C.R. man claims stabbing was in self-denese

Cedar Rapids man has confessed to police that he stabbed an lowa City man last weekend in self-defense.

Cedar Rapids police were called to the E Avenue Tap at 11:45 Saturday night where Mike F. Ingham, 33, of Iowa City was found dead.

Phil Marburger of Cedar Rapids turned himself in Sunday morning with his wife and his attorney at his side. He said he stabbed Ingham in self-defense. Cedar Rapids police would not release any further details about the case.

After three hours of questioning, Marburger was released. Cedar Rapids police and Linn County attorney Denver Dillard said they are continuing to investigate the stabbing.

Branstad pushes crime legislation

After defeat, the governor will move away from death penalty – for now

Mike Glover Associated Press

DES MOINES - The Legislature, having rejected a proposal to bring the death penalty back to Iowa, should move quickly to approve other anti-crime bills, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

Last week's rejection of capital punishment should be the beginning, not the end, of this year's crime debate, he said.

"I believe that was a mistake, but I recognize there are many other important things we can do," Branstad said.

In the hours after the Senate soundly rejected Branstad's plan to reinstate the death penalty, he held out hope the issue

14 DAYS UNTIL SPRING

No spirits dampened by devilish NewsBriefs weather

Snow is not exactly a typical sign of the Apocalypse but with the worst three snowstorms of winter occurring on Dec. 6, Jan. 6 and March 6, one can't help but wonder if Satan is toying with the weather.

On Monday, the National Weather Service issued a snow advisory for Iowa City and surrounding areas, calling for 3 to 6 inches of snow and flurries continuing throughout today.

As terrible as a snowstorm 15 days before the vernal equinox may seem, Gene Derner, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service, said the 666 coincidence doesn't mean death and destruction. He said the snow won't last.

"It's not going to stick around much," Derner said. "This is just one of those flukes - winter one day and spring the next."

State climatologist Harry Hillaker said snow in the first week of March is not all that diabolic, but in the context of an extremely mild winter, it might seem surprising.

He cited the worst statewide snowstorms of Dec. 6 and Jan. 6, but he said a Jan. 19 storm dumped snow on much of southeastern Iowa. March snowstorms are no more unusual than those in January and February, he said.

"It's not that unusual to have snow this time of year," Hillaker said. "It just seems that way when you think about how little snow we have had all winter.'

Hillaker said February's statewide snowfall average was nine-tenths of an inch - the second lowest in history for the month. The lowest recorded snowfall was in February 1966 when seven-tenths of an inch was record-

Stress tops list of foes harming U.S. health

Curt Anderson Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Two-thirds of Americans say they feel stressed out at least once a week, part of an increasingly difficult struggling many people have to lead a healthful life in the hectic modern world.

About 65 percent of Americans do the right things for good health, according to an annual ranking released Monday by Prevention health magazine. Last year's ranking was 66.8 percent.

In addition to stress, Americans listed problems controlling their weight, finding time to exercise and sleeping more than six hours a night. And while seat belt use is high, fewer Americans are obeying speed limits.

Tom Dybdahl, director of the index, said Americans' behavior changes most dramatically when they can focus on a single relatively easy act such as wearing auto safety belts or installing a smoke detector.

It is more of a challenge to persuade busy people to exercise regularly and eat more broccoli, he said.

"Viewed over the past decade, living healthfully is neither a rapidly growing trend nor a disappearing phenomenon," Dybdahl said. "Rather, it is a complex and ongoing struggle with progress in one area often accompanied by decline in another.'

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., who chairs the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said at a news conference with the magazine's editors that the survey is important in focusing attention on areas of human health in need of vast improvement.

But she said government should not always fry to impose regulations to force behavioral changes.

Day in the Life

The history of Joens' sandwich goes back to his childhood, when he used to order "Elephant Ear" pork sandwiches from Spritzle's in Cedar Rapids.

Pigs provide the meat that becomes the tenderloin. Joens said his eatery uses about 59 pigs a year to produce 25,000 pounds of pork. The pork is delivered in rolls and goes through a tenderizer which softens the meat and gives it a big elephant-ear shape.

DES MOINES - House Republicans proposed Monday to turn the state's welfare system over to churches that volunteer to take care of poor

"Our goal is welfare replacement," said House Speaker Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids.

Under the proposal, churches and other nonprofit groups could volunteer to provide benefits and services to welfare recipients. Individuals who contributed to churches providing those services would receive a tax credit, a bigger break than the current tax deduction for church contri-

"Our ultimate goal here is to begin the debate," Corbett said.

The details are not all there yet, and that's understandable," said House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs. "It's a serious starting point that will get the discussion started."

Other supporters of the proposal said government should have no role in providing assistance to the needy, a role that has historically been played by churches and other community organizations.

Supporters also said the voluntary program would start the state down a road for eventual government withdrawal from welfare programs, but they conceded that many churches may be reluctant to assume responsibility for running a welfare system.

"I don't think that there's anybody clamoring to do it," said Rep. Dan Boddicker, R-Tipton. "I think this sets up in a nonintrusive way - a nonthreatening way - the invitation to participate. I think we will get participation; I really believe we will.

Boddicker said there would be more accountability from welfare recipients who are getting their checks from a local church or other charitable organization.

Perhaps the biggest question is the transition between a state-run system to one based in churches. Because the state would have to monitor cases being run privately and those still in the state system, costs could be higher when the state hands out tax breaks.

Supporters also said they hadn't calculated the impact the tax change would have on current charitable-giving patterns.

You want to say how many is this going to help tomorrow?" said Hurley. "That's not the right question. The right question is, is this the right direction for state government to go."

Asked about the creation of a new layer of church-based bureaucracy in addition to the state's bureaucracy, supporters said the charitable giving would dry up if it became wasteful.

Magic cards shop makes appearance in Hall Mall

Shayla Thiel The Daily Iowan

Card collector Ken Funk never knew building a career on magic could be easier than pulling a rabbit out of a hat.

But Funk is making a name for himself by taking advantage of the new popularity of Magic, a card game that is sweeping the nation. He opened Kenz Cardz in the Hall Mall Feb. 1 after renting space downstairs from the comic book store Daydreams

When he realized the demand for Magic cards, Funk moved out on his own.

Funk said on weekends he usually has patrons from as far away as Davenport and Fairfield, Iowa, and the small store is usually packed. The game has widespread popularity. Funk said he just shipped a deck of cards to a customer in Singapore who saw Funk's advertisements on the Internet.

Funk said there are no limits for fans of Magic.

"I'll have anywhere from 5-yearolds to 65-year-olds in here buying the cards," he said.

The key to the game lies in building the ultimate deck of Magic cards. Players begin with a starter deck and then buy individual cards, filling out decks with cards that have symbolic power. Looking more like the covers of fantasy novels, the cards are colorfully illustrated with knights, gemstones and dragons. The cards come in five basic colors called "land." Each player begins with 20 "life points." Cards contain specific powers to cast spells on other players and break down their life points until they have none left. Magic players may compete in oneon-one matches or in groups of unlimited numbers, Funk said.

Although Funk sells collectors' sports cards and "Star Trek: The New Generation" cards, Magic cards fill two glass cases and make Funk said Magic cards have provided him with a good career.

"I turned my hobby into a business," he said. "It keeps me from sweating over a grill at Country Kitchen or something for eight hours a day."

It also turned out that Funk had good timing. Magic was introduced at a national science fiction-fantasy convention last year, and fans of all ages started popping up soon after,

The main attraction of the game might be the fact that it is portable, Funk said.

"It's really small and compact and can go anywhere," he said. "Also, some of the appeal has to be in building the perfect deck that

Rodham Clinton contributes dress to Smithsonian exhibit

WASHINGTON (AP) - As she donated her inaugural gown to history, Hillary Rodham Clinton reminded Americans that many first ladies have been more than ornaments in the White House.

"Many would be quite surprised - even today - to read what they wrote, to read what they said, and to understand the role they played in influencing their husbands and the course of American politics," said Rodham Clinton, who has sometimes been criticized for her active role in the administration.

"I actually take comfort in that," she said of the roles played by her predecessors.

Hours before departing for a two-day trip to Copenhagen, Denmark, Rodham Clinton presented her inaugural coat and gown to the First Ladies Collection of the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History.

The installment of Rodham Clinton's clothing in the exhibition will be next to a script titled "First Ladies and Political Power.

The dress, a violet sheath with leaf-patterned lace covered by an overskirt of blue-violet chiffon, will be preserved with the dresses and suits of former first ladies.

Demonstrators force cancellation of Gingrich's speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — A ballroom full of county officials was awaiting Newt Gingrich's arrival Monday when the kitchen doors burst open to reveal not dessert but about 500 protesters waving empty lunch trays and chanting, "No more

The demonstrators, many carryng small children, dodged waiters as they took over the head table and ammed the aisles, protesting reductions in the school lunch program. In doing so, they prompted cancellation of the House speaker's speech.

"Don't take the food out of the children's mouths," said Maxine Nelson of Pine Bluff, Ark., who, like the others, belongs to the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN). Faced with the raucous protest, luncheon organizers from the National Association of Counties abandoned plans for speeches by Gingrich and others before the 2,000 county officials. The demonstrators cheered the decision.

DON'T TARGET CASUAL DRINKERS

Possession tickets futile

When students decide to attend the UI, they get more than just an education at a top public university. They get a relatively safe place to live. Murders and muggings are uncommon occurrences in Iowa City. One of the biggest concerns for college students is not that a crime will be committed against them, but that they might commit one. In a town in which half the population consists of students and nightlife is abundant, being issued a ticket for possession of alcohol is a major concern for students under the age of 21.

Iowa City's fight against underage drinking is a futile one because students will continue to drink regardless of receiving a possession ticket. The focus needs to be on the disorderly actions of all drinkers, not the ones just having a drink. Fights may break out at more than one location; for example, there may be scuffles on Dubuque Street and on the Pedestrian Mall simultaneously. Police cannot be everywhere at once, so their purpose of being downtown while the bars are busy is to stop patrons from getting out of control. Underage drinkers, however, are not necessarily the ones who are out of control.

On the weekend of Feb. 4 and 5, 39 bar patrons under the legal drinking age were given tickets for possession and / or unlawful use of a driver's license. They were all just having a drink (or a few drinks) in a bar. The other four legal matters during that weekend involved public intoxication. Each of the offenders were of legal drinking age.

Alcohol causes people to do things they would not normally do, and for that reason, use of it needs to be regulated. Intoxicated people can cause harm to others if they drive a car, start confrontations or become sexually aggressive. Underage drinkers commit these offenses, but possession tickets at face value do not necessarily mean the individual was intoxicated or harmed another person. Possession tickets are supposed to save someone from getting out of control on a regular basis, but giving someone a $34 ticket which goes straight into the city's pocket - doesn't do much saving. Those same ticket-receivers will go out the next weekend and Possession tickets don't need to be eliminated. But when many students are actually proud of their first possession ticket, the fight against college drinking is rendered a losing battle. America, unlike other countries, has decided that 19- and 20-year-olds are too young to drink alcohol, and the solution is to fine the person when they get caught. Greater concern should be taken for the people who abuse alcohol, not for the ones who just drink it casually.

Reaction not strong To the Editor:

In the March 3 Daily Iowan, Jeff

Renender again discussed his favorite obsession: homosexuality. Whenever I read his rantings, I am left with the thought that he could provide some psychiatrist with an enviable income f only he'd get the help he needs. It would save a lot of wear and tear on the community and on humanity.

Renender characterizes himself as a conservative activist who opposes the homosexual privileges movement. I wish he would have explained to me, as a gay reader, what special privileges I am supposed to be seeking: an can imagine what the strategy sesexemption from paying income tax, perhaps (that would be nice), or from obeying the speed limit?

Well, I rarely speed anyway so that wouldn't interest me. Maybe he thinks we're asking for special parking spots in front of all buildings. That would be handy. They could all be marked with the lambda symbol. (Renender would probably prefer a different symbol - a pink triangle, since that was the symbol the Nazis attached to homosexuals marked for execution. Or perhaps he'd prefer an image of a limp wrist.)

Renender says things are quieter now than in the 1980s, even boring. I sympathize with his frustration. It's just not as satisfying anymore to be a rabble-rouser, I suppose, when people wise up to you and realize you're just a juvenile joke. A guy can only rerun a Union display so many times, even if he does have a new crop of students to work on each year.

The reaction of outrage that Renender so desperately needs — like an addict who needs a fix - just isn't as satisfying when people catch onto your manipulations and stop reacting as they did that first time, when they actually took him halfway seriously.

It must drive Renender crazy trying to think up new ways to get his fix. I sions are like. "What new display can be more outrageous than the last? What other waiter can be baited into behaving in a way that can generate publicity? What else can be said that will be even crueler and more malicious to rile people up and make them take notice of how clever and important we are?"

Meanwhile, all you folks out there, keep up the good work collecting those Campus Reviews and tossing them into the dumpster whenever you get the opportunity. Keep doing your bit to clean up trash and litter.

Consumers: be wary To the Editor:

A few months ago, my husband and I ordered a computer system from Maximus Computer Co. by mail. After the computer arrived, we found that the CPU did not work properly, so we called the company immediately. We were told to contact the salesperson, and he told us to contact the technical service. We called the technical service more than 10 times before we could get a person on the line. He advised us to check the system; however, the CPU still did not work properly. Finally, he told us that he would send us a new CPU and asked us to ship the defective CPU back to the company. He also told us that the delivery person would take the package back and all the shipping expense (to replace the CPU) would be the company's responsibility. The new CPU was delivered, and we asked the delivery person if he was supposed to take the defective CPU back. He did not have a request from the company; however, by our request, he took it.

Then we found the replacement CPU was also useless. It did not contain any preloaded software (DOS and Windows). We could not load the software ourselves because we did not have the diskettes. In the first shipment, the company did not provide the diskettes with the package; all software was preloaded in the CPU that we already returned. If it was a company policy not to include software, the company should have loaded the CPU with all software as promised. After the company made the second error, we decided to return the whole computer.

We did not get a full refund because the company charged us $75 for shipping the original CPU, $15 for shipping the second CPU and $99 for DOS and Windows. Recently, Federal Express billed us $70 for the package we returned to Maximus. The billing department at Maximus referred to the company policy that if a customer returned the whole system for the refund, all shipping charges were nonrefundable. If Maximus actually has this policy, it should be investigated by the consumer protection agency. We are writing this letter because it may be a good warning to

LEA HARAVON

Facing fear as the No. 1 lesbian on campus

"Hey Lea, I saw your name on a bathroom wall today," a friend of mine said to me one evening a few years ago. Her tone was one of lighthearted amusement, but I needed more information before I was going to be equally amused. Why would my name be on a bathroom wall? Hypotheses flooded my brain while I calmly asked her to

"Well, I was in one of the bathroom stalls in a UI campus building and I saw a list of names under the heading 'Lesbians on Campus,' and you were No. 1." Wow. The No. 1 lesbian on campus. I asked her who else was on the list, but she could not remember. Wow. The No. 1 lesbian on campus by a long shot. I wondered who ranked me as such. I joined in my friend's laughter, trying to toss my public outing off as a harmless prank executed either by a homophobe

First of all, it was next to another scrawled list titled "Rapists on Campus." Secondly, next to my name was written "aerobics TA." These two pieces of information added a context to my

Given that this was next to a list of rapists, I couldn't help but think that the underlying message of both lists was "people to watch out for on campus." Specifically, the between-the-lines message about me was "Don't take a class from Lea because she is the No. 1 lesbian on campus, and you know those lesbians.'

As I stood in this stall staring at my name, I wondered if my students were scared of me. wondered if any of them had done this, and I started mentally going through all the names of the women in the aerobics classes I teach to try to guess who might be the potential author of Usually, there is nothing I love more than teaching aerobics classes. I love encouraging and motivating people who may feel uncomfortable about movement; I love helping them find that they like sweat and exercise and that they don't have to take themselves too seriously to do it. For the first time, I dreaded teaching class. I knew that I would be wondering which, if any, of the women in the class had written this. The trust and affection I felt for my students was gone. I felt only wariness, anger and hurt.

I left the bathroom and tried to think. A few minutes later, I returned to the bathroom, red pen in hand. I had an idea. I circled my name, drew an arrow from it and wrote, "Actually, I am a lesbian-identified bisexual. If you are going to out me, get it RIGHT." I signed my name, dated it and left.

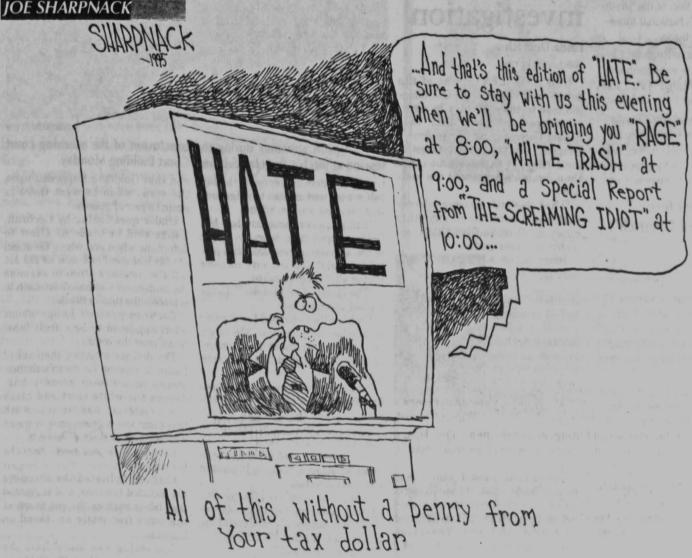

Five minutes before my aerobics class was to begin the next day, I still did not know if I was going to teach aerobics or have a talk with my the Viewpoints Pages students. When I walked into the room and saw them sitting against the wall looking at me like they always do, I knew that I couldn't just go on with aerobics as usual; I had to talk to them. It didn't matter whether one of them had written about me or not; the point for me was that my whole perception of the class, and of teaching, had changed. I could not treat them with the same warmth, care and energy as usual until I talked to them.

"Today we are not going to workout," I said. As they moved into a seated circle on the floor, visions of the sexually explicit materials policy and of my credibility as an instructor flashed into my mind. But I dismissed these fears because I knew that I could not be the teacher they had come to know until I told them what had happened and what it felt like to be outed on a bathroom wall, job description and all. In a world where people can be condemned and feared for who they love or what they look like, sometimes these kinds of discussions are more important than a cardiovascular workout.

My students seemed to agree. Some of them even shared stories of their own about similar unwarranted condemnations. While my students did not sweat as much as they usually do in that day's class, I sweat enough for all of them. I still don't know who thinks I am the No. 1 lesbian on campus, but I don't much care because I found out something much more valuable: the importance of facing fear with communication, vulnerability and honesty.

Feminism: working to practice what you preach

L like my job. Even more so, I like the women I work with. For years I waited tables, being frustrated by a thankless job with few rewards. All the personal theories I believed to be so important I merely gave lip service to because I thought there was nothing I could do. Then I started working for a feminist organization and discovered that sometimes it is difficult to practice what I preach.

For a long time, I identified myself with feminism but never used the term to categorize myself. I have always believed that feminism was somewhat of an entity and those who believed and practiced it immersed themselves in their own individual take on it. Feminism had a goal, but there were many ways and many levels on which to achieve that goal. There were many times I disassociated myself with it because feminism had acquired such a negative connotation from conservative sectors. Even women who believed in equality and the respectful treatment of women seemed reluctant to identify themselves as feminists.

All the while I was trying to do what I believed was my part in the women's movement. I truly believed that it was enough to believe in women's equality, to have an educated vote and to support women's issues. I was one of those women who cringed at the word "feminist." It wasn't until I began working for a feminist organization that I felt truly comfortable identifying myself as a women's advocate.

I started the job with hopes of fulfilling my personal ideas of how women's support services should operate while absorbing the vast knowl- becomes that: a task, less associated with viable on the Viewpoints Pages.

edge of the women who already worked there political implications and more contingent upon and had earned my respect due to their association with such incredible work. I considered it lies both financially and emotionally. Working both a challenge and an opportunity to create for a feminist organization is not easy. It is tangible work out of years of philosophical and issues. I imagined broad, open lines of communication. My vision of a feminist organization resided in idealism. I learned soon in the midst of political and social implication, contrasting opinions and personality conflicts that at the heart of a feminist organization is the most simple of tasks: a job that has to be done. I had to restructure my vision. I work closely with several incredible women, all of them knowledgeable and dedicated to what they do. What they do is sometimes in conflict with what they believe. As in all professions, sometimes the best solution isn't the one agreed upon. There is still a protocol of tasks that are expected, regardless of diplomacy. It is true a feminist organization is built upon a premise of providing the "best solution" for as many women as it can. The solution becomes an entity, and the women who are expected to carry out that solution become facets. I believe, at heart, we know the reasons behind our work are the same; however, the ways we have all arrived at the same place are very different.

While our work is heavily immersed in feminist principles, it is rarely a discussion in the workplace. The importance of our job is a given, and there is little to dispute in the way of its implications for the betterment of women's lives. On a day-to-day basis, however, the task Amy Resewehr's column appears alternate Tuesdays whether we can support ourselves and our famisometimes difficult to remind yourself that the woman you are helping could be you. We often don't agree on what is best for our clients, ourselves and each other, yet we are there to serve that same vital purpose.

We are not so much afraid to speak our minds, but often do not because each of us has been taught that confrontation is bad. In many ways we fear that it will destroy what good we are doing. I believe some of this comes naturally to an organization comprised of women gaining social power through women's advocacy. While what we have accomplished should be commended, it is by far structurally obsolete. There are ingrained flaws in any organization where while there is a goal, there is opposition.

But there are those who have struggled with the social opposition for so long they have put it behind them, and day to day merely come to work and do their job. It is not necessarily about an infinite philosophical struggle on a day-to-day basis. On many levels, it has to be about internal resolution. As women, we must struggle with our own internal biases and judgments. I've realized that communication can be a struggle, even in an environment that appears safe. The women I work with are feminists. I am a feminist. Feminism for me is no longer just an entity. It is a means of resolving my reality with my idealistic views of what I can accomplish alone and in the company of other women.

Blame goes to both political parties

I would first like to applaud Karl Hack's March 3 letter in pronouncing a certain amount of disgust at the stubbornness of both Democrats and Republicans in their opposition of one another. A lot of their mudslinging and debating seems based upon party lines alone, a sense of "us" vs. "them." I greatly appreciated his wisdom in equally accusing both parties.

However, I was disappointed and infuriated to learn that equality in his accusations ended there while his letter continued, stating that "the only good fundamentalists are those who insist on open-mindedness, cooperation and compromise." While not a fundamentalist myself, I was enraged to see him implicate the fundamentalists of the sole close-minded and uncompromising behavior in our society. He should have equally pointed out that "radical liberals" — as opposed to (conservative) fundamentalists also have closed minds and can, as the rest of the world, be

The act of finger pointing in a call to open-mindedness is simply absurd. It's like a fan of the opposing team in the middle of a game shouting "Go Hawks!" Its sentiment is well-appreciated, but I question its source and intention.

Saving rain forests from corporate greed

The Rainforest Action Network recently announced that we have less than 40 years to save the tropical rain forests from destruction. And hope of success is evaporating faster each year. What scientists have called the lungs of the planet are under attack by an aggressive form of cancer — human greed. Rain forests that once covered 14 percent of the Earth's land surface now cover only 6 percent. One of the lungs that supports virtually all life on the planet has already collapsed.

Wilson, estimates that we are losing 137 plant, insect among the ranks of the infamous and animal species per day - 50,000 per year. This extinction of the dinosaurs, and it seriously endangers the survival of humanity. Twenty-five percent of all active ingredients in cancer-fighting drugs originated in the rain forest. Rain forests are the medicinal storehouses for future generations, and they are being logged, flooded and burned down before even being inventoried. Only 10 percent of the plants and insects in these forests have been identified. A small fraction of them have been tested for lifesaving properties.

As 20-story trees are felled to make plywood for disposable concrete forms, and even disposable chopsticks, it is clear that we are not using these resources wisely. Studies show that in a 10-year period, a standing rain forest will produce 10 times as much income as a logged rain forest.

Who is responsible for this tragedy? Without question, transnational corporations deserve a great deal of the blame. In terms of logging, the Mitsubishi Corp. a name usually associated with automobiles, televisions and stereo systems - is one of the worst corporate offenders. It has been logging the forests of the es, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, Indonesia, Brazil, Bolivia, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Siberia and the United States for 40 years. The trail of llegalities as well as ecological and human devastation

Bloedel and Hyundai are also infamous for their industrial forestry practices. Oil companies also have a history of rain forest destruction. Texaco is among the worst example. This single company spilled over 16 million gallons of oil in Ecuador alone, discharged 20 billion gallons of polluted wastewater and constructed roads in virgin forest that resulted in 2.5 million acres of forest being destroyed. Then it simply walked away from the mess. Unocal has a different legacy. It supports the repressive military overnment of Burma despite international sanctions. That government is using native communities as slave labor to railroads and the infrastructure for Unocal's pipeline to transport oil. Companies like Royal Dutch Harvard's Pulitzer Prize-winning biologist, Edward Shell, Mobil, Exxon, Chevron and Maxus are also

The real tragedy is that none of this needed to hapbiological meltdown far exceeds anything since the pen. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has researched and known for 40 years that plants like hemp, kenaf and grass straw are excellent sources for paper, building materials and energy. They grow well in various parts of the country. They can be grown organically. They produce far more fiber than trees. Unfortunately, companies like Du Pont opposed them because of the threat to its synthetic products. Millions in political contributions have guaranteed that megacorporations continue to profit from destroying rain forests, while the price of timber, oil and minerals is borne by native cultures and future generations.

As the fight to save rain forests continues, people who consume need to acknowledge that this is their fight also. We need to demand alternative fibers for paper and building materials. And we need to express our anger by refusing to purchase products from companies like Mitsubishi, Georgia-Pacific, Texaco and Unocal against which national boycotts exist for their destructive rain forest activities.

With less than 40 years to save the rain forests, the current generation needs to make an environmental Uturn immediately. The cancer is spreading. One lung has already collapsed. I'm angry and scared, and you should be too. We all need to mobilize and fight to save

One mother said she was willing to uphold her end of the contract by attending cosmetology school and becoming a beautician, but the state said her career choice was not satisfactory.

"Because I chose the field of cosmetology, they took all my benefits away," she said. "They said cosmetology didn't have a future or plan to get you off of welfare.'

The state's power to refuse further welfare benefits on the basis of career choice is justified, said Dave Jacoby, supervisor of PROMISE-JOBS, or Promoting Independence and Self-Sufficiency Through Employment-Job Opportunities and Basic Skills. UI swim teams honored for team GPA

The UI men's and women's swim teams were honored for their achievements out of the pool recently. The College Swimming Coaches Association of America recognizes any programs with grade-point-averages of 2.8 or higher as commendable.

The men's swim team had the 19th highest GPA of the nation's Division I schools with a 2.9, while the women's GPA of 2.921 was 30th in Division I.

The top GPA of all men's swimming programs belongs to Yale (3.327). Saint Louis leads the women with a 3.490.

Owners retreat to private meetings

BEACH, Fla. (AP) - A day after the both sides walked away from negotiations, baseball owners prepared Monday for their quarterly meetings and union officials returned to their office in

No negotiations are scheduled this week, when the strike completes it seventh month. The sides had set a March 5 deadline for an agreement that would allow the season to start as scheduled with major leaguers, but at least one owner thought next weekend was the real deadline.

"I don't see how we can go beyond Monday and still be ready for the opener," Philadelphia Phillies president Bill Giles said in Clearwater.

"I do have a hunch that the union leaders are waiting to see what happens at the owners' meeting. ... I guess hoping that some of the owners will say, 'Let's make a deal, whatever it is.' I don't think that's going to hap-

Donald Fehr said the union wasn't at fault for the breakoff in negotiations.

"We haven't been accused of breaking the law twice," he said. "They have and they're about to be a third time."

Blues send Janney to Sharks

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Craig Janney, who left the St. Louis Blues last month in a dispute over playing time, was traded Monday to the San Jose Sharks for defenseman Jeff Norton, a fourth-round draft choice in 1997 and future considerations.

Janney, the Blues' top playmaker and leading scorer in 1992-93, had two goals and five assists in eight games this season before leaving the team Feb. 18.

The 27-year-old center, who was third on the Blues in scoring last season with 16 goals and 68 assists, had been scratched for four consecutive games by new general manager and coach Mike

Over his eight-year NHL career, Janney has 133 goals and 385 assists. He was a first-round pick by Boston in 1986.

The trade seems to work well for both the Sharks, who needed a high scorer, and Janney, who could not overcome apparent problems with Keenan.

Davis: MSU game is a must-win

David Schwartz The Daily Iowan

Coach Tom Davis didn't mince words when discussing what Iowa needs to do to receive an NCAA tournament bid. 'We've got to win this game Wednesday night," Davis said at his weekly press conference Monday. Wednesday night Iowa (18-10, 8-8) squares off against Big Ten Conference coleader, Michigan State.

Davis said Michigan State's strength comes from its backcourt of Eric Snow and

Also posing a threat to Iowa is Spartan center Jamie Feick. Feick, a ferocious rebounder, managed 15 boards in his battle with Indiana's Alan Henderson. Since Iowa doesn't have an inside presence as strong as Henderson, Davis said Feick could cause some problems.

Forward Russ Millard is expected to miss Wednesday's game. Millard was not at practice Monday after coming down with a fever Sunday morning. Davis said that doctors told him that this was a normal reaction for people recovering from pneumonia.

Filling the inside void will be John Carter and Ryan Bowen. Davis said that Bowen's Davis said the whole team, primarily the outside shooters, is hurt by the absence of a true center.

Hawks swing back into action at Drake

Chris James

The Daily Iowan

The last time the Iowa women's tennis team faced the Drake Bulldogs the Hawkeyes eeked out a 5-4 decision. That was last year and in Iowa's backyard.

This time the Bulldogs will try to put the Hawkeyes in the doghouse as Iowa comes calling for a 3 p.m. showdown in Des Moines at the Drake Tennis Center.

Iowa is coming off a pair of Big Ten road losses to Northwestern and Wisconsin back on Feb. 18 and 19. Coach Micki Schillig said playing on the road and having three weeks off will make it that much more difficult. "Anytime you're facing an intrastate rival on the road, it's going to be tough," Schillig said. "Drake usually gives us a hard fought match and they will be fired up when we come to town. We won't have a problem with rustiness, it's just a matter of getting out there and playing."

Drake currently stands at 5-4 on the year but are in the midst of a three-game losing streak. Drake is led by No.1 singles player Nikki Uelze, who has a 14-7 record in singles play. Senior Susan Hall is No. 2 for the Bulldogs, sporting a 6-11 record. Uelze and Hall team up at the No.1 doubles position and have posted a 7-7 mark.

Iowa stands at 4-4 overall, 1-3 in the Big Ten. Iowa Senior Laura Dvorak, currently ranked No. 59 in the nation in singles, said that Drake has vastly improved and will be looking to score the upset. We have the better squad on paper but Drake will be ready and we have to play our best tennis. If we don't come out sharp, it might be a long afternoon," Dvorak said.

Portland said she doubted her team's ability to come back, after one rally had been erased by an Ohio State spurt midway through the second half.

"We looked physically tired and mentally confused," the Lady Lions coach said. But instead it was Ohio State that showed the wear and tear down the stretch. Penn State began to have success inside, led by Missy Maslin, the Penn State senior forward who was named the tourney's MVP. Maslin was joined on the all-tourney team by four other players on the floor Monday night - Tia Nicholson and Angie Potthoff from Penn State and Evans and Katie Smith of Ohio State. Maslin scored 14 of her teamhigh 20 points after intermission, including four free throws down the stretch Nicholson's two free throws gave

Penn State the lead for good, 64-63. at 2:08. On the next Buckeye possession, she stole the ball under the Ohio State basket. "They didn't beat us on the outside, they beat us inside," Ohio State coach Nancy Darst said.

Penn State's Carla Coleman carries a sign proclaiming the team's Big Ten championship after it beat Ohio State 68-63 in the title game of the Big Ten women's basketball tournament in Indianapolis.

Darst said her Buckeyes struggled late in the game to get good

It would be Iowa's fifth win in six games. And playing well down the stretch doesn't hurt when a team is trying to make a good impression on the NCAA selection committee.

One thing that won't change is Iowa's four one-point losses to Michigan State, Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue. Short of making the Final Four, those defeats will haunt Iowa no matter what it does for the rest of the season.

If the Hawkeyes fail to make the NCAAs, the one-point losses will be the reason.

Holyfield vows he is healed

Ed Schuyler

NEW YORK - Evander Holvfield knows there will be a certain circus atmosphere at his next fight, a fight it appeared he'd never have.

The two-time and former heavyweight champion was asked if he thought a lot of people would watch his May 20 match against Ray Mercer just to see if something might happen to him.

Following his WBA-IBF title loss on points to Michael Moorer last April 22 at Las Vegas, Holyfield was diagnosed as having a heart condition

"I want to make myself perform to show people I'm healed," Holyfield said Monday at a news conference to formally announce the fight at the Atlantic City Convention Center.

"There are people out there who can be healed.

Promoter Dan Duva said Holyfield was coming back because he wanted to join Muhammad Ali as the only man to become a heavyweight champion three different times.

The 32-year-old Holyfield, however, puts things in perpsective by saying, "One reason I want to come back is I know I don't have a health problem and I was cleared by the doctors. I'm not very anxious to get back into the ring, but it is to let my light shine, to show what the Lord has done for me.

"I am healed, what better story can I tell?'

"Evander Holyfield is invited to apply for a license in the state of New York," said Larry Hazzard, New Jersey State Athletic Commissioner.

"We see no reason he can't get a license.

Hazzard said his medical people have consulted with medical people representing the Nevada State Athletic Commission and physicians at the Mayo Clinic.

Mike O'Hara, a spokesman for the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., said last Nov. 23 that a battery of tests showed Holyfield to "be in excellent health. We have put no restrictions on his activi-

The medical advisory board of the Nevada commission cleared Holyfield, and on Feb. 24, by a 4-1 vote, the commission lifted the medical suspension imposed on Holyfield. It, however, did not vote to license Holyfield.

Coach K: I'll be back next season

Jim O'Connell Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. - Mike Krzyzewski was back in Cameron Indoor Stadium on Monday, and there was no way to wipe the smile from his face.

Sitting on a small stage at one end of the court, Krzyzewski held a news conference to let everybody know he's OK as he continues to recover from back surgery, and that he'll be back on the sidelines with Duke next season.

"I'm embarrassed a little to do this news conference because I don't have any earth-shaking news. I don't want to be a hot ticket. I just want to coach basketball," he told a group of 80 reporters and 30 or so fans and students.

He won't do that this week at the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament because he won't even be in Greensboro for it. He will meet with the team Monday and plans to take part in practice Tuesday, but that's it - doctors' orders.

He underwent surgery for a ruptured disc on Oct. 21 and rushed back to work. The hasty return led to exhaustion and finally forced him from coaching the rest of the season.

"I was very scared," the 48-year-old coach said. "I had never in my life not been able to just go at something, but I was just so exhausted. I just didn't have any energy. You just can't go, but you really want to. I was scared because I couldn't believe it was just a back. It just had to be something else."

Krzyzewski underwent tests and received a clean bill of health, but doctors told him he had to concentrate solely on rehabilitating his back. That meant total rest and cutting ties with a basketball program he has guided the past 15 seasons

He addressed the many rumors that circulated during his absence, the main ones being a much more serious illness or burnout.

10 list of rumors," Krzyzewski said, laughing.

When you coach in the Atlantic Coast Conference and been around, rumors are part of the game and can be kind of funny.

"I know most people didn't believe I was doing crazy things. There was a concern about cancer and there was a concern about that on my part, too, because you get to that point where you're so tired, so exhausted you wonder 'Is it just my back?'

On Monday, he looked like anything to say it was my back. I don't know would have been a lot differnt winsbut a convalescing coach. He looked what burnout is. I was tired because and loss-wise.

because I was trying to do things I shouldn't have been.'

The Blue Devils were 9-3 when Krzyzewski began his leave of absence and finished the regular season 12-17, "Like David Letterman, I have a top 2-14 in the ACC. The losses matched the school record for a season and the league mark was easily the worst in school history.

It was also the first time since the 1986-86 season that Duke fell out of the AP college basketball rankings.

Under interim coach Pete Gaudet, a 12-year assistant to Krzyzewski, the Blue Devils hung close in a number of games against ranked teams, but were rarely able to win.

"I am proud of my team and my staff for what they did during this "That was the reason for all the time," Krzyzewski said. "I'm sure if tests and that's why the doctors sent my team and my staff knew on Oct. 15 out a statement after about two weeks I wasn't going to be with them, things

MOVIE REVIEW

Flimsy story line in 'Hideaway' makes for shoddy entertainment

Ian Corwin The Daily Iowan

If it weren't for the thin, derivative storytelling of hack novelist Dean R. Koontz, "Hideaway" could have been something. But stunning visual effects, a suffocating atmosphere of suspense (courtesy of director Brett Leonard) and Jeff Goldblum's talent aren't enough to save this film from its troubled source: the simplistic imagination of a bad writer.

Koontz's tale of a man who has a vivid near-death experience, only to be hounded by the spirit of a Satan-worshiping psychopath afterward, is long on far-fetched ideas and decidedly short on all believability. It might have worked on the printed page, where Koontz had more time and space to flesh things out, but it's tough to see how anyone - reader or moviegoer could swallow the load of dreck he's Hatch and Lindsey Harrison are a hip yet stilted yuppie couple straight from Woodstock, who quote movies like "Chinatown" to hands. each other and use words like ences. They have a pretty daughphones on and salivates uncontrol- ence, coupled with his pretty-boy with him for two hours.
