Residence halls plagued by 3 weekend fires

A couch fire forced the evacuation of more than 800 residents of Burge Residence Hall early Saturday morning.

The Iowa City Fire Department responded to a fire alarm at 4:33 a.m. after light smoke filled a fourth-floor hallway.

Resident Assistants were already evacuating the building when fire trucks arrived, said ICFD Capt. Elmer Brenneman.

The fire was thought to have been caused by smoking materials dropped onto the couch, according to an ICFD report. However, residence hall officials would not specify whether smoking was the cause of the fire. There were no injuries in the fire. Estimated damage was $50.

The ICFD kept busy with two other small fires in the residence halls last weekend.

A cigarette caused a fire in a trash can Sunday at 4:40 p.m. in the north 300s hall of Hillcrest Residence Hall, Lt. Steve Dolan said. A Resident Assistant put out the fire before the fire department arrived on the scene.

On Friday morning, a poster caught fire in Currier Residence Hall, Brenneman said. There was no damage reported.

Clinton commemorates 50th anniversary of Iwo Jima

ARLINGTON, Va., (AP) — Joined by aging heroes of Iwo Jima, President Clinton honored soldiers injured and killed 50 years ago in the savage World War II battle. "The dimensions of their struggle still stagger us," he said Sunday.

The president, in keynote remarks commemorating the 50th anniversary of the pivotal battle, paid tribute to four Iwo Jima survivors by name and urged Americans to honor the memories of all soldiers who fought for the tiny Pacific island.

"To be worthy of that sacrifice, we must determine in this time to remain the strongest nation in the world so that our freedom is never again threatened," Clinton told a crowd of about 3,000.

Students soak up sunny weather

Community hopes winter reprieve will continue. Temperatures for today are expected to be in the 40s.

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Bare white legs made a comeback this weekend as the mercury rose to temperatures in the upper 50s.

UI students and Iowa City residents hit the streets in shorts and took advantage of springlike weather to wash cars and catch up on outdoor activities.

Today's forecast calls for temperatures between 43 degrees and 48 degrees, with winds from the northwest between 20 mph and 35 mph. Tuesday should be sunny with a high around 45 degrees.

UI senior Jim Haugland and a friend celebrated the weather Sunday by picnicking with lunch bought at Hardee's, 125 S. Dubuque St.

"We're taking a break from studying," Haugland said. "Unfortunately, it's midterm time, but we're dreaming of spring and summer."

Others did their homework in the sunshine. UI sophomore Thomas Bannister sprawled out on the grass to read J.D. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye." After watching the Weather Channel all morning, he said he is confident the warm weather is going to last.

"I'm ready for this. I know it's gonna last, too," he said.

UI sophomore Nicole McLuen took advantage of the high temperatures Sunday by tossing around a Alma Iowana members Patrick Haggerson and Mak Dervo entertain a group of fascinated children with their Andes folk tunes on the Pedestrian Mall Sunday. Due to the warm temperature, parents and children filled the area, making it the perfect opportunity to "celebrate spring and prepare for our upcoming show," according to Dervo. They can next be seen at the UI Hospitals and Clinics Atrium on March 15.

College Republicans reap benefits of political change

UI sophomore Todd Versteegh waited outside the meeting room with two sharpened pencils, a day planner and an American flag.

Once the door was unlocked, he promptly prepared the room, hanging the flag on the wall.

Members of the UI College Republicans filed in, and just as many Americans did every morning in elementary school, they began to recite the Pledge of Allegiance.

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America," the 14 members said in unison, repeating the familiar ritual.

Aaron Brandenburg, a junior and president of the UI College Republicans, then got down to business at the Wednesday meeting in the Minnesota Room of the Union.

Since the founding of the UI chapter in the 1960s, it has seen members — such as Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad — graduate to political careers, Brandenburg said. The national organization is about 103 years old.

Today, there are an estimated 35,000 to 40,000 members nationwide. Les Williams, national field director of the National College Republicans Committee, estimated 150 national chapters existed midway through 1993. There are now 806 chapters, including 20 in Iowa.

There are an estimated 200 members of the UI College Republicans, with about 30 die-hards who regularly attend meetings, Brandenburg said. He said there has been increased interest in the group this year but could not give specific numbers. The organization promotes conservative Republican ideas at the UI, campaigns for Republican candidates and MANCHESTER, N.H. — The three leading Republican presidential candidates competed Saturday to cast themselves as disciples of Ronald Reagan but were overshadowed at times as other GOP hopefuls waged a bitter debate over abortion.

First on the national Sunday news shows, then on a New Hampshire TV forum and finally at a state Republican dinner that drew 1,400 people, the GOP prospects sought to position themselves as best suited to take on President Clinton and reduce the size and power of the federal government.

New Hampshire's lead-off primary is a year from today, but the candidates were acting as if it were any day now, scooting

Screening of Bobbitt film ignites controversy

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A student group at George Washington University has stirred controversy with plans to show an X-rated movie featuring John Wayne Bobbitt, who became a household name after his wife severed his penis and surgeons reattached it.

Members of the Program Board, the student organization that wants to show the film, say that presenting the hourlong "John Wayne Bobbitt ... Uncut" is a legitimate way to prompt an academic discussion on pornography.

But feminist, religious and conservative groups on campus con-

Death penalty debate rages across Iowa

Policy advocates demand revenge

David Lee

On Oct. 12, 1993, two men walked into a convenience store where Scott Meyer was working, made him get on his knees and killed him with a gunshot to his head. The robbers escaped the store with only $70.

Both of Scott Meyer's murderers are in jail serving life sentences, but his father wants them to get the same fate they dealt his son.

Norbert Meyer of Waterloo, Scott Meyer's father, said the Iowa House Judiciary Committee's approval of the death penalty last Wednesday is the first step in ensuring murderers get their due punishment.

"Anybody that takes a life should be eligible for the death penalty," Meyer said. "I have no problem there."

Iowa Death Penalty Legislation

■ There is currently a bill in the Iowa House that would bring back the death penalty. The bill is scheduled to be debated on Wednesday.

■ Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad supports legislation that would reinstate the death penalty.

■ If reinstated, lethal injection would be the probable method of execution. When Iowa last had the death penalty, the method of execution was hanging.

■ Iowa's death penalty was repealed in 1965.

■ Thirty-seven other states have the death penalty.

Although Ruth Laughlin was murdered eight years ago, her mother said capital punishment for Laughlin's killer would neither end the family's pain nor be a justifiable revenge for the crime.

Lois and Don Laughlin, Ruth's parents, have worked in opposition to capital punishment since the 1960s — before Iowa's death penalty was repealed in 1965. Their daughter's death hasn't changed the Laughlins' attitude toward capital punishment.

Ruth was murdered at the age of 31 in Pennsylvania, where capital punishment is legal. But the case was never solved.

"It seems to me an execution would just add to the cumulated violence the family has to deal with," Lois Laughlin said. "It was a terrible crime, but we have a moral conviction that killing is wrong and it

Third-shift waitress serves up cheerfulness

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan

As a late-night waitress, Marcia Davidson has seen everything from drunken college students to a streaker who ran naked through the restaurant during a night of subzero weather.

Eccentric customers are a familiar part of Davidson's evening at Country Kitchen, 1402 S. Gilbert St. Her Gallons of coffee and occasional jokes from the evening regulars help Marcia Davidson keep up with orders as a late-night waitress for Country Kitchen, 1402 S. Gilbert St.

DAY IN THE LIFE

try Kitchen, 1402 S. Gilbert St. Her full-time job starts at 11 p.m. and ends at 7 a.m. five nights a week. She said sometimes the unbelievably unusual takes place.

"I don't know if I should say this, but we had some guy streak here at 3 or 4 in the morning. It was just weird," Davidson said. "It was 20-below wind chill factor, and he had no shoes or socks — nothing — on. About 15 people were here — all just in shock. It was really funny; we couldn't believe it. Everyone was laughing."

Later it was discovered the man had streaked on a dare, and his friends were watching to make sure he did it.

On other nights, though, memorable customers aren't funny and can even require a call to local law enforcers.

"One of the things I don't like is if you get somebody who's trashed," she said. "I can handle it to a point, but sometimes I have to call the cops. I try to wake them up, but I have to get them out of here."

When Davidson is at her Iowa City home during the day, her schedule — and sleep — are interrupted hourly, based on her husband's work schedule and the demands of her three children. Her sleeping hours are sporadic, but when it comes to working the late-night shift, Davidson said she doesn't have trouble staying awake.

"I don't have a problem because you keep moving. You get used to it," she said.

Routines are part of the scenario, and familiar customers are the best part of the job, Davidson said.

"There are lots of regulars. We swap jokes. They come in and will ask about my kids," she said. "Some know my kids' names and ask about them. They say, 'What have you been doing?' There's really only a couple of people I don't like to wait on."

Throughout her shift, Davidson efficiently cleared, cleaned and set tables for customers, preparing herself for a potential "drunk rush."

On Friday and Saturday nights, there are usually only one or two servers for the late-night shift, making the rushes especially busy, Davidson said.

"Trying to keep up, you can get stressed out," she said. "You have to try to keep going."

At about 1:30 a.m., there were only seven tables full — most occupied by late-night studiers. Davidson pleasantly waited on all seven tables, filling coffee cups and water glasses regularly, wearing a "Beary Huggable" pin in the spirit of Valentine's Day.

When she wasn't taking orders, Davidson carried food to tables, vacuumed and cleaned up the restaurant.

The late-night cook called Davidson to the kitchen, and with a "Thanks, Mark," she grabbed a tray of breakfast food for some studiers.

"(The number of studiers) goes in spurts, but when it gets to midterms and finals, it will probably pick up," she said.

The most popular item — mozzarella cheese sticks — and late-night customers go hand in hand, Davidson said. A second hot item is "tons of coffee," she said.

Working at the cash register for a group that was leaving, Davidson exuded friendliness.

"You guys have a good night," she said.

When Davidson leaves in the morning, an incoming waitress helps her clean up the restaurant and the waitress station.

Davidson has been working as a waitress on and off for years. In her last two years at Country Kitchen, she said she has had no major complaints.

"I like the people I work with. I like waitressing," she said.

More studiers walked out the door, leaving the table and a tip.

"Have a good night," she said.

Actor Underwood repeatedly lays career on the line

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Blair Underwood likes to stay one step ahead of the career curve.

"Call it instinct, call it an inner voice or call it your subconscious, but whatever it is that makes me do those things, it always seems to work out," said the 30-year-old actor.

He dropped out of college to pursue acting.

Then he left a regular role on the ABC daytime soap "One Life to Live" with his sights on prime time.

Then, in his seventh season on "L.A. Law," he decided he'd rather pursue a film career.

"All three times that I've done this, everything turned out right," Underwood said. "But that doesn't mean I was sure it would. The whole last year on 'L.A. Law,' I tried to save every penny in case I didn't get a film role for the next five or 10 years."

But he did.

Underwood plays an accused killer opposite Sean Connery and Laurence Fishburne in the film "Just Cause," which opened Friday.

Madonna puts colorful house on market

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Her neighbors had a hard time putting up with it. Now Madonna is putting it up for sale.

The pop star's red- and yellow-striped Hollywood Hills house is on the market for $7 million.

Tacky is how some neighbors described Madonna's paint job on the 1920s nine-story house, which was once painted virgin white.

But that's not why the 36-year-old singer is abandoning it.

"She's madly in love with the house but spends so much time in Florida and New York," Madonna's publicist, Liz Rosenberg, said. "If she could move the house there brick by brick, she would."

'SNL' stars threaten to leave show for good

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — "Saturday Night Live" stars moonlighting on the big screen may not come back to the NBC perennial.

Janeane Garofalo said she'll return to HBO's "The Larry Sanders Show" after finishing a movie but hasn't made the same promise to "SNL."

"We'd have to have a heart-to-heart about my material," Garofalo said in TV Guide.

Roxette rocks in Chinese capital

BEIJING (AP) — Roxette's Crash! Boom! Bang! world tour became Crash! Boom! Bleep! in Beijing.

The first major Western rock group to play here in a decade bowed to government censors who demanded changing the lyrics "making love to you" to "making up to you," said Marie Dimberg of Roxette's record company, EMI.

Otherwise, Roxette's set was basically unchanged from its other tour stops, she said. And the Swedish group drew a sellout crowd Sunday of 10,000 swaying and bopping Chinese.

Al Franken, whose movie based on his "SNL" character Stewart Small-eyes opens in April, said he might not return, either. "Some people are taking the bad press hard," he said.

The show has come under increasing criticism for weak writing, but NBC remains committed to the show.

"Comics always whine after their sketches get cut. We've slumped before and come back," said Bernie Brillstein, manager for "SNL" chief Lorne Michaels.

UI ADOPTS NEW APPLICATION PROCESS

Summer financial aid blocked

Jami Peterson
The Daily Iowan

Students who plan to rely on financial aid to help pay for classes in June are out of luck, thanks to a new UI policy requiring students to apply for summer aid a year in advance.

In the past, UI students have applied for summer financial aid at the beginning of the spring semester. This year, the changed policy has left some students without access to financial aid for the summer.

Despite the inconvenience, UI sophomore Jim Corelis said the new policy has not changed his plans to attend summer school.

"I'm going to borrow more money from my parents and work more than I want to," he said.

Students who did not apply for the maximum amount of money available to them through Stafford Loans could still receive the remaining funds this summer, said Cathy Wilcox, associate director of the UI

Office of Student Financial Aid.

The UI is switching to the new application process because most other large universities have implemented the policy.

Whether the lack of aid will impact summer enrollment is difficult to predict, said UI Registrar Gerald Dallam.

"It's too early to tell," he said.

"I'm going to borrow more money from my parents and work more than I want to."

Jim Corelis,
UI sophomore

"Probably at the end of April we will have an idea."

At the beginning of the spring semester, the financial aid office sent letters explaining the transition to all students who had applied for aid for the 1994-95 school year, Wilcox said.

Despite the notice through the mail, some students were unaware of the changes.

"The reaction of some people I've talked to is surprise," said UI senior Matt O'Brien. "They usually say, 'Really?'"

Corelis said he found out about the policy change through a friend before winter break.

"At first I didn't care," he said.

"Then I realized it would cut my spring break plans short; I'm going to work instead of going somewhere for spring break."

The financial aid office said the change has generated concern from UI students. However, other options exist for students seeking summer aid, Wilcox said.

Some students plan to take out private loans to counter the lack of summer aid.

"I'll probably go to other loan sources," O'Brien said. "I'll contact other sources for money."

If students question their eligibility for summer aid, the financial aid office can help determine if aid is available.

FORMER COUPLE'S MANSION PUT UP FOR SALE

Tom Arnold's restaurant closes doors

Associated Press

ELDON, Iowa — Tom Arnold said he built the Big Food Diner so he and TV star Roseanne would have a place to eat when they visited their nearby mansion in southeast Iowa.

Customers poured in by the thousands, and when Arnold and Roseanne were in town, business at the diner overwhelmed the small town.

But the marriage collapsed, and now so has the diner. The last day of business was the day before Valentine's Day, when Roseanne married her former bodyguard. The mansion was never finished, and its condition is deteriorating.

Construction stopped before the roof was complete and the house, which would have been the largest in Iowa, is unprotected from the elements.

Dan Swiggum, manager of Roseanne and Tom's Big Food Diner, said Arnold is taking over the building, where a sign declares that the place is closed for remodeling. But Arnold has no intention of saving it, Swiggum said.

"Somebody may buy it and open it back up, but as far as Roseanne and Tom, that's it. It's over."

"I don't want any employees sticking around here thinking, 'Well, if it's going to open back up, maybe I won't look for another job.' Well, no, they need to look for another job," said Swiggum. The diner was open for two years, employing 35 people in its glory days.

"They're selling all the equipment in there," said Arnold's brother, Chris, of Ottumwa. "I mean everything — the sinks, the hood, everything. You're talking $50,000 worth of equipment."

Chris Arnold said his brother and Roseanne have removed their possessions from the 1,700-acre estate north of Eldon.

"He's not coming back to the farm," said Chris Arnold. "The cows are gone. The horses will be gone Saturday. There's no home left. The toys are all gone. There's not much left except barren landscape and the ruins."

The Hollywood couple sank about $1.5 million into the 28,000-square-foot would-be mansion. Chris Arnold said that at one time, Tom Arnold wanted to save the diner and buy part of the farm to build a smaller version of the unfinished mansion. But Roseanne's representatives blocked that by requiring Tom Arnold to pay half of the amount the couple had invested, which is far beyond the market value.

"They don't want him to pay what it's worth," said Chris Arnold. He said Tom Arnold has since lost interest in the estate. He said the land and unfinished mansion are for sale.

Before Tom Arnold and Roseanne came to town, Eldon's claim to fame was being the site of the farmhouse that Iowa painter Grant Wood used in his classic painting "American Gothic." That house still stands.

Injection tagged as likely form of execution

Associated Press

DES MOINES — If Iowa approves a death sentence this year, executions will be carried out by lethal injection, the method of choice of the majority of states that have capital punishment.

Lethal injection "is clearly the trend. More states have adopted it; more executions are being done with it," said Richard Dieter, executive director of the Death Penalty Information Center, an organization based in Washington, D.C., that is opposed to capital punishment.

"They prefer something that seems more antiseptic and a medical kind of procedure, rather than an old form of execution that seems more barbaric," Dieter said.

The method of execution is one issue that so far hasn't been debated by Iowa lawmakers as they consider a bill to reinstate the death sentence.

When Iowa last had the death penalty — in the early 1960s — the required method of execution was hanging.

"There seems to be a consensus on lethal injection," said Rep. Steve Grubbs, a Davenport Republican leading the effort in the House to restore the death penalty.

"People want the death penalty, but they don't want to be viewed as barbaric and inhumane," he said.

Death penalty opponents argue that any form of state execution is repugnant.

"This is sort of like choosing a murder by gun or by knife, but lethal injection seems to be the least inhumane," said Rep. Jack Holveck, a Des Moines Democrat.

The House is scheduled to debate a death penalty bill on Wednesday. The measure would allow the death sentence in certain murder cases, such as the killing of a rape or kidnapping victim.

The proposal contains Gov. Terry Branstad's recommendation to carry out executions by injecting fatal doses of drugs.

Of the 37 states that have a death penalty, lethal injection and electrocution are the most common methods of execution. The firing squad and gas chamber are seldom used. Washington is the only state that uses hanging.

Surveys show Dole favored to win New Hampshire primary

BOSTON (AP) — As Republican candidates paraded before New Hampshire voters this Presidents' Day weekend, two polls showed Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas is the early favorite to win the GOP presidential primary in the Granite State.

But the polls, published in the Boston Sunday Globe and Boston Sunday Herald, showed Dole's lead would be cut if retired Gen. Colin Powell entered the race.

If the first-in-the-nation primary were held today without Powell in the race, the Globe poll found Dole would capture 42 percent of the vote. But with Powell in the field, Dole's percentage would drop to 35 percent.

The Herald poll showed Dole with 41 percent of the vote in a race without Powell, and 35 percent with Powell.

If the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff were to enter the primary, the Globe survey showed him getting 20 percent of the New Hampshire vote, while the Herald survey showed him with 17 percent.

The polls were published as most of the major Republican contenders gathered in Manchester, N.H., Sunday for a party fund-raiser.

Body parts left on ice after study's funds dry up

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Hundreds of testes and ovaries from people who lived near a nuclear weapons plant have been in freezers for years, part of a plutonium-testing study that ran out of money, The Albuquerque Tribune reported Saturday.

The body parts are from a 1975 study involving people who lived near the Rocky Flats plant in Golden, Colo. The study was to determine whether they had more plutonium in their bodies than people living elsewhere.

The body parts, including bones and adrenal glands, sat for about 20 years in freezers at Los Alamos National Laboratory.

About two months ago, they were sent to Colorado State University in Fort Collins. Ward Whicker of Colorado State's health sciences department said he hopes to get funding to test the 200 gonads for plutonium.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the University of Colorado commissioned the study in 1975.

Organs taken from Denver-area residents were obtained from 519 autopsies, with relatives' permission, said Dr. John Cobb, who conducted the study.

New NAACP leader vows to guide group back to roots

Sonya Ross
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Myrlie Evers-Williams, the new chairwoman of the NAACP, made it clear Sunday that she intends to take the beleaguered civil rights group back to its grassroots and the ordinary people who have kept it alive.

An early priority is to create a newsletter from the chairwoman to let the rank and file know what's going on, she said. There will be appeals to corporations to donate to NAACP programs — and reports to the 2,200 local branches which will run them.

The operating theme is that Evers-Williams, 61, doesn't intend to forget the revolt that prompted the NAACP board of directors to elect her as its new leader, succeeding William Gibson.

"The people who make up the NAACP were well-represented here. They spoke, and the board members listened," she said. "The challenges that we face are great. We now have the unity and the sense of purpose to meet those challenges head-on."

Gibson was toppled from the chairmanship Saturday after a raucous general session in which 700 angry members booed a treasurer's report they thought was false. Led by 90-year-old activist Enolia McMillian, the members delivered a vote of no confidence in his leadership.

Then, 300 members crashed the board's closed meeting and refused to leave when Gibson attempted to limit the session to board members. Board members asked Evers-Williams to try to persuade them to allow a closed session. She did, and the members calmly left.

"They stood up in unison and said, 'Only for you, Myrlie,'" said board member Joseph Madison. "If I were a board member sitting on the fence, that certainly would have swayed me."

Gibson was defeated by one vote. After the election, President Clinton called Evers-Williams.

"He spoke to the board members and said we all have a lot of work to do and that he looked forward to working with us," she said. "People in the audience said, 'We need your help, too, Mr. President.'"

With Gibson gone, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is turning its attention to a gathering in Washington this week to oppose parts of the GOP "Contract With America" and voice support for Dr. Henry Foster, nominee for surgeon general.

The two-day gathering will bring the NAACP back into the national debate on civil rights, just as welfare reform and rollbacks of affirmative action are becoming big issues on Capitol Hill.

"To the extent that the internal debate has ended in the NAACP, we can now refocus our efforts," said Wade Henderson, the NAACP's lobbyist in Washington. "The new chairperson is committed to revitalizing the (NAACP's) strength, which is found in its grassroots base."

Simultaneously, Evers-Williams plans to put together a team to find a new executive director to replace Benjamin Chavis, who was ousted last August. In the meantime, interim administrator Earl Shinhosher will serve as acting executive director.

Evers-Williams also is assembling lawyers and accountants to assess the NAACP's debt, which is estimated at about $3 million. The new treasurer, Wall Street financier Frank Borges, will spend the next few days reviewing the NAACP's books.

"She will send a message to corporate America and to our branches that they will be included in the decision-making and they will have accountability," said board member Hazel Dukes. "Everyone will be included and not excluded."

No sooner was Evers-Williams elected than about $60,000 in donations came in, said Roy Williams, vice-chairman of the special contributions fund and a community relations manager for Chrysler Corp. His company committed to a $100,000 donation, he said.

TASTY TOYS HAWKED

Gross candy unveiled at confection convention

Janet McConaughy
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Gummi "worms" hide in crumbled chocolate cookie "dirt." Mouth Muck makes you foam at the mouth. S.N.O.T. drips out of a plastic nose.

Is there nothing too gross for kids to buy?

"No. Well, there probably is, but I don't know what it is," said Lori Bassett of Sherman Confections Inc.

Her display at the American Wholesale Marketers Association's 36th National Winter Convention and Candy Exposition included Super Nauseating Obnoxious Treat, sold in a nose-shaped container. Sherman also makes Spew, which foams and stains the spewer's mouth, and Mad Dawg Super Spew Bubble Gum.

Then there's the high-tech option: bubble gum in plastic compact disc containers, CD players and boom boxes; and toy beepers and cellular phones with candy inside.

Add the more straightforward Reese's Peanut Butter Cups, M&M's, Snickers, Hershey's Kisses, Butterfingers and Mounds, and you have a fraction of the sweet treats at the convention that is the world's biggest candy shop.

It's clear that tasting good isn't enough for kids today.

Amurrol Confection Co. sells a viscous neon-colored liquid in a clear squeeze bottle shaped like a lava lamp. The display trumpets, "Lava Lick: A great taste eruption!" There's Gobble-D-Goo — Day-Glo goo in a glue bottle.

Leaf Inc. sells Mouth Muck, bubble gum balls which make one foam at the mouth.

Candy-makers have a word for sweets that make people say, "Eeu-

Associated Press

www.gross."

No, not revolting. Interactive.

Kids want to play with their candy.

"When I was in Europe, they had excrement-shaped candy, and it was selling like hot cakes," said John Schultens of Triple C. Inc., a Canadian distributor. "They also had a product called Barf."

Triple C. doesn't sell those.

"We actually have certain standards," Schultens said.

There's a lot of fizzy candy out there too. Magic Fizz popping candy. Cherry Bomb lollipops. Remember Pop Rocks?

"I haven't seen them for years," said Denise Perryman, a buyer for Wal-Mart Stores Inc.

However inventive these new candies may be, tradition remains the best seller. Reese's Peanut Butter Cups is the national favorite, followed by Snickers and M&M's Plain and Peanut brands.

That's because candy is mostly consumed by grown-ups. And confection consumption in the United States is growing, association President Lawrence Graham told the convention last week.

Sales figures may favor more sedate products, but the convention's big draw was clear: the toys.

Like Roller Pop — "Candy 'n' powder that PAINTS your mouth!" Or necklaces to hold your half-eaten lollipops. Or candy whistles.

Mike Giblin, a Uniconfis Corp. vice president, unwrapped a lollipop slide whistle — watermelon — popped it in his mouth and played a tune. He unfolded the wrapper to point out another feature, saying, "It comes with sheet music."

BALANCED-BUDGET AMENDMENT

Iowa's legislators split

Lawmakers in Washington are checking off the individual items of the "Contract With America" like a cheap laundry list. Because House Republicans have a self-imposed 100-day time limit to pass the "Contract," some bills have passed the House after a single dizzying day of debate.

Before the Congress convened, the Republican leadership decided that there was no reason to bother with extended debates. Freshman Republicans would vote the way they were told, returning Republicans would follow ideological lines and no one cared what the Democrats did.

The first 50 days have gone as planned. Iowa's delegation to the house has voted for the "Contract" with lock-step precision. Iowa's five Republican representatives vote together like a tight fist.

According to a report on CNN, Iowa's two freshmen representatives are settling their way into the congressional status quo by both making the top 10 list of freshmen with the highest campaign debts. According to CNN, Greg Ganske and Tom Latham are doing what so many others before them have done: They are turning to the contributions of political action committees and lobbyists.

While Iowa's freshmen elbowed their way to the special-interest trough, they joined with House Speaker Newt Gingrich's other republican replicants and voted to further dismantle civil liberties.

In what was hailed as a vote for law and order, the Iowa representatives voted with the majority in a 289-142 decision to approve a bill allowing prosecutors to use improperly obtained evidence if the police acted in "good faith" when they collected the evidence. This will not result in less government, as Republicans claim to want. Rather, this action will greatly expand the powers of police, prosecutors and the state.

The legislation moves on to the Republican-controlled Senate for approval, but life, legislation and the "Contract with America" all move much slower on the other side of the hill. The Senate still is debating its version of the balanced-budget amendment, although debate could end this week and a vote could come as early as Thursday. Thanks in part to the cooler heads of more seasoned legislators and the Constitution, the Senate has taken much longer to draft an equally frivolous balanced-budget amendment.

The House version of the amendment would jab a paring knife into the federal budget of 2002, when the ratified amendment would take effect. The Senate's proposal would basically do the same thing, only slower.

Sixty-seven votes are needed to pass the proposed amendment, and passage is not guaranteed. Apparently, Iowa's Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin has been identified as a swing vote. Harkin has opposed the idea in the past, but in the current climate of expanding and contracting government, he hasn't announced a position.

Harkin should be reminded that the balanced-budget amendment is a bad idea. His Washington, D.C., phone number is (202) 224-3254, and his Cedar Rapids number is (319) 393-6374. He also is among the small but growing group of members who can be contacted via e-mail at: tomharkin@harkin.senate.gov.

THE ACTUAL WAR ON POVERTY

Programs have a history

It's hell in a hand basket time. We are in big trouble and deep in debt, and it's becoming increasingly fashionable to blame it all on President Johnson, the war on poverty and the '60s in general.

It is not uncommon to argue, for example, that our budget woes are caused by automatic nondiscretionary spending — or entitlements — and that most of them stem from Johnson's Great Society. These include Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, unemployment benefits, government pensions, public assistance, student aid, food and nutrition programs, farm price supports and interest on the debt.

Leaving aside that the Great Society was never a program but a slogan culled from a speech Johnson delivered in May 1964, the problem with blaming Johnson — or his Great Society — is that most of the nondiscretionary spending items predate Johnson's term in office by many decades. Social Security, unemployment benefits and Aid to Families with Dependent Children were established by the Social Security Act of 1935; student aid set up by the National Defense Education Act in 1958; and the GI Bill was instituted in 1945. Farm price supports go back to the Farm Relief Act of 1933, which modified earlier laws, such as the Food Control Act of 1917. Federal nutrition programs are nothing new, either; these were implemented by the Federal Emergency Relief Agency in 1933 and the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation in 1934. Government pensions date back to the Revolutionary War — so does the national debt and the interest we pay on it.

Only Medicare and Medicaid can be attributed to Johnson. But unless we are willing to allow hospitals to leave the indigent and uninsured to die in the parking lot or go deep in hock ourselves to keep Grandma alive, these programs will have to be maintained somehow.

The actual "war on poverty" was the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. Included in that package were Head Start, Upward Bound, Volunteers in Service to America, Job Corps and similar storefront operations. But by the mid-70s, all but Head Start and Upward Bound had been defunded or phased out.

It took 200 years to get our national debt up to the $1 trillion mark and 10 years to triple it. This had far more to do with President Reagan's tax cuts and increased defense spending than with distributing baby food to poor families or any of the other anti-poverty measures developed since the turn of the century. We may be in trouble, but to pin the blame on programs that were meagerly funded and short-lived is ludicrous. And to balance the budget by eliminating programs which support the most helpless and vulnerable of our people is pointblank immoral.

If conservatives really think the remaining fragments of the war on poverty — the preschools and tutoring programs — are destroying this country, perhaps conservatives need to have their collective head examined.

Of divided mind on affirmative action

It is increasingly obvious that affirmative action is not long for this world. The Washington Post reported in its Feb. 13-19 weekly edition that one state is poised to take dramatic action on the issue. In California, two conservatives are proposing what they call the California Civil Rights Initiative. According to the Post, the purpose of the initiative is to amend the state constitution to prohibit any preferential treatment of women and minorities "in jobs, promotions, contracts and college admissions." The initiative has the blessing of the California Republican Party and has caught the eye of the national GOP as well. It is hard to imagine the home state of Proposition 187 failing to come up with the 615,000 signatures needed to make the ballot in 1996. If the initiative passes in California, it is almost certain to find its way across the nation.

As a liberal who has argued that the negative consequences of the demise of affirmative action have been greatly exaggerated, I am of divided mind on this development. It is a law of political physics that what we throw away today must be replaced by something tomorrow. In the case of affirmative action, it is prudent to wonder what will fill the void left when we lift the legislation.

Many forget that the point of affirmative action is not to give a boost to otherwise second-rate candidates for anything; that this has occasionally happened is unfortunate. Such incidents provide the resentment needed to propel measures like California's latest to the political forefront. They also cast a pall over the gold-standard achievements of millions of women and people of color and beyond doubt enrich the soil from which the core arguments for abolishing affirmative action have sprouted.

The point of affirmative action is to ensure that equally qualified minorities and women are not unfairly denied jobs on the basis of their sex or race. The historic basis for affirmative action is undeniable: Human, professional and economic deprivation were meted out to entire groups of people because of racism and sexism. Equally undeniable, however, has been the dawning of our realization that no law can accomplish the noble end of making humanity more decent. In fact, it frequently serves to do the opposite as organizations scramble to meet the letter of the law while hoarding assorted slimy hatreds deep within their functional hearts. Many institutions — fearful of the law and enslaved to dollars shoveled down the government pipeline — have created internal shrines to affirmative action that do little more than breed cynicism.

Hence the negative legacy, which is one of institutional schizophrenia, cynicism and doublespeak. The resulting groundswell of frustration is understandable. Too frequently, affirmative action guidelines hamstring managers making critical hiring decisions who will tell you they feel compelled by the legislation to turn away the applicant who would add the most to their team. This is not the fault of affirmative action as intended; it is what happens when managers act like human beings instead of saints — they take the easy way out and hire the applicants who raise their percentages of employees in protected groups.

This pattern is one more sorry result of pretending a law can serve to make people decent. If anyone is to blame for cases in which lesser-qualified minorities or women do get jobs over more qualified whites or men, it is the management within the offending organizations. In the current cockamamie scheme of things, however, managers are instead rewarded for showing higher numbers of minorities and women. In other words, not only have we created a system that inspires institutional cynicism, but one in which individual cynicism often carries a higher value within the institution. This is usually ignored by wronged parties, who instead rush to lay blame at the feet of the other innocent victims of such cynicism — the very people who belong to protected groups.

The awful tangle of affirmative action is not eased by partisan response to the issues. Democrats embrace affirmative action for its noble intent but deny the reality of what it has actually done to the work place and to our culture. Republicans want us to trust their ineffably fair "invisible hand" to cradle us into an era of pragmatic justice once we eliminate overbearing legislation that puts a drag on business.

How America will solve the puzzle of legal redress for discrimination remains to be seen. The ugliest result of the ways commercial and governmental institutions have bumbled the obligation to live up to affirmative action guidelines has been the devaluation of serious issues involving race and gender. David Horowitz is president of the Center for the Study of Popular Culture, a conservative group based in Los Angeles. Assessing the California initiative, he predicted that Democrats face a serious split over the issue, then added, "People are no longer intimidated by the charge of racism because it's been so overused and trivialized." The fact that he is right to say so is perhaps the strongest argument yet for scrapping affirmative action and finding our way to a true meritocracy.

Firestone: Replacing the American dream

It is 7 a.m., and the sun is peeking over the horizon. The wind chill is 50 degrees below zero, and snow flurries are in the air. He has just arrived for his weekly picket duty on this frigid Saturday, joining two other striking workers in front of the south gate. The wind cuts through his layered clothing, numbing his body. As he attempts to warm himself, he glances over toward the gate at his wooden sign reading, "Local 310 on strike." An American flag whips violently in the cold harsh wind as it flies over the south gate. He started at Firestone in 1972, a year before the birth of his second son. He left college for the Army, taking his young wife along as he served four years in Europe. They returned with a little boy born in Germany, who was now a year old. After briefly working in his father's old factory, he took a job building passenger tires at Firestone. The work was hard, the pay was decent and above all, he now had two mouths to feed. Soon there were three mouths, and there was no leaving the Des Moines plant.

A lot happened in his life after he started working at Firestone. His two boys started to grow, and bills started to pile up. They grew into and out of clothes faster than he could buy them. After kindergarten and eight years of private schools, his boys moved on to a private high school, and the bills grew higher and higher. Along the way, he tried to give them everything they wanted on birthdays and Christmas mornings, and he was successful in doing so. He still managed to get new cars every few years for his wife, and for himself as well. But none of it came easy to him. He worked hard at Firestone, and his hard work paid off with the benefits of the American dream.

The work at Firestone is demanding — both physically and mentally. It is loud, hot and dirty. There are injuries — some with short-term effects and others with long-term effects. Cuts, bruises and sore muscles heal up in time, but hearing loss, back problems and asbestos-damaged lungs do not heal themselves. It is hard and unrewarding work; how many people get in their cars, drive from point A to point B and thank the people who built their tires for doing such a good job? How many people even give a second thought to where their tires came from? The only rewards for doing his job and doing it well are the occasional demands from the company to lower his wages, cut back on his benefits and trim off a days of vacation time. His union saw to it that those demands were negotiable.

The years working at Firestone went by, and it never got any easier. The work was still hard, and so was life. His father died, and seven years later his mother joined his father in Graceland Cemetery. His wife was forced to take a job to help with the bills as the cost of living rose higher. His boys grew up and soon moved away from the nice home he had built for them. He got old. His back, knees, elbows and hands got old, and his hearing failed him. But his heart was still good. He worked hard for 23 years at Firestone.

On July 12, 1994, he walked out with approximately 1,300 other union members after negotiations between the Japanese-owned company and the Local 310 broke down. The company presented a "last, best and final offer," which the union found unacceptable. Among other concessions, it called for 12-hour work days — which meant the elimination of overtime and holidays — and would ultimately end seniority among the workers. Raises would be linked to productivity, which could be manipulated to impossibly high standards. In addition, the company offer called for drastic reductions in vacation time and benefits. There were no talks and no negotiations whatsoever following the walkout in July. After a little more than seven months of silence, the company formally announced that the striking workers were being permanently replaced by the nonunion workers who had been hired during the strike.

Instead of negotiating with the striking union workers, the company decided to replace them. But the picket lines are still up, and the union still clings to the chance that a labor board ruling will get the union their jobs back and force the replacement workers out. But even if the jobs are forever lost, the members of the Local 310 who still stand on the picket lines have won this battle. A cold, uncaring company would not negotiate with them to end this strike, and this lack of communication violates collective bargaining. Tough times do not last, but tough rubber workers do. The company will lose some exceptionally good workers, and they cannot be replaced.

My father still stands on the picket line in front of the Bridgestone / Firestone plant in Des Moines. The company may hire nonunion workers to build their tires, but they will never be able to replace him. Now, as my father stands on the picket line facing his uncertain future, he should know one thing is certain: I will stand behind him, as will my brother and my mother. Firestone cannot replace us, and it cannot replace him.

Discrimination can end

To the Editor:

Much is said and written berating discrimination. No question, it is stupid, irrational, inexcusable and disgraceful. There is no place for it in a world literally racing into interdependence.

At the same time, I fear we are forgetting the tremendous progress we have made since the 1950s and '60s — the turning point in race relations. A review of history might be reassuring and rewarding.

Discrimination comes in many forms other than just that dealing with race. For instance, "Oh, you don't belong to our club?" or "You come from Iowa? Nothing but corn and hogs out there!" Or a boy comes to Northwest Junior High School from Penn Elementary School in small-town North Liberty and is greeted as a "hick." Want to make up your own list?

Can we eliminate discrimination in all its forms? Remember, we are dealing with emotional habit change — the dynamite of human behavior. Not as far as I can see into a foggy future. That may occur when Jesus Christ returns to Earth to establish his kingdom. But until then, keep struggling, kids, keep on battling against it. Dig in! Persevere! Perhaps a fitting thought from Reinhold Niebuhr, the great American theologian, will lift your spirits: "Lord, give me the courage to change the things I can change, the serenity to endure the things I cannot change, and the wisdom to know the difference."

Backpack missing

To the Editor:

On Valentine's Day, my husband returned home from school. He walked in the door, looking particularly weary and carrying only his coat and a yellow plastic bag from the University Book Store. I asked him how the day went, and he said, "Not very good." "What happened?" I asked. "My backpack was stolen today." He was buying me a Valentine's Day card at the bookstore.

I wanted to write a public letter to whomever took the pack. You probably have no idea how much anxiety and anguish you have caused. You really didn't get anything that is of much value to you — a green Jansport backpack, library books, papers, computer disks, a Swiss army knife in a leather case and our checkbook (good luck, pal).

However, the papers and disks in the pack contain the majority of my husband's doctoral work from this semester and course papers, detailed notes and the like. We have no backup copies — you have everything. To us, this is the most valuable.

But this isn't just about a backpack; it is about your world view. I'm guessing that you feel life owes you something. I don't think you get the paradox. The more acquisitive, greedy and self-promoting you get, the less you will find yourself actually getting much out of life. Sure, in the short run you will receive, but eventually it will destroy you. It's not worth it.

Life is too short, and there are so many people that need a helping hand. Whether you know it or not, there are so many people who need your positive attributes — time, energy, a listening ear. Look around, and you will receive more than you can ever give. There you will find life and won't have to take it for yourself.

If you return the backpack and its contents, no questions will be asked, and we will be very grateful to you. We all make mistakes.

Illegal immigrants contribute labor

To the Editor:

I read with interest Laura Fokkena's column on California's Proposition 187 — the immigration issue. I agree with her on the points she made. However, there is an important one that she has forgotten, one that really affects the personal pocketbook of all Americans: cheap farm labor.

I lived in California for 28 of the past 29 years of my life and spent a good portion of my time there outside of the urban area of the state. One cannot help but notice the gargantuan farms, and one cannot also help but notice the laborers working those farms. You would be hard pressed to run across one Anglo- or African-American working in the fields and orchards. The only ones willing to do the back-breaking work for minimum wages are the Latino immigrants (legal or otherwise). I am not an advocate of cheap farm labor; I merely point this out as a reality — right or wrong — of California's agrarian economy and its ramifications on the rest of our country.

California grows something like 60 percent of the fresh produce in the United States — produce that is consumed by legal citizens from coast to coast. If all illegal immigrants were somehow miraculously rounded up in one fell swoop and permanently exported across the border from which they came, imagine the riots at our supermarkets: $5.80 for a head of lettuce; $3.50 for a stalk of celery. There ought to be a law against such criminal greed!

Before we good legal citizens of California and the rest of the United States point a finger at economic parasites, we should take a look in the mirror right after enjoying a bountiful and reasonably priced dinner. Maybe the alien invaders contribute more than they take after all.

Fast for peace begun

To the Editor:

I can no longer sit in silence.

I was born, raised and educated in Iowa. I chose art as a career choice, as I felt it offered me the greatest opportunity to experience freedom — freedom to follow my conscience, freedom to follow my love of learning, freedom to follow my creative spirit in expressing myself in any medium and freedom to discover my highest ideals and practice them. During the past 20 years, my art and consciousness have evolved through many stages of growth to the point of being a theoretical artist. I practice my craft through my talents and skills of contemplation, meditation and prayer.

Almost 10 years ago, I was searching for the greatest idea a person could behold. Intuitively, peace came to mind, and I became a participant of the great peace march which traveled — one step at a time — from Los Angeles to Washington, D.C. During this nine-month journey, I learned by experience the truth of peace. My "art project" led me into unknown realms of peace: peace of the body, mind, feelings, culture, mother and father, and all aspects of the self.

I took great pride in walking across the state of Iowa, knowing our state was the most peaceful. I believed Iowa people were independently sane people of high morals who valued the principles of life — people who stood hand in hand with family, friends and a true sense of God. The next summer, I traveled to Russia to share my knowledge. With 200 Americans and 200 Soviets, we walked from St. Petersburg to Moscow. With the greatest idea in mind and the most powerful force of the heart — love — we changed. And we helped change the perspective of how the world's superpowers saw one another.

I am becoming distressed at the way so many people are thinking concerning the return of the death penalty. To kill another person is not in the interest of peace. I would hope we would always choose the ways of a healthy society over the laws of insanity.

I am beginning a fast for peace in hopes the thoughts of the Iowa people gain clarity in seeing with their hearts the reality of moralistic value. In my action, I would hope all Iowans support their highest conscience and help create and sustain Iowa as the nation's center of peace. My fast for peace expresses the ideals we all share in common, the love of life. May we see and act with the highest ideals of our mind's eye.

Bible contains many contradictions

To the Editor:

Poor, oppressed fundamentalist Nida Cline. She's upset at criticism of Bible babblers' lunatic beliefs. Why, it reminds her, she says, of the Salem witch-hunts. Ah, such a proud moment in Christendom that was! The fundies of years past roasting folks alive. Historians estimate that prior to Salem, 9 million were hung and burned in Europe — all because an ancient big medicine man made an imaginary god say, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live."

Cline "believes in the literal truth of the Bible" while accusing others of showing their ignorance in public. Talk about the pot calling the kettle black! A literal truth of the Bible would include belief in unicorns (Psalm 22:21, Job 39:9-11 and six others), dragons (Job 30:29, Isaiah 43:20 and 14 others), a flat Earth (Revelations 7:1), wandering corpses (Matthew 27:52-53), fish that spit money (Matthew 17:27), a seven-headed leopard (Revelations 13:1-2) as well as the familiar virgin birth and flood stories and hundreds more absurdities.

The Bible contains so many contradictions that I wonder how Cline is able to know which "truth" to choose. Matthew 1:16 says Joseph was the son of Jacob, but Luke 3:23 says, he was the son of Heli. Exodus 33:11 says the Lord spoke to Moses face to face, but John 1:18 says, "No man hath seen God at any time." Genesis 32:30 says,

"Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live." One of God's funniest lines is Exodus 33:32: "And I will take away my hand, and thou shalt see my back parts!" In Romans 15:33 he is called "the God of peace," but in Exodus 15:3 he is called "the Lord, a man of war." Psalms 145:9 reads, "The Lord is good to all and his tender mercies are all over his works" vs. 1 Samuel 15:2-3, in which the Lord says, "Now go and smite Amalek and utterly destroy all that they have... slay both man and woman, infant and sucking." At one point God was so full of fury that David finally questioned him in 1 Samuel 24:17, "Lo, I have sinned, but these sheep, what have they done?"

Let's try a few chapters of John. "I and my father are one" (10:30), as compared to "My father is greater than I" (14:28). More from Jesus: "As I hear, I judge" (5:22, 30) vs. "I judge no man" (12:47). Or "God is love" (1 John 4:8) vs. "God is consuming fire" (Hebrews 12:29).

I agree with the great American author and lecturer Robert Ingersoll, who said, "It is better to love men than to fear gods; it is grander and nobler to think and investigate for yourself than to repeat a creed."

Incarceration favored

To the Editor:

Reinstating the death penalty in Iowa would be a giant step backward, not forward. Apart from its questionable morality, it has proven ineffective as a deterrent to crime in other states.

My heart and sympathy go out to the victims of violent crime and their families. Nothing can ever make up for their tragic loss and suffering — not even execution of the criminal.

The death penalty has no place in a civilized society. Legalized killing teaches that killing is OK if done by the state.

Cold-blooded killers should be incarcerated for life. They should be given humane treatment but denied a luxurious lifestyle and any possibility of parole.

If economics has any part in life-and-death issues, a study by the Iowa Legislative Fiscal Bureau has found that the death penalty is far more costly to taxpayers than life imprisonment.

another Republican into the White House in 1996.

Republican victories in November boosted national membership for the organization. Since the elections in November, 30 to 40 new chapters have developed nationally, Williams said.

The local chapter is also feeling a surge, Brandenburg said.

"There are a lot of students who agree with our ideas and are looking for us," he said.

According to Williams, the increase in membership is definitely due to the November elections.

"We can be Republicans in public now," he said.

UI freshman Jerome Allen said that is the reason he joined the UI College Republicans.

"I come to a liberal university and get told liberal means open-minded," Allen said. "I'm not allowed to speak my mind because I'm conservative, because I supposedly have racist and sexist views because I'm a conservative — that's how I feel. College Republicans is a place to form my own political thoughts.

"In my opinion, I think we're the most open-minded group in the university," he said.

Versteegh, secretary of the College Republicans, enjoys the opportunity to get involved.

"I like the fact that you're getting together with people who share our own views. There are conservative and moderate viewpoints and a strong solid view of Republican policy," he said.

Frisbee with friends at Hubbard Park.

"I think we couldn't have asked for a better reprieve to the weather we've had," McLuen said. "Fat February was getting everyone down."

UI sophomore John Welch smiled as he caught the Frisbee.

"We're just out here drinking sunshine today," Welch said.

Spring fever has not sparked an increase in mischief yet, according to UI Public Safety Sgt. Ronnie Rich. He said he doesn't expect campus crime to increase much until April.

"Warmer weather does make a difference in activity, but I think we're gonna need to see it get into the 60s or even a little hotter before it gets too bad," Rich said.

Many may be channeling their restless energy into outdoor recreation instead. Dan Potts, a bike mechanic at Racquet Master Bike and Ski, 321 S. Gilbert St., said Rollerblades and bikes were moving fast over the weekend.

"It's been packed constantly in here," Potts said.

Although people are now taking advantage of the higher temperatures, not everyone believes the warmth is here to stay.

"We'll probably get a foot of snow in March," Haugland said. "This is just a teaser."

doesn't help to add more killing."

The Laughlins, as members of the group Iowans Against the Death Penalty, are fighting to keep capital punishment from being reinstated.

"Capital punishment does not represent or create a healthy society," Lois Laughlin said. "On the contrary, use of the death penalty announces to the world that the state is now practicing the violence of the criminal."

Currently, there is a proposal in the Iowa House that would make Iowa the 38th state that allows the death penalty. Debate on the bill is scheduled to begin on Wednesday.

A major reason for opposition to the death penalty is the disproportionate amount of minorities on death row. According to the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics, about 30 percent of the people on death row are black, but only 12.6 percent of the U.S. population is black.

Harris Ceaser, president of the Black Hawk chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said statistics like these are the reason his organization opposes the reinstatement of the death penalty.

"The death penalty is not administered fairly," he said. "There are too many innocent poor people put to death. It's a way for poor people to be murdered legally."

Ceaser also noted the disproportional amount of minorities in Iowa prisons compared to the amount in the general population.

"We make up less than 1 percent of the population of Iowa, but make up 34 percent of the people incarcerated in penal institutions," he said. "There's something wrong with that kind of justice system."

The chance of getting the death penalty may also be based highly on economic status and region. According to the Ecumenical Ministries of Iowa Task Force Against the Death Penalty, since 1930, more than 95 percent of the people executed in the United States were poor, and 21 of the 31 executions during 1992 occurred in five Southern states.

There have also been no credible studies showing the death penalty deters murder, Iowa's deputy attorney general, Roxan Ryan, said. In fact, states with the death penalty have higher homicide rates than states without it, she said.

Iowa currently has the second-lowest homicide rate in the nation.

Ryan said her main objection to the death penalty is simply dollars and cents.

According to studies done by the nonpartisan Legislative Fiscal Bureau, it would cost between $1 million and $3 million more to execute inmates than to keep them in prison for life. The group also estimated that it is more than twice as expensive to house a death row inmate than an inmate sentenced to life without parole because of the expensive litigation suits.

But for Lois Laughlin and her family, reintroducing the death penalty is an issue of morality and responsibility to the community.

"If we exterminate the individuals our society has so clearly failed to nourish, we double our failure," Laughlin said. "I am convinced that a state which sponsors the death penalty has no place in a society where crimes become rare because it automatically forces us — the citizens — to become remote participants in the killing."

ment of the death penalty on Wednesday.

Anti-death penalty advocates argue that an executioner is no better than the murderer. However, Meyer quotes the Bible verse that reads, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth."

"Some of (the people against the death penalty) say we're cruel and inhumane," Meyer said. "The two fellows that got my son were cruel and inhumane."

The death penalty was repealed in Iowa in 1965. The last state execution was on March 15, 1963, when Victor Henry Fugger was hung for federal murder and kidnapping charges, said John Goeldner, executive assistant to the director of the Department of Corrections of the State of Iowa.

Hanging is the only method of capital punishment Iowa has ever used.

There have been 41 executions in the history of Iowa, with the first one on June 30, 1834 in Dubuque County.

Carolyn Mullenix of Des Moines has supported the death penalty since her brother, Craig Allen, was murdered on Sept. 30, 1993.

Craig Smith, a homeless man with a long history of criminal assaults, strangled her brother and smashed his skull with a pipe, Mullenix said. A legal loophole kept Smith's history of violent assaults from landing him in jail before he murdered Allen. Polk County Attorney John Sarcone had tried to send Smith to jail, but County Judge Patricia Houlihan didn't have the proper papers, and Smith was freed, Mullenix said.

Two months later, he murdered Allen.

tend that the screening would play to the worst impulses of a violent and sexist society.

"All they want to do is have a well-attended event; sex sells," said Roshan Kalantar, 20, a member of a feminist group called Womyn's Issues Now. "Last year, we had a debate on pornography, and we didn't need to show a movie glorifying a known wife-batterer or spend campus funds to do it."

Program Board members argue that censorship has no place in academia.

"We thought (showing the film) would get people talking, but we never anticipated the outright claim that we just shouldn't show it here," said Ellen Maccarone, vice chairwoman of the Program Board. The group receives university funds to sponsor activities to entertain and educate students.

Opponents plan to hold a demonstration and teach-in before the screening, slated for Feb. 27.

The film is a takeoff on the Bobbitts' story, with a "Lorena" character re-enacting the kitchen-knife incident. Bobbitt, playing himself, goes to the hospital for reattachment and is shown soon after the operation in a variety of sexual scenarios.

Mullenix said what hurts most is knowing her brother's murder could have been avoided.

"When you lose someone to murder, it's two sets of death," Mullenix said. "There is sadness and anger to not just lose a life, but to have someone else take it. I'm upset with the whole justice system. It's a matter of who's got the better lawyer."

The death penalty should be an act of justice rather than a retaliation, Mullenix said. However, she admitted she would sleep better if Smith was executed.

"I'm sure there's revenge in there," she said. "I guess I've come to realize that's a part of it. There's a part of me that says let that blankety-blank burn in hell."

Her brother's murderer is serving a life term in the Fort Madison prison, but Mullenix said there is no reason to spend state money to provide his living expenses.

"It doesn't seem right to pay for (murderers) to live," she said. "The murderer is still in jail hollering because he doesn't get chunky peanut butter or new tennis shoes — that's not closure."

Meyer said he faults the logic of anti-death penalty advocates, many of whom are liberals.

"I don't see how we in this country, namely the Democratic party, can stand for an abortion and not the death penalty," he said.

Despite his support of the death penalty, Meyer said he did not believe its reinstatement would make potential killers consider the possible consequences of murder.

"The death penalty is not a deterrent," he said. "It's a solution. A final solution."

from table to table to greet those who paid $100 to hear from nine GOP hopefuls, several of them considerable long shots.

The dinner and weekend campaigning served as the ceremonial start of the 1996 race, and two week-end polls put the stakes in perspective.

They showed Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas was far and away the early favorite of New Hampshire Republicans — the same voters who dashed his White House hopes in 1988.

Dole, 71, seemed determined to turn questions about his age to his advantage, suggesting his World War II generation "knows what made America great in the first place. ... I want to be your president for the right reason: because I can provide the leadership America needs now and into the next century."

Marlin wins second consecutive Daytona 500

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Pit road was at the center of attention all day in the Daytona 500. In the end, though, the race was decided by the stop Sterling Marlin didn't make.

Marlin's crew gambled that his powerful Chevrolet Monte Carlo would be able to hold off Dale Earnhardt at the end of Sunday's race, even when the intimidator dove into the pits under a yellow flag with just 13 laps remaining for a fresh set of tires.

"When that yellow came out, I asked Tony (Glover, his crew chief), 'Well, what do you want me to do?' He said, 'Well, just stay out there,'" Marlin recalled after he became just the third driver in the history of NASCAR racing to win consecutive Daytona 500s.

The moment of truth came after Bobby Labonte crashed in turn two on lap 186. All of the leaders had gotten fresh rubber 25 laps earlier and were prepared to ride it out to the end. But the yellow flag changed all that, setting off a cat-and-mouse game with the leaders trying to figure out who was going to dive down pit road and who would remain on the track.

"When I came around," Marlin said, "Tony told me, 'Watch now and see if anyone starts down there. If they come in, you come in, too. If they stay out, you stay out too.' I was thinking to myself, 'What do I do if half do (pit) and half don't?'"

As it turned out, Earnhardt was the only driver among the front-runners who decided to make a stop. Knowing his Monte Carlo wasn't as fast as Marlin's, Earnhardt gambled that he would be able to close the gap with a new set of tires. He managed to pass a dozen cars that were ahead of him when he came out of the pits, but not the one that mattered most.

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Two weeks after blowing the lead in the final round at Pebble Beach, Kenny Perry shot a 2-under-par 70 on Sunday to win the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic by one stroke over David Duval.

Perry, 34, got his third tour victory, and a $216,000 check, despite shooting par from the seventh hole on at Bermuda Dunes. The first- and fourth-round leader, he finished the 90-hole tournament at 25-under 335. Duval shot a 69.

Murray sparks blowout with record-tying performance

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

The question wasn't what Kenyon Murray could do to help Iowa get past Ohio State Saturday night. The question was, what couldn't he do.

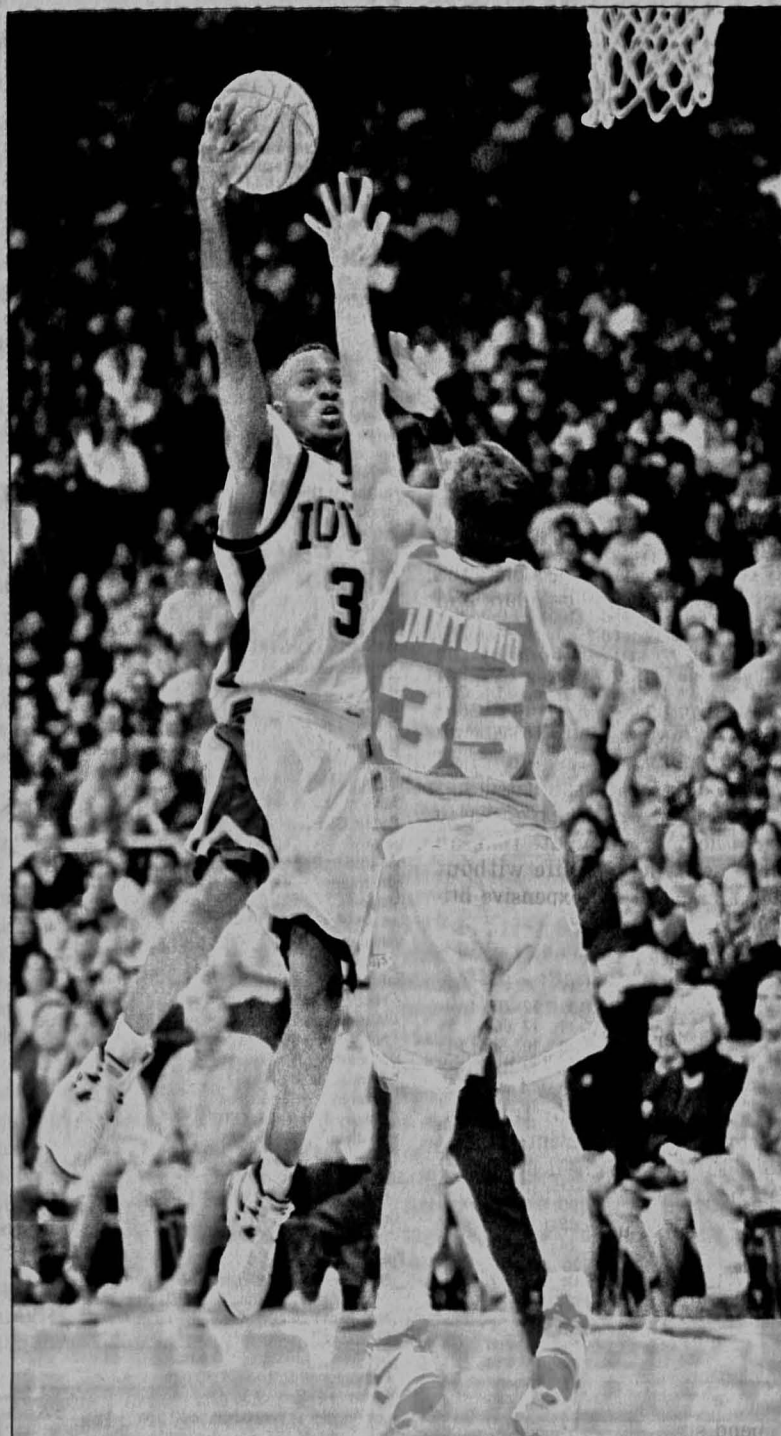

Murray led or tied for the team lead in five categories, scored 20 points, came one steal and one rebound shy of a triple-double, tied Acie Earl's school record for most steals in a game and even broke up a fight.

"I was in a zone tonight," he said. "I was very aggressive going for rebounds, looking on the offensive end and getting the steals. I felt real, real good out there and I think it was obvious."

It certainly was obvious. Murray had seven of his record nine steals in the first half, along with 15 points as Iowa jumped to a 15-point halftime lead. Had the game been closer and Murray played more than 25 minutes, he might have surpassed his career-high of 23 points.

Instead he had to settle for a personal best in only one category.

"I didn't make a conscious effort to break the record. I just kind of let the game come to me and I was able to get a few more (steals) in the second half," Murray said. "They got comfortable as far as

Two teams heading in opposite directions collided Saturday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Hawkeyes, trying to salvage an NCAA tournament berth after a dismal start to the Big Ten season and Ohio State, trying to avoid finishing in the cellar of the Big Ten Conference, teed it up for a rematch of Iowa's 81-66 victory in Columbus last month.

Three technical fouls, three intentional fouls, 17 three-pointers and a couple of scuffles later, Iowa (16-9 overall and 6-7 in Big Ten play) moved one step closer to the postseason with an 85-66 victory over the Buckeyes (5-18, 1-12).

"It was a good week. I was worried about Ohio State coming in Wednesday night's game (at Minnesota) took a lot out of us. I was glad we were able to get a win here," Coach Tom Davis said.

"I was worried that if we weren't sharp enough they would have a chance to stay in the game with us, but our pressure did a real good job in the early going and we played a Nobody likes reruns. Certainly not on TV, but especially not on the basketball court.

However, that's exactly what 7,891 fans got when they saw the Iowa women's basketball team fall to No. 24 Wisconsin Sunday afternoon in the Hawkeyes' final home game. It was Iowa's third consecutive loss at Carver-Hawkeye Arena and all three losses have been by the score of 62-55.

Once again the Hawkeyes were close until the end. Again they showed they were capable of hanging with anybody at certain times. Coach C. Vivian Stringer was again talking about two- or three-minute spurts that would have made all the difference. And once again the opposing coach said after the game that Iowa is the last team she would like to face in the Big Ten tournament.

"It was very unrealistic at the beginning of the year for (the Hawkeyes) to be ranked as high as they were, based on talent alone," Wisconsin coach Jane Albright-Dieterle said. "But they're growing up and they'll continue to grow up. I'll tell you, that is the one team that I don't want to face in a conference tournament."

Albright-Dieterle probably based her thoughts on the glimpses of Iowa's talent that she saw when the Hawkeyes put together a pair of 8-0 runs to turn a seemingly AMES — The Iowa wrestling team ended its regular season with an exclamation point as it pulverized intrastate rival Iowa State 32-3 on Saturday.

Iowa (14-0) led from the outset and never looked back. The Hawkeyes won nine of the 10 matches and posted a 21-4 advantage in takedowns. The victory allowed Iowa to finish the regular season undefeated for the first time in three years.

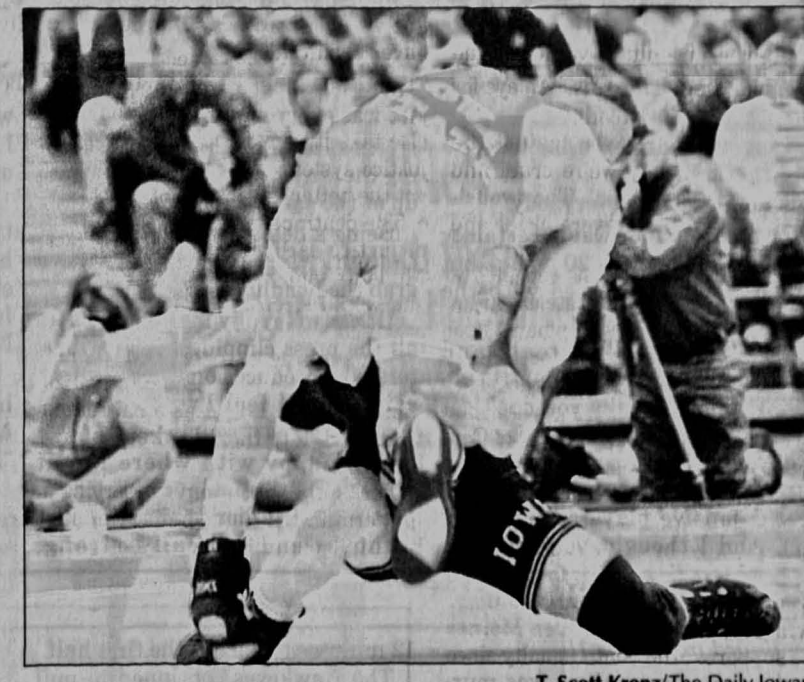

The Hilton Coliseum crowd of 7,505 couldn't ignite a Cyclone attack as Iowa State (17-4) lost six of the 10 matches by two points or less and failed to produce takedowns in several key situations. The lone Cyclone victory came at 134 pounds where No. 9 Colothian Tate defeated Kevin Hogan 8-2.

Iowa State coach Bobby Douglas said his team wrestled well, but was overpowered by the top-ranked Hawkeyes.

"It wasn't that we didn't wrestle real well, I think Iowa just dominated us in certain situations," Douglas said. "We just didn't have enough experience, horsepower or will to win tonight in some of those close matches."

Douglas said this year's Iowa team was the best he'd seen.

"I've never seen an Iowa team as strong as this," he said. "They're a great team and it's going to take a great effort from a great team to

Iowa's two biggest wins came at 126 and 142 pounds. At 126, No. 1 Jeff McGinness defeated No. 3

Dwight Hinson 3-1 with an overtime takedown. Both wrestlers recorded escapes in regulation to produce the deadlock.

McGinness said Hinson did a good job of keeping him off the offensive.

"I like to get 30 or 40 shots in a match, but I was only able to get a few," McGinness said. "He's (Hinson) a good wrestler. He gave (No. 2 Sanshiro) Abe a good match in the National Duals. You've got to give him a lot of credit."

Bill Zadick (No. 6) upset Iowa State's Derek Mountsier (No. 5) in the 142-pound bout. Zadick used a third period takedown to capture a 4-2 victory. With the win, Zadick avenged a 5-4 loss to Mountsier at the Northern Open.

Zadick said it felt good to bounce back from a disappointing loss with a big victory.

"It was important, especially coming off a loss against Oklahoma State," he said. "I needed to win just to get my confidence back to where it needed to be heading into the Big Ten (Championship) and the national tournament. It was also important for me to beat him and let him know that it was a fluke the first time."

Iowa also looked impressive in bouts at 150, 177 and heavyweight. Lincoln Mellravy recorded 10 takedowns in his 22-10 victory over Chris Bono at 150. At 177, Ray Brinzer recorded Iowa's fastest pin of the season when he beat Matt

Jim Bartles started the Iowa scoring with a three-pointer just eleven seconds into the game, but the story Saturday was Kenyon Murray and Iowa's pressure defense.

The Hawkeyes forced 28 Ohio State turnovers and Kenyon Murray tied a school record with nine steals to go with his 20 points. "He was everywhere. He did a real good job on the ball and off the ball. He kind of set the stage with that one early steal that he got and kind of triggered our defense," Davis said.

From there, Iowa jumped out to an early 14-5 lead before the Buckeyes went on an 11-0 run.

Ohio State took its only lead of the game after the first of Chris Kingsbury's two intentional fouls, but a lay-in and a three pointer by Murray gave the advantage to the Hawkeyes for good with just under comfortable 14-point lead into a four-point advantage for the Badgers late in the second half.

But the Hawkeyes (8-16, 4-10 in the Big Ten) got no closer. When it was all said and done, the run that proved to be most important was the Badgers' 14-0 spurt, 12 of which came at the beginning of the second half. Iowa didn't score in the second half until Susan Koering, who played just one minute, nailed a 16-footer four and a half minutes into the half.

By that time Wisconsin had gained a 44-26 lead.

"Two things tend to happen to us. Either we're late getting started at the beginning of the game or at the beginning of the second half, which we did today," Stringer said. "Again the bottom line is we just

No. 5 Iowa rolls to victory

Despite competing without top gymnast Jay Thornton, the fifth-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team whipped No. 14 Illinois-Chicago 228.10-226.25 Saturday in Chicago.

Iowa started out slowly without Thornton, who was performing in Mexico City for the U.S. gymnastics team, but pulled away in the later events.

Junior Aaron Cotter led the way for the undefeated Hawkeyes, finishing second in the all-around with a 48.2. Cotter set a school record on the parallel bars with a 9.85, good for a first-place finish. He also set a team season-high on the pommel horse (9.70).

"Aaron Cotter really stepped up for us," sophomore Sean Jugulion said. "He performed great."

Other individual champions for the Hawkeyes were sophomore Dave Nemovitz on the still rings, Jugulion on the vault and sophomore Peter Masucci on the horizontal bar. The three scores were all season-highs.

"We started off a little slow in the first event," Coach Tom Dunn said. "We came back real strong and dug ourselves out of a hole."

Performing without Thornton forced all the gymnasts to step up their events. Twenty-three of the thirty-six routines were personal-best scores for the season.

Iowa should have the services of Thornton for its next meet. In addition, sophomore Tyler Vogt, who performed with a torn ligament in his thumb, should be ready. Sophomore Jason Rogers is expected to miss the meet with a sore neck.

Women's track

Megan Maurer and Becky Kaza each captured a victory in their respective field events to lead the Iowa women's track team in a strong showing at the UNI-Dome Open Friday.

The freshman duo continued to put up impressive numbers for Iowa in the field events. Maurer, who has posted personal bests in every competition this year, won the shot put with a toss of 47 feet, 5 1/2 inches. Kaza battled back from a recent bout with the flu to capture a victory in the high jump with a leap of 5'7 1/2".

Katy Fawbush recorded Iowa's third victory with a personal best in the 55-meter hurdles. Her time of 8.33 seconds is only .4 from qualifying for the NCAA Championships.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Briana Benning and Becky Coleman led the Hawkeyes in the distance events. Benning finished second in the 800-meter run with a time of 2:14.59. Coleman produced a personal best in the mile run. Her time of 5:08.6 was good for fourth.

Iowa sprinters Maria Philip and Coretta Clarke rounded out the Hawkeye attack with second-place finishes in the 200- and 55-meter dashes respectively. Philip was clocked in at 25.80 and Clarke finished in 7.30.

Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said the team turned in another good performance.

"We had a good meet at Northern Iowa," he said. "This was a meet to try some people at different distances and to try to refine our skills a little bit in preparation for the Big Ten (Championships)."

Men's tennis

The Iowa men's tennis team continued to slide as it dropped two matches this weekend to Miami (OH) and Cincinnati at Champaign, Ill.

The Hawkeyes fell to Miami on Saturday 5-2, then lost a 4-3 decision to Cincinnati on Sunday. Iowa is now 1-3 in dual meets and has lost the last three in a row.

Coach Steve Houghton said injuries and people playing out of position have contributed to the recent losing streak.

"Everybody seems to be hurt lately," Houghton said. "Then when we have people move up a position to compensate, we just don't play well. Apparently we just aren't good enough to take it up a level when we have to."

Iowa jumped out to an early lead, sweeping the doubles play behind seniors Bryan Crowley and Bob Zumph's 8-6 win over Miami's David Abelson and Chris Ritchie. But the Hawkeyes fell apart in singles play, winning only one match en route to the loss. Sunday was the same story as Iowa jumped out to an early lead but struggled in singles, only winning two matches.

Houghton said he hopes things shape up in singles play.

"We're going to have to step it up a notch or we're going to continue to struggle," Houghton said.

Women's tennis

The Iowa women's tennis team fell to 1-3 in the Big Ten after dropping road contests to Wisconsin and Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes were defeated by Northwestern 6-3 on Saturday, then tripped up by Wisconsin on Sunday 5-4. Iowa stands at 4-6 overall.

Coach Micki Schillig was happy with the effort, but not the outcome.

"We played well, but like I said before, these are two of the top teams in the Big Ten. Anytime you have those circumstances, you have to get some breaks and we just can't seem to get them," Schillig said.

Iowa swept the doubles portion of the meet, but struggled in singles play. Laura Dvorak lost a tough 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 match to Northwestern's Siri Ecklund at the No. 1 position. Northwestern won all six singles matches.

The Hawkeyes fared a little better at Wisconsin, winning three singles matches, but lost two of the three doubles matches

MEN'S TRACK

Hawks crown six champions at home

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track and field team closed out the home portion of its 1995 season with an impressive showing at the Iowa Open.

Although no team scores were kept, the Hawkeyes crowned six championships in 13 events in their final preparation for the Big Ten indoor conference championship meet next weekend in Champaign, Ill.

"Right now it's sort of a thing where we're glad we got through it, nobody got hurt and everybody looked fairly sharp," Coach Ted Wheeler said.

Leading the charge for the Hawkeyes were Andre Morris and George Page.

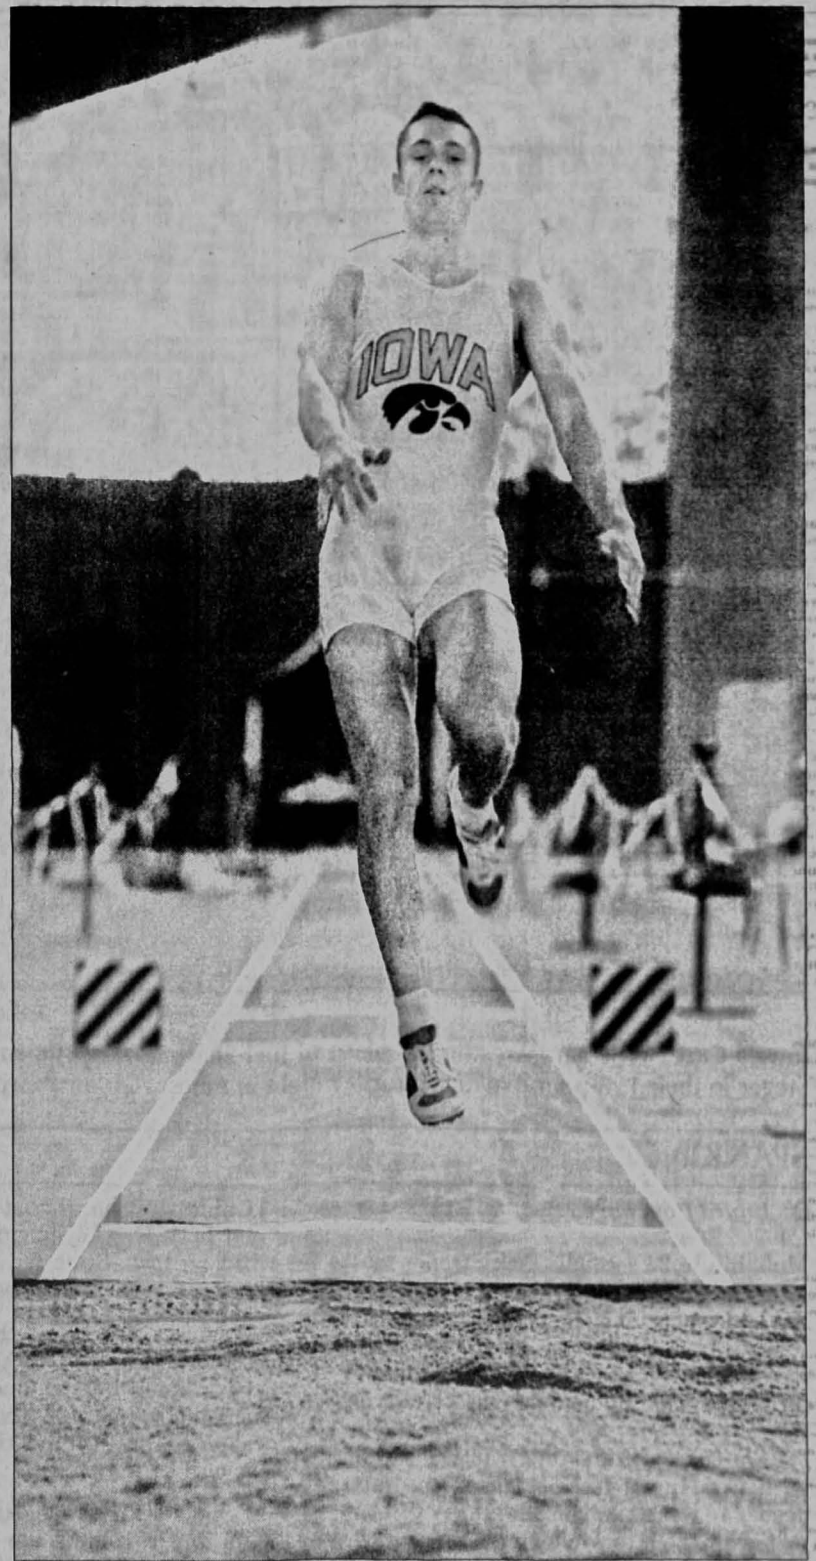

"Andre Morris and George Page looked particularly good," Wheeler said. "George won the 55 and Andre won the 200."

"The middle distance runners also ran very well. They're coming back. They're running up to par and I think (this meet) was a significant move for them."

Other winners for the Hawkeyes included junior Chris Peters, who won the mile in a season best 4:17.0; freshman Dion Trowers, who won the 55-meter hurdles; junior Dave Novotny in the 800 meters and Chad Ohly in the pole vault.

Former Hawkeye and team record holder in the 3,000 meters Kevin Herd returned to win the 3,000 meters running unattached. Iowa volunteer assistant coach Ken Brown, also competing unattached, took home top honors in the high jump.

"All in all, we enjoyed the season at home and we're looking forward to the Big Ten (Championships)," Wheeler said. The Big Ten meet begins Friday, Feb. 24 and concludes the following day.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Hawkeyes finish last at Big Tens

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

Women's swimming coach Pete Kennedy said he hoped his team would end the season strong at the Big Ten Conference Championships.

But the reality of swimming in the best conference in the country hit hard for Kennedy and the Hawkeyes as Iowa finished in 11th place with 90.5 points.

Iowa's highest finish was the 400 freestyle relay team, which finished in 11th place with a time of 3:32.64.

The team consisted of seniors J.J. DeAth, Mary Rhodes, Jennifer Maehl and freshman Andrea Smetana.

Individually, the Hawkeyes were paced by sophomore Lynn Dustin, who grabbed 23rd place in the 1650 freestyle with a time of 17:34.96.

Teammates Niamh Campbell and Jami Strauss finished 28th and 29th in the 1650 freestyle, clocking times of 18:06.05 and 18:06.27 respectively.

Coach Pete Kennedy said he was pleased with the effort and to see the seniors go out fighting.

"It may look bad on paper, but the kids swam their hearts out," Kennedy said. "We had a lot of people turn in personal bests today, so I was real happy to see that. I was real glad the seniors swam well in their final meet. It's sad to see them go and they will be tough to replace."

It was business as usual for Michigan, which claimed the Big Ten championship with 857 points. It was the Wolverines' ninth straight Big Ten Conference title as they won the meet by an astounding 321.5 points. Minnesota finished a distant second with 536.50 points.

Kennedy said he was in awe of the strength of the Wolverines.

"I've never seen, in 38 years of coaching, a team dominate a meet like Michigan did," Kennedy said. "They had some kids that didn't even taper and they still won their events."

Mark Ironside did not wrestle because of an ankle injury and Joel Sharratt sat out with the flu at 134 and 190 pounds respectively for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa coach Dan Gable said he was happy with the Hawkeyes' performance, but they needed to work more on offense.

"I want them to win by more than they want to win by themselves," he said. "This team, to be a great team, has to learn when they're winning 4-2 to win 6-2 and so on. That could have been the case so many times."

Gable said he almost got to demonstrate "real Iowa Hawkeye aggression" for his team when an Iowa State fan started to taunt him about Iowa sports right before halftime.

"As I was walking off the mat, one fan really got to me, but I kept my cool and didn't get any unsportsman-like conduct calls or anything. But I guarantee you I could have tech-falled and probably pinned the guy real easily," Gable said.

"I could've shown an example of what kind of wrestling I would have really liked had my team been out there, but they were already in the lockerroom. I wouldn't hurt the guy I just would have played with him and toyed with him technically."

MAN FOCUSES ON OFF-COURT TIME

'Hoop Dreams' star prepares for life after basketball career

Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — If William Gates was in a Hollywood movie, his story would have a heart-tugging feel-good ending: He'd be racing down a basketball court, finally living his dream of making it to the NBA.

But "Hoop Dreams," the documentary of his quest, was a slice of real life, and now that his college basketball career is ending, Gates knows there will be no fairy-tale finale, no seven-figure contract and, likely, no bids from the pros.

Still, he said that shouldn't stop inner-city kids from chasing that same fantasy.

"They need to have that dream — that's what makes life so great, especially growing up in Cabrini Green," the decaying Chicago housing project where he grew up, Gates said.

"Sometimes that's the only thing you have to live for — your dream. For me, basketball was my sole guidance to get out of Cabrini. I may not make it to the NBA, but I still got out."

"Hoop Dreams" follows the divergent paths of two Chicago basketball prodigies — Gates and Arthur Agee — from the asphalt playgrounds to the high-pressure and often ruthless world of prep sports, glib college recruiters and big (think dollar signs) promises.

The film also is a parable of life in the inner city, with triumphs and tragedies to rival any Hollywood plot line: a brother's own dashed basketball dreams, a father's struggles with cocaine, a mother's joy just because her son reaches his 18th birthday without being killed.

The 4 1/2-year film odyssey of Agee and Gates starts with their recruitment into St. Joseph High School in suburban Chicago, where the coach dreams, too, of winning a state championship and discovering another Isaiah Thomas, the former Detroit Pistons star who also played there.

While Gates had a financial sponsor, Agee had to transfer to a Chicago public school when his family couldn't pay the tuition. The movie hints that St. Joseph's — which recently settled a suit against the filmmakers after claiming they had misrepresented the school and their intent — wasn't as eager to help Agee because he didn't seem as talented on the court.

Agee, a senior playing basketball at Arkansas State, has declined interviews for the rest of the season.

Gates, meanwhile, has been living "Hoop Dreams: The Epilogue," conducting newspaper and TV interviews, including "Oprah," and popping up at Michael Jordan's

Associated Press

William Gates pats the stomach of his pregnant wife Catherine at their home in Milwaukee last Monday. Gates, the subject of the basketball documentary, "Hoop Dreams," took last year off from basketball to spend time with his five-year-old daughter and is looking forward to the birth of his son, who will be named Will, Jr.

32nd birthday bash, where he did — what else? — five interviews.

Two networks crew also trailed him the day before the Academy Award nominations were announced and "Hoop Dreams" was snubbed in the documentary category.

"Sometimes that's the only thing you have to live for — your dream. For me, basketball was my sole guidance to get out of Cabrini. I may not make it to the NBA, but I still got out."

William Gates, star of "Hoop Dreams"

Gates and Agee, who also met with director Spike Lee last year to discuss a made-for-TV fictional movie, stay in touch and got together at Christmas.

"The chemistry is so strong," Gates said. "We're just so happy to see each other. It's not like we're the best of friends, but when we're together, you can't tell we're not."

At 23, Gates still has the shy smile and soft-spoken manner captured on film, but the Marquette senior with a wife, a daughter and a son due in April has a scaled-down vision of his future.

"If you've got a good head on your shoulders and you do the right things to be successful, you don't have to throw all your eggs in one basket," he said, dangling a leg scarred from two knee operations over a table outside the Marquette gym. "I'm in such a fortunate situation. My life has been documented. It's been put on the big screen."

"NBA money is good," he said. "But there are other ways to make it."

Gates expects to graduate with a communications degree in December but will end his up-and-down basketball career in March. This season, the 6-foot reserve guard-forward averaged just 11 minutes a game.

He took last year off from basketball, partly to spend time with his daughter, who turns 6 in March.

"I realized I needed to be part of her life, especially since I didn't have a male figure in my life," said Gates, who saw his father only occasionally growing up. "I wanted to be everything to her that I didn't have."

Bo Ellis, the Marquette assistant coach who played for the Denver Nuggets, said Gates will be relieved when the season is over, knowing everyone has been watching and pulling for him.

"A kid is given a chance, and it seems like the doors will stay open forever," said Ellis, a former Chicago prep star himself. "It just doesn't work like that."

But he said that Gates has the right priorities.

"The most important thing Will has learned is that basketball has given him an opportunity to get a degree that will not desert him," Ellis said.

'Days' cleans up at soap opera awards

Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Days of Our Lives" won six awards, including favorite show, and Deidre Hall, who plays the passionate psychiatrist Marlena Evans, won best lead actress at the 11th annual Soap Opera Digest awards.

Nominees in 17 categories were chosen by editors of Soap Opera Digest, except for the "hottest male and female stars" and "hottest soap couple," which were based on viewer mail.

Other awards handed out Friday night went to "Days" cast members Jason Brooks for outstanding villain, Drake Hogestyn as hottest male star, Robert Kelker-Kelly and Lisa Rinna as hottest couple and Louise Sorel as female scene-stealer.

Tom Eplin of "Another World" was named outstanding lead actor.

"General Hospital" earned four acting trophies and a special award for head writer Claire Labine. Jonathan Jackson was named outstanding child actor, Brad Maule won supporting actor, Kristina Wagner won hottest female star and Rena Sofer was named younger leading actress.

The Editor's Award was presented to Labine in recognition of contributions to the field of continuing drama.

Other winners were: Brooke Alexander, "As the World Turns," female newcomer; Keith Hamilton Cobb, "All My Children," male newcomer; Roger Howarth, "One Life to Live," younger leading actor; Kimberlin Brown, "The Bold and the Beautiful," villainess; Signy Coleman, "The Young and the Restless," supporting actress; and Michael E. Knight, "All My Children," male scene-stealer.

The magazine's readers were asked to choose from a list of three nominees per category in all but the favorite show category, which included all the current daytime serials. Actor John Larroquette co-hosted the event at the Beverly Hilton hotel.
