UI mourns loss of hospital employee

The flag atop the Old Capitol will fly at half-staff for Brenda Barnhart, 19, who died of natural causes Saturday at the Grinnell Medical Center.

Barnhart of Sigourney, Iowa, worked as a clerk typist for UI Hospitals and Clinics Nursing Service.

Services will be held in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Sigourney, with burial in Pennington Cemetery.

Committee to answer concerns at public forum

The UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee will sponsor two public discussions to answer questions about the search for UI President Hunter Rawlings' replacement, committee chairman Steve Collins said at Tuesday night's Faculty Council meeting.

The discussions will be held from 4:30-6 p.m. April 4 in room W151 of the Pappajohn Building and from 5:30-7 p.m. April 11 in room 283 of the Eckstein Medical Research Building.

Simpson trial update

Limousine driver Allan Park said he saw a shadowy figure enter O.J. Simpson's estate around 10:55 p.m. June 12. But he did not see a Ford Bronco parked outside the home at 10:22 p.m., when he first arrived.

Brian "Kato" Kaelin finished his testimony, insisting that he did not lie on the witness stand. In a press conference later, he said the trial was an ordeal.

A woman who says she saw Simpson on the telephone at Riviera Country Club the afternoon of June 12 will testify that he was angry and yelling. Prosecutor Marcia Clark says Simpson was talking to his ex-wife.

Pence denies speeding

Snowplow driver said he tried to stop in time

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

MARENGO, Iowa — Johnson County snowplow driver Charles Pence did not realize Hawkeye basketball player Chris Street was the driver of the car his vehicle collided with until he saw a newflash on his television screen later that night.

"It just came across the screen: A University of Iowa basketball player has been killed in a traffic accident with a snowplow," Pence said. "I told my wife, 'I can't believe it was Chris Street driving that car.'"

Pence took the stand at the Iowa County Courthouse Tuesday afternoon after six days of others' testimony in a multimillion-dollar lawsuit trial to determine who was responsible for Street's fatal accident.

Street's parents, Michael and Patricia, and his girlfriend Kim Vinton — who was a passenger in the car at the time of the accident — are suing Pence and Johnson County for the fatal crash. Pence has filed a countersuit, claiming Street was responsible for the accident.

In Tuesday's testimony, Pence said he would drop his countersuit if the Streets and Vinton dropped their lawsuit.

Answering mostly "Yes" and "No, sir," Pence outlined what happened after a 12-hour day working on snowplow No. 29 — the vehicle which hit Street's car while Pence was driving it home Jan. 19, 1993.

Pence said he didn't see Street's car until the snowplow was about

Street Trial Update

Charles Pence told the jury he did not realize the snowplow he was driving collided with Chris Street's vehicle until he saw a newflash on television later that night.

Pence disputed earlier testimony that he was driving about 60 mph at the time of the accident. He was previously convicted of driving 52 mph in a 45 mph zone.

Pence said he would drop his countersuit if the Street family and Chris Street's former girlfriend, Kim Vinton, dropped their lawsuits.

Walter Kasmatka, an engineer and highway lighting expert, testified that the lights on the light bar attached to the top of Johnson County's snowplows — including Pence's — are safe. In addition, Johnson County engineer Douglas Fredericks said the county is exempt from complying with federal regulations

Several local businesses which are not federally mandated to include affirmative action programs voluntarily incorporate equal opportunity in their hiring processes.

The American College Testing Program, Highway 1 and Interstate 80, uses affirmative action policies to help the company mirror the total work force population in Iowa, said Kelley Hayden, director of corporate communications for ACT.

"We use voluntary programs designed to ensure equal opportunity of minorities and women in

Hayden said. "There's a value in having employees of various ages, ethnicity and of both sexes because they each bring different perspectives to our workplace and influence what we produce."

ACT, a nonprofit organization, employs more than 1,300 people — 800 full-time workers and 500 to 600 temporary workers. Minority employment rates total 8.7 percent among the full-time workers while the percentage of women is 64.7.

Most college-bound students nationwide take tests developed by ACT, including the LSAT and the ACT. Since students of all races must take the exams, the tests need to be culturally unbiased.

Survey: Children are health illiterate

Daniel Haney

NEW ORLEANS — One quarter of America's schoolchildren don't eat fruits or vegetables every day or brush their teeth every night, and half think apple juice has more fat than whole milk, a nationwide survey found.

The survey's sponsors say the message is clear: Bad health habits as well as good ones start early.

The survey was conducted by the American Health Foundation, a private New York-based research organization, and Scholastic Inc., a publisher.

Dr. Ernst Wynder, the foundation's president, said the findings show Americans are doing a poor job of educating youngsters about healthy ways of living.

"Rather than blame the children, we should blame ourselves," he said.

Wynder released the survey findings Tuesday at a conference sponsored by the American Cancer Society. It was based on a questionnaire distributed to 3,112 children in second through sixth grades.

"These statistics knock you out of your chair," commented Dr. Edward Sondik, acting director of the National Cancer Institute. "The more we can teach youngsters about a healthy lifestyle, the better off we'll be. We aren't doing a very good job."

Among the findings:

- 24 percent had eaten no fruit and 25 percent had eaten no vegetables the previous day.
- 24 percent did not brush their teeth the night before.
- 15 percent said they thought cheese was a good source of fiber. (It's not.) And 16 percent said fiber reduces the risk of cancer. (It does.)
- 8 percent said they thought apple juice, which contains no fat, has more fat than whole milk, which has a lot. Moreover, 36 percent said watermelon has more fat

THIEF: 'WE WERE BORED'

Big Boy butchers fess up to prank

Mitch Weiss
Associated Press

TOLEDO, Ohio — The grisly Big Boy whodunit was solved Tuesday.

Eight men, most of them college students, admitted to police that they and two younger friends stole the cheery 300-pound restaurant icon on March 17, dismembered him with a hacksaw and dumped his remains at other Big Boy restaurants in the area with notes that declared, "Big Boy is Dead."

Why?

"We were bored," said 18-year-old Tom Martinez.

The eight will probably be charged with criminal mischief, a misdemeanor that could land them in jail for 60 days and cost them more than $3,000 to pay for the pudgy 6-foot Big Boy. Detective Ron Scanlon said. Charges weren't expected until later today.

Two other suspects — both juveniles — failed to surrender as expected Tuesday.

The group of 10 took the fiberglass hamburger-toting statue to an apartment and debated what to do with it when one suggested they "chop him up," Scanlon said.

"They just wanted to take the Big Boy. But then one thing led to another and the kids started

Record connoisseur stays true to vintage vinyl

Brad Meister bought his first record when he was only 5 years old. Now he owns 20,000 albums and manages one of the last record stores in Iowa.

"It all started when my mom mailed me my first Partridge Family album, which I still have," Meister said.

Meister, who is true to his love for music and his profession, said he never listens to anything except vinyl.

"I refuse to buy a CD player," he said. "Corporate America is ripping people off. Making records costs the same as CDs, but they won't lower the prices because people will pay them."

Meister has worked at the Record Collector, 4 1/2 S. Linn St., for about eight years — long enough to have seen bands like Cowboy Junkies, Nirvana and 10,000 Maniacs play in Iowa City.

"I don't even want to think about how long I've worked here," he said. "Five days a week I exist here."

Meister said he is amused by the store's predictable, trendy customers.

"One really cool thing about working here is watching new people come in," he said. "Every year a bunch of wide-eyed freshmen walk in and go 'Whoa' and head right for the Grateful Dead section, dressed in their little tie-dyes."

"Then in three or four years they come back, and it's like they're shedding their skin," Meister said. "They preface their resales with 'Don't laugh' and they open their bags and they have Madonna albums from high school and the Dead albums."

The feel, the sound and primarily the free stuff included with record albums keep vintage vinyl Meister's sole source of music.

"Take the White Album," he said. "It came with four nice pictures of the Beatles, a big psychedelic collage poster. The least they could do is put a coupon or something in the CD so you can get the posters."

Working at the store, Meister said he has an advantage over the ordinary record lover. He gets to skim rare recordings off the shelves and see shows at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., for free.

Some customers frequent the store and buddy up with "the Meister" because of his exemplary taste in music.

"It is really gratifying," he said. "One lady came in town to visit and she bought a couple records from me. I didn't even have to play them. She said she'd just buy them because for the three years she lived here I never sold her a bad record."

There really isn't such a thing as a bad record, Meister said.

"There is nothing really that is bad or good," he said. "It is just what sells. To me, Michael Jackson's Thriller should be $1."

Specializing in '60s garage and folk music, Meister said he has almost completed his record collection. Phil Ochs' Live 66 is the next record on his to-buy list.

"There are probably less than 50 records I'm looking for, and I'll probably never see more than 20 of them," he said. "When I started working here, I thought I knew a lot about music. I listened to the radio, read my Rolling Stone music guide to search out things I hadn't heard. Then I came here, and I realized there was more than what is forced on you by MTV."

The group Big Star is the greatest discovery Meister said he ever made, and the band's double album is his most prized recording. Though punk and disco are threatening to return to the mainstream, there are a few people who request albums by the unknown bands Meister prefers.

"We order a lot of obscure stuff," he said. "We don't stock it if there isn't more than one person in Iowa City who will buy it. There are some really good things that never see the light of day."

Lack of talent has kept Meister from making his own music, even though he experimented with the guitar and drums while growing up.

"Doesn't the saying go 'Those who can't play, teach; those who can't teach, sell?'" he asked.

Lovett, Roberts announce separation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Julia Roberts and singer Lyle Lovett are separating 21 months after their surprise wedding.

"We remain close and in great support of one another," the 27-year-old Roberts and Lovett, 37, said in a statement released Tuesday by the actress's publicist.

The couple agreed to a legal separation, said publicist Nancy Seltzer, who refused to disclose any other details.

Roberts and Lovett were married June 27, 1993 in a church ceremony in Marion, Ind. The "Pretty Woman" actress met the bristle-haired Lovett when they filmed 1992's "The Player."

It was the first marriage for both, and the couple didn't have any children.

The hush-hush wedding was put together in just two days. Roberts married Lovett during her three-day break from filming "The Pelican Brief" in Washington, D.C.

Businesswoman buys the Duke's residence

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Even hard-core John Wayne fans had a hard time swallowing the $5 million price tag on a mansion the Duke lived in but didn't own.

Then the Duke's widow, Pilar, knocked $3.6 million off the $5 million price of the 7,000-square-foot estate and bingo — after seven years on the market, SOLD!

The buyer is Janet Ford, president of Santa Ana-based ACM, a company specializing in environmental maintenance. Ford said she closed escrow Tuesday.

"The house just has a very comfortable feel," Ford said.

Wayne died in 1979.

R.E.M. singer flops with basketball picks

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Stipe knows a thing or two about music but not about college hoops, it seems.

The lead singer for R.E.M. sent his picks for the NCAA Final Four to Atlanta Journal-Constitution sports columnist Mark Bradley, who invites readers to predict the semifinals in colleges' most prestigious basketball tournament each March.

Stipe, who's in Switzerland with the rest of the rock group while drummer Bill Berry recovers from brain surgery, was 0-for-4 in his picks, published in Tuesday's editions of the Journal-Constitution.

His choices for the semifinals — Arizona, UT-Chattanooga, St. Peter's and Mount St. Mary's — didn't even make it past the first round.

Aerosmith video regular fights battle with appearance

NEW YORK (AP) — Alicia Silverstone, the glamorous MTV icon-turned-actress, looks in the mirror and sees ugly.

The 18-year-old Silverstone, who starred in three Aerosmith videos, talks about her self-image in the March 31 issue of Entertainment Weekly.

"When I look in the mirror, sometimes it's very sad because I feel like this ugly, fat blimp, you know?" she says. "And then I have to go be this beautiful girl."

Silverstone, who's turned down a spot on "Beverly Hills 90210," says she wants to make her mark in the movies. She has already starred in two minor films — "The Crush" and "Hideaway."

"There's no reason to get locked into a television show when you might be able to do a movie with somebody like Al Pacino," Silverstone said.

Louganis helps raise funds for AIDS foundation

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Diver Greg Louganis dedicated his best-selling autobiography to Ryan White, and now he'll be the guest of honor at two fund-raisers for the foundation named for the teen-ager who died of AIDS-related complications.

The Olympic gold medalist will visit Indianapolis on April 14 for a $40-per-person reception for the Ryan White Foundation.

Later, he'll sign copies of his book, "Breaking the Surface," at a mall with White's mother, Jeanne White-Ginder. Waldenbooks will donate a portion of the proceeds to the foundation.

Louganis, who disclosed last month that he has AIDS, befriended White before the teen died of complications from the disease in 1990 at age 18.

UISG adds ritual to inauguration

Sara Teasdale
The Daily Iowan

UI Student Government President-elect Tim Williams and Vice President-elect Jeremy Johnson, both UI juniors, will begin a UISG tradition when they are sworn in at the Old Capitol Saturday.

Williams and Johnson will be sworn into office at 6:30 p.m. In past years, the president and vice president were sworn in at UISG meetings in the Union.

The UI's top officers are prepared to begin their terms, Williams said.

"The transition has been really good," he said. "(President John Lohman and Vice President Gretchen Lohman) have been really good about introducing us to people and answering our questions."

After the Feb. 27-28 election, Williams and Johnson began meeting with the Lohmans three to four times a week to learn the policies of student government.

"We're trying to get the transition to run as smooth as possible and learn a lot in the meantime," Williams said.

John Lohman said Williams and Johnson are learning UISG procedures with no problems.

The information is not difficult to learn, Williams and Johnson said. But they agreed it will take time to keep the details straight so UISG will run with ease during 1995-96.

"It's not necessarily difficult to learn; there's just a lot of different groups and there are so many different groups of people you are dealing with and interacting with," Johnson said. "We just have to be clear of what our responsibilities are to all of these different groups."

"I haven't really been confused yet; it's just a matter of taking it all in stride," Williams added.

Williams and Johnson met the members of the Iowa state Board of Regents on March 15. The Lohmans have also introduced the duo to the UI administration and other UI student leaders over the past three weeks.

Busy learning the ropes as the incoming UI president and vice president, Williams and Johnson have not had time to concentrate on some things they would like to change during their 1995-96 term.

There are no concrete plans yet, but Williams said the groundwork has been laid to change course evaluations and expand the scope of

SAFEWALK

"We've gotten some information from other schools about course evaluations to get an idea what we're working with," he said. "But we really haven't started yet. It's going to take some time to change the system. We have to develop it, and before we do that, we have to form a committee and do the research. We have started the groundwork; now we just have to see it through. But we can't do that until after we take office."

Nothing has been changed yet, but Williams said progress has been made to expand SAFEWALK.

"I've talked to a few people — mostly just friends," he said. "I am just asking them informal opinions to get ideas, but nothing concrete yet."

The Saturday inauguration will mark the beginning of a UISG ritual, John Lohman said.

"We just wanted to get some tradition started in student government," he said.

Members of the board of regents, the UI administration, the Iowa City City Council and the Iowa City community are welcome to attend, John Lohman said.

"It's open to all the students and the public and the press, and we're hoping a lot of the past student body presidents will be there," he said.

Lohmans ready for final leave-taking

Sara Teasdale
The Daily Iowan

At his final UI Student Government meeting as student body president, John Lohman told UISG senators to bring Kleenex to the Old Capitol Saturday evening because he will deliver a "tear-jerking" farewell speech.

"Come prepared with your handkerchiefs," Lohman said at Tuesday night's meeting in the Union.

At the Old Capitol Saturday at 6:30 p.m., Lohman and Vice President Gretchen Lohman will turn over the gavel to President-elect Tim Williams and Vice President-elect Jeremy Johnson, both UI juniors.

A dance and after-hours party will be held after Williams and Johnson are sworn into office.

"There's going to be streamers, punch, cookies and crackers," John Lohman said. "There's going to be a lot of press there, too."

Following the Lohmans' executive reports at the Tuesday night meeting, UISG senators gave them a round of applause.

Relieved that her term as UISG vice president is nearing its end, Gretchen Lohman said she will now have more time to devote to her graduate work.

"I'm feeling like I'm going to have a lot of extra time to get ready for my exams," she said. "I just wish I had more time this week to prepare."

The agenda at the Lohmans' final meeting ran smoothly. The UISG Childcare and Student Families Commission and the Safety and Anti-Violence Education Commission amendments passed unopposed, adding additional members to both organizations.

The SAVE Commission will change its composition by including two new voting members: one from the education program of the UI Residence Services and the other from Health Iowa.

UISG hopes the education program representative will provide the SAVE Commission with insight on younger students' lifestyles. The Health Iowa representative will supply the commission with information about sexual assault at the UI.

Other issues on the agenda included the appointment of new members to SCOPE and the UISG 1995-96 judicial boards. The Constitution of the Association of Big Ten Students, which will encourage information-sharing between Big Ten universities, also passed unopposed.

Group prepares survey about campus safety

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The UI Safety and Security Committee wants to know how students, staff and faculty feel about walking alone on campus at night, campus lighting and the possibility of being struck by passing bicyclists.

The committee has drafted a safety survey that will be mailed out by the Iowa Social Science Institute Friday. About 800 students, professional staff and faculty will be randomly chosen have lived here a little longer so we have a different perspective, but we have to walk out into dark parking lots, too."

The survey will try to identify concerns from a diverse group of people on a number of topics, said Jeff Gauthier, chairman of the committee and an administrative associate of Emergency Services at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"We try to identify perceptions of our constituents and what they feel are some of their safety and security

"We try to identify perceptions of our constituents and what they feel are some of their safety and security concerns."

Jeff Gauthier, chairman of UI Safety and Security Committee to complete the survey.

UI sophomore and committee member Patty Ferrell, who is also a coordinator of the SAFEWALK program, said the survey touches on many safety issues.

"I think the survey covers everything efficiently and sufficiently," she said. "There's no point that's been left out. Then there's always the 'other' option of filling in the blank."

Lighting on campus is an issue of personal interest to Ferrell and she said the issue should be important to all students.

"I was concerned (the survey) covered the issue of lighting completely," she said. "Lighting is so important for everyone on campus, whether you live in the dorms or not, because there's always those times when you have to walk around at night."

The committee's student members bring a different perspective on safety issues to the table, Ferrell said.

"We're kind of just there to give student input," she said. "(Faculty and staff) look at the campus differently. They're looking at parking their cars and walking from their buildings to their cars."

However, faculty and staff share many of the student population's safety concerns, said Lisa Wilcox, SAFEWALK committee member and UI associate professor of endodontics.

"I think our concerns are the same as students," she said. "Most of us concerns. Some of those were illumination on campus and sharing walking paths with Rollerbladers and bikers," he said. "We're looking at cohabitation on what is increasingly becoming a pedestrian campus. Bikes and Rollerblades are great forms of transportation, but if used unsafely they can be a real danger to people."

People who will receive the survey will be drawn from a computer-generated random sample that should represent the UI community accurately, said Mary Losch, program director at the Iowa Social Science Institute, which has been working on the survey with the committee since May 1994.

"There shouldn't be one group that will be over or underrepresented," she said. "We should have the same proportions that exist in the community."

Campus safety has been the center of some students' attention recently, and UI Public Safety Director Chuck Green said he hopes this will result in a high survey response rate.

"There has been a lot of interest in safety issues lately — some of the candidates for student government made it part of their platform," he said. "I hope that it's been given enough advertising — it's an issue that's constantly on people's minds. This is their opportunity to take part in what we do around here and tell us what they're concerned about."

Council aims to expand UI guidelines

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Husbands and wives working in the same department and faculty members becoming hostile toward each other after breaking off a relationship were two hypothetical situations the UI Faculty Council mulled over when discussing the UI's nepotism policy Tuesday.

The nepotism policy in the UI Operations Manual now includes only "the employment of relatives." It defines relatives as being related by blood — that is, being a parent, child, etc. — and by marriage. It was last revised in 1977, and Faculty Senate President Richard Hurtig said the policy must be changed to include other types of relationships since the current policy is outdated.

"We want to broaden the policy to anything where there's a conflict of interest," Hurtig said. "What's being added is some language about amorous or intensely personal relationships."

Tuesday's council meeting dealt with how the policy might be applied to situations where one person in a relationship is supervising the other person in the relationship. The council agreed that in most situations, decisions of this type must be made by the first highest neutral party who is a supervisor of both people in the relationship.

The current policy states if a sufficient answer to the conflict is not found within six months of the disclosure of the relationship, one of the parties must be transferred to a different area where they would not be in conflict with their partner.

Hurtig said issues of confidentiality are especially important when the relationship in question is a homosexual one.

"Part of the discussion was that in a sense there is a conflict there," he said. "But in this type of personal relationship, there is no reason everybody in the whole university has to know about that."

Senate bills aid child abuse detection

Mary Neubauer
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Senate has voted to change the state's child protection laws, giving investigators more leeway to find abusers.

The Senate passed three bills Tuesday that make changes in the protection laws. One of the measures calls for the state to establish a child death review team to look into the deaths of children age 6 and younger. The Department of Human Services also could ask the team to review child abuse investigations.

Another section of the bill calls for the department to start child abuse assessment projects across the state to investigate abuse. Once a family assessment is completed, investigators can use that information to offer family counseling and assistance or to send the case to court.

If the bill becomes law, only information from the most serious cases of child abuse would be put in the state's central child abuse registry. All other information would be kept confidential, and if state investigations determined an abuse complaint was unfounded, the case would be cleared from the record.

Sen. Elaine Szymoniak, D-Des Moines, sponsored the bill and said she was surprised by the lack of debate on the topic. She said she hoped it didn't mean the other senators weren't listening.

"You are going to see some significant changes. I think they're good changes. I would urge you to look at what we've done. I'm sure you will be hearing about it through the year," she said.

The Senate passed the bill 49-0, sending it to the House.

In other action Tuesday:

- The Senate passed a bill that would keep the identity of those who report child abuse confidential. And although the Department of Human Services routinely notifies parents that they're being investigated for abuse, a provision of the bill would allow courts to prohibit that notification if investigators believed someone would be put in danger. The Senate passed the bill 49-0.

- The Senate passed a bill that would give more people access to the state's child abuse registry. The bill would give access to the Iowa Board for the Treatment of Sexual Abusers and administrators of child-care programs operated by the state, city or county so they could investigate employees or those who had applied for a job. The Senate passed the bill 48-0.

Board confers on funding for new schools

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Discussion on how to raise money for the building of new elementary and middle schools in Iowa City continued at an Iowa City Community School District Board of Education meeting Tuesday night.

Creating an elementary school will cost about $4 million, while creating a middle school will cost about $10 million, according to a board estimate.

The board discussed whether one type of school should get a bond issue first or if there should be one bond issue for both types. The schools are projected to open by fall 1998.

Board member Connie Champion said elementary schools should be issued a bond first because many members of the community would be less interested in a middle school.

"People don't like junior high-aged kids," Champion said. "They like elementary-aged kids."

"People don't like junior high-aged kids. They like elementary-aged kids."

Connie Champion, school board member

Board president Tom Bender agreed and added that trying to get a bond issue for both types of schools at the same time would be too expensive.

The board also discussed where the new schools would be located. Elementary schools already exist in the northwest and southeast quadrants of Iowa City, so the new elementary schools would have to be in either the northeast or southwest quadrant, said Superintendent Barbara Grohe.

Creating a middle school would require about 28 acres and a long-term goal would be to build four middle schools. The first middle school built should also fall in quadrants like the elementary schools, Grohe said.

The board approved a search for finding a location for the first middle school but continued discussion on the feasibility of a bond referendum in September.

"We need to finish this aspect of the plan because the next meeting is already in April," Grohe said. "We need to get on to the next step."

State leaders lend support to Dole

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad and Sen. Charles Grassley are set to endorse Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole in his bid for the Republican presidential nomination, aides said Tuesday.

Branstad and Grassley are to appear with Dole at a news conference at his Washington campaign headquarters today, Branstad spokeswoman Christina Martin said.

Neither endorsement is a major surprise, but they add to Dole's status as the front-runner heading into Iowa's precinct caucuses. Those February caucuses mark the first test of strength among Republicans seeking the nomination to oppose President Clinton.

Branstad was elected to a fourth term of office last year, and Grassley is the most popular elected official in the state, winning a third term in 1992 with 72 percent of the vote.

Dole is scheduled to formally announce his candidacy next month, but he's already the prohibitive favorite in the Iowa caucuses. He has campaigned in the state since the 1970s and won the precinct caucuses when he unsuccessfully sought the nomination in 1988.

Bob Dole

BIRTHDATE: July 22, 1923.

EDUCATION: Studied at University of Arizona. Earned bachelor and law degrees from University of Topeka.

EXPERIENCE: Kansas Legislature, 1951. Russell County prosecutor, 1953-1961. U.S. House, 1961-1969. U.S. Senate, 1969-present. Senate majority and minority leader, 1984-present. Chairman, Republican National Committee, 1971-1973. Republican vice presidential candidate 1976.

DI/ME

Grassley was one of Dole's most prominent supporters when the Kansas Republican sought the presidential nomination in 1988, but Branstad has always remained neutral during the presidential campaign season.

Both Iowa politicians have cited Dole's farm-state background, saying that the Midwest would gain through Dole's understanding of agricultural issues.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm and former education secretary Lamar Alexander have already formally entered the race and have assembled significant campaign organizations in Iowa. Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter joins the field this week and has assembled a network of moderates as supporters in the state.

Commentator Pat Buchanan entered the field last week and pledged to campaign for the caucuses.

By securing the backing of the two top-elected Republicans in the state, Dole cements his ties to the GOP party structure in Iowa and to the increasingly powerful religious conservative wing of the party.

At the same time, caucus campaigning is largely an organizational effort and the value of endorsements can be limited. Expectations of how well Dole will score in the caucuses will be driven even higher because of his support from key party figures.

That can be important because candidates who score better than expected in Iowa get a surge of favorable attention, while those who fail to meet expectations find their campaigns under new scrutiny.

EPA report shows Iowa pollution down

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Industries in Iowa are curbing toxic waste emissions, a new report shows.

Iowa ranks 25th among the states in toxic chemical releases by industries, according to the annual report issued this week by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The report is based on 1993 data from 427 industrial plants in Iowa.

Those plants released 31.5 million pounds of toxic chemicals into the surrounding air, water or land in 1993. That is down 11 percent from 1992.

The five states with the most releases into the environment in 1993 were Louisiana (293 million pounds), Texas (161 million), Tennessee (126 million), Ohio (112 million) and Alabama (105 million).

While many of the emissions are within legal guidelines, environmental groups say the EPA reports include just a fraction of total emissions in the nation and do not cover all waste sent away from plant sites for disposal.

Iowa ranked 26th in the 1992 rankings of toxic emissions.

Ammonia, used to make fertilizer, topped the Iowa list of toxic chemicals with 7.55 million pounds released in 1993. That is down 7 percent from 1992.

The amount of toxic waste generated by Iowa industries fell 10 percent from 1992 to 1993, and more of the waste was treated instead of being released into the environment.

Iowa industries recycled 63.66 million pounds of their toxic waste in 1993, up 65 percent from 1992.

Terra Industries, Sioux City, remains Iowa's top toxic polluter, the report shows. The fertilizer and farm chemical maker released 3.35 million pounds of toxic materials at its Sergeant Bluff plant in northwest Iowa in 1993, EPA said. Most of the releases were into the air surrounding Terra's plant.

Terra's toxic releases were down from 3.54 million pounds in 1992 and 4.1 million pounds in 1991.

The Sergeant Bluff plant was substantially damaged by an explosion in December and is currently not in operation. Terra spokeswoman Paula Norton said Tuesday that emissions at the plant were within legal guidelines and did not endanger the public.

Toxic Waste in Iowa

The top 10 Iowa sites for emissions of toxic chemicals in 1993, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency:

1. Terra Industries, Sergeant Bluff
2. Climax Molybdenum, Fort Madison
3. Grain Processing Corp., Muscatine
4. Alcoa, Riverdale
5. Quantum Chemical Corp., Clinton
6. Arcadian Fertilizer, Camanche
7. Griffin Wheel Co., Keokuk
8. Winnebago Industries, Forest City
9. Archer Daniels Midland, Clinton
10. North Star Recycling, Wilton

"We had added a scrubber in 1992 that had a major impact," she said. "When this plant is rebuilt, it should be substantially improved."

MEASURE APPROVED BY 92-3 VOTE

House bill eases access to names of juvenile criminals

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The names of juveniles charged with serious crimes would be made public under legislation approved by the House on Tuesday.

The same measure makes it easier to try youngsters as adults. This year's version of a crackdown on juvenile crime would also eliminate appeals bonds for most convicted drug dealers.

Few in either party were willing to oppose the measure, though lawmakers did quibble over details.

"You've got to start with the young," said Rep. John Connors, D-

Des Moines. "These young people have got to know that if they do something wrong they're going to pay for it."

Most polls show voters are deeply worried about street gangs, drugs and the accompanying violence. Lawmakers have made an annual ritual of approving tougher juvenile crime measures.

The House approved the measure on a 92-3 vote, sending it to the Senate where a version is virtually certain to be approved.

Much of the attention was focused on opening juvenile records, a move backers said was needed to alert both the public and school officials to potential problems.

Currently, juvenile court records are secret and not generally available to agencies beyond the police making an arrest.

That means a student can have a criminal record yet be sent to a school where officials don't know what they may have to handle.

"They can be within the school system without any school official knowing about it," said Rep. Jeff Lamberti, R-Ankeny.

Some critics sought to ease the measure by keeping secret the names of children younger than 14.

"Children should be treated differently than adults," said Rep. Jack Holveck, D-Des Moines. "We do not want to take any action or do anything that will interfere with the chance to put that child back on the right track."

"We do not want to get into a situation of releasing the names of 5-year-olds or 6-year-olds."

Some critics argued that lawmakers weren't really doing much to deal with juvenile crime and saw the measure as catering to nervous voters.

"What we are doing here lately is legislating for headlines," said Rep. Don Shultz, D-Waterloo. "Maybe by locking them up somehow, we can convince them they're wrong."

PROFESSOR SEARCHES FOR PRESENTER OF ROSE

Secret admirer pays ultimate compliment

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

The classified ad reads, "A rose at the end of Beethoven — whoever threw me the rose please call."

UI music Assistant Professor Daniel Shapiro, the man hoping to identify a secret admirer, placed the ad in The Daily Iowan Monday.

On March 16, during Shapiro's final performance in a series of eight solo Beethoven concerts, someone tossed a single long-stemmed red rose at his feet.

Two hundred people were in the audience at Clapp Recital Hall that night, but Shapiro is fascinated by the anonymous gift-giver. He said in his 26 years of piano playing, he has never received a rose before.

"The last piece, the very last sonata Beethoven wrote, has a very hushed, quiet ending," Shapiro said. "When I was finished, there was long applause — I think people were applauding the entire series — and I stood up and took a couple bows. Suddenly, there was a rose at my feet. I picked it up with much admiration and pleasure and carried it off the stage and back on for my last bow."

The song that captivated the audience was Beethoven's Sonata No. 32, Opus 3. Shapiro said if his admirer reveals his or her identity, he will play any song he or she requests.

"It was a nice, sweet thing to do, and there is the mystery of not knowing who it came from," he said. "It is a complete stranger, an admirer."

Shapiro said since he did not see the direction from which the rose was thrown, he has no clue as to the sender, whom he believes is a woman. He confronted his friends who all denied tossing the gift.

"I want to meet the person in order to thank them," Shapiro said. "I would like to tell them not to be shy and just to call the number. I won't bite."

Decision in breast implant suit against Dow Chemical overturned

HOUSTON (AP) — Dow Chemical Co. won't have to pay any part of a $5.2 million verdict awarded to a woman who claimed she suffered health problems from breast implants, a judge decided Tuesday.

In his decision, State District Judge Michael Schneider held Dow Corning Corp. responsible for the award to Gladys Laas, a retired nurse from Belleville.

He didn't say why he overturned the verdict involving Dow Chemical, which is co-owner of Dow Corning.

The jury's verdict last month was the first time the parent company had been found liable in breast-implant litigation. Legal experts said the Feb. 15 verdict, reached after 10 days of deliberations, cleared the way for similar lawsuits around the country against Dow Chemical.

The verdict would have required Dow Chemical to pay one-fifth of the total, or a little more than $1 million. The judge's decision, if unchanged on appeal, means that Dow Corning will have to pay the entire $5.2 million.

Interim police force in Haiti troubles human rights groups

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — When a U.S.-led force pulls out of Haiti this week, they will leave the country in the hands of "recycled" soldiers who helped terrorize the country under military rule, human rights groups charged last Wednesday.

The interim police force is made up of those least likely to uphold democracy — the military that ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in 1991, then butchered as many as 4,000 Aristide supporters over three years, Human Rights Watch-Americas and the National Coalition for Haitian Refugees said.

On Friday, U.S. troops pull out, leaving security in the hands of a reduced U.N. mission and the interim police. The police are to serve at least until March 1996, while a new U.S.- and Canadian-run police academy trains a permanent police force of 6,000 to 7,000 officers. The first 375 cadets graduate in June.

The rights groups said the record of the interim police, which has been operating under U.N. guidance, is already troubling. Violent crimes have increased since they began operating, and 21 interim policemen have been arrested for crimes such as corruption, extortion, assault and murder, the report said.

Botulism bacteria found at Japanese sect's compound

TOKYO (AP) — Police were reported Tuesday to have found lethal bacteria at a doomsday religious group's compound, suggesting the sect, suspected in a nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subway, was preparing for germ warfare.

Even before the subway attack, a book published by the group dwelled on the themes of poisons, germ warfare and the subways.

Known as Aum Shinri Kyo, or "Supreme Truth," the sect is suspected in the March 20 attack which killed 10 people and sickened about 5,000. The group has denied involvement and no arrests have been made.

Police raiding Aum Shinri Kyo's properties have found large quantities of chemicals, some of which reportedly can be used to produce the deadly sarin gas used in the subway attack.

On Tuesday, news reports said police also found quantities of lethal bacteria in one of the group's compounds, suggesting the group might have been trying to prepare for germ warfare.

Police would not comment on a report in the newspaper Mainichi that the group was preparing for germ warfare but said they found a large amount of peptone, a kind of protein used to grow bacteria cultures.

The newspaper also said authorities seized quantities of Clostridium botulinum, a kind of bacteria which produces botulism poisoning.

Testimony of limo driver backs up several theories

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson stood tall in court Tuesday and smiled as a limousine driver told jurors the brawny ex-football player was the same size as a shadowy figure the driver saw entering Simpson's home the night of a double murder.

Simpson whispered constantly to his attorneys and jurors took notes as Allan Park, a key witness in the prosecution's case against Simpson, offered other potentially incriminating details:

- Park said he saw no white Ford Bronco, either in the driveway or on the street, when he pulled up to Simpson's gate at 10:22 the night of the killings.

- During the limo drive to the airport on a mild, foggy night, Simpson repeatedly complained he was hot; he rolled down a rear window and turned on the air conditioning.

- Simpson was protective of a small black bag the limo driver saw on Simpson's driveway but did not see at the airport when Simpson helped unload his luggage prior to catching a late-night flight to Chicago.

With time and a motive as key issues, the prosecution also disclosed it has a cellular phone record indicating Simpson called the home of ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson the afternoon of June 12, 1994 before their daughter's dance recital.

It was the first time prosecutors suggested Simpson had any contact with Brown Simpson, other than at the late afternoon recital, on the day of her death.

Park also acknowledged that although Simpson was running late, he was relaxed enough to sign an autograph at the airport and to tell Park to add a 20 percent tip to the limo bill.

The driver also related how Simpson took possession of a small black bag that was among the pieces of luggage to be loaded into the limousine.

"He said, 'I'll get it,'" Park recalled but said he wasn't sure if Simpson placed the bag in the car or in the trunk.

The only thing certain at the end of his direct testimony was that he never saw the bag again after leaving the Simpson estate.

Simpson's former house guest, Brian "Kato" Kaelin left the stand Tuesday after five days, most of which were filled with tense prosecution questioning.

Park offered crucial testimony about the spot on Rockingham where the Bronco was supposedly parked, explaining he found Simpson's estate by the house number painted on the curb and did not see any vehicle there at 10:22 p.m.

Clark provided photographic evidence to back him up, displaying a shot of the white Bronco as it was found the next morning, parked just a few feet in front of the house number.

Park testified Tuesday that he drove his stretch limousine past that section of curb again at 10:39 p.m. to look through a gate into Simpson's driveway — and again didn't see the Bronco.

Prosecutors contend Brown Simpson and Goldman were killed about 10:15 p.m.

SMALL-TOWN VIOLENCE

Tragedies are not a game

Last Tuesday in suburban Montclair, N.J., a lone gunman named Christopher Green walked into a tiny post office and killed four people. This event occurred on the same day that Colin Ferguson, the gunman who massacred six people on a commuter train in suburban Long Island, N.Y., was sentenced to consecutive life sentences totaling 200 years. Aside from the mindlessness of the killings, the one thing these two events have in common is that they illustrate a disturbing trend in American violence.

Suburbs like Montclair are populated by middle- and upper middle-class Americans trying to create lives free from the urban criminality they perceive as a threat to their lives. Now the threat has moved out of the city and followed the money into bedroom communities.

As the Republican primary approaches, the issue of crime will be brought to the fore and death-penalty advocates will likely find a strong argument in their favor with these two cases. Ferguson, who acted as his own defense, was convicted of the slayings just after the death penalty was reinstated in New York and did not have to face it. Green will almost certainly face execution in New Jersey.

In both cases, the attackers took their victims' lives in an arbitrary fashion, yet death-penalty advocates argue that if all was right with the world, they would both be put to death. If these murders were committed in the Bronx, N.Y., or in Newark, N.J., they would hardly be news at all. But they happened in places where wealthy powerful voters live, and as such, they provide ample fodder for political debate.

When Republican hopefuls like Phil Gramm, Bob Dole and Lamar Alexander (all of whom are death-penalty supporters) visit these two vital states, they will likely pontificate as to how — if they were president — both of these men would have been put to death. This argument is a powerful one and is likely to capitalize on a fear that is growing in places like Montclair. The random nature of the killings and the pain they have caused the families of the victims will probably not be discussed by the Republican hopefuls. Instead, they will focus on how these wealthy communities could benefit from legislation providing expedient prosecution and ultimately capital punishment.

In Montclair, the quiet tree-lined plaza and the commuter train station across the street from the post office belie the horrible violence of Green's actions. An entire community is now grieving over the broken peace that was built so quietly over the years. Let's hope that the aspiring presidential candidates show some respect for these communities and avoid turning their tragedies into a political football game.

REPUBLICANS AND WELFARE REFORM

Opposition from within

Something interesting is happening in Congress. Cutting welfare has caused debate among supporters of those who proposed the plan in the first place. Republicans find they have a problem that the media has only touched on so far. The reform envisioned by the "Contract With America" presents a "family cap" policy that denies increases in aid for additions to families already on welfare.

The plan has aroused opposition from all sides, creating a controversy within a controversy. Anti-abortion groups argue that the plan will place economic pressure on poor women to have abortions. This fear of poor women being encouraged to have abortions is voiced by the Catholic Church as well. While both of these groups allegedly speak out for the rights of these women, they're mainly taking advantage of the opportunity to implement their beliefs on a vulnerable group. Neither the Catholic Church nor anti-abortionists oppose or sympathize with the economic hardships these families will face; they simply cut to the chase of preventing their worst nightmare: abortions.

Putting both anti- and pro-abortion incentives aside, the battle boils down to either denying poor women financial aid to take care of their children or denying them rights over their own bodies. Either option clearly leaves them at an even greater disadvantage.

Various senators oppose the program as well, citing that it doesn't offer welfare recipients additional education opportunities nor does it provide intensive job counseling. This training would equip them with skills to better themselves in the circumstances that hold them back. Yet because the national family cap policy fails to provide any supplementary or replacement programs, these women will be less capable of improving the quality of their lives.

Opposition is also voiced by the National Organization for Women, which points out that the program ignores the other 80 to 90 percent of poor children who will be given an even more difficult start without the financial coverage.

While Congress has already passed the welfare reform bill, criticism from their own supporters demonstrates the seriousness in the program's flaws. It's almost amusing to watch as the Republican Party is hassled by some of their own.

Think what would happen if we all did ...

Jennifer Harbury is a 43-year-old graduate of Harvard Law School.

In the photographs I have seen of her, she looks poised and self-contained. In fact, with her arched eyebrows, luminous eyes and wide forehead, she looks a lot like those women sitting in chairs that Henri Matisse always painted. But Harbury is not made up of layers of pigment on canvas, and she doesn't spend a lot of time sitting down.

When Harbury's husband, a Guatemalan Mayan rebel commander, disappeared in 1992, she was told by the military that he was dead.

When she heard rumors that he was in fact being tortured in jail, she demanded that the military produce his body. They exhumed the body said to be her husband's and discovered that it was that of another murdered rebel.

Harbury demanded to know what had happened to her husband. The Guatemalan government told her they didn't know. She contacted the U.S. State Department. They said there was nothing they could do, but Harbury was unwilling to accept this.

For two years she fought two governments for information concerning her husband. She flew back and forth between Washington and Guatemala and fasted in an effort to force officials to give her information. At one point, 30 days into a fast, the Guatemalan military dragged her into the jungle for hours to show her a body they claimed would be her husband.

She knew that they were hoping she would lose consciousness so they would have an excuse to hospitalize her, so she steeled herself and barely made it to the site. The body was not her husband's.

Last week, Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., came forward with the information Harbury has been looking for: Her husband was killed soon after his capture but not before being brutally interrogated in prison. Torricelli was able to discover this because the man who had supervised the killing was a CIA informant, who is also said to have killed an American hotel keeper in 1992. The CIA, as well as who knows who else in Washington, had Harbury's answers all along, while she was starving herself to the brink of death just for the chance to ask the questions.

Outraged by their studied silence, Harbury is demanding congressional hearings and may file criminal charges here on top of the ones she has filed in Guatemala. The CIA, which all of a sudden can't stop talking, denies wrongdoing, saying that it is allowed under law to protect its sources — apparently, even when those sources kill American citizens.

Harbury is the type of hero we don't often get to read about: smart, brazen, unrelenting and female. She overcame enormous odds to expose the truth and is going to persevere until she finds justice. In an age where Forrest Gump is presented as a role model, she is a welcome alternative — someone who effects change rather than rolling with it.

The writer Annie Lamott tells the story of an 8-year-old boy whose little sister is dying of leukemia. The boy is told that without a blood transfusion his sister will die and that he may be compatible. He is tested, and it turns out that he can be the blood donor. His parents ask him if he will give a pint of blood to his sister, and he tells them that he needs to think about it overnight. In the morning he agrees. His parents take him to the hospital and he is put on a gurney next to his sister and his blood is transfused directly to her through an IV needle. He lies there quietly as the blood is dripping out of him until the doctor comes over and asks him how he is doing.

"How soon until I start to die?" the boy asks.

True courage is a rare trait. Harbury could not have her husband's body, so she fought instead for the truth. Because she demanded accountability, President Clinton announced last Friday that anybody in the CIA who knew about the murder would be fired. This may or may not happen, but there are certainly a lot of people sweating while they wait to see if it does.

I saw Bonnie Campbell speak at the World Women and Media Conference last weekend. The theme of her talk was that women need to tell their stories. Harbury told hers. Because she did, the ineptitudes of two governments have been exposed and the truth of her husband's death has been revealed — all because one woman stood up and refused to be beaten down.

Think what would happen if we all did.

'Unfair' affirmative action is on the way out

When even the head of the Democratic Leadership Council says that affirmative action on the basis of race and sex is "patently unfair" and has helped lead to a breakdown of society, you know that reverse discrimination practices are doomed. Connecticut Sen. Joseph Lieberman told the National Press Club that "you can't defend policies that are based on group preferences as opposed to individual opportunities, which is what America has always been about."

What do you mean, you can't defend those policies? Reverse discrimination on the basis of race and sex has been the centerpiece of Democratic Party ideology and politics for the past 30 years. These policies have had such blanket support by the media, academia and major opinion-makers that Republicans have been cowed into paying lip service to them all these years.

Until the 1994 elections, that is, when affirmative action turned out to be the sleeper issue that elected a new Republican majority. All of a sudden, trendsetting California is about to pass an initiative banning preferential treatment on the basis of "race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin" in public employment, education or contracting.

Affirmative action was instituted by Democratic presidents, politicians and judges primarily to help the blacks, but the major beneficiaries have been women. Employers know that they must hire their quota of female employees or they face bureaucratic harassment and expensive lawsuits.

The first reason why affirmative action is wrong is that it is based on the theory of group rights as opposed to the American tradition of individual rights. As Lieberman implied, the whole concept of group rights is just plain un-American.

The second reason why affirmative action is wrong is that the woman receiving the benefit is not a woman who was discriminated against. Nobody should be entitled to receive a remedy for an injury suffered by someone else. Women are not a monolithic, cohesive community in which a grievance suffered by one woman can be remedied by a preference given to another woman.

The third reason why affirmative action is wrong is that it is based on the feminist notion that women and men are fungible, that there is no difference between the behavior of women and men in the labor force, and that anything less than a 50-50 male-female distribution in all job categories is "underrepresentation" and proof that the employer discriminated against women. This is false. Despite 30 years of equal employment opportunity statutes and aggressive enforcement through affirmative action, the majority of women still avoid a list of occupations that require physical strength, risky and unpleasant working conditions or 60-hour workweeks.

Employers should not be forced to preferentially hire less-qualified women in job categories which few women want and men are better at anyway. We should not be forced into the Procrustean model demanded by the feminists seeking a gender-neutral society.

The fifth reason why affirmative action is wrong is that it is an open invitation to blackmail and extortion. When an employer is served with a lawsuit on behalf of a woman he didn't hire or promote or award a contract to, the employer's lawyer will tell him it's cheaper to pay off the woman than to defend the case. That's the costly way the system has been working for three decades.

The sixth reason why affirmative action is wrong is that it is demeaning to women. Women should be willing to compete equally with men on the basis of equal opportunity and should neither expect nor accept preferential treatment.

In most jobs, women should be able to compete equally because they are just as smart. If women are hired by affirmative action, they will never be recognized for their merit but will always be considered to have gotten where they are "just because they are women."

In jobs where most women cannot compete equally with men, such as those that require physical strength, women should not be hired unless they meet the same standards and pass the same tests as men. We should abolish from our society the outrageous practice of "gender-norming," which means falsifying test results to make it appear that women perform equally with men when they don't.

Gender-norming is widespread in the military and in jobs such as firefighters. Women do not meet the same standards as men; women compete with other women for designated female slots (otherwise known as quotas).

The seventh reason why affirmative action is wrong is that it creates enormous resentment and animosity in the workplace. Everybody knows the system is fundamentally unjust, and this poison produces contempt for the hypocrisy of pretending that injustice is justice.

There is no more justification for giving women preferential treatment today than there would be for giving women two votes on the rationale that, long ago, women were denied the vote. And that's ridiculous.

Only wealthy protected by proposed bill

To the Editor:

At the behest of Iowa utilities, the state Legislature is considering a bill that would repeal state support for renewable energy sources (Senate No. 2653). I think this is a mistake for Iowa and would harm the state's economy in the long run.

Iowa utilities currently produce almost 90 percent of their electricity from coal plants, with the remaining 10 percent from a single 25-year-old nuclear plant in Palo, Iowa. When they need more power, they buy it from other states.

In 1983, the state Legislature passed a law requiring utilities to buy 2 percent of their new power needs from renewable energy sources like wind, biomass, solar and small-scale hydroelectric plants. Private developers, called independent power producers, would develop wind farms or biomass turbines and sell the power to the utilities. The law also required the utilities to pay the developers about 6 cents for each kilowatt hour, about what it would cost for the utility to generate its own power from a new coal plant. The price for this clean power would be fixed for 33 years.

To put this in perspective, Iowa residential rate payers pay about 8 cents per kilowatt hour. With fuel charges and taxes, it comes to about 11 cents.

For the next few months or years, the utilities may be able to buy cheap power generated from coal plants in other states for about 2 or 3 cents per kilowatt hour. But if Iowa utilities can't generate power so cheaply, what makes them think they'll continue to get such a bargain? This short-term windfall has no bearing on the long-term price and economic health of the state of Iowa.

And it is in the long term that Iowa truly stands to benefit from renewables. On the negative side, pollution control requirements — such as those in the Clean Air Act of 1990 — make coal more expensive all the time. Safety costs for the aging Duane Arnold nuclear plant along with decommissioning and waste storage costs are all likely to increase greatly in the future.

On the positive side, wind and biomass energy create jobs and economic development within the state, especially for farmers, who need the help most. Renewable energy is a new "cash crop" for financially strapped farmers. And since the contracts under the law are fixed for 33 years, utilities avoid the risk of fuel price increases, additional pollution controls and the variable cost of out-of-state power. By setting up renewable infrastructures now at a reasonable price, the state will receive growing benefits as the price of wind, biomass and solar power declines, as it has done consistently since the 1970s.

The bill proposed by Sens. Gronstal, Deluher, Lundby and Redfern and Rep. Larson would sell out the long-term economic health of the state for the short-term benefit of cheap, dirty power. It protects the wealth of utility investors at the expense of the wealth of the people of Iowa.

Continue with message to 'ultraliberals'

To the Editor:

Sen. Elaine Szymoniak again is allowed to "sit on" legislation which a vast majority of Iowans favor: parental notification in the case of a minor girl seeking an abortion. Szymoniak has nothing to lose since she is not planning to run for re-election next term.

Maybe we need to push for legislation which allows us to fire a legislator who consistently goes against the will of those who pay their wages.

Equally at fault here are the leaders of the Senate who allow this kind of single-handed "veto by default." I'm referring to Sen. Wally Horn, Senate majority leader, and Sen. Leonard Boswell, president of the Senate, and the others who could band together and stop this madness. They forget who elects them and who pays their wages as they promote their own personal agenda.

If the ultraliberals continue on this track, I hope you will remember in November 1996 and continue the message we sent to them in 1994.

Union chapter supports CAF

To the Editor:

The Hawkeye chapter of the Iowa Civil Liberties Union has watched with concern the ongoing struggle between Dean Phillip Jones' office and the Campaign for Academic Freedom. It has seemed to us for some time that this group has been treated differently from other student groups which display materials on the Pentacrest. We are especially disturbed by the information that on a day when several groups — in solidarity with the Campaign for Academic Freedom — set up their tables on the Pentacrest along with CAF, only CAF was photographed and threatened with censure. In fact, none of the groups had official permission that day.

One can only conclude from the information that this group is being singled out because they have led the opposition to the homophobically induced so-called sexually explicit materials policy, a policy the UI Faculty Council has itself voted against.

We urge that CAF be reinstated in good standing. Meanwhile, we watch this situation with deepening concern.

Harm has already been done

To the Editor:

Thankfully, Iowa did not join the ever-increasing ranks of states that believe that it takes violence to end violence. Unfortunately, this issue is not over. The only way that we can put the death penalty to rest once and for all is to become informed citizens. Iowa ranks last (tying with North Dakota) in the national per capita murder rate. In fact, since 1978, the murder rate has declined 68 percent. And recent statistics rank Iowa 45th in the general crime category. There doesn't seem to be the need to change a system which is working very well already. In Iowa, we already have a death penalty — people who are convicted of a Class A felony are sentenced to die in prison.

In a letter I received from Rep. Brian Coon — he is the former proponent of the death penalty who changed his mind in a dramatic moment on the House floor — he listed the three reasons which changed his mind: "First, I came to the true realization that no matter how a death penalty is implemented, it cannot be fairly and equally applied. ... Second, the fear of executing one innocent person was just too great for me to press the 'aye' button. ... Third, as Representative (John) Connors pointed out during debate (the bill that was before the House) values certain lives more than others."

Student government candidates should declare party affiliation

To the Editor:

Student participation in the recent student government elections was remarkably low; the 3 percent voter turnout raises questions about whether most students see the election of student government officials as something that actually makes a difference in their lives. I have a suggestion, however, that might increase the level of interest in these elections: Require the candidates to declare their party affiliation on the ballot.

It is true that before the election the candidates declared their reasons for running and their plans if elected. But in fact, most of these declarations seemed to be little more than relatively indistinguishable statements of good intentions and high hopes to serve the student body effectively. Where the candidates do not appear to be sharply divided over either issues or values, it becomes hard to see the election as much more than some kind of student government beauty contest. Where little appears to be at stake in the outcome, so long as somebody is elected, it is hard to care very much who wins. This is unfortunate because in fact student government representatives do have a role to play, both in dealing with the board of regents and in allocating student funds.

Most students do not have the time or inclination to become expert in student government issues. Information on the political affiliation of the candidates printed on the ballot would offer some — albeit limited — insight to the voter into the political beliefs and values of those candidates. It might also encourage student partisan organizations to work harder to get out the vote for their candidates. Nonpartisan elections are a sure recipe for voter apathy. Student government is by its nature political; it's time to put the politics back into student government.

STREET

100 feet from the intersection of Highway 1 and Interstate 80, where the Highlander Inn Restaurant & Convention Center is located. He then saw Street's car pull into his lane.

"I hit my brakes ... as hard as I could," Pence said, choking back tears. "There was nothing I could do but hit the brakes."

Pence said in the moments before he realized his snowplow was going to hit the car, he never saw Street's face.

"I was shocked and hoping he'd look at me in time to stop," he said. "I never saw his face; I only saw the back of his head."

Defense attorneys honed in on this testimony, insinuating Street might not have been paying attention to the oncoming snowplow when he pulled out of the driveway.

Pence — who has two daughters, ages 2 and 4, and a wife, Diana, who is pregnant — crossed his arms and wrung his hands through much of his testimony.

"At one point, I remember looking down at my speedometer, and it was at 35 or 40 miles per hour," he said.

Pence said he still has nightmares "once or twice a week" in which the accident flashes through his head and he cannot fall asleep again afterward. Pence and his wife went through counseling following the accident, he testified.

However, Randy Larson, the Street family's attorney, reminded the jury of three experts who testified last week that Pence was driving about 60 mph. A defense witness, James Summers, said Pence was driving at least 55 mph.

Although he was convicted of driving 52 mph in a 45 mph zone on the night of the accident, Pence disputed the testimony.

"I don't believe I was going any faster than 45 miles per hour," he said. "I don't believe any of it."

Pence never missed work as a result of the accident, but he said he can no longer drive a snowplow without experiencing trauma.

"It has an effect on my operating a snowplow anymore," he said. "It's something that I enjoyed doing, and it's a break from the monotonous stuff you do in the summertime. (The accident) has taken away from that."

Pence said when he began driving trucks for the county in November 1986, he was given no formal training. However, he said he had driven snowplows for seven years prior to the accident.

Tuesday's testimony also centered on the placement of the snowplow's lights. Johnson County engineer Douglas Fredericks said the county is exempt from complying with federal regulations concerning the regulation of snowplow lights.

However, the plaintiffs said the vehicle's lights — which are on the cab of the plow instead of on the hood — may have created an optical illusion, causing Street to believe the snowplow was farther away than it appeared.

Walter Kasmatka, an engineer and highway lighting expert with General Electric in Cleveland, said the lights on the light bar attached to the top of Johnson County's snowplows — including Pence's — are safe. Placing the lights and taillights in alternate positions would be less practical, he said.

Although standards say headlights should be moved to the outermost extremity of a vehicle, Kasmatka said it would be almost impossible to move the lights any farther, as the defense suggested. "If you smack it around with a hammer, you would maybe push it out another half-inch or so," he said. "And the hood is just a bad place to put them."

Kasmatka, who is paid $1,200 for his court appearances, also said it would have been impossible for Pence to have stopped his snowplow in the short time after he saw Street pull into his lane.

"My point in saying this is that at 75 feet, it's too late. No reaction is going to happen that fast," he testified. "All you're going to say is, 'Oh my God, isn't that close?' and then it's over."

Studies suggest that about one-third of all cancer in the United States could be prevented by better diets. Even though the precise nutrients involved in cancer are not known, research suggests that people who eat plenty of fruits, vegetables and fiber and relatively little fat have a reduced cancer risk.

Getting adults to change their eating habits is difficult. The California Department of Health Services conducted a public education campaign to encourage people to eat at least five servings of fruits and vegetables daily.

Susan Foerster, the department's chief, told the conference that while the program was going on from 1989 to 1993, consumption remained unchanged at just under four servings a day.

OPPORTUNITY

This can only be achieved by employing a diverse work force, Hayden said.

"Even if the government were to do away with affirmative action programs, we would not do away with it," he said. "Our (affirmative action) goals are not translated into fixed figures or quotas, but we do this because we recognize the value in it."

Dennis Wright, general manager of Best Buy, 1963 Broadway, said practicing affirmative action when hiring is simply good business sense. Best Buy is not federally required to implement quotas because its work population already meets government criteria.

When deciding who to hire between two equally qualified people, one man and one woman, Best Buy's management will offer more consideration to the woman — but only if the specific department is in need of a larger population of women.

A diverse employee population promotes a more comfortable shopping environment for multicultural customers.

"We practice fair hiring," Wright said. "Our internal working population must meet the needs represented by a diverse shopping population."

The most recent national census indicated alternative views need to be represented more than ever in the local and national work forces due to the increasing number of minorities in the country.

Racial and ethnic minority groups are growing seven times as fast as the non-Hispanic white majority, the 1990 census showed. The white population declined in 16 states during the 1980s, while minority populations in 41 states increased by double digit percentages.

Diversity in America surpasses racial and ethnic boundaries. Nearly 45 million physically handicapped individuals live in the nation, making them the largest minority group. It is estimated 10 percent of the population are members of the gay, lesbian or bisexual community. One-fourth of the U.S. population is over 50 years old, and people 65 and older outnumber teen-agers.

Rick Innis, human resources manager of United Technology Automotive Esd, Highway 6 East, which produces instrument panels for cars, said the plant practices voluntary affirmative action because encouraging diversity in the workplace improves worker morale.

"Diversity in the workplace is a positive asset because it allows us to bring different cultures and ideas into our workplace," Innis said. "Even if the government were to get rid of these programs, business would continue here as usual because using affirmative action in the work place helps make it easy for workers to understand people's differences."

tem the same as before and will automatically be sent to either Red or Black, depending on the workload of each machine. Blue will continue to handle all log-ons and file storage.

Before the spring break, the single Blue machine was getting so bogged down that Weeg programmers decided to allow no more than 220 people on at one time until after the upgrade.

"The situation regarding the workload on Blue was deemed a crisis in February," Brenner said. "The main problems were performance and access. If we wanted everyone to be on, then the system would be so slow that no one could get anything done. So we did what we didn't want: We limited the number of users on at a single time."

The Blue Cluster officially began operating Saturday, and Monday it handled 342 people who were logged on at the same time, Brenner said. Weeg plans to make several more changes, and when the system is complete, it will be able to handle about 400 people at once, Brenner said.

UI senior Tim Wood said he had problems logging on to his Blue e-mail account before break and he knew Weeg was planning to do something to address the problem.

"I noticed all their systemwide messages about improving performance but nothing seemed to be helping," Wood said. "Then poof! I get back from break, and we've got two more colors. I'm impressed and pleased."

Currently, the Red machine is on loan from IBM until Weeg gets a permanent machine in late April, said Rex Pruess, Weeg system support manager. The Black machine will also be upgraded to a higher level to make it equal in power with Blue and Red.

While adding two new machines will allow more people to use the Blue cluster for now, Pruess said he doesn't know how long it will take before the new system becomes overloaded.

"Our hope is that this will take us through the next fiscal year at least," he said. "Anyone who says he can predict the growth of the Internet is a blind man."

BIG BOY

dismembering him. They took the head and cut it off. Somebody else took an arm, a leg," Scanlon said.

A tipster led police to the group.

"The long saga is over," said Dave Nelson, manager of the restaurant where the statue was purloined. "We know who killed Big Boy. We can all rest a little bit easier."

In an interview after the Big Boy bandits turned themselves in, Martinez said he knew stealing the statue was "a pretty stupid thing to do," but added, "It was a lot of fun."

Earth Tip

If 10% of Americans purchased products with less plastic packaging just 10% of the time, we could eliminate 144 million pounds of plastic from our landfills.

Recycling at Work!

In October 1994 local Wal-Mart associates and families in Corpus Christi, TX, teamed up with the Lever Brothers Company and the National Park Foundation in the "Recycling at Work" Program to demonstrate end uses for recycled materials and emphasize the importance of recyclables. Volunteers helped revitalize the beach area at Padre Island National Seashore by assembling sun shelters, benches and picnic tables, all made from 100% recycled plastic lumber. Thanks to "Recycling at Work" efforts, an equivalent of 1.3 million plastic bottles have been kept out of landfills and instead are helping to beautify "America's playground."

SMALL THINGS ADD UP!

Many of us have become thorough label-checkers regarding the food we buy, and it's just as easy to check products to assess their degree of "environmental responsibility." Caring for our earth starts with AWARENESS — of the products we use, of the ways we handle waste and of the effects our choices have on the future.

At Wal-Mart, we are committed to doing everything we can to care for our environment. In order to help our customers make the same commitment, we offer products like those pictured here — many are NATURAL or recycled or carry recycled packaging.

Shopping your local Wal-Mart means you can be sure that we make choices to help you make choices that make a DIFFERENCE!

LOOK FOR THE SIGN

The next time you're at Wal-Mart, look for our "Green Signs." Printed on recycled plastic and paper, they describe the "environmental responsibility" of some of the products we carry and were developed to help keep our customers informed. When you choose environmentally responsible merchandise, you send a message to manufacturers that you care about the environment.

We work closely with our vendor partners in order to provide you with products and packaging that make your recycling efforts a little bit easier!

If you're in an area like Madera, CA, where residents are required to recycle at least 25% of their garbage, you'll appreciate Wal-Mart's conversion to large, blue, shopping bags. It's just one way we support community recycling efforts. "Our customers were really excited about the blue bags," says Green Coordinator Gail, "especially after the recycling law went into effect. Besides offering the bags, we've created displays of 'earth-friendly' products to help our customers become more aware."

Gail

Kids F.A.C.E.®

The youth environmental movement is alive and well with Kids For A Clean Environment (Kids F.A.C.E.), a non-profit corporation that educates children and presents their views on environmental issues.

Created in 1989 by then 9-year-old Melissa

Poe as a club for children, Kids F.A.C.E. began with a membership of six and has grown to include over 200,000. Members work together to better the environment, and one of their biggest projects, the International Kids Earth Flag, began in 1992.

Flag squares from Kids Who Care Ecology Club, Canterbury Elementary School, Greendale, WI expressing their feelings about the earth. By the time it is assembled, it will be the largest flag in the world made by kids, and on April 22 — the 25th anniversary of Earth Day — members will unveil the flag in a ceremony in Washington, D.C.

Kids F.A.C.E. is proof that one person can make a difference. Just ask Melissa Poe.

"Having raised, educated, and married off four daughters, I've always had a sharp eye for quality at bargain prices. When Eagle opened I decided to give them a try, and now several years later they know me by name. I love going to Eagle because it truly is one-stop shopping. You can plan a dinner party, develop film, and even mail a package. And the great values and friendly employees always ensure it will be an enjoyable experience. I can't imagine going anywhere else!"

Stolen Celtic banner is returned to the rafters

BOSTON (AP) — Police acting on a tip raided the bedroom of a Melrose teen-ager and found — in plain view — the stolen green-and-white banner bearing the retired number of Reggie Lewis.

The boy was not at home, but his apparently stunned father let in the police on Tuesday at 1 p.m. A half-hour later, police said, the banner was on its way back to Boston Garden, where it had been raised to the rafters last Wednesday night and stolen three days later.

Boston Garden officials who vowed to recover the banner by Tuesday night's hockey game had offered a $5,000 reward for information and set up a hotline for tips. A call to that hotline led to the recovery.

Officials say the 12-foot-by-15-foot banner was stolen some time between 6:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Saturday. Exactly how the theft occurred remained a mystery.

His best year was 1993, when he led Green Bay with 654 yards.

Hawkeyes spring into action

Eligibility isn't a problem for Hawks

Patrick Regan
The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry enters the '95 spring football season Thursday with a secret weapon: A new set of UI academic eligibility standards.

"We got the rules changed. We don't have anybody ineligible this spring," Fry said Tuesday at a press conference. "We had seven (players) miss last spring that were eligible by NCAA rules."

Fry was very vocal during the '94 football season, complaining that the Hawkeyes were at a disadvantage when players like linebacker Vernon Rollins were declared ineligible by the UI, despite meeting NCAA and Big Ten academic standards.

But Fry refused to elaborate on Tuesday about either the new rules or his past frustrations.

"Y'all have heard enough about that story," he said.

Fry would only say the Hawkeyes' academic progress has improved and all his players, except running back Reggie Williams, are eligible to participate in spring practice.

"This past semester academically may have been the best we've ever had," Fry said.

Owners' deal draws mixed reactions

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baseball owners left the strike talks Tuesday, and players arriving for a two-day union meeting had a mixed reaction to the teams' latest offer.

"I assume there's room for negotiation," union head Donald Fehr said. "If there isn't, we're in trouble."

With the season scheduled to start with replacement players Sunday night, it appeared a final decision to begin play wouldn't be made until the weekend.

Fehr, who had a 90-minute meeting with acting commissioner Bud Selig, said the union will respond to owners Wednesday or Thursday and he expected talks to resume then.

"Something's going to happen,"

Kansas City Royals pitcher David Cone said before the union's executive board began its meeting Tuesday night. "It's going to be real hairy the next few days."

Selig, at a news conference Monday night, repeatedly refused to say whether opening day could be pushed back. The teams' new proposal offered to keep the system of salary arbitration and free agency that was in effect during the expired collective bargaining agreement.

"I think it is fair to say that the series of suggestions we have received represents some movement by the clubs," Fehr said. "I think it would be incorrect of me to suggest that we thought it was substantial."

Management's plan called for a 50 percent luxury tax on the portions of payrolls above $44 million, which was 108 percent of the average in 1994. The sides would play this season under the old rules and the tax would start in 1996.

"This proposal is much less than the clubs hoped to achieve, and I'm

Iowa wants to avenge Mankato loss at home

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team will take a break from its Big Ten Conference schedule today to host one game against Mankato State.

The game is scheduled for 2 p.m. at Iowa Field.

The Hawkeyes, who finished a four-game series with Michigan on Monday, will play host to Minnesota for doubleheaders on Saturday and Sunday.

Mankato comes into Iowa City sporting a 7-6 record and four straight losses.

The Mavericks began the season by winning six of their first seven, but have since hit a cold spell.

Iowa (9-7, 2-2) will be the first NCAA Division I school the Mavericks have faced this year.

Although Mankato State, located in Minnesota, isn't a big name college program, the Mavericks are still capable of competing with the Hawkeyes.

"(Mankato will) be good, they're always good," Iowa coach Duane Banks said.

Hawkeye players may not know a lot about Mankato, but they are aware of one thing.

"I know that (Mankato) beat us last year, so we know that they can play," Iowa freshman Eric Martinez said.

The Mavericks defeated Iowa 10-9 last year at Iowa Field.

Mankato is led by senior outfielder Ethan Anderson. In 12 games this year, Anderson is hitting .471 with seven RBI. He's also stolen five bases in five attempts.

First baseman Wade Shelstad and third baseman Bryan Zollman are the Mavericks' leading run producers with 10 RBI a piece.

Iowa aims to light up defenses, scoreboards

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The days of seeing the Kinnick Stadium scoreboard light up for 50 or more points may be making a comeback.

The Iowa Hawkeyes return an explosive group of offensive players from a team that put 98 points on the board in the final two games of last season.

The quarterback dilemma that tore the Hawkeyes apart last season is not even a worry this year.

Iowa returns two veteran quarterbacks in sophomore Matt Sherman and junior Ryan Driscoll, but unlike last year, there is no controversy as to who is No. 1.

"Sherman is the number one quarterback," Fry said in simple terms at his Tuesday press conference.

"He's very mature, very calm and very intelligent."

Kicking Things Off

Part 1 of 3

Sherman started the final two games last season after coming back from a broken bone in his foot to orchestrate a Hawkeye comeback at Purdue.

Sherman finished the season with 736 yards passing, hitting on 71 percent of his passes.

Driscoll earned the No. 1 spot in last year's season opener and started the first six Iowa ball games before being knocked out with a broken collarbone. He will assume the No. 2 spot this season.

Mike Duprey, who started three games last season, chose not to return for his senior season.

Jordan explodes for 55

Michael Jordan drives to the hoop during first period action at New York's Madison Square Garden Tuesday. Jordan had 35 points for the Bulls at the half en route to a season-high 55.

Bulls escape New York, 113-111

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Forget that stuff about Michael Jordan needing eight or nine games to be what he once was: The past is now.

In his fifth game back from retirement, Jordan scored 55 points Tuesday night in Chicago's 113-111 victory, the highest point total in the NBA this season and the most against New York in the current Madison Square Garden, a place where Jordan has tortured the Knicks plenty of times in years past.

"I didn't feel tense," he said. "I felt very relaxed. A lot of times I come in here and wanted to do so well and get a little too enthusiastic. I came in and had low expectations and had a pretty good game."

Pretty good?

By the end of three quarters, Jordan had 49 points, and only the Knicks' desperation double-teaming in the fourth quarter kept him in check. And when the double-team prevented him from hitting the game-winner, as he did against Atlanta in his previous game, Jordan got the ball to Bill Wennington, who stuffed it in with 3.1 seconds left.

In an atmosphere as hyped as a playoff game, the two teams currently slotted to meet each other in the first round went down to the last seconds. Jordan scored his 54th and 55th points on a 12-footer with 25.8 seconds to play, giving the Bulls a 111-109 lead.

JORDAN

After John Starks tied the game with two free throws, Jordan, facing Starks and Ewing on a double-team, threaded a pass to Wennington under the basket. The dunk gave Chicago the lead with 3.1 seconds left.

"I'm a very aggressive guy," Jordan said. "My first initiative is to score. I'd be lying if I said I came out to pass the ball — I came out to score. I was going to make them stop me from scoring, and they did."

After a timeout, Starks fell down at midcourt after taking the inbound pass with Jordan guarding him. He was called for a back-court violation that cost the Knicks their last chance.

It was an unfortunate but fitting end of the game for Starks, who could only watch all night as Jordan hoisted perfect jumpers over his outstretched hands.

"I tried. I tried to throw everything I had at him," Starks said. "It was a matter of time before he played one of those games like you just weren't there."

Fry attributed the Hawkeyes' academic progress, in part, to a special treatment for missing or showing up late for class.

"We call it s.c. 600," Fry joked. "That stands for stadium climb at six in the morning. That's a pretty good motivator."

While the Hawkeyes haven't been hit with any academic difficulties, injuries are another story. Fry said several players will Whichever starting pitcher Mankato coach Dean Bowyer decides to send to the mound, Iowa will be in for a battle.

Smith laments Carolina injuries

Tom Foreman Jr.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Someone asked Dean Smith about North Carolina's health, and was he ever sorry he got the answer.

North Carolina (28-5) is making final preparations to face Arkansas (31-5) in the Final Four in Seattle on Saturday. The Tar Heels are doing it despite some bumps and bruises that make practicing for the Razorbacks a little difficult.

To find out about the health of his team, Smith dispatched an assistant in the sports information department to trainer Marc Davis. The assistant returned with half a piece of notebook paper.

Smith took his glasses out of his jacket, looked at the paper and rattled off the problems. On the list were starters Donald Williams, Jeff McInnis and Rasheed Wallace, and reserve Pearce Landry.

"Donald Williams, sprained left ankle, status unknown, hasn't seen him yet today," Smith read from Davis' impromptu report. "Jeff McInnis, pulled groin muscle, not any better than yesterday."

"I hope this gets better," Smith said at his news conference Tuesday.

It didn't. "Rasheed Wallace, sprained ankle. Improved over yesterday. Pearce Landry sprained right wrist, slightly improved over yesterday by wrist is still tender."

Against Kentucky, it seemed like everyone wearing a North Carolina uniform was grabbing for their legs in pain at some point during the day. Dante Calabria, who sat out part of January with an ankle sprain, hurt his leg as well in the victory over the Wildcats.

Smith already had an inkling of the team's miseries before his news conference. Although the team had Sunday off after winning the NCAA Southeast Regional, it wasn't enough time to allow the

Associated Press

Tar Heels to heal.

Williams didn't practice Monday, and McInnis and Wallace were limited to halfcourt drills, "which basically means you don't get much done," Smith said. Landry has been able to work only on his defense and not his shooting.

"We do go nine deep with people who have played," Smith said. "So, you take away three and we don't really have the competition we would like."

Specifically, that hinders North Carolina's time to prepare for the Arkansas pressure defense because there aren't enough bodies in practice.

"We probably have nine or 10 guys healthy who can run fullcourt," fifth-year senior Pat Sullivan said. "It's kind of difficult to prepare for their pressure defense because we don't have the guys who are going to be playing out there actually experiencing what it's going to be like."

However, it's Final Four week, and Calabria says there's no time to mope about aches and pains.

"This is the time that, if you're hurt, you're going to play anyway," Calabria said. "Other than, maybe, a broken ankle or a broken arm when you can't play, I expect to be out there."

Eagles replace Walker with Watters

PHILADELPHIA — To the Philadelphia Eagles, a Super Bowl title is worth a Heisman Trophy any day, particularly when there's an eight-year age difference.

The Eagles on Tuesday released Herschel Walker and introduced Ricky Watters, a 25-year-old running back who won a Super Bowl two months ago with San Francisco.

Watters' youth and championship ring made the difference to coach Ray Rhodes, who said the 33-year-old Walker would have had to compete for a roster spot if he accepted and pay cut and stayed with the team.

Rhodes, San Francisco's defensive coordinator last year, called Walker, a two-time Pro Bowl selection and the Eagles' offensive MVP the past two years, "a good football player." But he saw in Watters a talent proven by his spot on a championship team.

"Ricky Watters has done these things. It's proven. It's on tape," Rhodes said at a news conference for Watters.

Walker, who was to make $1.3 million to $1.5 million in 1995, said he told the team he would rather be released than take a pay cut. He said Monday he had made sacrifices for the team and wanted to explore his options elsewhere.

"I made $1.2 million last year when I should have made $1.5 million," Walker told The Philadelphia Inquirer. "I took a cut to help them out with their money problems.

This is not about salary cap; it's about respect."

In three seasons with Philadelphia, Walker rushed for 2,344 yards and had 1,388 receiving. He played fullback, running back, tight end and on special teams.

"I love Philadelphia. I love the fans. I told them I want to finish my career here. I gave my life for this football team on the field," he said. "It's like I took a bath with the wrong soap and I smell. Now they do not want to be bothered with me."

Watters seemed overjoyed Tuesday to be leaving a Super Bowl team for one that didn't make the playoffs the past two seasons.

"I'm 25 years old. I'm still young. It's a time for me to start over," said Watters.

ANEMIA HAMPERS HOUSTON CENTER

Olajuwon will likely miss next two games

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon has anemia and likely will miss the Houston Rockets' next two games, adding to a season of setbacks for the defending champions.

Olajuwon, the NBA's most valuable player last season, skipped Monday's practice to get a checkup with team doctor Jim Muntz. Tests revealed Olajuwon's condition Tuesday.

"We'll probably hold him out on a day-to-day basis and recheck his blood count on Friday," Muntz said. "That's so he can rest."

Although Muntz prescribed rest, Olajuwon will continue to work out with the team.

"He should get a full recovery and do great," Muntz said. "After this is corrected, we'll have to put leg weights on him to hold him back."

Olajuwon complained of fatigue after Sunday's game against the Lakers in Los Angeles.

Olajuwon said he had been tired following the Rockets last five games.

Olajuwon has been sidelined with other medical conditions. He had an irregular heartbeat during the 1991-92 season but it returned to normal after medication. Olajuwon was hospitalized with a blood clot in his left leg before the 1990-91 season. Blood thinners dissolved the clot.

IOWA SOFTBALL

Hawkeyes ready for today's home opener

Chris Snider

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa softball team kicks off the home part of its 1995 season with a twinbill against Illinois State this afternoon.

The contest will begin at 2 p.m. at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

Although bad weather dampened Iowa's trip to California last week, Coach Gayle Blevins saw some positive things from her team, now 14-9 overall.

"The weather made it really hard to be consistent. Despite that, we had some really good moments," Blevins said.

"We played really well the first game against Connecticut. The next day, we played a good game against Wichita State and dominated Connecticut. We also played an excellent game against Cal-Berkeley. I was really encouraged."

From an individual standpoint, Blevins was happy with the play of freshman Erin McGee in California. She has also been pleased with the progress of her young pitching staff.

Sophomore Jennifer McMahon and freshmen Debbie Bilbao and Leticia Castellon are all expected to see action today.

The main thing Blevins will be looking for from her team this afternoon is consistency.

"Consistency is the real thing we're searching for, being able to play well consistently through a doubleheader, being ready mentally and staying sharp through the game," she said.

In addition to finding consistency, the Hawkeyes will be looking to start the home season off with a couple victories, something that won't come easy against a solid Illinois State ball club.

"They've always been a good opponent," Blevins said.

"They'll have some speed element and some power hitters. There's a lot of similarities in our styles. They'll be a real good challenge for us."

FILM PREMIÈRES AT BIJOU TONIGHT

'Red' finishes filmmaker's trilogy

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

It would be difficult to claim that director Krzysztof Kieslowski is short on style. His celestial images and rarefied characters speak for themselves. But too often, they seem to speak with very muffled voices. The director's latest film, "Red," is a case in point.

Swiss model Valentine (Irene Jacob) poses for an ironic bubble-gum ad in Krzysztof Kieslowski's "Red." The film, which was nominated for best original screenplay and best director Oscars, opens today at the Bijou Theatre in the Union.

The film is the third in a trilogy mirroring the three colors of the French flag (blue, white and red) and the three tenets of the French motto ("Liberty, equality, fraternity"). While just as visually beautiful as the other two-thirds of the trilogy, "Red" occupies a creative niche somewhere between those films — it doesn't suffer from the artistic pretentiousness of "Blue" or benefit from the quirky plot-driven intensity of "White."

Instead, it treads a middle ground, keeping a solid footing with its fairly straightforward direction but stumbling over a wandering and sometimes confusing story line.

Irene Jacob (star of Kieslowski's "The Double Life of Veronique") stars as Valentine, a Swiss fashion model suffering through a precarious relationship with an jealous boyfriend who's stuck in England on business. Valentine lives by her phone, waiting for her lover Michel to call — but when he does, he generally abuses her and accuses her of infidelity.

Meanwhile, just down the street lives Auguste, a law student who also lives by his phone and fears his girlfriend is having an affair. Maybe, Kieslowski implies, Auguste and Valentine were meant for each other and are kept apart only by cruel coincidence. Or maybe Michel and Auguste are, spiritually speaking, the same person.

Valentine comes to an unexpected break in her life pattern when she accidentally runs over a dog in the street. The animal's owner turns out to be a retired judge who is holed up in his house like a hermit, eavesdropping electronically on his neighbors' phone conversations. The judge, as it happens, has a great deal in common with Auguste. Maybe, spiritually speaking again, they are the same person. Maybe there are only a dozen people on the planet, all told. Certainly the film's surprise conclusion — a deliberate payoff for anyone who's seen "Blue" and "White" — would support this theory.

At issue in "Red" are the nature of truth, the question of whether one human has the right to judge another and the essence of the bonds between human beings.

Like most of Kieslowski's films to date, "Red" has little in the way of a plot or a conclusion; it's mostly about establishing a tenuous, ethereal mood and exploring a few philosophical byways. At issue in "Red" are the nature of truth, the question of whether one human has the right to judge another and the essence of the bonds between human beings. As with "Veronique," Kieslowski plays clever tricks with parallelism, linear time and causality. His ends are subtle and noble, but as with "Blue," his story tends to suffer as a result.

"Red" does occasionally exhibit a more concrete side. Kieslowski takes a few sly pot shots at an advertising community that uses a blindingly beautiful image to advertise — in a complete non sequitur — a brand of bubble gum. He plays with the basic theme of fraternity in a number of ways, pointing out how telephones and technology bring together two people living in different countries and drive apart people living on the same block. Above all, he showcases a beautiful acting job from Jacob, who shines in her delicate role.

But he still seems to lack a conviction, a point of view or a compelling reason for the images he puts together. His images are beautiful, but like his ironic bubble-gum ad, they sometimes seem shallow in their lack of meaning. As a result, "Red" comes off more as a novelty item than anything else — a stunningly beautiful curiosity but just a curiosity nonetheless.

"Red" opens tonight at 7 in the Bijou Theatre of the Union. Subsequent showings are at 9:15 p.m. Thursday, 7 p.m. Friday, 9 p.m. Saturday and 7 p.m. Sunday.

"Skapunk (a hybrid of ska and punk musical styles) is definitely our direction. We like to play a fast, furious set and tire the crowd out. ... It's just crazy at the shows," Phelps said, adding that the group has what he thinks is the best live act in America.
