Regents: 4-year grad rate must rise

Board to vote on proposal Wednesday

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

A plan to increase four-year graduation rates at the three state universities is expected receive the Iowa state Board of Regents' approval Wednesday, even though part of the resolution — offering a cash rebate to students who graduate in four years — was taken out of the plan.

The plan — proposed by regent Tom Collins and examined by a committee, including UI Provost Peter Nathan — aims to increase four-year graduation rates through improved communication with high-school students. It also would offer more opportunities for students to take college-level courses in high school.

Collins said that if passed, getting the plan off the ground will be

"We have to get back to thinking that four years is the normal course."

Tom Collins, board of regents member a gradual process because students are caught in the mindset that graduating in four years isn't a realistic goal.

"I think it will take a while to get it started, but the students won't be indifferent," Collins said. "It's a matter of saying it's feasible and it's not unusual to graduate in four years. We have to get back to thinking that four years is the normal course."

Improved, easily accessible advising during all years of college is a key aspect of the plan. Also spelled out is the tenet that universities should be responsible for guaranteeing course availability to keep students on the four-year graduation track.

The original version of the plan, which the committee voted down, gave a $300 cash rebate to students who succeeded on the "four-year graduation track." The rebate was stricken because it was attracting too much attention, Collins said.

"Everybody has misread that

'Contract With Students'

A plan to increase the number of UI students graduating in four years will be considered by the Iowa state Board of Regents Wednesday. The plan, which would begin in fall 1995, would offer the following contract for students:

If the student:

- Commits to complete all requirements for graduation within four calendar years from date of enrollment.

- Successfully completes the number of course hours each semester (including summer school if desired) that will qualify the student for graduation within a four year period.

The UI will:

- Provide an experienced adviser during registration to map out with the student a four-year course plan so that the student will know what courses must be taken each semester in order to graduate in the four-year period.

- Provide an experienced adviser prior to the registration period each subsequent semester to review the course selections already completed and those necessary for the following semester.

- Assure the availability of courses to keep the student on the four-year plan or she and the adviser have worked out.

- Continue to work closely with the student on grants, financial assistance programs and employment.

- At the time of graduation recognize the student in an appropriate manner for having completed the four-year graduation program.

Unidentified man arrested after car chase

After a high-speed chase Sunday night, Iowa City police arrested the driver of a red 1995 Ford Probe sports car at about 10:15 p.m. in the 600 block of Madison Street. The man, whose name had not yet been released at press time, was wanted on a second-degree sexual assault charge, said Iowa City police Lt. Dan Sellers.

About 10 patrol cars surrounded the sports car after the driver lost control of it and got stuck in the mud.

DI earns top spot in region for second straight year

The Daily Iowan was given the regional Mark of Excellence award for best all-around daily student newspaper at the Society of Professional Journalists' Midwest Regional conference held this weekend in Iowa City.

In addition, individual awards were given to DI staff members for spot news reporting, in-depth reporting, editorial writing, feature writing, sports writing, spot news photography, feature photography and sports photography.

This is the second straight year the DI has captured the regional title of best all-around daily student newspaper. The University of Kansas and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln newspapers finished second and third, respectively.

First-place winners advance to the national awards contest. The winner will be announced this fall.

The Daily Iowan won the national award last year.

No ticket to the 'Big Dance'

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's basketball team fell short of making the NCAA tournament Sunday, and fans received the news that Iowa won't be making an appearance at the national competition. "It was expected. ... I thought we were in before today's game," UI senior Chris

NCAA tourney miss boggles Hawkeye fans

Joseph Kim
The Daily Iowan

Emotions ranged from hope and optimism to disappointment and heavy sarcasm as fans watched the Iowa men's basketball team get snubbed by the NCAA tournament selection committee Sunday.

Most fans were surprised that Iowa did not receive a tournament bid to the 64-team field, despite the Hawkeyes' 110-79 loss earlier in the day. Iowa was selected for the National Invitational Tournament, which will pit the Hawkeyes against DePaul University Wednesday at The Mark in Moline, Ill.

"We got screwed because Michigan and Florida got in," UI junior Aaron Johnson said. "We'll do well in the NIT, but we should've gotten in — especially after beating Michigan by 20 and they got in.

"We have a definite chance of winning the NIT, although I'd rather have them in the Big Dance even if they lost in the first round."

UI junior Dan DeDecker said Iowa's 79-78 victory against Michigan State University last Wednesday should have pushed the Hawkeyes into the NCAA tournament. Iowa finished the season at 19-11 overall and 9-9 in the Big Ten Conference.

"It put me in a bad mood. That hurts," DeDecker said. "I was really surprised."

"It's hard to believe. I don't think Michigan should be in, but they have a better conference record. I don't understand the criteria. I thought after beating Michigan State, we were in for sure."

But UI alumnus Mark Whittlesey said he wasn't overly upset the Hawkeyes weren't invited to the "Big Dance."

MEXICO TRIP IN WORKS

While spring break in Mexico usually means a week of fun in the sun on the beach, 10 UI students will cross the border next week to build a center for orphaned children in the poverty-stricken town of Juárez.

the border on a trip sponsored by the St. Paul Lutheran Chapel & University Student Center, 404 E. Jefferson St.

The group will be working to build a homeless shelter at the Ysleta Lutheran Mission in Juárez, which is about one mile past the United States-Mexico border near El Paso, Texas. The mission caters to homeless and impoverished children in the area.

Juárez is a historically poor city, and group members aren't sure what they'll find when they reach Mexico, said Bill Eckhardt, a pastor who will be going on the trip.

"All I've been told is that the poverty down there is really shocking," said Eckhardt, who is in his 25th year at the chapel. "I'm not really sure what to expect."

The group will leave March 17 and return to Iowa March 25. They will be staying in El Paso and traveling across the border each day to work at Ysleta.

Calif. contends with flood aftermath

Richard Cole

SAN FRANCISCO — Floods washed out all roads into the Monterey Peninsula on Sunday as water-logged California struggled to recover from storms that battered two-thirds of the state.

At least eight people died in five days of flooding, and five more are missing after driving into a rain-swollen creek when an Interstate 5 bridge collapsed in central California.

Sunday was rain-free for most of California. The National Weather Service said showers were expected again today but not the downpours of last week.

Gov. Pete Wilson asked President Clinton on Sunday to declare 39 counties federal disaster areas, which would allow individuals and businesses affected by the floods to apply for federal loans.

In Monterey County, thousands of people left their homes overnight as the Salinas and Pajaro rivers inundated some of the nation's richest farmlands, the site of John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath."

The flooding cut off the communities around Monterey, about 100 miles south of San Francisco.

"At this point, all roads are closed — the Monterey Peninsula is literally isolated," said county emergency officer Al Friedrich.

California Highway Patrol officials said roads may remain closed until today.

Many people were rousted from their homes early Sunday as flood waters rushed into low-lying riverside communities overnight.

Season becomes taxing for local accountant

Arriving at the office by 8 a.m., Kuhl begins his day — which can last up to 12 hours this time of year.

With a little more than a month left until the tax deadline — April 15 — Kuhl said his days will only continue to get longer.

He said the unseasonably warm weather Iowa City has been experiencing makes it difficult for him to stay bottled up in his office.

"On real long days when it gets nice out, when I see people with their golf clubs and fishing poles, it's tough to stay inside," Kuhl said.

A plaque on Kuhl's office wall professes his love of fishing. "A bad day fishing beats a good day at work," the plaque reads.

ing days, Kuhl said he drinks a lot of coffee.

Throughout the day, he meets with three or four clients. The meetings usually last less than an hour, Kuhl said.

Although Kuhl's clients are usually in a good mood when they come in, it is sometimes a different story when they walk out his office's doors.

"If they're in a bad mood, it's because of the taxes they owe," Kuhl said.

Although nothing terribly unusual has happened when clients found out the results of their returns, Kuhl said some clients are surprised by the figures his calculator spits out.

"The bigger surprises have been when (clients) get a refund," he said.

Kuhl gets down to the real work when his clients leave the initial meeting and he starts preparing the tax return forms.

"It takes two weeks at most until they're ready — seven to nine days on average," Kuhl said.

Kuhl said he has to be an expert on several different types of tax return forms.

"We do (tax returns for) individuals, corporations, partnerships, nonprofit organizations and some trusts," he said.

The cost of Kuhl's services varies as much as the types of forms he uses. Costs can range from $60 to $1,400, based on the number of hours Kuhl works and the complexity of the person's tax return, he said.

Things were not always as orderly for Kuhl as his office is now.

Kuhl shuttled between Drake

University in Des Moines and Buena Vista College in Storm Lake, Iowa, before graduating from Buena Vista.

All the location-shuffling stopped when Kuhl moved to Iowa City; he has worked at Greenwood and Crim for 9 1/2 years.

The pressure of tax time impacts Kuhl's family, too. Kuhl said his 8 1/2-year-old son, Adam, feels the stress of this time of year, just as his father does.

Kuhl said Adam — now a veteran of the tax season — often asks, "When is it going to be over?"

Since Kuhl spends so many hours preparing other people's tax forms, has he managed to complete his own?

"Oh, yeah," he said with a smile.

Tim Allen leads the pack in exercising creative control

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Stand close to Tim Allen and feel the power.

The popular "Home Improvement" star is the most powerful one in television, according to TV Guide.

Allen, who boasts the top-rated ABC show, topped the magazine's list of which stars are allowed to flex the most creative muscle.

Allen continues to enjoy the fruits of his best-selling book, "Don't Stand Too Close to a Naked Man," and his megagrossing film, "The Santa Clause."

The report looked at which stars are allowed to launch new enterprises, hire friends and relatives, and fire enemies.

With a virtual snap of the fingers, Allen was able to get a sign posted on his show's sound stage and make "Tool Time" girl Debbie Dunning a regular, the magazine said. He also has two movies on the horizon.

David Letterman and Oprah Winfrey rank second and third on the power index.

Others on the power curve include — in order — Roseanne, Jerry Seinfeld, Barbara Walters, Diane Sawyer, David Hasselhoff, Angela Lansbury and Bill Cosby.

The syndicated program "Entertainment Tonight" helped compile the report and will air it today.

Goodman nearly dropped out of 'Roseanne' due to backstage quibbling

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Bickering almost made John Goodman quit "Roseanne" in the first year of the ABC hit sitcom.

After filming only three episodes — with Roseanne and then-executive producer Matt Williams at each other's throats — Goodman said he couldn't help but think,

"How the hell can I get out of here?"

Seven years later, things couldn't be better, Goodman says in the upcoming issue of TV Guide. He recently signed on for an eighth season.

Why? "Because we have a great time," he said. "That first year was really hard. But now we come in and laugh our (butts) off all day long."

Cassidy, who also has written a few movies, decided to get back to something he knows well.

Prince Charles muddled by language barrier

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Charles, the prince of Wales?

That was the spelling inscribed on two plates presented to Prince Charles by Gad al-Haq Ali Gad al-Haq, sheikh of al-Azhar University. And it wasn't the only time words got in the way Sunday during the Prince of Wales' visit to the seat of Islamic scholarship.

Making a joke about the cluster of photographers recording the meeting, Prince Charles suggested the sheik "buy shares in Kodak."

His wit was apparently lost in the translation into Arabic. It drew not even a chuckle from the sheik, head of the 1,000-year-old institution of religious learning.

Prince Charles' four-day visit was aimed at a better understanding of Islam.

In the wake of the annual Iowa City Veggie Fest and a campaign to get omnivores to kick the meat habit, a lot of Iowa farmers have a beef to raise with lettuce lovers.

The Veggie Fest — which was sponsored by the UI Animal Coalition, the UI Environmental Coalition, the UI Rainforest Action Group and Tallgrass Prairie Earth First! — allowed participants to partake in meatless food from a number of local restaurants and grocery stores. The event was held at Unitarian Universalist Society, 10 S. Gilbert St., Sunday night.

Participants were asked to sign a pledge sheet at the door promising to "kick the meat habit" March 20, which has been designated the Great American Meatout. They also were offered promotional stickers with a slash mark over a steak.

This is the step in teaching participants to "explore a less violent diet," said Grace Trifaro, a Veggie Fest organizer from the UI Animal Coalition.

"The pledge not to eat meat is very important," Trifaro said. "Hopefully, this will be a consciousness-raising event for those who weren't aware of the violence of eating meat."

Trifaro cited animal cruelty, environmental problems, health hazards and rain forest deforestation as reasons to quit eating meat.

While a capacity crowd of about 200 omnivores and vegetarians sampled curried cauliflower, vegan brownies and other vegetarian delicacies, Iowa beef and pork farmers said the groups promoting Veggie Fest were presenting a slanted message.

Few animals are being mistreated in the ways animal rights groups and vegetarians describe, said Tom Hotz, president of the Johnson County Cattlemen's Association and a member of the Iowa beef industry's board of directors.

"For some reason, some people believe people in agriculture are not treating animals correctly, but they really don't understand or realize what is going on," Hotz said.

Kendall Johnson, a member of Iowa Pork Producers who farms in Grand Mound, Iowa, said much of the information distributed by animal rights groups such as People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals is incorrect or exaggerated.

"I am looking out my window right now, looking at my sows, and they are all fine. I know they are always well-fed and bedded and comfortable," Johnson said. "The people from PETA and groups like that think all of us in agriculture are idiots. There are always one or two who are mavericks and think standards don't apply to them, but the majority of the people raising livestock (treat their animals well)."

Becky Martin, founder of the UI Rainforest Action Group, said there are other reasons to boycott beef and pork. Rain forests are being destroyed for grazing land in Central America, and people starve as a result of overfeeding cattle, she said.

"I don't eat meat because of deforestation and because the grain fed to animals could be fed to people," Martin said.

Some vegetarians believe meat is simply not good for their bodies, said Laura Grigals, UI freshman and treasurer of the UI Animal Coalition.

"It's unhealthy because it causes breast cancer and heart disease," Grigals said. "It's high-cholesterol. It's really bad for you."

However, the meat industry has made great strides in making its products leaner in recent years, Johnson said.

"It's improved immensely in the last five years and especially in the last decade," he said.

Johnson said vegetarians simply do not understand the meat of the issue — that beef and pork are a staple for much of Iowa's population.

"I don't think people realize how big the pork business is in Iowa," he said. "This is my livelihood. I don't think they understand that."

Parties trigger slew of complaints

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

For some UI students, the sounds of this weekend's springlike weather were accompanied by the loud thumping of their neighbors' stereos.

This weekend, the Iowa City Police Department received 39 complaints about loud parties — 29 more than last weekend.

As temperatures increase and windows are opened, people are more easily disturbed by the loud parties their neighbors are throwing, said Iowa City police Lt. Dan Sellers.

"It's pretty typical and happens every year," Sellers said.

Despite the barrage of complaints called in to the ICPD, only three people, including UI graduate student Aaron Ford, were officially charged with keeping a disorderly house over the weekend.

Guests who were too rowdy for a police officer to ignore resulted in Ford's disorderly house citation.

Ford and his roommates invited approximately 20 people to their apartment for an after-hours party early Saturday morning. Although the party drew no noise complaints, several wild partygoers managed to ruin Ford's fun.

"There were a couple people I didn't know out on the deck," he said. "Somebody threw something at a car passing by — the car was a (cop's car)."

The officer who had a beer bottle thrown at his car promptly visited the apartment.

Ford and his roommates played "paper, scissors, rock" to see who would be charged with the offense. Ford lost and also received a stern warning from the officer.

"He said, 'Keep the music down, or I'll throw you in jail,'" Ford said.

Ford and his roommates are planning to take up a collection to pay for the fine, which will be determined at a March 28 court appearance.

"Everybody said they'd pitch in a couple bucks," he said.

Fines for the charge of keeping a disorderly house are determined by a judge and can reach $128.50.

A second person charged with keeping a disorderly house said police never gave his partygoers a chance to curb their noise level.

"I had some fraternity brothers come in, and we had a social gathering before we went downtown," said UI senior Olen McGhee III. "Just as we were heading out, an officer knocked on the door and basically began writing a ticket."

McGhee's attempts to weasel his way out of the citation were unsuccessful.

"I tried to suggest a warning," he said. "I would have taken the ticket and turned (the music) down."

Since there were many other parties in his apartment building Saturday night, McGhee said he was surprised police zeroed in on the festivities in his apartment.

"On Saturday, there were a lot of parties here," he said. "The fire department had to come because someone pulled the fire alarm at 3 a.m."

It is up to the police officer to decide whether to administer a warning or a ticket.

"We have a warning citation we use quite often on the first time," Sellers said. "If we've got a house that has music up to the maximum at 3 a.m. and all the neighbors are complaining, they probably wouldn't get a warning."

The number of officers available to respond to noise complaints is often hampered by more important priorities. Although the Iowa City Police Department has more officers — from six to 12 — on duty during the weekend, they often have more urgent calls to respond to.

"It's not a high-priority call," Sellers said. "There are some nights the officers go from one call to the next call to the next call."

2-HOUR INCREASE PROPOSED

Sunday alcohol-buying hours may expand

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Although some UI students may be hard-core drinkers around midnight, most probably aren't ready to take a swig of beer at 6 a.m.

However, a bill which will be introduced in the Iowa House of Representatives would allow people to buy alcohol beginning 6 a.m. Sundays, just like on other days of the week. The bill was passed by the Iowa Senate last week.

Currently, alcohol may not be purchased from 2-8 a.m. Sundays and from 2-6 a.m. all other days.

Rep. Mary Mascher, D-Iowa City, hasn't seen the bill yet, but said debating an issue like this is a waste of time.

"It's absolutely ridiculous," Mascher said. "We have so many things so much more pressing."

Mascher said it is unfortunate representatives could not set an agenda because more important issues — such as educational programs and parental notification — should come up first.

"We have been frustrated as minority members who try and work on larger issues," she said.

Sen. Mike Connolly, D-Dubuque, who sponsored the bill, said the idea behind it was simply to promote uniformity in the alcohol-buying law.

"This law will just make things clearer to both vendors and buyers," Connolly said. "It wasn't a major piece — it took about two minutes to debate."

Employees at local 24-hour grocery stores said they usually don't deal with early morning alcohol buyers, so the change won't make any difference.

The cash registers at Cub Foods, 885 Highway 1 West, are set to disallow alcohol purchases during illegal hours, said store manager John Schewe.

"We're not aware of people trying to buy (alcohol) before that time, but our registers won't even ring them up," Schewe said.

Most people who buy alcohol said they don't go early in the morning — much less on Sundays — so they didn't understand the intent of the bill.

"It didn't make much sense," UI junior Ryan Johnson said.

The rule that forbids the purchase of alcohol at certain times of the day doesn't sound fair in general, Johnson said.

"If you're old enough, you should be able to drink whenever you want," he said.

Visitors bureau opts for budget cut over funding local festivals

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

A local organization would rather take a $10,000 funding cut than be forced by the Iowa City City Council to give a specific amount of money to area music and arts festivals.

The Iowa City-Coralville Convention & Visitors Bureau, Coralville, has supported the Iowa Arts Festival and the Iowa City Jazz Festival in the past but is cringing over a mandate to give $5,000 this year to each event.

"First, I'd like to say we are completely in support of the festivals the city would like to fund," said Wendy Ford, director of the bureau. "But the city telling us what to do with the money has never been done before. That mandating is what the board doesn't like."

The bureau is not a funding organization and shouldn't have its budget mandated by the City Council, Ford said. She said the purpose of the bureau is to market and promote the Iowa City-Coralville area through advertising.

Records show the bureau has never contributed more than $1,250 in funding for either festival since it began giving grants in 1986.

The bureau has offered to take a $10,000 funding cut so that the city can provide the money separately from bureau actions, but the matter has not yet been settled, City Manager Steve Atkins said. The City Council annually gives the bureau 25 percent — or $110,000 — of the area's hotel motel tax, said Councilor Bruno Pigott.

The City Council decided to mandate that the bureau give money to the festivals because hotel / motel tax revenue is a more appropriate source of funding than tax increases or police cuts, Pigott said.

"The majority view of the Council is that the Convention & Visitors Bureau's task is to bring people in from out of town," he said. "And we see spending money on the arts and jazz festivals (as) a legitimate way to bring people in."

Despite the controversy, Atkins said each festival will receive the $5,000 funding one way or another.

"We know the money is coming out of the hotel / motel tax," he said. "The only question is whether it will come from the (bureau) or the city."

Pigott said although he understands why the bureau is upset over the funding, the city contributes to the bureau and should have a role in determining where its money goes.

"Their view is that there's one way to do it, and they have a specific plan to bring people in," he said. "The process wasn't the best this year, but the goal is to have money set up to distribute to bring people into Iowa City and make downtown a more vibrant place. And that's a function of the (bureau)."

Mark Ginsberg, director of the jazz festival, said the money the bureau donated to the event in the past was in the form of small advertising grants. Although some other events might take a cut in bureau funding, Ginsberg said the mandated $5,000 will significantly impact the success of the jazz festival.

"Are some groups missing out? If they're not out there asking, maybe they will. Somebody is always missing out," he said.

The jazz festival deserves the money because it brings 10,000 to 12,000 people and $175,000 to $200,000 into the city, Ginsberg said.

"Yes, we should get money," he said. "Should it have come this way? Maybe not, but we're happy to have it. We want to make Iowa City a unique place to live and a great place to go. Events like this have a positive trickle-down benefit."

Aside from providing entertainment for residents, events like the jazz festival make Iowa City an attractive place for tourists, Ginsberg said.

"National Public Radio is showing interest to simulcast the event to the whole country from Iowa City, Iowa," he said. "That couldn't have happened without this grant."

Ford said she would like to meet with the City Council and the heads of local events to work out a five-year comprehensive plan to promote the city.

"To take away the promotional ability of the city is like asking a farmer to eat his seed corn," she said. "Pretty soon, there's not enough left to get the yield you want."

UI PROFESSOR FINDS NEW FOCUS

Researcher works to spoil salmonella infection process

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

Student Health Service has diagnosed a few students with salmonella poisoning in the past, but according to the national Centers for Disease Control, there are up to 2 million cases nationally that go unreported every year.

Steven Clegg, professor of microbiology in the UI College of Medicine, is researching new ways to eliminate salmonella infection.

Until now, most salmonella research has been on the effect the bacteria have on humans. Clegg is taking an alternative route, researching how the bacteria interact with animals — specifically chickens and turkeys.

Clegg said the key to reducing infection is to interfere with the salmonella molecules before they attach themselves to animal tissue.

"The reservoir of infection occurs in the animal and their products," Clegg said. "If we eliminate the salmonella molecules from sticking, we can effectively prevent bacteria from infecting the animal."

Finding the particular adhesive molecule is the current focus of research.

"We know that the organisms produce a molecule to stick to the animal," Clegg said. "We are beginning to look for the exact molecule so we can create a synthetic molecule to interfere with its connection."

Funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the study is at its midpoint. When Clegg's research is completed, the results will be combined with other USDA programs.

"In 2½ years, we will hopefully be ready to collaborate with researchers from the USDA and start field tests," Clegg said. "Our long-term goal with the USDA is to add substance to feed which will inhibit bacteria from colonizing."

Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Service, said people contract salmonella poisoning after eating food that is contaminated and improperly cooked. Food poisoning causes severe stomach cramping and diarrhea for a few days.

"There have been programs to educate public dealing with raw chicken," Khowassah said. "Not only your hands, but knives that are used to cut raw chicken and then other foods can transfer salmonella. This research is important for those not able to or who do not follow proper directions of good hygiene."

Brian Mead, assistant meat manager at econofoods, 1987 Broadway, said poultry is not handled in the store's meat department, so salmonella poisoning results from poor handling at home.

"It comes prepackaged, and we just put it in the case," Mead said. "The main thing is that the chicken gets cooked all the way through. That's how the bacteria is killed, and that's how most people get it."

SPEECH CLARIFIES ORGANIZATION'S POLICIES

Environmentalist spotlights World Bank corruption

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Noted environmentalist and author Bruce Rich painted a grim picture of the World Bank Friday.

Rich, a former consultant for the World Bank, spoke Friday as part of a UI lecture series on problems facing the Amazon River region. He said the bank is driven by greed rather than humanitarian purposes.

The bank aids Third World nations with large-scale projects, such as dams and power plants. Since the bank is funded by the top 10 industrialized nations of the world — most significantly the United States — its practices should be a concern for all Americans, Rich said.

"There is a very direct link between the people in this room and the World Bank because a small fraction of your tax dollar goes to the bank," he said. "If you're concerned with problems of global environment and ecology, the most important institution in terms of monetary and policy influence is the

Rich illustrated his point with a shocking picture.

He showed a NASA picture of the surface of the Earth as seen from space. What looks like ordinary clouds are actually immense plumes of smoke from intentionally set fires in the Brazilian rain forests. The fires were set to clear space for a World Bank-funded project to build a highway through the rain forest.

The bank routinely violates its own policies and allows borrower countries to do the same if profit is involved — even if it means destroying massive tracts of land or displacing people from their homes, Rich said.

"The institution was set up with a critical flaw that is the Achilles' heel of the operation," he said. "There is a fundamental lack of accountability and transparency in this organization. There is a top-down hierarchical organization in the bank that is very secretive. Most information is kept secret, and what is given to the public is watered down."

The speech, which attracted about 50 people, sparked a number of questions from the audience. Many in the crowd were impressed with Rich's analysis and overwhelmed by the influence and effect the bank has on developing countries.

Rich's explanation of bank policies in layman's terms helped UI senior Melissa Adams more fully understand the bank's impact.

"I thought his speech was very interesting in that he was able to clarify a lot of the ideas I already had about the World Bank," Adams said. "I was not totally clear on what was entailed in the World Bank, and he made it very clear."

Having Rich speak was important because he showed what people can accomplish if they attempt to make a difference, said Laura Graham, UI assistant professor of anthropology and coordinator of the lecture series.

"Bruce is a real social advocate," Graham said. "This is especially exciting for students to have exposure to the people who are really doing something in the world."

Rich, 48, is now a senior lawyer and director of the International Program of the Environmental Defense Fund, a Washington, D.C.-based environmental awareness and action group.

Fire at homeless shelter kills 4 children

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fire swept through a bedroom at a homeless shelter Saturday night, killing four children.

The fire broke out about 8 p.m. on the second floor of the Salvation Army's Red Shield Homeless Center for Families, Fire Commissioner Harold Hairston said.

The children — ages 5 months, 2, 3 and 4 — are believed to be members of the same family, the fire department said.

"I'm getting sort of sick of going to all of these fires when the deaths are always children," Hairston said.

The mother, who was not injured in the fire, was taken to Hahnemann University Hospital for observation.

The victims' identities were not available at press time. The cause of the fire was being investigated.

The children's mother was talking on the pay phone in the hall when the fire started, Hairston said.

The blaze was confined to the one room. A smoke detector in the hallway helped warn other residents, and no one else was hurt, Hairston said.

Brady law deters would-be gun buyers

NEW YORK (AP) — A year after the Brady law was passed, up to 45,000 convicted felons have been stopped from buying handguns by the required background checks, three surveys show.

That amount represents 2 percent to 3.5 percent of all applicants for handguns.

The studies were done by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, CBS News and the International Association of Chiefs of Police in connection with Handgun Control Inc. They were reported on in Sunday's New York Times.

Handgun Control is headed by Sarah Brady, wife of James Brady, the White House press secretary who was wounded in the assassination attempt in 1981 against President Reagan. The Brady law is named for him.

The law, which went into effect on Feb. 28, 1994, calls for five-day waiting periods and background checks before handgun purchases. Several categories of people are denied permission to buy the guns, including convicted felons, fugitives from justice, illegal aliens, juveniles and the mentally ill.

Experts are divided on whether the legislation has reduced violent crime.

"The 40,000 people who were stopped were only stopped at that store at that time," said Bill Bridgewater, executive director of the National Alliance of Stocking Gun Dealers, a trade group. "They weren't arrested, so all they had to do was go out on the street corner at midnight and pay more to get a gun."

Florida hospital blunders again

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A hospital that amputated the wrong foot of one patient admitted Saturday to a fatal error with another, saying a 77-year-old man died after a staff member mistakenly removed his respirator.

Lee Alfonso died March 3 at University Community Hospital after an employee believed he had disconnected another patient's respirator, the hospital said in a news release.

"A health-care worker failed to properly identify the patient before carrying out a medical order," the hospital said.

The unidentified employee did not consult Alfonso's medical chart, check his identification bracelet or follow other procedures to confirm his identity, the hospital said.

Alfonso died less than an hour later, according to Tony Cunningham, Alfonso's family attorney.

The hospital said the worker, employed for 2½ years, had a clean record. The employee was suspended pending an investigation.

On Feb. 20, a surgeon amputated Willie King's left leg below the knee, though it was his right leg that was supposed to have been removed. He has been transferred to Tampa General Hospital.

"It's almost unbelievable that this particular institution has had two incidents like this in such a short time. It's awful," said Dr. Emilio Echevarria, a surgeon on Florida's Board of Medicine. "They better quickly look at all their procedures and protocol. I'm shocked."

Mark McCloy, accompanied by his wife, Deana, left, is wheeled along the tarmac at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland Sunday after his return from Pakistan. McCloy was among the Americans ambushed on their way to work at the U.S. Consulate in Karachi, Pakistan.

WASHINGTON — The survivor of last week's terrorist ambush in Karachi, Pakistan, received a patriot's welcome Sunday as the U.S. Consulate employee accompanied the bodies of his two slain co-workers back to the United States.

Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott, national security adviser Anthony Lake and nearly 200 State Department employees joined grieving friends and family members at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., to greet the military aircraft that carried the remains of Jackie Van Landingham and Gary Durrell.

Their spouses and children were also on board for the overnight trip from Pakistan.

Mark McCloy, 31, of Framingham, Mass., who was shot in the ankle during Wednesday's attack, traveled with his two young children — 4-year-old Patricia and 11-month-old Shawn Michael — and was the last to depart the aircraft.

"We've been reminded yet again — vividly and tragically — that those who work in our embassies and consulates face not only hardship, but risk as well," Talbott told the group.

"They took their assignments in order that their fellow Americans might live, travel and trade in what someday we hope will be a safer, more stable, more prosperous world," Talbott said of the three consulate workers. They were shot on their way to work as their van was stopped at a traffic light in downtown Karachi and ambushed by unknown gunmen.

McCloy's wife, Deana, a secretary at the U.S. Consulate in Karachi, was in Washington for training at the time of the attack.

Her hands folded around a small stuffed rabbit, Deana McCloy trembled as the two flag-draped coffins were removed from the plane ahead of her husband, who was in a wheelchair.

Next to her, the Van Landingham family huddled together, many of their faces buried in tissues. Van Landingham, 33, was from Camden, S.C.

Wanna Durrell, the widow of Gary Durrell, 45, of Alliance, Ohio, wept loudly before collapsing on the tarmac.

From the Clinton administration, there was both regret and resolve.

"At times such as these, our anguish ... overwhelms our spirit," said President Clinton in a statement read by Lake.

"But do not lose faith," the president's statement continued. "We will not rest until we bring the perpetrators of this cowardly act to justice. We will not let up in our fight to stamp out terrorism."

Maleha Lodhi, Pakistan's ambassador to the United States, was present for the ceremony but made no remarks.

COUNTRY FEARS TURBOT DECLINE

Crowd hassles Spanish man over fishing clash in Canada

Associated Press

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — A Spanish fisherman was hauled into court Sunday through a jeering, egg-throwing crowd gathered to support Canada's seizure of the boat in a dispute over North Atlantic fishing rights.

Captain Enrique Davila Gonzalez was released on $8,000 bail and was believed to have returned to his ship, the Estai.

Several thousand people waited as the ship was brought into harbor. Gonzalez and Spain's ambassador to Canada were jostled, jeered and had two eggs thrown at them on their way to court. An egg hit a German diplomat.

In Brussels, senior European Union diplomats demanded that Canada release the Spanish trawler and crew as a condition for negotiations on the fishing dispute.

The Canadian navy stopped the Estai — which was believed to have been fishing for turbot — on Thursday in international waters near the Grand Banks.

The tensions stemmed from Canada's implementation of a law passed last year allowing it to seize ships believed to be overfishing in international waters.

Canadian officials argue they must protect fish that migrate between international and Canadian waters. European Union diplomats call Canada's action a violation of international law.

Protesters carried signs blaming Europeans in part for the decline of ground fish like northern cod. They fear the same fate for turbot.

Gramm won't pursue ban on abortion

Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Phil Gramm said Sunday that if elected president, he would oppose using taxpayer money to provide abortions but would not push for a constitutional amendment to overturn abortion rights.

"I don't believe there's a consensus in the country to amend the Constitution," the Texas Republican said on NBC's "Meet the Press" when asked if he would try to overturn the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision. "Nobody has offered the amendment, and I would not see that as part of my mandate in terms of amending the Constitution."

Gramm, who claims to be the most consistently conservative of Republicans running for the 1996 nomination, has so far sought to avoid controversy over the abortion issue.

He says that he is personally against abortion but would not make abortion a litmus test in deciding on his running mate.

Gramm said he supported GOP 1992 platform language that would ban abortions in cases of rape or incest, but "we're going to have to recognize that there are good Republicans who differ on the issue."

The practical public policy would be to oppose taxpayer funding unless the mother's life is in danger, he said.

"I'm not going to sign a law that forces taxpayers who pay taxes — in many cases against their will — to spend their money on something that they oppose as strongly as abortion on demand," Gramm said.

The House is heading for a showdown on that issue as early as this week, when it takes up a GOP plan to cut more than $17 billion from this year's budget.

and made it out to be the major part of the plan," he said. "It's kind of like arguing if we should have the Pulitzer Prize because there's a $5,000 stipend attached to it."

The bill is likely to receive approval because there's nothing extremely contentious about it, said regents President Marvin Berenstein.

"I think it will get through because there's nothing very controversial about it. The only thing was the rebate, but the committee already took care of that," he said. "I'm certainly supportive of it."

Although she agrees with the basic principles and goals of the resolution, regent Elizabeth Hendricks said she will question how the plan should be implemented. She also wondered if students have had sufficient voice in the process of drafting the plan, which would take effect in fall 1995.

"I want to make sure the students feel they've had enough

Elizabeth Hendricks, board of regents member input into this," she said. "My question is if this is going to be just the liberal arts track, or can you major in education or something else? Every major has different requirements."

If approved, the plan might sideline a bill proposed by state Rep. Robert Brunkhorst, R-Waverly, to improve four-year graduation rates. The bill, House File 56, would force all in-state students to pay out-of-state tuition if their credit load tops 160 credit hours.

Collins was diplomatic when comparing the missions of his and Brunkhorst's efforts.

"We were really on parallel courses," he said. "We were working on the same thing without knowing it."

Brunkhorst said he sent a letter to Collins stating he would hold off on pushing House File 56 if the regents plan is effective. But Brunkhorst said he'd revive his bill if Collins' plan doesn't succeed.

"I'm happy the regents are looking at ways of solving this problem and putting more students on the four-year graduation track," Brunkhorst said. "I have delayed the bill. But if the plan isn't passed or doesn't work, I will introduce the bill again next year."

The swift action of the committee in drafting the plan pleased Collins, who said the bill has wide support among regents.

"We started in December, and we have the finished product in March, so I'm very pleased with that," he said. "I have no doubt it's going to get through the regents. Everybody's been supportive of it."

The plan is practical because it saves students money and pushes them into the real world sooner, Berenstein said.

"I think it's feasible," he said. "It's better for the student to graduate in four years because it saves them money and it gets them out into the job market."

The regents will also discuss — but not vote on — a plan to increase UI residence hall room and board rates for 1995-96. The proposed increase is $127 for a double-occupancy room with a full board plan, a 3.7 percent increase over this year's rates. The cost for a double-occupancy room would rise to $1,795 per year, an increase of $75. A full board plan would increase to $1,628, an increase of $52.

have never gotten past Florida International," he said with a hint of sarcasm.

Whittlesey was part of a small crowd gathered at The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St., to witness first the Hawkeye loss to the Hoosiers and then the NCAA tournament pairings. When Iowa was not chosen for the tournament, sobriety slowly settled on the once-light crowd.

UI junior Brad Swanson couldn't believe the other teams that made it in the pairings.

"We got hosed," Swanson said. "Who the hell is Gonzaga?" he asked, referring to Gonzaga University in Spokane, Wash. — the No. 14 seed in the West — which will play the University of Maryland in the first round.

Silence swept over the crowd at the Vine in the closing moments of the selection show as the fans realized the Hawkeyes didn't make it. This was followed by a tense moment in the crowd when Iowa State University was named to the field.

UI freshman Colby Zemaitis said he's optimistic about Iowa's future.

"We have got a very young team which should be very good next year," Zemaitis said.

than relaxing at home or jetting off for a week of booze and sun.

"It gives you a chance to help people," said UI freshman Susan Bodnar. "I'm not sure what effect we'll have down there. I know we're going to help (the children) have someplace to live and show them that there are people in the world who are willing to help."

The chance to experience another culture and help other people was a motivating factor in the choice to go on the trip, said UI freshman Janelle Drahn.

"I think it will be a learning experience. I'm really curious because I hear there is a lot of crime and poverty," Drahn said. "There isn't really a lot of that here, so I haven't really seen that for myself."

Students under 21 had to get permission from their parents or legal guardians to go on the trip — something the church's insurance company mandated because of potential dangers in Mexico. Eckhardt said crime is a major problem in Juárez, but the group will be well-protected by Mexican authorities.

"There is a lot of crime in the area," he said. "But we'll have extra protection from the Mexican police going both ways."

The high crime rate made persuading her mother to let her go on the trip quite difficult, said Bodnar.

"I had to do a little arm-twisting," she said. "But I think my mom thought I'd be safer there, and she'd rather have me there than living it up in Florida or someplace like that."

The students are expecting to work hard and feel like they've helped remedy a problem, said Jeff Fuhrman, a first-year law student at the UI.

"I expect there will be lots of houses to be worked on, and I imagine we'll have a lot of work to do," he said. "On a personal level, it's a good thing to do service work. It spreads goodness, and it makes you feel like you've accomplished something."

Some students said they are nervous about the trip, partly because they have more opportunities and luxuries than the Mexican children they will encounter.

"It makes me nervous just to think that people live like that," Bodnar said. "Here we are in college, and we can have just about anything we want. I mean, we sit around and order pizza. It will basically make me appreciate what

"I just want to get a feel-good feeling from it. Everyone keeps talking about Generation X — me, me, me, I, I, I. I want to feel like I helped someone and I did something. I want to get away from the Generation X thing."

I have."

UI senior Amy Fictum said she will be saddened when she leaves the children.

"I'm expecting it to be worse than it actually will be — like kids walking around with absolutely nothing," she said. "I'll be broken-hearted because I can't take them all home with me."

As much as the group hopes to give something to the children of Juárez, they are hoping to take something from the experience as well.

"I just want to get a feel-good feeling from it. Everyone keeps talking about Generation X — me, me, me, I, I, I," said Bodnar. "I want to feel like I helped someone and I did something. I want to get away from the Generation X thing."

Their work may not be monumental, but Drahn said both she and the children of Juárez will benefit from the group's efforts.

"I want to come back a little more educated about other parts of the world," she said. "It's not a big contribution, but it's better than doing nothing."

The shelter they build will have a long-lasting effect, said Fictum.

"I guess it's something that will touch lives for a long time," she said. "Kids for years will benefit from something like this."

scary thing to hear in the dark."

In the farming town of Pajaro, residents were in shock.

"People walked in here in tears. They looked like they were caught completely off-guard," said Salvation Army Maj. Joan Souders. "We saw people walk in here with no shoes, no socks or with water lines up to their thighs."

From the Oregon state line down to Mexico, rain, wind and snow wreaked havoc across 40 of California's 58 counties.

"It's the most widespread geographic storm in California in this century," said James Bailey of the state-federal Flood Operations Center in Sacramento.

He added that the storms may also be the most expensive in California history, costing up to $2 billion in a state already burdened with January's Pacific storms as well as a series of earthquakes, fires and mudslides.

In Coalinga, about 50 miles west of Fresno, teams were back at the scene of a fatal Interstate 5 road bridge collapse on California's main north-south freeway.

Four cars drove into a rain-swollen creek Friday night when "Residents are returning little by little to their homes to see what's left. It's a beautiful day here except for the mud."

Patti Dreyer, Ventura County sheriff's deputy the overpass suddenly dropped into the water. Transportation officials believe flood water and its debris undermined the bridge's foundation.

One driver was rescued, but six people were believed to be in the other three cars.

Rescue crews pulled the body of a teen-age girl from one car Sunday, said highway patrol spokeswoman Karen Barrows. Searchers found the last two cars.

"We don't know yet whether there are bodies inside," Barrows said.

Survivor Wayne Johnson, 45, said he saw too late that something was wrong. As he approached the span in the rain and darkness, he saw a flashlight waving.

"I thought that perhaps the road was flooded, so I started to slow down. ... Then I went up and down at an angle, and I was airborne Evel Knievel-style," he said.

He got out of his truck but was stuck in a tree for several hours before being rescued.

Southern Californians shoveled mud and pushed water out of homes and off roads in areas hit hard by the rains.

The bodies of two newborn girls with umbilical cords still attached were found washed onto Orange County beaches about 10 miles apart.

One was found early Sunday, the other Saturday. They had been in the water several days, police said.

Jordan's future remains unclear

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan's plans are a well-kept secret. Perhaps only a select few know for sure what he's thinking as he prepares to deal with his future.

Then again, maybe he doesn't know himself.

Bulls and White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf said Sunday he still has not talked to Jordan about a return to basketball.

"I issued a statement (Friday) and I haven't spoken to him since then," Reinsdorf said in a phone interview Sunday from Arizona, where he was getting ready to leave for Florida and another round of baseball negotiations. Jordan had informed Reinsdorf on Thursday night of his plans to leave baseball.

Reinsdorf said he had no immediate plans to talk with Jordan about his future.

"I'm sure at some point he will want to talk and we will set something up," Reinsdorf said.

Reinsdorf reiterated he didn't know which way Jordan was leaning and said he wouldn't reveal it if he did.

"When Michael makes his decision, why can't we just all wait for him to make it," Reinsdorf said. "He needs to be left alone so he can think. If he wants to consult with anybody he can."

Another creative and high-jumping former NBA star, Julius Erving, said Sunday on NBC that he didn't think Jordan would come back for the final month of the season and the playoffs.

"Michael's not coming back to play basketball. I would be hard pressed to feel he's going to come back, he's going to give up the freedom he enjoys right now," Erving said. "People search their whole life for freedom, and security and independence. How are you going to come back to a game where there are rules and regulations and curfews?"

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

The experts were right. The NCAA tournament selection committee didn't take seven Big Ten Conference teams.

Guess who got left out?

Following a 31-point massacre against Indiana on Sunday, the selection committee decided Iowa (19-11, 9-9) wasn't worthy of an NCAA tournament bid.

Iowa accepted a bid to play in the NIT Sunday night and will host DePaul (17-10) in the first round at The Mark of the Quad Cities Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. ESPN will televise the game.

Carver-Hawkeye Arena cannot be used because of this week's NCAA Wrestling Championships.

See NIT story and pairings.....Page 2B

If Iowa wins, it will face the winner of Ohio U. and George Washington.

During a teleconference Sunday evening, CBS college basketball analysts said that while Iowa could have a legitimate beef over not getting selected for the NCAA's, the Hawkeyes are not the most surprising exclusion.

"I think Georgia Tech has the biggest complaint of anybody," Jim Nance said.

Big Ten alumnus Quinn Buckner said that compared to Georgia Tech (18-12, 8-8 in the Atlantic Coast Conference), Iowa's complaints fall short.

"Iowa's (case) is too much to consider when you look at Georgia Tech not getting in," Buckner said.

Billy Packer said to take even six teams out of the Big Ten was too much, citing a weaker conference than in years past. He didn't say which other Big Ten teams he

BIG TEN ROUNDUP

Purdue repeats as champions

Associated Press

Purdue did it again, this time without the Big Dog.

Written off as a title contender at the beginning of the year, the surprising Boilermakers finished the regular season with a 73-67 victory over Michigan on Sunday to clinch their second straight Big Ten championship.

In the Big Ten on Saturday, it was Penn State 69, Minnesota 60; Illinois 82, Ohio State 63 and Michigan State 97, Wisconsin 72.

The No. 14-ranked Boilermakers, who lost college player of the year Glenn Robinson to the NBA and were picked no higher than sixth in most preseason conference forecasts, also earned the Big Ten's automatic spot in the NCAA tournament.

"The game kind of exemplified our whole season," coach Gene Keady said. "You struggle, it looks like it's kind of ugly, it looks like you may lose it, and all of a sudden you find a way to get over the hump."

Cuonzo Martin scored 17 points and Matt Waddell added 14 as Purdue (24-6, 15-3 Big Ten) won its eighth straight game, its 14th vic-

Indiana, Henderson toy with Iowa

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — It was Senior Day at Assembly Hall and the Indiana Hoosiers gave their fans something to remember in their final game of the regular season Sunday, putting together their two most productive halves of the season to demolish Iowa 110-79.

Brian Evans made five 3-pointers in the first half while scoring 19 of his 28 points as Indiana opened a 50-35 halftime advantage. Indiana's top opening half of the season previously was 48 points against Kansas.

Alan Henderson, playing his final game at Assembly Hall, led the Hoosiers with 35 points to bring his career total to 1,961. His final basket came on a slam dunk off a lob from Pat Knight, the son of Indiana coach Bob Knight and the only other senior of the team.

"This was a real emotional game for me...the most emotional game of my career," said Pat Knight, who received a big hug and embraced his father when he left the game. "My dad kind of screwed me up by giving me the hug."

Knight had four assists and four points and received a big ovation from the capacity crowd of 17,330 when the two seniors spoke to them after the game.

"Patrick Knight is my all-time favorite Indiana player," the Indiana coach told the fans.

"It sounds like my critics went on spring break," the younger Knight said after receiving his standing ovation.

Five Indiana players scored in double figures as the Hoosiers reached the century mark for the first time since defeating Tennessee Tech 117-73 on Dec. 10, 1993.

Once the expected furor died down about who was in and who was out of the NCAA's 64-team field Sunday, a look at the brackets showed the selection committee set up some interesting matchups and made some interesting statements.

The last of the conference championship games made selecting the top four seeds pretty easy and there wasn't any real surprise among where the top teams were placed until you got to Utah as the fourth seed in the West.

The Utes (27-5), the Western Athletic Conference regular-season and tournament champions, didn't crack the Top 25 until last week and were 26th in the RPI, the computer rankings similar to the ones used by the selection committee.

Utah's seeding and that of North Carolina Charlotte, seventh in the East, were surprising but not shocking. That description was saved for the inclusion of at-large teams from the following conferences: Mid-American, Metro Atlantic, Midwestern Collegiate and West Coast. The Mid-American was the highest-rated of those league's on the conference RPI at 12th, with the others sitting 13th (WCC), 19th (MCC) and 20th (MAAC).

The power leagues were still well represented with half the field coming from the Big Eight, Atlantic Coast, Metro, Big East, Southeastern, Pac-10 and Big Ten, the top seven leagues in the conference power rankings. The last of those leagues, the Big Ten, had the most teams, six.

Once the brackets are studied it's fair to say the Midwest with Kansas, Arkansas, Purdue, Virginia, Arizona and Memphis as the top six seeds is the strongest. Many feel that may be so because the committee wanted to even things up as Kansas could play the regionals in Kansas City's Kemper Arena, less than an hour

Shunned Yellow Jackets decline NIT bid

Associated Press

All the teams that appeared to be snubbed by the NCAA Tournament accepted bids to the NIT — except Georgia Tech.

The Yellow Jackets (18-12) were left out of the 64-team NCAA field for the second straight year, but this time they elected to turn down an invitation to the 32-team NIT Tournament.

"We have exams coming up this week, and we have decided to go ahead and take our exams," said coach Bobby Cremins, who said the decision was not an angry reaction to NCAA rejection.

"I noticed last year when the NIT selection was made there were a lot of teams that should thought didn't deserve a bid.

"The league (Big Ten) has balance, but when has balance ever produced quality," Packer said.

The feeling of the Big Ten's mediocrity was the consensus among the analysts.

"The quality (in the Big Ten) was down across the board," Buckner said.

Despite winning the Big Ten for the second straight year, Purdue was seeded just third in the Midwest Region. In the Southeast region, Michigan State also earned a third seed.

Minnesota was the Big Ten's third highest seed, eighth in the East region, followed by ninth seeds for Indiana and Michigan in the West and Midwest regions, respectively. At 11th in the East, Henderson, who is Indiana's fifth-all-time scorer and only eight short of the school record total of 1,088 rebounds after pulling down nine Sunday, hit 16 of 19 shots to lead an Indiana offense that made 67.2 percent of its attempts from the field.

"I don't know how much was Indiana, and how much was us. Certainly, give them a lot of credit for how strong they played in really all areas," Iowa coach Tom Davis said.

Andre Woolridge led Iowa with 22 points and Chris Kingsbury had Illinois needed a win to stay in the race for an NCAA berth. So the Fighting Illini went to leading scorer Kiwane Garris early and often.

Garris hit a pair of 3-point baskets in the first minute and a half to key a 13-0 game-opening run and the Illini held on for a win.

The win gave Illinois (19-11, 10-8) what it needed for a spot in the

Deacons, Wildcats snag titles in OT

Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — It was a scene that teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference had seen before. The game was on the line and Randolph Childress had the ball in his hands.

No. 4 North Carolina became the latest victim Sunday when Childress scored in the waning seconds of overtime to give the seventh-ranked Demon Deacons an 82-80 victory.

"We all knew I was going to take the shot," said Childress, named the tournament's most valuable player.

Childress penetrated the lane from near the center jump circle, drove to the right side of the lane and threw in a 10-footer with 4.6 seconds to go. He scored all nine of Wake Forest's points in overtime, finished with a game-high 37 points and had 107 for the tournament — the most points by one player since North Carolina's Len Rosenbluth got 106 in 1957.

For Wake Forest (24-5), it was the school's first ACC title since 1962. With this title comes the league's automatic NCAA berth, and Wake Forest was named the No. 1 seed in the East Regional.

Wake Forest's Randolph Childress celebrates Sunday after Wake defeated North Carolina 82-80, in overtime, to win the ACC Tournament.

ATLANTA — Tenacious third-ranked Kentucky had several opportunities to quit Sunday.

But the Wildcats just wouldn't, overcoming deficits of 19 points in the first half, 12 points in the second and 6 points with 38 seconds left in overtime to beat No. 5 Arkansas in the championship game of the Southeastern Conference tournament.

"I've never been involved in something like that," coach Rick Pitino said. "We were dead three or four times and kept coming back."

The Wildcats led for only 39 seconds of the 45-minute game — 2-0 until falling behind only 20 seconds into the game and for the final 19.4 seconds after Anthony Epps hit two free throws for a 94-93 lead.

No. 13 Villanova 94, No. 6 Connecticut 78

NEW YORK — Villanova's first Big East tournament championship came on its second big win over Connecticut.

The 13th-ranked and second-seeded Wildcats got 27 points each from Kerry Kittles and Jason Lawson and withstood one furious rally in the second half before pulling away Sunday.

No. 19 Oklahoma State 62, Iowa State 53

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bryant Reeves scored 21 points as No. 19 Oklahoma State beat Iowa State in the Big Eight tournament championship.

The Cyclones were within 48-46 with 4:44 remaining, but never came closer in losing to the Cowboys for the seventh straight time.

Hawks cruise by Spartans

The Iowa men's gymnastics team may have been looking past Michigan State, but they sure didn't perform like it.

The Hawkeyes rolled past the Spartans on Sunday, 229.175 to 219.750 in Iowa's final home meet of the year.

Coach Tom Dunn decided to rest several gymnasts for the meet. Junior Jay Thornton did not compete, while junior Aaron Cotter and sophomore Tyler Vogt only competed on their strong events.

"We wanted to give (Thornton) a rest, and we wanted to give some other guys a shot," Dunn said.

Sophomore Carlos Herrero stepped into the spotlight with a strong performance. He finished first in the floor exercise with a 9.70, second on the pommel horse (9.80) and second on the horizontal bar (9.675).

"We've known that he's good, but he's had some injury problems," Dunn said. "He's healthy right now and he performed well."

Vogt came through for Iowa in all of his events. He finished first on the horizontal bar with a 9.85, tied for first on the still rings (9.65), second on the parallel bars (9.70) and tied for second on the floor exercise (9.65).

Other individual champions for Iowa included sophomore Greg Gebhardt and Cotter on the pommel horse (tied with a 9.80), and Sean Jugulion on the still rings (tied for first with a 9.65).

"There were several people that we left out, and that really shows out depth," Dunn said. "The guys that came in did an excellent job, and we came close to our high score of the year."

Iowa travels to Lincoln, Neb., to battle top-ranked Nebraska on Friday. Coach Dunn said his team is ready.

"We'll get a couple of the guys that took a rest back in," Dunn said. "Hey, we're going against Nebraska."

Softball

Seven games in three days gave Iowa softball coach Gayle Blevins ample opportunity to evaluate her team.

The Hawkeyes won a single game versus Hofstra on Thursday before compiling a 4-2 record in the South Florida Tournament Friday and Saturday.

Iowa (7-4) picked up wins against Yale, Indiana State and No. 12 Florida State on Friday. On Saturday, the Hawkeyes fell to Illinois-Chicago before beating Robert Morris. In the first round of single-elimination tournament play on Saturday night, Iowa was defeated by Missouri, 12-3, ending the tournament for Iowa.

Aside from the letdown against Missouri, Blevins was happy with what she saw from her team this weekend.

"With the exception of the last game, I felt that we really did see a lot of things we were hoping to see from our team," Blevins said. "We had a lot of pressure situations and handled them well."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Blevins was also pleased with the play of Christy Hebert, Kari Knopf, Melissa Wielandt, Melissa Young and Tasha Reents. Knopf and Wielandt were named to the all-tournament team.

Knopf hit .565 and had an on-base percentage over .600. Wielandt led the Hawkeyes on the field with her fine defensive play, as well as hitting .380.

Hebert, the Hawkeye clean-up hitter, hit .400 in the tournament with four runs batted in. Young got back on track after struggling a bit early in the season to hit .411. Reents hit .478 and did a good job consistently getting on base in the lead-off position.

Baseball

The third time proved to be the charm this weekend for the Iowa baseball team in Kansas.

The Hawkeyes (4-2) finished a three-day, three-game series with the host Jayhawks by defeating them 7-6. Kansas won the first two games of the series, 4-3 Friday and 6-0 Saturday.

Iowa's all-time save leader Kurt Belger picked up his second save of the season, despite the fact that Iowa didn't score a single run in the last seven innings. All of the Hawkeyes' runs came in a three-run first and a four-run second.

Matt Ostrom knocked in Iowa's first two runs Sunday on a triple. In doing so, he ended a 14-inning drought for the Hawkeyes, who were shut out Saturday.

Iowa's winning pitcher was Jeremy Meccage, who is now 2-0 on the year.

Matt Austin (1-1) picked up the loss Saturday after leading the bases in Kansas' five-run third inning. Colin Mattiece (1-1) picked up the loss Friday.

The Hawkeyes nearly came back from a 4-1 deficit Friday, but two runs in the top of the fifth was all they could muster. Hawkeye senior Steve Fishman put together a solid offensive performance in the loss, hitting 3-for-4 at the plate and reaching base four times.

Iowa travels to Kansas State for a three-game series Friday.

Women's track and field

Yolanda Hobbs didn't capture any victories at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships last weekend, but she still turned out to be a winner. Hobbs was named as an all-American in both the 200-meter and 55-meter dash following her performances in last weekend's NCAA Championships.

Hobbs also carved a spot into the Iowa record books as she became the first Iowa sprinter to receive all-American status in an individual event.

Hobbs placed ninth in both events. She was clocked at 24.07 seconds in the 200 and 6.91 in the 55.

Hobbs said she wasn't happy with her race performance, but was glad to receive the recognition.

"I'm still trying to get over being upset with myself, but being named as the first all-American (sprinter) for Iowa is definitely something to be proud of," Hobbs said.

Hawkeye sprinter Tanja Reid also participated in the NCAA Championships. She finished 10th in the 55-meter dash with a time of 6.92.

Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said he was pleased with the efforts of his sprinters.

"There were some exceptional athletes there this weekend and it was a proud moment for us to see two Iowa runners competing with them," he said.

—Shannon Stevens

Men's tennis

The Iowa men's tennis team, without one of its top players, stumbled to 0-2 in the Big Ten after a pair of weekend losses to conference rivals Minnesota and Michigan.

The Hawkeyes, playing without senior Bob Zumph, were defeated by Minnesota, 6-1 on Saturday, then turned back by Michigan, 5-2 on Sunday. Zumph was lost for the year after tearing the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee.

Iowa coach Steve Houghton said it was a tough weekend but felt his team played tough.

"I thought we played really well," Houghton said. "Under the circumstances we could have folded up but we didn't. The matches were a lot closer than the score would indicate. We knew it was going to be tough without Zumph and it was the first time we've played without him. It was just a matter of playing two of the best teams in the region."

Iowa sophomore Tom Derouin led the Hawkeyes in both matches as he defeated both his opponents at the No. 2 singles position, a position Derouin took up after Zumph's injury. The Hawkeye sophomore capped his weekend by defeating defending Big Ten singles champion Michigan's Peter Pusztai, 6-4, 6-2.

Derouin said he feels the Hawkeyes can still make noise even without Zumph.

"We're still a good team and are capable of having a fine season," Derouin said. "Zumph was a big part of the team, but I feel there are guys who can step up and fill the void."

PLAY REVIEW

'The Pull Toy' proves enthralling

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

The racial tension and shifting power structure of a 1965 Bronx high school came to life onstage this weekend in "The Pull Toy (and His Paisán)," a new play written by Robert McEwen and directed by Lad Brown.

The small stage of Theatre B in the UI Theatre Building was ample room for conjuring the principal's office of Clarkstown High School, the setting of most of the play. It became a battleground of many different sorts during the course of the play, turning authority, nationality and social dominance into formidable but unpredictable weapons.

The story line of "The Pull Toy" is preceded by an incident not uncommon in any high school of any era — and one that actually happened at McEwen's own school.

Bright but unpopular Stephen Starpoli, played beautifully by Lyle Browne, is innocently taking a shower when he is assaulted by a football player in a particularly embarrassing way (as referred to in the play's title). The incident was rendered with eloquence and power at the beginning of the performance, consisting only of the sounds of cheering and banging on lockers, followed by the sound of a laundry cart — containing the wounded Starpoli — sliding across the stage. It was a masterful prelude to an enthralling combination of mystery, humor and suspense.

The play opens and closes as Mr. Webb, the principal, recalls the events of 30 years ago. Webb, played by Paul Donnelly, is one of the central figures in those events. Infused with a combination of caricature and restraint by Donnelly, Webb questions the students involved one by one as he attempts to uncover Starpoli's assailant.

One of those in Webb's investigation is Natalie Lugazzo, the girlfriend of Nicky Nicosia, the school's Italian-American hood. Lugazzo, played campily but flawlessly by Cecelia Rivera, explains that because Starpoli is also Italian-American, the assailant was required to ask Nicosia's permission before attacking any other Italian-American. She explains that his failure to do so would surely incur Nicky's wrath, something that further complicates Webb's investigation and the play's story line.

The inevitable entrance of Nicky sets off the play's final, gripping scenes. Michael Greco lent an air of cool ferocity to the character, filling the theatre with his voice at some points and dropping it to a whisper at others, always staying in command of Nicky's unchallenged authority. In fact, the one who finally stands up to Nicky is not Todd — the attacker, played by Mark Swann — but Starpoli, who courageously admits his revulsion of the stereotypes Nicky and Natalie represent. Starpoli becomes the play's hero despite being its primary victim — the culmination of a series of events that leaves no one the same.

The small stage of Theatre B in the UI Theatre Building was ample room for conjuring the principal's office of Clarkstown High School, the setting of most of the play. It became a battleground of many different sorts during the course of the play, turning authority, nationality and social dominance into formidable but unpredictable weapons.

Arguably the best performance of the play wasn't even integral to the primary story line. Playing the stuffy secretary Miss Van Dam, Edith Anne Campbell delivered a wonderful performance, complete with a skillful, humorous accent and a hilariously proper demeanor. Campbell executed Van Dam's role as comic relief with a cartoonish grace, and by the time she uttered the penultimate line, "Mr. Webb! Someone put Palmolive in the pool! It's all a-bubble," Campbell had secured her place as the production's most impressive performer.

The four performances of "The Pull Toy" were excellent displays of the talent for pacing and dialogue that have won McEwen numerous awards. By alternating humorous and serious scenes — generally in fragments that left the audience hanging — McEwen and Brown crafted a tension that gave the performance a realistic sense of time, weaving in threads of complexity simultaneously. Though some of the humorous scenes seemed slightly out of place and tended to distract from the story, they were amusing enough to justify their presence.

The characters' animated dialogue made them outrageous yet more believable than they would have been without it. Greco's and Rivera's characteristic ways of speaking, riddled with Italian slang and an attitude belying their position, gave them a clear sense of identity perfectly attuned to their roles. Their interaction with the other actors was as unpredictable as one would expect, and even when they veered toward the excessive — as it sometimes did between Rivera and Campbell — the performers prevented it from turning into slapstick.

"The Pull Toy" provided an entertaining look at life in another era as well as an intimate statement about the nature of power and how it is maintained. Its mingling of humor, cultural commentary and excellent performances made it great fun and an undeniable success.

Young dancers come through in show

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The UI Dancers In Company ensemble had two strikes against it going into this weekend's "There's no place like Home Concert": inexperience (only two members returned from last year) and youth. However, the company managed to pull out a generally impressive performance at Space / Place Theater of North Hall Saturday night.

The show — which consisted of works by UI dance department instructors, visiting professionals and UI undergraduates — played on strengths and hid weaknesses.

"Another Time," choreographed by UI dance faculty members David Berkey and Françoise Martinet, told the story of two friends at the beach during what looked like the 1950s. The playful lyric ballet was performed well by UI graduate Christy Guth and UI junior Laura Gates.

"Another Time" showed off what is probably one of the UI dance department's greatest strengths: an emphasis on ballet that transfers to other styles of dance, serving as a building block of dance ability.

Walking that fine line between dance and acting — and sometimes losing its balance — was William Kirkpatrick's "You Know That I Know That You Know," a very interesting tidbit that played almost like a parade rather than a dance piece.

While being funny — Micha Ornstein and Mark Drahozal walked around the stage dressed like an astronaut and a cowboy, respectively — the piece didn't seem to have a reason for being; but then again, maybe the point was that there was no point.

A quartet — the spaceman and cowboy joined by a geisha and a pseudo-sophisticated lady — began the piece, with Drahozal playing to the audience and fellow cast members like Will Rogers after a few too many glasses of wine with dinner.

While "You Know" had no apparent purpose, company co-director Alan Sener's "Brothers" was so chock full of meaning it was hard not to feel hit over the head by the story of two men (Ornstein and Drahozal) trying to find common ground after creating a rift between themselves. Sener, who seems to have a knack for message-laden choreography, developed his theme well through simple movements without flourishes or complexity.

The show culminated in "Bum Bum Pacicumbum Bugurundum," company co-director Armando Duarte's interpretation of the carnival parades of Brazil. As the show's finale, the piece was surprisingly energetic and attempted to be an exercise in choreographed revelry.

However, it seemed sloppy and imprecise, which may have been the result of tired dancers trying to get through one more number. While the movements lacked crispness, the dancers seemed to have enthusiasm for the frantic drumbeats of the music. In the end, this saved the piece and left the audience clapping along with the music as the company took its bows.

Many of the members of Dancers In Company are young — sophomores and juniors. That leaves them time to hone their skills and get used to the rigors of performing and interpreting works they may not be used to. The dancers are generally a talented group who seem to like what they're doing, even if they get a little sloppy about it at times.

Dancers In Company wasn't absolutely stellar Saturday night, but look for future company performances to be formidable showcases of talented dancers.

'Gump' director lands Guild award

John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The already strong Academy Award odds for "Forrest Gump" have gotten even stronger.

The Directors Guild of America bestowed its top award on the man behind the box of chocolates, despite betting that its younger and presumably hipper members than those in the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences would honor the maker of the film noir send-up "Pulp Fiction."

With Robert Zemeckis' triumph Saturday night, "Gump" gained serious momentum to take the top Oscars in two weeks.

Recent DGA winners have repeated at the Academy Awards not only as the best director, but also best picture. The last three guild winners — the makers of "The Silence of the Lambs," "Unforgiven" and "Schindler's List" — all have swept Oscars. "I'm really nervous now," Zemeckis said of Oscar prospects after his win.

"Forrest Gump," starring Tom Hanks as a goodhearted simpleton who becomes a hero, has received 13 Academy Award nominations.

The other nominees for best director were Frank Darabont for "The Shawshank Redemption," Mike Newell for "Four Weddings and a Funeral," Robert Redford for "Quiz Show" and Quentin Tarantino for "Pulp Fiction."

Zemeckis, a protégé of Steven Spielberg, faced the strongest competition from the cutting-edge Tarantino.

"Obviously, what makes this moment so significant is it comes from my fellow directors," Zemeckis said in accepting the prize. "Movie directing is exhilarating, exhausting, addicting, painful, rewarding and a very cool job."

The DGA recognized "Hoop Dreams" as the year's best documentary. The story of two high-school basketball players was thought to have a chance at a best picture Oscar nomination but was blanked in that and in the documentary feature category.

The omission forced the academy to review the documentary selection procedures, which have been attacked previously.

Stolen Picasso painting found

Associated Press

CHICAGO — A stolen Pablo Picasso painting worth $650,000 was discovered in the back seat of a car by police officers making a traffic stop.

The 1928 oil and acrylic painting, "Tete," was stolen from an art gallery last January. It appeared to have a small scratch on it, but otherwise it seemed none the worse for wear, said gallery co-owner Paul Gray.

"I was very happy and very thrilled to hear that they've recovered it," Gray said.

The two men in the car were arrested Friday and charged with felony theft. Both were jailed awaiting court appearances.

The Picasso had been consigned to the gallery by the estate of a collector. Gray said he wasn't particularly surprised that it was found.

"It may be worth a lot of money, but the potential market is very small and very sophisticated and very hard to reach," Gray said. "So it's a misguided effort to steal these kinds of things."

Microsoft Is Looking For Technical Talent In The Following Areas

SOFTWARE DESIGN ENGINEERS

Working on the leading edge of software development for personal computer systems and applications, you will own a feature or part of a product and will work to define product specifications, solidify a schedule, and design and write code for your product.

PROGRAM MANAGERS

Your role will be to define the content, behavior, and appearance of your product and find innovative solutions to best meet customer's needs. Working closely with technical and marketing groups, customers, usability specialists, and graphic artists, you will take your product through design, specification, development, testing, documentation to final release.

SOFTWARE TEST ENGINEERS

You will have responsibility for designing and implementing testing software and test cases, predominately for software applications. As you create and run test cases to troubleshoot software bugs, and recommend and implement changes to your product, you will become an expert on the various applications with which you work.

SUPPORT ENGINEERS

As a support engineer, you will work with developers and information systems professionals who are using Microsoft products, tools or systems to write software and mission critical applications. You will analyze their technical problems, research and consult with experts, and provide solutions and consulting on design and architecture.

Opportunities exist for these job categories in the following areas; personal and business applications, networking, multimedia, operating systems, graphical user interfaces, and integrated development environments.

Qualified candidates should be pursuing a bachelor's or graduate degree in computer science, electrical engineering, computer engineering, or a related technical discipline. Qualifications vary by job but will include proficiency in C, C++ or Visual Basic and experience designing, testing, supporting or writing software.

If you are interested in applying, please send your resume and cover letter to: Microsoft Corporation, Attn: Recruiting, Dept.C00-Entry, One Microsoft Way, STE-303, Redmond WA 98052-8303. Or if you prefer to send your resume on-line, send to y-wait@microsoft.com (ASCII format). No phone calls please. Microsoft is an Equal Opportunity Employer and supports workforce diversity.
