Hearing for suspended police officer postponed

An Iowa City police officer who is appealing his second suspension in the past six months will have to wait until May 16 for a public hearing.

The Iowa City Civil Service Commission met Thursday afternoon to postpone the hearing for Edwin McMartin, the officer suspended Feb. 1 for violating Iowa City Police Department rules and regulations.

In a memorandum sent to McMartin, Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake cited excessive force as grounds for the 10-day suspension.

The incident occurred on Nov. 20, 1993, but no further details have been released.

This is McMartin's second suspension this year. The first resulted from a May 3, 1994 incident, in which McMartin was suspended for two days for using excessive force against bicyclist Chris Lenz.

Kennedy cited scheduling conflicts as the reason for the delayed hearing.

Talk show guest shoots revealed secret admirer

ORION TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) — A man who found out on the Jenny Jones talk show that another man had a crush on him shot his admirer to death on Thursday, police said.

Scott B. Amedure, 31, was shot to death in his home, said Sgt. Michael Elliott of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department. Minutes later, the suspect surrendered to Auburn Hills police in suburban Detroit.

The two men, who were acquaintances, had argued earlier in the day about Monday's taping of the show, which was about people with secret crushes, Elliott said.

Amedure said on the show that he had a secret crush on the man, who was in the audience, the victim's brother, Frank Amedure, told WDIV-TV in Detroit.

None spared in McGovern speech

Former candidate rips political bigwigs

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

George McGovern bashed House Speaker Newt Gingrich, political action committees and almost every other aspect of the current American political scene in his speech to about 700 people Thursday night in the Union.

McGovern, 72, was a 1972 presidential candidate. His speech, titled "The American Political Crisis: Traditions of Conservatism and Liberalism," ranged from funny anecdotes on his landslide loss to President Nixon in the 1972 election to serious proposals for the reevaluation of the liberal political agenda.

McGovern, an unabashed liberal, began by noting he won in Johnson County during the 1972 election and complimented the audience on its good taste.

"I've been under the impression for a long time that the smartest people in this country are in Johnson County," he said.

The former South Dakota senator, who spoke to 15,000 people on the Pentacrest during his presidential campaign, took a few shots at Gingrich.

"At least I'm still a big deal when Gingrich — in trying to find the worst way possible to describe the president and Mrs. Clinton — said, 'They're nothing but a couple of counterculture McGovernists,'" McGovern said. "I'm somewhat bothered by the new speaker because he and his allies say they're creating a revolution. How can you have a revolution without some slight counterculture tendency?"

McGovern said there are basic problems with both the Democratic and Republican parties, mostly stemming from the hunt for campaign dollars.

"The two major parties tend to converge; they serve essentially the same interests and attract funding from the same interests," he said.

Veteran journalist to speak at banquet

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

A seasoned Washington reporter who covered the historic events of Watergate and President Nixon's resignation will speak to UI journalism students tonight about news in the "Age of Gingrich."

John Cochran, chief Capitol correspondent for ABC news, will return to his alma mater as the featured speaker at the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication's annual Fourth Estate Awards banquet at 7 p.m. in the Main Lounge of the Union. Cochran received his master's degree in journalism from the UI in 1967.

In addition to his work reporting on government corruption during the Nixon era, Cochran has covered volatile events in the Middle East. He was also the only American journalist left in Iran during the 1979 hostage crisis after all other journalists were ordered to leave.

Cochran's visit to the UI has been two years in the making, said Professor John Soloski, acting director of the journalism school.

"We've been trying to get him out here for a long time," Soloski said. "A problem always exists that something big can happen in Washington and he has to go back. It's hard to predict until we pull it off."

Cochran said his recent change from NBC to ABC caused a delay in his speaking affairs.

"I just recently joined ABC at the start of last year," he said. "They said I couldn't take any speaking engagements, so I said this year I would speak."

Cochran said he titled his speech, "Changes in Broadcast News in the Age of Gingrich" because he believes the public is interested in the current change of power in Congress.

He said House Speaker Newt Gingrich is hostile toward the

Cambus to scale down SAFERIDE

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Cambus' SAFERIDE program will continue to operate, despite past problems of drunken riders wreaking havoc in the vans that take students to their off-campus homes after a night of carousing at the bars.

The service, which currently runs two 15-passenger vans to off-campus locations until 2:30 a.m. on weekend nights, was slated for possible cancellation because of numerous incidents of rowdiness by riders, culminating in the assault of driver Stacy Danford, a UI junior, by a drunken passenger Feb. 10.

Although the late-night service will continue, it is being modified. Cambus will unveil a new version of SAFERIDE the weekend of March 31 to April 1.

SAFERIDE will be changed to running only one van instead of two. Also, one seat in the van will be removed so there are less people inside the van and more space between the driver and passengers.

The off-campus service will also end at 1 a.m. instead of at 2:50 a.m.

In addition, the service will now be supplemented by more regular Cambus nighttime service. Red and Blue route buses will begin running until 2:30 a.m., instead of the Interdorm route that now runs among the residence halls.

After Danford's assault, Cambus also stepped up security efforts by having more UI Department of Public Safety officers at the SAFERIDE loading zone, across

Legislature seeks to relax Iowa's drug-testing laws

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

If a bill to ease state restrictions on drug testing is approved by the Legislature, employers will no longer have to jump through hoops to examine workers for drug and alcohol use.

Under current Iowa law, employers can only screen potential employees for drug use as part of a complete physical. However, the physicals are expensive for employers, said Dale Woolery, assistant coordinator for communication and public affairs of the Governor's Alliance on Substance Abuse.

If the bill is passed, employers could conduct drug tests separately from a physical.

Iowa's drug-testing laws were ranked as the fourth worst in the United States by the Institute for a Drug-Free Workplace, a Washington, D.C.-based organization. This ranking was based on the limitations Iowa law places on employers who want to drug test employees.

Most of Iowa's border states have less restrictive testing laws.

Fuhrman questioned about alleged racism

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Taking the O.J. Simpson case into its most explosive stage yet, prosecutors Thursday brought in Detective Mark Fuhrman and, in a pre-emptive strike, promptly confronted him with defense allegations he's a racist.

Under questioning by Prosecutor Marcia Clark, Fuhrman denied ever meeting a woman who accused him of making racist remarks in the mid-1980s.

Instead, he set about showing the mostly black jury he was a conscientious officer just trying to do his job in the murder case.

Fuhrman said he was "nervous, reluctant" about testifying.

"Since June 13, it seems that I've seen a lot of the evidence ignored and a lot of personal issues come to the forefront," he said. "I think that's too bad."

Simpson's lawyers have cast Fuhrman as a racist who planted a bloody glove to frame the former ► Detective Mark Fuhrman took the stand and denied meeting a woman who said he once uttered a racial slur. But defense attorney F. Lee Bailey said he has a surprise witness who can back up the allegation.

► Prosecutor Christopher Darden accused Simpson of making "inappropriate contact" with a juror.

► Judge Lance Ito told attorneys on both sides that the next lawyer to launch into a long-winded objection would get a $250 fine.

Glass blower puffs up department's morale

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Peter Hatch's line of work has everything to do with mending shattered hopes.

For 17 years as the UI's official scientific glass blower with a salary of $40,000 per year, Hatch has aided forlorn chemistry students and professors with chipped glass.

DAY IN THE LIFE

"This is a fun job," Hatch said. "I have people come in the door with sad faces because something's broken, and my job is to show them it can be repaired. They can go out with a smile."

Wearing protective horn-rimmed glasses, a T-shirt, brown slacks and a gold watch, Hatch easily holds a tube in his mouth and dips glass into a 2,000 degree Celsius torch. He periodically removes the tube from his mouth to talk about his work.

The 6-by-3 table on which the torch is mounted is covered with tubes of different shapes and sizes — most already fixed and ready to be reinforced by six hours in his oven. Hatch is one of three scientific glass blowers in the state.

Choosing from a cabinet full of 4-foot glass tubes of different widths, Hatch can craft any size or shape vessel he wants. He blows through a plastic tube into the glass tube, applying heat to the glass tube and molding it into a workable shape.

"It's a little like working with Tinker Toys," Hatch said. "I use the tubes and these plastic components and piece them together."

Hatch started college at a liberal arts school, where he acquired 30 hours of chemistry classes. He flunked out, went into the Army for two years and found himself earning minimum wage — $1.50 an hour — as a lab assistant. Hatch then met his wife and began to make plans for marriage.

"I was really not on speaking terms with the Lord, but I was desperate and got down on my knees and prayed that I find a job that could support a family," he said.

Shortly after, while still working

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

If it's broken and it's made of glass, Peter Hatch can glass blower, Hatch can form glass into many shapes probably make it whole again. As the UI's scientific and sizes for various departments on campus.

in the lab, Hatch was handed a dishpan full of broken test tubes and asked to take it to the glass blower. When he entered the glass shop, he realized it was his calling.

Hatch began attending a trade school in New York to learn the ins and outs of the profession. After stints at the University of Notre Dame and Case Western Reserve University, Hatch began working at the UI. He said his work has been unpredictable since the day he started.

"Every day is different," he said. "Usually I have just a few interruptions during the day."

Hatch said he averages one natural gas burn per week but is rarely cut by pieces of broken glass.

Although scientific glass is his main trade, Hatch said his artistic side gets the best of him every now and then.

"Once in a while when the Cub Scouts come through, I'll make them a little something to demonstrate how glass blowing is done," Hatch said. "Being here in Iowa, I'll usually try to make a little glass pig."

However, test tubes and beakers are his specialty.

"The main reason the university hired me to be here is to expedite their research," Hatch said.

Although his three sons are out of high school and uninterested in following in their dad's footsteps, Hatch said creating a useful product gives him a sense of accomplishment.

"You mention working with your hands, and the young people today have sort of a negative connotation," Hatch said. "To me, the satisfaction comes from a job in which I'm able to be productive and help others. I can finish the day and see I've accomplished something."

However, the youths provide Hatch with the incentive to keep blowing glass day after day, he said.

"Staying in touch with the younger generation is one of the real pluses of my work," Hatch said. "Being around some students that are strongly motivated helps me to do my best."

Good you tried again, Paul.

Former Beatle Paul McCartney said in an interview released Thursday that was the original first line of a song he wrote 30 years ago.

But he scrapped it in favor of "Yesterday, all my troubles seemed so far away."

"Yesterday," which has been played on the radio more than 6 million times since 1965 — more than any other song in history — remains McCartney's favorite.

"I like 'Here, There and Everywhere,' too, and 'Hey Jude,' 'Fool on the Hill' and 'Let it Be.' But 'Yesterday' is such an obvious favorite because it's the biggest song ever."

Earth friendly enterprise solely sells recycled goodsMoir Crowley
The Daily Iowan

Wallets, neckties and overnight bags made of old inner tubes are just some of the products made of recycled materials sold in an Iowa City store that opened last month.

Alternatives-Conserve, Preserve, Et Al, located at 323 E. Market St., is the collaborative effort of Janelle Rettig and Robin Butler. The store opened Feb. 11, and Butler said response has been very positive.

"People have been amazed by the type of products available," Butler said.

The objects on the shelves are environment friendly and created out of recycled materials. Rettig said one of the biggest sellers is paper stationery made from surplus government maps.

The store also carries stationery made from blue jeans. Boxed stationery costs between $8 and $9.50.

"Before trees were used, people made paper from linen and cotton," Butler said. "It feels and has the same consistency of paper, except it has a light blue color and you can see hints of the darker denim material."

And a forest didn't need to be cut down to make the paper, she added.

Old inner tubes from tractor tires are also incorporated with the "second-life products." The wallets, overnight bags and neckties made from the rubber are both a novelty and a utility, Butler said.

Pens made out of from recycled tires, pencils made out of recycled newspapers, rain forest house plants and environmentally friendly household cleaners are also available to the consumer.

Recycled crayon stubs are also made into attractive and practical household items when the crayons are melted down and crafted into new shapes by developmentally disabled workers.

Butler said the idea for the store came from years of shopping through catalogs for recycled products.

"A store like this is what Iowa City needed," Butler said. "There's nothing like it here in this environmentally conscious city."

The products sold are both utilitarian and practical, and they are also novelties, Butler said. She said the recycled paper and tissue are comparable or cheaper in price than at grocery stores and can be used as staples in any household.

By creating a market for recycled goods, Butler and Rettig said they hope to educate the average consumer on the benefits of conservation.

"People need to be more informed when they purchase things," Rettig said.

They also hope to set an example with the store and encourage people to recycle their own trash.

"Environmentalism needs to be more mainstream, not practiced by a minority," Butler said.

Jeremy Rogers, manager of the Johnson County Recycling Center, Coralville, said recycling has almost tripled in the past year. He anticipates an increase with the new recycled products available.

"People will look for the triangle logo on recycled products and actually pay a little more," Rogers said.

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

Co-owners Robin Butler and Janelle Rettig sit at the center of a six-year dream which turned into reality three months ago with the opening of Alternatives-Conserve, Preserve, Et Al, 323 E. Market St. Specializing in environmentally friendly products, they offer everything from recycled candles to stationery made out of blue jeans. Even the pieces of furniture are recycled from Rettig's business part of the family. The general response has been "real positive," according to Rettig.

SCREENINGS FOR WOMEN FUNDED

Harkin helps establish grant for cancer testsTom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

Sen. Tom Harkin, whose two sisters died of breast cancer, announced last week that a grant of $750,000 has been set up to help Iowa women obtain early detection services for breast and cervical cancer.

Harkin is on the Senate subcommittee working with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The grant for Iowa comes from federal money that is part of the centers' national breast and cervical cancer early detection program.

This early-detection effort ensures that women receive regular screening for breast and cervical cancer and helps prevent a large number of deaths from these illnesses, Harkin said.

"I'm hopeful this grant will be used to get more women to get early screenings for breast and cervical cancer in Iowa," he said.

Although the exact application of the grant has not been determined, Harkin said it will be used to bring breast and cervical cancer-screening services to all women, particularly to the elderly, minorities and women with low incomes.

Harkin said the grant should get more women to take the initiative in obtaining early detection exams.

"Early on, a lot of women feel they don't need to be screened unless they have a symptom," Harkin said. "We need to get to them and point out that early treatment can actually prevent cancer."

Early screenings are of utmost importance in the prevention of breast and cervical cancer, said Gayle Sand, co-director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St.

"The education aspect of informing women how to prevent different kinds of cancer is key to our mission," Sand said. "We need to show women that early detection can be user friendly in order to go a long way in improving women's health in this state."

There are currently 590 deaths from breast cancer each year in Iowa. The goal of the grant is to reduce breast cancer deaths by 30 percent and cervical cancer deaths by more than 90 percent.

Maria Stewart, center manager for Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, 2 S. Linn St., said Pap smears are at least 70 percent effective in preventing cervical cancer.

"Particularly for these two types of cancer, (early detection) is extremely important," Stewart said. "Early detection for either cancer allows for easier and more effective treatment."

Women should get annual Pap tests and breast exams when they reach 18 or become sexually active, both Sand and Stewart said.

To achieve the goal of reducing breast and cervical cancer deaths, Harkin said education and outreach is needed to encourage women to obtain early detection exams.

"There are a lot of things about breast and cervical cancer women don't know," Harkin said. "That's why we need to reach out to them."

By taking the initiative to have breast and cervical cancer exams, women take control of their health care, Sand said.

"It comes down to empowerment," she said. "Women need to feel responsible for their health care. We try to take the fear and intimidation out of exams."

Although education is key to the success of preventing terminal cancer in women, Stewart said availability of testing centers and affordability of service are also important.

"Iowa City is lucky because it has a lot of providers, which a lot of other cities don't," she said. "You can find screens that are affordable, but it's hard work and more expensive in other areas."

Stewart said Planned Parenthood uses a sliding-scale fee to make screenings more affordable for women.

BILL PASSES SENATE COMMITTEE

Higher fines for selling tobacco to minors suggested

Mary Neubauer
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Cities and counties could collect more money to use in the fight against children smoking under a bill passed by a Senate committee.

The bill drew praise from Christopher Atchison, director of the Department of Public Health.

"Compliance checks in Iowa last fall revealed that too many of our youth — some as young as 14 — are able to purchase tobacco products, even though the legal age is 18," Atchison said. "Studies also show that a vast majority of adult smokers say they started the habit at an age where they had to purchase cigarettes illegally."

Under the bill, local governments could increase the cost of annual fees for retail tobacco permits by up to 25 percent. The minimum fee varies from $50 in rural areas to $100 in cities with populations of 15,000 or more. The extra income could only be used to enforce laws that prohibit those younger than 18 from buying tobacco.

The Senate Human Resources Committee passed the bill 8-2 Thursday, sending it to the full Senate for debate.

Sen. Steve Hansen, D-Sioux City, voted against the bill, although he said he detests cigarettes. He said the bill is pushing a program that counties and cities haven't asked for.

"I don't think it's going to increase the level of enforcement. The fact is, juvenile smoking is not a priority of any law enforcement agency I know of," he said.

"And the amount of money we're pushing won't fund a position in any department."

Environmentalist to address World Bank policies in speech

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Caring about the environment isn't just a matter of recycling cans and collecting newspapers for environmentalist and author Bruce Rich.

Rich, 48, is senior attorney and director of the International Program of the Environmental Defense Fund, a bipartisan Washington, D.C.-based environmental action and advocacy group.

Rich is also the author of "Mortgaging the Earth: The World Bank, Environmental Impoverishment, and the Crisis of Development," which examines the World Bank's practice of investing millions of dollars in large-scale industrial projects in developing countries.

Rich has made it his mission to raise public awareness of the way the World Bank uses money to fund unsound environmental practices, particularly in developing countries.

"The point of the book is to educate the public on the basic premise that these institutions like the World Bank are supported by U.S. tax dollars," he said. "If anything is going to change, it won't be because of people like me stomping around Washington. It will be from public awareness and public pressure for reform of these institutions."

Rich will speak in room 101 of the Becker Communication Studies Building at 3:30 p.m. today and will read from his book at 8 p.m. at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

The World Bank, based in Washington, D.C., finances $23 billion annually in development projects, such as power plants and dams. Rich said the total cost of these projects is actually double that amount. The United States is the most important contributor to the bank, which is financed by the 10 richest countries in the world.

Rich worked as a consultant for the World Bank and got much of the information for his book from other bank employees who didn't like what the World Bank was doing with its billions of dollars in funding. Ironically, at the same time he was consulting for the World Bank, Rich was consulting for Greenpeace, one of the largest and most vocal pro-environment groups.

"The World Bank is a very important institution. They have a great impact on billions of people," Rich said. "They have too much impact. Their policies have unnecessarily negative impacts on developing countries from environmental and social standpoints. What people can do is speak up and make sure the money is more responsibly used."

The 1988 winner of the Global 500 Award — the United Nations' highest environmental honor — Rich's last college lecture was at the University of Minnesota in January. He said the transition from speaking to politicians and environmentalists to addressing college students isn't difficult because his university audiences have been receptive to his message.

"Students have a lot of interest in these issues," Rich said. "I've spoken to universities in the past, and the audiences have always been very interested in what I was saying."

Rich, a cum laude graduate of Yale University who speaks six languages, said 1995 is an important year for examination of World Bank policies because 1995 marks the 50th anniversary of the bank's creation.

Rich's lecture should be an interesting look at the international workings of the World Bank, said Jael Silliman, director of the UI Center for International and Comparative Studies. Silliman described Rich's book as "fascinating and written in layman's language."

"I am expecting him to be a very lucid speaker," Silliman said. "Given (the UI's) strong developmental support programs, it is very appropriate to have him here. It's really exciting. He has an international reputation, and his work is very relevant now."

Professor aims to boost diversity through new post

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

For more than 15 years, Benny Hawkins, an associate professor in the UI College of Dentistry, has worked to increase minority student and faculty recruitment and retention in the College of Dentistry. Now, the UI has given Hawkins the opportunity to expand his quest for diversity by naming him special adviser on minority affairs to the provost and vice president for Health Sciences at the UI.

"I will be helping with minority faculty recruiting and retention by learning more about what's happening with these faculty members — what it is they like and don't like and how they are being treated," Hawkins said. "We need to know things like that and try to clarify some of these issues."

Some of Hawkins' responsibilities include assisting in recruiting, retaining and advancing minority faculty in all UI colleges.

"The major problem is communication," Hawkins said. "People need to sit down and just talk to each other, and students and faculty need to chat. I try to break it down to learning how to communicate with both sides. I think that if we look at it in that light — no matter what color you are — you realize that we are all here working together. We can open up and learn something from each other."

UI President Hunter Rawlings, UI Provost Peter Nathan and Vice President for Health Sciences Henri Manasse Jr. have been supportive of the endeavor to increase campus diversity, Hawkins said.

"Benny Hawkins is the right person for this job," Nathan said. "He has a long history of involvement in recruiting minority faculty and students and a real commitment to diversity at the university."

Sciences at the UI. Hawkins tries to find ways of increasing minority recruitment and retention in the health sciences at the UI.

From 1993-94, Hawkins served as interim associate provost / director of Opportunity at Iowa, a UI program for recruitment of minority faculty, staff and students.

Hawkins' office in the Dental Science Building is almost hidden behind UI Hospitals and Clinics. He said working at Opportunity at Iowa gave him the opportunity to see "what was happening on the other side of the river."

"Telling me that there are 900 African-Americans at the University of Iowa isn't really telling me a helluva lot," he said. "I'm concerned with how many graduate, how you progress through the system. Those who walk across the stage at commencement time do not reflect who came in."

Hawkins will also head a new UI program aimed at encouraging minority students to pursue graduate studies in science, engineering and mathematics.

Funded with a $480,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education Fund for the Improvement of Post-secondary Education, the eight-week summer program allows students and faculty from seven historically minority institutions to study and work in UI research laboratories.

First lady aims to shift public perception

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — During a tour to show off renovations in the White House, Hillary Rodham Clinton paused for a moment to criticize Republican proposals to cut Medicare.

Then she smiled brightly and changed the subject. "Let's go look at the new rugs in the East Room," she suggested.

Battered in last year's health-care wars, America's first lady to plunge so deeply into policy-making is pulling back a bit this year. But if she is no longer a visible policy architect, she remains an advocate.

Where once she crafted legislation and directed the administration's mammoth health-reform effort, now she visits with elderly women to stress the importance of mammograms and listens sympathetically to veterans with unexplained Persian Gulf War ailments.

Whereas once her sharp tongue cut down critical legislators, now she munches an apple with schoolchildren to illustrate the importance of the federal lunch program.

White House aides say the shift is the result of discussions between Rodham Clinton and the president about how her role should change in the aftermath of the health-care debate and the Democrats' election drubbing.

"Their view is that Americans will appreciate her in the role of an advocate discussing the issues that she feels passionately about," said one White House aide. "Where they get uncomfortable is when they see her taking operational control over pieces of business."

Republican and Democratic analysts alike say the first lady had no choice but to lower her policy-making profile after Americans linked her so closely with the failings of the administration's health-care plan.

By the time the November elections rolled around, polls showed the number of people who viewed her unfavorably inching above those who regarded her favorably.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole took an indirect jab at Rodham Clinton on Thursday as he joked that he's already made one pledge concerning his wife in his bid for the presidency.

"If I'm elected, Elizabeth will not be in charge of health-care policy," Dole promised, drawing cheers at a luncheon of chiropractors.

Rodham Clinton dismisses all the talk that she is being repackaged to improve her image, telling reporters recently, "The stories come and go, and I just remain the same."

Adds her spokeswoman, Lisa Caputo, "The only thing that's going to change is her hair."

But White House officials acknowledge Rodham Clinton is trying a new tack to deliver her message — and chafing at all the psychoanalysis of the change.

Even in her more restrained role, Rodham Clinton still comes across as an activist first lady speaking out on the issues she believes in.

Rodham Clinton traveled to Copenhagen, Denmark, this week to speak at a world poverty summit, where she announced a $100 million U.S. program to improve women's education in poorer countries. Later this month, she will travel to India and four other nations in the region to examine social and development issues.

Rodham Clinton is still actively involved in White House meetings about health reform, and she sizes up political sentiments around the country during her travels. On a recent visit to Iowa, for example, she held a private meeting with liberals and labor leaders to hear their concerns. She is sure to be an important part of the president's re-election team.

In coming months, Rodham Clinton will continue to stress the importance of mammograms — kicking off a public service campaign around Mother's Day — and the search for answers on Persian Gulf War Syndrome. In addition, she plans to follow through on vows to get more involved in the District of Columbia community.

"What she does is use the traditional venues of a first lady to make a political statement," said Carl Anthony, historian and author on first ladies. "The beginning of her third year is kind of a unique combination of the traditionalist role and the activist role. It's half Pat Nixon and half Eleanor Roosevelt."

Clinton puts up new plan introducing computer age

Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Worried that America will turn into a nation divided between computer haves and have-nots, the Clinton administration Thursday unveiled a national program to educate the public about the power of the information superhighway.

The program was prompted by 1994 census data confirming what most people already suspected and other reports have found: Households with low incomes and little education were least likely to own a computer and a modem, which lets a person send and retrieve information over telephone lines. And households with the highest incomes and the most education were the biggest computer owners and users.

Run by the departments of Commerce and Agriculture, the program will target people least likely to own a computer: low income, minorities and the 65 million Americans who live in rural areas.

"If we do not act, the next generation of American workers may divide between those who have used computers — at home and at school — for their entire lives, and those for whom merely logging on is an arcane and intimidating ritual; those with vast opportunities for well-paying jobs, and those without," said Commerce Secretary Ron Brown.

The program's most important aspect will be establishing centers around the country that will give people access to computers and train them, Brown said. Specific locations will be identified later this year, he said.

But the administration also hopes to convince people — even those with low incomes — to buy computers, said Brown. "We certainly want to change buying patterns and priorities of families."

The government's education program will highlight the existence of other local services — some of which depend on federal grants — that provide computer access to schools, libraries and community centers.

Such local computer access is now available in Los Angeles and New York and will be available in Charlotte, N.C., in April, Commerce officials said.

Both President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, the administration's biggest information superhighway champion, will participate in the program trying to whip up public interest, said Commerce spokesman Jim Desler.

Public demonstrations of what the computer can do for people in their daily lives and in their work lives also is part of the education campaign, Brown said.

The census data, based on 54,000 people, found among other things that:

- Less than 5 percent of the households headed by persons with less than a high-school education have a computer.

- African-American households with incomes above $75,000 are four times more likely to own a computer than African-American households with incomes of $20,000 to $30,000.

- Approximately 63 percent of households earning $75,000 or more own a computer, and nearly half of the households with four or more years of college own computers.

COUNCIL LEADER CALLS POLICIES INDEFENSIBLE

Democrat decries affirmative action

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wading into the turbulent debate over affirmative action, the new leader of a centrist Democratic group said Thursday that policies that reward people based solely on race or gender are "patently unfair."

"You can't defend policies that are based on group preferences as opposed to individual opportunity," said Connecticut Sen. Joseph Lieberman, the new chairman of the Democratic Leadership Council.

President Clinton was DLC chairman when he launched his 1992 campaign for the White House. But his relations with the organization have been tepid since he took office.

His national service program, reinventing government initiative and embrace of global trade are straight from the DLC play book.

But the DLC opposed his approach to health-care reform and was critical of his early focus on abortion rights and allowing homosexuals to serve openly in the military. And some DLC officials are alarmed at what they see as the administration's catering to labor and liberals as Clinton prepares to seek re-election.

Republicans are promising to make affirmative action a major issue in 1996. And in California, most Republicans — including Gov. Pete Wilson — are supporting a ballot initiative that would prohibit the state from awarding jobs or contracts based on racial or gender preferences.

Looking to get ahead of the issue, Clinton has ordered a review of federal affirmative action programs, a decision that has been criticized by some liberals — including the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a potential Clinton challenger.

Adding his voice to the debate, Lieberman said policies that support one race or gender over another are contributing to "breaking ties in civil society" by making white men feel disaffected. "I can't see how I could be opposed to it," Lieberman said of the California initiative.

California Democrats are considering an alternative ballot question, and DLC President Al From said the organization would not take a stand until those discussions were completed. He bristled at the suggestion that the DLC, which is dominated by white males, is turning a cold shoulder to women and racial minorities.

"Affirmative action is a tactic to get to equal opportunity," From said. "What we are looking at is, are there other better ways" to achieve that goal.

In 1970, Clinton, who was then at Yale Law School, helped Lieberman in his campaign for the Connecticut Legislature, and the elevation of his friend to DLC chairman could improve relations. Indeed, Clinton dropped by a Wednesday night reception for Lieberman.

Lieberman's predecessor to the DLC post, former Oklahoma Rep. Dave McCurdy, infuriated Clinton in December by labeling him a "transitional figure."

Shuttle telescopes join Hubble in Jupiter probe

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Ultraviolet telescopes aboard the space shuttle Endeavour teamed up Thursday with the orbiting Hubble Space Telescope for an in-depth study of Jupiter.

The dual observation came near the midpoint of a stargazing shuttle mission that began March 2 and isn't set to end until March 17.

Scientists want to learn how Jupiter's atmosphere is affected by erupting volcanoes on its moon Io. That can be studied by focusing on the planet's aurora, a glow similar to Earth's northern and southern lights.

Jupiter's aurora is believed to be heightened by Io as ionized volcanic particles — including those emitted in an eruption just last week — are drawn into the planet's magnetic field.

One of Hubble's cameras took pictures of the planet in ultraviolet light, while instruments attached to one of Endeavour's telescopes provided data on the spectrum of the ultraviolet light from Jupiter. By combining the two, the researchers hope to determine exactly where the aurora is and the nature of the particles activating it.

Joplin tune used to pitch Mercedes in new ad

NEW YORK (AP) — More than a generation has passed since counter-culture heroine Janis Joplin first prayed for a Mercedes-Benz in a satirical ditty that became a rock classic.

Now Mercedes marketers have revived the 25-year-old song for a commercial designed to help answer their prayers — cultivating new customers for the German luxury cars.

The recording joins a chorus of classic rock songs that advertisers have pounced on to pitch sneakers, soda and beer. But Joplin's song is different because it is a satire on materialism that makes its point by mentioning the car brand by name.

Mercedes' commercial dismayed some rock fans because it drafts a symbol of the '60s counterculture into service for a car that has long symbolized wealth and social stature.

"Some people will say this is another example of commercialism usurping the icons dear to us," said Ross Goldstein, who heads the marketing consultancy Generation Insights in San Francisco.

Songwriter Bob Neuwirth helped Joplin write "Mercedes Benz," a takeoff on a poem by Michael McClure, in a tavern between shows in 1970.

"It was never meant to be taken seriously," he said. Unlike the character in the song, Joplin had no reason to pine for a fancy car, he said — she owned a Porsche.

Joplin died of a drug overdose in 1970.

Pricey new Ferrari supercar unveiled at motor show

GENEVA (AP) — Imagine a Ferrari on steroids and you'll begin to picture the new F50: a speed monster with an authentic Formula One racing engine at a turbocharged price — $500,000.

Of course, that includes seats custom made for each buyer, a special pair of driving shoes and a souvenir photo album of each step of your car's construction.

The Ferrari F50, which debuted Thursday at the Geneva Motor Show, was designed to commemorate Ferrari's 50th anniversary next year.

Typically low-slung with huge forward air intakes, sleek lines sweeping gracefully up to the rear airfoil and aerodynamic slopes behind both seats, the F50 is part Batmobile, part ballistic missile.

The 12-cylinder, 4.75-liter rear-mounted engine slams out 520 horsepower, flashing the car from 0 to 60 mph in 3.7 seconds and taking the carbon-fiber body to a top speed of 203 mph.

By contrast, a 1994 Chevrolet Corvette LT1 made 0 to 60 mph in 5.7 seconds and has a top speed of 170 mph, according to Road & Track magazine. Of course, that car went for about $460,000 less than the F50.

Only 349 F50s will be made in Ferrari's factory near Modena in northern Italy. Those tempted better act fast — Ferrari says half already have been reserved.

Rainstorm pummels California

John Howard
Associated Press

ST. HELENA, Calif. — A howling Pacific storm lashed northern California Thursday, swamping roads, snapping power lines and raising fears of a repeat of January's disastrous floods.

"The forecast, unfortunately, is for continued gusty wind and rain. I think we'll be in a roller coaster situation for at least a day and a half," said Pacific Gas & Electric Co. spokesman Ron Rutkowski. The company called in extra crews to deal with more than 140,000 customers without power.

In southern California, residents braced for the storm's arrival, especially in La Conchita, the Ventura County town where a hillside collapsed Saturday, burying nine homes.

Streams pushed over their banks in many areas in northern California. In St. Helena, a small town in lush wine country, more than 350

"The water just came rushing through," said 67-year-old Don Coffey, who was chased from his apartment building to an evacuation center. "I had water up past my waist. I was just able to get out with a few clothes. They are all soaked."

Rain was falling at a half-inch or more an hour in the Santa Cruz Mountains on the central coast south of San Francisco, and other areas reported that up to 8 inches of rain fell overnight.

Associated Press

Senior residents are evacuated from the Vineyard Mobile Home Park in St. Helena, Calif., early Thursday as the Napa River overflowed its banks.

Rain is expected intermittently until Saturday morning, raising fears that this latest storm could cause damage rivaling that from more than two weeks of rain in January. During that deluge, 11 people died, and more than $300 million in damage was reported statewide.

In Napa, the river rose 7 feet overnight and was flowing less than 2 feet below its banks. Residents of about 20 homes near Napa Creek evacuated and were being housed in local hotels. Schools in three counties were closed for the day.

To the west near Guerneville, one of the hardest-hit communities two months ago, the Russian River was rising. National Weather Service forecaster Miguel Miller predicted the river would get 10 feet above flood levels in some areas.

Fierce winds, clocked at 113 mph on Mount Tamalpais in Marin County, prompted warnings to motorists of dangerous driving on the region's bridges.

In San Francisco, winds fanned a house fire, killing one firefighter and injuring five other people.

Trees littered city streets, and officials closed roads through Golden Gate Park. Two of San Francisco International Airport's four runways were closed due to high winds. San Francisco Bay was closed to commercial traffic.

The state Transportation Department reported 30 state highways closed at various points because of flooding, slides or other weather-related problems. Major roads closed included Interstate 5 and Highway 101.

Amid all the other problems, a pregnant woman's route to the hospital was blocked by flood waters, so she wound up at the St. Helena fire station instead and delivered a healthy baby girl.

Jake Scheidman was one of two firefighters who helped deliver the baby Thursday morning.

"It was pretty awesome," Scheidman said. "Right on the floor of the firehouse."

In southern California, meanwhile, a delay in the storm's arrival allowed people there to shore up properties with sandbags and plastic tarps.

Up to 10 inches of rain is expected before a respite late Sunday or Monday.

Only 125 of the 700 residents of La Conchita dared to stay in their homes because of the crumbling 600-foot-high bluff.

Minute pollution specks linked to high death rates

Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Tiny particles from smokestacks, car engines and other sources can kill even when the pollution meets clean air standards, according to a study of more than a half-million Americans.

The new work is "a very strong study, virtually unassailable," said Dr. Philip Landrigan, a professor of community medicine at Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York, who wasn't involved in the study.

The study, the largest ever on the topic, found that death rates in the areas most polluted with the particles were 17 percent higher than in the least polluted areas.

That was due to a 31 percent higher rate of death from heart and lung disease. One kind of particle was also associated with more deaths from lung cancer.

Most cities in the study complied with federal standards for particle pollution, said study co-author Douglas Dockery. Cities with average pollution, which complied with federal standards, still had about a 5 percent higher death rate than the cleanest cities, Dockery said Thursday.

The study raises the issue of whether new federal standards are needed to control the tiny particles, which are now treated as part of a category that includes larger ones, said Dockery, an associate professor of environmental epidemiology at the Harvard School of Public Health.

The tiny particles measure at most about one-fortieth the width of a human hair.

John Bachmann of the federal Environmental Protection Agency's office of air quality planning and standards said similar studies have made EPA "take a much harder look" at regulating the tiny particles.

EPA is now reviewing the national standard for particles and may increase controls on the tiny particles, he said.

The new findings are published in the March issue of the American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine by scientists from Harvard, Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah; and the American Cancer Society.

The study included 552,138 men and women in 151 metro areas who were followed from 1982 to 1989. Researchers estimated their exposure to the particles from federal air quality data and searched death certificates to see who died and from what cause.

The work confirms results of a 1993 study that included more than 8,000 people in six communities.

CIA points finger at Serbs for instigating genocide in Bosnian war

Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The CIA concluded in a secret report on atrocities in the Bosnian war that the Serbs are mostly to blame for acts of "ethnic cleansing," a senior State Department official told a House panel on Thursday.

The conclusion fits the long-standing U.S. government view that while war crimes have been committed by all sides in the Balkans conflict, the main victims of organized efforts to eliminate ethnic groups are the Bosnian Muslims and Croats.

"For those people who've not been in the region firsthand, the report can be quite shocking," Richard Holbrooke, an assistant secretary of state, told the House International Relations Committee.

"Anyone who's traveled in the area will find nothing surprising in it," he added. "The Serbs started this war. The Serbs are the original cause of the war."

Holbrooke, who had just returned from Zagreb, the Croatian capital, said the Clinton administration stood at a particularly sensitive juncture in talks with Croatian President Franjo Tudjman on his threat to expel the 12,000 U.N. peacekeepers in Croatia when their mandate expires March 31.

A potential flash point now being monitored by U.N. peacekeepers is Croatia's Krajina region, which has been under the control of rebel Serbs since 1991.

"I conveyed to President Tudjman our view that the consequences of the U.N. withdrawal from the Krajina could be extraordinarily dangerous and could trigger the most dangerous situation Europe has seen since 1945," Holbrooke told the committee.

The New York Times disclosed the CIA report Thursday.

"Nearly everyone accepts that sending American troops for ground combat in Bosnia is a nonstarter. There is no support for this idea among the public or in Congress. American casualties undoubtedly would be high."

William Perry,
Defense secretary

describing it as the most comprehensive U.S. assessment of atrocities in Bosnia. The Times also said the CIA had concluded that leading Serbian politicians probably played a role in the crimes. Serb political leaders deny this.

International estimates put the number of refugees left homeless by fighting and ethnic cleansing at more than 2 million throughout the former Yugoslavia, including 1 million in Bosnia-Herzegovina alone.

Holbrooke said he disagreed with the Times' suggestion the administration was keeping the highly classified report secret out of concern that it would prompt Serbian leader Slobodan Milosevic to end his efforts to persuade the Bosnian Serbs to agree to a peace settlement.

"I just don't agree with that," he said. "These are facts. They must be dealt with as facts."

Commenting directly on Milosevic, who has recently been more cooperative with Western efforts to end the fighting in Bosnia, Holbrooke said, "As for Mr. Milosevic, he has his own objectives. I see no indication that he's changed those objectives, but he has changed his tactics."

"Last year, he opted out of the war. That was an important development, notwithstanding the fact that the war originated with actions that he started."

Sounding a similar theme, Defense Secretary William Perry said Thursday there could be no question which side is primarily to blame for the aggression in Bosnia.

"I am not agnostic about who the victims are in this war," Perry said in a speech at Kansas State University. "The Bosnian government and its supporters are the victims. The atrocities that are perpetrated by the Serbs — in particular the ethnic cleansing — are abhorrent."

Perry defended the administration's Bosnia policy while acknowledging that its diplomatic efforts have failed to bring a political settlement within reach.

The only feasible alternative — to actively side with the Bosnian government by supplying it arms — inevitably would draw U.S. ground forces into combat there and would mean a widened war in the Balkans region, Perry said.

Troops rout Chechnya towns after shaky truce

Sergei Shargorodsky
Associated Press

SLEPTSOVSK, Russia — Russian forces pounded villages in southwestern Chechnya with artillery shells and rockets Thursday, casting doubt on the future of an informal truce reached a day earlier.

Chechen village leaders and Russian military officials met for a second day but agreed only to reconvene "in the near future" to discuss a cease-fire, the Interfax news agency reported, citing Chechen district administration head Salam Umalatov in the village of Samashky.

Moscow now controls about half the rebel republic of Chechnya, including the capital, Grozny. In recent days, the army began a slow move against rebel forces in the south and west using artillery barrages and air raids.

On Wednesday, Chechen officials and village elders in the Achkhoy Martan district, about 22 miles west of Grozny, agreed on an informal truce in talks with Russian commanders.

The pact calls for villagers who took up arms with the rebels to form a self-defense force, guarding villages along with Russian-backed Chechen police, Umalatov said.

The Russians hope the plan will prompt moderate elements in the villages to oust more hotheaded young fighters. And many war-weary villagers are willing to compromise; Umalatov said Wednesday that six to seven of the area's 11 villages would observe the agreement.

But fighting continued, and Chechen President Dzhokhar Dudayev remained defiant, telling a Lithuanian newspaper the war "can last 50 years."

Dudayev told the Lietuvos Rytas newspaper that Russia will not stop at subduing his separatist republic.

"They will go on to wealthy Europe ... then announce their claim on Poland, Yugoslavia and so on," he said.

The former Soviet air force general, now in hiding in rebel-controlled regions, proclaimed his mountainous republic independent of Moscow in 1991. Russia has been fighting his followers for three months.

Dudayev has failed to gain crucial support, however, from fellow Muslims in the Caucasus.

Despite the truce, Russian forces shelled Chechen positions near at least four western villages and delivered rocket strikes toward Bamut, a western settlement blocked by Russian troops, the military command said.

The streets of Bamut, in the foothills of the Caucasus Mountains, were virtually deserted as GRAD rockets exploded on the village outskirts.

In Grozny, an outbreak of fighting was reported for the first time in days. The Russian military command said several soldiers were wounded in overnight rebel attacks employing small arms and vehicle-mounted mortars.

In Moscow, the foreign ministers of France, Germany and Spain met with President Boris Yeltsin on Thursday, three days after the European Union held up a trade deal with Moscow because of the war in Chechnya.

The officials also held talks with Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev, who said there was no reason for postponing the deal.

"Now the military stage is coming to an end, and there are encouraging signs of reaching a cease-fire agreement," Kozyrev said.

CHILD CUSTODY BATTLE

Superwoman doesn't exist

Just when you thought we have heard every sleazy, sordid detail about O.J. Simpson and the June 12 murders, we have.

But now it's Prosecutor and mother Marcia Clark's turn to be microscopically dissected. She was granted a divorce, a familiar event to some 50 percent of married couples. Something else smacking of familiarity is the bitter child custody battle. This publicized one happens to be between Clark and her husband of 13 years. He contends that her ties to the Simpson case have left their two young boys spending their days with baby sitters rather than with their mother.

President Clinton and other welfare-reform backers on Capitol Hill are chanting to single mothers, "Work for your free bucks!" So women do.

But Clark's case is typical of what has been happening to women embroiled in custody battles. Today's sporadic standard of living (have you tried to buy a box of cereal lately?) dictates that two incomes are necessary for sustenance, so women go to work. Then husbands say that women don't have the time to make breakfast or see Jane and Johnny off to school, so they take their wives and ex-wives to court for a fierce battle over child custody.

If it sounds ridiculous, consider this: 63 percent of child custody cases in Los Angeles were won by fathers in 1994. Women who try to have it all — the career, the family, the romance-novel marriage — are held to a double standard of working and being a mother (which is really two jobs), while men are simply expected to work.

So it's no surprise that Simpson defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr. accused Clark of drumming up a "ploy" about child-care difficulties to avoid a delayed court session a few weeks ago. Clark accurately responded that she was "offended as a woman, as a single parent, as a prosecutor and as an officer of the court."

Cochran isn't the only one pointing a wild finger at mothers. President Clinton and other welfare-reform backers on Capitol Hill are chanting to single mothers, "Work for your free bucks!" So women do. Then their children are taken away because they're seen as unfit mothers since their time is spent making an income rather than pushing a swing.

The message is muddled, inchoate and dangerous: Women have to work. But they also have to spend time with their children and hold a marriage together to keep custody of their children and be good mothers. Men simply have to work.

Chalk it up to yet another of the trials and tribulations of being a woman and, in Clark's case, a lawyer.

TARGETING ONE OF THEIR OWN

GOP infighting continues

The crew is getting restless and rumors of mutiny are growing louder.

The rank and file order of the Republican Party during the initial two months of this congressional session is beginning to dwindle with increasing bickering among party members.

It began when Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole effectively grabbed a $4 million book deal out of Newt Gingrich's palms. Dole said he thought there may have been some impropriety in the House speaker's book deal with media mogul Rupert Murdoch. Gingrich grudgingly gave back the money, attempting to salvage himself by holding up a dollar bill saying it was all he was getting as an advance — too little, too late.

The infighting continues this week as the rubble keeps falling from the balanced-budget amendment's defeat last week in the Senate.

House Republicans are questioning Dole's ability to lead his party members, and it's only going to get worse as the country moves closer to next year's presidential election. Republicans who support Sen. Phil Gramm, Dole's first major challenger to the Republican nomination, could use last week's vote as a thorn in Dole's side. Watch for the politics to get even dirtier in Washington, D.C.

Dole isn't taking the criticism lying down, though. After Gingrich began taking aim at Dole's leadership abilities, Dole shot back with biting criticism.

The latest squabble of Republican infighting is the call for Oregon Sen. Mark Hatfield's head on a platter, or at least his Appropriations Committee chairmanship.

"You hear Gingrich's staff has these five file cabinets," Dole said. "Four big ones and one tiny little one. No. 1 is 'Newt's Ideas'; No. 2, 'Newt's Ideas'; No. 3, 'Newt's Ideas'; No. 4, 'Newt's Ideas.' The little one is 'Newt's Good Ideas,'" Dole said.

The latest squabble of Republican infighting is the call for Oregon Sen. Mark Hatfield's head on a platter, or at least his Appropriations Committee chairmanship. They wanted him to relinquish his post just because he voted against what his colleagues thought was best. It seems as though no one ever told them there was freedom of speech in Washington, too.

Almost a third of Senate Republicans felt Hatfield should lose his post because of a single vote. This demonstrates that Republicans are not the inclusive party they are trying to make themselves out to be. If the party represented the interests of all Americans, they would not want to punish one of their own. Instead, they would commend him for having the courage to stand up for what he believes in.

JONATHAN LYONS

Post-Black History Month: a time to regroup

Black History Month 1995 appears to have been a marker of dismal backpedaling on the ideal of equal rights for all Americans.

Generally celebrated as a time to highlight progress made toward achieving equality for all the human race, this year stood — unfortunately — to remind us of how far back we have fallen in that quest.

As you read this, a Republican-controlled Congress works tirelessly to remove all forms of aid for those who do not happen to be financially well-off, white and male. Assistance to low-income people and families, once viewed as a generous and temporary helping hand, is now viewed with disdain. Those who are forced by their economic situations to request such assistance are now sneered at by federal politicians whose $100,000-plus annual incomes prohibit an understanding of the concept of having to juggle bills and certainly limit any grasp of the pain caused by knowing that without assistance, one might not be able to feed oneself and one's children.

Indeed, this attitude would appear to be setting anchor in today's America. Take the example set by California Gov. Pete Wilson. In a Feb. 26 report by Reuters, Wilson described programs such as affirmative action — which may favor nonwhite job applicants when the racial population of a company is far out of balance with the racial population of its surrounding community, as "the corrosive unfairness of reverse discrimination."

Wilson, who rode the racially divisive Proposition 187 to passage during his re-election bid last year, has voiced strong support for the California Civil Rights Initiative, a controversial proposal which would overturn affirmative action in public contracting and university admissions.

Affirmative action, originally set in motion during the administration of President Lyndon Johnson as an effort to combat centuries of discrimination against women and nonwhite people, is now viewed as a threat to the white American male. Because of this perception among those in power, it is being taken apart a piece at a time by Republican-controlled government bodies at both state and federal levels.

This year's Black History Month also served as a time for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to regroup after scandalous mismanagement by former Chairman Benjamin Chavis. Chavis, who was finally drummed out in part because he used NAACP funds to settle a sexual discrimination lawsuit against him, also led the civil rights organization away from mainstream activism toward the racially divisive ramblings of the Rev. Louis Farrakhan and his Nation of Islam.

Newly elected NAACP Chairwoman Myrlie Evers-Williams now has before her the task of trying to rebuild the organization and its image, which was fractured by Chavis' all-too-public fumbblings. And she must do so under the watch of a Congress poised with machetes raised and with a slash-and-burn attitude toward legislation intended to protect civil rights.

This past year also saw more racially derogatory remarks from elected officials than can be properly chronicled here.

In only one example, James Phillip, president of the Illinois Senate, criticized minority state workers as having a lesser work ethic than whites, claiming that some nonwhite people cover up for others. "It's probably a terrible thing to say, but I'll say it: Some of them do not have the work ethics that we have," Phillip told the editorial board of the Daily Herald in Arlington Heights, Ill., in an interview last year.

Phillip, then seeking re-election, went on to complain that those who opposed his statements did so only because he wasn't being "politically correct."

As of last year (in a case before the Texas Supreme Court), it is even legal again in America to deny housing rights to a person based upon race alone.

Today, a growing number of Americans feel that being poor is somehow some huge socialist plot on the part of nonwhite Americans to bleed the government dry and avoid having to earn a living. But the cost of the so-called entitlements that seem to have so many well-off white Americans so angry in reality consumes less than 1 percent of the federal budget.

This February left supporters of equal consideration for all humankind with little to celebrate. While it has been said before, we must all come to appreciate, understand and preserve all of the qualities that make us alike as well as the ones which distinguish us. And we must do so before the fragile fabric of understanding that holds us together as a single community comes unbound.

It is clear that legislated intolerance for nonwhites and those who are not economically comfortable is becoming more and more of a reality with each passing day. What is not clear is why so many Americans have suddenly become so collectively filled with spite toward those who have done them no harm.

Jonathan Lyons' column appears Fridays on the Viewpoints Pages.

THIS MODERN WORLD

THIS MODERN WORLD by TOM TOMORROW

DAVE BARRY

Lean out your window and shoot; then duck

The problem with hunting, as a sport, is that it's not competitive. A guy with a shotgun squats in a swamp, an unarmed duck with an IQ of maybe four flies overhead and the guy blasts the duck into individual duck molecules. Where is the challenge here? Where is the contest?

Fortunately, I have a solution. It came to me as I was reading the fall 1994 issue of Global Gas Turbine News, which was sent in by alert reader Joe Born. On the off chance that you don't subscribe, I should explain that Global Gas Turbine News is a publication written by, and for, Martians. At least that's the impression you get from reading it. Here's an actual quote from a letter to the editor:

"Research to determine optimum blade loading, including optimum backward curvature of blades at outlet, effectiveness of separate inducers, placement of splitter vanes and diffuser design should now be considered."

Sounds good to me! I say we show our support for this cause by holding a mass rally and chanting catchy slogans ("What do we want?" "Research to determine optimum blade loading, including...").

Anyway, the big article in the fall issue is headlined "Bird ingestion into aero-engines." The article concerns efforts by engineers to deal with the problem of birds getting sucked into jet airplane engines during takeoff and flight. This can damage the engine and even make the plane crash. Also it is no picnic for the bird.

So according to the article, engineers are always trying to develop more bird-resistant jet engines. To test these engines, they have developed — here's the good part — a gun that shoots ducks. When I say "a gun that shoots ducks," I don't mean "a gun that shoots at ducks." I mean "a gun that you load an actual duck into and shoot it out the end like a big feathered bullet." Engineers use the gun to shoot ducks at test aircraft engines so they (the engineers) can see what happens.

(Note to animal lovers: The article states that before being shot, these ducks are "humanely killed." The article does not state whether this procedure involves feeding them airline cuisine.)

No doubt you've already figured out where I'm going with this. I'm thinking: Let's take some of these duck-shooting guys; let's camouflage them; let's hide them in areas known to be infested with duck hunters; and let's install some kind of sonar-guided computerized aiming system on them, so that when a sensor detects a shotgun blast, it immediately fires a high-velocity duck at the source. Think how much more exciting the sport of duck hunting would be if the hunter knew that every time he fired his gun, he would immediately have to dive headfirst into the swamp muck or else run the risk of getting hit by a deceased mallard traveling at upward of 170 miles per hour.

At this point, you probably have a couple of questions, namely:

Q: Would such a program be safe?

A: Naturally, before we started shooting ducks at actual human beings, we would conduct safety tests in which we would fire a wide variety of waterfowl at humanely selected scientists from the Tobacco Institute.

Q: Would this program pose a national security threat to the president of the United States, who sometimes demonstrates his personal masculinity by shooting birds?

A: This would not be a problem because the president is protected by Secret Service agents chosen specifically on the basis of their willingness to, in the line of duty, step in front of a duck.

Q: What about deer hunters? Can we use the same technology to make their sport more exciting?

A: Tragically, at this time we do not have a gun capable of accurately firing an animal the size of a deer, although I would strongly support a project to develop one using humanely sedated Tobacco Institute scientists as test ammunition.

But until we perfect a deer gun, we can go with an interim solution suggested by a Jan. 12 article in the central Pennsylvania Centre Daily Times, written by Jerilyn Schumacher and sent in by alert reader Paul Dietzel. This article concerns efforts by the Pennsylvania Army National Guard to help a group of endangered animals called "fishers," which are described as "house cat-sized members of the weasel family" (I am not making any of this up). The article states that to feed some fishers in a remote area, "Guardians dropped 17 frozen, road-killed deer and 100 pounds of dead, smelly fish from a Chinook helicopter as it flew 50 to 150 feet above the ground."

I can think of few events that would add more zing to a hunting expedition than the possibility of being squashed like a plump gun-toting grape by the frozen carcass of a mature, fish-encrusted deer (or, if there are any left over, a Tobacco Institute scientist).

If you're as excited as I am about using the National Guard for this purpose next deer season, I urge you to write a letter to this nation's supreme military commander, Newt Gingrich. If, however, you are in any way offended by any of the proposals I have made in this column, please let me know because I care what you think. So send your letters of complaint directly to me, Patrick Buchanan, c/o editor, Global Gas Turbine News, 2038 George Jetson Way, Mars, Or, for a faster response, just lean out your window and shoot. Then duck.

READERS SAY...

How 'bout them Hawks (Iowa mens' basketball team)?

Samuel Garcia, UI freshman majoring in business

"Them Hawks' played a good game. They came out in the end when they needed to, and that's the sign of a good team. I hope they go far in the tournament."

Brandon Mills, UI sophomore majoring in business

"I say that they clinched an NCAA berth last night. Chris Kingsbury descended from the heavens to play for us."

Kate Kosinski, UI freshman majoring in psychology

"I think it's great. Their winning has really helped raise university spirit. All of my friends get really excited when the Hawks win a game."

Trayce Peterson, UI junior majoring in psychology

"They're great. I hope they get into the tournament. I think last night was the best game I've seen them play all year. Andre Woolridge kicks butt."

"It's that convergence and tendency to concede political ground that is the main source of disillusionment with politics in the American people."

McGovern cited five things he

"I thought about running — not seriously — but I did wonder what would have happened."

McGovern, on running for president in 1992 said need revision within the liberal political agenda. The list included spending at least half the U.S. military budget on improving roads, bridges and schools; a revamping of the welfare system; and a strengthening of the United Nations and the International Court of Justice.

One of McGovern's most radical ideas is extension of the Medicare system to include children under 6 on a two-year trial run. If the trial run succeeded, the program would be extended to include all age groups, he said.

McGovern also proposed eliminating political action committees and other private sources of campaign funding. His solution to the funding gap would be to have all citizens donate part of their tax dollars to a campaign fund that would go to all candidates. He quickly responded to what seemed to be a negative response from the audience.

"The best way taxpayers can defend their taxes is to take over the funding of political campaigns," he said.

McGovern, a staunch believer in the sacred nature of the Constitution, said people are losing faith in U.S. presidents because the presidents are not fully upholding the values of the Constitution.

"The people who are president don't have to take a pledge to do much of anything," he said. "The one thing you have to do is hold up your right hand and pledge to uphold the Constitution of this country. If every president since World War II had done that, we wouldn't have had a Vietnam or a Watergate or a savings and loan scandal."

UI President Hunter Rawlings introduced McGovern to the audience as a "true patriot," referring to McGovern's humble upbringing during the Great Depression and his service in World War II as a bomber pilot.

"His speech was first-rate," Rawlings said. "It was a wonderful blend of humor and serious moral purpose I associate with Senator McGovern and always have."

After his speech, McGovern said he often wondered what running for president in 1992 against George Bush would have been like.

"I thought about running — not seriously — but I did wonder what would have happened," he said. "I do think there was a negative reaction to Bush during the election. That's the thing with politics: You don't know unless you try."

McGovern spoke as the 1995 UI Lecture Series Distinguished Lecturer.

from Schaeffer Hall.

There have been few incidents of rowdiness since reports of the service's possible discontinuation and since Public Safety officers have been present at the loading site, Public Safety director Chuck Green said.

"We haven't had any problems in the past couple of weeks," Green said. "People are aware that there have been problems with the service, and it's in danger of being canceled if people don't shape up."

Campus coordinator Brian McClatchey said changes to the vans and the new times of service should help alleviate problems which have plagued SAFERIDE.

"With the removal of the one seat, we're reducing the passenger capacity," McClatchey said. "Some of the problems came from the van being too crowded."

The changes are indefinite, and the service will continue unless another incident like the one involving Danford occurs. McClatchey said modifications to the system are a relief because the service is valuable.

"We're relieved we don't have to cancel because SAFERIDE provides a valuable commodity," he said. "We're disappointed we have to stop early, but we're glad we're still able to provide the off-campus component."

TESTING

of sync with all laws passed in the 1990s related to drug-testing restrictions," said Mark de Bernardo, director of the institute.

Rep. Phil Tyrell, chairman of the House Labor Committee, said the bill was introduced as a safety measure.

"We introduced the bill because the major cause of accidents in the workplace is substance abuse," Tyrell said.

In addition to drug testing, he said the bill will allow employers to test for alcohol use on the job.

The bill is likely to pass the House, but the Senate might kill the proposal, Tyrell said.

Increased freedom for drug testing will not lead to changes in the UI's drug-testing policy, said Mary Jo Small, associate vice president of Finance and University Services.

The UI's policy extends to all employees — from professors to work-study students.

UI employees do not undergo any drug testing before or during employment. Only employees with a commercial driver's license are screened, in accordance with federal law, and given a 30-day warning before testing.

"We don't have any pre-employment drug testing, which is consistent with most universities," Small said.

Also, Iowa law restricts drug testing by the necessity of "probable cause," which Woolery said is similar to having proof of a drug offense.

The bill would change the words "probable cause" to "reasonable suspicion."

The altered wording would give employers more leeway to require drug testing because reasonable suspicion has less burden of proof, said Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department.

Despite the change of phrasing, the UI would not spend more time or energy looking for users, Small said.

"Our attitude has been we ought to have some reason to believe, due to an individual's behavior, that there is substance abuse," Small said.

The American College Testing Program, corner of Highway 1 and Interstate 80, would also continue current policies and not implement pre-employment drug screening, said Kelly Hayden, director of ACT's Office of Corporate Communications.

Iowa employers are prohibited from firing workers who test positive for drugs and must pay for the employee's substance abuse treatment. The proposed bill would allow for random drug testing after a worker has undergone treatment for drug abuse or caused $500 damage in a work-related accident.

Don Dettbarn, a manager at Best Buy, 1963 Broadway, said potential employees are tested for drugs, but only drivers are tested periodically after they are hired. The proposed bill wouldn't change Best Buy's policy, which is in accordance with federal standards, Dettbarn said.

Charles Larson, coordinator of the Governor's Alliance on Substance Abuse, said new drug-testing laws for Iowa would lower substance abuse in the state.

"Overall, drug testing has had a deterring effect on drug use," Larson said, adding employees would worry more about consequences of drug use if testing were more widespread.

A factor in the House's decision to create the new bill was a survey taken by the Iowa Council on Human Investment, which showed substance abuse in the workplace to be a top concern among Iowans.

Substance abuse in the workplace was reported by the council to be a higher concern among Iowans than higher wages, more jobs or better health insurance for employees.

Clark asked Fuhrman questions about a 1985 dispute involving Simpson and his ex-wife, then quickly brought up allegations from a Los Angeles-area woman, Kathleen Bell, who said that the white policeman made racist

"One of the strategies is to make Mark Fuhrman look like all the other detectives. They're just working cops, and you don't want to treat him specially."

Laurie Levenson, Loyola University law professor remarks during a conversation at a Marines recruiting center.

"In 1985 and 1986, sir, can you tell us whether you knew someone or met someone by the name of Kathleen Bell?" Clark asked Fuhrman.

"Yes, I can tell you. I did not," he said firmly.

Shown a letter in which Bell outlined her allegations, Fuhrman said the conversation never took place. Also, Fuhrman said he watched CNN's "Larry King Live" show a month ago when Bell appeared, and he did not recognize the woman.

Loyola University law Professor Stan Goldman said of the prosecution's tactic, "I would have been very surprised if they had not dealt head-on with the issue to try to defuse it as a kind of pre-emptive first strike."

Outside court, defense attorney F. Lee Bailey said he has a surprise witness who will testify that Bell and Fuhrman are acquainted. Bailey said the woman was present when Bell and Fuhrman were together on an occasion other than the disputed encounter.

After the tense start to Fuhrman's testimony, the detective went on to describe his role in the murder investigation the morning of June 13.

Clark flashed on a 7-foot screen Fuhrman's detailed, meticulously hand-printed notes on his investigation. Clark tried to point out that Fuhrman was almost always accompanied at the murder scene by other officers, including some who preceded him there and pointed out a glove and a ski cap near the bodies.

This was intended to show that Fuhrman never had an opportunity to move evidence.

With gruesome pictures flashed on the big screen, jurors had yet another look at the most graphic evidence, including bloody shoe prints leading away from the condominium where Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were stabbed to death.

Fuhrman said the murderer was probably bleeding as he fled. He said the shoe prints faded at the back entrance of the condo and "I would conclude the person either stopped bleeding or entered some form of transportation."

Court recessed before Fuhrman was asked about his finding a bloody glove at Simpson's estate hours after the slayings. The defense has suggested that there were two gloves at the murder scene and that Fuhrman moved one to Simpson's home.

Fuhrman acknowledged that prosecutors put him through a mock cross-examination to ready him for a grilling from Bailey. Bailey sat back and lodged not a single objection while Clark questioned the detective.

"He comes off as a competent cop, maybe the most conscientious one at the scene," said Loyola University law Professor Laurie Levenson, who was in court for Fuhrman's testimony.

She said Clark carefully covered ground already trod by other witnesses for a reason. "One of the strategies is to make Mark Fuhrman look like all the other detectives," she said. "They're just working cops, and you don't want to treat him specially."

To make their case that Fuhrman is a racist who was bent on framing Simpson, the former football star's lawyers have a letter from Bell — who said that she once met Fuhrman at a Marines recruiting office and that he expressed disgust with interracial couples.

In her letter, Bell claimed Fuhrman said "that he would like nothing more than to see all 'niggers' gathered together and killed. He said something about burning them or bombing them."

Eight of the 12 jurors in the murder case are black.

For weeks, the case had been building toward the moment that Fuhrman took the stand. Simpson's lawyers had pressed other police witnesses about what Fuhrman was wearing, where he went and who he was with the morning of June 13.

As late as this week, defense lawyers were pressing for access to internal police records on Fuhrman regarding such things as a cartoon with a swastika allegedly seen on his desk. The judge ruled the cartoon irrelevant but granted access to other documents relating to alleged comments Fuhrman made about Brown Simpson's breast implants and interviews with police officers about whether it would have been possible for Fuhrman to move a glove from the murder scene.

media in general, charging that Republicans in Congress are not being covered fairly.

Although he has been billed as the featured speaker of the banquet, Cochran said he prefers informal chats rather than speeches.

"I'm a great believer in short speeches," he said. "I know when I'm in audiences, I like to ask questions that I'm interested in."

Cochran said he hasn't had time to write a speech because of his schedule, so he is planning on writing notes while he is on the plane trip to Iowa.

While he is looking forward to coming back to the UI, he said he doesn't like to make many speaking engagements.

"Giving speeches can be lucrative, but I find if that's all you're doing, you're not covering the news," Cochran said.

Cochran will have to miss reporting on the vote in the House on litigation reform — part of a legal-reform package in the Republicans' "Contract With America" — but it will be worthwhile to come back to the UI, he said.

Several UI journalism and mass communication students said they will benefit from his visit to the UI, as well.

"I'm interested in political reporting, and I think he's got incredible magnitude," UI senior Kerri Leistikow said. "Maybe he'll have a lot of advice for me because I'm graduating and going on into the job market."

Soloski said journalism students should model themselves after Cochran.

"It's good for the students because they'll get to see a well-known journalist who's covered all the events," he said. "It's a terrific chance to see what they can become."

Unidentified man arrested after car chase

After a high-speed chase Sunday night, Iowa City police arrested the driver of a Ford Probe sports car at 10:15 p.m. in the 600 block of Madison Street. The man, whose name had not yet been released at press time, was charged with a second-degree assault charge, said City police Lt. Dan Sellers.

About 10 patrol cars surrounded the sports car as the driver lost control of it and it stuck in the mud.

DI earns top spot in regional Mark of Excellence

The Daily Iowan was named the regional Mark of Excellence for best all-around daily newspaper at the Society of Professional Journalists' Regional conference held last weekend in Iowa City.

In addition, individuals were given to DI staff members for best spot news reporting, in-depth reporting, editorial writing, sports writing, sports photography, feature photography and sports photography.

This is the second straight year the DI has captured the title of best all-around daily newspaper. The University of Kansas and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln newspapers finished second and third, respectively.

First-place winners at the national awards conference will be announced by the end of the year.

Jordan could pull another switch

Associated Press

Michael Jordan, shown in a Sept. 9, 1994 file photo, spent two days working out with his former Chicago Bulls teammates. The workouts sparked speculation about his future in both basketball and baseball.

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

DEERFIELD, Ill. — Michael Jordan, estranged from the sport he adopted, may be returning to the game he once ruled.

ESPN reported Thursday night that Jordan is indeed returning. The cable network, citing a "reliable" but unidentified source, said he will come back, but not for a couple of weeks. ESPN said Jordan is intent on being in good shape and wants to discuss the future of the Bulls with team management.

Jordan practiced again with the Chicago Bulls on Thursday, the third straight day he appeared at team headquarters, fueling speculation he'll trade in his baseball spikes for a new pair of Air Jordans.

"We just have to hang tight here and wait to see what goes on," Chicago Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "He and I spoke about this possibility happening last September and October. It's a reality ... but it's still not a reality. So we're not pinning any hopes and we're not trying to throw up a balloon or a kite that's not ready to fly."

After the Bulls' two-hour practice, Jordan drove off in his Range Rover without comment. And spokesmen for the Bulls, the Chicago White Sox and Jordan's agent said no announcement was forthcoming.

Jackson said the distraction of Jordan's possible return made it tough for the Bulls to remain focused, but might help energize a lethargic team.

Jordan, 32, led the Bulls to NBA titles in 1991, 1992 and 1993. He then shocked the sports world on Oct. 6, 1993, retiring with a 32.3-point scoring average, the best in league history. Jordan said he had "reached the pinnacle," had nothing left to prove and just wanted to "watch the grass grow."

I like him with the White Sox or the Bulls. Whatever makes him happy, I'm for."

Jerry Reinsdorf, Bulls and White Sox owner on Michael Jordan

Rather than kicking back, however, Jordan provided another surprise a few months later when he announced he'd try to play baseball with the White Sox, who are owned by Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf.

Jordan, who hadn't played baseball since high school, batted .202 at Double-A Birmingham last season. He went to spring training hoping to move up to Triple-A Nashville this season, but the major league players' strike left him in limbo and he returned to Chicago.

He missed one deadline for reporting to minor league camp in Sarasota, Fla. General manager Ron Schueler said Thursday that if Jordan didn't report by Saturday, "I'd guess that he'd be retired."

Jordan, who practiced with the Bulls a few times before spring training without drawing much attention, showed up Tuesday and watched films with Jackson and the other coaches.

Jordan then worked out with the team Wednesday and Thursday.

"The reason we've always encouraged him to come back to practice is because he's got a knack for elevating the play on the court," Jackson said. "That leadership is evident, regardless of whether his shooting touch — which is not there — is on or not."

Jordan, whose number 23 has been retired and who has been honored by a statue outside the new United Center, was the first player on the court Thursday morning. He shot baskets with Toni Kukoc before the rest of the Bulls joined in. Jordan was wearing a white sleeveless Bulls T-shirt, a pair of red shorts and white Nikes.

The screen that prevents the media from watching practice was then completely lowered, meaning reporters had to depend upon other players for information about the workout.

"He's practicing with the second unit. It's not like he's coming in

"On the Line" returns for NCAA tournament

The Daily Iowan's "On the Line" is back — just in time for March Madness!

After the NCAA tournament selection committee picks the field of 64 next Sunday, readers will get the chance to show what they know and maybe pick up some prizes.

Iowa City area bars and businesses are supplying prizes. You supply your filled-out tourney sheet, which will appear in Monday's paper. Drop the sheets in by noon Wednesday, March 15 at the Communications Center, in room 111 or in room 201.

Limit one entry per person.

The top 10 finishers will be the lucky recipients of our "On the Line" prizes.

Tampa Bay, Phoenix awarded franchises

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — At least baseball fans in Phoenix and Tampa Bay have something to celebrate.

While there's no end in sight to the seven-month strike, baseball owners voted unanimously Thursday to add the Arizona Diamondbacks and Tampa Bay Devil Rays for the 1998 season.

"We strongly believe the time is right," said expansion committee chairman John Harrington, also the head of the owners' negotiating committee.

Major league players walked out last Aug. 12, and the move brings some extra cash to the 28 current teams, who claim lost in excess of $200 million last year.

The new teams will pay $130 million each in actual cash as franchise fees, but the payment schedule and an exclusion from national broadcasting, All-Star and postseason money for up to five years brings the actual franchise cost to about $155 million. Initial payments, about $25 million per team, are due July 1. Final portion will be paid in November 1997.

"If there was a greater day in the history of Tampa Bay, I don't know what it is," said Vince Naimoli, head of the Devil Rays ownership group.

Hawkeyes impress Big Ten coaches

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

With just Indiana remaining on Iowa's Big Ten Conference schedule, only one thing is a sure bet: Big Ten coaches believe the Hawkeyes deserve an NCAA tournament bid.

Close losses, costly injuries and a tough schedule should be enough criteria for the tournament selection committee to give Iowa the green light come Sunday night.

Those factors, coupled with Iowa's convincing play down the stretch, have been enough to make the Hawkeyes one of the most feared teams in the Big Ten during the last month of the season.

"Iowa might be playing the best basketball of anyone in the conference right now."

Jud Heathcote, Michigan State basketball coach

"There's no question that they're good enough to be in the tournament."

Steve Fisher, Michigan basketball coach

"We think Iowa is a Top 20 team."

Gene Keady, Purdue basketball coach

"Iowa might be playing the best basketball of anyone in the conference right now. I think it will be a real shame if they do not get into the NCAA tournament," Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said.

The Hawkeyes (19-10, 9-8) are coming off a 79-78 win Wednesday night at home over No. 9 Michigan State and a 20-point blowout of Michigan (currently third in the Big Ten) last Sunday.

But even with all the momentum going for the Hawkeyes, several obstacles still remain.

If Iowa loses Sunday against Indiana (18-11, 10-7), the Hawkeyes will be .500 in the conference and two games behind the Hoosiers.

Also in Iowa's way is Illinois (18-11, 9-8), who's final game is at 6-21 Ohio State (2-15 Big Ten). Illinois would probably go to the tourney ahead of Iowa, despite a worse overall record, because the Illini swept the Hawkeyes this season.

That would put Iowa in seventh place, and the mood among many college basketball experts is that no more than six teams out of the Big Ten will make the NCAA tournament.

If Iowa beats Indiana on Sunday, the Hawkeyes can make their reservations for a first-round NCAA tournament matchup. Ten conference wins and 20 wins overall should guarantee Iowa a bid.

"We think Iowa is a Top 20 team. They lost a few games by only one point, so their record is misleading," Purdue coach Gene Keady said last week.

Even if Iowa were to finish with 19 wins on the season,

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

The Iowa bench reacts to Andre Woolridge's day night. The 79-78 victory puts Iowa on the game-winning shot over Michigan State Wednesday night. The 79-78 victory puts Iowa on the brink of an NCAA tournament berth.

Michigan coach Steve Fisher believes Iowa can make a solid argument to the selection committee.

"I think (Iowa) can make a strong case for how they've played, playing without (Jess) Settles," Fisher said. "There's no question that they're good enough to be in the tournament."

Even as competitive as the Big Ten has been this year, Iowa can still finish anywhere from fourth to eighth place. Only Purdue (13-3 in the Big Ten), Michigan State (13-4) and Michigan (11-6) are out of Iowa's reach at the top of the standings.

Iowa wants encore at IU

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's basketball team kicked off the new year with a bang Jan. 4 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

In their first Big Ten game of the season the Hawkeyes proved their 10-2 record was no fluke when they all but kicked the visiting Indiana Hoosiers out of town in a 74-55 victory.

That was a week after Iowa shocked No. 7 Duke and played a decent 40 minutes against defending national champion Arkansas at the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii.

That was four weeks after Iowa showed No. 14 Ohio U. that they don't lose in the Hawkeye Invitational tournament, no matter who they're playing.

And that was five weeks after Iowa scored 126 points in its season opener against Morgan State.

Since the Indiana victory, however, things haven't gone so well for Iowa (19-10, 9-8 in the Big Ten). They've had a few injuries, some one-point losses here and there and skeptics are saying they might not get into the NCAA tournament.

Sunday, Iowa has a chance to go back and do it again. They have to start with a repeat performance against Indiana, this time in Bloomington.

"It's probably going to come down to Sunday afternoon," Iowa

Report accuses Lewis of drug use

Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics denounced as "racist" and "gutless" a Wall Street Journal story suggesting that cocaine played a role in Reggie Lewis' death, and even produced his widow to say he never used drugs.

The article published Thursday said the Celtics, Lewis' family, some doctors and lawyers side-stepped the possibility that cocaine contributed to his heart problems and thus failed to prevent his death in 1993. It also said that the team could have been hurt financially if Lewis had been found to have used drugs.

Celtics chairman Paul Gaston denied that the Celtics gave Lewis anything but the best medical care and said the team would sue reporter Ron Suskind, the paper and its parent company, Dow Jones & Co., for $100 million.

"To me, this story is an example of gutless journalism, yellow journalism, based completely on a disregard for the truth."

Paul Gaston, Boston Celtics chairman

"To me, this story is an example of gutless journalism, yellow journalism, based completely on a disregard for the truth," Gaston said.

"Any allegations that economic or monetary concerns could have conceivably played a role in any care that Reggie Lewis got are absolutely ludicrous. They're worse than ludicrous. They're shameful and disgusting."

Any proceeds from the lawsuit would go to a charitable foundation established in Lewis' name that helps disadvantaged families in the city where he is revered as a hero, Gaston said.

The article quoted several doctors who doubted the official autopsy finding that a virus that can cause the common cold led to the heart damage that eventually killed him.

The doctors said Lewis' condition pointed to cocaine use. But, they told the paper, Lewis refused to be tested for drugs and denied ever using them. After his death, a lawyer for the Lewis family threatened to sue the city of Boston if anything in the preliminary autopsy mentioned drug use, the Journal said.

"Reggie did not use drugs. Period," his tearful widow, Donna Harris-Lewis, said at the news conference in the Celtics' offices. "He was a model citizen. He was kind and caring and this is the way I'll remember him. And I encourage everybody to do the same."

Said Gaston: "I quite frankly think it (the article) was racist. When a black athlete dies, people do not believe that it isn't either guns or drugs."

Paul E. Steiger, the Journal's managing editor, stood by the sto-

Associated Press

Late Boston Celtics player Reggie Lewis passes the ball in this January 1992 file photo. Cocaine may have played a part in the death of Lewis, a possibility that was sidestepped because of reputations and financial interests, the Wall Street Journal reported Thursday.

"We remain confident that the article was fair and accurate," he said.

Questions from the Journal prompted the state's Office of Public Safety, which oversees the medical examiner, to re-examine Lewis' file several weeks ago. There was no reason to doubt the cause of death that was listed, according to a statement issued from the office.

"The office of the chief medical examiner has thoroughly investigated the cause and manner of death of Reggie Lewis," the statement said. "Based upon the information provided to us, the office of the chief medical examiner has complete confidence in the cause and manner of death as listed on the death certificate."

The department also said, however, that based on the article, it would contact the doctors who had been quoted to determine if anything had been overlooked.

Lewis, 27, collapsed during a game against the Charlotte Hornets in April 1993. After a team of doctors assembled by the Celtics warned that his career was in jeopardy, Lewis transferred to another hospital and sought a second opinion.

He died on July 27, 1993, after collapsing while shooting baskets in a Brandeis University gym.

The allegations in the Journal article contrasted with the image Lewis established during his life, through his involvement in the community and his ever-present smile, and even his death.

The Reggie Lewis Foundation was established to continue working with Lewis' favorite charities, and a telethon has been scheduled to coincide with the March 22 retiring of his uniform No. 35 at the Boston Garden.

"A lot of people just knew Reggie as a basketball player, but the guys on the team knew him off the court," teammate Dee Brown said.

"I've never seen him do any drugs. There's no one else who's seen him do any drugs. Stuff like that you can't hide from your teammates," said Brown, who one of Lewis' closest friends on the team. "He had a heart problem. Period."

The Journal article did not cite any specific evidence of drug use. But it did say: "Cocaine was a central, explosive issue for the doctors, the Lewis family, the Celtics and the pathologists who conducted his ... 1993 autopsy — an issue that became untouchable because Mr. Lewis was a basketball superstar."

The Celtics' previous first-round draft pick, Len Bias, died of a cocaine overdose the day after the 1986 NBA draft. The paper noted that another drug scandal would be potentially damaging to the league and the team.

The Journal story also laid some of the blame on the NBA's drug policy, which does not allow its veteran players to be tested for drugs unless the team finds probable cause. Then, a league expert must decide whether the player can be required to take a test.

The Journal said the team never consulted an NBA expert, even after doctors at New England Baptist Hospital told team officials they thought he should be tested.

Unknown takes early lead in Honda Classic

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Journeyman Jim McGovern conquered some long-standing putting problems with a late rush that took him to the lead Thursday in the first round of the Honda Classic.

McGovern, who ranked 158th in putting last season and was 148th this year, one-putted the last three holes in a bogey-free round of 6-under-par 65 that put him ahead of an international band of challengers.

Chief among them was Nick Faldo, the Englishman who won last weekend in Miami and finished with a 4-under-par 67 in the gusty, blustery winds that swept the rain-soaked Weston Hills course.

"It was tough out there," Faldo said. "This was a very good, very solid round for me."

Also well within reach were Canada's Dave Barr at 67, former Masters champ Ian Woosnam of Wales at 68 and Vijay Singh of Fiji and Colin Montgomerie of Scotland, both at 69.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain and Bernhard Langer of Germany were at 70, each with a back-nine double bogey.

The most obvious absentee from the leaderboard was Nick Price, the Zimbabwean who has dominated golf since the 1992 PGA championship.

Price opened his round with birdies on the first two holes.

BIG EIGHT TOURNAMENT

No. 2 Kansas puts fear into Wildcats

Craig Horst
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A whole new season has arrived for Kansas State.

Unfortunately, it starts against second-ranked Kansas, the regular season champion and the top seed in the Big Eight tournament.

"Initially, we're zero and zero just like everybody else," Wildcats coach Tom Asbury said Thursday as Big Eight teams worked out before first-round games Friday. "Certainly, we've got a great deal to gain by making a big splash in the Big Eight tournament."

Other first-round games pit fourth-seed Missouri against fifth-seed Iowa State, second-seed Oklahoma State against seventh-seed Nebraska, and third-seed Oklahoma against sixth-seed Colorado.

The winners play in the semifinals on Saturday, with the championship game Sunday for the Big Eight's automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

The Wildcats stumbled to the end of the regular season, finishing last. An upset of Kansas after two regular season losses would make everybody feel better.

"I don't know that physically we match up against them," said Asbury, whose team played the Jayhawks to the wire in each of the two regular season matchups.

"We've got to play very smart. We didn't turn the ball over very much against them. But they got 18 offensive rebounds in both games and that hurt. Sizewise, we don't match up with them at all, but that sometimes means they don't match up against you and you can utilize your speed and quickness.

"Sometimes there is no figuring college basketball. That's what makes it exciting."

The Jayhawks, sometimes said to have an unfair advantage in Kemper Arena because of its proximity to Lawrence, Kan., took advantage of the short travel distance to practice at home Thursday, the only team not to work out.

Nebraska, which won the post-season tournament last year, also sees this year's tourney as a big opportunity. The Huskers finished seventh in the league at 4-10, going 17-12 overall.

"We're in a similar situation that we were in last year in that nobody expected us to do anything," coach Danny Nee said. "Winning this tournament will make our season. What I told my players, and I'll share it with you, is 'survive and advance.' If we don't get in the NCAA, we feel we'll be in the NIT and we'll approach it with the same mentality."

Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton said the Cowboys would keep their guard up against the Huskers.

"I think we'll go up against a club that will play inspired," he said. "I think they're a team that looks where they are and think they're going to have to win a couple of games to project themselves into the NCAA tournament."

Missouri and Colorado are both on a roll after each struggled at points of the season. Missouri lost three straight when Julian Winfield was hurt, and the Tigers are trying to get him back to full strength along with Jason Sutherland and Corey Tate.

Associated Press

Nebraska's Mikki Moore hangs from the basket as he slams the ball during practice for the Big Eight postseason tournament Thursday.

"We got ourselves back on track," coach Norm Stewart said. "We proved we could handle a little adversity. We had a little gut check there and proved we could come back against a team that was playing well."

A victory over Missouri probably would erase any doubt remaining that Iowa State should be the fifth conference team to get an NCAA invitation.

COMMISSIONER MAY SAY NO TO MOVE

Rams hit speed bump on road to St. Louis

R. B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Pressure may be building to block the Rams' move to St. Louis, just days before NFL owners are expected to decide the team's fate.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue plans to recommend that the league not approve the relocation, the Long Beach (Calif.) Press-Telegram reported Thursday, citing league and team sources.

The newspaper said Tagliabue will make the recommendation on Monday, the first day of an NFL owners meeting in Phoenix. The owners likely will vote on the move later in the week.

Also working against the move is the Fox network, entering its second season of a four-year deal to broadcast NFC games. The league received a letter from Fox last month opposing the move. Los Angeles is the nation's No. 2 TV market; St. Louis is 18th.

Tagliabue's report acknowledges circumstances in the Rams' favor, the Press-Telegram reported, but concludes the team does not meet the league's criteria to move.

The newspaper's sources cited three factors for Tagliabue's decision: management's contributions to the Rams' decline, a lack of good-faith negotiations with Orange County leaders and concerns over the Raiders' status in Los Angeles.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said Thursday the league had no comment on the newspaper report. Rams officials were not immediately available for comment.

The league also has to deal with concerns from Los Angeles' remaining team. Raiders owner Al

Davis has complained that the L.A. Coliseum is not a suitable venue, and the NFL is so determined not to abandon Southern California it has discussed building a new stadium.

Meanwhile, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported Thursday that Rams and St. Louis officials have laid the groundwork for suing the league if owners reject the move.

Coaches vote Reeves as Big Eight MVP

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Oklahoma State center Bryant Reeves is the Big Eight Conference coaches' choice as the league's player of the year.

The 7-foot Reeves captured five of the coaches' eight votes for the award announced Thursday. The other three went to Ryan Minor, the Oklahoma forward who leads the conference in scoring and was named player of the year earlier in the week by The Associated Press.

Reeves, who also won the most valuable player award as a sophomore two years ago, leads the conference in rebounding with 9.6 per game and field goal percentage, .608. He is second in scoring average at 21.5.

"The only reason Bryant Reeves doesn't get the national recognition he deserves is because he lives in Stillwater, Okla.," said Nebraska coach Danny Nee. "If he lived on either coast, everyone would be talking about him. He's a quality player."

In other coaches' selections, two Kansas players got the nod as freshman and newcomer of the year — freshman forward Raef LaFrentz and sophomore guard Jerod Haase.

Oklahoma coach Kelvin Sampson and Kansas coach Roy Williams split the vote among their peers as the coach of the year.

SPRING TRAINING ROUNDUP

Veteran pitcher returns to form

Associated Press

In replacement baseball, long stretches of inactivity hardly seem to matter. Take, for example, Al Quintana of Minnesota Twins and Doug Corbett of the Atlanta Braves.

Quintana, who has been out of baseball for nine years, drove in the go-ahead run as the Minnesota replacements defeated a Boston Red Sox split squad 3-1 on Thursday.

Corbett, who last played in 1987, threw two scoreless innings in Atlanta's 4-3 10-inning victory over the Houston Astros.

"He's got the same sinker he used to have," Atlanta manager

Bobby Cox said of Corbett, "and there are very few sinker ball pitchers out there. ... We are looking for four or five starters and he could easily be the closer. ... He's got the job right now."

Right now, the job of managing the replacement Toronto Blue Jays is in the hands of Bob Didier while regular manager Cito Gaston avoids the replacement scene.

Didier got into an old-fashioned argument with the umpire at the end of the Jays' 4-3 loss to St. Louis.

Didier was furious with replacement umpire Brian Richards, whose game-ending call enabled the Cardinals to win the game.

Richards called the Cardinals' Howard Prager safe at first base on what would have been an inning-ending double play. The safe call allowed Dave Madsen to score from third.

The call prompted Didier to engage in an animated, arm-waving, in-your-face argument with Richards as they exited the field. Richards is filling in for the regular umpires, who are locked out in a labor dispute of their own.

Cincinnati won its second game, both under replacement manager Ray Knight, filling in for regular boss Davey Johnson. The Reds used a 15-hit attack to beat the Cleveland Indians 12-10.

Sports

Injury slows Iowa

The last thing the Iowa men's tennis team needed before it began the Big Ten Conference schedule was for one of its top players to go down with an injury.

But Lady Luck did not smile on the Hawkeyes as they have suffered just that fate. Iowa senior Bob Zumph's season has ended after tearing the anterior cruciate ligament of his right knee in a singles match against Notre Dame last weekend in South Bend.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Zumph was Iowa's No. 2 singles player and part of the Hawkeyes' top doubles team with senior Bryan Crowley.

"I was just going back for a shot and I rolled my ankle and knee. I knew right away it was serious," Zumph said.

Zumph's injury does not bode well for a Hawkeye team which struggled in the past when one of its top players went down.

"I just hope that the same thing doesn't happen to the team that happened when Crowley was out with an injury," Zumph said. "I have confidence we'll be fine, but the team definitely has its work cut out for it."

Crowley went down in early February with a minor knee injury and the Hawkeyes went into a three-game slide.

That fact doesn't make the situation any more promising for the Hawkeyes as they prepare to travel to Minnesota on Saturday and then come home for a date with Michigan on Sunday.

Iowa will take on Minnesota at noon and then face the Wolverines at 11 a.m. at the UI Rec Building.

The Golden Gophers are ranked second in Region IV and Michigan is third. Minnesota is lead by Lars Hjarrand, whose is ranked fifth in singles in the region. Hjarrand and teammate Eric Donley are ranked first in doubles.

Michigan is led by Geoff Prentice and Arvid Swan, who are ranked second in the region in doubles.

Iowa coach Steve Houghton said he knows what the Hawkeyes are up against.

"This is a very tough week for us because Michigan and Minnesota are comparable to (No. 15) Notre Dame," Houghton said.

"We must be at full strength in order to win, which will be hard with Zumph's injury."

—Chris James

Men's gymnastics
It will be the second and final home meet of the season for the third-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team tonight.

Fresh off its strongest performance of the year, Iowa hosts Big Ten nemesis Michigan State today at 7 p.m. In its last meet, the Hawkeyes upset then top-ranked New Mexico 229.925 to 229.60.

Junior Jay Thornton led the way for the Hawkeyes, setting a season-high in floor exercise (9.875) and in all-around (57.375).

"Everything just clicked for us at the beginning and we went on from there," Thornton said. "We just kept it going and kept the pressure on and came away with the win."

Tonight's meet against Michigan State will give Iowa a chance to try out some new combinations before its showdown with top-ranked Nebraska on March 17.

"We're going to switch things up a bit for this meet which should keep things exciting," Coach Tom Dunn said.

While Dunn was impressed with his team's previous meet, he feels that there is room for improvement tonight.

"We struggled a little on the pommel horse, so we can definitely improve in that area," Dunn said.

—Jon Bassoff

Baseball
If the first weekend of play is any indication, the Iowa baseball team could do some damage this season.

The Hawkeyes tossed aside a career 9-26 series record when they swept Missouri in Columbia, Mo., 9-7, 6-0 and 5-4.

This weekend Iowa will face Kansas, who is struggling at 2-9 this season. But Hawkeye coach Duane Banks isn't taking that record too seriously.

"You can throw Kansas' record out the window," he said. "They have a good tradition and Dave Bingham is a great coach."

"This weekend will be a tremendous test for our young people, but that's what we want."

After their first test, senior Steve Fishman and sophomore Gabe Wyckoff received two of the highest grades. They currently lead Iowa in batting with averages of .500 and .471 respectively.

IOWA DIVING

Hawks spring into qualifiers

Chris Snider

The Daily Iowan

With the NCAA Men's Swimming Championships two weeks away, diving takes center stage
this weekend.

Four Iowa divers — B.J. Blair,
Tete Gil, Jose Hidalgo and Dale
Levitski, will travel to Oxford,
Ohio, for the NCAA Diving Qualifying Meet.

The meet will feature the finest divers from the Midwest and consist of one-meter, three-meter and platform diving. The top nine finishers in overall competition will earn a berth to the NCAA Championships.

The Hawkeye divers are hoping to continue the success they had at the Big Ten meet, where they sent three athletes to the finals in both the one-meter and three-meter events.

"We feel that is they perform on the same level as they did at the Big Ten Meet, all three can qualify for the NCAA's," Coach Glenn Pat-son said.

"While we're hoping for all three, we'll be thrilled with two because of the quality of the meet."

Blair, who is a captain for the Hawkeyes this season, finished second in the platform event at this meet last year.

Gil finished third in the one-meter at the regional meet last year.

Hidalgo is still gaining his strength after an earlier injury, but will be ready to go for this meet.

RETAIL SALES &amp; MANAGEMENT

SOME LABELS JUST FIT...

...and if you're an achievement-oriented, independent decision-maker, then this opportunity has your name written all over it.

As the leading American designer in the classic tradition, Ralph Lauren has defined this style by creating quality clothing and home furnishings with an attention to detail, sense of authenticity and elegance that conveys the sensibilities of a decidedly upscale clientele.

Because our factory outlet stores have so accurately met the sophisticated tastes of this select market, we've opened 50 stores nationwide. And when it comes to using your personal style to succeed, we will back your efforts by offering solid training, the chance to run the store as if it were your own and even the chance to change careers within the company. Cashier and stock positions also available.

Apply in person during store hours at our Williamsburg, Iowa location at the Tanger Factory Outlet Center, or Call: 319-668-1109, or Fax resume: 319-668-2201

Unsane, a New York City-based trio, will play Sunday at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. Local acts 9 p.m.

SHOW SUNDAY NIGHT

Unsane promises mass mayhem at Gabe's with apocalyptic music

Greg Stump
The Daily Iowan

Unsane is not a band for the squeamish.

Judging from the band's album covers, which depict such pleasures as blood-soaked car wrecks and a decapitated man lying on train tracks, the New York City-based trio appears to be suited more for "America's Most Wanted" than for MTV.

Fortunately for society at large, however, the members of Unsane prefer to take out their vision of urban apocalypse on instruments rather than innocent bystanders. The results are often quite good and quite loud.

On Sunday, the band arrives at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., after its second lineup change in as many years. When Unsane's Charlie Ondras died of a heroin overdose, ex-Swans drummer Vinnie Signorelli filled his shoes for the band's sophomore effort, Total Destruction. Now, Unsane finds itself again dealing with adversity following the departure of bassist-screamer Pete Shore, leaving guitarist Chris Spencer as the band's only original member.

"It was just personal stuff," Signorelli said. "There had been a lot of tension between (Pete and Chris) for a long time."

The band filled the void by enlisting Dave Currian, Unsane's sound man, to play bass on a recent tour with Biohazard.

"For a while, we were going to call the band 'Unsure,'" Signorelli said. "It's actually working out really good. We've done half of the new record with him. I miss having Pete's personality on stage ... (but) whatever we're doing hasn't changed."

Signorelli said the outing with Biohazard was pleasurable to the same degree that another tour this year — with the metal band Entombed — was catastrophic.

"It was a disaster," he said. "The crowd just did not get it. They weren't dissing us; they were just bewildered."

"I'd say that at least 90 percent of the crowd spent about $250 each on Entombed merchandise. It was the first time in my life when I said, 'I can't do this; I can't play.' We just bailed out on the tour halfway."

Entombed fans aside, Unsane has earned a reputation as one of New York's most intense bands. Their relentless aural attack echoes the rawer sides of bands like Cop Shoot Cop and early Helmet.

The addition of Signorelli tightened the band's sound considerably; now with Shore's absence, the vocal duties fall entirely on the throat of Spencer. When his vicious shrieks are decipherable, they tend to expound on the same bleak themes represented in the group's cover art. But if the Unsane aesthetic promises not to change, the band's label almost certainly will. Matador Records has agreed only to release the songs recorded with Shore, leaving the band shopping around for a new home.

Signorelli said Unsane — which always seemed out of place alongside former label mates like Liz Phair, Pavement and Superchunk — is talking with labels such as Amphetamine Reptile to put out its next album, which it plans on wrapping up in a few months after touring.

Unsane will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., on Sunday with local opening bands Sludgeplow and Thee Duma. Doors open at 9 p.m., and those 19 and older will be admitted for $6.

Matthew Sweet
100% Fun

Matthew Sweet helped to define alternative pop music before the genre experienced massive crossover appeal and commercial success. His previous albums earned him a reputation as a prolific songwriter who maintained his artistic integrity — a new generation's Neil Young or Lou Reed.

The Lincoln, Neb., native's newest release, 100% Fun, falls musically somewhere between the dark, eccentric sounds of Altered Beast and the pure pop of his best-known album, Girlfriend.

The songs on 100% Fun cover the spectrum from the all-out power pop of "Come to Love" and the first single, "Sick of Myself," to Midwest-roots rock ballads like "Everything Changes" and "I Almost Forgot." Sweet also steps out on a limb with the atmospheric "Smog Moon" and the rock groove of "Super Baby."

As usual, Sweet handles all of the songwriting and plays a variety of instruments on 100% Fun, but he is joined by several accomplished musicians such as Richard Lloyd (Television), Ric Menck (Velvet Crush) and Robert Quine (Lou Reed), who help bring his musical vision to life.

The vocal harmonies and deeply personal lyrics — "And you come to love / what you used to hate / you come to find / what you threw away" — add to a pleasant listening experience.

The album is also enhanced by the production work of Brendan O'Brien (Pearl Jam, Soundgarden), who has a knack for bringing out the subtleties in Sweet's songs, keeping them fresh after repeated plays.

100% Fun is some of the best work Matthew Sweet has done, and that's saying a lot, considering his already substantial résumé.

Tom Vinson
