R.E.M. drummer suffers severe migraine at show

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The drummer of the rock group R.E.M. left a concert in Switzerland with a migraine headache and was hospitalized for observation, a spokeswoman said Thursday.

Bill Berry was suffering from "severe migraines," said Michele Rawson, a spokeswoman for R.E.M.-Athens Ltd., the group's management organization in Athens, Ga.

"He's in good spirits," Rawson said. "The doctors are checking him."

Berry felt ill and was unable to complete the concert in Lausanne, Switzerland, on Wednesday night, concert promoter Marek Lieberberg said.

Lieberberg said Berry had suffered a brain hemorrhage, but Rawson said that was not the case. Lieberberg said he could not give Berry's condition or any other details.

The Lausanne-based Le Matin newspaper said Berry grabbed his head in pain and was taken off stage.

Maid Rosa Lopez, a key defense witness, acknowledged she can't remember many exact dates and times. But under intense cross-examination, she denied she is being coached by the defense.

Prosecutor Christopher Darden produced an unemployment application Lopez recently filed. He appeared to be catching Lopez in a lie, as she said last week that she planned to leave the United States soon.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark's estranged husband has filed for primary custody of their two young sons, saying she is rarely home due to her court duties.

Iowa Senate kills death penalty

Bill soundly defeated, 39-11; local politicians split on issue

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

After its defeat in the Iowa Senate Thursday, the death penalty — one of the primary focuses of Gov. Terry Branstad's re-election campaign — will not be reinstated.

The capital punishment proposal passed the House 54-44 last week but lost 39-11 in Thursday's Senate vote — 15 votes shy of approval.

Although applause was heard throughout the Senate gallery after the measure was defeated, the news elicited mixed local reactions.

Sen. Robert Dvorsky, D-Iowa City, said he was surprised at the wide margin of defeat. Dvorsky, a

"I have two young daughters, and I'm very proud of them. They always ask me how my day went, and I don't think I could tell them in good conscience I voted to sentence citizens of Iowa to death today."

Sen. Robert Dvorsky, D-Iowa City

longtime death penalty opponent, voted against the bill.

"I think there are people who have a lot of respect for our Senate and the work we've done," Dvorsky said. "A lot of people felt good about the decision they made when they left today."

Dvorsky said although some legislators will raise the issue of the death penalty again after the 1996 elections, capital punishment is no longer a viable campaign issue.

"A majority of Democrats and a majority of Republicans in the Senate voted against it," he said.

UI junior Lucas Greenwalt, vice president of the Iowa Federation of College Republicans, said he was disappointed that the proposal was defeated.

"I think it's going to continue to be an issue, especially in the next Senate races," he said. "It's a vocal issue, and so many Iowans — something like 75 percent, according to some polls — support the death penalty."

Greenwalt said he worries the defeat might hurt Republican death penalty proponents' credibility among voters in the next state elections, in which all 100 House seats and 25 Senate seats will be up for grabs.

"For them to get such a major piece of legislation this far is important, but it puts into question whether the Republicans have the

GOP FAILS TO SWAY VOTE

Budget proposal denied passage

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate solemnly dealt defeat Thursday to the balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution, the cornerstone of a broader Republican drive to cut spending and shrink government. Both sides sought political advantage in the residue of battle.

The 65-35 vote left the amendment just shy of the needed two-thirds majority and followed Democratic accusations that the Republicans were threatening Social Security, a charge Majority Leader Bob Dole sharply denied.

At the White House, President Clinton challenged GOP leaders in Congress to detail "how they are going to keep the promises of their 'Contract (With America)' on balancing the budget and paying for their tax cuts."

Fifty-one Republicans and 14 Democrats voted for the amendment, while 33 Democrats and two Republicans — Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Dole — voted no.

Dole is a firm supporter. His vote — which left the amendment's supporters two votes short of victory — was cast solely to place him on the prevailing side, a parliamentary maneuver to keep the politically popular amendment alive for another possible vote during the 1996 election season.

"Let 'em try," Democratic leader Tom Daschle said defiantly a few hours before the vote. By opposing the amendment, Democrats were saving Social Security trust funds from deficit-cutters, he said.

The amendment is designed to end the run-up in red ink that has the national debt approaching $5 trillion. It calls for a balanced budget beginning in the year 2002 unless three-fifths of both houses vote otherwise. Social Security aside, some opponents

'Beauty' burglar loots local businesses

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police are attempting to locate a beauty- and body-obsessed burglar who added a hair salon, a massage parlor and a store that sells body lotions to a list of local businesses which were broken into during the past two months.

According to Iowa City Police Department reports, Skin Systems, 104 S. Linn St., was ransacked sometime after it closed at 5 p.m. Tuesday. The intruder pried open the dry wall of a telephone utility room and stole between $100 and $500 in cash, reports said.

A Touch of Mink massage parlor, 602 S. Dubuque St., reported that an intruder broke in through an entrance Tuesday night but stole nothing.

Rumours Salon, 521 Kirkwood Ave., reported a similar Tuesday night incident which involved a burglar entering through a dry wall and taking an undetermined amount of cash.

On Feb. 2, the Grand Illusion Salon & Spa, 323 Kirkwood Ave., was burglarized, and Sky's the Limit salon, 935 S. Gilbert St., was burglarized Jan. 24. Undetermined amounts of cash were stolen from both.

Iowa City police Sgt. Craig Lihs said the Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning burglaries were probably related because of the similar break-in methods. However, the thief opted for cash rather than bottles of shampoo and lotion, he said.

"We've had a lot of burglaries" See BURGLARIES, Page 10A

Four Davenport men were arrested Tuesday in connection with the Nov. 20 armed robbery at a Coralville restaurant in which victims were forced into a walk-in cooler.

Iowa City police are still investigating a similar robbery that occurred at Happy Joe's Pizza & Ice Cream Parlor, 225 S. Gilbert St., Sunday at 1 a.m., said Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department.

Allen K. Douglas, 34, and Michael A. Constantino, 34, were arrested Tuesday. See ARRESTS, Page 10A

MOM'S RECIPE BECOMES MENU MAINSTAY

Tater tot casserole sports golden history

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

It's just mounds of potato chunks smothered in chicken soup and hamburger, but tater tot casserole has become one of the most popular entrees served in UI residence hall dining rooms since its debut 23 years ago.

This year marks the 40th

"My mother made it when I grew up, and I missed it as a dorm student."

Larry Hitt, UI alumnus

anniversary of Ore-Ida tater tots — the main ingredient in the casserole served about once every three weeks in residence hall dining rooms.

The casserole was first served in dining rooms in 1972, when UI alumnus Larry Hitt worked in the Quadrangle Residence Hall dining room.

"My mother made it when I grew up, and I missed it as a dorm student," Hitt said.

Hitt decided to pitch the recipe as a main dish, said Mary Larew, who has worked with UI Food Service for 28 years.

"We got to know him really well," Larew said. "He kept talking about this wonderful tater tot casserole his mom made."

She said after sampling the casserole, student focus groups liked it. Then Hitt, his friends and Food Service employees held a private party to celebrate the dish.

About 60 people attended the black-tie affair — complete with candles and tablecloths — at which the casserole was served.

The meal began with a benediction by Lowell Brandt, a friend of Hitt. Brandt said he was chosen to speak because he once considered becoming a priest.

The benediction focused on the trials and tribulations of tater tots, said Stephen Bowers, assistant director of food service for the UI Department of Residence Services.

Despite the event's formality, everyone had fun.

"It was very silly," Larew said. "It was hilarious."

Since then, Mrs. Hitt's Tater Tot Casserole has been on the menu of residence hall dining rooms, and Bowers estimates that about half a million servings have been dished out to students.

Hitt is now an attorney in Denver, and his mother died two years ago. He said his mother would have been proud to know that her recipe is still being enjoyed by many UI students.

"It gave my mom great pleasure that all my friends made such a great deal about it," he said. "Frankly, I'm quite, quite gratified it's still around. I have three boys, and I still make it for them."

Despite the casserole's success story, UI students have mixed feelings about it. Most are interested in hearing the story behind the dish, Bowers said.

"There are real strong groups of students who love it, and some who don't," he said. "It's kind of fun to tell the story every so often."

Bowers said students are encouraged to try it. See TATER TOTS, Page 10A

Director tailors Union to fulfill student needs

Overseeing multiple aspects of student life and maintaining the needs of more than 1,000 employees, Union director Jean Kendall continues to provide total education for UI students.

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

"I'm never bored — frustrated, but never bored," said Jean Kendall of her position as the first woman director of the Union. Kendall, who has lived in Iowa City for many years, has been director since 1979 and said that "no two days are ever the same."

needed."

Educating students outside of academics is a never-ending project for Kendall and her staff.

"We always have a number of projects focusing on total quality management to keep the UI in excellence," she said. "Students need a place to learn skills outside of the classroom — both socially and culturally."

Meeting the needs of roughly 50 professional scientific managers, 150 merit staffers and 500 to 750 part-time students is a priority to Kendall but can also be one of the challenges in keeping the Union running smoothly.

"I purposely set my hours for later in the evening," she said. "If students or other night-shift employees have a problem, they know I'm here to listen — it's part of the team-building process."

Building size is only one of the major changes Kendall has witnessed during her 16 years as Union director. To keep up with UI growth, the Union first began expanding in 1924 and completed its last phase of innovation in 1988.

"I remember when there were 10,000 students, and you knew everyone walking around on campus," she said. "To adapt to the increasing number of students, we needed to expand the bookstore, add the food service and create extra reserved space for student activities."

Besides the increasing diversity of students, Kendall said meeting visiting lecturers and past political candidates are added bonuses, making her job more rewarding.

"It is fascinating to see what people are like," she said. "I've met President Bush, Jesse Jackson and have gotten to know certain members of The Joffrey Ballet pretty well."

Denying certain requests for necessary equipment due to a limited number of resources is a frustrating task, Kendall said.

"Deciding which programs are needed most is stressful," she said. "It would be wonderful to be able to say yes to everything and provide the latest technology for every department."

However, the main concern continues to be fulfilling the needs of students, Kendall said. She has seen positive changes in students regarding their willingness to work with UI staff to implement desired changes.

"We are always looking for students to sit on Union boards to express their ideas," she said. "Student involvement has improved over the years; instead of just bringing complaints to the board, they are ready to work together."

DAY IN THE LIFE

ference, first served as event service manager at the Union for 14 years while working toward a master's degree in business education. She was promoted to Union director in 1979.

Kendall, an Iowa City native, received a bachelor's degree in business education from Louisiana State University before returning to Iowa City. She put her career on hold for 10 years to raise her three children and received her master's degree from the UI in 1969.

"As manager of events, I was responsible for arranging things like speakers, organizing club activities and making room reservations," she said. "It was a lot of fun meeting such a diversity of people on the job."

Describing herself as a "jack-of-all-trades," Kendall is in meetings by 7 a.m. with the Chamber of Commerce, the Office of University Relations or Union senior managers to help continue making student life a positive experience.

"We need to be concerned in order to stay in the competition for new students," she said. "Sometimes you forget and become self-satisfied, but with different students and technology always coming in, continuous attention is

Former Clinton press secretary gleefully criticizes media

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Dee Dee Myers is striking back, and she's getting a kick out of it.

"The press never hesitates to pontificate about what's wrong in Washington," President Clinton's former press secretary said Wednesday. "Now that I'm on the outside, I can pontificate about what's wrong with the press, and I'll tell you, I'm having a great time."

Myers, who resigned in December, proceeded to pontificate about what she called an increasingly negative media. In a speech at the University of Nevada, she recited what she sees as the rules of the trade.

"No. 1: Be first rather than right. No. 2: Never let the facts stand in the way of a good story. No. 3: When in doubt, analyze. And No. 4: Good news is no news, so create conflict."

Myers has a stint on CNBC's "Equal Time" show this month with one-time nemesis Mary Matalin of President Bush's 1992 re-election campaign.

Actor clarifies bumpy courtship with Melissa Gilbert

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Well, Bruce, they don't call love a roller coaster for nothing.

"What a drama all that was!" Bruce Boxleitner said of the months leading up to his marriage to Melissa Gilbert.

The wedding earlier this year came as a surprise to many because Gilbert had been featured in a fall issue of TV Guide lamenting their breakup.

Boxleitner, 44, who plays the captain on the science-fiction series "Babylon Five," gallantly took the blame.

"Basically, I think it was just a guy named Boxleitner (who) had feet of clay there for a while. But he came to his senses and couldn't be happier," he said in an interview Tuesday.

He called Gilbert "a terrific woman that I really couldn't let get away."

Sony chairman cures Michael Jackson's fear of flying

NEW YORK (AP) — Flying was too much of a thriller for Michael Jackson until he looked fear in the cockpit.

The 36-year-old singer's fear of flying was allayed by the chairman of Sony Corp. of America, who took Jackson into the cockpits of corporate jets.

Michael Schulhof, a licensed commercial pilot, heard about Jackson's trepidation several years ago and began inviting him into Sony airplanes. He demonstrated safety features and showed Jackson how jets operate.

Jackson agent Sandy Fallin said in the March 5 issue of Parade magazine that the tours were "instrumental in helping Michael overcome his fear."

And Schulhof was protecting his investment — Jackson records for Sony's Epic label.

Limbaugh store back in business

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Rush is back on for Limbaugh fans who want their hero's jowly mug on a T-shirt or a coffee cup.

Current Events, a store catering to fans of the conservative talk show host, reopened in a new location Thursday, two months after it was picketed at a mall and lost its lease.

"We've had people pounding on our doors already," owner Bill Khourie said Wednesday amid the Rush shirts, baseball caps and "Rush Is Right" bumper stickers.

The protesters don't plan to return.

"I don't think we could accomplish anything else," said organizer Steve Rosenberg. "We still feel strongly that Rush Limbaugh is a demagogue, but we are not planning to take action."

EASIER REGISTRATION DESIRED

Lohman seeks publication of UI course evaluations

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan

If the UI published course evaluations, it could be useful information when students are registering for classes, said UI Student Government President John Lohman.

Lohman and the UISG Cabinet met with Joyce Moore, director of the UI Evaluation and Examination Service, to investigate how course evaluations could be obtained.

"I think it would be a tremendous resource for students, and there would be a huge demand for it if it was done right," Lohman said.

"It would help students who don't know somebody who has taken the course before," he said.

Lohman also said the evaluations would help incoming freshmen and transfer students who are registering, and UI freshman Katy Anderson agreed.

"You really don't have word of mouth (as a freshman). If you had somebody else's opinion besides the school's, that would help," Anderson said.

Anderson said despite the UI's descriptions of courses, published evaluations would be beneficial.

"You'd get more than just an official view. You'd know whether you're going to get something out of the class or not," she said.

"There are always classes that get left out. This would give information for every class," she said.

Lohman said he realizes the evaluations won't be published during his administration, but he will pass the idea on to his successor, UI junior Tim Williams.

Currently, Students' Perception of Teaching evaluation forms are used to evaluate instructors, but results are not available to the student population. This is because the questions asked aren't tailored to students, Moore said.

"They are not set up for publishing the results. They are diagnostic for specific incidents in the classroom," she said.

"The instructor demonstrated clinical techniques I was expected to develop" is an example of a statement on the SPOT evaluation. Such clinical evaluations would not help students when it comes to choosing a course, Moore said.

SPOT evaluation results are released to Teaching Assistants, course supervisors and faculty because the information is specific to Teaching Assistants and the classroom situation, Moore said.

"They help me as a course supervisor. They help me to know how a class is going," said Kathy Heilenman, associate professor of French and director of the French and Italian language program.

Moore said since the course information students want would be different from the information obtained by the SPOT evaluations, it would have to be obtained in a different way.

"What will have to happen is that student evaluations will be a separate form from SPOT. It's going to have to be a whole separate form. We would provide support to the students," she said.

Moore said this is not the first time the idea to publish students' evaluations of courses has been introduced at the UI.

"We did have a system back in '87 where a student group from the student government got together and created a separate evaluation. Those were supposed to be published," she said.

Moore said the students that proposed the idea were idealistic, but when it came to doing the work, time was a factor. After 1987, no one was around to continue the effort.

Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind., used to have such a service, but it was discontinued.

"There was one once years ago, and we're talking about doing it again," said Marge Halsema, data processing manager at Purdue University.

Similarly, at the University of Illinois, this type of evaluation is on its second hiatus since it began in 1988. The student government is working on a new student rating evaluation system, which would incorporate other sources of information.

"It never really took off among students," said Rich Williams, associate head of measurement and evaluation at the University of Illinois.

Lohman said he realizes that following through on the idea would be difficult.

"It's a good idea. It's going to take a lot of manpower," he said.

NCAA tournament sparks parking shuffle

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

About 3,000 UI students, faculty and staff are being asked to relocate their vehicles to remote storage lots to make room for wrestlers, coaches and fans coming to Iowa City for the NCAA Wrestling Championships.

About 15,000 people are expected to attend the championships scheduled for March 16-18 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Relocations will take place March 12-18.

Many of the parking spaces needed for the tournament will be provided off campus in downtown ramps and surrounding private lots. However, in an effort to free spaces adjacent to Carver-Hawkeye, more than 2,500 permit-holders will be relocated to the Hawkeye storage lot and other areas around campus.

About 600 students who normally park in the Finkbine commuter and Hawkeye Storage lots will be reassigned to either the Riverside Drive service vehicle lot, lot 11 on South Madison Street or the North Campus Parking Ramp.

Officials from the UI Parking and Transportation Department said students may find the relocation more convenient than parking in Hawkeye storage because the temporary parking assignment allows students to park their vehicles closer to the residence halls.

While some UI students were glad to hear about the closer parking spaces, others said the relocation is just another example of the UI parking hassle.

"It'll be somewhat of a problem to have to go out there and move my car again," UI sophomore Jessica Roseland said. "But it will be nice to have it near the dorms without having to pay meters."

David Ricketts, director of the parking department, said he realizes the relocations are not ideal.

"No one relishes asking 3,000 people to move their cars, but you couldn't house this event any other way," he said. "This is a major university event — the first time the event has ever sold out — and we've been asked to provide parking. It's a challenge."

Free bus passes for the Iowa City and Coralville transit systems and free Campus shuttle service will be expanded to relocation areas to accommodate UI employees who are temporarily reassigned, Ricketts said. Employees willing to car pool will be offered priority parking near UI Hospitals and Clinics March 15-17.

Ricketts said the belief that the parking department and UI Athletics will collect huge monetary payoffs from the championships is a common misconception.

"We hope to break even," he said. "The tournament is going to bring in money for the community, but our department doesn't directly benefit."

Les Steenlage, an administrative associate in the UI Men's Intercollegiate Athletics department and tournament director, is coordinating local arrangements. Steenlage — who also coordinated arrangements for the 1986 and 1991 NCAA championships, which were also held at the UI — said faculty reactions to the temporary relocations have been favorable.

"Cooperation from local government and business groups in the Iowa City, Coralville and Cedar Rapids areas has been excellent," Steenlage said. "The tournament is a sellout, which is due to that cooperation and the wonderful support from the entire university community, fans, coaches and participants. We think everyone will be rewarded by the outstanding wrestling that the championships promise."

Parking Changes

Because of the NCAA Wrestling Championship, about 600 students who usually park in the Finkbine Commuter and Hawkeye Storage lots will be reassigned to one of three lots closer to campus during the week before spring break.

EATING A VARIETY OF FOODS RECOMMENDED

Study: most college students have unhealthy diets

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

UI senior David Rarick eats a burrito and angel food snack cakes for lunch almost every day.

Rarick is like many college students who don't have the time to prepare nutritious meals. A study released Feb. 21 by Michigan State University found that the diets of most college students lack food variety, which is important for good health.

Eating a variety of foods reduces the chances of developing a deficiency or excess of any one nutrient, said Won Song, Michigan State University professor of food science and human nutrition and coordinator of the study.

Rarick is a prime example of poor eating habits. He said on a typical day he sleeps for as long as he can before his morning classes — which means he skips breakfast.

Lunch is usually a burrito and angel food snack cakes from QuikTrip, Rarick said.

"The nutrition label on the cakes said that one serving of the cakes has 40 percent of the fat content allowed in a day," he said. "But I still eat it."

Rarick's dinner usually consists of pizza or macaroni and cheese. He said he drinks about three 52-ounce cups of soda throughout the day.

This has been his diet since he came to the UI four years ago, he said.

Rarick said although he would like to eat better, he simply doesn't have the time to cook healthier food.

"Since I'm always running back and forth between classes, it's too hard and too expensive (to eat healthy)," he said. "Maybe when I get a real job, I can prepare food to take to work."

UI students living in residence halls eat in the residence hall dining rooms, which are always trying to offer healthier alternatives, said Stephen Bowers, assistant director of food service for the UI Department of Residence Services.

"We make changes every year to the menu," Bowers said. "Lately, there has been a demand for more healthy products, so we're trying to accommodate them."

Six surveys are taken every year to find out if students want to eat healthy foods. About 65 percent of those polled so far have replied affirmatively.

Some examples of recent changes to residence hall dining room menus are vegetarian dishes and nonfat salad dressings, Bowers said.

Menu content has also changed in the past few years. All meals currently have a calorie count next to them, and fat content is also being calibrated for future menus.

Even though residence hall dining rooms are serving healthier foods, taste is what counts, said UI sophomore Reina Whitmer.

Whitmer, who lives in Hillcrest Residence Hall, said she ate a healthier diet when she lived in an apartment last year.

"We never ordered out last year," she said.

She said this year she often decides not to eat in the residence hall dining room and instead orders pizza late at night, although she knows it's not good for her.

Song said it doesn't matter where college students live — they need to know that eating healthy is always important.

"We need to give them the knowledge to choose better snacks that are still convenient," he said.

Students at Weber Elementary School, 3850 Rohrer Road, enjoy lunch while fierce battles are being waged on Capitol Hill about the future of America's school lunch programs. If the Senate passes the current bill, Iowa City schools could see a 40 percent increase in lunch prices.

Bill jeopardizes I.C. lunch funds

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Lunch programs in Iowa City schools could be cut up to 80 percent if the Senate passes a bill already pushed through the House.

The "Contract With America" Personal Responsibility Act, which was approved by the House Feb. 23, calls for the "blocking" — or consolidation — of funds from 300 grants that cover food and welfare assistance, said Christina Martin, press secretary for Gov. Terry Branstad. States would be able to use the consolidated funds as they see fit, she said.

"One needs to look at this in a big picture," Martin said. "Most governors are in strong support of block grants. Many states — if they could receive money — could provide better services to more people."

Since there would no longer be a grant specifically designated for school lunches, schools may no longer be guaranteed money for lunch programs, said Diane Duncan-Goldsmith, director of food service for the Iowa City Community School District.

Currently, the district offers lunches to students — who pay the full price of $1.25, a reduced price of 40 cents or receive lunches for free — depending on their families' incomes.

The district is now reimbursed by government grants for the reduced and free lunches. If the bill is passed, the district could lose about 80 percent of its lunch funding, Duncan-Goldsmith said.

Diane Duncan-Goldsmith, director of food service for the Iowa City Community School District

"Essentially, the districts are saying, 'If you cut the funding for the school lunch program, the districts are going to have to pass those cuts on to the children,'" she said. "If you're hungry, you can't learn — regardless of your economic background."

However, Martin said the flexibility of block grants will mean more money could be made available for school lunch programs if a need exists or funds could be cut if demand decreases.

It is too early to tell exactly what effects block grants would have on programs such as school lunches if the bill is passed, but there are many other programs which need to be considered, Martin said.

"School lunches are a small part," she said. "There are many other programs which will have an impact on Iowa's children. We can better utilize the grant funds for these other programs."

The bill has surprised Duncan-Goldsmith, who said in 1994, the Senate was discussing universal meals for school lunch programs.

"It was a 180-degree turn from what the talk was in the Senate last year," she said.

Although the Iowa City School Board is considering what alternatives exist in case the bill is passed, all students — regardless of their financial situation — will still have to be fed at school, Duncan-Goldsmith said.

"We can't bus them home for lunch," she said. "I don't see how that would be possible."

Powerball prize could surpass national record

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Powerball jackpot could set a national lottery record if nobody hits it this weekend, but director Charles Strutt said the estimated $100 million prize will likely be claimed before it has a chance to rise.

"If nobody wins, that puts us in unknown territory. We'd probably start with a conservative number and watch it rise from there. It could just take off. It would be at least in the $130 million range," Strutt said.

The nation's largest lottery jackpot was $118.8 million in the California lottery. The prize was split 10 ways in April 1991.

The $100 million Powerball prize is the multistate game's third-highest jackpot, the largest being $111 million won by a Wisconsin teacher in the summer of 1993. There also was a $101 million jackpot claimed last November.

Strutt said at least 50 million of the $1 Powerball tickets will be sold before Saturday's drawing. Each ticket has one chance in 55 million to win.

If 50 million were sold and each had a different combination of numbers, the chances of someone winning the prize would be 90 percent. But many tickets have the same combinations. Strutt estimated that only about 60 percent of all possible combinations will be covered, meaning there is a 40 percent chance that nobody will win.

Increased pay raise nixed by Board of Supervisors

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors opted against accepting a higher pay raise for elected officials and passed its budget for the 1996 fiscal year Thursday morning at a formal meeting.

Although the county compensation board recommended a 5 percent raise for all county elected officials, supervisors decided to stick with their original 3.5 percent raise.

Board officials approached the supervisors earlier this week about a higher raise.

"We appreciated that, but we just don't have the revenues to do it," said Charles Duffy, board chairman. Supervisor Steve Lacina agreed.

"I do think the elected officials are doing fine, but it's more of a financial constraint," he said.

The compensation board unanimously voted to accept its budget. A community budget hearing was held Feb. 21 during which the public provided input on the supervisors' recommendations.

Supervisor Joe Bolkcom said the original pay raise kept elected officials on the same pay raise schedule as other county employees.

"One of the reasons we did look at a 3.5 percent increase is half our work force received a three and a half raise, so we'd be on the same plane as the rest of the county," Bolkcom said.

The 1996 county budget will not put pressure on pocketbooks of employees or county residents who must pay property taxes, Bolkcom said.

"I think it's a modest budget," he said. "I respect all the information and ideas we got on how to save money. I think we did a good job."

Duffy agreed that passing a quality budget is a challenge when so many agencies need more funding.

"The budgets were received at least a year in advance, and I think our department heads did a good job," Duffy said. "It's tough to come out exactly right and give everyone what they would like to have. We just don't have enough revenue."

DISEASE RISK REDUCED

Study OKs stored-blood transfusions for infants

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

When Cecelia Behnke was born Dec. 16, she was two months premature and weighed only 2 pounds 10 ounces. Since then, she's been living at UI Hospitals and Clinics, where she's had about five or six blood transfusions.

Christine Behnke, Cecelia's mother, said her daughter will be at the hospital for at least another month. While Cecelia is there, her blood must be drawn for tests monitoring her health. The 11-week-old baby's body cannot produce enough blood to compensate for the amount taken, so she must receive blood transfusions.

"She's used to needles," Behnke said. "She doesn't cry because she's on a ventilator."

The general practice was to give only fresh blood — blood stored for 10 days or less — to premature babies who required blood transfusions. The belief was that blood deteriorates as it ages, producing higher levels of certain chemicals than a baby's body can handle. Therefore, babies received blood from numerous donors as supplies of fresh blood ran low.

But Ronald Strauss, UI professor of pathology and medical director of UIHC's Blood Donor Center, conducted a study which concluded that babies can receive stored blood — which can be kept up to 42 days — without harm. Using stored blood cuts down on the number of donors babies receive blood from, making it less likely for babies to contract diseases.

"The reason it is important to limit the number of transfusions a baby gets exposed to is because each donor is a small risk of having hepatitis," Strauss said. "Risks are very, very tiny, but logic would tell you that the more donors you're exposed to — even though the risk is small — the more likely you are to get an infection."

The risk of contracting hepatitis is one in 5,000 per donor exposure, and the risk of getting HIV — the virus that causes AIDS — is one in

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

At 4 pounds 10 ounces, Cecelia Behnke was "stable and improving" on her 78th day of life, according to Sharon Heckelsmiller, a nurse at UI Hospitals and Clinics. Cecelia was born two months premature and receives blood transfusions to replace blood taken for tests.

500,000 per donor exposure, Strauss said.

He developed the study three years ago, thinking it probably wasn't necessary to transfuse fresh blood to babies, who are given very small amounts at a time.

More than 90 percent of babies who weigh between 1 1/2 and 2 pounds at birth require transfusions, Strauss said. They need an average of three to four transfusions, although the number could be as high as eight to 10. Transfusions are required to replace blood taken from babies for various tests to monitor their health.

In his study, Strauss divided babies into two groups, giving one group transfusions of fresh blood and the other group stored blood. He looked for reactions and differences in the babies' blood chemistries and found the effects were the same.

"There were no problems giving older blood," he said.

A 2-pound baby has about 2 1/2 ounces of blood in his or her body, said Dr. Ed Bell, professor of pediatrics and director of neonatology at UIHC. Since blood is drawn daily from babies, transfusions are vital.

"Parents understand and are nervous about (transfusions) because they know (babies) can catch bad things," Bell said. "Even though we screen blood, parents — as long as they know there's any risk — are nervous."

Bell said the results of Strauss' study alleviated some of the fear parents feel.

"Our goal is to use transfusions as little as necessary and make them as safe as possible," he said.

Strauss said UIHC recently decided to use stored blood for transfusions for babies, and other physicians in the country are moving in this same direction.

"There is a trend in all of the blood centers in the United States to try to limit blood exposure, but they're still in transition," he said. "Not all centers do the same thing."

Behnke said blood transfusions are necessary to save her baby's life, and Strauss' study did lessen her fear about blood transfusions.

"If they would ever have to trace anything, it would be easier to find the donors," she said.

Behnke and her husband, Lonnie, continue to travel about an hour each day from Long Grove, Iowa, to UIHC to see their daughter.

ter. Behnke said her daughter benefits from the transfusions and has gained two pounds.

"She's still on a ventilator helping her breathe, but she's growing, which is a good thing," she said.

Maryland bans smoking in all indoor workplaces

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Smokers won't be able to light up at the office or in bars, restaurants and hotels under a statewide ban ordered Thursday by Gov. Parris Glendening.

The regulation — one of the nation's most comprehensive — prohibits smoking in all indoor workplaces except tobacco shops, laboratories doing research on smoking and employee lounges ventilated directly outdoors.

Only California, Vermont and Utah have anti-smoking laws as strict.

"We must make Maryland a healthy state," said Glendening, a Democrat. "What we do not want is for Maryland to be known as the cancer state."

Maryland has the nation's fourth-highest cancer rate.

The state's top court last week lifted an injunction that had been placed on the ban while opponents challenged it. The ban, proposed a year ago, takes effect March 27.

But some lawmakers haven't stopped fighting.

A bill was introduced Thursday to exempt hotels, motels and any business — including convention centers — with a liquor license. Sponsors say Maryland's $4.5 billion tourism industry could be devastated by the ban.

House Speaker Casper Taylor, a Democrat, said most national groups looking for a convention site will almost certainly choose a city without anti-smoking laws.

"That kind of business is going to go to those states where smokers have rights," Taylor said.

Scientists announce isolation of top quark

BATAVIA, Ill. (AP) — In what some scientists say could be the last hurrah for ground-breaking U.S. research into the fundamental nature of matter, physicists announced Thursday they have isolated the long-theorized subatomic particle known as the "top quark."

The breakthrough came from two teams of physicists — each about 450 members strong — working in good-natured competition at the Fermi National Laboratory's particle accelerator to isolate the last of six tiny building blocks of matter.

"There was this one piece of the puzzle missing," said Stanford University physicist Michael Peskin. "You know what shape it is, and you know where it goes, but you're not satisfied until you can put it in the right place."

Physicists across the nation eagerly watched the announcement, which was broadcast live from Fermi, about 30 miles west of Chicago, where scientists could barely contain their enthusiasm.

"We're delighted that the top quark has waited for discovery until we were mature enough to make it," said Paul Grannis, who, like many of the researchers, divides his time between Fermi and a university — in his case, the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

SEATTLE — A gunman "bent on destruction" opened fire on three women in a courthouse Thursday, killing two and critically wounding the third. One of the slain women was eight months pregnant, and efforts to save the baby failed.

A 47-year-old man with a semi-automatic handgun has been taken into custody and was being questioned, police said. No charges were immediately filed.

"It appears that he knew all of the victims. The relationships at this point we're not clear on," police spokeswoman Christie-Lynne Bonner said.

The victims, who were shot while sitting on a bench on the second floor of the King County Courthouse, suffered multiple gunshot wounds to the head and chest, said spokesman Larry shooting occurred, said a man stood in front of three or four people seated on the bench and fired five or six shots.

At that point, she and her clients ran, she said.

Authorities are investigating why metal detectors weren't in use on the second floor Thursday morning, court security officials said.

"Only police and corrections officers should be carrying guns in the courtroom. This drives home the message that if people are bent on destruction, they are not going to follow the rules," Police Chief Norm Stamper said.

The victims' names were not immediately released. But attorney Margie Baran said they included a woman whose husband was seeking an annulment of their marriage. Two friends planning to testify for her also were shot, Baran said.

Baran said her partner, Mimi Castillo, was representing the woman, who had allegedly suffered domestic abuse. The case had been scheduled for a 9:30 a.m. hearing in family court, she said.

At about that time, officers at the courthouse heard shots and found the armed man in a hallway, police spokeswoman Vinette Tichi said.

APRIL RUN-OFF SCHEDULED

Former gang member wins votes

CHICAGO — Wallace "Gator" Bradley, a convicted criminal who makes no bones about his gang past, promised disenchanted young voters a piece of the action, and they helped him get into a run-off for City Council.

Now some older residents in the downtrodden 3rd Ward on the South Side wonder if Bradley is really aiming to line the pockets of the Gangster Disciple gang he once served as an enforcer.

Bradley and gang leaders are "planning to sew up the city, ward by ward," 68-year-old Lorrie Jackson said as she stood on a street corner. "It can't be for no good. His background is just too bad. I know everybody deserves a second chance, but not when it comes to gangs."

"Those are nothing but young people voting for him, and they're hoodlums, criminals, folks who live in the projects."

Bradley, who served prison time in the 1970s for an armed robbery conviction, took 31 percent of the vote in Tuesday's four-way primary. That wasn't enough to win, but it did force incumbent Dorothy Tillman into an April 4 run-off. Tillman took nearly 48 percent of the vote but needed 50 percent to win outright.

"We showed them we aren't just a bunch of gang-bangers around here," Bradley said.

Critics say the gangs want to gain control over federal, state and city development money coming into the area.

Bradley's supporters contend he speaks for disenfranchised youths who want to see change occur quickly in the neighborhoods of housing projects, abandoned homes and weed-filled lots.

Tillman, a civil rights activist known for wearing flashy hats, has become too entrenched, some younger people say.

Bradley says Tillman "sold out" to Mayor Richard Daley and has become less vocal about the area's needs.

"She's not doing nothing for this community," said Leticia Edmondson, 26. "By him being a former gang member, he listens and knows what we need."

The 42-year-old Bradley's current relationship with gangs is fuzzy.

"I am a Gangster Disciple," he told reporters after his primary victory. "Black gangs, I love 'em, OK? Only criminals in the black gangs I hate."

The next day, Bradley contended he no longer is a gang member and that his remarks were taken out of context.

Whatever his connection, the Gangster Disciples — one of the city's largest gangs — have become more politically savvy by forming a political action group called 21st Century V.O.T.E. (Voices of Total Empowerment).

Some people complained that gang members intimidated voters into going to the polls.

Tillman, for her part, says she has no fear of Bradley. "He's a media monster you guys created," she said.

"I am," Bradley replied. "And I'm gonna eat her up on the fourth."

Prosecution contends defense coached Lopez

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Calm and unwavering under relentless cross-examination, Rosa Lopez stuck to her story about seeing O.J. Simpson's Bronco the night of the two murders but admitted she can't pinpoint the exact time and never sought out police to tell them what she had seen.

In a courtroom packed with Simpson's family and supporters, Lopez insisted she was telling the truth.

Asked why she didn't give the important information to anyone

"We talked about my always telling the truth, sir."

Rosa Lopez, defense witness in the O.J. Simpson trial, responding to questioning about coaching she may have received from the defense until a defense investigator approached her weeks after the former football star was charged with the slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, Lopez said, "No one ever came to ask me about it."

In contrast to her demeanor last week — when she was tearful and distraught under intense prosecution questioning — Lopez was confident and forthright. She was clearly concentrating on giving brief one-word answers of "yes" or "no."

She also often said, "I don't remember," and when Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden pressed her, she sometimes replied, "If you say so, sir."

Darden, his questioning more restrained than in the attack he launched on Lopez last week, picked up on her familiar use of the term "Mr. Johnnie" to describe defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr.

In contrast, she referred to him Thursday as "Mr. Cochran."

Darden repeatedly suggested that Lopez's testimony was scripted by Cochran and other defense attorneys.

Asked by Darden if she met with Simpson's attorneys during a court break, Lopez said she had but that they didn't tell her what to say.

Associated Press

Rosa Lopez, right, testifies in Los Angeles Superior Court Thursday during cross-examination by Prosecutor Christopher Darden, center, that she was uncertain about exactly what time she saw O.J. Simpson's Bronco parked outside his home and that a defense investigator tried to feed her times beneficial to Simpson.

Through an interpreter, the Spanish-speaking witness said, "We talked about my always telling the truth, sir."

Darden let out a loud guffaw and was admonished by Superior Court Judge Lance Ito. The judge ordered Darden's reaction stricken from the videotape record being made of Lopez's testimony for possible later viewing by the jury if she makes good on her promise to leave the country.

But on Thursday, her memory proved sketchy, and her sense of time was less than precise. She has said she last saw the Bronco when she walked her employer's golden retriever shortly after 10 p.m. June 12. Prosecutors contend the murders occurred at about 10:15 p.m.

Darden bored in on the witness, using details from a report of a defense investigator who interviewed Lopez twice last summer. The report says Lopez placed the Bronco outside Simpson's estate between 10:15 and 10:20 p.m.

"All I said was that it was after 10," Lopez said.

"So you don't know how long after 10?" Darden asked.

"No, sir."

At another point, Darden asked, "Do you have a hard time remembering time?"

"If I don't have it written down, how can I remember?" she replied.

"Is that the only way you can remember dates and times?" Darden asked.

"No, sir," she answered.

Darden asked if investigator William Pavelic first suggested Lopez had seen the Bronco at 10:15 or 10:20.

"If that's what he's saying, that's fine," said the witness.

Darden, who sharply attacked the witness last week for insisting she had a plane reservation to El Salvador when she had not yet made it, caught her in another lie Thursday when he produced an application she had filed for unemployment benefits. Lopez said earlier she was leaving the country and would not be claiming unemployment.

He also confronted her with a videotape that shows her telling a television reporter about voices she heard the night of the murders. Moments earlier, she had testified that she never said such a thing to reporters.

But the majority of Darden's quietly controlled cross-examination was aimed at portraying Lopez as a puppet of Simpson's lawyers and an advocate of his defense strategy.

Neo-Nazi teens accused of murder

Jennifer Loven
Associated Press

MIDLAND, Mich. — Two hulking teen-age brothers with tattooed faces were taken to court in shackles Thursday to face charges of beating and stabbing their parents and younger brother to death in Pennsylvania.

"They were people you had to be wary of," said Joseph LaComare, who lives two doors from the family's house in Salisbury Township, Pa. "You never really knew about what they would do, and people here were afraid of them."

Bryan Freeman, 17, and David Freeman, 15, were arrested Wednesday at a rural home near Hope, Mich., along with a cousin and another young man.

The brothers and the cousin, 18-year-old Nelson Birdwell III, were led into court Thursday with their wrists and ankles shackled and their arms held to their sides by a chain around their waists.

Judge James Wilson said the brothers are charged with three counts each of homicide and conspiracy to commit homicide in the slayings of Dennis Freeman, 54; Brenda Freeman, 48; and Eric Freeman, 11, whose bodies were found Monday.

Police say the brothers had threatened for years to kill their parents as revenge for trying to impose their strict way of life as Jehovah's Witnesses on the two. The brothers collected Nazi paraphernalia and have neo-Nazi slogans tattooed on their foreheads.

The three made no statement other than to answer "yes" when the judge asked if they understood the charges and their right to an attorney.

Their court-appointed attorneys said the teens wanted extradition hearings on whether they should be returned to Pennsylvania. That process could take up to 90 days.

Wilson ordered the Freemans held without bail.

Birdwell was charged with being an accessory after the fact and car theft, and his bail was set at $150,000. The fourth person arrested Wednesday was released.

After the killings, the brothers were videotaped in an Ohio grocery store, then traced to an Ohio motel on a tip from a truck driver who recognized them. Finally, a Michigan State Police SWAT team stormed a home the brothers had called from the motel.

The brothers are an imposing sight. David stands 6 feet 3 inches, weighs 245 pounds and has "Sieg Heil" etched above his eyebrows. Bryan, who has "Berserker" tattooed on his forehead, is 6 feet and weighs 215 pounds.

Birdwell, standing about 6 feet 3 inches and weighing about 240 pounds, also has "Berserker" tattooed on his forehead.

FAILED BALANCED-BUDGET AMENDMENT

Ignoring basic precepts

Score one for the Founding Fathers: the Constitution was spared from being ripped apart by Republicans who overestimated their victory last November.

The balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution was noble in idea but rotten to the core in practice. It corrupted the Constitution in a number of ways — namely that it ignored the ideas that the Constitution's framers had when they wrote it.

Among the problems in the amendment were the loopholes that would have become superhighways once the 2002 deadline for balancing the budget came along.

Imagine if they had the option to suspend the First Amendment for a little while. The Constitution isn't a convenience; it's the law.

Republicans wrote in a safety valve that would have allowed Congress to deficit-spend in case of an emergency. In effect, Congress could override part of the Constitution whenever they saw fit. Imagine if they had the option to suspend the First Amendment for a little while. The Constitution isn't a convenience; it's the law.

Another problem with the balanced-budget amendment is that it doesn't provide any discipline. As Senate Minority Leader Thomas Daschle said Thursday, "It's a bumper sticker creation of the Republican National Committee."

The courts would have provided the discipline of the Constitution, but Republicans decided they were better than everyone else and wanted to write the Supreme Court out of the Constitution for the first time in American history.

The biggest complaint by those voting against the amendment was that the Social Security trust fund would have been looted to fund the operating budget. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole shot back that those were the same people who voted to tax Social Security last year, which is true.

It's true that they voted to increase taxes on wealthy Americans, including those on Social Security, because they could afford it. If the trust fund was looted, it would cripple poor senior citizens who have no income beyond Social Security.

What it all boils down to is that Congress almost corrupted the organic law of this country. They did so with such reckless abandon that they would have ignored the basic precepts of a government with checks and balances and the fundamental government of the Constitution.

UNUSUAL AND UNEXPECTED INFORMATION

Be careful surfing the net

No one knew what Jake Baker was up to. And how could they? The 20-year-old University of Michigan student didn't exactly try to publish his stories. But neither did he prevent his twisted thoughts from making their way onto the Internet.

Baker wrote three stories about the rape, mutilation, murder and bondage of women. One of his stories centered around a specific woman in his Japanese class. Officials at the University of Michigan were alerted to the situation, and Baker is now suspended and facing federal charges of making interstate threats to injure someone.

Welcome to the information superhighway, a revolutionary — and some say dangerous — place to spend your time. Because "surfing the net" affords users a certain amount of anonymity, many of the comments scrolling the screen are racist, lewd, homophobic, anti-Semitic and disturbing.

The Associated Press estimates that approximately 13.5 million people log on to the Internet daily. Considering the volume of users, it is hardly surprising that a few of these Internet gurus proudly display their abhorrent thoughts for all to read. Yet these are just thoughts.

But as disgusting as Baker's thinking is, federal charges are hardly warranted because none of his stories has been acted on. If we lived in a world where we could be arrested based on our thoughts or writing, most of us would have been thrown in the slammer at some point by now.

Baker's mother somehow blames what she calls the "feminazis" at the University of Michigan for her son's fetid pastime. Taking the blame away from her disturbed son and laying it on women is almost as unconscionable as her son's thinking. It was Baker's turgid thinking and Baker's alone which got him suspended and charged with a federal crime.

If we lived in a world where we could be arrested based on our thoughts or writing, most of us would have been thrown in the slammer at some point by now.

A wealth of information exists on the Internet. From the Library of Congress to the New York Public Library, all sorts of files can be downloaded on to your personal computer. Baker's offensive thoughts are but a blemish on the face of this information cyberspace.

Unfortunately, computer network users should still be wary and regard those with whom they are communicating with some degree of caution.

After all, like Baker, there are those who consciously surf the net in a vile effort to drag you into a strong undertow.

JONATHAN LYONS

Sexual assault is still common at the UI

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program received 297 calls to its rape crisis line during the last quarter of 1994. That's up a bit from 219 calls last year during the same period here at the UI. Oddly we hear complaints that so-called radical feminists are exaggerating incidents of rape to further their own collective agenda.

Because they are opposed to sexual assault, their agenda is somehow interpreted as being anti-male by a paranoid few who for whatever reason take such reports as personal attacks.

I do not know former UI economics Teaching Assistant Vickram Butani. But I do know that he is serving a disgustingly slight 10 days in jail after pleading guilty to sexually assaulting a woman who was a UI student at the time — a student who trusted Butani.

A Feb. 28 DI report on Butani's sentencing reviewed the statement made by Butani's victim. She told of trusting Butani, whom she had known for more than a year, and accepting his invitation as a friend to grab a mango pulp and see pictures of his family back home.

Her statement also tells of how Butani changed, becoming an attacker without warning once he had gotten her into his apartment.

Despite any tales the most paranoid may howl out about women changing their minds after having consensual intercourse and reporting the incident as a rape or of so-called feminists concocting these stories to make males look bad as a whole, this sort of thing happens every week at the UI — even more.

And despite campuswide efforts to combat the random attacks by strangers that so many people tend to think comprise most such attacks, there is almost nothing that even the most concerted coalition can do against deceit and predation of the sort demonstrated in this case.

The blue cap phone system at the UI was an excellent idea, and at times the phones have been used to report genuine emergencies, rather than simply acting as targets for drunken jerks trying to out-macho one another after a night downtown. But in the sweeping majority of sexual assault cases, the blue emergency phones will only be used by women who have already been attacked. That's because the majority of sexual assault cases are attacks by someone known by the victim — on a date, for instance — rather than by a stranger.

The initial battles must be fought by individual women because they are the only ones they can rely upon in completely unexpected assaults, such as the one perpetrated by Butani. This is not to say that such assaults are in any way the fault of the people who are attacked and victimized; rather, it is simply a recommendation for pragmatism in one's approach to life at the UI.

Consider taking time to work out with the self-defense training group at RVAP. With strength and confidence, you may be able to retaliate against an attacker enough to escape such an attempt.

Remember that no one has the means to toughen up his eyes, throat or groin and that an attacker does not deserve humane treatment when self-defense is necessary.

It is advisable that women at the UI consider carrying Mace, pepper spray, a whistle or a small personal alarm for extra protection. Mace and pepper sprays can be purchased in small bottles that attach to a key ring, making keeping them on hand convenient enough.

It is also important that we all remember that such an attack is not the fault of the one being attacked. Whether someone is going up to a trusted friend's room to look at old family photos — or, to use Sen. Joseph Biden's example, if a woman is walking naked down a busy street with a $100 bill taped to her forehead — no one ever deserves to be thought of as something to be used or attacked.

And it is particularly important that men put the word out to other men that sexual assault is criminal. It is bullying and harmful. It is the act of someone who deserves to have his rights disregarded exactly as he would disregard a woman's rights as a human being — not a thing to be beaten and attacked.

Jail is an inconvenience, but isn't much of a punishment. Ten days in jail is practically a vacation.

We must all find ways to work against these unprovoked and cowardly assaults, for the system we trust to protect us will have released one who pleaded guilty to sexual assault back into the UI community less than a week from the publication of this column.

Women need not become paranoid, but the constant stream of reports of sexual assault in the UI community suggests that it is only pragmatic that everyone be as prepared as possible to deal with a deceitful, predatory, would-be attacker.

Men can help lessen the number of such assaults by breaking out of the act-alike, lock-stepping cycle of guys trying to top one another's misogyny. With just a sliver of courage and self-identity, a man can stand up to the denigration of women that allows some men to objectify and victimize them.

THIS MODERN WORLD

THIS MODERN WORLD

by TOM TOMORROW

DAVE BARRY

Let's humor all the corporation attorneys

Before I get to today's topic, which is mutant cereal in Canada, I want to apologize in a sincerely legal manner to JOCKEY International Inc., which manufactures JOCKEY brand wearing apparel. Recently, I received a certified letter from Charlotte Shapiro, a JOCKEY brand corporation attorney, noting that in a column concerning the issue of whether or not you can eat your underwear, I had incorrectly used the official JOCKEY brand name in the following sentence:

"Waiter, are these JOCKEYS fresh?" Shapiro points out that the word JOCKEY is an official trademark, not a generic word for underwear, and it must be used "as an adjective followed by the common name for the product." Thus my sentence should legally have read as follows:

"Waiter, there's a fly in these JOCKEYS!" I am grateful to Shapiro for making me more sensitive to this issue, and in the future if I ever hear anyone misusing the JOCKEY brand name, I will make it my business to strike that person with a Sears CRAFTSMAN brand hammer.

Speaking of hard objects, I have here an alarming item from the oxymoronically named Canadian newspaper Northern Life sent in by alert reader Alan Nursall. The article, by Kim Dominique-Plouffe, concerns a Sudbury, Ontario, woman named Dot Brousseau, who was pouring some Kellogg's brand CORN FLAKES cereal into a bowl when — please try to remain calm — out came a hard, fist-sized clump of CORN FLAKES all wadded together.

Here in the United States, a typical consumer confronted with this situation would probably just take it in stride, by which I mean don a STYROFOAM brand neck brace and sue Kellogg's for $4.7 million. But Canada is not part of the United States (it is part of Iceland). So what Brousseau did was contact Northern Life, which printed a story headlined "Woman surprised to find a lump 'the size of a fist' in her corn flakes box." The article is accompanied by a photograph of Brousseau looking concerned and holding the CORN FLAKES clump, which sort of looks like an oyster.

Like most professional journalists, I routinely investigate any documented case of breakfast foods spontaneously wadding together, so I contacted various news sources that I have cultivated over the years and was able to determine that Canada does in fact have telephones. I then called Brousseau and asked her for an update on the situation. She told me that she had received "several compliments" on the Northern Life article and that a number of people had come over to view her clump, which she is keeping in a BAGGIES brand plastic bag.

She said that a Kellogg's representative had also come to her home and examined the clump and had wanted to take it away, but she refused. "I'm going to have it analyzed," she said.

She also said that Kellogg's had given her some free products. "They're going to bend over backward to kiss our butt," she noted.

I asked Brousseau if she was aware of scientific experiments showing that Kellogg's strawberry POP-TART brand snack pastries will, if you place them in a toaster and hold the lever down, burst into flames within six minutes (unless you attempt to demonstrate this to a national TV audience on the David Letterman show, in which case the POP-TARTS will not ignite until after the segment has ended). Brousseau was surprised to hear this and told me with concern in her voice that she had strawberry POP-TARTS in her cupboard even as we spoke.

Speaking of scary consumer things, I have also received, from alert reader Ron Fusco, an article from the Dec. 27 edition of The Pacific Daily News, which is published in Guam, an island located somewhere in the PACIFIC brand ocean. The top story on page one concerns a 13-year-old Guam boy whose NIKE brand shoes exploded. I am not making this up. The article, written by Elizabeth Thompson, quotes the boy's mother as saying that her son had jumped up to touch a beam in the garage when his shoes "seemed to explode, catching his jeans on fire."

The story states that this is just one isolated incident of NIKE shoes apparently exploding. We cannot conclude that all NIKE footwear explodes, even if we feel somewhat bitter toward NIKE brand corporation because we are forced to purchase its absurdly overpriced products for our children, who refuse to wear any other kind because they have been exposed to multimillion-dollar advertising campaigns featuring athletes such as MICHAEL brand JORDAN. We should continue to purchase and wear NIKE brand shoes with total confidence, unless we happen to be among those rare individuals who need, for some medical reason, to retain the use of their feet.

Ha ha! I am joshing, of course. I have nothing but the deepest respect and affection for the NIKE corporation and its huge legal department. So just in case I may have misused or maligned any brand names in this column, let me conclude with this formal statement of apology to NIKE, CRAFTSMAN, KELLOGG'S, STYROFOAM, BAGGIES, MICHAEL JORDAN and any other giant corporate entity I may have offended: I'm really sorry, OK? So don't get your JOCKEYS in a knot.

pointing."

Bill Kidwell, a Republican and former law enforcement official who lost his bid for a House seat last fall, said the defeat is frustrating but doesn't think it will affect his party's standing.

"I don't see this as a major thing in the election of state officials," Kidwell said. "I think the Republicans are going to continue to be re-elected and continue working to reinstate the death penalty."

Although the death penalty issue elicited strong reactions from both sides, Thursday's debate was not emotional, Dvorsky said.

"Most of the discussion consisted of people giving personal beliefs, but it was a very rational discussion," he said. "A few people got teary-eyed, but it was rational all around and very interesting."

The vote brought in spectators from both sides of the issue, Dvorsky said.

"The galleries were pretty much full," he said. "There were a lot of Iowans Against the Death Penalty and a few people wearing baseball caps saying they were for the death penalty. I thought (the baseball caps) kind of trivialized the issue."

UI political science Emeritus Professor Russell Ross said he was not surprised the measure was defeated.

"I thought the House would pass it and the Senate would defeat it because the Democrats have the majority in the Senate and there were a number of Republicans who were also against it," Ross said.

Iowa's death penalty was repealed in 1965.

Execution was by hanging when the death penalty was in effect. If it had been reinstated, lethal injection would have been the probable method of execution, lawmakers said.

Dvorsky said he did the right thing in voting against the death penalty.

"One of the things I told the Senate was I have two young daughters, and I'm very proud of them," he said. "They always ask me how my day went, and I don't think I could tell them in good conscience I voted to sentence citizens of Iowa to death today. That's why I voted against it."

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said the issue rested on partisanship in the House since only one Republican voted against it. Doderer, who voted to abolish capital punishment in 1965 and on Thursday, said harsh prison sentences are the best solution for criminals.

"We do have a death penalty in Iowa already," Doderer said. "We put a person in prison until they die unless the governor commutes their sentences."

"I don't defend murderers ever," she said. "It's just that it's much crueler to keep them in prison until they die so they can sit and have remorse over the terrible, terrible thing they did."

However, Greenwalt said capital punishment is the best means of justice.

"It's a good method not necessarily to deter crime, but as a means of justice," he said.

Stephan Foss, chairman of the Johnson County Republicans, said he feels lawmakers did not listen to voters' opinions.

"I think the majority of Iowans believe (the death penalty) is the proper path, so legislators aren't reflecting Iowans in general," Foss said. "I think they should be listening to their constituency."

BURGLARIES

with a lot of valuable stuff there that went undisturbed," Lihs said.

There are no suspects so far, he said.

"It's anybody's guess if they're the same people," Lihs said. "Unfortunately, we don't know. We don't have any witnesses."

Dayna Hutton, a receptionist at Rumours Salon, said money was all that was taken from the salon, although there were a number of other things the thief could have taken.

"Basically, I think all they wanted was cash," Hutton said.

Businesses that have suffered recent burglaries in which limited amounts of cash were taken are Computer Solutions, 327 Kirkwood Ave., on Feb. 2; Futon Discounters, 529 S.

Gilbert St., on Jan. 30; and QuikTrip Store No. 548, 955 Mormon Trek Blvd., on Jan. 24.

In addition, three churches were burglarized in January: Christ the King Lutheran Church ELCA, 325 Mormon Trek Blvd.; First Mennonite Church, 405 Myrtle Ave.; and St. Thomas More Church, 405 N. Riverside Drive.

Lihs said the church burglaries, during which only cash was stolen, are probably not related to the business burglaries.

He also said police have investigated all information concerning the string of burglaries but have not come up with any concrete leads. He said the evidence did not indicate the number of burglars.

AMENDMENT

said it didn't belong in the Constitution.

A key element of the "Contract With America," it cleared the House in January on a vote of 300-132. Its rejection marked the sharpest setback to date for the conservative revolution that Republicans launched after gaining control of both houses.

The Senate vote also marked a remarkable triumph for 77-year-old West Virginia Democrat Robert Byrd, who led the opposition. He said afterward, "The issue has decided in favor of the sanctity of the Constitution."

Republicans had looked to the measure to provide for tough votes ahead. "It might make getting what we want to do harder," Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, said shortly after the vote. "For some senators, it might be easier to avoid the tough votes."

Moments before the vote, Dole accused Democrats of playing blatant politics. "All this talk about protecting Social Security is a cover for a tax increase" they voted two years ago, including higher levies on wealthy Social Security recipients.

He said Republicans would soon propose a five-year plan to put the budget on a path toward balance by 2002. "Our plan will not raise taxes," he said. "Our plan will not touch Social Security."

a.k.a. Michael McGhee, 31, were charged with first-degree robbery of Bonanza Family Restaurant, Coralville. Ricky L. Hoskins, 35, and Robert C. Hoskins, 40, were charged with aiding and abetting the first-degree robbery.

In the police report, Douglas named alleged accomplice Constantino as the robber who struck the restaurant manager on the head with his gun.

The four men were taken into custody by the Davenport Police Department and transferred to the Johnson County Jail Tuesday. They made their initial appearance at the Johnson County Courthouse Wednesday morning. The four men are each being held on $50,000 bond.

Sgt. Terry Koehn of the Coralville police said they identified the suspects while working with the FBI and the Iowa Department of Criminal Investigation.

"We had some sources come forward that provided information about similar robberies with similar (modus operandi)," Koehn said.

Koehn said they took statements from the sources and obtained pictures of the suspects to make positive identifications.

The four men have also been linked to 12 other robberies in eastern Iowa and western Illinois — including ones in Cedar Rapids; Clinton, Iowa; Davenport; Muscatine; and Galesburg, Ill., Koehn said. Each jurisdiction will file its own charges.

"Nothing has had quite the flair and following of the tater tot casserole," he said. "Maybe there's a whole new industry out there with tater tots to compete with McDonald's."

Linda Johnson, manager of food service for the Burge Residence Hall dining room, said she knows the power of the tater tot casserole at the UI.

"It's the greatest love-hate relationship," Johnson said. "Either you really like it, or you don't. I personally don't care for it, but some people will string us up if we don't serve it."

Teams delve into agent market

The Giants were the first to hire a free agency agent. They hired Dave Meggett, their former back-kick returner, to negotiate a five-year contract with England Patriots, rejecting Bill Parcells.

The Patriots also back when Kevin T. Phillips was the Philadelphia Eagles' general manager, saying the second-high salary in the NFL.

The Eagles will pay nearly $4.13 million a year. New England's third-round pick in the draft.

Detroit signed Pro receiver Herman Moore to a four-year contract worth $13.5 million. Moore had 72 catches, 1,173 yards and 11 touchdowns last season. He has been in catches and receiving touchdowns in the past two seasons.

Safety James Washington was one of the stars in Dallas' victory two years ago. Washington, the son of a former NFL player, spent the last four years in the NFL, where he signed a free agent.

Quarterback Butch Johnson rejoined Rich Kotite's New York Jets, signing a one-year contract.

The Jets also signed Jones, who spent three years for the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Chicago agreed to a five-year contract with linebacker Vinson Smith for two years. John Mangum agreed to a three-year contract for $1.6 million per year.

The Bears also signed line man Chris Smith to a three-year deal on Monday.

Teams delve into free-agent market

The Giants were victimized by free agency again Thursday when Dave Meggett, their versatile running back-kick returner, agreed to a five-year contract with the New England Patriots, rejoining coach Bill Parcells.

The Patriots also lost a running back when Kevin Turner joined the Philadelphia Eagles, becoming the second-highest-paid fullback in the NFL.

The Eagles will pay Turner nearly $4.13 million over three years. New England receives a third-round pick in April's draft as compensation.

Detroit signed Pro Bowl receiver Herman Moore to a four-year contract extension worth $13.5 million that will keep him with the Lions through 1999.

Moore had 72 catches for 1,173 yards and 11 touchdowns last season. He has led the Lions in catches and receiving yards the past two seasons.

Safety James Washington, one of the stars in Dallas' Super Bowl victory two years ago, signed with Washington. The seven-year veteran spent the last five with Dallas, where he signed as a Plan B free agent.

Quarterback Bubba Brister rejoined Rich Kotite with the New York Jets, signing a two-year contract.

The Jets also signed safety Gary Jones, who spent the last five years for the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Chicago agreed to terms with linebacker Vinson Smith for $1.5 million for two years, and safety John Mangum agreed to a three-year, $1.6 million package.

The Bears also signed defensive lineman Chris Zorich to a three-year deal on Wednesday.

BOXING

Holyfield will begin return with Mercer

NEW YORK (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield, who retired last April because of a heart ailment, is returning to the ring for a May 20 fight against Ray Mercer in Atlantic City, N.J.

Main Events has called a Monday news conference to announce the bout.

Holyfield hasn't applied for a license to box in New Jersey, but the state's athletic commissioner said the former champion should have no difficulty obtaining one.

"Evander appears to be the most tested athlete in any sport known to man, to date," commissioner Larry Hazzard said.

Hazzard said his opinion was "based on the documents that I have carefully reviewed, based on the discussion that I have had with his personal physician, based on the discussion I have had with his physician at the Mayo Clinic."

Gable won't overlook competition at Big Tens

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa Hawkeyes take the mat Saturday, they'll have to take on 10 teams instead of one. But it probably won't matter.

Iowa will be shooting for its 22nd consecutive Big Ten Wrestling Championship, when it travels to Bloomington, Ind. this weekend.

The Hawkeyes (14-0) have played the role of the conqueror this season as they've breezed past the competition by almost 30 points-per-contest. Iowa has outscored its opponents 470-80 and only Minnesota has won more than two matches against the Hawkeyes.

Iowa coach Dan Gable said overconfidence won't be a factor for the Hawkeyes.

"We're not going into this thing with our eyes closed by any means," Gable said. "We're going in it to do the best we can to make sure we have the best opportunity to get ranked high for the NCAAAs."

Illinois, Minnesota and Michigan State are the most likely candidates to dethrone the Hawkeyes. All three teams are ranked in the nation's top 10. Iowa has already beaten No. 6 Minnesota (24-12) and No. 5 Michigan State (33-6). The Illini are ranked seventh.

The individual competition will be fierce as well. Over 50 nationally-ranked wrestlers will be competing in the tournament. Six individuals scheduled to compete are ranked No. 1 in the nation at their respective weight classes. They are Iowa's Mike Mena (118), Jeff McGinness (126), Lincoln McIlravy (150), Joel Sharratt (190), Minnesota's Zac Taylor (167) and Penn State's Kerry McCoy (heavyweight).

Iowa's Bill Zadick lifts his Oklahoma State opponent Feb. 11 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Zadick and the Hawkeyes are heavy favorites to bring home their record 22nd straight Big Ten Conference Championship this weekend from Bloomington, Ind.

McIlravy and Ray Brinzer (177) are Iowa's defending Big Ten champions.

"I think people are underestimating just how many good wrestlers there are in this conference," Gable said. "That's the one thing I'm not going to fall into. I'm not falling into a false sense of security where it's an automatic situation."

The Hawkeyes are among the favorites to win nine of the 10 weight classes. The one question mark will be at heavyweight where Iowa junior Erik Stroner (No. 13) will have to go up against five ranked wrestlers including McCoy and Minnesota's Billy Pierce (No. 5).

Gable said Stroner is capable of winning the Big Ten heavyweight crown.

"He's a good enough wrestler," Gable said. "It's just a matter of whether he can really get his mind

It's do or die time for Iowa

The women's basketball season could be over by 3 p.m. today.

Or maybe it will end Saturday. They could possibly extend it until Sunday and there's a slight chance it could go until Monday.

Heck, the Hawkeyes might even be playing until April.

All they have to do is win. That's it. One loss and the season is over. A win, they keep on going.

And it all starts at 1 p.m. this afternoon when Iowa faces Minnesota in Indianapolis to kick off the Big Ten tournament.

"If it were not for the Big Ten tournament, we would not be going to any tournament, so this is a great opportunity," Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said. "And we have no choice but to embrace the idea of basically going for broke. We don't have anything to lose."

Iowa (10-16, 6-10 in the Big Ten) finished ninth in the Big Ten during the regular season. But anyone can win the Big Ten tournament and receive a bid to the NCAA tournament later this month.

If the Hawkeyes want to receive that bid, they have to first get by the Gophers. A win this afternoon would set them up against top-seeded Penn State Saturday at 11 a.m.

Earlier this year Minnesota handed Iowa one of its worst losses

It could have been so sweet for the Hawkeye men's basketball team.

Iowa, coming off three straight wins which included Minnesota and Wisconsin on the road, needed to win three of its final four games to help secure an NCAA tournament bid.

A win Wednesday night at Purdue could have made that job a lot easier. Iowa would then just need a pair of wins in its final two home games to earn a spot into the tournament.

Two games to close out another season at Carver-Hawkeye Arena against teams that Iowa had previously lost to by a total of two points.

But Purdue didn't cooperate. Despite leading the Boilermaker's by 10 points in the first half, one point at halftime and four points with less than four minutes remaining in the game, Iowa's defense crumbled and the offense went to sleep, allowing Purdue to go on a 17-point run in the final minutes.

Now Iowa (17-10, 7-8) finds itself in a precarious situation.

Coach Tom Davis said that for Iowa to advance to the NCAA tournament it must win 20 games.

In other words, Iowa can't lose for the rest of the season.

With three games remaining it seems like a reasonable goal. The Hawkeyes travel to Bloomington on March 12 to face Indiana in their regular season finale.

But first up for Iowa will be Michigan on Sunday afternoon. Like Iowa, the Wolverines (16-11, 10-5) find themselves fighting for an NCAA tournament bid.

With 10 Big Ten wins under its hat and a home game against Penn State still on the schedule, Michigan is in a position that makes some Hawkeye fans jealous.

But with a suspect overall record, the Wolverines will have to win as many games as possible to impress the selection committee. Iowa could be Michigan's next victim come Sunday.

Just don't tell that to forward Russ Millard.

"I think we can play well with just about anybody in the nation," Millard said.

Last season the Iowa baseball team led the Big Ten and broke a school record ... with 109 errors.

This year the Hawkeyes are hoping to reap the advantages of starting four freshmen in the infield last season. They would like to see the experience lead them to an improvement over last season's 22-32-1 record.

Iowa's probable starting lineup for this weekend at Missouri includes three seniors, one junior, four sophomores and two freshmen. Three of those starters were .300 hitters last season. In all, the Hawkeyes have 20 lettermen returning from '94.

Play with the Tigers was originally supposed to begin today, but weather postponed the opener until Saturday, when the teams are scheduled to begin a double-header at 1 p.m. They will finish the three-game series in Columbia, Mo., Sunday at 2 p.m.

Ostrom led the team with a .374 batting average. Thieleke batted .326 and Fishman hit for a .310 average.

Lewis, Thieleke and Ostrom led the Hawkeyes in RBI with 40, 39 and 38 respectively. Lewis' eight home runs were a team-high.

Junior Colin Mattiace will lead the Iowa pitching rotation. He compiled a 4.45 ERA last season in 83 innings.

His record was 6-4. Junior Matt Austin also returns with his 4.42 ERA.

With so many returners, the Hawkeyes will not soon forget last season's series with the Tigers. Missouri swept Iowa with wins of 5-3, 4-3 and 10-0.

While Iowa has yet to play this season, Missouri started last weekend. The Tigers are currently 1-2.

met was on Jan. 11, where it took double overtime before Michigan disposed of the Hawkeyes 83-82, handing Iowa its second of four one-point Big Ten losses.

Since then point guard Andre Woolridge feels that Iowa's game has progressed.

"We're a lot more experienced and mature now and I think when it comes down to those end of the game situations we want the ball," Woolridge said. "We want to get fouled and we want to go to the es, a 70-56 drubbing in Minneapolis.

"I'm not afraid of anybody," Iowa senior Tia Jackson said. "I want to face Minnesota because they come up next. I mean, they beat us by 14 at their place, so we have some revenge to take care of and that's what we're gonna do."

Stringer feels the Hawkeyes can go for broke because, basically, things can only go up. It can't get worse.

"Minnesota had an impressive win against us in Minnesota," she said. "So what could be worse this time than another impressive win for them?"

But Stringer doesn't think Iowa will give a repeat performance.

"I thought that they played well against us last time, I just don't think that we will play that bad. I don't think that we could try and beat Iowa unless Iowa suffers some major upsets at 118 and 126, or things like that," Indiana wrestler Robert Chandler said.

Chandler will also be one of several wrestlers trying to defeat a higher-ranked Hawkeye opponent. Chandler (No. 11) said he is looking forward to a rematch with Bill free throw line and we want to run the right play to finish off the game."

Michigan may be the one team in the Big Ten with less experience that Iowa. The Wolverines do have Fab Five backwash Jimmy King and Ray Jackson, but they also have six freshmen who have had to play a lot of minutes this season and have little experience at crunch time in the Big Ten.

One force driving the two teams on Sunday will be the chance to participate in college basketball's most prestigious event, the NCAA play that bad again," she said.

"Minnesota will not see the same team again. They're not going to see the same team in anything we do."

Iowa may or may not see the same Minnesota team this afternoon. But they will see Shannon Loeblein, a senior guard that destroyed Iowa in the earlier meeting with six 3-pointers and 19 points.

"I think that Loeblein can shoot the ball as well as anybody in college basketball," Stringer said.

Loeblein is averaging 14.8 points per game this year, but is not leading the team. Senior forward Cara Pearson leads the Gophers with 15.2 points and eight rebounds per game.

Another thing the Gophers have on their side is desperation. As the No. 8 team in the Big Ten, they also face an end to their season if they lose.

"Minnesota has an extra incentive because the Final Four is in Minnesota," Stringer said. "They, too, have their backs against the wall. And the only way they can get to the Final Four is to win this tournament. So they're going to be highly motivated."

Penn State doesn't need any extra incentive. The Nittany Lions tied Purdue for the regular season title and would love to win it outright in the tournament. As the No. 8 team in the country, they would also love to grab a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament.

The Nittany Lions, like the Gophers, never came to Carver-Hawkeye Arena this year. They faced the Hawkeyes only once, defeating them 73-62 in University Park, Penn.

Penn State, which has only lost once in its last 13 games, is led by point guard Tina Nicholson. Nicholson, only a junior, was Zadick (No. 4) at 142 pounds.

"I lost to him by a point earlier in the year and that's always in the back of my head," he said. "I'm just worried about taking it one match at a time and hopefully we'll meet in the semi's or the finals."

Gable said experience should help the Hawkeyes. Only Mark tournament. Davis said that its hard for players who have never been to the NAAs to know what they're missing.

Iowa's premier players, Jess Settles, Woolridge and Chris Kingsbury have never been to the Big Dance. Michigan's King and Jackson have been there three times, the finals their first two years and last year to the elite eight. You can bet that the Wolverines' senior leaders will have their young apprentices pumped up Sunday afternoon.

Compared to Michigan's seniors, Ironside (At 134) and Zadick (142) are newcomers to the Big Ten Tournament.

"We've been there before and we've had some close ones and we've had some dominate ones," Gable said. "I'm hoping that this is going to be a dominant one."

Iowa's have had little tournament experience to boast about. Forward Jim Bartels has played in two as a freshman and sophomore, guard Kevin Skillet was receiving little playing time and John Carter wasn't even on the team the last time Iowa advanced to the NCAA tournament.

With the Big Ten season winding down, Settles said the team has been feeling a sense of urgency.

"We can't wait or rest a lot coming down the stretch," Settles said. "We've got to get some wins and we know that two weeks ago."

Leading scorer Angie Potthoff (17.6 points) will not be playing because of a shoulder injury, but Iowa will still see senior Missy Masley (14.6 ppg) and senior Carla Coleman (11.3 ppg).

If the Hawkeyes do get by Minnesota and Penn State, they will have to win again on Sunday and Monday to take the tournament title. It could be a long weekend, but Jackson said the Hawkeyes are ready for it.

"I don't think its even going to be taking any effect because the adrenaline will be kicking in so hard," she said. "You won't even think about it being four days in a row."

ESPN ANALYST

Simms could return to NFL with Browns

Chuck Melvin
Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio — Former New York Giants quarterback Phil Simms and his agent met with the Cleveland Browns on Thursday, but couldn't reach a deal to make Simms a backup to starter Vinny Testaverde.

"We just got in a couple of hours ago," Simms' agent, David Fishof, said late Thursday afternoon. "Because of the financial situation, we're still going to continue to work on the contract. We still have things we have to work out."

Fishof emphasized that Simms would like to play for Browns coach Bill Belichick, a former Giants defensive coordinator.

Testaverde's backup last season was veteran Mark Rypien, who is a free agent.

Simms did not attend the news conference.

He and Fishof planned to fly back to New York later Thursday evening, Fishof said.

The Browns said they're still interested in the quarterback, who sat out last season.

"We'll just keep talking," Browns director of player personnel Mike Lombardi said.

"David and I have made deals before. If there's a deal to be made, we'll make it."

Simms, 39, the leading passer in Giants history, retired last year and spent the 1994 season as an analyst for ESPN. He led the Giants to an 11-5 record and a playoff berth in 1993, but had off-season shoulder surgery and was cut by Giants coach Dan Reeves.

Simms spent 15 seasons with the Giants, passing for 33,462 yards and 199 touchdowns. He hit 22 of 25 passes for 268 yards and three touchdowns in the 1987 Super Bowl.

Simms was bitter about his treatment by the Giants, saying the team simply didn't want to pay his salary — slated to be more than $2 million last year.

Simms talked with the Arizona Cardinals in September, but couldn't reach a financial agreement.

So he stayed with ESPN, working in the studio and on highlights and analyses shows.

Predictions that Simms would sign with the Browns on Thursday were rife. Browns owner Art Modell said Thursday the excitement was "premature."

"We had a good day, a good conversation," Modell said. "We just haven't arrived at a deal."

Modell wouldn't say what contract issues remain.

"We have high regard for Phil Simms and his ambitions," he said. "We'd like to see him in a Cleveland Browns uniform."

UCLA finds distractions at the top

Beth Harris
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Fans insist on autographs and pictures. The media swoops in for interviews and photo sessions. Players are hard-pressed to produce enough game tickets for friends, family and hangers-on.

Such hoopla is the part of being No. 1 that UCLA coach Jim Harrick detests.

"We've had some unbelievable distractions this week. We lost our focus and we have to address that situation."

Jim Harrick, UCLA coach

The Bruins (22-2) showed they are vulnerable to the extra attention by playing a poor first half against Southern California on Wednesday night. They rediscovered their defense and outscored the Trojans 47-27 in the second half for an 85-66 victory in their first game since taking over the top spot.

"With all the games and all the emotions, sometimes you're going to have a bad half," Harrick said. "We've had some unbelievable distractions this week. We lost our focus and we have to address that situation."

If Harrick can't make the point, seniors Ed O'Bannon, Tyus Edney and George Zidek do it for him. They provided an important reminder to freshmen Toby Bailey and J.R. Henderson at halftime against Southern Cal. The Bruins trailed by five for much of the first half, then managed to cut the deficit to one at the break.

"Tyus, Ed and George told us to calm down. We had to play defense," Bailey said. "We were struggling for outside shots when we should have been pounding it inside."

Bailey sparked UCLA in the second half and the Bruins ended up with their 10th straight victory to clinch their first Pac-10 Conference championship since 1992.

They became the first team to earn a berth in the NCAA tournament, and could likely clinch the tourney's top seed by beating Louisville on the road Sunday.

"It's great to know you're tops on the West Coast and get an automatic berth," Charles O'Bannon said.

Although UCLA has been ranked no lower than sixth this season, much of the country is just now catching up with the Bruins and seeing them on national TV.

The added exposure means more distractions for a team already besieged by pressure to win another national championship.

Ed O'Bannon has the biggest reason to get distracted. He's being touted for national player of the year honors and is riding a hot shooting streak.

But he refuses to let his head get turned by all the attention. Last year's humiliating first-round loss to Tulsa in the NCAA tournament reminds him how quickly things change.

"I know the distractions are there, but it's something we have to overcome," O'Bannon said. "College basketball is full of hype and as long as you get over the hype and play through it all, you'll be in pretty good shape."

Navratilova, Fernandez head U.S. Fed team

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Martina Navratilova and Mary Joe Fernandez were among the 10 players picked Thursday for the U.S. Fed Cup team.

The competition, formerly known as the Federation Cup, is to women's tennis what the Davis Cup is to the men.

Others selected were Lindsay Davenport, Patty Fendick, Gigi Fernandez, Amy Frazier, Zina Garrison Jackson, Meredith McGrath, Lori McNeil and Lisa Raymond.

The selections were announcement by newly appointed captain Billie Jean King.

This year's competition will be the first played in multiple weeks and with host nations, the same as the Davis Cup format.

The U.S. will play Austria in the opening round April 22-23 at Turnberry Isle in Aventura, Fla. The American players will be selected from the 10 women picked Thursday.

Spring Training

Associated Press

Historically, McKernan Field in Bradenton, Fla. is a season, but on Thursday with the major league sellout on opening day for the Grapefruit League players on strike there were plenty of empty seats.

Opening spring games strike out

Ben Walker
Associated Press

Next up, maybe, replacement negotiators.

On a day when only 294 fans showed up to watch the Kansas City Royals open their exhibition season and Michael Jordan walked out of camp rather than play in spring training games, baseball strike talks seemed close to breaking down Thursday.

Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris, regarded as a deal-maker, said he thought he'd been "used" by union head Donald Fehr and his staff, and suggested that his side might need to bring in management hard-liners.

"We've digressed," McMorris said in Scottsdale, Ariz. "Yesterday we got bogged down and last night we were going downhill. We've got to get past the point where all we can talk about is revenue sharing again."

The talk elsewhere was about replacement ball.

Five exhibition games, played by replacement players and officiated by replacement umpires, were played to better-than-expected reviews in Florida. There even was a trade involving replacement players.

"This has been portrayed by a lot of people as a bunch of guys out of the beer leagues," Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove said after a 3-1 win over Cincinnati in Plant City, Fla.

"The skill level obviously isn't the same as if we'd had Kenny Lofton or Albert Belle or Barry Larkin, but these weren't beer leaguers. These guys have played."

In fact, there were just two walks in the whole game and one error, that in the ninth inning. Though no one hit the ball to the warning track, it was quite crisp for an early exhibition, plus it took just 2 hours, 17 minutes.

The crowd was announced as 1,260, although it appeared only half that many were in the stands. The previous low crowd for the exhibition opener in Plant City Stadium's eight years was 4,464 in 1993.

"He should have been better pitching on 3,195 days' rest."

Steve Blass, Pirates broadcaster on replacement player Jimmy Boudreau, who last pitched in the majors in 1986

Attendance at the other games was also down.

The Royals drew under 300 for a game against Stetson University in Haines City, about 600 people each saw the games between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees in Fort Lauderdale and Georgia Tech and Atlanta in West Palm Beach and 685 watched Minnesota play Pittsburgh in Bradenton.

"When the Braves were bad, this is the kind of crowd we'd get, with the stands half-empty," said Mort Mendelsohn, a fan from Jupiter, Fla.

Jordan, like many minor leaguers, was caught in the squeeze by the union and management. He elected to leave the Chicago White Sox camp in Sarasota, Fla., leaving his status for the rest of the spring uncertain.

Jordan jumped into his Range Rover and drove away.

He said he'd have a statement on his situation later. His personal assistant and driver, George Koehler, said Jordan only told him: "We're going."

White Sox general manager Ron Schueler wasn't sure what to expect.

"I'd have to wait and see and address it. I don't know all the issues involved. I'm really not sure he's leaving town," Schueler said. "Let's wait until tomorrow morning and see if he shows up. As far as I know, he's not missing unless he's not here tomorrow morning."

In games Wednesday, the Twins beat Pittsburgh 6-4, helped by Cory Saefer's two-run triple off 36-year-old Jimmy Boudreau, son of Hall of Famer shortstop Lou Boudreau.

Boudreau has been out of pro ball since 1986. "He should have been better pitching on 3,195 days' rest," Pirates broadcaster Steve Blass said.

Kansas City defeated Stetson 3-1 by taking advantage of six walks from George Kauffman, grandson of late Royals founder Ewing Kauffman.

Reds, Indians swap replacements

Associated Press

PLANT CITY, Fla. — In deals that are not likely to tip the balance of baseball, the Cincinnati Reds and Cleveland Indians announced the first trade of replacement players Thursday, the latest odd move in an already strange spring.

In all, the Indians sent five players, including former major leaguer Barbaro Garbey, to Cincinnati. Mike Curtis, one of those included in two separate deals, pitched later in the day for the Reds in an exhibition opener against Cleveland.

The Reds began their spring training schedule short of players. Of the 44 players asked to play in games, 22 walked out of camp rather than risk offending the players' union.

Hawkeye seniors to make final home appearance

It will be an emotional weekend for the Iowa women's gymnastics team with the final home meets for seniors.

Sunday's meet with Michigan State will be the last chance to perform in front of a home crowd for Misti Blackledge, Cathy Terrell and Cindy Terrell.

Iowa also hosts intrastate rival Iowa State tonight.

Cindy Terrell said she will try not to be too emotional on Sunday.

"I'm trying not to think about it too much, because it's something you can't really control," she said.

Iowa is coming off a strong performance last Sunday.

The Hawkeyes finished second in a three-team meet, with a season-high score of 190.95.

Iowa improved its national ranking on the balance beam to 16th.

Several of the Hawkeyes had strong meets.

Junior Kim Baker won the all-around with a 38.95. Freshman Grace Lee continued her strong performance, finishing fifth all-around with a 37.70.

"(Lee) is improving each week," Coach Diane DeMarco said.

"I'm really looking forward to this meet to see her compete."

Iowa continues to fight the injury bug. Cindy Terrell injured her knee this week and is questionable for the weekend.

DeMarco is hopeful that Cathy Terrell (shin) and freshman Molly O'Conner (knee) will be able to perform in the meets.

Despite the injuries, the gymnasts remain confident.

"Our team has great character, and they've been able to absorb these situations that have arisen," DeMarco said.

Tonight's meet is in Carver-Hawkeye Arena at 7 p.m. Sunday's meet is at the Fieldhouse North Gym beginning at 2 p.m.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Men's track and field

The Iowa men's track and field team will travel to Ames today for the NCAA Qualifying Meet.

The meet will be the last chance for the Hawkeyes to qualify athletes for the upcoming NCAA Indoor Meet, March 10-11 at Indianapolis.

Hawkeye Andre Morris is the only Iowa runner to be a provisional qualifier for the NCAA meet.

Morris' time of 47.15 in the 400-meter dash at the Big Ten meet qualified him for the NAAs.

Morris will attempt to qualify in the 200-meter dash this weekend, but Coach Ted Wheeler is not anticipating any more Hawkeyes to make the list of qualifiers.

With no quality teams to push the Hawkeye 4-by-400 relay team, Wheeler doesn't expect them to better their time enough to qualify.

Wheeler, who gears his team more towards the outdoor season, looks at this meet as just another warm-up for outdoor competition.

"This meet is just a warm-down for the indoor season. It gives a few people who didn't get a chance to run at the Big Ten meet a chance to run and gives people who ran at the Big Ten meet a second look," Wheeler said.

"At this point, it's more of a preparation run and a warm-up for the outdoor season."

The Hawkeyes begin their outdoor season March 18 at Cal-Poly Tech.

Men's tennis

The Iowa men's tennis team faces its toughest test to date as its travels to South Bend, Ind., to take on nationally ranked Notre Dame.

The Hawkeyes battle the Irish at 3 p.m. on Saturday.

Iowa is on a three-game winning streak after defeating Drake 6-1 on Wednesday. The Hawkeyes evened their record at 3-3 with the victory and are undefeated at home.

Iowa has outscored its opponents in this three-game stretch 20-1.

Its kind of dominance that Coach Steve Houghton said he hopes will continue.

"We're playing really well right now," Houghton said.

"People are really starting to play up to their potential. Wednesday's win was really big for us, especially heading into the Notre Dame match on Saturday."

Notre Dame is currently ranked 15th in the nation and No. 1 in Region IV.

The Irish lead the overall series with the Hawkeyes 23-19, including a 5-2 win in 1993.

"Notre Dame has always been good and I know we're going to have our hands full, but that doesn't mean we're going to lay down and die."

Bob Zumph, Iowa senior tennis player

Iowa senior Bob Zumph said even though Notre Dame is a formidable opponent, the Hawkeyes will not be intimidated.

"Notre Dame has always been good and I know we're going to have our hands full but that doesn't mean we're going to lay down and die," Zumph said. "I think if we play our game and stay focused, we can beat them."

Men's gymnastics

The Iowa men's gymnastics team heads west on Saturday for a showdown with top-ranked New Mexico in Albuquerque. Arizona State will also compete.

The road meet begins at 7 p.m.

The fifth-ranked Hawkeyes (4-0) are coming off a home win over Minnesota, 227.550 to 227.125.

Junior Jay Thornton led the way for Iowa with an all-around score of 56.20, good for second place.

Thornton also won individual championships on the floor exercise (9.80) and the parallel bars (9.65).

Despite the win, Coach Tom Dunn expects a better performance this weekend.

"We missed a lot of routines against Minnesota, so there is definitely room for improvement, and we're learning some new things every week."

"I think we can improve a couple of points before we get to the Big Ten Championships."

New Mexico is certainly a formidable opponent.

They became the first team this year to score above a 230 in a recent win over Nebraska.

"We're looking forward to going to Albuquerque," Dunn said.

"We've never competed there as a college team, so it's a new place to visit. New Mexico is ranked number one, so it's quite a challenge."

Dunn feels that Iowa is close to putting it all together for a meet.

"We're trying to upgrade our routines a little bit," he said.

"We're trying to eliminate small mistakes and add some tenths of bonus to our routines wherever we can."

"We've made some good progress this week, so we might try some new things in Albuquerque"

'PULP FICTION' NOMINATIONS CAUSE CONTROVERSY

Actors not easy to pigeonhole into Academy Award categories

John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Anthony Hopkins appeared in only one-fifth of "The Silence of the Lambs" and won the best actor Oscar. Timothy Hutton was in most of "Ordinary People" and was called an Academy Award supporting actor.

This year, Oscar category confusion persists with "Pulp Fiction" and its star. Is it John Travolta, as many believe? Or is it Samuel L. Jackson, as others say?

The actors branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences nominated Travolta for best actor and Jackson for best supporting actor, prompting the debate over the proper fit.

"Had it been fair and honest, they both should have gone for the lead role," said one person who worked closely on the film, adding that Travolta and Jackson's talent agents weighed the chances each client would have in the respective categories and made an "economic" decision.

"Pulp Fiction" maker Miramax Films maintains Travolta has twice Jackson's screen time, and his Vincent Vega hit man character ties together the movie's three story lines. Travolta also appears in a long scene with Uma Thurman from which Jackson, who plays hired killer Jules Winnfield, is absent.

When Travolta and Jackson are together, however, it's Jackson who does most of the talking.

"What you may end up with is Travolta has more screen time, and Jackson has more lines," said Los Angeles Times film critic Peter Rainer, chairman of the National Society of Film Critics. "It's one of those gray areas that creates problems."

Rainer's organization, like the New York Film Critics Circle, voted for Jackson in both the best actor and the best supporting actor categories in its awards balloting. The Independent Feature Project, whose annual awards are handed out March 25, nominated Jackson for best actor — and skipped Travolta entirely.

"The categories are determined by the nominating committee — and they determined that John Travolta and Samuel Jackson both had leading roles," said the IFP's Dawn Hudson. Committee chairman Geoff Gilmore said, "You try to make decisions that are logical, rather than what somebody wants you to do."

Golden Globe voters and balloting in the new Screen Actors Awards mirrored the Academy selections. So, too, did nominations in Britain's Bafta awards.

Although the Academy's 1,400-member actors branch can put a performer in any category it chooses, Miramax asked it to consider Travolta for the lead and Jackson as a secondary player.

The fear was that if the two actors went head-to-head, their votes would be split and both would be shut out. (Morgan Freeman thus may have knocked Tim Robbins, his co-star in "The Shawshank Redemption," from this year's best actor race, in which both were touted.)

In a letter sent to Academy voters, "Pulp Fiction" producer Lawrence Bender said, "I know that with an ensemble film such as 'Pulp Fiction,' it is often difficult to distinguish between lead and supporting performances." Bender suggested, having "discussed it at length with all the actors involved," that Travolta be considered for actor and Jackson and Bruce Willis for supporting actor.

frame a variety of self-contained monologues.

Half of the play's material consists of direct quotations from essays, diaries and other texts which turned up in the playwright's research. These speeches were long, dense and frequent enough to make some of the audience members restless by the end.

This isn't to say that "Ibsen" is just a lecture, however. Fornes clearly has a strong sense of humor, and she uses it to good effect, although not quite often enough. The extended passage which offers three interpretations of one scene could have been dreadfully dull, but under Fornes' direction, it packs enough escalating energy and hyperbole to become one of the funniest portions of the play. The multimedia examination of El Greco, as edited by Jason Jenn and narrated by Laurel Nakadate, is also pleasingly bizarre.

"Ibsen" is a six-member cast headed up by Patricia Mattick, who plays one of the Londoners trying to produce "Hedda Gabler." Mattick is a professional actress, and it shows. Her performance is so polished and full of nuances that she sometimes makes the other performers look amateurish in comparison.

Judged on their own merits, however, the other cast members come out fine. Sean Williams' vocal talents and distinctive appearance make him an excellent stand-in for Ibsen, and Nakadate's Sophie injects an edginess which the other characters lack.

Leah Milcarek's Marion is too straight-laced and timid to be intrinsically interesting, but she provides a good foil for Mattick's spontaneous Elizabeth. Seth Fisher's natural delivery is believable (if occasionally inaudible), and Seth Camillo's stage presence allows him to make the most of his relatively small role.

Fornes made it clear to the opening night audience that the script was still evolving. In fact, the cast had to carry scripts to perform one scene because she'd written it the previous day. If the opening weekend version was any indication, though, all of "Ibsen" is incarnations will mix thick, somewhat dry material with energetic interpretation, creating a show which is thought-provoking if nothing else.

"Ibsen and the Actress" will be presented in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Building at 8 p.m. on March 2-4 and 8-11, and at 3 p.m. on March 5 and 12. Tickets are $5 for UI students.

PLAY REVIEW

Evolving 'Ibsen and the Actress' proves dry but thought-provoking

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

Maria Irene Fornes' "Ibsen and the Actress" is a sort of in-progress work in progress — a developing play about a developing production.

The opening-night version was multilayered and occasionally confusing, but Fornes' ongoing addition of new scenes may well transform it into a very different piece by the end of the run on March 12.

"Ibsen" is a fictionalized account of the first English-language production of Ibsen's classic "Hedda Gabler," but it deals as much with dramatic interpretation in general as with Ibsen's play in particular.

As the two main characters and their colleagues work to glean Ibsen's true intent from various script fragments, they explore the contradictions and questionable assumptions that make up many theatrical pieces.

By and large, "Ibsen" is a sedate work. The characters spend a great deal of time combing through books and trading pieces of dramatic theory. At times, Fornes appears to have been striving for the flavor of an actual play rehearsal. She succeeds at this, but since assembling a production involves a lot of drudge work and sitting around, that's not necessarily a good thing.

The piece can hardly be called a play in the traditional sense of the word. There is linear plot progression — the first half of the play deals in part with the characters' attempts to get their hands on a complete script — but it is used to
