, forests and tundra of Russia's Siberia, the World Meteorological Organization said Tuesday.

Those figures come after the region was 25 percent below average in January, said Dr. Rumen Bojkov, special adviser to the group's secretary-general.

CFCs, commonly used in aerosols and refrigerants, are believed to trigger chemical reactions in the stratosphere that cause a thinning of the ozone layer.

Despite an agreement signed in 1987 by most countries to phase out the use of CFCs, ozone levels in the atmosphere will not start to recover until the next century, the meteorological group said.

Clinton vows to end Serbian embargo

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton has approved a proposal to ease trade and other economic sanctions against Serbia in a new effort to end the war in Bosnia, a senior U.S. official said Tuesday.

In return, President Slobodan Milosevic would have to recognize Bosnia as a sovereign country — a blow to his hopes for a Greater Serbia — and agree to other conditions designed to end the 34-month ethnic conflict.

The aim is to drive a wedge between Milosevic and the Serbs in Bosnia who have rejected past peace proposals by isolating them from their patrons and arms suppliers in Belgrade.

The main lure for Milosevic would be at least temporary renewal of trade and fuel supplies.

The sanctions, imposed by the U.N. Security Council, have devastated Serbia's economy. Under the proposal cleared by Clinton and the governments of Britain, France, Germany and Russia, economic sanctions would be lifted — or later reimposed — depending on Milosevic's actions.

Milosevic would be required to recognize three other former Yugoslav republics — Croatia, Slovenia and Macedonia — thereby acknowledging the breakup of what once was Yugoslavia, and permit stricter policing of Serbia's border with Bosnia.

Weapons are still getting through to the Serbs in Bosnia despite a pledge by Milosevic to cut them off, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Under the proposed deal, Milosevic would have to agree to the posting of more monitors on Serbia's border with Bosnia to check on his compliance with a pledge to stop arming Serbs in Bosnia.

Associated Press

President Clinton walks into a San Francisco restaurant for lunch after speaking to the American Council of Education earlier, also in San Francisco, Tuesday afternoon. Clinton announced his approval of easing sanctions against Serbia late Tuesday afternoon.

The official stressed the sanctions would be lifted only temporarily and would be reimposed if the Serbian leader reneged. Unaffected by the plan, he said, would be Serbia's "illegitimacy" status on the world stage — its exclusion from the World Bank and other international groups.

The plan will be presented to Milosevic in the next few days, the official said.

Representatives of the so-called Contact Group — from the United States, Britain, France, Russia and Germany — that has sought in vain for a peace formula met in Paris Tuesday, but participants declined to talk to reporters after the meeting.

The senior U.S. official in Washington said he was reluctant to divulge details of the proposal even before it was presented to Milosevic. But he said a "leak" to The Washington Times of a memorandum that did not give a complete account prompted his disclosure. The newspaper published some elements of the plan Tuesday.

Peace efforts have stalled over the Bosnian Serbs' refusal to consider a five-nation peace plan that would set up ethnic zones with them controlling 49 percent and a Muslim-Croat federation controlling 51 percent.

The Serbs, holding nearly 70 percent of the country, have rejected the plan as one that would leave them with fragments of the country that are not politically or economically viable.

The official acknowledged, therefore, that the proposal has its limits.

"If Milosevic goes for this, we still have the Bosnian Serbs controlling the land," he said.

However, the isolation of the Bosnian Serbs would be deepened, and the five countries would stiffen their sanctions against them, the official said.

Anniversary of massacre sparks strife

Said Ghazali

HEBRON, West Bank — Tensions generated by the Hebron mosque massacre claimed new victims Tuesday, on the one-year anniversary of the killing spree that claimed the lives of 29 Muslims.

The massacre by Jewish settler Baruch Goldstein set off a series of revenge bombings by Muslim militants.

In the Palestinian refugee camp of al-Fawar, just south of Hebron, high-school students threw stones at soldiers to mark the anniversary. Troops opened fire, killing one protester and wounding four, according to hospital officials and camp residents.

At Hebron's Tomb of the Patriarchs, site of the massacre, prayer leader Taysir Tamimi told 300 worshippers during a memorial service that coexistence with Jews is impossible.

"I'm calling on our people to defend the holy shrines," said Tamimi, a leader of the Muslim militant group Hamas. "We don't accept it that Jews share our mosque."

Hamas promised five attacks in reprisal for the massacre. Islamic militants from Hamas and the smaller Islamic Jihad group — both of which oppose peace with Israel — have killed 58 Israelis in five suicide bombings in the past year.

Security on Wall Street stepped up amid threats

Tom Hays
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Security is tight on Wall Street in response to what law enforcement sources on Tuesday called terrorist threats against "symbols of American capitalism."

The crackdown comes as the anniversary of the Feb. 26, 1993 World Trade Center bombing nears and in the midst of the trial of 11 Muslim extremists accused of plotting to wage a war of urban terrorism in New York.

Meanwhile, the federal government listed 172 people "who may be alleged as co-conspirators" in the trial of Sheikh Omar Abdel-Rahman and his followers. The list includes the Sudanese Mission to the United Nations.

Not far from the federal courthouse where the trial is under way, a small army of plainclothes officers started patrolling Wall Street in recent days, law enforcement sources said. Uniformed officers have been posted round the clock at the New York and American stock exchanges.

"What you're seeing is the protection of places that, based on our intelligence, are known targets — places certain groups consider symbols of American capitalism," said one source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said, "Every single precaution is being taken." The sources refused to say who made the threats, but Wall Street workers said security mushroomed Feb. 2 as the alleged mastermind behind the planned bombings and assassinations issued cryptic warnings while negotiating a plea bargain.

Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali pleaded guilty, saying he wanted to tell prosecutors about "a few things that are happening out there that I don't want to be part of."

Siddig Ali's remark coincided with a police department memo to private security forces, urging a "heightened sense of awareness" at the approach of the second anniversary of the World Trade Center bombing.

As a result, "The financial district is probably the most secure part of the city right now," said Michael O'Connor, head of security for a downtown business-improvement district.

On Wall Street Tuesday, police stopped delivery trucks to check papers before letting them through to the back of the New York Stock Exchange — not a usual practice.

Barricades had been placed to prevent vehicles from parking in front of the exchange. Exchange workers said all of their bags are being checked, and visitors were being restricted.

"People are scared," said Milton Torres, who works in the New York Stock Exchange building. He spoke with John DiTringo, who was ordered to move his Italian food stand away from the front of the building on Feb. 3.

Tuesday's session of the trial of Abdel-Rahman and his co-defendants was canceled because one defendant was ill.

The alleged co-conspirators list was compiled by the U.S. Attorney's Office and sent Feb. 2 to defense lawyers in the trial of Abdel-Rahman and 10 Muslim followers.

A spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office said he could not comment because the list is not a matter of public record.

PRO-LIFE GROUPS PROTEST DECISION

Medical board requires abortion skills training

Brenda Coleman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Programs that train doctors in obstetrics will be required to teach abortion skills under a policy adopted Tuesday by the group that governs graduate medical education.

Courses that refuse to do so risk losing accreditation, which teaching hospitals need to qualify for federal reimbursement for services that medical residents provide to patients. Also, most doctors must graduate from accredited training programs to get certified as competent in their specialties.

The unanimous decision by the 23-member accreditation council for Graduate Medical Education was prompted by reports that teaching hospitals have neglected to ensure that residents have adequate training in the procedure.

The revision was supported by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology, which certifies obstetricians, and by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, the professional society for the specialty.

"Ob-gyns should be trained in all facets of obstetrics and gynecology, and this is one facet," said Dr. William Andrews, president of the professional society.

Currently, residents are only "required to learn clinical skills in family planning," said Dr. John Gienapp, executive director of the accreditation council. That implies abortion but never spelled it out, he said.

The council — made up of representatives from the American Medical Association, the American Hospital Association and other medical groups — can withhold accreditation for programs that don't meet its standards.

The revised policy takes effect on Jan. 1, 1996.

The council's decision was denounced by abortion opponents.

"Coercing people and institutions to participate in the destruction of innocent life is a great evil," said Cardinal Roger Mahony of Los Angeles, chairman of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' Committee for Pro-Life Activities.

The bishops group said in a letter to the council that it believes the revision violates laws in roughly half the states that exempt conscientiously opposed hospitals from making referrals for abortion and other procedures.

The council says these hospitals have an adequate way out. "They don't have to do anything they have objections to doing," Gienapp said.

Airline's record probed after canyon catastrophe

Eun-Kyung Kim
Associated Press

TUSAYAN, Ariz. — The company whose plane crashed south of the Grand Canyon, killing eight, has had four fatal crashes and 23 deaths since 1980, a federal official said Tuesday.

As investigators waded through ankle-deep mud and snow at the crash scene, a long-running debate resumed about the safety of the air-tour industry around the nation's best-known natural landmark.

A twin-engine plane operated by Las Vegas Airlines plunged into the pine woods 2½ miles northeast of Tusayan Monday, killing seven Taiwanese nationals and the pilot. The only survivors, a woman and a teenage girl, were in critical condition.

A half-dozen deputies picked through mud, snow and scraps of metal in and around the broken fuselage Tuesday to prepare the dead for autopsies, lying bodies on black tarps in the drizzling rain and snow. The bodies were taken to the Coconino County morgue.

"I'm really surprised that people made it out alive," county Sheriff's Sgt. Kathy Paleski said from the scene Tuesday.

The mud was so deep and flying weather so bad that the only way for rescuers and reporters to reach the scene was in "snow cats," huge tracked vehicles that carry a dozen people in their cabs. The midday temperature was around 40 degrees; the wind chill was 18.

A team of investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board was assembling in the tourist town 175 miles north of Phoenix and eight miles south of the main visitor area at Grand Canyon National Park.

Associated Press

Coconino County Sheriff's deputies carry a body Tuesday from the wreckage of a tourist plane that crashed near the Grand Canyon.

The Piper Navajo brought the tourists from Las Vegas for a ground tour of Grand Canyon National Park. It had just taken off on the return flight when the pilot radioed that one of the two engines had failed, according to Fred O'Donnell, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Los Angeles.

Officials at the airline's Las Vegas offices refused several requests for comment. The company issued a statement listing the names of the passengers and saying it was assisting in the investigation.

O'Donnell called the airline's safety record "not particularly commendable."

Brown Simpson's ice cream scrutinized

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The first police officer on the scene of the murders in the O.J. Simpson case acknowledged Tuesday he didn't examine a melting cup of ice cream or check the temperature of Nicole Brown Simpson's bath water — evidence the defense suggested could have helped fix the time of the slayings.

But officer Robert Riske repeatedly told jurors it wasn't his job to gather evidence. He said he was there to look for victims and to "secure the scene" while a police photographer and other experts did their job.

And he said just because he doesn't know of any pictures being taken of the ice cream or flickering candles in Brown Simpson's bathroom doesn't mean photos weren't taken.

Defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. undertook an item-by-item dissection of the evidence in a campaign to cast doubt on police work in the case and suggest that investigators overlooked or mishandled evidence.

Cochran and Prosecutor Marcia Clark questioned Riske closely about what he reported was a cardboard cup of Ben & Jerry's ice cream found melting on a banister in Brown Simpson's condominium at about 12:30 a.m. or 12:40 a.m. on June 13.

Associated Press

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, center, holds a side bar conference with O.J. Simpson defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr., left, and Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark Tuesday.

That's more than two hours after the prosecution alleges the slayings of Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman took place outside Brown Simpson's door. Simpson had left home for the airport around 11 p.m. on June 12 for a trip to Chicago.

The defense is expected to argue that the melting rate of the ice cream suggests the crime took place later in the evening than alleged.

Riske said the ice cream wasn't immediately photographed, and he didn't know if it ever was. The officer also said he had no idea what flavor it was or whether it might have been frozen yogurt. He said he didn't lift it to see whether it left a ring on the banister.

Clark suggested Brown Simpson might have put the ice cream in the freezer and then taken it out later and that a pink plastic spoon on the floor beneath the cup had fallen out of the ice cream as it melted.

Riske also said candles burning in Brown Simpson's bathroom weren't immediately photographed, and he never checked the temperature of her bath water. Brown Simpson had apparently filled the tub for a candlelit bath the night she was murdered.

The officer said repeatedly he was careful not to disturb any evidence because he wanted to preserve the crime scene for investigators.

Riske said he did not check trash cans inside the home, did not turn off the television set or the stereo, did not try to open a Jeep whose passenger door was slightly ajar and did not check Brown Simpson's blood-spattered dog for evidence.

Late Tuesday, Riske's boss, Sgt. David Rossi, a 25-year member of the force at the time of the slayings, became the second officer to testify that a single bloody glove was found at the crime scene before Detective Mark Fuhrman arrived.

CONSTITUTION UNDER FIRE

House votes are a threat

The House of Representatives Tuesday passed a crime bill revamping President Clinton's proposals. Various legislative amendments have been added to the bill in order to strengthen a piece of executive legislation that, in the eyes of the new majority, is weak and ineffective. Of the six new measures passed by the House, two of them will place the sanctity of the Constitution in jeopardy if they pass the Senate.

The first measure — approved by the House with a 2-to-1 margin — will allow prosecutors the ability to use illegally obtained evidence. The law applies to any search conducted in what is ambiguously defined as "good faith." The ruling also includes searches conducted without a warrant. All federal agencies will be affected by this ruling, as will local cops whose evidence is to be used in federal trials. In a strange (but not unbelievable) twist, an amendment to the measure blocked it from extending to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. As a result, the agency responsible for tracking and arresting people who illegally traffic firearms will not benefit from the new rule. The National Rifle Association triumphs again.

A second and equally troubling measure passed by the House will restrict the right of death row inmates to use habeas corpus to appeal decisions on the grounds of unconstitutionality. Under the proposed legislation, inmates will have to appeal decisions within six months of conviction and will be limited to one appeal. After the "three strikes, you're out" rule made it easier to put criminals behind bars, the House wants to write a "one strike, you're dead" rule to clear out the prisons. It seems expediency is all the rage in Washington.

In the current crime wave hysteria, it might be easy for some Americans to find the positive side of this legislative maneuvering, but everyone should keep in mind the Constitution. It is not a document that was written in draft form so that the lawmakers of future generations could whittle it down to fit a certain problem. What lawmakers do not say about the exclusionary rule that will make it legal for police officers to search without warrants is that it will be in direct conflict with the Fourth Amendment. The right that one will be safe from illegal search and seizure when at home is one of the founding principles of this nation and should not be considered something easily done away with.

The two measures are symptomatic of a larger problem: the willingness of the current batch of politicians on Capitol Hill to defile the Constitution in order to pass legislation. The balanced-budget amendment is evidence of this problem. Without providing details of any sort, the House voted to pass a constitutional amendment that will make an unbalanced budget unconstitutional, but not until long after many of the people who passed it have left Congress.

Both the exclusionary rule and the new death penalty measure are attempts to provide a quick fix for crime, but neither one will provide the quick fix lawmakers are hoping for. What they will do is tamper with a document that cannot afford any tampering and reduce the right of all Americans to have a home free of invasion and a life (criminal or otherwise) free of the possibility of wrongful execution.

CHELSEA CAIN

Worried about black olives and Bob Dole

I was a very serious kid. I lived mostly inside my head, and what was outside I kept strictly organized. My white art desk was always neat — watercolors, crayons, scissors, paper and pencils all lined up across the top from left to right. My Nancy Drew books were kept in ascending order, and my Viewfinder cartridges were always put back in the box. I identified strongly with Amy Carter, who always seemed to me both incredibly bland and on the brink of strangling her cat and running naked and screaming across the White House lawn.

Over the years I lost the ability to organize and now keep all my papers in large crumpled piles in the drawers of a filing cabinet I bought on sale at Target. Somehow, keeping all the disarray out of sight gives me the illusion of order, which is, incidentally, sometimes how I feel about my mind.

However, I have retained a chunk of my childhood obsessive-compulsiveness which, rather than making me neat or a math person, exhibits itself in the middle of the night as worry. I worry about Chechnya and the Middle East and Bosnia. I worry about the Clinton presidency and the fact that pasta is now fattening. I worry about the decaying infrastructure and public television and the people I know who are HIV-positive. I worry about Bob Dole running for president and the Americans who will vote for him.

This would surprise you if you knew me because I don't think I strike people as necessarily this neurotic or totally stressed out — probably because I suppress it all during the day, which is why it comes out at 4 a.m.

Not that I haven't always been a little worried. When I was a kid, I made Richard Nixon look like the Dalai Lama. I worried about my parents. I worried that if I chewed all the food on one side of my mouth, the other side would get jealous. I worried that if I spun around in one direction and then didn't unspin in the other direction, the universe would be thrown into oblivion and cease to exist as I had known it.

I worried about nuclear war. I worried that if I didn't watch all my favorite TV shows they would be canceled, and it would be my fault. I worried about the small people who lived under my bed and who would crawl up my arm if I let it drop out from under the covers. I worried about the weather, baby seals and school lunches.

I worried about the fact that I was the only person in my third-grade class whose parents didn't vote for Ronald Reagan. I worried about who shot J.R., even though I didn't watch "Dallas." I worried about what I would do if I ever stumbled across a dead body or accidentally ate a black olive or broke my mother's favorite bread bowl.

I worried about my dolls dying because I hadn't kept them warm or fed them enough. I worried about the teacher slaughtering my name on the first day of school and my tall skinny handwriting and the king with a mustache and queen with long shiny hair who lived in a kingdom under my bedroom and watched me through the cracks in the floor. (I am still worried about that one.)

But for all my friends' and family's urging to find myself a very compassionate and open-minded therapist, I think that there is something to be said for worrying. I think, for one, that it helps me see things a little clearer. This whole Republican fiasco in Congress, for instance, has left most of the Democratic Party in an incoherent stupor, whispering optimistic sound bites between asthmatic death riddles: The minority party has the real power anyway; the American people will come to their senses; Newt Gingrich is not the Antichrist.

Of course they are wrong. Newt Gingrich is the Antichrist. We are all doomed. Welfare is dead, the National Endowment for the Arts is dead, good will is dead, life as we know it is over and Bob Dole may just be elected the next president of the United States.

"I wish that someone would protest something," my very wise cousin said to me last night.

But protesting requires someone to worry, someone to let something gnaw away at them until the itching in the back of their throat makes them want to scream. But Americans do not like to scream, and they especially do not like to itch and then scream.

I worry too much? I'm amazed that anyone in this country can get any sleep at all.

Valentine's Day celebrations better left alone

So Tuesday was Valentine's Day — a day filled with romance and excitement for all. At least that's what I hear. My best Valentine's Day was my sophomore year in high school when my friend Colleen sent me a heart through the school's girls club. She signed it with our code name for a boy I had a crush on. It was thoughtful and personal, and it made me smile. But it was from a friend, not a boyfriend, and I've always wanted to feel that honored by a boyfriend.

Like many people, I spent a medium amount of time contemplating the holiday. Not so much time as to shift the focus of an already busy Tuesday, but enough to correctly predict what my "sometimes when he's in the mood" special guy would do.

The answer? Nothing. Yet.

But I can tell you why. I can tell you why he and many others ignore Valentine's Day. It's because to acknowledge it would lead the relationship to another level. It would take it to a level that may not fit the pace. And I would assume that those of us in denial are in a relationship that is only 2 to 5 months old.

It's the time in a relationship where a couple is often neither here nor there. To accept the possible ramifications of being too sentimental might be to accept that a relationship of a few months is getting more serious than either party may want to admit. If it isn't getting more serious at this time, after spending months together, then a couple might feel it necessary to do something about it. If the issue was ignored, nothing has changed. All are as comfortable as if it were January.

Now, dating only a few weeks or more than six months is a different story. New relationships are sweet with both people trying to impress each other and win each other over. And older relationships — well, what else would they do but be together?

I've put together a few gift categories with hidden agendas. These are only predictions based on my past experience and a little psychology.

No. 1. Flowers and/or candy. This is sweet. It says something like, "Hey, I want to be traditional because either I don't know you well enough to be too personal or this is a traditionally cute little romance we've got going."

No. 2. A phone call. This means acknowledgment of existence. It says, "I'm thinking that if anyone were to be remotely close to being my Valentine it might be you, but let's not get into it."

No. 3. A hotel room. Sex is on the brain. It says, "We always sleep together, but for once we don't have to worry about our roommates interrupting or noticing any strange food going into our bedroom."

No. 4. A card. This shows effort. It says, "I didn't want to blow you off, but I don't really know what to say." If there's a personal message, I'd say this is one of the best responses. It shows personality and time.

No. 5. Nothing. This could say more about the person than the relationship, as in, "I really don't pay attention to many holidays, and anyway, I've got work to do." It could also mean fear of acknowledgment as to the depth (or lack of) between the couple.

In my Valentine's past, I have encountered a couple of these with different interpretations.

My freshman year of college I got a phone call from a guy I had gone out with twice. It was a perfect gesture — an acknowledgment that I was thought of, but nothing too fancy to make me nervous for future expectations.

My sophomore year I had been broken up with early in February. The ex-boyfriend in question was riddled with guilt and brought me a package of candy — a mix he made for the occasion — and a CD. That was my most lucrative year, though gifts are unnecessary for me to feel wanted. But it did teach me that he liked me despite his actions and that guilt will work wonders on a confused kid during the holidays.

By my junior year I got another phone call. This was from a guy I had (sort of, kind of) gone out with once. The phone call was nice, and though it seemed considerate at the time, the tone — with its lack of personality — was actually a foreshadowing of impending disaster.

And this year, as of this writing (I've still got awhile), zilch.

Keeping in tune with my semirelationship, it fits. We can't be who we aren't supposed to be. And even though this entire column has been dedicated to Valentine's, there is something to be said for sincerity. Any response to the holiday is no good if it's made from obligation.

Valentine's Day came with a whole new set of these obligations and implications. It ended up meaning a lot more than it should have; society has propelled it into importance.

The real question is, what do we want from our relationships, as college students? Valentine's Day seemed to put pressure on people to go out, feel awkward and worry about a definition for each and every romance. Why must we always define? Do I have any clue as to what it all means? Do I know what every guy I have been involved with during the month of February actually represents? Did I need this pressure last weekend to ponder the state of my relationship? I don't think so.

Some things only exist in the time and space that they exist. I am guilty of wanting clues as to what thoughts are rumbling during my relationships, but I do know what is better left alone. Beyond the advantage of chocolate hearts being discounted today at Oso Drug, I'd say this year's Valentine's Day is one of those things.

EXPLOITING PEOPLE

Talk shows obsessive

We all know that it is impossible to turn on the television between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. and not find the channels monopolized by talk shows. It's safe to assume that there must be a great demand for these shows. What is not easy to understand is why we watch these shows in the first place.

The subjects deal almost exclusively with sleazy people who have major problems in their dysfunctional lives. They choose to turn themselves into a spectacle for us by exploiting their private lives on public television. But what is almost equally pathetic is the idea of finding pleasure in watching this. It's one thing to be entertained by the stupidity of a show like "Melrose Place," but these are real people with real lives falling apart before you.

One show brought out a teen-age girl with her boyfriend of a few months. The catch was that her boyfriend was actually a woman disguising herself as a man, a minor detail that only the audience was informed of. The purpose of the show was to surprise the girl with the secret. As she broke down in hysterical crying and stared at the camera in complete horror, it was impossible not to feel sick and depressed for this poor girl. Viewers all over America sat and vegged out in front of the tube to watch this girl fall apart and be emotionally scarred for life.

When talk shows make a practice of exploiting people, they become nothing better than a televised National Enquirer. The demand for this kind of entertainment almost validates stereotypes of Americans being uncultured and superficial. While the media are to blame for succumbing to this, they're mainly answering the wants of the people.

Talk shows are destructive in the way they make us belittle one another for show. It's also self-destructive to watch more conflict and hostility added to what you have to deal with in your own everyday life. There's something desperate in watching people screw up one another's lives or debate issues on which no one will ever agree. No credit is owed to the people who sell their souls for the cheap price of a talk show or to the people who are easily amused enough to watch.

plead their cases to Rodham Clinton, who listened to each parent's story and offered her concerns to them.

"I hope I can take back what you told me to Washington because they are debating these issues now," she said. "You are better messengers of this than anyone."

Rodham Clinton praised Iowa's child-care program, which is 50 percent federally funded and 50 percent locally funded. But she said child care should be a community goal headed by family support.

"Children don't ask to be born," she said. "The family needs support from other family members, neighbors and other community members."

People need to realize the opportunities child care opens for families and understand the importance of giving children a happy and safe environment, Rodham Clinton said.

"Too many people don't have the opportunities you have here with this center," she said. "This kind of investment pays off in so many ways, if only people would understand it."

After leaving the Linn County Day Care facility, Rodham Clinton traveled to Des Moines, where she spoke at a senior center about the importance of mammograms. Rodham Clinton plans to hold meetings with elderly women across the country in order to educate them on the issue of breast cancer.

area because they have an edge over small locally owned businesses. She said the chain stores can afford higher rents because they have better financial security.

Dan Black, property manager for Iowa State Bank & Trust Co.

last few years are more and more businesses here are chains," Allen said. "The chain store doesn't have to have as much business or be as profitable. The buying power is different, and that makes it much harder."

Marty Kelly, president of the Iowa City Area Development Group, 325 E. Washington St., said his group works to entice new corporations into town. He said new businesses — often national chains — provide more and better jobs for area residents.

When chain stores move into Iowa City, it should be viewed as a sign that the town is booming economically, Kelly said. However, he does worry about independent businesses surviving downtown.

"As you grow, the small family-owned business faces the threat of the chain coming in. That's a tough thing," Kelly said. "The challenge is you want entrepreneurs to go out and to change things, but there's that risk."

The combination of pricey rental rates and the flux of retail chains into the area could be the demise of local independent businesses, said Michael Zeadow, manager of Daydreams, 114 E. College St.

Rent increases passed on to the downtown businesses from the buildings' landlords have been tolerated because the area is so highly trafficked by students and shoppers, Zeadow said.

"In Iowa City, there are really only three or four blocks of prime locations," he said. "Ma and Pa or Joe Blow don't have as much money as some big guy with a big billfold who can come in and take it."

Raising the rent

Downtown rents range from $750 to $1,875 per month, based on square feet, said Ernie Galer, past president of the Iowa City Board of Realtors, 800 S. Dubuque St., and owner of Lepic-Kroeger Realtors, 500 S. Dubuque St. However, one business owner, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said she paid more than $3,000 per month for rent.

Dan Black, property manager for Iowa State Bank & Trust Co., 102 S. Clinton St., takes care of rental negotiations for a number of downtown landlords. He has the authority to determine how much to raise rents for many businesses in the area.

"I guess the market has a lot to do with (how much rent is charged)," Black said. "We usually survey around and try to remain competitive with what others are asking."

Rent increases are a response to rising costs of buildings, real estate taxes and maintenance, Black added.

Business textbooks say a successful store should pay 5 percent of its total earnings for rent. However, Tara Crombaugh, owner of The Java House, 211 1/2 E. Washington St., said she is paying twice that amount for her downtown property.

"We try to shoot for 5 to 6 percent (of earnings paid for rent) but usually end up at 10 to 11 percent," she said. "That's a pretty high percentage, to be honest."

Getting out

Some longtime downtown businesses are just closing their doors for good. Bruce Sorrell, owner of Candy Malts News, 127 E. Washington St., went out of business on Jan. 31.

"I think there are a number of factors that contribute to making it very difficult for the small independent business to survive — especially in Iowa City," Sorrell said on the final day his business was open.

The empty vendor space where Candy Malt News was located is 900 square feet. Rent for the spot was $1,787 plus utilities.

The price of operating a business downtown is too high, said Elaine Fink, owner, manager and designer of Down to Earth Flower and Gift, 114 E. Washington St. In order for her business to survive, Fink said in July she will be moving her shop to a new strip mall outside of town.

"The cost is just so high, and that's what makes it difficult," she said. "They raised the rent too high, so we're out of here."

Stewart Shoes, a 100-year-old business at 125 E. Washington St., will close its doors on Feb. 28.

More shoppers mean higher rent

Increasing rents reflect that the downtown area is where local shoppers flock, City Manager Steve Atkins said.

"It's free enterprise," Atkins said. "If you were going to step back and say to yourself, 'Where in this town would I like to own property?' it's downtown. And (downtown is) completely full but has a ready market."

Zeadow said he allots himself a meager salary in order to save money and help his business survive despite increasing rental costs.

"It's not paying yourself very much — that's what it boils down to," Zeadow said. "You work for less than minimum wage. That's the only way to make it."

While sales have increased dramatically since Zeadow moved his business to the downtown Pedestrian Mall, he said the store's net gain is still the same because rent and overhead costs are so steep.

Skyrocketing rents are just another facet of the American dream, Zeadow said.

"I guess it's what capitalism is all about," Zeadow said.

town once known for diverse specialty shops that catered to all ages.

"What I fear is happening is, downtown is going to become more of a campus town," Allen said. "It used to be you could bring in anybody from the community, and they could get all their shopping done downtown. There used to be a drug store and a grocery store, but now they're developing on the other side of town, and it is hurting the downtown."

One drawback of catering specifically to a student population is certain types of stores begin to overlap each other, he said.

"The other situation that becomes very tough is competition," Kelly said. "How many record stores can we support? Or how many coffee shops can we have downtown?"

Christine Allen, co-owner of The Soap Opera, 119 E. College St., said she worries the college atmosphere will eventually swallow up a down-

Cancer risks multiply with alcohol, bad diet

Paul Recer

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Mixing alcohol with a bad diet steeply increases the risk of colon cancer, researchers report.

Dr. Edward Giovannucci of the Harvard School of Public Health said Tuesday that a study of the health habits and diets of more than 51,000 male health-care professionals showed that those who had two or more drinks daily while following a poor diet were three times as likely to develop colon cancer.

Giovannucci said Tuesday in an interview that alcohol seems to aggravate the effects of a bad diet that was low in fruits, vegetables, fish and low-fat foods.

Such a diet, he said, deprives people of two ingredients in those foods: methionine, an important amino acid, and folate, a nutrient that is key to making methionine.

"The poor diet is a risk factor alone, but it is particularly strong when you see it together with alcohol consumption," said the researcher. "Some dietary component like folate acid is required to explain this."

Giovannucci said studies have shown that alcohol tends to block the absorption or proper metabolism of folate acid.

People who drink but also eat the right foods have about the same colon cancer risk as non-drinkers, he said.

"To some extent, this study is reassuring to people who drink in moderation and who have a good diet," said Giovannucci. "To them, the risk of colon cancer is not much higher than average."

A report on the study is to be published today in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

The study is based on a questionnaire filled out by male health professionals, aged 40 to 75, in 1986. In the six years since, 205 in the group developed colon cancer. To search for clues to the disease cause, the researchers compared the reported diets of those with cancer and those who are cancer-free.

Giovannucci said the study showed some reduction of colon cancer risk if people supplemented their diet with vitamin pills containing folate, but he said pills were no substitute for good food rich in the nutrient.

"The folate acid in vegetables is important, but there are other nutrients in vegetables — and we don't know what all of them are — that are also important," he said. "It would be a mistake to think you could have a bad diet and depend on vitamin supplements to make up the difference."

In effect, said Giovannucci, the study suggests strongly that to lower the colon cancer risk there is no substitute for a well-balanced diet.

"The men who have high alcohol intake and a diet low in fruits, vegetables and whole-grain foods are particularly vulnerable to colon cancer," said Giovannucci.

CRIME BILL

islative triumph less than halfway through the 100 days in which their "Contract With America" promised votes on a number of issues. The House GOP previously won passage of a balanced-budget amendment; a measure giving the president a line item veto on spending bills; a bill to end unfunded mandates on state and local governments; and a bill, already signed into law, making lawmakers abide by the same employment laws private employers must obey.

Elsewhere in Congress on Tuesday:

• The Senate rejected a Democratic bid to exempt Social Security from a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said that in spite of the mostly party-line 57-41 vote,

"For the moment, everybody is willing to protect Social Security."

• A House Ways and Means subcommittee drafted welfare-reform legislation giving states almost complete control over their troubled foster-care programs. It rejected Democratic efforts to strengthen federal oversight of those programs and increase funding for homes for the growing numbers of abused and neglected children.

• Republican and Democratic senators eager to end the baseball strike introduced legislation that would partially repeal professional baseball's antitrust exemption. House Speaker Newt Gingrich said he does not support it because he doesn't want Congress involved in the labor-management dispute.

cessful because its stores target the students, Kelly said.

"I think the reason for the mall being there was to cater to the (students) who are here and to succeed. That's what other businesses have to do," he said. "I think that's where the market is."

Leah Cohen, owner of Bo-James restaurant, 118 E. Washington St., said she disagrees with Kelly's mindset.

"A lot of people are worried downtown is turning into just a campus town. That's a big concern for a lot of people here," Cohen said.

The city should encourage corporate-owned stores to move into the area because they offer good-paying jobs and can help an economy boom, Kelly said.

However, as corporate chains move into the area, Kelly said he hopes the "age-old high-quality" stores with fine jewelry or dress clothing survive.

Negotiators hold 'stock-taking session'

NEW YORK (AP) — As three U.S. senators introduced a bill Tuesday to partially repeal the baseball owners' antitrust exemption, union head Donald Fehr and mediator W.J. Utery discussed the possible resumption of talks.

Fehr said he hoped the sides would agree by the end of the week on when talks will resume, and a person familiar with the negotiations said the sides could get back together by next week.

"It was a sort of taking-stock session," Fehr said after his two-hour meeting. "We'll be in touch with the mediators everyday."

Utery is scheduled to meet Wednesday with acting commissioner Bud Selig. Fehr and Selig are to testify in the afternoon before the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on antitrust, business and competition.

The mediator postponed his Wednesday meeting with House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

"Bill felt with the antitrust hearings going on it would be better to hold this off," said Utery's spokesman, Dick Conn.

Fehr said he would recommend that players end their strike if Congress approves the partial antitrust repeal proposed Tuesday by Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Bob Graham, D-Fla.

Hatch, the Judiciary Committee chairman, hopes to move the bill out of committee in about a month, but Gingrich said he wouldn't support it.

"I don't want the Congress to disadvantage either side," Gingrich said. "I'm certainly willing to look at this issue, but I'm not sure I'm willing to use it as a club to beat up the owners on behalf of the players."

Hatch said it would be difficult to enact the legislation before the session is to start April 2.

"But it could be done if people understand this is not congressional intrusion," he said.

The bill would allow players to sue owners if they unilaterally implement new work rules. Two U.S. circuit courts have said unions can't file antitrust suits, but the Supreme Court hasn't ruled on the issue.

"Clearly baseball is a business engaged in interstate commerce and should be subject to the antitrust laws," Moynihan said.

Chuck O'Connor, the general counsel of management's Player Relations Committee, meanwhile insisted the clubs aren't engaging in a signing freeze.

The last time the Iowa men's basketball team traveled to Minnesota, it took three overtimes to decide a winner.

Minnesota won 107-96.

Their next meeting was on Jan. 28 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

It was during that game that Jim Bartels was dumped to the floor after a hard foul. Russ Millard and Minnesota's Trevor Winter were given double technicals and sophomore John Thomas' layup with less than four seconds remaining gave the Hawkeyes their fourth one-point Big Ten Conference loss.

When Iowa (14-9, 4-7) takes the court tonight in its rematch with Minnesota, the Hawkeyes will face a Gopher team that Coach Tom Davis calls the most physical team in the Big Ten.

Minnesota coach Clem Haskins' lineup features a rotation of bulky big men and one of the most talented backcourts in the conference in Voshon Lenard and Townsend Orr. Iowa held that tandem to only two first-half points in the first meeting, but allowed a 20-point outburst in the second half, 15 by Lenard.

Haskins will rotate in a pair of 6-foot-9 centers, Thomas and senior Chad Kolander, and the 7-foot Winter. That could be bad news for an Iowa team struggling on the boards.

Iowa leads the Big Ten in scoring while Minnesota is third, a misleading statistic considering the low-scoring first meeting.

"They're a good, strong physical team," Davis said. "They've always run against us in the past and it was a little surprising that they did not run against us here because of Jess Settles being out. John Carter being out and Jim Bartels being taken out."

Settles, who didn't play in the first Minnesota game, may start tonight. This would be Settles' first appearance in the starting lineup

Iowa basketball:
A family traditionChris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Iowa basketball runs in the McCausland family.

Three decades after Mac McCausland laced up his shoes for the Hawkeyes, his son Kent is a redshirt freshman on this year's Iowa basketball team.

"Since he's always been associated with the Hawkeyes and we've always talked about them, our relationship is pretty special," the younger McCausland said of his father. "He played here for a year and was assistant coach here under Ralph Miller. I think it was a neat deal for both of us, carrying on the tradition of having a McCausland on the basketball team."

Mac McCausland's association with Iowa basketball began in 1964, when he played under

"There's no question he can shoot, but it's all of the other things that are going to determine whether he can be a good player on this level."

Tom Davis, Iowa coach on Kent McCausland

Coach Ralph Miller, but his playing days didn't last very long.

"I was too slow and too short," Mac said. "So my senior year, combined with some injuries, Coach Miller asked if I wanted to work with the freshmen. So I was the freshmen coach and the next two years after that I was an assistant coach."

But this isn't your ordinary 'son following in his father's footsteps' story. Mac McCausland is more than just an ex-Iowa hoopster. He is still very much involved with Iowa basketball as an announcer for the Raycom Sports Network.

After playing for the Hawkeyes in 1964, and being an assistant coach the next three years, Mac went on to work with Jim Zabel at WHO for four years. Now an insurance agent in Waterloo, Mac is in his 10th year announcing Hawkeye games for Raycom.

Although his dad has always been associated with the Hawkeyes, the road to Iowa was not your typical one for Kent.

Out of high school, he was recruited by the likes of Ohio State, Minnesota, Northwestern and Southern California, but not Iowa. That's when Kent took it on his own to show some interest in the Hawkeyes.

The Hawkeyes got their first look at Kent when he was playing on the same AAU team as current teammate and roommate Ryan Bowen, a team that was coached by Mac McCausland.

Despite the fact that Iowa wasn't looking for a guard, Kent got his chance because he was willing to redshirt as a freshman.

"We weren't recruiting a guard," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "But he was so interested in Iowa that he wanted to know if we were interested in him."

"That's how he agreed to walk on here for a year. The more he looked at other schools, the more he felt like he wanted to be a player here. I admired that he would make that kind of commitment."

The commitment paid off for McCausland, who received a scholarship when another recruit, James Head, was denied admission to the UI.

Having his father as a coach also helped Kent's chances on the court.

"Because of the fact that we lived together and were always around each other, there were things that he could tell me that maybe he couldn't tell other players that I could take to the court," Kent said. "He always understood my game and what I was doing right and what I was doing

BLAZERS-ROCKETS TRADE

Drexler, Olajuwon reunite in Houston

Associated Press

DALLAS — Clyde Drexler, who played 11½ seasons with the Portland Trail Blazers, got the trade he had requested Tuesday, going to the Houston Rockets with forward Tracy Murray for forward Otis Thorpe.

The NBA champions will also give Portland a conditional 1995 first-round draft pick and the rights to 1993 second-round draft pick Marcelo Nicola.

Drexler, 32, a teammate of Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon at the University of Houston, is Portland's all-time leader in scoring, assists, steals and rebounds.

Drexler asked for a trade before the season and made his request public in January, saying he was unhappy with the direction of the franchise. He had already left for Houston on Tuesday night as the Blazers were preparing to play the Mavericks.

"It's something that Clyde wanted and he got what he wanted," Portland point guard Rod Strickland said. "What more could he ask for? He wasn't happy with what was going on here and he's going back home. He gives them somebody who's one of the top go-to players in the league. He's a clutch player who's really help Houston."

In third place in the Midwest Division and with only the sixth best record in the Western Conference, the Rockets were looking for backcourt scoring. Their current shooting guard, Vernon Maxwell, was suspended for 10 games last week for punching a heckler.

"Obviously, we felt something needed to be done," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "This was presented to us, and we're getting a great player. 'I would like to alter the chemistry. Sometimes it seems like we've been running against the wind.'"

After two injury-plagued seasons, Drexler has been healthy and having a strong year, averaging 22 points, 5.7 rebounds and 5.1 assists.

"I think we're going to score points a little easier," Tomjanovich

HEAT FIRE COACH

New owners give Loughery the boot

Karen Testa

Associated Press

MIAMI — Kevin Loughery was fired Tuesday after 3½ years as coach of the Miami Heat and one day after the team's new owners took over.

Assistant Alvin Gentry replaced Loughery on a day the owners, the Arison family, also hired Dave Wohl as the team's executive vice president of basketball operations.

Wohl told Loughery he was out after Tuesday's practice. Loughery, who led the Heat to the playoffs two of the last three seasons, was offered a position as vice president for player personnel. It was not immediately known if Loughery, 55, would stay with the team.

"It was difficult for him," said Wohl, a Heat assistant coach for the team's first three seasons. "I've been in that position where I've been fired as a coach. I've had long, personal ties to Kevin."

The shakeup came one day after the NBA approved the sale of the club to the family of Carnival

Cruise Lines founder Ted Arison. Wohl coached the New Jersey Nets from 1985-87.

"I'd like a young, aggressive, smart group of people running this franchise," Micky Arison said at a news conference. He added that he and Wohl "share a similar philosophy and want the same kind of things for the franchise."

Gentry, who at 40 is taking on his first coaching job, said he was torn by the developments.

"It's really kind of an unbelievable Catch-22 for me," he said. "Kevin hired me here. It was a very, very tough situation, seeing Kevin leave."

Loughery, then an assistant with the Atlanta Hawks, took over the Heat in 1991 for his sixth NBA coaching job. He had been head coach of the Hawks from 1981-83 and also coached the Philadelphia 76ers, New Jersey Nets, Chicago Bulls and Washington Bullets. He took the New York Nets to an American Basketball Association championship.

FOR THE SECOND TIME

Colonials slip past UMass, 80-78

Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass. — Alexander Koul and Nimbo Hammons combined for 34 points before fouling out and leaving their George Washington teammates to protect an 80-78 victory over No. 5 Massachusetts.

The Colonials also beat UMass on Feb. 4 to end the Minutemen's 16-game winning streak and knock them out of the No. 1 ranking. But instead of revenge, UMass got its first loss on campus in 42 games — dating back to a Jan. 8, 1992 loss to West Virginia — and its first loss ever at the Mullins Center.

Kwame Evans scored 20 points, Koul had 18 and Hammons had 16 for George Washington (16-9, 9-4 Atlantic 10). Lou Roe had 22 points and 12 rebounds and Michael Williams had 19 points for the Minutemen (18-3, 9-2).

George Washington led almost the entire game and opened a 14-point lead in the second half before UMass began chipping away.

The Colonials had a 77-67 lead with 49 seconds to go before Tyrone Weeks' put-back cut the deficit to single digits. Antoine Hart hit one of two free throws for George Washington, then Williams' basket made it 78-71.

Edgar Padilla and Hart each hit two free throws before Padilla hit a 3-pointer with 9.4 seconds left to make it 80-76. UMass fouled Hart again, and he missed both shots.

Weeks' tip-in made it 80-78, but with only 0.1 seconds left on the clock, and the Colonials only had to inbound the ball to become the first Atlantic 10 team to sweep UMass since 1992.

Koul fouled out after 18 points with 2:20 left and the Colonials leading 71-63. Dana Dingle hit both free throws to cut the lead to six, but the Minutemen couldn't get any closer until the final seconds.

A brief shoving match interrupted the game with 10:57 to go and Roe on the floor with what appeared to be leg cramps. The officials cleared up the fracas and assessed Donta Bright and Evans technical fouls.

Roe left the court but returned a minute later to key a 10-0 Massachusetts run that cut the lead from 14 points to four, 57-53 with 7:23 left. He scored his first time down, then threw a pass to set up Padilla's dunk that made it 57-47.

NEW BASEBALL LEAGUE

United League kicks into gear

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The United League, promising to start play in 1996 whether or not the strike settles, announced its first six cities Tuesday and backed off plans to have cities build stadiums for its teams.

"I'm just excited at this point that we're finally in a position to go forward where no one can accuse us of being a leverage play."

Bob Mrazek, United League Organizer

"I'm just excited at this point that we're finally in a position to go forward where no one can accuse us of being a leverage play," said former Rep. Bob Mrazek, one of the organizers.

The United League, which would be the first on-field challenger to the American and National leagues since the Federal League in 1914-15, will have teams in Los Angeles; New Orleans; New York; San Juan, Puerto Rico; Vancouver, British Columbia; and Washington. The cost of each franchise is $5 million, with estimated startup costs of $20 million per team. The 1993 NL expansion teams, the Colorado Rockies and Florida Marlins, paid $95 million apiece; the fee for the two teams that start play in 1997 or 1998 is expected to be $125 million to $150 million each.

"We can finance an entire league at the same price it costs to come to the table for one of the current franchises," Mrazek said.

UL founders, who say they've visited 22 sites in recent months, are assuming that Phoenix and St. Petersburg, Fla., will be awarded expansion franchises by the AL and NL. The UL's negotiations with RFK Stadium are conditioned on Northern Virginia not getting an expansion team next month.

"If indeed Northern Virginia receives an expansion franchise in the first round, we might well be interested in Phoenix or Tampa-St. Petersburg," said agent Dick Moss, another of the league's founders.

The UL announced its formation Nov. 1, saying it would start play with eight to 12 franchises. Some are dubious. Last week, Philadelphia outfielder Lenny Dykstra said "it's a joke" and predicted "it will be weak." Dykstra also questioned the stance taken by the union's negotiating committee.

"Lenny was obviously not well informed about every subject he discussed," Moss said. "I did not take that very seriously."

The team in New Orleans will play at the Superdome (baseball capacity 63,254), the team in Washington at RFK Stadium (47,000), the team in Vancouver at B.C. Place (55,818) and the team in San Juan at Hiram Bithorn Stadium (18,000).

Two sites are under consideration in Southern California are the Los Coliseum and the Riverside-San Bernardino area.

Three sites are under consideration in the New York area are Brooklyn, northern New Jersey and the Nassau-Suffolk County border on Long Island.

SUSPENDED ROCKET

Maxwell files federal lawsuit

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Vernon Maxwell, the suspended guard of the Houston Rockets, has filed a federal lawsuit, claiming the fan he punched slandered him.

Maxwell filed the suit in Houston on Monday, contending Steve George and his brother, Nick George, slandered him by "maliciously accusing him of a crime, namely assault."

The lawsuit says nothing about whether the attack actually took place.

George's attorney, Dick Maizels, called Maxwell's lawsuit an "interesting twist." Maxwell's attorney, Dick DeGuerin, refused comment on the lawsuit.

Maxwell was suspended for 10 games and fined $20,000 for going into the stands to punch Steve George of Atlanta on Feb. 6 in Portland.

Maxwell said George shouted racial and sexual insults about his family, especially his daughter, Amber, who died in 1992.

'PULP FICTION' RUNS SECOND

'Gump' tops list of Academy Award bids

John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Forrest Gump," the feel-good hit about a simpleton who triumphs in the end, received 13 Academy Award nominations Tuesday, the most for any movie in nearly three decades. Its star, Tom Hanks, got a shot at a second consecutive Oscar for best actor.

The 13 nominations are the most for any movie since 1966's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" The record is 14 nominations, captured by "All About Eve" in 1950; the record for actual wins is the 1959 "Ben-Hur" with 11.

Nominated with "Gump" for the best picture award were "Four Weddings and a Funeral," "Pulp Fiction," "Quiz Show" and "The Shawshank Redemption."

The winners will be announced March 27 in a ceremony broadcast live by ABC. David Letterman will be the host.

Besides Hanks, who won the award last year for his work in "Philadelphia," the best actor nominees were Morgan Freeman in "The Shawshank Redemption," Nigel Hawthorne in "The Madness of King George," Paul Newman in "Nobodies Fool" and John Travolta in "Pulp Fiction."

"It's been 17 years since my last nomination," said Travolta, whose previous bid was for "Saturday Night Fever." "I never dreamed it would take so long to get another one."

In a statement, Hanks said, "We're very proud of our movie and are pleased to see it nominated amongst such a surprisingly diverse group of films."

Two-time winner Jodie Foster was nominated for best actress for her starring role in "Nell." She will face Jessica Lange in "Blue Sky," Miranda Richardson in "Tom & Viv," Winona Ryder in "Little Women" and Susan Sarandon in "The Client."

"Forrest Gump" co-producer Steve Tisch, whose birthday was Tuesday, watched the televised nominations at home with his birthday present, a puppy named Forrest. "When he heard his name, he woke up," Tisch said. "It was all thrilling."

Trailing "Gump" with seven nominations apiece were "Bullets Over Broadway," "Pulp Fiction" and "The Shawshank Redemption."

"Pulp Fiction" is Samuel L. Jackson was nominated for best supporting actor, as were Martin Landau in "Ed Wood," Chazz Palminteri in

Associated Press

Uma Thurman and John Travolta appear in character for best picture by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

"Bullets Over Broadway," Paul Scofield in "Quiz Show" and Gary Sinise in "Forrest Gump."

Two performers from "Bullets Over Broadway" — Jennifer Tilly and Dianne Wiest — were named for best supporting actress. The other three selections were Rosemary Harris in "Tom & Viv," Helen Mirren in "The Madness of King George" and Uma Thurman in "Pulp Fiction."

The news caught Harris by surprise during lunch at London's Royal National Theater, where she is rehearsing a role in "Women of Troy."

"I was eating some cabbage in the canteen, and it got quite stuck in my throat," she said. "It's rather hard to concentrate at the moment. I'm supposed to be back 2,000 years ago, and suddenly everything's whirling around."

In the documentary feature category, "Hoop Dreams" failed to get nominated despite some of the best reviews of the year.

"Someone please explain that to me because I'd like to know," said a disappointed Catherine Allan of St. Paul, Minn., public television station KTCA-TV, which co-produced the story of two high-school basketball stars.

Woody Allen was nominated for both co-writing and directing "Bullets Over Broadway." Also nominated for directing were Robert Zemeckis ("Forrest Gump"), Quentin Tarantino ("Pulp Fiction"), Robert Redford ("Quiz Show") and Krzysztof Kieslowski ("Red").

Macedonia's "Before the Rain" was picked as one of the five top foreign-language films. It will compete against Russia's "Burnt By the Sun," Taiwan's "Eat Drink Man Woman," Belgium's "Farinelli: Il Castrato" and Cuba's "Strawberry and Chocolate."

It was the first nomination for Cuba and Macedonia.

The 13 nominations for "Forrest Gump" ties it with 1939's "Gone With the Wind," 1953's "From Here to Eternity," 1964's "Mary Poppins" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

The film was also nominated for art direction, cinematography, film editing, makeup, original score, sound, sound effects editing, visual effects and adapted screenplay.

More than 600 journalists and scores of producers and studio publicists attended the traditional predawn reading of the nominations.

Noteworthy among the nominations were bids earned by "Tom & Viv," "The Madness of King George" and "Blue Sky." The first two have appeared in limited release in art houses; the latter sat on the shelf for three years. "Blue Sky" was the last film of the late Tony Richardson, an Oscar winner for "Tom Jones."

"Forrest Gump" 's sweep, on the other hand, came as no surprise. The Hollywood Foreign Press Association gave it Golden Globes for best dramatic movie and dramatic actor.

Oscar nominees receive special Valentine's gifts

Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — From Hollywood with love, the entertainment industry's finest got Valentine's Day telephone calls in sometimes far-flung locations with word their dreams had come true — an Oscar nomination.

"I've got a champagne glass in my hand, and the fact that it's Valentine's Day makes it a double whammy," said Duncan Kenworthy, producer of best picture nominee "Four Weddings and a Funeral."

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced Oscar nominees at 5:38 a.m. during a Beverly Hills ceremony designed to give national exposure on the morning network TV shows. The winners will be announced March 27.

"We've got Valentines to hand out this morning," said Arthur Hiller, president of the academy.

"Pulp Fiction" star John Travolta, who turns 41 on Saturday, was ecstatic about his best actor nomination.

"It is 100 percent a thrill for me. You have no idea. It is really exciting," said Travolta, who was on the Los Angeles set of his latest film, "Get Shorty," when word of the nomination came.

Travolta's come a long way from the underachiever Vinnie Barbarino on TV's "Welcome Back, Kotter" to gyrating disco king on "Saturday Night Fever" and the mechanical bull-riding cowboy in "Urban Cowboy."

"I'm so delighted that I was able to be part of the game again," Travolta said.

"Forrest Gump" co-producer Steve Tisch set his alarm an hour early.

"I didn't want to miss it," said Tisch, whose film led with 13 nominations. "I was up at 4:30 watching the digital clock tick down to 5:30. It was thrilling."

It was also his 46th birthday.

"It's a great birthday present; it's a great Valentine's Day," he said.

Documentary committee slights hot 'Hoop Dreams'

John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Joining an infamous list that includes some of the most acclaimed documentaries of the past decade, "Hoop Dreams" failed to earn an Oscar nomination Tuesday for best documentary feature.

"Hoop Dreams" follows Chicago high-school stars Arthur Agee and William Gates for 4½ years as they pursue dreams of playing pro basketball. Both are now college seniors — Agee at Arkansas State, Gates at Marquette — and play for their schools.

"Hoop Dreams" was launched in 1986 as a short film about street basketball but rapidly became more. Filmmakers Steve James, Fred Marx and Peter Gilbert followed Agee and Gates, taping more than 250 hours in gyms, classrooms and the players' homes.

It took more than two years to edit, and the final length of nearly three hours might be part of the reason it wasn't nominated, according to one member of the nominating committee.

It was nominated for an Oscar for best editing.

The omission of the inner-city basketball saga — following slights of "Roger and Me," "The Thin Blue Line" and "The Civil War" — raised fresh criticism that the academy's documentary committee is out of touch.

"It's a miscarriage of justice and fairness," said TV film critic Roger Ebert. "Hoop Dreams" is obviously the best documentary America has produced in years."

The five nominated documentary features were "Maya Lin," "Complaints of a Dutiful Daughter," "D-Day Remembered," "Freedom on My Mind" and "A Great Day in Harlem."

"I have yet to hear of any of these movies that were nominated," said Michael Barker, whose well-reviewed Sony Classics release "Crumb" also was overlooked.

Academy Award Nominations

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced its list of Academy Award nominations Tuesday morning.

"Forrest Gump" topped the list with 13 nominations, the most for a single motion picture since 1966.

Film studies Tom of Finland's drawings

Jonathon Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

In a telling scene from Ilpo Pohjola's documentary "Daddy and the Muscle Academy," a man tells of being at a bar and making a pass at a muscle-bound leather god.

The man, who is not dressed in leather, is rebuked. "If that's the kind of man you want, you've gotta be that kind of man," he says. The next week he comes back to the bar with a new supertight leather wardrobe and a butch haircut. There is no rebuke; they are equal now. They are both "Tom's men."

Tom's men look like a cross between an SS officer, a cowboy and a busty female supermodel. They are the embodiment of the drawings of internationally known Finnish artist Tom of Finland.

Tom of Finland, who died in 1991, is the subject of "Daddy and the Muscle Academy," which is playing at the Bijou today and Thursday.

He is the artist who set the vogue in the emerging gay community of the '60s and '70s. The film consists of interviews with Tom, interspersed with interviews with Tom's men and enactors of Tom's trippy sex-power fantasies.

Tom's drawings were first published in gay porn magazines. His singular fantasies of eroticized rapes and gang bangs soon became a collective movement, an identity. For gay men the label of being a "Tom's man" (and is) a source of pride and community.

Like football players in their battle gear or business people in suits or a squadron of look-alike fighter pilots, Tom's men find identity and justification in their uniforms. As with the man in the bar who changed his looks, what counts is strictly on the outside.

"Daddy and the Muscle Academy" presents a retrospective of Tom of Finland's work. Except for his drawing techniques and his fantasies, we learn little about Tom himself. We do get to see the fascinating progression of his drawings from rosy-cheeked blond boys to dark mustachioed leather men.

The documentary is so well done and fast-paced that it has the quality of a sweet and horrible fever dream. A chorus of voices sometimes interrupts with, "I'm a Tom's man." This statement becomes both self-affirming and ironic. The more we see of Tom's drawings, the easier it is to recognize that these stylized, somewhat grotesque depictions of the human form bare little relation to reality.

"Daddy and the Muscle Academy" and "The P(ain) Truth" will be shown at the Bijou tonight at 7:15 and Thursday at 9:30 p.m.
