Iowa Legislature faces difficult agenda

Sen. Schemberg

Iowa City

Sen. Schemberg

The Daily Iowan Iowa City

Sen. Schemberg

Balancing the budget, cutting costs in other areas and funding education have been hot topics in the Iowa Legislature during the second half of the session.

Members of the Legislature are attempting to look at tough issues that aren't seen high on the list of priorities for Iowa towns in the 2004 sessions.

The most controversial issue arising in a house bill has been the Iowa Pork Producers' call to have Iowa be a"pork state" and pass the Iowa Pork Producers' allocation of sales tax.

The state proposal would have two levels of sales tax: 3% and 1.5%, which would be applied to all transactions. The second level of the tax would be passed on to localities. The state would receive the difference between the two levels.

Sen. Schemberg, R-Humboldt, said he would support the bill, which he thought would help fund education in the state.

Another issue is the state's new tax on public utility companies. Schemberg said he did not think the bill would be passed as it is, but he thought it would be a good idea for the state to raise revenue from the tax.

"The Iowa Legislature and the people should increase taxes," Schemberg said. "We need to start funding the schools again."
House OKs cutback on law covering wine bottles

Ali Neisen

The Des Moines Register

Wine and liquor bottles up to 1.75 liters in size will still be able to be sold in Iowa, but the limit on the number of bottles a customer can purchase at one time will be cut from 24 to 12.

Supporters of the change said the move was designed to make it easier on retailers who have to keep track of who buys how many bottles and how often.

WASHINGTON — Morley Smith, who has been the subject of a number of UFO filings and has written extensively on the subject, said he wrote the book "A Life of the Mind" because he wanted to share his experiences, which he described as "unusual and remarkable in their own right."

Smith said he has had a number of close encounters with unidentified flying objects, and that his experiences have left him with a profound sense of wonder and curiosity about the universe. He said he hopes to use his writing to help others understand the possibilities of life beyond Earth.

"I believe that there is intelligent life elsewhere in the universe, and that we have the potential to communicate with it," Smith said. "But we must learn to do it in a way that is not threatening or harmful to others."
Parents able to check kids for drug use

Associated Press

NEW PROVIDENCE, N.J. — Parents can now check their children for drug use, according to the manufacturer of a home test kit.

Called DrugAlert, the kit detects drugs including marijuana, cocaine, amphetamines, barbiturates and phencyclidine.

Parents can buy a test from the DrugAlert website or from a participating retailer. The test costs $50 and comes with a package of three test strips.

The test is self-administered by the child, who takes a urine sample and compares it to a chart in the test kit. A positive result is indicated by a change in color, according to the manufacturer.

The drug test is not a substitute for professional medical care, according to the manufacturer.

Pleasing the 'Elvis made me do it' defense

Mike Rognon

We hear in college land lately about tomorrow's horizon. I must admit that I still don't know what it is, but it seems to be an important concept in our lives. What's going on with it?

Because life is too short to deal with things that don't matter, I'd like to talk about a recent event that caught my attention: the trial of someone who allegedly killed a man with a hammer. And I think it's time for me to share my thoughts on this.

It seems that this person, who used the defense of being influenced by Elvis Presley, was found guilty of murder. But instead of being sentenced to a lengthy prison term, the judge instead ordered the defendant to perform community service. This is a case that highlights the power of music to influence individuals' actions.

I believe that music can have a profound impact on people. It's not uncommon to hear stories of individuals who have turned their lives around after being inspired by a particular song or performer. In this case, the defendant apparently believed that Elvis Presley's music had the power to make him do things he otherwise wouldn't.

Many people may be surprised to learn that music can have such a powerful influence. But it's important to remember that music is a medium through which ideas and emotions can be communicated. And in some cases, it can even shape the course of events.

In conclusion, I believe that this case is a reminder of the profound impact that music can have on individuals. And it's a reminder that we should all be mindful of the messages that we share with others, as they may have far-reaching consequences.

Women’s Final Four

When Dana Johnson, Vols Ward, Tiffany Weeds and Natalie Dray left the final game of the season, they were hailed as the best recruiting class ever. They have become the best players in the country. They have been remarkable for their success this year. They have been remembered for their failures more than their successes. They have been lifted off our shoulders.

The Lady Vols and their rabid fans still are waiting. Didoiggs remains an afterthought. Today’s player of the year is a high school senior, was third in the nation in assists. Which is a testament to a tremendous border. The Vols jump back into contention.

The first time you don’t even realize how hard you’re working, you just kind of end up in the Final Four. This year, it’s like a tremendous burden has been lifted off our shoulders.

Cato Audhernes, UConn women’s basketball coach.

DEERFIELD, Ill. — "Michael Jordan said he loved to shoot the ball. I think he's been shooting the ball more than I ever have - as much as I've always been shooting. I think he's finally found the rhythm and the touch that I've been looking for all season."

Jordan's shooting may be the only plus of the Chicago Bulls' win in New York. The Bulls played well, but they still couldn't have won without Jordan's last-second 3-pointer Tuesday night.

Jordan, who scored 25 points in the win, is back in the form that made him the most dominant player in the NBA. The problem is that the Bulls have no one else who can match his scoring ability.

"If we're going to win the championship, it has to be Michael," coach Dick Motta said. "If we're going to win the championship, it has to be Michael."

"It was a great game," Bulls center Phil Jackson said. "I've been coach for seven years, and that was the best game we've ever played."

"That was one of the greatest games I've ever seen," Motta said. "What a great feeling. From the time I landed to the time I walked off, my body is smiling and happy. From the time I landed to the time I walked off, my body is smiling and happy."

The Bulls, who have been on a roll since Jordan returned from his five-game absence, have won five of their last six games. The only loss was to the Los Angeles Lakers last Saturday.

"It's nice to come to work," Jordan said. "We should do our best to win and we should try our best to win."

"We're not going to win every game," Motta said. "We're not going to win every game. But we're going to have some good games."
Poet delivers Dante in legible translation

Indiana University Press has released the third edition of "Dante: Inferno," a translation by Robert Bly. Bly's translation is noted for its readability and accessibility, making the work of one of the world's greatest poets more accessible to a broader audience.

In this edition, Bly has updated his translation to reflect the latest scholarship and to improve the flow of the text. The result is a translation that is both faithful to the original and engaging to the modern reader.

Bly's translation is praised for its clarity and directness, allowing readers to experience the power of Dante's words without being hindered by the complexities of the original Latin. The "Inferno" is the first installment of Dante's "Divine Comedy," a series of poems that explore the afterlife and its various stages.

Bly's work is a testament to the enduring appeal of Dante's vision, and his translation is a valuable contribution to the ongoing conversation about one of the world's greatest literary works.

Laugh-tracks make tracks transition from TV set to everyday lives

The Daily News

Laughter is the best medicine, they say. But for some, it's applied to is genuinely

EIGHTY HOURS

LAUGHTER-PLAUES SWEETENS MUNDANE REALITY

Laugh-tracks can make a show more enjoyable, but they can also be annoying.

Laughter is a complex part of human communication, and its role in television has evolved over the years. It can add a layer of humor and excitement to a show, but it can also be disruptive and unauthentic. The question of whether to include laugh-tracks in a show is a matter of debate among viewers and producers.

In the past, laugh-tracks were often used in sit-coms and other types of network television shows. They were intended to help audiences laugh along with the characters, and to make the show more enjoyable for viewers. However, many critics have argued that laugh-tracks can be distracting and unauthentic.

In recent years, some shows have experimented with alternative forms of comedy, such as silent comedy or physical comedy. These forms of comedy can be more effective at making people laugh, and they can also be more satisfying for the actors who perform them.

In any case, the use of laugh-tracks in television is a matter of personal preference. Some people enjoy them, while others find them distracting and annoying. It's up to each viewer to decide whether or not they want to hear laugh-tracks on their favorite shows.
