Scottish Highlander made for St. Patrick's Day
Sherry Thiel
Iowa City. Jan. 30
He might be the purest example of the Scottish/Irish...money and beer - is the holiday spirit. Sherry and her husband, Robert, plan to play at the St. Patrick's Day festivities in Cedar Rapids and will be wearing their kilts. "We're a very unusual sight for the temperatures for this year's parade," Thiel said. Shehan, a native of Scotland, dons the kilt for her friends and family who are "dubious" about her wearing it down the street. Everyone learns to love the kilt - and the Highlanders will take their unique sound to Cedar Rapids today for the St. Patrick's Day parade.

The music may not be Beavis and Butthead, but bagpipes are the better music. It's really the saying "the more you drink, the better you play." We've heard comments like that before, and we casually acknowledged it when we played, but we weren't really playing bagpipes. While Irish pipes - better they play, it's really the way you play them. The more you drink, the better you play. It's really the saying "the more you drink, the better you play."...JIM SCHEISER - MADISON, WIS. - Under the headline ‘The Blarney Stone', nothing, I wear under my red kilt - and the Civil War...

Women's workshop prefaces conference

By Caroline Jones

The Daily Iowan

106th Democratic national convention opened last week amid much fanfare, development and some controversy. March 20 in the auditorium of the Radio City Music Hall in New York City.

The March 24-25 workshop will attract journalists from around the world who are interested in the Women in Media Conference in Washington, D.C., on April 5-7, and student journalists from all over the country.

The committee approved the bill on a 7-2 vote.

The bill would change current law so that a youth could be tried in adult court for drug offenses.

The bill passed 14-8 by the Senate based on the joint recommendation of the House and Senate public safety committees. The current sentencing laws for juveniles were enacted in 1989.

The bill is based on the committee's recommendation that juvenile justice reform laws be updated to reflect changes in society and the needs of juvenile offenders.

Sen. Jeff Lamberti, R-Ankeny, sponsored the bill. Lamberti, who is chair of the Senate Public Safety Committee, said he wanted to lower the mandatory minimum sentencing guidelines for drug offenses.

The bill would allow judges to impose sentences for drug offenses that are less than the mandatory minimums.

The bill also would allow judges to impose community service or treatment programs instead of incarceration for drug offenders.

The bill passed by a vote of 52-33 in the House.

The bill is part of a larger package of legislation aimed at toughening penalties for drug offenders.

The bill would make it more difficult for drug offenders to be released on parole or probation.

The bill would also increase penalties for drug trafficking.

Television Talk Shows

Dishing it out for ratings

Are television programs good for you? Now is the time to find out. Did you know that television shows are rated by a system that takes into account the number of people watching them? This system is called the Nielsen Ratings.

The Nielsen Ratings are based on a sample of households that watch television. The ratings are used to determine which shows are popular and which ones aren’t. Shows with high ratings are more profitable for the networks, which means that they are more likely to be renewed. Shows with low ratings are more likely to be canceled.

But how do the Nielsen Ratings work? The system is based on a sample of households that are representative of all television households in the United States. The sample is divided into several smaller groups, called “clusters.” Each cluster is a group of households that watch similar types of shows.

Once the sample is selected, Nielsen observers go into each household and watch the shows. They also record what shows the household members watch. This information is then used to calculate the ratings.

One of the biggest problems with the Nielsen Ratings is that they don’t take into account the number of people who watch shows online or on-demand. As a result, the ratings may not accurately reflect the true popularity of a show. However, the Nielsen Ratings are still the best system we have for measuring the popularity of television shows.

So, what can you do if you want to see a show that isn’t on the air? The best thing you can do is tune in and watch it. If enough people watch the show, the network will know that it’s popular and may decide to keep it on the air. If not enough people watch, the show will be canceled.

In the end, the Nielsen Ratings are just one factor that networks use to decide what shows to keep and what shows to cancel. They are not the only factor, and they may not always be accurate. But they are the best system we have for measuring the popularity of television shows, and they will continue to be used for many years to come.

Free Bjossa, Lolita: kill all the other captives

Antarctica. Victoria Glacier. In 1986. A baby killer whale, her mother and other whales were taken from the wild. The site is now a zoological exhibit.

The baby, Bjossa, was captured when she was just a few months old. She was separated from her mother, who was killed during the capture. Bjossa was then taken to the aquarium, where she lived for many years. She was not able to socialize with other whales or to engage in natural behaviors. She was kept in a small tank, where she was subjected to a variety of stressors.

Bjossa was eventually moved to a larger tank, where she lived for several years. However, she never had the chance to learn to swim or to play with other whales. She was kept in a small space, where she was constantly watched by human observers. She was unable to socialize with other whales or to engage in natural behaviors.

The aquarium officials claim that they are doing everything they can to care for Bjossa. They say that they are providing her with the best possible care, and that she is happy and healthy. However, many animal rights activists dispute this claim. They say that Bjossa is suffering and that she should be released into the wild.

The issue of keeping whales in captivity is a controversial one. Many people believe that whales are intelligent and sensitive animals that should be allowed to live in the wild. Others believe that whales make good pets and that they should be kept in zoos or aquariums.

In the end, the decision of whether to keep whales in captivity or to release them into the wild is a complex one. It involves many factors, including the welfare of the whales, the needs of the aquariums, and the views of the public. It is up to each individual to decide what they believe is best for the whales.

Dangers in the aquarium

It was a cold, wet day in the aquarium. The air was thick with the smell of chlorine and the sound of water splashing against the glass walls. The dolphins were swimming back and forth, their tails slapping the water as they dived and surfaced.

Suddenly, one of the dolphins was seen to be acting strangely. It was moving erratically and seemed to be in pain. The aquarium staff quickly intervened and rushed the dolphin to the hospital.

The dolphin was diagnosed with a serious injury and was given the best possible care. However, the staff was left wondering how the injury had occurred. They searched the aquarium but could not find any evidence of abuse or neglect.

In the end, the source of the dolphin’s injury remained unknown. The staff was left wondering if the dolphin had been injured by a careless employee or if it was simply a case of bad luck. Whatever the cause, the staff was determined to do everything they could to prevent a similar incident from happening in the future.

Doctor bottleneck procedures, in vain

A doctor was seen rushing into the hospital. He was carrying an unconscious patient and was carrying a stethoscope around his neck.

"I need you now," he said, looking up at the medical student on duty. "He’s in a critical condition!"

The student was surprised to see the doctor so agitated. He had never seen him act this way before. "But I don’t have any equipment," he said, looking down at his empty hands.

"I know," the doctor said, "but you don’t need it. This patient needs to be rushed to surgery as soon as possible. You have to help him!"

The student nodded and quickly gathered the necessary equipment. He helped the doctor into the operating room and they worked together to save the patient’s life.

"Thank you," the doctor said, once they had closed the patient’s wound. "I don’t know what I would have done without you."

The student smiled and nodded, feeling proud of himself. He had never felt so important.

Great change vs. bloody revolution

The future is now. The world is changing. But is it really? Is it a great change or a bloody revolution?

Many people believe that we are living in a time of great change. They point to the advances in technology, the rise of the internet, and the growing power of the people. But others believe that we are experiencing a bloody revolution. They point to the suffering of those who are oppressed and the resistance of those who are fighting for their freedom.

The truth is likely somewhere in the middle. We are experiencing both great change and bloody revolution. It is important to be aware of both of these forces, and to understand their impact on the world.

Internal Revenue Service ... with a smile

It’s not easy being a tax preparer. You’re going to have to chip in a little extra this year. The IRS is getting ready to increase the penalties for late returns.

For Person A, it’s a no-brainer. For Person B, it’s a different story. Person B is a small business owner who is just barely making ends meet. Person B is worried about how he is going to pay for the increased penalties. Person B is worried about how he is going to pay for the increased penalties.

To help you with your taxes, we have developed a special form. It’s called “A". It’s simple to use. You fill it out and mail it to the IRS. The IRS will process it and send you a refund check.

But there’s a catch. You have to file it by the due date. If you don’t, you will have to pay a penalty.

So, what do you do? You can file it early. You can file it late. You can file it online. You can file it by mail. It’s up to you.

The aquarium

The aquarium is a place where people can go to see and learn about the ocean. It is a place where people can see dolphins, sharks, and other sea creatures. It is a place where people can learn about the importance of the ocean and the creatures that live in it.

The aquarium is also a place where people can have fun. There are touch tanks where visitors can touch live crabs and other sea creatures. There are places where visitors can feed the dolphins and sharks. It is a place where people can enjoy themselves.

The aquarium is a place where people can learn and have fun. It is a place where people can see and experience the ocean. It is a place where people can appreciate the beauty of the ocean and the creatures that live in it.

Appalling issues

It is appalling that the government would actually pay to capture a whale. What kind of society would do such a thing? It is outrageous.

And it is even more outrageous that the government would then pay to keep the whale in captivity. Why would they do such a thing? It is unfathomable.

But the most unbelievable thing is that the government would actually pay to keep the whale in captivity for the sake of a few people who want to see it. It is truly shocking.

It is time to stand up and demand that the government stop paying to capture and keep whales in captivity.

Simpson defense attorney lets Fuhrman make exit

Linda Deutsch

LOS ANGELES — After six months of fighting on Simpson’s defense team, Defense Mark Fuhrman released yesterday. Fuhrman, who served as Simpson’s defense attorney since March, said he was told to resign by Robert Shapiro, Simpson’s lead attorney.

Fuhrman’s exit ended a tense period in which Simpson’s defense team had been divided. Shapiro had removed Fuhrman from the case and had asked him to take a leave of absence. Shapiro’s actions had raised questions about Fuhrman’s role in the defense team.

Simpson’s trial is set to begin in June, and Fuhrman’s departure could affect the defense strategy. Fuhrman had been a key figure in the team, and his departure could leave a vacuum in the defense.”

Cable TV networks gear up for anti-violence initiative

Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Do not adjust your television set. It’s not the FBI raiding a high-tech software company in Cyber City or the Department of Justice coming for a government whistleblower.

It’s just another day in the: "Outbreak," and the people trying to combat the spread of violence reflect the same kind of work being done on something much more serious.

Triumphs and tribulations of the anti-violence movement in cable television are the focus of "Outbreak," a new cable series that the networks hope will raise awareness and spark some thoughts on how to stop the violent behavior.

"When that first wave of violence hit," said political consultant Laurence Lau, "I never in a million years thought I would be doing this... I thought it would be a short story..."

But now with a year of experience under their belts, Lau and others trying to use TV to stop violence are finding some success.

"The television networks have committed themselves to do what they can," Lau said. "And they’re beginning to see that it’s possible to do this..."

But the networks still face an uphill battle, especially in cable, where violence is often part of the programming.

"It’s a little tough," said Lau. "But it’s not impossible. You’ve got to fight now because if you pull back all the way to the line of defense..."

"The only refuge in cable," Lau said, "is the networks themselves."

"The networks are the ones..."

Lau said that the networks have committed themselves to do what they can, and that they are beginning to see that it’s possible to do this.

"You’ve got to fight now because if you pull back all the way to the line of defense..."

"But you still don’t have nowhere to go..."

"And the networks have committed themselves to do what they can, and that they are beginning to see that it’s possible to do this..."
