A statement in the Wednesday, Feb. 23, front-page article "UISG shelves budget decision" was erroneous. The entire UI Student Assembly voted to postpone voting on their Class I budget recommendations. Once it was realized that it was against the UI Student Government Constitution to postpone, the 16 remaining senators voted on the budget, and it failed. The UI Student Assembly will meet again next week to review the Student Government Budgeting and Auditing committee's new recommendation.

Campaign urges use of low-fat milk

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP) -Milk can do a body bad.

That's the latest message from the Center for Science in the Public Interest, the group that has made waves telling people the horrors of fat-laden movie popcorn and Chinese takeout.

"People have to get a little more sophisticated at reading between the lines," said Art Silverman, spokesman for the Washington-based center. "Yes, milk can do a body good, but it can also do a body harm, and the trick is to choose low-fat milk."

"How do I get (students) interested? That's the wall I come up against which I've not been able to work around," he said. "How do I get them interested in the stories? How do I keep them interested enough to come back?"

During the course of Tuesday's Quest for Human Destiny lecture, Holstein's topics took many turns. One second he was talking about an author's relationship with God and the next he was throwing his arms up in the air and joking about running for UI president.

"Kramer (from 'Seinfeld') - he's going to be my VP," Holstein joked as his classroom audience gave him a round of applause. "Would you like to have me president of this university?"

The UI Physician Assistant Prowhich ranks with top programs at Rutgers, Duke, Emery and Baylor universities - recently scored first out of 59 programs in one section of the National Certifying Examina-

The exam, a two-day test developed by the National Board of Medical Examiners, is required for all graduates in order to be certified to practice

All 22 UI students who graduated from the program in June 1994 passed the test in October, said Dr. Denis Oliver, UI professor and director of the program.

The exam comprises three parts: a general section, a primary-care section and a practical section. The rankings, which were finalized last month, showed the UI first among the 59 nationwide programs on the practical section, second in the general and fourth in primary care.

They really distinguished themselves this year, as they have in the past," Oliver said.

He said there is no overall composite score, but the UI consistently has been among the top 5 to 10 percent since 1972, when the program started at the university

The Physician Assistant Program, which results in a master's degree, is a two year year-round program, Oliver said. It focuses on primary-care medicine - such as family medicine, pediatrics and internal medicine.

"It's a very rigorous program," he said. "It's comparable in terms of difficulty to the medical program. Of course, that's a longer program."

Andrea Vogel, one of the program's 1994 graduates, said the program was good preparation for the test.

"The hardest semester was the summer session when it first started."

The curriculum for that summer consisted of four classes in biochemistry, medical literature, anatomy and physiology, she said. Another required course for the program is an introductory course to clinical medicine, which

Cultural tradition shapes students' superstitions

Prasanti Kantamneni

The Daily Iowan

UI sophomore Paula Nichols said her father spits on people when he compliments them to ward off evil. UI freshman Shalini Gupta eats yogurt with sugar for good luck before an important event. And UI sophomore Saleem Farooqui wears his lucky fisherman's hat to every test.

The beliefs of these three students are only part of a wider system of personal and cultural superstitions that range from the belief that the number 13 is unlucky to the notion that throwing salt over one's left shoulder prevents bad fortune.

Superstitions are an important part of many people's everyday lives. Several of the more common beliefs have become rooted in cultures, religions and societies.

There are many reasons why a person has superstitions, said UI sociology Professor Barry Markovsky, who teaches a class in paranormal beliefs.

"There are a lot of causes," Markovsky said. "Parents socialize their kids to believe certain things; cultures present people with different superstitious claims

One superstition almost everyone is familiar with is that the number 13 is associated with bad luck. Numerous horror movies deal with gruesome events that take place on Friday 13th or in rooms numbered 13.

UI sophomore Abigail Leisinger believes the number 13 is unlucky. As a result, she said she used to avoid playing cards at 13 minutes before and after each hour.

"I would watch the clock when I played cards," she said. "I would only play between 14 after and 46 after and between 48 after and 12 after. I dent Taunya Tinsley, career assistant thought I was going to have bad luck if the game ended or continued through 13 after and 47 after."

The evil, ominous black cat is another famous superstition associated with bad luck. Negative images of black cats crossing one's path can be found everywhere. In cartoons, black dent Huaying Qiu says her high GPA cats slowly lurk behind corners and got her foot in the door, allowing her creep in front of characters in dark Gupta said she has no doubt black cats are unlucky. However, she has an antidote for the jinx.

"If a black cat crosses in front of you, something bad is supposed to becoming as important as grades for interviewed for a job in environmen- happen," Gupta said. "But you can wear it sometimes. It helps them out. employers who interview college tal science, they no longer asked me avoid it by not crossing the cat's path. It just got my roommate an A on his

To avoid potential disasters that can come from unlucky occurrences, some students knock on wood.

"I knock on wood all the time," Nichols said. "If you say, T'm hoping to get a 4.0,' you knock on wood so you don't jinx yourself. It has something to do with warding off evil." Nichols said her belief has rubbed off on others.

Every now and then, my roommate knocks on wood," she said. "Last year, people on my floor were knocking on wood all the time. It got catchy after a while."

Other popular American superstitions include the beliefs that throwing salt over one's left shoulder wards off bad luck, putting shoes on a bed brings hardship to one's family and breaking a mirror causes seven years of bad luck.

However, not everyone believes these superstitions. For example, Gupta - who moved to the United States from India three years ago said according to her customs breaking a mirror brings good luck.

"I've been taught that breaking glass is supposed to bring you good luck," she said. "Mirrors are glass, so breaking them brings good luck."

Some UI students have unusual superstitions, such as believing that eating certain items before special occasions brings good luck.

"My mom makes me eat yogurt with sugar before anything that's important because it's supposed to bring you good luck," Gupta said.

People often adopt beliefs held by those they are close to, Markovsky

"Social transmission of superstitions is probably another source," he said. "Being exposed to friends and people that you admire and seeing that they have certain superstitions probably increases your chances of adopting the same beliefs. If someone ve admire adopts a superstition, then adopting it ourselves would reflect positively on us."

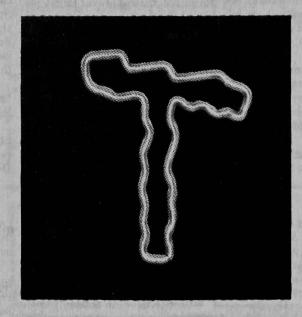

Many UI students wear and carry lucky items every day or for special occasions such as tests

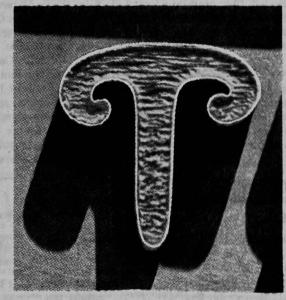

Farooqui said he wears his lucky fisherman's hat that he bought over a year ago to all his tests.

"It works," he said. "I let my friends

Students lobby for university support

Mary Neubauer Associated Press

DES MOINES - College students told legislators Wednesday they fear Gov. Terry Branstad's budget recommendations for the state universities will shortchange their Tight school budgets, in turn, will force students to take out more school loans, work more jobs and stay in school longer, they said.

UI freshman Allison Miller told legislators about her roommate, who had to leave the UI after one semester for a cheaper school.

"I'm lucky that I have not yet been faced with the prospect of leaving the school where I feel comfortable, a school where I feel at home," she said.

John Kiernan, a junior at Iowa State University, asked legislators how they could feel comfortable supporting the governor's plan, knowing the added pressure it will put on

"I am very comfortable telling you that we are not comfortable with that," he said.

Miller and Kiernan were among 75 students at the Capitol Wednesday to lobby legislators for more money for the universities, including the UI, ISU and University of Northern Iowa. There is a huge discrepancy between Branstad's budget recommendation, and the Iowa state Board of Regents' budget

During budget presentations to the governor in December, regents officials asked for a 4 percent budget increase, or more than $22 million. The governor recommended a $5.2 million increase, or about 1 percent. He's stuck to those figures, saying the state can't afford a higher increase while giving Iowans the tax breaks they want.

Student groups in January gave legislators the results of a study showing that students at the three universities borrowed $102 million to pay for their education in 1993, while those at private colleges took out loans for $92 million. The students said the governor ignored the said Rep. Steve Grubbs, R-Davenneed for more funding for workstudy programs and other financial

UI doubles requirement for measles vaccination

Beginning in the fall, the UI will require all new students to have had two measles vaccinations.

The requirement is in accordance with recommendations from the national Centers for Disease Con-

Current UI students are required to have had one measles vaccination. Students already enrolled in the UI will not be required to get a second shot.

All new students - whether transfer, graduate or incoming freshmen - will have to comply with the new health standard, said Dr. Larry Afifi, nurse manager at UI Student Health Service. In adults, measles can lead to pneumonia, brain damage and seizures, in addition to the characteristic rash, fever and cough associated with the disease.

The UI is changing its policy to keep up with current CDC guidelines, which were implemented in 1989. Dr. Rafael Harpaz, who said works at the CDC, said the second shot is merely a safety device.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT DEBATED

House refuses to broaden pending death penalty bill

Mike Glover

Associated Press

DES MOINES - The House on Wednesday rejected an effort to make all first-degree murder convictions capital crimes, sticking to a more limited death penalty.

Supporters of capital punishment fought the change, saying such a dramatic expansion would doom any chances for the Legislature to eventually approve a death penalty. More efforts to broaden the bill awaited debate.

"Politics is the art of the possible," port, main supporter of the death sentence proposal.

"I am gravely concerned that if we broaden the death penalty ... the bill will lose the support of a substantial number of legislators, and the bill will die," said Grubbs.

Moines, said the limited death sentence plan sought by Gov. Terry Branstad makes no sense, that capital punishment should apply to all who take another life.

policeman, that's bad. If you kill a little boy of color in my neighborhood, that's just as bad."

"My sympathies are with the victims and their families, not with the murderers," he said.

The House rejected the amendment, 64-8. It was just the first issue lawmakers were to debate on how broadly the death sentence should be to study what effect a return to capital punishment would have on the state's criminal justice system.

Most predicted eventual House approval of a death sentence in some form, but that approval might not come before today, as legislators work through dozens of amendments. "It's emotional and disturbing because what we're dealing with is But Rep. John Connors, D-Des the issue of whether we're going to kill people," said Rep. Ed Fallon, D-Des Moines.

Death penalty supporters were insistent in their case.

"Innocent people are dying today "We can't, nor should we, pick and because we don't have the death

The House already had voted to Rep. Keith Kreiman, D-Bloomfield, reject more judicial review before the pushes his point Wednesday that death sentence is applied but decided there is a need for more safety mea-

The first fight came over proposals to set up a panel of senior judges to review decisions made by local prosecutors seeking the death sentence. Supporters of the amendment said that's needed because the death penalty is more often applied to racial and other minorities and there's a need for outside review. Grubbs said the effort created "another layer of bureaucracy" in a legal system that's already too big. "The death penalty in the United States has not been applied uniformly," countered Rep. Keith Kreiman, D-Bloomfield, a death penalty foe.

PARIS (AP) — France has accused five Americans, including four diplomats, of economic and political spying and asked them to leave the country, a rare move that put the allies on a diplomatic collision course Wednesday.

French news reports said those accused include the top CIA official

In Washington, White House spokesman Mike McCurry said it remains to be seen whether the Americans would leave. He suggested disclosure of the affair was linked to France's presidential campaign, in which a wiretapping scandal has embarrassed Premier Edouard Balladur, the front-runner.

France is seeking the "very rapid" departure of the five. The fifth was a nondiplomat who reportedly worked

The State Department called the French allegations about spy activities unwarranted.

Anti-Semitic writings may bar man from United States

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States may deny entry to billionaire French politician Andre Bettencourt because he wrote anti-Jewish articles during the Holocaust, the Justice Department confirmed Wednesday.

Department spokesman John Russell confirmed a report by Nazi-hunter Serge Klarsfeld that an inquiry was under way into Bettencourt's case, a L'Oreal cosmetics executive and member of France's senate. He said a decision could take several

On Tuesday, Klarsfeld showed reporters a letter indicating that the department's Office of Special Investigation was reviewing the case.

Bettencourt, a close associate of French President Francois Mitterrand, said in a statement Tuesday that his anti-Nazi efforts later in the war showed that he atoned for the anti-Semitic writing he had done in "My actions in the Resistance, like my political record, demonstrate that I was aware of the error I made in writing articles for La Terre Française, which I have never stopped regretting and which I will always beg the Jewish community to forgive," he said. Bettencourt said he joined the anti-Nazi underground movement in 1942 and was arrested a year later by the Gestapo, imprisoned, kept in isolation and interrogated. Klarsfeld countered that Bettencourt joined the Resistance only late in the war, in July 1944, and his role involved raising money.

Catholics favor plan for Britain, N. Ireland

Shawn Pogatchnik Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland -Two years in the making, a new approach to governing Northern Ireland was unveiled Wednesday by Britain and Ireland as a framework

In contrast to their Protestant rivals, nationalist Roman Catholic politicians were enthused by the 42page document made public by the British and Irish prime ministers, standing side by side at a conference for peace talks. Indignant pro-British unionists rejected it as "the IRA center in Belfast. John Major of Britain and John Bruton of Ireland stressed that Northern Ireland's parties could amend or reject suggestions contained in the document during upcoming negotiations.

"This is not a 'take it or leave it' offer. But this is our considered judgment on the best way forward," Major said in an interview

The proposals include an elected parliament in Northern Ireland with safeguards for the Catholic minority, changes in British law and the Irish constitution to guarantee Northern Ireland's right to choose its destiny, and new groups to promote cooperation within the divided island.

But the Rev. Ian Paisley, the dominant voice of hard-line unionism, denounced the document as "the IRA way, the Dublin way, the nationalist way and the republican way ... a one-

Associated Press

People in Belfast line up at a post office to receive a copy of the Anglo-Irish proposals for peace in Northern Ireland Wednesday.

The document is an attempt to lay the groundwork for a settlement in Northern Ireland, created in 1920 with a pro-British Protestant majority but torn since the late 1960s by Protestant-Catholic violence.

Protestants are determined to maintain Northern Ireland's place within the United Kingdom and are afraid of any compromise that could lead to ending British rule and uniting the territory with Ireland, which is predominantly Catholic.

The Irish and British hope that a lull in violence since a cease-fire declared Sept. 1 by the Irish Republican Army, followed by a matching truce by Protestant gunmen, will soften attitudes and make compromise

In Washington, White House spokesman Mike McCurry said "we're very encouraged" by the proposals.

The framework will open the way to all parties now to open the dialogue on the future of Northern Ireland" and enable "the people of Ireland to determine their own future," McCur-

Their dissatisfaction was fueled by the general acceptance expressed by Catholic politicians.

John Hume, leader of the moderate Social Democratic and Labor Party, called the proposal balanced and said it deserved detailed examination.

Even the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party welcomed the announcement. The party has moved toward the political mainstream since the IRA declared a cease-fire in its 25-year-old campaign of violence against British rule in Northern Ireland.

"We see it as opening a new phase in the peace process," said Mitchel McLaughlin, the party's Northern Ireland chairman. He asserted that the document "foresees eventual Irish way street to Dublin, every word of believe any assurances from Major. unity, which, of course, is our goal."

PUBLICITY SCARES OFF ANOTHER WITNESS

Woman reluctant to testify for Simpson

Linda Deutsch

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - The only witness the O.J. Simpson defense team has who can portray Detective Mark Fuhrman as a racist doesn't want to testify, prosecutors said in court papers Wednesday.

Kathleen Bell became the second key witness to express concern about the heavy publicity surrounding the murder case, and her reluctance raised questions about whether Simpson's lawyers will ever be allowed to question Fuhrman about allegations of racism.

The defense has suggested Fuhrman planted a bloody glove on Simpson's property. According to Bell, Fuhrman once expressed hatred for interracial couples and used the word "nigger."

In court, meanwhile, one of the detectives in charge of the case con- Lange said. ceded under cross-examination that his investigation was flawed by failure to collect blood from a gate, preserve Nicole Brown Simpson's stomach contents and test blood splattered on her back.

Detective Tom Lange, on the stand for a third day, said some of the holes in the case were the fault of evidence technicians and the coroner. Some decisions the defense pressed him on, however, were his own.

"I saw no reason to take a photograph of melted ice cream," Lange told defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr., who suggested such a photo might help establish the time Brown Simpson and Ronald Gold-man were stabbed to death outside Brown Simpson's condominium.

Lange said he doubted a photo of the Ben & Jerry's container, found on a banister in Brown Simpson's home, would have helped.

Likewise, he said he did not order photographs taken of nine candles found burning in Brown Simpson's living room, bedroom and bathroom.

"Did it ever occur to you that by taking pictures of the candles and their state of burning we could extrapolate backwards to the time of death?" Cochran asked.

"No. I know of no way to do that,"

He acknowledged, however, that he asked criminalist Dennis Fung on June 13 to collect blood from a rear gate of the condo and found out that it was not done until three weeks after the slayings - after the police crime-scene tape had come down.

"If you had known that Fung had not collected blood spots on the back fence, you wouldn't have released that crime scene, would you?" Cochran asked.

'No," Lange said. Cochran also asked Lange if he was aware that after the police tape was removed at about 3:45 p.m. the day the bodies were found, "they had a number of 'lookie-loos' and others - tourists from around the world" who went to the condo to leave flowers and look at the crime scene.

"Yes," Lange said.

Cochran's questioning of Lange is part of a long-range attempt to challenge the prosecution's use of DNA analysis to place Simpson at the scene of the June 12 crime. The defense contends that the police were so sloppy that blood and other forensics evidence were contaminated before they were ever tested.

Prosecutors have told the jury that a trail of blood between the condo and Simpson's estate ties Simpson to the killings. And a prosecutor said last week that the blood on Brown Simpson's rear gate matches Simp-

SEPARATED FROM FIANCÉE

Punishment taken too far

When does a seven-year jail sentence followed by a threeyear probation period equal a possible lifetime penalty? It does when members of society take matters into their own hands concerning the fiery issue of abortion.

John Brockhoeft of Cincinnati was recently released after serving four years of a seven-year sentence for fire bombing a Cincinnati abortion clinic. Conditions for his parole will deny him any contact with anti-abortion activists and will forbid him from taking part in any anti-abortion activities for three years. He has appealed the conditions of his parole because all of his friends, as well as his fiancée, are involved in the anti-abortion movement.

Punishments must be harsh for those who claim the right to impose their views on others through violent means. Those who profess to be pro-life yet kill doctors who perform abortions and fire bomb clinics must face the harshest of penalties. However, these punishments cannot extend beyond the sentence. If a seven-year sentence is deemed to be sufficient punishment by the court system, the probation period needs to be one that will allow the individual to readjust to everyday life in the real

The court can prohibit him from being active in the movement for a period of time - as they did in this case - but no court can curtail the right of free speech. The courts should allow him to be with his fiancée and friends in an inactive manner. Any anti-abortion activity would still be a violation of his parole and would call for further punishment. Regular association with the people he knows well would allow him to resume his life and put his vicious mistake behind him.

Separating him from his fiancée for three years would be a very serious punishment. They have already been somewhat separated for four years. A punishment of this nature could carry well beyond the scope of punishment that the court intended. This appeal should be looked at very closely and taken serious-

This is not one of those sorry cases in which a prisoner is suing because he only has 35 cable channels and wants 50. This is a legitimate appeal that could affect the greater part of Brockhoeft's life. The court has shown in many instances that taking the ideas of a movement into one's own hands is completely unacceptable. That is obvious. No individual has the right to take any action against any person in any form based on that person's private, personal beliefs. The crime was totally unacceptable, but the aftermath of the punishment is carrying itself too far.

ROAMING FREELY POSES PROBLEMS

Warm temps unleash pets

ast weekend's warmer weather brought hordes of people outdoors running, Rollerblading, biking, walking or simply relaxing. It also encouraged many to take their dogs along for a playful afternoon in the park.

Many, however, chose to ignore the law which states dogs must be on a leash. According to the City Code of Iowa City (1994), "No pet animal shall be found at large within the city at any time. A properly licensed animal shall not be deemed at large if: It is under the control of a person competent to restrain the animal, either by leash or properly restrained within a motor vehicle or enclosed within a structure." An animal is also at large when "the pet animal is attacking humans, domestic animals, other animals or destroying property or is on any public property, except when under restraint as set forth above.

Not only are pet owners breaking the law when they don't keep their dogs on leashes, but they are also endangering the life of their pet, other animals and innocent people.

For instance, it is very common for dogs to attack people. According to the U.S. Humane Society, there are an estimated 1 million to 3 million dog bites reported each year, ranging from nips to serious attacks. Dog attacks may even turn fatal. In 1990, two dozen fatal attacks were reported. According to The Washington Post, animal behaviorists and psychologists estimate that half of all children are bitten by a dog at least once by the time they reach age 12.

Another possible scenario is that an owner's pooch may attack another canine. In the summer of 1993, a woman's dog was attacked by a pit bull, whose owner later reported that the dog repeatedly jumped its fence and attacked other dogs. In May of that same year, a dog running around in a park attacked a nesting swan. Both of these fatal attacks could have been prevented by a leash.

Iowa City's proximity to the Iowa River is something dog owners should keep in mind. While their owners casually strolled along riverside paths last weekend, many dogs were let loose to frolic, many coming within inches of the river. We all know what the swift currents can do to a body caught in the undertow: just look at the two drownings that occurred in the past year. Imagine how much harder it would be for a dog to survive the dangerous Burlington Street dam.

Finally, owners must remember that dogs like to run. They may bound into the street and get hit by a car, they may stray into the path of a moving bicycle or they may run away. It simply is not safe for a dog to roam without a leash.

Owners don't realize all of the trouble they create when they let their dogs run freely. While they may think they are helping their pets by letting them off their leashes, in reality they are only endangering them and other innocent creatures.

SAD about the return to winter weather

weather in Iowa, wait five minutes

Most Iowans cope well with this unpredictability, but for me there is no crueler trick in the cosmos than a false spring - the warm air and clear skies that appear before you expect them, only to withdraw again, forcing everyone back indoors to endure an eternity of dry overheated air, fluorescent lights and bad television, with no access to the outside world. It's Mother Nature as Judge Lance Ito.

My father and I both think we have some mild form of Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD), a condition which doctors describe as severe depression resulting from lack of sunlight during the winter. We're probably just hypochondriacs, but if I ever murder anyone between November and March, I'll see if I can't run that by the jury.

This Tuesday, I whined and stamped like a reluctant 3-year old as I went back to the closet for that heavy winter coat. Outside, gray tree branches were silhouetted against a pale gray sky. The gray parking lot had dark patches where the snow had melted over the weekend. All the cars were gray with a season of accumulated dirt.

Let's face it, this is when the winter blues really kick in: when we think it's about time for spring to roll around, but some traitorous holedwelling rodent has, as usual, condemned us to six more weeks of winter.

And if we let ourselves be fooled (as I tend to be) by a few days of sunshine and balmy weath-

It's said if you don't like the er into feeling that we've seen the last of snow, ice and wind chill factors until next winter, the return to reality can make the cold, overcast days seem even more cheerless.

In fact, I blame last year's prolonged winter season for the fact that last March, I let the nice lady who was going to highlight my hair bleach it platinum blond instead. It seemed like a good idea at the time, but in retrospect I was clearly under the influence of a severe case of winter blues - or demon possession, I'm not sure which.

Fortunately, I've now come up with a solution for surviving the long weeks at the end of winter. I stole the primary idea from those self-help personal-achievement instructors who tell you to imagine what you want as the first step in getting it. The difference is that simply imagining blue skies and crocuses doesn't make them appear any faster, so instead I propose occupying one's mind with all the negative images of spring. That way, you'll cease to hope for the arrival of spring and start to dread it. On the theory that dictates that a watched pot never boils, it ought to make the winter weather that's left go by much more quickly.

Birds, for example, are a problem in warm

Oh, sure, they sound all right, twittering away in a nearby tree. But walk underneath that tree and you may run hard up against the unfortunate fact that there is no such thing as a litter box for birds. Check out the Pedestrian Mall in midsummer for an illustration of the odds that hanging around outside, especially near trees, will get you a birdie surprise.

Then there's ducks. Ducks don't hang out in trees. They can be found in bodies of water, and this predictability of habitat often leads people to seek them out and feed them. But while feed ing the ducks sounds like a nice outdoor activity something you might do with the kids - anyone who's lived in Iowa City for very long knows it's best to give these terrorists of the waterfowl world a wide berth.

Toss one bread crust, and you're likely to be besieged by an army of feathered creatures all scrambling for more handouts. A few weeks ago, I watched an evil genius of my acquaintance toss a pebble into the river to see if the nearby ducks would come over to investigate. Within minutes, every duck in three states had descended on the area, hoping to get in on the action. God forbid, you should sit on a blanket with some popcorn - as a freshman, I narrowly escaped being trampled to death by little webbed feet when I casually tossed a small portion of my snack to the ducks. I had to ditch the loot and run.

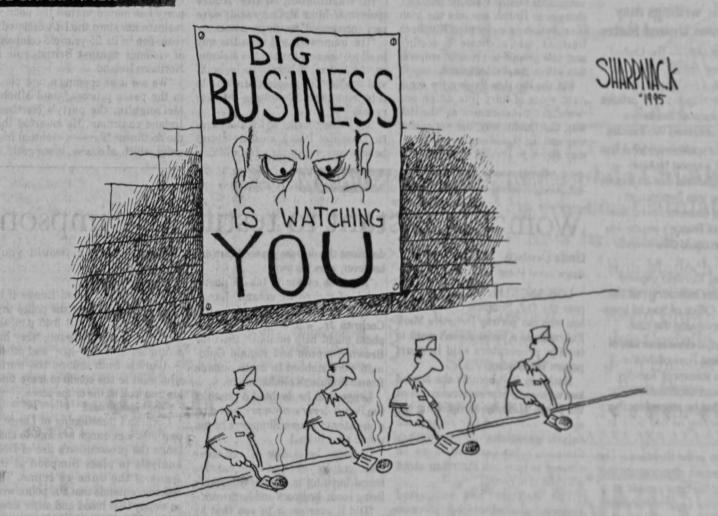

There are other aspects of spring to dread: people letting their dogs and children run around and drool on everybody, harmful UV rays, bacteria washed out of the soil and into your drinking water by the melting snow.

Yes, spring is downright awful, and it would be dumb to sit around waiting for a patch of blue sky - especially when I have more important things to do, such as plotting the death of everyone connected with the O.J. Simpson trial.

As long as the winter weather continues, I expect to be able to transgress against the system's piddly laws about conspiracy to commit murder with nothing to fear from prosecution. I'll just say SAD made me do it. Or possibly demon possession, I'm not sure.

director of a coalition of 180 civil federal establishment. rights organizations, former Attorney General Edwin Meese III wanted to dismantle such programs, but the rest of the Cabinet rallied around them and persuaded President Reagan that they were vital. Every president from John F. Kennedy on has taken that view, Neas said.

But evidence is accumulating that the nation is questioning any use of governmental power to give minorities or women an advantage

· California, pacesetter on many social issues, is likely to vote next year on an initiative to ban racial preferences in employment and education. If the issue is on the November 1996 ballot, it could attract a big conservative turnout and undercut President Clinton's chances of carrying California, vital to his reelection strategy.

· Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, has pledged that one of his first acts if he is elected will be to issue an executive order abolishing federal affirmative action programs. Other candidates are likely to side with Gramm.

The Supreme Court is expected to rule this summer on the constitutionality of a 13year-old affirmative action program in which billions of dollars' worth of contracts are at stake. The law under challenge pays federal contractors a bonus if 10 percent of subcontracts go to "disadvantaged business enter-

· The Library of Congress delivered to Capitol Hill a compilation that shows the existence in federal law of 160 preference programs in employment, housing and education. Included were minority-based timetables, goals, set asides and quota programs.

· Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole requested the compilation two weeks ago, saying he wanted to see if the government discriminates against white men. The

· A conservative group, the Institute for Justice, said it will use the list to ask congressional committees to eliminate funding for specific preferences. "The current system fuels racial division but does little to aid the truly disadvantaged," said William Mellor, the group's president.

· An as yet unannounced agenda, drawn up by House Speaker Newt Gingrich for consideration after the GOP's "Contract With America" is acted upon, lists racially based affirmative action laws as a target.

At a news conference Wednesday, Gingrich argued against affirmative action. "It is antithetical to the American dream to measure people by the genes of their great-grandmothers," he

At the White House, Clinton spokesman Mike McCurry offered a cautious defense of such programs. He said Clinton's position is that "where there is discrimination there should be affirmative remedies."

But he said the president also believes that what is needed is "a civil conversation on what could be a potentially divisive

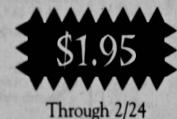

Tuesday night's bitter fivehour congressional debate raised the issue in a way that made it especially hard for friends of affirmative action to defend. At question was whether Viacom Inc. — a multibillion-dollar cable company - should be denied $400 million in tax breaks, with the money devoted instead to allowing self-employed workers to continue deducting part of the cost of health insurance.

Gingrich pushed that point. "This is not about helping the disadvantaged," he told the House. "This is about simply rigging the game on behalf of one set of millionaires over another."

Still, some drew a racial lesson. Rep. Chaka Fattah, D-Pa., said the vote showed that an internal debate had taken place report could serve as a hit list for within the GOP and "has been those who argue for a colorblind won by the David Duke faction."

Krzyzewski continues to aid Blue Devils

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - Ailing Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski is consulted more now than he was when he first left the team because of back problems.

"The staff is talking with Coach K a bit more now" acting head coach Pete Gaudet said during the weekly Atlantic Coast Conference coaches' teleconference on Tuesday.

"We're meeting a bit more, discussing basketball matters. His input has increased. It's more hands-on now."

But Krzyzewski, sidelined since Jan. 6 because of complications from back surgery in October, will not be back for the ACC tournament, his administrative assistant said.

"Definitely, absolutely not," Donna Keane said. "His doctors wouldn't allow that even if he wanted to."

Drake officials respond to alleged wrongdoing

DES MOINES, lowa (AP) -Drake athletic department officials are drafting their response to a letter of inquiry from the NCAA alleging rules violations in the recruiting of Stevie Johnson.

But Drake Athletic Director Lynn King on Tuesday declined to release exactly what was said in the letter to Drake President Michael Ferrari and other school administrators.

"Until this matter is resolved with the NCAA, we will have no comment to make on the nature or specifics of this," King said. He said the school hopes to respond to the letter soon.

"We are preparing our response to the enforcement staff and to the infractions committee," he said.

Johnson, a 6-foot-9 power forward wanted to transfer to Drake from Cal-Berkeley in January 1994 but was denied admission.

A school investigation last March found that Johnson charged meals to a school account at the Drake Diner and stayed with Clayton Allen, a Bulldog guard at the time. The meals and lodging would violate violations of the "extra benefit" clauses of NCAA rules.

In addition, the school's probe found Johnson was with the team during a trip to California in January 1994, a time when NCAA rules ban contact with recruits.

King declined to say whether the violations alleged in the NCAA letter of inquiry are considered major or secondary.

Kingsbury's 27 points spark 84-77 win at Wisconsin

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. - Close games are nothing unusual for the Iowa Hawkeyes. Winning a close game, however, is a new experience.

The Hawkeyes, who have lost four Big Ten games by one point and another in overtime, turned things around Wednesday night when they rallied from a 12-point deficit to beat Wisconsin 84-77.

Sophomore guard Andre Woolridge said all those heartbreaking losses are finally paying a dividend for the Hawkeyes, who have won three straight to move back into contention for a NCAA tournament

"We're a young team and we've given away so many close games," said Woolridge. "But now we thrive in that situation.

'We want to get in that close game situation now. We want the ball, we want to shoot the free throw, we want to hit the gamewinning shot, if that's what is called for.

Woolridge did all of the above, as he put the Hawkeyes ahead to stay, 76-74, with a 15-foot jumper with 1:47 left in the game and then put tles and 14 from Woolridge. the game away with three free throws in the closing seconds.

Those are just the kind of things the Hawkeyes (17-9 overall, 7-7 in the Big Ten) failed to do earlier in

"I admire this ballclub a lot," said coach Tom Davis. "We've lost ome close games, but the good thing was we were always in those games. Some teams go on the road and get blown out by 15 or 20 but this team wouldn't do that. They'd keep themselves in position but they just couldn't get over the hump."

The Hawkeyes were behind by 12 points, 60-48, midway through the second half. But this time they got over the hump.

Chris Kingsbury scored 10 points in a 20-8 run as Iowa tied it at 68 with six minutes remaining.

"I didn't really try to put it all on my back, but I knew it was time to start hitting them," said Kingsbury, who scored a game-high 27 points, including six 3-point baskets. "We had a lot of people step up and make big plays down the stretch."

It was just the opposite for Wisconsin (12-10, 6-7), which saw its tournament hopes dim as the Badgers dropped to ninth place in the

"We just play with our backs to the wall ... that's it," said Coach Stan Van Gundy. "That's something we really need to learn to overcome. We probably would've been better off if they had taken an eight-point lead. We just don't play with the same focus when we're in the lead and things are going well for us."

The Badgers looked to have things well in hand as they opened up a 44-34 halftime lead.

"At halftime I didn't really like our chances," Davis said. "We had a lot of trouble defending in the first half and they were getting a lot of good shots and making

Louganis hid AIDS virus

Larry Sidons Associated Press

NEW YORK - Greg Louganis, the finest diver ever and the only man to sweep diving gold medals at consecutive Olympics, said he has AIDS and was infected with the virus when he hit his head at the 1988 Seoul Games and bled into the pool.

Louganis, in an interview with ABC News "20/20" to be televised Friday, also said his wound was stitched by a doctor who didn't know his condition and wasn't wearing gloves.

In transcripts of the interview released Wednesday, Louganis said that "according to the CDC (Centers for Disease Control) standards of AIDS versus HIV, I know, this has been an incredibly do have AIDS."

He said he tested positive for the virus just before the 1988 Seoul Games, where he went on to win the springboard and platform diving gold medals - duplicating his sweep at the 1984 Los Angeles Games.

It was in Seoul, during the springboard preliminaries, that Louganis cracked his head on a reverse dive and became "paralyzed with fear" when he started bleeding in the pool.

"I was so stunned," the 35-yearold Louganis said. "I mean, what was going on in my mind at the time was, What's my responsibility? Do I say something? It's, you

He did not reveal his condition to the U.S. Olympic Committee doctor who stitched the wound, and felt sure the chlorinated water in the pool would dilute the "I just held my head ... I just wanted to hold the blood in, or just not anybody touch it," Louganis told interviewer Barbara Wal-"I didn't anticipate hitting my head on the board," he said. "I didn't anticipate, you know, the blood. That's something ... I didn't think about at the time. After getting five stitches,

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL Hawkeyes invoke fear in opponents

Mike Triplett The Daily Iowan

Despite its five-game losing streak, the Iowa women's basketball team has "come quite a distance" in recent weeks according to Coach C. Vivian Stringer. Opposing coaches are noticing the same thing. In the last two weeks, Purdue coach Lin Dunn and Wisconsin coach Jane-Albright have expressed their fear of facing Iowa at next weekend's Big Ten tournament in Indianapolis.

Albright-Dieterle even went so far as to say that Iowa is the last team she'd want to meet.

Hawkeyes. But the Big Ten administrators have decided that they're not going to just give Iowa the title straight out. Iowa has to make its way through a difficult bracket And thanks to Tuesday's announcement by the conference administrators, Iowa's bracket may be even more difficult than was

That's all well and good for the first thought. The conference made a correction in the bracket layout. The winner of the first-round game between the Big Ten's No. 8 and 9 seeds will move on to play the No. 1 seed rather than the No. 3 seed in the second round.

Apparently, that is the way it was supposed to work all along and the mistake was just recently noticed. Whatever the case, if things stay as they are in the conference race, Iowa (as a ninth seed)

No. 12 Hawks prepare for Big Ten showdown

Chris Snider The Daily Iowan

Let the showdown begin.

Five of the nation's Top 25 men's swimming teams will do battle today through Saturday at the Big Ten Conference meet in Minneapo-

Leading the charge will be No. 1 Michigan, but not far behind are the No. 12 Hawkeyes. Iowa comes in with a perfect dual record of 8-0, but a Cinderella upset over the defending champion Wolverines seems far more fairy tale than real-

"We want to get back into the top three places," Iowa coach Glem Patton said. "Michigan has strong lock on first place. We'll focus on trying to qualify as many swimmers as possible for the Iowa has finished in the top three at the conference meet 12 of the last 15 years, and after slipping to fourth last year, Patton hopes his team can move back into the elite three this season. And from what his team has shown him so far, Patton knows

Stringer, though a little perplexed about the change, knows that the Hawkeyes have to be prepared to play, and beat, any team in the Big Ten if they want to win the tournament.

"I don't think that we're going to approach any games with a losing attitude," she said. "I think the only game scorewise that we were completely out of was Minnesota. PITTSBURGH- The Pittsburgh Penguins insist they haven't asked Jaromir Jagr to replace the absent

Mario Lemieux. Yeah, sure.

He isn't always the second coming of Lemieux - who is? - but at 23, when many athletes are only beginning their major-league baseball or NFL careers, Jagr already may be the NHL's most visible, dynamic talent.

If he's not, he's literally on the fast track to getting there.
"To me, he's the best player in the game right now," Penguins coach Eddie Johnston said after Jagr's third-period goal sealed Pittsburgh's 5-4 victory Tuesday over Quebec.

The first matchup of the NHL's two best-record teams - the Penguins are 13-1-2, Quebec is 13-3 was exactly as hyped, with a tense, high-intensity third period featur-ing six goals, three lead changes and a playoff-like atmosphere.

"It was like the playoffs out there," Jagr said. "We were playing a lot of one-on-one hockey.'

And who better for that style than Jagr, who initially displayed his singular ability to take over big games by rallying the Lemieux-less Penguins past the regular-season out. champion New York Rangers in the 1992 playoffs.

He followed that with a 94-point season in 1993, and a team-leading 99 points last season, yet still was considered only a complementary component of hockey's highest-scoring machine. With Lemieux around, Jagr could never be anything higher than a No. 2 star.

Now, with Lemieux out for this season - and, perhaps, for good following years of persistent medical problems, Jagr seems eminently capable of assuming Lemieux's role as the Penguins' leading scorer, and team leader.

It is a highly visible, high-risk assignment few would want and even fewer could successfully carry

But, just as Lemieux often did when healthy, Jagr leads the NHL scoring race with 14 goals and 16 assists for 30 points in 16 games.

Even in a season cut nearly in half by a labor dispute, he might threaten the 100-point mark normally the full-season benchmark for scoring superiority.

"He is so strong and can carry the puck like no one else," said All-Star left winger Kevin Stevens, currently out with a fractured ankle bone

"Sometime soon, he will score 50, 60, maybe 70 goals in a season. He has so much confidence he can do pretty much anything he wants. When he gets like that, it can be

He grabbed the puck in the right circle, carried it behind the net to the lower left circle, and, with Bob Bassen clutching, grabbing and poking him with his stick, put a nolook backhander past goaltender Stephane Fiset.

'It was like Joey Mullen told the last game, 'You're the guy now. You have to do it,' " Jagr said.

Mullen first noticed such leadership qualities surfacing in Jagr last season, when Lemieux missed long stretches with recurring back pain. Once an impetuous, immature teenager from Czechoslovakia uncomfortable with life in a new country and a new league, Jagr finally seemed at ease with his new language and leadership role on the Penguins.

Chiefs'Montana forgoes plans for knee surgery

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - The Kansas City Chiefs and the agent for Joe Montana said Wednesday the star quarterback has no plans for knee surgery, contrary to a report saying an extensive opera-tion is scheduled for next week.

Bruins stand in line for No. 1

With No. 1 Kansas' recent loss, the top spot is up for grabs

Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. - UCLA may not want it, not until late at night on April 3, but the Bruins are in line to become the new No. 1 team in college basketball in a few days.

First, however, the No. 2 Bruins must win against California tonight in Berkeley. Second, returning home for a Sunday game, UCLA needs to repel Duke, a team looking for something to restart a season gone astray.

UCLA's claim to the top ranking in college basketball was strengthened with an uphill 88-77 victory at No. 19 Stanford on Tuesday night, after the Bruins (19-2, 12-2 Pac-10) knocked off Arizona and Arizona State at home one week ago.

"I don't want it,"

Jim Harrick, UCLA coach on the No. 1 ranking

"I don't want it," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said of the No. 1 ranking.

The last time the Bruins were on top was 13 months ago. They took a 14-0 record into Cal on Jan. 30, 1994 and lost. That began a tailspin that gave UCLA five more defeats in the regular season and a first-round NCAA tournament embarrassment, losing to Tulsa 112-102.

Not only did Cal upend UCLA a year ago, the erratic Bears (12-9, 4-8), are the only team to beat the Bruins at home this season, 100-93 on Jan. 28. The other Bruin loss came in their Pac-10 conference opener at Oregon Jan. 5.

Ed O'Bannon would prefer that proclaiming UCLA as No. 1 wait until after the NCAA championship game.

We feel we're a pretty good team "The head that wears the crown is but we're not thinking about the ranking. It doesn't say anything about, or does anything for this team. We want to be No. 1 at the end of the season," said O'Bannon, who scored 22 points against Stanford and helped hold swarm of bees - losing games within Andy Poppink (23 points) to six sec-

Twins' Maas waits for second chance

Ron Lesko Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla. - Not much has gone right for Kevin Maas since his mind-boggling rookie debut with the New York Yankees in 1990. So far, it looks like 1995 might be more of the same.

The Minnesota Twins are in desperate need of a first baseman to replace the retired Kent Hrbek. There also is no established designated hitter, and the Metrodome is an ideal stadium for a left-handed power hitter.

This could be the perfect chance for Maas to revive his once luminous career if baseball settles its labor dispute. Unwilling to cross the so-called picket line - he is not a replacement player - it appears Maas must be content to start another season in the minors.

"Once you've tasted it, it makes it a lot tougher being down here," Maas said Wednesday. "But the Twins have given me an opportunity to get back up there, and I'm going to try to take advantage of Five summers ago, it seemed all that awaited Maas was the tremendous adulation that follows

In just 79 games after he was called up from Columbus, Maas hit .252 with 21 home runs and 45 RBIs. He set major league records for the fewest at-bats to reach 10, 13 and 15 home runs, and finished second to Cleveland's Sandy Alomar in the voting for AL rookie of Maas split the '93 season between Columbus and New York, then was released less than a week before the end of spring training last year.

"I wasn't surprised at all," he said. "I was frustrated that they held on to me that long.

Maas was let go by the Padres and later the Reds before signing a Class AAA contract with Minnesota in December.

Minnesota isn't guaranteeing him anything, with Steve Dunn, Dave McCarty, Scott Stahoviak, Pedro Munoz and Matt Merullo also candidates for the position Hrbek filled for 13 seasons.

But the Twins are hoping Maas can take advantage of the Metrodome's dimensions, friendly to left-handed hitters at 327 feet down the right field line.

he bad news about the 'UI theater department's world première play "Ibsen and the Actress" is that the script isn't finished yet.

The good news is that it's not supposed to be.

"Ibsen" is the work of celebrated playwright Marie Irene Fornes, an Obie Award winner who has become the third playwright to benefit from the UI's Partnership in the Arts.

Under the auspices of the UI and the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., (the major partnership sponsor) Fornes has spent the last month developing her personal exploration of Norwegian dramatist Henrik Ibsen's "Hedda

"The play started because I

UI with reams and reams of research - letters, interviews, diary entries - but little scripted material, the cast has been faced with the challenging position of dealing with a script that was still being written a week before opening night.

Mattick doesn't think anyone minds, however.

"It's extremely stimulating," she said. "Almost nothing is finished, but it's not supposed to be. There's supposed to be script development. We don't have 'the end' yet, but no one's worried about that."

Fornes and Mattick both said the process of constructing a show can be as interesting as the final product. A work in progress gives audiences a glimpse of the show's ingredients.

If a building is being built, you go inside and see the walls, the wiring, how the house is supported. ... It has a kind of beauty,"

"It's going to continue to grow until we close. I was even going to say they should have a discount for people who want to come and see it again."

Maria Fornes, writer and director of "Ibsen and the Actress" directed 'Hedda Gabler' seven or Fornes said. "It's like a large 10 years ago," Fornes said. "I've always been fascinated with that play. I find myself being puzzled at the degree of my fascination because the play could be thought of as kind of a melodrama. There's something about this play that is much more profound than what occurs on the surface."

"Ibsen" deals with "Hedda Gabler" 's English première, which was a London production launched by two American actresses. Fornes uses a combination of historical background and fictional scenes to explore her views on "Hedda Gabler" and on the general process of dramatic interpretation. "It's based on truth, but after that there's stuff that I'm just imagining," Fornes said. "For example, in my play the actresses get a hold of three or four pages from a different production that was so bad it never got started it just sort of petered out. They start working with those pages. I set that up to show what I think." The cast of "Ibsen" is headed up by Patricia Mattick, a professional actress whose credits include stage work, feature films and TV shows like "General Hospital" and "Lou Grant." Mattick and Fornes have worked together about 10 times, starting when Mattick auditioned to understudy for a wildly successful play by Fornes and gave performances that were better than some of the principal actresses'.

"She's a great actress," Fornes

The other actors are college students - not professionals, but they also get accolades.

"I find that working anywhere the most important thing is the people," Fornes said, "Here, I've been so lucky. I adore my cast. I feel inspired to work."

Because Fornes arrived at the organism. Usually when you go to see a play, you just see the skin."

Fornes and Mattick aren't entirely sure how to classify the play, but they agree it's probably not a comedy. Certain moments are somber and poetic, and Mattick said the characters' inner conflicts lead them to be introspective at times.

Still, Fornes said there is humor present.

"My own taste is that I like to mix humor and pathos, so that when things get very sad, there is a moment when I find it absurd," she said. "At a very serious moment, the character would do something funny. People may ask, 'Why put something funny after this painful moment?' Because it's funny!"

The conflict between humor and pain is just one of the apparent contradictions which Fornes likes to explore in her work.

"A person who is very sweet could be enraged by certain things, become a monster," she said. "It's not a contradiction. It's just the shape of it. It's almost like

Fornes also doesn't see any contradiction between the impending opening night and the absence of a concrete script. In fact, it gives audiences a rare chance to see two different forms of a play inside of "What I intend to do is, after the day off (following the opening weekend), to put in new material," Fornes said. "It's going to continue to grow until we close. I was even going to say they should have a discount for people who want to come and see it again.'

"Ibsen and the Actress" will be performed Thursdays through Sundays from Feb. 23 to March 12. Show times are 3 p.m. on Sunday and at 8 p.m. all other days. Tickets are $12 ($5 for UI students, senior citizens and children under 18).

There is a certain satisfaction in discovering a band before even your unhip roommate thinks it's cool. Such an opportunity exists Friday when Nectarine brings its eclectic version of rock to Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., as an opening act for House of Large Sizes

Nectarine hails from Chicago, the music scene of the moment, although band members haven't tried to exploit it to their advantage. In fact, they've done their best to avoid both the cliquishness of the scene and the media hype surrounding Windy City bands.

'We didn't try to get any shows. We didn't really care. I was just so happy with the music. This sounds really corny, but I was so psyched about what we were doing that I didn't really care," said Joel Mark, a guitarist in the band.

Nectarine - which also includes guitarist and vocalist Pablo Koller. bassist and vocalist Mike Whitney and drummer Bill Swartz - has also avoided being lumped in with other Chicago bands by refusing to follow the likes of Smashing Pumpkins, records that we would want to sit will be admitted.

Urge Overkill and Liz Phair. Instead, the band opted to unconsciously carve out their own eccentric niche somewhere between Sonic

Youth and Polvo.

"The people that like us - the two fans we have - are both Polvo fans, although the other guys in the band don't listen to it," Mark said.

The band members initially planned to record and release albums on their own, choosing not to showcase for labels. But they decided to send out one demo tape to Grass Records, an independent label in New Jersey, which carried some of their favorite bands. A record deal was signed and soon to follow was Nectarine's first album, Sterling Beat, released just two

Mark's bedroom was turned into a recording studio with the band acting as musicians, producers and engineers for most of the album's 15 tracks. The decision to do the eighttrack home recording cut down on costs, eliminated time constraints and allowed for experimentation, Nectarine's songwriting would be stellar no matter how it was recorded, but the sound quality of Sterling Beat is phenomenal. The music is both sparse and full at the same time. The guitars noodle with single-note passages and discordant progressions, while the drums become audible only when necessary. The band easily incorporates quiet, tense pieces with all-out assaults of feedback and noise, along with everything in between. In sum, every note and track on the record works. Nectarine gained national exposure with its contribution to the Tom Petty tribute album, which Mark produced. The band is currently playing shows in the Midwest - when the band members' day jobs allow it - and has plans to tour both coasts later this spring. Mark also hinted at experimenting with the mellow side of the band more in the future.

FIRST EPIC ALBUM RELEASED

Watershed prepares to tackle big time

Greg Stump The Daily Iowan

This could prove to be a ground-breaking year for Watershed; after playing together for 10 years, the band's major-label debut album has just been released by Epic Records.

Tonight, the band makes its way to Iowa City to play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

Watershed's members - guitarist Colin Gawel, bassist Joe Oestreich and drummer Herb Schupp - grew up together in Columbus, Ohio, where the band formed back in the 10th grade while taking in a steady musical diet of Cheap Trick and Kiss.

"None of us had older brothers to introduce us to cool bands like Hüsker Dü or the Replacements," Oestreich said. "We didn't even have access to college radio, so we mainly listened to AOR (album-oriented radio)."

Watershed's current sound is akin to a bus crash between "the Georgia Satellites, Cheap Trick and Bruce Springsteen ... with the Replacements looking on at the scene of the accident," he said.

The band members stayed in Columbus after high school, dividing their time between putting out records on local labels and attending Ohio State University until 1991.

"After our junior year, we were spending so much time playing shows that we had to choose between the band and going to school," Oestreich said. "We always knew the band was going to be first. ... We haven't gone Royal Crescent Mob as two admitted for a cover charge.

more than two weeks in the last 10 years without practicing."

The proverbial big break came after the band's demo tape fell into the hands of Meatloaf songscribe Jim Steinman. Then an Epic representative caught a Watershed gig at a band showcase in New York, and the deal was forged.

Watershed, however, looks at the situation with caution.

"Being from Columbus, there's a lot of pressure because so many bands from here have gotten signed to major labels, and every one of them has gotten dropped before their third release," said

Fitz of Depression keeps with punk

The Daily Iowan

Punk rock may have been formally embraced by mainstream press and radio in 1994, but the music has flourished underground in relative obscurity for more than a decade.

Fitz of Depression - making its Iowa City debut Friday at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. - has stayed true to its punk roots.

Riverside Theatre hopes to profit with donations from celebrities

Paul Ferguson The Daily Iowan

Some 300 lucky people will get the chance to bid on items touched by celebrities during Riverside Theatre's annual benefit, beginning at 7 p.m. Friday at the Iowa City Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque

Only a few of the $25 tickets remain for the event, dubbed "Diamonds or Denim: An Evening of Indulgence." The benefit will include hors d'oeuvres, champagne, cabaret entertainment and what many must consider the main course: auctions of doodles and other items donated by such stage stars as Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, Jerry Lewis and Olympia Dukakis.

Also among the items are the scribblings of Carol Burnett and Dom DeLuise, as well as signed photos of Rodney Dangerfield, Kirk Douglas, Jane Fonda, Morey Amsterdam, Ed Bradley, Michael Crawford and Laura

The celebrity items were solicited by Riverside Theatre's board of directors member Rip Russell, who saw a Chicago theater troupe use a similar technique to draw crowds to its fund-raiser. With the aid of a book listing the addresses of many famous people, Russell simply mailed stars self-addressed stamped envelopes with his request and hoped for the best. "I sent out 120 letters, and going through the book, I got a little bit eager and I was jumping at a lot of people, figuring, 'Oh, I've got to send something to them,' so I only got to the M's ... but that mière items that we'll have in this leaves the rest of the alphabet for series."

In addition to the celebrity and goes against a lot of the items, donations from local businesses and individuals will also be put up for bid. Among the local items are a platter of truffles, a basketball signed by UI basketball coaches Vivian Stringer and Tom Davis, gourmet dinners at private homes, dinners at local restaurants and a trip to St. Louis, Mo.

"You can take the level of business and individual involvement as far as you can take it," said Riverside Theatre publicist Peter Sims. "It's a great way to get them involved with theater, thinking about theater and donating things for the theater, which is very important these days for running our organization, especially given the (prospect) of the demise of certain federal funds."

The benefit's primary entertainment will be a variety of monologues and music by several local entertainers, including Riverside Theatre members Jody Hovland and Ron Clark, Dan Coffey, Gloria Galask, Carmen Troyer, John Wilson and Too Much

"It's like cabaret, but people are seated, and they're being entertained. But they're also eating and drinking and carrying on and that sort of thing," Sims said.

The benefit, which will be considerably larger than those of previous years, is expected to help raise a considerable portion of the nonprofit theater's budget, about half of which comes from donations and grants.

MOVIE TRIO PLAYS AT BIJOU

Series of short films boasts 2 witty clips

Tasha Robinson The Daily Iowan

While one segment of the Bijou's "Two Mikes Don't Make a Wright" short-films program wasn't available for preview, the other twothirds speak for themselves. In at least two out of three cases, the "Two Mikes" collection boasts heavy irony, brutally weird plot twists and offbeat humor by the truckload.

One of the two Mikes in this case is director Mike Leigh ("Naked," "Life is Sweet"). Like "Naked" and at least one other short film Leigh has directed, "A Sense of History" is gruesome, grim, depressing and shocking.

The film consists entirely of a 25minute monologue written and performed by Jim Broadbent, a character actor last seen in the United States as the bartender in "The Crying Game." Broadbent is placidly terrifying here as the 23rd earl of Leete, a British nobleman who Jim Broadbent ("The Crying utterly but unwittingly condemns himself in the process of telling his life story.

Speaking in a pompously grating seem out of place, the earl paints a vividly grim picture of his long and bitter life.

He's farcically calm as he describes his parents as "a nahsty booby of a man whom I hated ferociously" and "this astoundingly beautiful woman with whom we sometimes had tea."

He's self-righteously intolerable as he explains that Hitler wasn't as bad as people claim, although one or two of his ideas might have been a tad out of line. But the story takes off with a vengeance as he describes his decision — at the tender age of 7 — to kill his older brother.

Leigh chops Broadbent's monologue into segments by showing the earl marching proudly around his dull brown-tinged 900-year-old estate, a place as devoid of active life as the old earl himself.

The irony matches the caustic tone of the piece, which provokes giggles as much from discomfort as humor. But Broadbent's dry, unrelentingly wicked portrayal is the driving force behind this piece's humor and its power.

By contrast, comedian Dean Parisot's "The Appointment of Dennis Jennings" is a far more comfortable variety of wit. From the open-ing seconds, in which American comedian Stephen Wright chases British comedian Rowan Atkinson ("Four Weddings and a Funeral,"
"The Lion King") through a forest while brandishing a shotgun, "Jennings" is laugh-out-loud silliness with only the briefest of breathers.

Wright plays the eponymous Jennings, a paranoid, introspective waiter who carries his answering and Friday at 7:15 p.m.

Game") plays a British earl with a sadistic and poisonous past in Mike Leigh's "A Sense of Histodrawl so relentlessly posh that ry." The short film is one of three words like "anon" and "tosh" don't in the Bijou's "Two Mikes Don't Make a Wright" film festival, which opens tonight.

> machine tape around in his Walkman and ponders imponderables like the identity of his natural stepfather, whom he says his birth parents won't tell him about.

> Atkinson is Dr. Simmons, a bored, hostile psychiatrist who doodles and makes grocery lists during Jennings' sessions. The two meet repeatedly in a series of increasingly tense sessions until the motivation behind the shotgun scene is obvious, but the plot is mostly an excuse for Wright to toss off his typical laconic one-liners and delve into the realm of eccentric visual jokes.

> "Jennings" won the 1989 best short feature Oscar, and the reasons are obvious: It's a sleek comic package showcasing Wright's humor to > its fullest degree. Michael Moore's "Pets or Meat: Return to Flint" rounds out the collection with a second look at some of the people and places featured in Moore's "Roger & Me," the highestgrossing film documentary of all time. The original was a look at life in economically and spiritually depressed Flint, Mich.; this piece has been described variously as hilarious and annoyingly smarmy. A review copy wasn't available.

> Not that it matters. Most films don't manage to be as funny in two hours as these two shorts are in 55 minutes; even if "Pets" can't properly round out the trio, the Bijou will still come out ahead. "Two Mikes Don't Make a Wright" is playing at the Bijou tonight at 9
