Husband charged in dismemberment of wife

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A woman whose painted body parts were found scattered around town was identified after a photo of her severed head was shown on television. Police arrested her husband Tuesday.

James Patrick Bradley was charged with murder and jailed on $1 million bond after police questioned him at the home he shared with his wife, Suzy Hahn Bradley.

El Paso residents had followed the bizarre case for days as parts of a woman, some spray-painted different colors, were discovered at various locations over the weekend.

On Monday, police released a photograph showing the woman's severed head resting on a cloth, eyes wide open. After most local television stations showed the photo, several friends and relatives called to say the woman was Suzy Bradley.

A preliminary autopsy report said Suzy Bradley was shot to death, then dismembered. Authorities said she was killed last Wednesday and cut up with an ax.

Detective Tom Lange said Nicole Brown Simpson was probably attacked first and didn't see her friend Ronald Goldman die. He said shadows from foliage at Ms. Simpson's home partially obscured the bodies from view.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark led Lange through a detailed account of the investigation, an apparent effort to show the police were trustworthy.

Judge Lance Ito ordered defense witness Rosa Lopez to appear in court Friday. Lopez, a maid who lived next to Simpson, allegedly wants to flee to her native El Salvador, citing media harassment. Ito will decide whether to videotape her testimony or to have her testify immediately.

Tsongas to highlight budget woes

Past presidential hopeful will relate problems to Generation X at UI lecture

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Former Massachusetts senator and 1992 presidential candidate Paul Tsongas will give a speech titled "Budget Deficits — Time Bomb for Generation X" in the Main Lounge of the Union at 3 p.m. today.

Tsongas, a Democrat, will address how the federal deficit will affect college-age people and probably will not make blatant political statements in his speech, said UI Lecture Committee Chairman Andy Peebler.

"He will probably talk about how the deficit relates to our generation, and he'll probably make a case for why we should be concerned," said Peebler, a UI junior. "It probably won't be policy-oriented in terms of the balanced-budget amendment or anything like that."

Tsongas lost the 1992 Democratic presidential nomination to President Clinton. Tsongas has been mentioned as a possible dark horse presidential candidate in 1996, perhaps running as a third-party nominee.

The former senator, who made headlines during the 1992 campaign when he made his battle with lymphoma a campaign issue,

"He's on a mission. And a person on a mission is always willing to talk."

Pat Miller, ISU lecture committee coordinator is fond of speaking to young adults, said Fred Bucher, communications director at the Washington, D.C., office of the Concord Coalition.

"The people who are going to be hurt the most by the deficit are future generations — like the college students of America," Bucher said. "When (Tsongas) is traveling, he tries to spend as much time as he can with young people so they understand that they have a stake in this issue. He wants them to get the facts and get involved."

A Sept. 8, 1994 appearance by Tsongas at Iowa State University drew a large crowd, and today's lecture is expected to be well-attended, Peebler said.

SCHOOLWORK STOLEN

Research bagged in theft at bookstore

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

While UI graduate student Randy Wilson was in the University Book Store buying a Valentine's Day card for his wife, his backpack was stolen from a cubicle in the entryway. The bag held countless hours of irreplaceable work.

Wilson's green Jansport backpack contained five library books; a camping knife; a checkbook containing his Social Security number; and most important, computer disks storing all the material he has researched for his doctoral degree since arriving in Iowa City in August.

Wilson said he has no backup copies of the stolen disks and will have to completely redo six months of research and work.

Wilson, who is working on a doctorate in geography, said he was in the bookstore for 15 minutes. He said when he discovered his bag was missing, he initially believed someone had picked it up by accident. After it had been missing for a week, he decided it probably had been stolen.

"On some levels — though it's a word that's thrown around a lot — I feel violated," he said. "Someone that does not necessarily have your best interest can do something horrible to you. It's kind of unsettling."

Wilson's story is a common one at the UI.

The UI Department of Public Safety has received 29 reports of stolen book bags and gym bags since September. Only nine of the bags have been recovered, according to UI records.

Four bags were stolen at the Union, while the majority — eight — were taken at The Field House.

When Wilson's bag was stolen, his wife, Robin, took an unorthodox approach and addressed the thief in a letter to the editor, which was published in The Daily Iowan.

"This isn't about a backpack, it is

UISG shelves budget decision

Presidential candidates to square off at debate

Sara Teasdale
The Daily Iowan

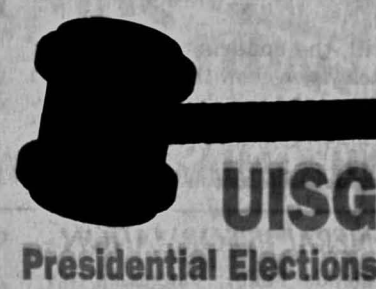

Less than a week before the votes are cast, UI Student Government candidates will approach the podium for the annual presidential debates.

The forum will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the second-floor ballroom of the Union. The Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Association are sponsoring the debate. UISG elections will be held Feb. 27 and 28.

This year, four presidential tickets are vying for top spots in the UISG. The tickets are:

• Juniors Christopher Styles and Nicole Ungeran for president and vice president, respectively.

• Juniors Benjamin Bonte and Laura Carstensen for president and vice president, respectively.

Styles said he and Ungeran met to prepare for the debate so they would be confident when answering questions from the panelists.

"We wanted to be really prepared," Styles said.

UI band veteran marches to different beat

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

When new Hawkeye Marching Band members meet public relations director John Gilbert, they may wonder why the former trombone player is still hanging around. But when band members find out how much success Gilbert has had with the band and they experience some for themselves, they realize how he became so attached to the organization.

Gilbert, a customer service representative at the UI Printing Department, said he stays involved with the band because it keeps him feeling young.

"It's a neat way to stay involved and feel semiproductive," Gilbert said. "Ask a kid in the band, and they'd just say I'm a leftover who won't leave. But I don't want to grow up, so I stay around."

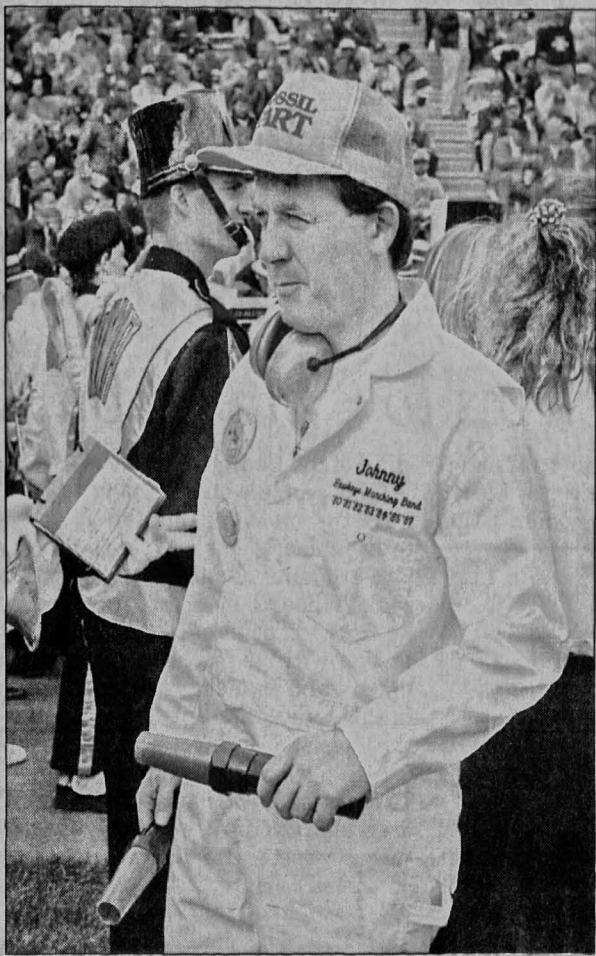

His responsibilities include putting out a media guide highlighting the band's show for each football game and helping with band publications. Gilbert's hard work is a tremendous asset to the group, said band director David Henning.

Gilbert said he has stayed with the band for so long, he holds the UI record. He played trombone for four years, was drum major for two years, left to attend school in Kansas and then returned to play another year.

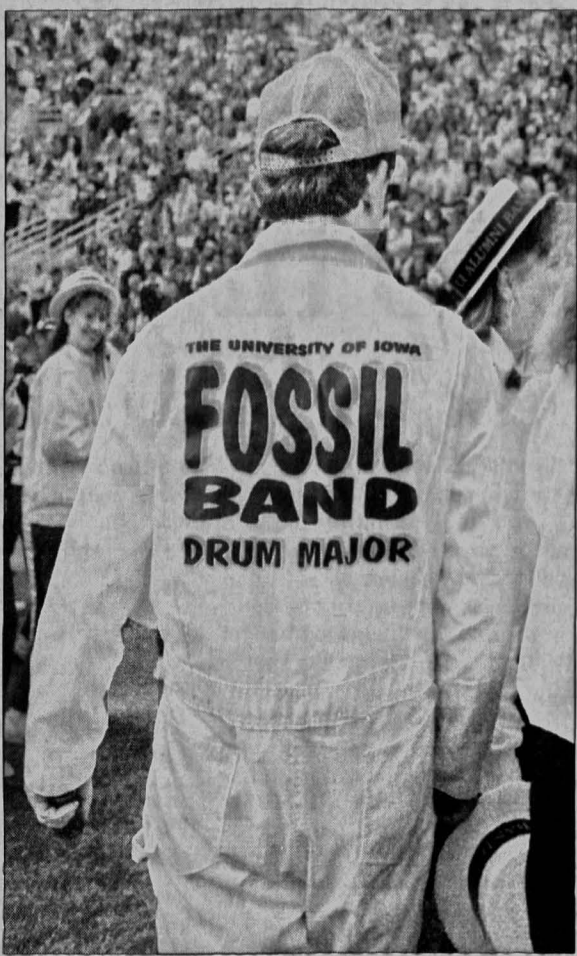

"I was the class clown of the band," Gilbert said. "It was rumored that I showed up for rehearsal in women's underwear and things like that, so there were doubts about me being named as drum major. But I quickly dispelled them at the beginning of the season."

Gilbert still has a desire to clown around and said he has the perfect opportunity to show it during Homecoming Week.

"He's always the funniest drum major in the alumni band," current

John Gilbert — bowling ball collector, former Hawkeye Marching Band member and drum major, as well as current public relations director for the band — participates in the alumni band during Homecoming.

drum major Charlie Taylor said. "Last year, he wore a white jumpsuit with 'fossil drum major' on the back."

Although Gilbert likes to joke around, his success as drum major is no exaggeration, Taylor said.

"As drum major, John was the heart and soul of a band that was always at the top of the Big Ten," he said. "He'll give his criticism during practices because he knows what a good show looks like. He gives his views — whether positive or negative — just to make the band better."

Gilbert isn't an ordinary administrator, though, and said he would rather hang out with the students than with other adults. Taylor called him an "interesting fellow," and one of his hobbies supports the description.

Gilbert began collecting bowling balls about 17 years ago in his hometown of Kansas City, Mo. He said he likes to give them as gifts because they're unexpected and cheap — he never pays more than $1 for a ball. In Kansas City, Gilbert often left bowling balls in strange places for people to wonder about as they passed by.

"I liked to leave them at construction sites," he said. "I always thought construction workers were cool guys and they'd get a laugh out of it. Even though I wasn't there when they'd find them, I still got a kick out of it."

Gilbert said his unusual hobby and sense of humor have resulted in rumors about him that circulate in the band.

"One kid told me he'd never forget the time I threw a bowling ball out the door of a bus on the interstate," Gilbert said. "Of course, I'd never do that. Over the years, stories get blown out of proportion. I will admit I wore women's clothes a time or two, but they make it sound like that's all I wore."

Gilbert gave Henning a bowling ball near the end of his first season as director. Henning said that when he was presented the ball, he finally felt he was an accepted member of the staff.

"I'm glad to be in the group that has (a bowling ball)," he said. "I think it's kind of his stamp of approval."

TV, rock 'n' roll stars say wedding vows in beach wear

NEW YORK (AP) — The bride and groom wore white, but just barely.

"Baywatch" star Pamela Anderson walked down the aisle in a skimpy white bikini for her wedding Sunday to Motley Crüe drummer Tommy Lee in Cancun, Mexico. Lee wore white Bermuda shorts and no shirt or shoes.

"The bride wore a very tiny — an extremely tiny — white bikini," Judge Pedro Solis told the Daily News.

It was the second marriage for Lee, 32. He was previously wed to actress Heather Locklear, who two months ago married musician Richie Sambora.

Original 'Brady Bunch' cast member autographs artwork

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — There she was, Jan from the original "Brady Bunch," signing autographs at a shopping mall. Must be another promo for the new "Brady Bunch" movie, right?

Wrong, said Eve Plumb, who has left her preteen Brady image behind for an art career and was busy signing prints of her work at the local mall.

Still, the enduring popularity of the television show that first aired in 1969 and the new hit movie featuring a new Brady family didn't hurt Monday's signing session, which drew a crowd of fans.

Plumb, 36, also acts in a children's TV show called "Fudge" but said she has put her Brady image behind her. "I think it's harder for other people than it is for me," she said.

Eagles take on too much during comeback tour

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — All the Eagles needed to do was follow the advice in one of their biggest hits: "Take It Easy."

The band, whose members once vowed they would reunite when hell froze over, got back together for a 70-concert tour last May but quickly had to cancel it when Glenn Frey needed colon surgery. They went back on the road last month.

"We needed a break. We were tired," fellow Eagle Don Henley said in Tuesday's edition of the Star Tribune.

"On the first leg, we were touring and recording at the same time, and we were also planning the TV show. It was too much. It really frayed everyone's nerves."

Construction sparks Field House parking plight

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

A new parking lot system with cashiers will mean an end to most metered parking near The Field House. The new system has garnered mixed reactions from students using it.

The UI Parking and Transportation Department is demolishing a portion of The Field House's storage lot to build a new $7 million ramp and a cashiered storage facility for the UI Hospitals and Clinics' Pomerantz Family Care Pavilion. The ramp is scheduled to open in the summer of 1996.

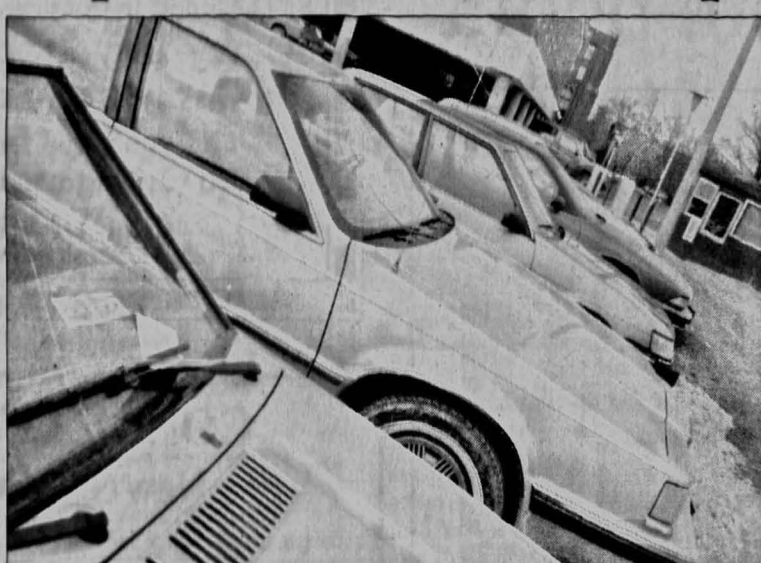

Before the facility's construction began, the lot contained 475 parking spaces, including 180 metered spots. However, nearly 275 faculty and staff permit parking spaces and all 180 metered parking spots were removed Feb. 13 for construction.

Instead of worrying about parking hassles, UI senior Chris Beemer began riding his bike to classes at The Field House.

"When I do bring my car, I park it alongside the road or over by Slater. Parking stinks because the meter people seem to wait around for your meter to run out just so they can give you a ticket," he said.

A cashiered lot was opened last week to maintain public access to parking in The Field House storage lot. Public parking in the lot is available for 50 cents an hour from 6:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 1 a.m. on weekends. About 202 parking spots are available.

Dave Ricketts, director of the UI Parking and Transportation Department, said demands for parking at

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

UI students displaying a B, J, R or S parking permit on their car could be given an additional $10 ticket if they park in the new parking development near The Field House before 3 p.m.

the UI never cease. The Field House's cashiered lot is just an early example of more parking changes to come, and more storage sites on campus will be converted into cashier facilities in the future, Ricketts said.

"It should be recognized that the changes (in costs) are not that dramatic because you already had to pay 40 cents an hour per meter," he said. "The only reason why we are demolishing (part of The Field House parking area) is because we needed parking to serve the new Pomerantz facility. The lot will be bigger than it is when we are finished, and we expect to have 300-plus more spaces."

Faculty and staff permit-holders were routed to remote spots in the Finkbine Lane and Myrtle Avenue storage lots and on the corner of Hawkins Drive and Melrose Avenue. Limited permit spaces are now available.

Students who have B, J, R or S permits are restricted from parking in the new lot before 3 p.m. because they have permits to park in other areas on campus.

It is too early to tell if the department will lose money due to a lack of funds from metered spaces because public parking patterns have not been established, Ricketts said. The storage area will be easier to use because people no longer have to worry about racking up expensive tickets from expired meters, he said.

Not all students said the changes in parking space are a problem.

"The new system has less problems because it seems easier to find a (parking) place throughout the day," UI senior Lori Schomberg said. "The only problem is that you have to pay at night now to park your car."

Some believe the changes will make parking more chaotic.

Students who don't park in the cashiered lot store their vehicles illegally in permit spaces that belong to students, faculty and staff in lot 14 next to Slater Residence Hall and alongside streets near Rienow and Quadrangle residence halls.

"This new cashier parking system is making it worse for people who live in Slater because people who have parking permits can't find spaces," UI junior Anitra Hutcherson said.

UI graduate student Vicki Swanson said before the lot used a cashier monitoring system, she would go to The Field House at 6:30 a.m. to work out and parked her car for free. But now, since the cashier begins work at 6:30 a.m., Swanson parks her car in the Slater lot at 6:30 a.m. and moves it at 7:30 a.m., when faculty permit parking begins.

But not everyone follows the rules, she said.

"What's so bad about this is that I know some people don't take their cars out by 7:30, when the teachers come," Swanson said. "All those people trying to find a spot for work are going to be crowded out because the people from The Field House are parking their cars in their permit spaces."

But Ricketts said lot 14 could also become a cashiered lot with gates by next summer. Action would then be taken to ensure that permit-holders can find parking spots.

Beep, beep

"Sometimes I forget that I have it on back there and look around like, 'What? What do you want?'" said David Jones, a UI senior majoring in liberal studies, of reactions to his bumper sticker. Jones said people respond by honking, yelling and waving at him. However, he said he hasn't had the experience of streaking himself.

Iowa law defines streaking as indecent exposure. In order to be a true streaker, the offender must be trying to arouse or satisfy their own or someone else's sexual desire and must know what they are doing is offensive. Indecent exposure is a serious misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in jail and up to a $1,000 fine.

FARMERS, SELF-EMPLOYED TO BENEFIT

Legislature forwards tax break bill to Branstad

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Legislature sent Gov. Terry Branstad a $15 million tax break Tuesday for those who are self-employed or obtain health-care coverage outside the workplace.

Along the way, legislators rejected an effort to balance insurance rates between men and women, then gave the tax break final approval 91-0, sending it to Gov. Branstad, who has pledged to sign it into law.

The new tax break proposal took many legislators by surprise. The deduction was proposed earlier this month when the Senate was considering a relatively minor health-care measure.

Rural forces succeeded in attaching an amendment allowing those who get health insurance outside the workplace to deduct the costs of those premiums from their income for tax purposes.

That break benefits farmers who must find their own health-care coverage as well as those who work for companies which don't offer health insurance as a benefit.

Once that measure was attached, few were willing to quibble with the politically popular notion.

Rep. Jeff Lamberti, R-Ankeny, said the break puts the self-employed on a level playing field with businesses, which already can deduct their health-care costs as a cost of doing business.

The tax break was put off for a year while legislators decided where they'll get the $15 million to finance it.

The main fighting over the bill came when Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, sought to balance rates between men and women.

Her effort would have prohibited insurance companies from setting individual health insurance rates based on gender.

"The insurance companies want to divide us," she said. "They want to divide us on gender."

The House rejected her amendment 62-33 before sending the bill to the governor.

1.3 MILLION VISITED AREA IN 1994

Increased advertising fuels tourism boom

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

With more than a million people visiting Iowa City and Coralville last year, the increased tourism has kept phone lines tied up at the Convention and Visitors Bureau in Coralville.

The bureau increased its advertising late last summer after receiving a $15,000 grant from the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration, said Wendy Ford, the bureau's executive director.

As a result, the number of calls to the bureau's 800 number has doubled. Ford said there was a 40 percent increase in requests for information about the area in 1994; there were 3,278 requests for information in 1994, compared to 2,343 requests in 1993.

"The floods did less damage to our tourism industry than to communities that depend on it — for example, the Amana Colonies."

tion about the area in 1994; there were 3,278 requests for information in 1994, compared to 2,343 requests in 1993.

"I'm looking for a big increase in tourism when (the tourism season) starts in late April this year," she said.

Ford said there was a 10 percent increase in tourism in 1994, caused by the 1.3 million people who were drawn to athletic events, festivals, local attractions and hospitals in Iowa City and Coralville.

The 1993 floods had little effect on the number of tourists in the area, Ford said.

"The floods did less damage to our tourism industry than to communities that depend on it — for example, the Amana Colonies," she said.

Ford said there is no definite monetary amount of total revenues generated from the increased tourism. She said people come to the area for different reasons. Those visiting the hospitals generally spend less than people who are on vacation.

However, Ford said local hotels saw a 7.5 percent increase in guests during 1994. Those hotel guests contributed $20.4 million to the area.

Ford said the main attractions in the Iowa City-Coralville area include the Old Capitol, the UI Museum of Natural History, the Iowa City Jazz Festival and the Iowa Arts Festival.

The Museum of Natural History, located in Macbride Hall, was affected by the bureau's increased advertising, said David Brenzel, the museum's program coordinator.

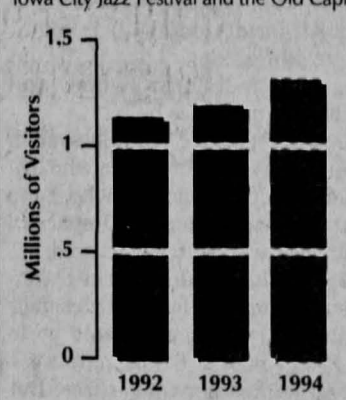

"We had noticed a 6 percent increase," Brenzel said. "It was real exciting to us. We hope it sets a trend going in the future."

He said tallying and sampling of visitors is carried out in various parts of the museum by employees. He also said in the past, the staff never advertised the museum but depended on the bureau to do the job. The museum's staff will advertise it for the first time later this year with profits from its gift shop.

Brenzel said the museum now offers Spanish and Japanese written guides through part of the museum. He added that the guides have increased the number of foreign visitors, but the majority of visitors are from the Midwest.

The Old Capitol also had an increase in tourism in 1994. Ann Smothers, the Old Capitol's secretary, said there were 25,446 visitors in 1994, compared to 22,015 in 1993 — a 16 percent increase. She said the Old Capitol does not have an advertising budget and attributes much of the increased tourism to the bureau's advertising.

The Firefighters Memorial, located in Coralville, is a new attraction for tourists. It commemorates Iowa firefighters who have died in the line of duty. Ford said it is one of only two such memorials nationwide.

The memorial has a visitors' center with exhibitions, a bronze statue of a firefighter rescuing a child and a memorial wall with an eternal flame.

Ford said tourism is Iowa's third-largest industry — and it's growing. "There is a nice steady increase in tourism money generated in the state as a whole," she said. "We would seek to benefit from that."

According to a 1993 study by the Iowa Welcome Center, an average travel party consisting of 2.8 people spends $115 a day in Iowa.

Ford said the best market for the area's tourism is the upper Midwest. She also said more Iowans are touring their state.

"I think Iowans themselves are discovering there's a lot to do in Iowa," she said.

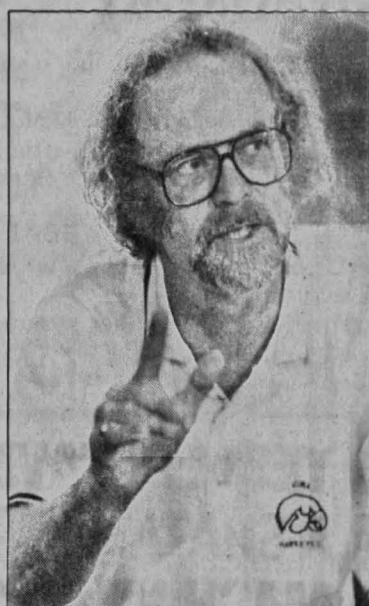

Kinsella pitches newest fiction

The Daily Iowan

Novelist and UI Writers' Workshop graduate W.P. Kinsella will bring baseball fiction to Iowa City tonight.

Kinsella — whose 1982 novel, "Shoeless Joe," became the movie "Field of Dreams" — will read from his new collection of short stories, "The Dixon Cornbelt League," at 8 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium of the Main Library.

Kinsella is visiting Iowa City as part of the "Live from Prairie Lights" reading series. The readings, broadcast by radio station WSUI and sponsored by Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., are free and open to the public.

Doctors to transplant baboon marrow to AIDS patient

ATLANTA (AP) — In a sign of doctors' growing desperation in the fight against AIDS, a patient with the disease will soon receive a bone marrow transplant from a baboon to rebuild his ravaged immune system.

The transplant, described Tuesday at a conference sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, is meant to resupply the human bloodstream with baboon blood cells, which do not get infected with the AIDS virus.

"Given the fact that there is no treatment for AIDS, people have been very comfortable with moving ahead," said Dr. Suzanne Ildstad, who is directing the experiment.

One earlier attempt at the procedure has failed, but animal experiments suggest that this time the transplant might work, thanks to a new discovery in immunology.

Many questions remain, however, including whether baboon blood cells can carry out the same jobs inside a person as human cells do.

Dr. Fritz Bach, a cross-species transplant researcher at Harvard Medical School, said he doubts it will work.

"I have concern about how long the cells will survive," he said. "I would be surprised — pleasantly — if it fulfills everything we hope it will."

Ildstad said the experiment will take place sometime in the next few months and a terminally ill AIDS patient has already been picked to receive the therapy. University of Pittsburgh officials say the operation will be done at San Francisco General Hospital.

Man makes record-breaking trip in hot-air balloon

CHICAGO — A stockbroker flew his balloon into Canada on Tuesday, becoming the first person to successfully fly solo across the Pacific Ocean.

Steve Fossett, 50, also broke the distance record of 5,208 nautical miles, according to his flight crew.

"He's very laid-back about it," flight manager Alan Noble said. "When he crossed the coast, he said, 'I've flown the Pacific. I'm over Canada.' No 'Whoopie!' or anything."

Fossett likely was a little too cold and tired for elation. He planned a landing attempt late Tuesday despite a warning from his ground crew that the winds were too high.

Soon after Fossett took off from Seoul, South Korea, on Saturday, the two propane heaters in the balloon's gondola failed. Fossett pressed on, enduring temperatures between 4 degrees below zero and 10 degrees with only a sleeping bag to keep him warm in the cramped gondola. He had to keep his drinking water close to his body to thaw it.

Throughout the trip, Fossett could sleep for only three hours at a time because he had to check the balloon's position, said Timothy Kemper, the flight's U.S. project manager.

Detective presents murder scenario

Linda Deutsch

LOS ANGELES — Nicole Brown Simpson's killer probably attacked her first, then jumped Ronald Goldman, a detective testified Tuesday, citing the lack of blood on the bottom of Brown Simpson's bare feet.

Detective Tom Lange, in his second day of testimony at O.J. Simpson's murder trial, depicted a ferocious struggle between Goldman and the killer outside Brown Simpson's condominium on June 12.

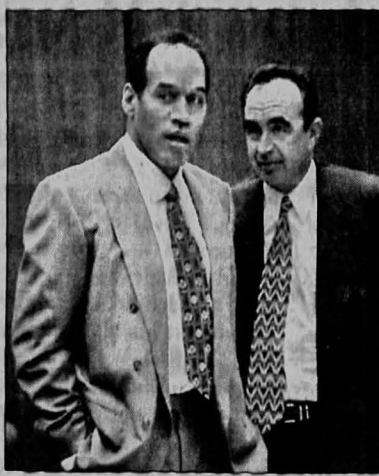

As Lange commented unemotionally, Prosecutor Marcia Clark flashed bloody photographs on a 7-foot courtroom screen, including one of Brown Simpson's bare feet wedged under the bottom of the gate to her condo.

Brown Simpson "perhaps went down initially before a fight really ensued with the other victim," Lange said. Brown Simpson "obviously didn't walk through the blood during the struggle," the detective said.

Clark then showed photos of Goldman's crumpled body, including one not seen before: a close-up of his torso and blood-soaked jeans. The photograph brought gasps from his stepmother and sister in the courtroom.

Lange said there was blood on the soles of Goldman's white shoes, and blood soaked through one toe, indicating he had struggled with his assailant while Brown Simpson's blood flowed nearby.

Earlier Tuesday, a maid who could give Simpson an alibi for the night of the murders was ordered to appear in court Friday. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito will then decide whether to videotape her testimony for possible use later or whether to interrupt the prosecution's case and let her take the stand immediately.

The judge acted after Simpson's lawyers warned that the witness, Rosa Lopez, may flee to her native El Salvador because of what she feels is harassment from the news media.

The defense says Lopez, a maid for a Simpson neighbor, will testify that she saw Simpson's white Bronco parked in the street outside his house at 10:15 p.m. on June 12, the time prosecutors say the murders took place.

With no known witness to the crime and the coroner unable to fix the time of death, prosecutors have relied on testimony about Brown Simpson's barking dog to establish when the murders took place.

"The focal point of this witness's testimony ... is presently opposed by a dog," defense attorney F. Lee Bailey told the judge in asking him to preserve Lopez's testimony. "A dog has announced that murder was occurring at 10:15."

LAW PERMITTING DISCRIMINATION STUDIED

High court agrees to hear Colorado gay rights case

Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court set the stage for its most significant gay rights ruling in a decade, agreeing Tuesday to decide whether states can forbid laws designed to protect homosexuals from discrimination.

The court said it will review a Colorado constitutional amendment that would cancel local laws protecting gays from bias in employment, housing and public accommodations.

The amendment, approved by Colorado voters in 1992, was struck down by state courts for denying homosexuals an equal voice in government.

State officials say voters have the right to prevent homosexuals from being given preferred legal status. Gay rights advocates say local anti-discrimination ordinances extend civil rights protection to homosexuals but grant them no special privileges.

"The rights of any minority should not be swept away by popular vote," said Kevin Cathcart of the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Will Perkins, whose Colorado for Family Values group wrote and campaigned for the amendment, said homosexuals are not entitled to the same civil rights protection as ethnic minorities or the disabled.

Voters in Oregon and Idaho defeated anti-gay rights amendments last November. Eight states provide some sort of civil rights protection for homosexuals: California, Connecticut, Hawaii, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, Vermont and Wisconsin.

The Colorado gay rights case does not address homosexual conduct. But the high court's ruling, expected by July 1996, could provide insight into the justices' views on the continuing validity of a 1986 Supreme Court ruling that lets states outlaw consensual homosexual conduct.

REPUBLICAN NOMINATION

Considering candidates

It was all smiles and baby kissing in New Hampshire this weekend as an army of Republican presidential hopefuls descended on the state in preparation for the nation's first real Republican primary in 16 years. In spite of all the smiles, there is something quite disturbing in this onslaught of early campaigning. With the primary still almost a year away, it appears as if politicians almost have to give up their work in Washington, D.C., (or Pennsylvania or Indiana) to campaign full time.

Phil Gramm of Texas and Bob Dole of Kansas — both considered early front-runners in the Republican race — were among the many possible candidates who took time out from their regular jobs to show their wares at a dinner funded by the New Hampshire Republican Party. Iowa will be the next stop for many of the same people, and the media attention will probably be just as intense.

Dole vowed not to get into a dirty campaign, but if possible nominees are already lining up for attention, serious mudslinging can not be far behind. Gramm was actually able to throw mud and put his foot in his mouth all in the same motion when he criticized Supreme Court Justice and New Hampshire native David Souter.

The possibility of a knockdown-dragout fight seems likely when considering the possible candidates. Among the hardhitters are Gramm, Dole and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander. Conservative columnist Patrick Buchanan will be taking another stab at presidential politics and Arlen Specter, a senator from Pennsylvania, brought a pro-life platform to the party, indicating that the issue may once again become a thorn in the Republicans' side despite all their efforts to the contrary.

Unmentioned in all the media focus on the hopefuls was the fact that a number of prominent figures have dropped out because of their distaste for the fund-raising game. Jack Kemp, Dick Cheney and Dan Quayle all cited the unpleasantness of having to raise funds as major reasons for their departure from these early political parades.

One is left to wonder whether those people who do decide to run are able to perform their jobs, if they are still in office. It takes a tremendous amount of money to run a political campaign and an even larger amount of energy, manpower and time to raise that money. According to a New York Times story, Gramm will try to raise more than $44 million for the nomination.

Meanwhile, Congress has put campaign-finance reform on the back burner in favor of more popular measures, such as the balanced-budget amendment. The November election was an example of how ugly politics takes a lot of time and a lot of money. Congress should act to curtail spending and limit the amount of time a candidate can spend campaigning.

RECOGNIZING YOUR NEEDS

Solitude is a reality escape

Our college years may be some of the best of our lives. We've been told this by multiple sources in a variety of ways, and we can discover this for ourselves. We meet new people every day; we don't have to spend seven straight hours for five days a week in classes we have little choice in taking; and, of course, we live away from home, free from a lifetime chained to our parents. This actualizes every student's fantasy: no one to make you do your homework or even go to class; no one to tell you what, where, why, when and how to do anything; and most of all, you can party as much as your body and mind will allow.

As we are busy "finding ourselves" in this Disneyland, responsibilities and other pressures can wear us down. A college town is basically a youth-oriented town with constant commotion and distractions. Sometimes we can be overstimulated because we neglect to make time to be by ourselves. Whether people are too insecure to be in public by themselves (excluding the walk to class) or that there's no opportunity to be alone, it's crucial to find some form of solitude.

As cheesy or absurd as it may sound, sometimes there's nothing more invigorating than taking a trip by foot, bike, rollerblades or skateboard to a less populated and more natural setting such as Hickory Hill Park, Lake Macbride or the Coralville Reservoir. This is about the only opportunity to escape all the sounds, smells and annoyances that surround us day in and day out.

A natural high is reached as fresh air fills your lungs, a change of visuals give your eyes a rest and the forgotten scent of mud and trees overwhelms your olfactory nerves. The experience is even more relaxing for the simple fact that there's no particular destination, no time constraints, no eyes watching you and no one you have to communicate with or waste breath on.

Passing through residential neighborhoods is an experience of its own when people out on their lawns greet you and even the dogs and cats remember you from past trips. The freedom you feel is more meaningful and respectable than exaggerating the thrill of freedom away from your parents.

Give yourself the credit of being confident or content without the crutch of a clique to maintain an image. It's for your own mental and physical well-being to find solitude in an escape that is always there for you and you alone.

CHELSEA CAIN

Bob Dole: a glob of Ronald Reagan-shaped goo

I had a dream a few months back that Bob Dole came to my house dressed like a beggar to teach me about trickle-down economics. He had on the cutest tan corduroy hat with ear flaps and my red plaid Pendleton wool jacket, so I opened the door to let him in. But at exactly that same moment, his head exploded. It shot off his neck like a Pez dispenser and then burst apart like one of those watermelons David Letterman is fond of throwing from the roofs of tall buildings. Luckily, the screen door prevented me from getting drenched in blood and brain matter, but my plaid Pendleton wool jacket was torn to pieces by all the splintering skull fragments.

I ran out onto the porch and shook his now headless body by the shoulders. "My God!" I cried. "Are you OK?" He didn't respond, and I thought he was ignoring me, so I shook him harder until his arm fell off.

I don't dream a lot about Bob Dole; in fact, I am pretty sure that this is the only dream I have ever had about him. I probably wouldn't even have remembered it if I hadn't seen him interviewed by David Frost last Sunday and noticed something very peculiar. I was sitting on the floor of my living room only half watching the show, when Frost asked Dole about his campaign platform, and — I swear to God — out of the corner of my eye I saw Dole morph into a formless shell of liquid metallic mass. The glob hovered for a minute and then, with a horrible clarity, it reshaped itself in the exact form of Ronald Reagan.

I sat there stunned, as the Grotesque Metallic Ronald Reagan Shaped Thing went on to stumble out its platform of leadership, strength and national security. Frost sat across from it calmly, surely attempting to stall it while a group of sound technicians readied to pounce. But there were no technicians, and Frost continued to nod and adjust his glasses as the Grotesque Metallic Ronald Reagan Shaped Thing babbled and shimmered under the studio lights. Could it be that no one noticed, I wondered? Were they all blind?

Pacing the floor of my apartment furiously, I considered my options. I could call the Public Broadcasting System — surely Bill Moyers or Carl Sagan would be interested. I could call the White House directly, but after that nasty letter I sent when I didn't receive my autographed photo of Socks, I wasn't sure I could get through. I could ignore it and pretend the whole thing was some sort of psychotic episode induced by too many late nights reading Burroughs. But did Charlton Heston ignore the Statue of Liberty in "Planet of the Apes"? Did he go about his business, pretending he hadn't seen it? No. I had to do something, so I ran to the phone and called my friend Laura.

"Did you know that Bob Dole is really a gelatinous glob of Ronald Reagan-shaped goo?" I screamed.

"You've been reading 'The Nation' again, haven't you?" she responded calmly.

It was true — I had — but I denied it anyway. "We're all in danger!" I screamed into the receiver. "We're all going to be murdered!"

She sighed. "Yes," she said. "All right. Do you want me to sign another petition?"

It was clear that I was not going to be taken seriously.

I mumbled something incoherent into the phone and hung up. The Grotesque Metallic Ronald Reagan Shaped Thing was shaking David Frost's hand, sending small ripples up its shiny arm. Then, as the credits began to roll, the monster slowly morphed back into its original form.

This was last Sunday, and I have been working tirelessly ever since to organize. We are a small ragtag band of rebels, but we are dedicated to warning others of what lurks beneath Dole's skin. We have a year before the presidential campaign begins, and we hope by then to have informed the citizenry through public demonstrations and subliminal messages we are currently running in The Add Sheet.

Our numbers are small now, but membership is growing, and we shall prevail. If you are interested in joining and should need to contact any of us, look for a college student wearing an outfit entirely from The Gap and then thump him or her on the forehead with your left hand. Should these people look bewildered or run after you, do not be alarmed. They work for us and are only putting on a show for whoever might be watching.

Act now, for if the Grotesque Metallic Ronald Reagan Shaped Thing is allowed to take power, it will surely make metallic goo of us all.

Asexuality: Maybe dating isn't all that bad

What is that blissful state, that euphoria, that nirvana of independence when you don't care whether you ever go out on another date? It's the joy of being oblivious to all men and women no matter how debonair they may be and a time when advances are simply brushed off without a thought.

I like to call it asexuality. Lately I've been pondering why those moments of freedom are so fleeting. If I were asexual, I'd have so much extra time. I'd never worry about what to wear, what to say or just where that next special someone was lurking.

And I'd be on every talk show in the country. After the music dies down from the opening of "Tami's Talk Show," a terminally cute blonde of indiscernible age walks out, waving to a studio audience as they clap happily. She then turns to the camera and begins to talk to it as if it was her best friend.

"You know those times after a big breakup when you just don't care whether anyone in the world finds you the least bit attractive? We've all been there, right?" She giggles and continues, "Well, today we're going to talk to a group of people who claim they never even think about sex. They're self-proclaimed asexuals!"

"Our first guest is a journalist from Iowa who says she first realized her true identity as a senior in college."

The TV audience is allowed a look at the lone woman on the stage as the name "Betty" is captioned at the bottom of the screen. She is obviously trying to protect her identity by wearing dark glasses and a bad red wig, although a dark curl peeks out from under it. The camera pans across the eager audience.

"Being asexual means that you don't want or need sexual relations with anyone — male or female. Is that right?" Tami begins.

The young woman solemnly nods yes.

"Betty. That's not your real name," the host says. "Could you tell our audience why you're afraid to give your true identity?"

"I've been consistently harassed by both the film and advertising industries since I first went public about my asexuality three years ago. They're afraid that their market will dry up if more Americans feel it's OK to be up-front about their lack of interest in sex."

Tami looks understanding, then asks with even more concern, "How did your parents react when you came out about your asexuality?"

Betty shuffles uncomfortably. "Well, I guess they were pretty confused at first, especially when they got the dictionary out, and it mentioned the ability to reproduce alone. Of course, humans can't do that without the help of technology."

"So why have you become vocal about your sexual orientation?" the host asks.

"It's really very simple, Tami. I'm here to fight for all the asexuals out there who are just as sick of watching couples as I am. Everywhere I go, there are blatant shows of heterosexuality. I don't care what they do in the privacy of their own homes, but I don't think that I should have to be exposed to that kind of behavior."

Indignation ripples through the audience, and Tami doesn't miss a beat. She shoots up the aisle to a slightly balding man in a suit.

"So why don't you just join a cloister?" he asks in a sarcastic tone.

"I'm really too materialistic for that kind of lifestyle," Betty replies.

A woman with big hair and large tacky earrings waves her hand wildly until Tami reaches her and shoves the microphone into her face.

"So you think that everyone should be like you?" she spouts while pointing at Betty.

"No, not everyone. But it sure would cut down on social ills like sexually transmitted diseases, AIDS, abortion and divorce. In fact, I was talking with House Speaker Newt Gingrich just the other day, and he really likes the idea of asexuality except for the single-parent thing. He even mentioned the possibility of frontal lobotomies for welfare recipients in order to help them on their way to asexuality."

The host runs down the steps to a young man wearing an "I love New York" sweatshirt.

"OK. So let me get this straight. You're not a cross-dresser, a hermaphrodite, or a man trapped in a lesbian's body. Are you at least androgynous?"

Tami quickly jumps in. "Now it's time to invite our next guest. She's an asexuality specialist who has written such books as 'I'm OK, I'm OK' and 'Asexuality — Not Just For Spores? Please welcome Dr. Janet Reno.'"

The attorney general walks out smiling and waving, then takes a seat next to Betty.

"So doctor, tell us: Does asexuality really exist?" the host asks.

"No. It's virtually impossible for a human being to be asexual. They might lack sex drive, but this doesn't constitute asexuality."

"But what about people like Betty? Is she just crazy?"

"I wouldn't go that far, but she's suffering from a serious case of denial. My guess is that she had a series of bad dating experiences."

"But why, then, is there such an increasing number of people like Betty?" Tami probes.

"Well, most of the proclaimed asexuals in the United States are religious zealots or involved in 'chaste until hitched' groups. A small minority of them — like Betty — broke under the pressure of the 'Contract With America.'"

"OK. Let's take a commercial break, and when we come back, we'll meet Betty's family," the host says in her most bubbly voice.

The music blares, and Tami steps onto the stage to speak with the doctor as Betty looks around uncomfortably.

Hmm... maybe dating isn't all that bad.

Certification of plumbers supported

To the Editor:

We all know the image of the plumbing and heating contractors: overpaid, overweight, undereducated and underdressed. What a terrible injustice to these men and women who have saved more lives in the last 60 years than all the doctors put together. How, you say?

More than 60 years ago, 100,000 people died annually in the United States from diarrhea-enteritis and dysentery-related diseases, and 23,000 died from typhoid fever. Modern plumbing and heating contractors have cut this down to only hundreds of cases a year by providing healthy, safe and comfortable living and eating environments today. We deal directly with clean air, clean water and sanitary waste removal in today's world. We don't have to be state-tested or certified like barbers, lawyers and realtors. In most areas of Iowa and even Linn County, people work in this industry for customers or themselves and risk health and lives because of ignorance. We, as the people of this industry come to your home or place of business, do our work, protect your health and guarantee our work at no additional cost. Do your doctors or lawyers at $150 an hour do this? Please support your local plumbing, heating and cooling contractor, who supports you. Please support our state bill for testing and certification in our industry. Call your state representative or senator today.

CAF wishes to retain student group status

To the Editor:

In reading the article titled "UI chiefs take time out for teaching" (DI, Feb. 13), I was dismayed by the hypocrisy of Dean Phillip Jones.

In the article, it states, "Jones said during his years of teaching, he has encouraged UI students to voice their opinions and beliefs — even if they are different from ideas he has presented." Could this be the same Dean Jones who has been tireless in his efforts to silence the Campaign for Academic Freedom, a group made up largely of UI students who have been attempting to voice their opposition to the classroom materials policy, which in itself limits the academic freedom which Dean Jones claims he has always encouraged?

If Dean Jones is so concerned that students be able to voice their opinions, why has he threatened to revoke the student group status of CAF for doing just that? It is very difficult for me to accept the truth of Dean Jones' words, given his past and current treatment of CAF. In fact, in view of his record of supporting the policy and his continuing attempts to squash CAF, it would seem to me that his goal is in fact to discourage students to voice their opinions. If you support CAF's efforts and would like us to remain a student group, come to the upcoming hearing of the Student Activities Board.

State killings cannot be revoked

To the Editor:

In the Iowa Statehouse, as well as in the letters to the editor, people are clamoring for a drastic reduction in appeals for those convicted of capital murder. These people want to restrict the due process rights of those facing the death penalty in order to save taxpayer money and hopefully increase the deterrent value of capital punishment.

There are 451 persons with whom these people should speak. They were sentenced to die at the hands of the state between 1973 and 1992. They represent one-tenth of all those sent to death row during this period. One out of 10. Four hundred fifty-one men and women all acquitted of the crimes for which they were sentenced to die. Innocent life saved from the executioner by an appeals process described by many as a waste of the taxpayers' money.

Many people claim the death penalty would deter and be more affordable if it were carried out quickly and efficiently. If we killed people within weeks of their convictions, that would probably be true. Of course, it would also be true that, using past experience as a guide, more than 10 percent of those persons executed would be innocent.

When the state kills, the deed cannot be revoked. If we rush to judgment and callously accept the state execution of innocent people to save money, we have lost any and all claim to be a civilized society.

Implementing agenda may undermine beliefs

To the Editor:

The arrogance of faith continually displayed by Ralph Reed and other members of the Christian right is disturbing. In a recent article titled "Contract With America," Reed defended the Republicans' "Contract With America." He stated, "Critics charge that the 'Contract' ignores social issues. But people of faith know better." Implicit in this claim, of course, is that those who do not support the "Contract With America" are not "people of faith."

Reed commits a serious error, however, when he attempts to equate political beliefs with faith in God. For contrary to what Reed would have us believe, neither conservatives nor liberals have a monopoly on faith. Rather, faith is a powerfully personal animal that bestrides many beliefs along the political spectrum.

For example, in contrast to many "born-again evangelicals," one can exhibit tolerance toward homosexuals; advocate equal opportunities for minorities; support governmental programs, such as Head Start, that directly aid the family unit; promote limited regulation of imperfect markets; and still demonstrate a strong faith in a higher being. In fact, many of us outside the religious right believe that our views on tolerance and freedom better comport with biblical values than many of the stances taken by the Christian Coalition.

Reed should be careful when trying to implement his agenda of "faith" through the political system. Too successful a victory may be a Pyrrhic one, operating to exclude many Americans of faith, and in the end, undermining the basic tenets of his own.

To the Editor:

Hypocrisy: the feigning of beliefs, feelings or virtues that one does not hold or possess — or the discrepancy between what Dean of Students Phillip Jones says and what he does.

In the Feb. 13 Daily Iowan article "UI chiefs take time out for teaching," Jones claimed that he encourages UI students to voice their own opinions and beliefs — even if those beliefs differ from his. He stated, "It is part of what I believe is necessary for learning. We work hard to show students they have a right and responsibility to disagree with us."

Yet Dean Jones' record betrays his statement for the lie that it is. Over the past year, he has consistently sent UI Campus Security to the Pentacrest to photograph and identify Campaign for Academic Freedom members. Their "crime"? Voicing opposition to the homophobic UI classroom materials policy without Dean Jones' permission. Individual members of CAF did not feel particularly encouraged to disagree with the UI administration when in September, Dean Jones sent notice that CAF members may face suspension or expulsion if they continued to hold literature tables and rallies on the Pentacrest. Finally, Dean Jones has sicced the Student Activities Board on CAF, threatening to take away the group's "privilege" of asking his permission to speak out against the policy on UI property (indoors and out). What happened to our "right and responsibility" to disagree?

The truth is that Dean Jones has been harassing and attempting to intimidate CAF members ever since our first successful demonstration at an Iowa state Board of Regents meeting one year ago. Since that time, CAF has fought to keep academic freedom and the debate over it alive at the UI. Yet sometime in the next couple of weeks, the Student Activities Board will decide whether CAF should be allowed the privilege of free speech on UI (state) property. Join us in convincing the board that it is not CAF that should be on trial, but the UI administration. The charges: violation of the First Amendment right of UI students to peacefully assemble on the Pentacrest and protest the policies of our "leaders." If the people lead, the leaders will follow.

When Tsongas spoke last year at ISU, his subject was deficit reduction. He had a good rapport with the audience, and the UI crowd should expect the politician to field numerous questions, said Pat Miller, coordinator of ISU's lecture committee.

"It was a very lively discussion," Miller said. "He took questions all the way through. A number of faculty and students questioned him about the outcomes of some of his proposals."

Tsongas ran his ISU presentation as if he were speaking in a classroom, and he was accessible to audience members and personable when making requests of the ISU event staff, Miller said.

"He obviously had experience in the classroom. He had his chalkboard and his desk," she said. "He was quite a congenial person."

Tsongas is the co-founder of the Concord Coalition, a nonprofit group that campaigns for deficit reduction. The coalition approached the UI about scheduling a time for Tsongas to speak, Peebler said.

An ardent supporter of the balanced-budget amendment, Tsongas has repeatedly blasted President Clinton for not being aggressive enough in trying to cut the federal deficit.

The amendment to the U.S. Constitution — part of the Fiscal Responsibility Act in the Republican "Contract With America" — would allow the government to spend only as much money as it collects. The amendment passed the U.S. House of Representatives on Jan. 27 and is awaiting Senate discussion.

Tsongas has said he won't back Clinton for a second term in 1996 unless the president gets tough on the issue of deficit reduction.

The UI audience should anticipate much discussion during the lecture because the issue is important to Tsongas, Miller said.

"He's on a mission," she said. "And a person on a mission is always willing to talk."

SUPREME COURT

Dudziak said.

The internment of Japanese Americans in the aftermath of the attack on Pearl Harbor will also be addressed in Dudziak's presentation.

"The fact that the Supreme Court upheld the internment program shows that its vision of equality was profoundly limited," she said.

The critical look at the internment of Japanese Americans and Dudziak's knowledge of the Supreme Court's view of civil rights were among the reasons she was chosen in a nationwide search, said David Prine, director of the Supreme Court Historical Society, which is sponsoring the six-part series.

"She's done an excellent job on her work," Prine said. "Our committee felt she was the most eminently qualified person to speak on the subject."

Dudziak's interest in civil rights stems from work she did with the Center for Independent Living in Berkeley, Calif., after she graduated from college in 1978. She worked as a political organizer for the center on local, state and national levels. She said the experience gave her a new view of the law as a tool.

"It allowed me to see that law could be used as an instrument of social change," Dudziak said.

As a law student and doctoral candidate at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., Dudziak became more interested in law and history during a stint at the American Civil Liberties Union in 1983, where she did historical research on the Supreme Court case Brown vs. Board of Education.

Since the lecture slot was by invitation only, it is a great honor to have been selected, Dudziak said. UI law Professor N. William Hines, dean of the UI College of Law, said the invitation reflects well on Dudziak's work and on the UI as well.

"It's quite an honor for her," Hines said. "It's a very important national recognition that she's receiving solely for her work here at Iowa, and we're very pleased."

about your world view. I'm guessing that you feel like life owes you something. I don't think you get the paradox," she wrote. "The more acquisitive, greedy and self-promoting you get, the less you will find yourself actually getting much out of life. Sure, in the short run, you will receive, but eventually it will destroy you. It's not worth it."

Robin Wilson said her plea for the backpack's return was an unusual technique, but the couple were desperate after rummaging through dumpsters around the Union and reporting the theft to Public Safety.

"I guess I just can't quite understand because whoever did it didn't get much out of it for themselves," she said. "We're all students here, and we're all just trying to get by."

All bag thefts from UI buildings are reported to Public Safety. Randy Wilson said when he reported the theft of his bag to Public Safety, the officer on duty was not encouraging.

"The guy who took the report kind of chuckled and told me I could kiss it goodbye," he said.

However, Public Safety Lt. Mike Laing said many stolen items are recovered — some up to a year later and in the most unlikely spots.

"Usually, someone contacts us from maintenance or the custodial staff or someone out fishing," Laing said. "A lot of times (the thieves are) only taking what they want and throwing (the stolen item) away. We'll find it a year later under a bridge."

Randy Wilson said he will not question anyone who turns in the backpack.

"It's not at the level of being physically attacked, but it still leaves a sinking feeling in the gut," he said. "At this point, I'd love to see the stuff back so much, I wouldn't push things farther or ask questions."

Jeanette Byler, manager of operations at the University Book Store, said she was unaware of Randy Wilson's situation until she read his wife's letter in the DI. She said the bookstore doesn't get many calls about stolen bags, but she sympathizes with Randy Wilson and others who have had items stolen.

The bookstore tries to deter theft as much as possible, Byler said.

"We have quarter-deposit lockers, and they get the quarter back when they leave," she said. "And if they don't have a quarter and we aren't too busy, we will be glad to loan them one."

Clerks sometimes watch bags for store patrons, she said. During the rush at the start of each semester, a clerk is positioned by the cubicles at the front of the store to prevent theft of bags, Byler said. However, she said store managers would prefer that students didn't leave book bags and valuables in the cubicles.

"We really prefer you use the lockers and encourage you to not just leave things in the cubicles," Byler said.

She said she would consider placing signs about the lockers in a more prominent position at the store entrance.

Kerry Kaster, UI graduate student and assistant at The Field House, said most bags are stolen from outside the racquetball courts.

"We've had a real problem with people leaving their coats and bags outside the courts, intending to check on them, but then they get caught up in their game and forget about them," Kaster said.

He advised patrons to use the coin-operated lockers on the ground floor.

"It's unfortunate more don't want to use them," Kaster said. "We more or less have to tell them, 'Tough luck.'" pared for numbers in showing people we have concrete plans for what we'd like to do," Styles said.

Preparation for the debate requires being ready to answer any type of question honestly, Bonte said.

"I guess I'm ready for it," he said. "I just plan to answer the questions the best I can. I want to tell them what I'd like to see happen at the university and how I would get it done."

Making the people who oversee the UI answerable to students is one of Bonte's main goals in running for office, he said.

"A lot of what I'm interested in is making the organizations that control the university, such as the (Iowa state) Board of Regents and the Legislature, more responsive to student needs," Bonte said.

Financial aid may be a major topic of discussion at the debate, and Greenwalt said the subject is one of his ticket's major concerns.

"Financial aid is one of our big issues," Greenwalt said. "We want to hold hearings with students who have had problems with their financial aid to find out where the kinks in the programs are."

The pair have a number of points they want to address tonight, Greenwalt said.

"I think with the questions that are asked, (Sands) and I will be able to get out all the positions we want to talk about," he said.

Five panelists from the UI were selected by IFC-Panhel to ask the candidates questions and were chosen based on their involvement with the community, said IFC-Panhel Sen. Stephanie Tatum.

"The panelists are responsible to bring their own questions," she said. "They are going out in the community to find their questions. (The panelists) represent a large group of people, and they are active in the community, so I would suspect there to be a wide variety of questions."

The five panelists who were chosen are Gretchen Lohman, vice president of UISG; Melita Pope, president of the Black Student Union; Brian Kenner, president of the National Panhellenic Conference; Phil Thompson, president of the Graduate Student Senate; and Kristin Mensing, who has a seat on the Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee.

Lohman said cultural diversity, the criteria for the new UI president, the classroom materials policy, child care, tuition increases and graduate student representation will be the key issues at the debate.

"I think what I'll do is ask them things that have to do with duties of being vice president and president," she said.

BUDGET

ment violated its own constitutional rules at a meeting Tuesday night, it was forced to put the budget vote on hold.

After UISG listened to student organizations, it decided to table the budget to discuss new business. Then the senators realized that tabling the budget went against the UISG's constitution. After they realized the mistake, the senators decided to vote again on the budget. But they were too late because most of the senators had already gone home.

"At 9:45, the budget came up again, and there were only 16 senators there out of I don't know how many, and the budget failed," said Christopher Styles, UI junior and UISG senator. "Sixteen senators were left there to decide the fate of 119 student organizations, so UISG could not vote on the budget."

Senators were too confused about the budget process to vote Tuesday night anyway, Styles said.

Earlier in the night, representatives from 16 student organizations took the floor to express gratitude or resentment over the committee's final recommendations for the 1996 budget.

United Students of Iowa and the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment were two groups that criticized the recommendations.

The groups accused the committee of everything from having a hidden bias to mishandling the budget process.

The appeals process for the committee's allocated funds for 1996 began Feb. 13 for Class I student organizations — groups that serve the entire university. The proposed budgets were posted Feb. 10.

Tracy Kasson, executive director of USI, said the committee dealt with USI inappropriately. She said she received word in Des Moines from Todd Versteegh, the UI campus director for USI, that the group's budget was not itemized properly the night before the budgets were to be posted. She sent a fax of the new version to SGBAC the next day, but UISG said the improvements came too late, she added.

"They never came to me, and they know I handle the budget," she said. "They went to my campus director, and he was the one who contacted me. So I faxed it the next day, and they said it was too late."

USI asked to receive 75 cents per student. Last year, the group was allotted 65 cents per student. SGBAC's final recommendations for the 1996 budget requested that USI receive 3 cents per student.

"To be honest, I think it's extremely unjust, and what this will do is eliminate us," Kasson said. "Three students decided the fate for 25,000 students who benefit from this organization."

SCOPE also found fault in the budgeting process.

Eric Hanson, the director of SCOPE, said SGBAC had a hidden bias toward his organization.

According to UISG, SCOPE entered into a contract with SGBAC three years ago when SCOPE went into debt. The contract established that SCOPE would become a self-sufficient group once it began to make money. Hanson said the contract influenced the decision to make the budget cuts.

"I think they had their mind made up even before the budgeting process began with all of this talk about the contract," Hanson said. "I don't see them inquiring about where the money was spent and what the money is used for. They are trying to punish us for what we're doing."

SCOPE asked SGBAC for $2.86 per student. Last year, it received 80 cents. SCOPE was allotted 61 cents for the 1996 fiscal year.

Men's gymnastics moves up to No. 4 ranking

The Iowa men's gymnastics team climbed a notch to No. 4 in the national polls Tuesday after defeating No. 14 Illinois-Chicago last week.

Six other Big Ten schools are ranked in the Top 20, including Penn State (2), Ohio State (3), Minnesota (6), Illinois (9) and Michigan (11).

Individuals that are ranked include: Jay Thornton, sixth in parallel bars and 11th in the all-around; Aaron Cotter, 18th on the horizontal bar and 20th on still rings; Pete Masucci, 19th on the horizontal bar; Carlos Herrero, 13th on the horizontal bar; Dave Nemovitz, 15th on still rings and Hugh Lau, 18th on the parallel bars.

Negotiators meet again without progress

MILWAUKEE (AP) — With neither side carrying a new proposal and both suggesting little reason for optimism, baseball negotiators met Tuesday in acting commissioner Bud Selig's hometown to restart the stalled talks.

It was the first time representatives of the owners and union met formally since a Feb. 7 visit to the White House, when President Clinton's efforts at settling the dispute were rebuffed.

Mediator W.J. Utery, who shuttled between the two sides then, joined the meetings in Milwaukee, where Selig participated in just his fourth session since the strike began last Aug. 12.

Colorado Rockies owner Jerry McMorris said he hoped the "suggestions" issued to the parties by Utery two weeks ago would provide the framework for resuming bargaining. Utery later said his ideas didn't represent a final recommendation.

"That was the last plan on the table," said McMorris, one of the five management representatives at this two-day meeting. "I hope that's the one we work off of."

"I think there's a window here," he added a moment later. "If we made a deal now, we could get this behind us without the potential problems we could have in spring training."

The "potential problems" McMorris referred to could surface on March 1, when the California Angels are scheduled to play Arizona State in the first exhibition game.

Union head Donald Fehr says striking major leaguers will consider as a strikebreaker anyone who plays at a major league site or in a game for which admission is charged. Some managers and general managers reacted angrily to the edict, and Cincinnati and Texas have threatened to send minor leaguers home if they balk at playing in exhibitions.

Fehr did not comment again on the matter when he arrived in Milwaukee accompanied only by union lawyer Lauren Rich. Asked why the talks shifted to Milwaukee, Fehr replied: "Because Bud's here."

STILL ATOP THE CONFERENCE

Spartans hold off Wolverines

Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Jud Heathcote didn't let the euphoria of winning a close game against Michigan stop him from acting like a basketball coach.

"After I congratulated them for winning the game I reminded that they didn't follow instructions after the last timeout," the Michigan State coach said Tuesday after the No. 12 Spartans escaped with a 67-64 victory over the Wolverines.

to 14-11 and 8-5 in the conference.

"In the first half our offense was as good as we could want, but Michigan State hurt us with their fast break and we let them have too many second-chance baskets. Then Respert got hot in the second half and hit a couple of threes."

Michigan State led throughout the second half, but the Spartans didn't get a field goal after a jumper by Jon Garavaglia gave them a 65-60 lead with 3:03 left.

Each team had trouble scoring again until Maceo Baston put back Jimmy King's miss with a minute remaining to cut the margin to 65-62. Baston was fouled but missed the free throw.

Michigan got the rebound and Baston was fouled by Garavaglia after rebounding Ray Jackson's miss and he hit both foul shots with 37 seconds left to slice the Michigan State lead to one point.

Respert was fouled immediately on the inbound play and hit both free throws to push the lead back to three.

The Wolverines worked the ball for a final shot, but it was tipped away by Respert. Jackson recovered under the Spartans' basket and Michigan called timeout with 6.9 seconds left. Jackson's 3-point attempt with two seconds remaining fell short.

BIG TEN CONFERENCE

"I told them to let two seconds run off the clock and then commit a foul, but they let (Michigan) bring the ball down and gave them a good look at a 3-pointer. Both of our games against Michigan came down to a missed 3-pointer."

Shawn Respert and Quinton Brooks each scored 21 points to lead the Spartans (19-4, 11-3 Big Ten), who overcame a 41 percent shooting.

"We just didn't quite have enough tonight," said Michigan coach Steve Fisher, whose team fell

Mavericks overcome 21-point deficit

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Dallas guard Jim Jackson doesn't get frustrated when his shots aren't falling.

After missing 10 of 16 shots in the first half, Jackson scored 30 of his 44 points in the second half Tuesday night as the Mavericks rallied from a 21-point, third-quarter deficit to beat the Washington Bullets 102-97.

"If I have good shots and miss them, I can't get upset," said Jackson, who was 5-for-7 from the field and 6-for-6 from the line in the fourth quarter. "I don't try to force the shots. I just take what the defense gives me."

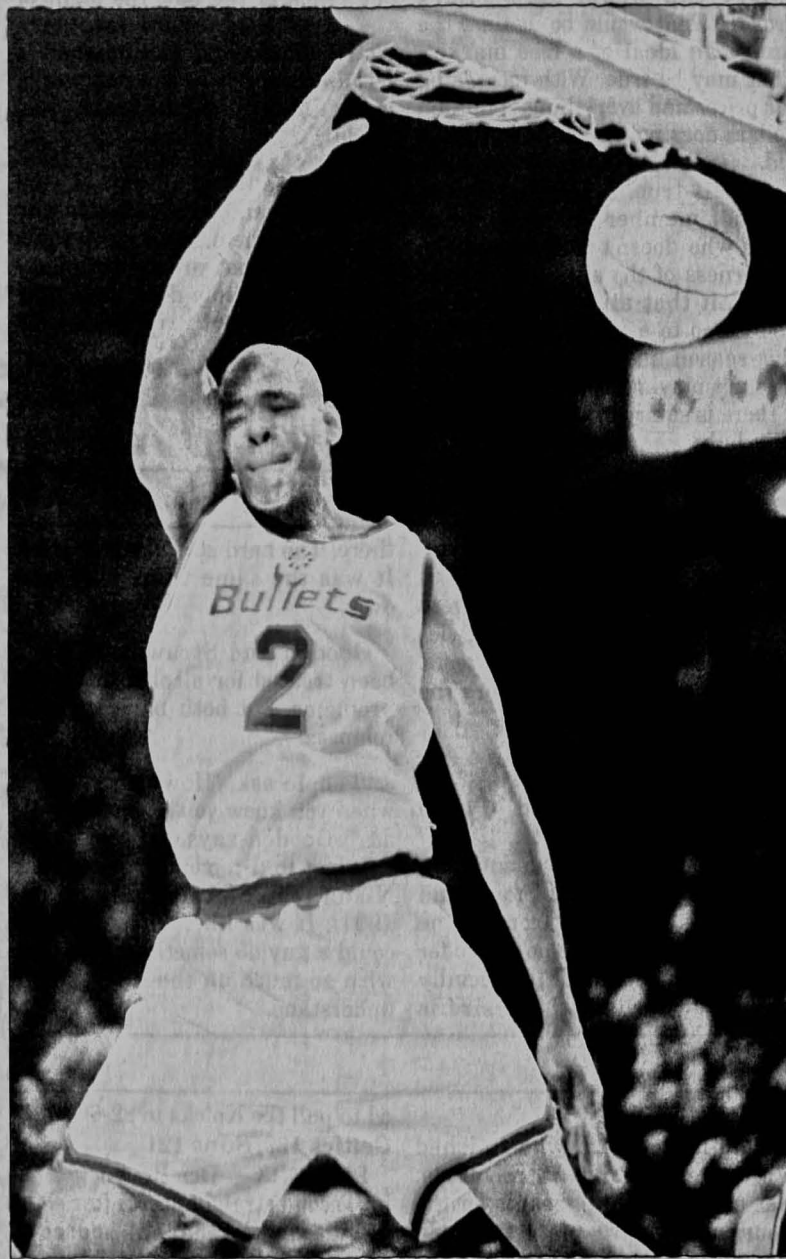

Jackson's layup put the Mavericks ahead for good, 99-97, with 41 seconds left. He also made a pair of free throws with 15 seconds remaining.

"He's their leader," Washington's Juwan Howard said. "We had a real tough time matching up defensively with him, especially late."

Reserve Lucious Harris scored a career-high 25 points for Dallas, which rallied after losing rookie guard Jason Kidd with a sprained ankle late in the first half.

Kidd fell to the floor with 2:21 left in the first half after getting tangled with Washington's Gheorghe Muresan under the basket. Kidd had to be helped from the court, but X-rays were negative.

Washington, which has lost five straight at home and 10 of 11 overall, got 30 points from Howard.

Washington Bullets Chris Webber slams one home against the Dallas Mavericks in the first quarter in Landover, Md., Tuesday.

Chris Webber added 18 points and Calbert Cheaney 15.

ATLANTA — Toni Kukoc has had a hot hand since the All-Star break, and the Atlanta Hawks did nothing to slow him down Tuesday night.

Kukoc hit his first seven shots and scored 21 points as the Chicago Bulls routed the Hawks.

"I was really tired, then the All-Star break recharged my batteries," said Kukoc, who was 10-for-14 from the field. "The days off helped me, helped all of us."

Kukoc is averaging 23 points in five games since the All-Star

Strawberry: We had a team full of drunks

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Former New York Mets star Darryl Strawberry says widespread alcohol and drug abuse hurt the team in the 1980s, according to an article in Sports Illustrated.

"If we wouldn't have partied so much, we would have won more," Strawberry, who played for the Mets from 1983-90, says in the Feb. 27 issue. "We had a team full of drunks. We'd go into a town and couldn't wait go out drinking and partying, always asking each other, 'Hey, where you going tonight?'"

"If we had 24 guys on the team in those days, at least half of them were hard drinkers or drug users. That was a hard-living team."

Strawberry and former Mets teammate Dwight Gooden are featured in a cover story entitled "The Dead End Kids." Both were National League Rookies of the Year, both have been troubled by alcohol and drug abuse, and both are currently suspended from major league baseball.

Former Mets trainer Steve Garland said that after Gooden got out of a rehab center in 1987, the pitcher told him that the team had

Baseball fan simply wants the game back

Dear Mr. Selig and Mr. Fehr, Hi, how are you? My name is Jon and I'm a baseball fan.

I think I first became a fan back in 1981. My dad was a big Yankees fan, so when they went to the World Series, it was a pretty big deal. I don't know how, but by the time the Series was over, I was a die-hard Yankees fan.

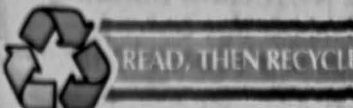

Strange, but there was a strike in 1981 as well.

Well, now it's 14 years later and things aren't going so well. Last year's World Series was wiped out and now it looks like this season is going to be played with players that I've never heard of.

Of course, both of you already know this. And I'm sure you have many good reasons for stopping major league baseball. I was just wondering if there was any way I could help restart it.

If it is more money you need, I'll see what I can do. While I don't make great money writing sports, my parents support me pretty well. If I play my cards right, I could probably give you both a couple hundred dollars a year. I don't know how you guys Millard, who was hospitalized with pneumonia and missed last Wednesday's 74-70 win at Minnesota, will not make the trip to Madison. Davis said Millard may begin practicing again later this week.

"Hopefully by Friday we'll have (Millard) back practicing and get him ready. I think that's probably the best approach given his physical condition," Davis said.

The return of Settles, whose back is still ailing, will provide some inside relief, but with Bowen, John Carter and Greg Helmers trying to pick up the slack, Griffith could figure on another big night.

The Bulls, taking advantage of five consecutive Atlanta turnovers, stretched the lead to 80-70 in the final 90 seconds of the period, and eventually extended it to 90-72 on a basket by Kukoc with 8:35 remaining.

B.J. Armstrong added 16 points and Scottie Pippen 15 for the Bulls. Will Perdue had 10 points and 11 rebounds.

THE NEXT GREAT BIG MAN?

Chicago high school star turns heads

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan has retired. Frank Thomas is on strike. Mike Ditka is on TV.

These days, the greatest show in Chicago sports is presented by an 18-year-old kid named Kevin Garnett.

Never heard of him? You will.

Garnett, a 6-foot-11 center for Chicago's Farragut High School, is part Moses Malone, part Alonzo Mourning, part Magic Johnson. And if his skills and body keep developing, he might just follow those players into NBA stardom.

College recruiters have been watching Garnett for years. NBA scouts are beginning to take note, too.

"The fact is, there are players his size in the NBA who don't have nearly as many skills," said Farragut coach William Nelson.

Saturday, more than 5,000 fans squeezed into DePaul's Alumni Hall and watched in awe as Garnett dominated Philadelphia's Roman Catholic, one of the nation's top high school teams.

Playing against 6-10 Lari Ketter, a Division I recruit, Garnett had 22 points, 16 rebounds, nine blocked shots and six assists. Those are close to Garnett's season averages for Farragut (22-1), AP's No. 1 Class AA Illinois team.

"Garnett is spectacular," said Dick Versace, the former Bradley University and Indiana Pacers coach who is now a broadcaster. "He has an unbelievable awareness of where everyone is on the floor and an uncanny willingness, for a star player, to pass the ball to his teammates. Plus, he's 6-11."

"When I saw Moses in high school, I knew I was seeing someone special. When I saw Mourning, I knew I was seeing someone unique. I get that same feeling watching this kid."

DePaul is high on Garnett's list, as is Michigan. Others in the running are North Carolina, Arkansas, St. John's and Illinois.

If Garnett doesn't do well enough on his college entrance exams, a possibility, he could opt to go right into pro basketball — as Malone, Shawn Kemp and Darryl Dawkins did before him.

"We've talked about it many times, and he's not thinking of going pro," Nelson said.

"He wants to prove that those saying he can't make it (academically speaking) are wrong. Going pro would be more cop-out than anything."

Garnett is more worried about the rest of his prep career than about the rest of his life.

Illinois playoffs start next week. "I'm not all caught up in the ratings or the hype," he said.

"I want to win. I won't accept losing."

Indiana coach Bob Knight reacts to a call during a Feb. 12 game against Purdue in Bloomington, Ind.

Hoosiers could be left out of Madness

Steve Herman
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — An NCAA tournament without Indiana? March Madness minus the General in the red sweater?

Unless the Hoosiers suddenly find their scoring touch, that could be the caper for a season that already has seen:

- a 50-game home-court winning streak snapped.
- 10 losses, the most since 1990.
- a loss to Michigan in which Indiana shot less than 30 percent.
- play so poor that coach Bob Knight had to deal with retirement talk and wondered out loud whether the new style of speed and 3-pointers had passed him by.

"I hate the clock and the 3-point shot," Knight said after a sloppy win over Northwestern. "I wish I had retired seven years ago and wouldn't have to put up with that ... because I don't even like the game."

Knight certainly can't like his position as his team bids for a 10th straight NCAA tournament berth. With five games remaining — all but one against teams with better overall records — and no postseason conference tournament, the Hoosiers (15-10, 7-6 Big Ten) probably would have to finish at least 18-12 to make the 64-team field.

"I don't have any pretense that we're a national contender," Knight said, after a loss to Michigan snapped the nation's longest home winning streak at 50 games last month. "I'd just like to see us develop an attitude toward play that makes us as good as we can be ... not game-by-game but possession-by-possession. Then it would be interesting to see what kind of team we have."

How could a team that was 21-9 last season and a preseason Top 10 pick fall so far? The answer is in the offense. Except for senior Alan Henderson, Indiana has none.

Opponents have been able to protect the middle, knowing the Hoosiers have no consistent outside shooter. Since the end of December, Indiana has not won more than two consecutive games.

"Usually, Indiana can beat you to death from the outside, but they've struggled with that this season, as we all know," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said.

Henderson, a 6-foot-9 senior, leads the Big Ten in field goal percentage at .594 and is second in scoring at 23.3 points a game. Forward Brian Evans, averaging 16.8 points and a team-high 3.2 assists, is the only other double-figure scorer but has been inconsistent.

As a team, the Hoosiers are shooting .474, their worst since Knight's first Indiana team went .454 in 1971-72. Even free throws, normally a point of Hoosier pride, are tough to make — .672 from the foul line is the worst since .644 in 1970-71, the year before Knight arrived.

In another loss at Michigan on Sunday, Indiana shot .296 and Henderson was held to 12 points on 4-of-13 from the field. The Hoosiers' season average of 75.2 points a game is the lowest since they averaged 71.2 in 1984-85, the last time they did not make the NCAA tourney.

Knight was asked if the Hoosiers stay after practice to work on shooting.

"No, we don't allow them to shoot," he said sarcastically. "We spend almost no time working on shooting. We practice our entrance and exit to the locker room."

Had he ever seen a poorer shooting performance?

"If I have, I blotted it out of my mind," he said.

With the graduation of Damon Bailey, Todd Leary and Pat Graham, all effective outside scorers, Knight has gone with freshmen. Three of them, 6-9 Andrae Patterson, 6-7 Charlie Miller and 6-3 Michael Hermon, have started recently along with Henderson and Evans; a fourth freshman, 6-2 Neil Reed, started 14 games before a shoulder injury limited his playing time.

Indiana's next game is on Saturday at home against Penn State.

THANKS TO STRIKE

Jays may relocate to Class A stadium

Ben Walker
Associated Press

DUNEDIN, Fla. — Fenway Park, Camden Yards ... and Dunedin Stadium?

Welcome to what is likely to become baseball's newest big-league park, a cozy place where the warning track is made of crushed seashells, the outfield billboards offer the grouper sandwich and the visiting clubhouse is being used by a high school team.

With only 6,218 seats, it would be the smallest stadium any major league team has called home apparently since the Brooklyn Bridegrooms played at 3,000-seat Washington Park in 1891. But it's also the Toronto Blue Jays' best hope to hold for regular-season replacement games, which is why three American League officials inspected it Tuesday.

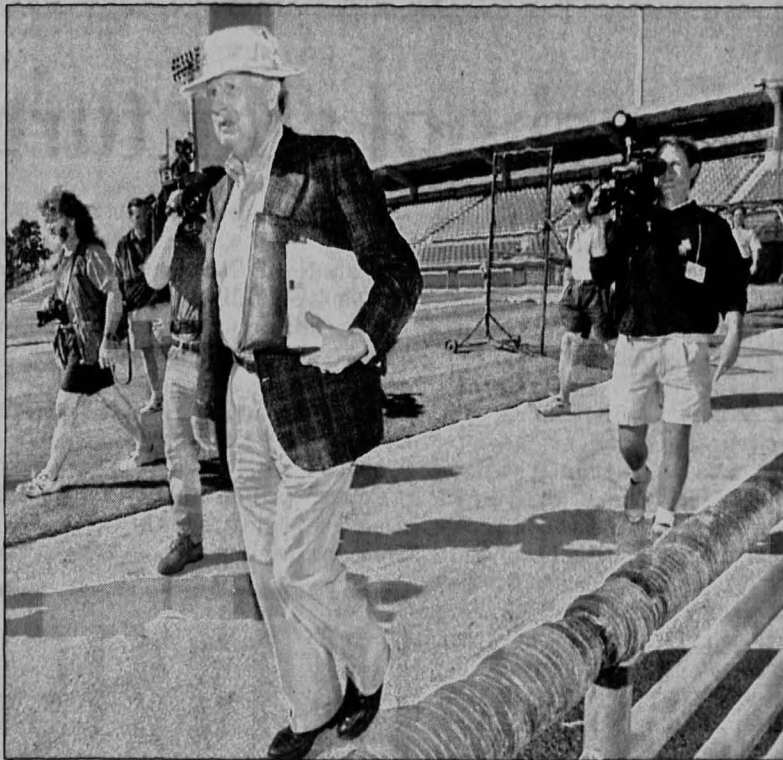

The Blue Jays are prohibited by Ontario law from using strike-breakers at the 50,516-seat SkyDome. They talked about going 20 miles south of Dunedin to the Thunderdome in St. Petersburg or even spending the whole season on the road, but said they'd rather play at their spring training park.

"Of all the Plan Bs, this is the most comfortable Plan B," Blue Jays general manager Gord Ash said. "We've tended to put all of our eggs in this basket."

After a two-hour tour, AL consultant Dick Wagner, umpire supervisor Marty Springstead and director of finance Derek Irwin said it seemed OK, all things considered.

"As long as it's up to snuff, and it appears it is, this is where they'll play," Irwin said.

The group will present its recommendations to AL president Gene Budig soon. A decision could come before March 1.

Associated Press

Dick Wagner, special consultant to the American League, tours Dunedin Stadium Tuesday in Dunedin, Fla. Officials from the American League toured the facilities in Dunedin to determine if the site will serve as the home stadium for the Toronto Blue Jays should the strike continue into the regular season.

Some improvements are needed, such as additional lighting, and would be made in time for Toronto's home opener April 3 against Seattle. Other fixes, such as lengthening the distance to the right-field plywood fence from 315 feet to the major league-prescribed 320 feet will be passed over.

A decision on whether to bring in temporary bleachers will be made after the Blue Jays' opening, three-game homestand. The next-smallest park in the majors is Fenway with 33,871 seats.

"Again, it's not major league players," Springstead said. "There are some things you're going to have to live with. You can't change them."

The schedule of the Class A Dunedin Blue Jays of the Florida State League would change. They have about eight home games that conflict with Toronto's games, and the result may be split doubleheaders.

But nothing ever could transform the little single-decked, grass-field park into the futuristic, retractable-roofed SkyDome.

At the SkyDome, there are color televisions in the dugouts and a McDonald's inside the stadium. A modern sound system booms rock music and an enormous video board advertises big companies.

At Dunedin Stadium, the manager's office in the visiting clubhouse has a TV that picks up a snowy, black-and-white picture and it takes a car to get to the nearest McDonald's. The loudest noise often come from elementary school kids on a playground right behind the left-field wall and the outfield billboards promote products like Molly Goodhead's grouper sandwich.

"Certainly when you go from 50,000 seats to 6,000 seats, it's a big difference," Ash said. "Certainly it's unusual. But we have to do what we have to do."

The lights are about Triple-A quality, but the field itself is at a major league level. The home clubhouse is carpeted, the visitor's clubhouse is smaller and used by Dunedin High School.

"It may not be the Waldorf-Astoria, but it's certainly adequate," Wagner said.

The eight-foot, wood wall in right is topped by a 10-foot chain link fence. It's 335 feet to left and 400 to center, and palm and pine trees hover above them.

Miami wants no part of strike

Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — The baseball strike has already frightened away one college baseball team, and another may pull out of the spring's first exhibition game.

The University of Miami will refuse to play a scheduled March 2 game against a Florida Marlins team made up of replacement players, and Arizona State will decide Wednesday whether to pull out of its March 1 game against the California Angels.

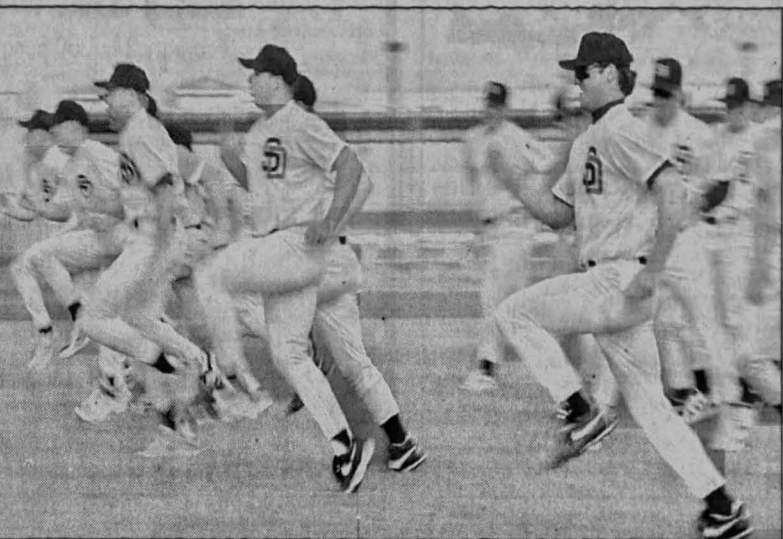

At least six other games between split-squad major-league teams have been canceled, and the potential exists for many more to be scrapped.

"I don't see anything positive coming out of getting involved in such a negative situation," Miami Hurricanes coach Jim Morris said Tuesday. "We don't have anything to do with the strike and we want to stay out of it."

Arizona State will hold a meeting in the morning to discuss the situation.

"I have concerns similar to Jim's," Sun Devils head coach Pat Murphy said. "The question is: Do we want to subject ourselves, and most importantly our players, to this situation?"

the Angels is the first exhibition of the spring, and the union says anyone who plays in it will be considered a strikebreaker.

Georgia Tech, Boston College and Stetson have games against major league teams March 2 and March 3. All three schools said they will play.

"If there's a picket line, we're going through it," Boston College coach Moe Maloney said. "It's a baseball game and we're playing it. It's something our kids will cherish, and that game pays for our Florida trip."

Morris, the Miami coach, said his team is in a somewhat unique situation because "all nine starters are future pros, and I want to keep my players out of it in any form or fashion."

His team is ranked No. 3 by Baseball America and No. 2 by USA Today.

"It's an honor to play the Marlins, and hopefully we will some day," he said.

Oklahoma's Calvin Curry is surrounded by fans Monday, following Oklahoma's defeat of top-ranked Kansas in Norman, Okla.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Jayhawks wilt with top ranking

Owen Canfield
Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Please don't mention to Roy Williams the bit about his Kansas teams having a hard time winning when ranked No. 1. He knows all about it, and really couldn't care less.

"If we go down in history as having the two shortest stays at No. 1 in the history of college basketball, I'd be thankful we got there," he said after the Jayhawks were upset by No. 25 Oklahoma 76-73 on Monday night.

Roy Williams, Kansas coach

The final buzzer sounded just five hours after Kansas was announced as the No. 1 team in the Associated Press poll.

A year ago, the Jayhawks moved up to No. 1 on a Monday afternoon and that night lost at home to Kansas State.

"We talked to our kids about it," Williams said. "I don't think it had any effect on my team."

In the first half, the Jayhawks (20-4, 9-3 Big Eight) were unable to go to their big men, a plan that has helped make them so successful this season. The trio of 7-foot-2 Greg Ostertag, 6-11 Raef LaFrentz and 6-10 Scot Pollard took just 10 shots in the first half, while rest of the team was taking 19 3-pointers.

"I think in the first half we were outplayed in every phase of the game," Williams said. "I also think I was outcoached in every phase of the game."

The Jayhawks looked better in the second half, pounding the ball inside and getting easy baskets. They trailed by 13 in the first minute of the second half, but came back to take a six-point lead with 8:45 to play.

"They had as much difficulty guarding us on the perimeter as we did them on the outside," Sampson said.

"Our strength down the stretch I thought was our versatility. Our guys are good catch-and-shoot guys. That's how we tried to attack them in the second half. Let's make them guard us."

Sampson has said many times that must rely only on Ryan Minor, who scored 28 points Monday night. That was proven true in the final eight minutes against Kansas.

Minor's only field goal during that time was a jumper with 7:57 left that brought the Sooners within 63-59. He didn't score again until he made two free throws with 12 seconds left — Dion Barnes, John Ontjes and Ernie Abercrombie did all the scoring in between.

"We're not very big and we're not particularly fast," Sampson said. "But we have a big heart, and that's what you can never measure."

The Sooners are now 20-6 overall, 7-4 in the Big Eight. It has been a tremendous turnaround for a team that went 15-13 last year and lost in the first round of the NIT.

Kansas still leads the league race, but the loss helped nudge Oklahoma State and Missouri a little closer. Williams attributed the loss to execution — Oklahoma made plays down the stretch, Kansas did not. In the late going, the Jayhawks missed the front end of three one-and-ones and had two shot clock violations.

"We've been a team that's played with great poise on the road and think we did tonight," Williams said. "But we didn't do a very good job."

NO EASY TASK

Parity baffles NCAA selection committee

Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — What used to be easy for the NCAA tournament selection committee is becoming hard.

What used to be hard is becoming unmercifully tough on nine men holed up in a Kansas City hotel room selecting and seeding the 64-team field.

"It seems like it will be even more difficult than last year," committee chairman Bob Frederick said Tuesday, acknowledging the previous chairman said the same thing a year ago.

Armed with a host of reference materials they call the "nitty gritty," the committee members will get together the weekend of March 10-12 and unveil their finished product on live television that Sunday evening. The announcement will launch a three-week basketball extravaganza climaxing with the national championship game April 3 in the Seattle Kingdom.

The committee's main task is picking 35 at-large teams to go with 29 schools that get automatic bids and seeding them one through 16 in four regionals.

Seeding the top teams used to be fairly simple, Frederick said during a conference call.

"But it would appear to me based on what's happened the last six weeks that it's going to be difficult to seed the top teams as well as the middle ones," Frederick said. "I suspect the nitty gritty will come into play in seeding the first eight teams."

The nitty gritty is a computer-generated sheet which lists 17 factors on teams, including rankings by regional coaches committees, power rankings, non-conference records, road records, records against teams in the top 25, top 50, top 100, and more.

"If there are, say, five teams we're looking at, we ask the computer to generate the nitty gritty sheet for those five and we look at how they compare in each of the 17," Frederick said.

Maryland senate bans replacement games

John Roll
Associated Press

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The frustrated baseball fans on the Senate Finance Committee voted overwhelmingly Tuesday night to bar replacement players from playing at Camden Yards this season.

The committee also approved a related measure that would prohibit advertising as major league baseball any games that use strikebreakers.

Both bills were approved on 9-2 votes with Sens. Martin Madden, R-Howard, and John Astle, R-Anne Arundel, voting against. The measures go to the full Senate, which probably will begin considering them by the end of the week.

"The main purpose is to protect the state's investment," said Sen. John Pica, the sponsor of both bills.

He argued the reputation of the taxpayer-funded Camden Yards could be permanently damaged if strikebreakers are allowed play.

"We should not countenance delivering a sloppy product to the people of this state," said Pica, D-Baltimore. "The goal is to protect the long-term integrity of baseball in Maryland."

Other supporters of the legislation said privately they also want to protect Orioles owner Peter Angelos, who has pointedly said he will not allow strikebreakers to wear the Orioles uniform.

Angelos' hardline stand has angered his fellow owners and the American League has threatened him with a fine of up to $250,000 per missed game or even the loss of his franchise. Lawmakers said if the legislation passes, Angelos can argue that he was forbidden by the state, which owns the stadium, from using strikebreakers.

"This bill sends absolutely the wrong message for the future," Madden said.

He said owners of other major league sports teams will be reluctant to move franchises to Baltimore in the future if the bills pass because the General Assembly would in effect be abrogating a contract.

'OKOGE' OPENS AT BIJOU TONIGHT

Japanese film explores gay relations

Jonathon Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

Perky young whippersnapper Sayoko gets a bit of a surprise when she finds herself on a beach populated by okama — the Japanese slang term for gay men.

But instead of the shock she might expect to feel, she experiences fascination and a kinship. She spies a young man named Goh and his older lover, Tochi, sharing a sweet kiss, and her fate is sealed. She becomes an okoge — a woman who prefers the company of gay men.

Sayoko is at the vibrant center of Takehiro Nakajima's wandering new movie, "Okoge." Misa Shimizu's performance as Sayoko holds the movie together by sheer force of will.

Sayoko is a walking comedy / tragedy mask. One moment she is vivaciously excited at the prospect of allowing Goh and Tochi to use her apartment for trysting, and the next she is contemptuously browsing through a coffee-table book of Frida Kahlo prints while the two lovers go at it above her.

The disturbing Kahlo self-portraits are the perfect emblem for her own self-loathing. She is light, airy and tempestuous on the outside — a cover for the anger and fear she feels on the inside. The gay lovers Goh and Tochi are the ideal men for her. They are attractive, safe and they need her — not as a sex object, but as a protector.

For a short while, this threesome achieves a state of grace, each balancing the other perfectly. But in modern Japanese society, such relationships are short-lived. A wife and pressures at the office force Tochi to flee, and the balance is upset.

The movie then turns into a series of comic and tragic events that split the three characters apart and run them each through some sort of personal hell. Nakajima tries to cram every debate and every prejudice concerning gay men into the movie. The attempt is admirable, and he nearly pulls it off, thanks to Shimizu's Sayoko.

While the movie begins to feel a bit didactic and forced, it never loses its emotional center. The strange balance of light and dark moments give the movie a unique, disturbing feel.

Tochi's wish to stay in his marriage, Goh's casual betrayal of Sayoko and Sayoko's desire to attach herself to Goh all lead to disaster in the film, and all exist because the characters want to deny some part of themselves.

If the characters in the movie are in denial, the movie itself is not. "Okoge" is a lack of sentimentality and its well-rounded characters mean that it doesn't suffer from the simplification that many of the Bijou's recent gay-themed movies — such as "Taxi zum Klo" and "Daddy and the Muscle Academy" — have.

Nakajima doesn't let his characters or his country off the hook. Oppression doesn't make any of the characters lead to wisdom. And if Japan would like to ignore the okama culture, the film suggests that not only will it not go away, but that attempted repression will bring misery.

"Okoge" will play at the Bijou tonight, Friday night and Sunday night at 8:45, and Thursday and Saturday at 7 p.m.

SHOW FEATURES 4 ACTS

New bands take spotlight at Gabe's

Clint Marsh
The Daily Iowan

Fans of local music should set aside a few hours tonight to catch a virtual potluck of Iowa City talent at Gabe's.

Joyce Ventimiglia, a member of Ambush #5, which is one of the fairly new bands performing, said the show is being put on to show people that there is some new original music coming from Iowa City.

"These bands don't have a hell of a lot in common besides geography," she said.

Ventimiglia's band has been gaining recognition recently through touring and appearances on a few Iowa City compilations.

For those who prefer the mellower side of music, the recently formed duo Little Debbie will open the show with an acoustic set.

John Bucher, guitarist for Thee

Duma, the third band to be featured at tonight's show, said each band has its own following.

"It's good to expose the bands' groups to each other," he said. "Duma is a virtual hit factory delivered by experienced musicians who haven't learned how to play."

Experience is one thing the musicians in Thee Duma do have. Bucher is formerly of Scorched Earth Policy, while other members are from Iowa Beef Experience and San Francisco's Bellemeld. The band will also be featured on the upcoming Useless Records vinyl compilation, Survival Is Killing Me.

Ventimiglia and Bucher are currently setting the groundwork for their own record label, God Damn Dirty Town Records, with which they hope to promote their own bands and other local acts. The label already has two releases: a seven-song cassette from Ambush #5 and an eight-song cassette from Thee Duma.

The final act of the evening will be a treat for hip-hop fans as Iowa City bootie-shakers Mudbone take the stage. Receiving attention from record labels on both coasts, the band is one to watch.

Mudbone bassist Niggatron Bomb said the band draws a crowd that may be tired of the "blues and Grateful Dead" cover bands so prevalent in Iowa City.

The doors at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., will open tonight at 9, with the show starting at 10. A $5 cover will be charged. But in a display of local quirkiness, anyone wearing leather will be admitted for only $3, Bucher said.
