Bo Derek makes heavy return to big screen

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Bo Derek wanted a role that was small, fun and light. She got one out of the three in Chris Farley

Derek, who tickled Dudley Moore's fancy as a perfect "10," is playing the stepmother to the beefy Farley in the new movie "Tommy Boy."

Her first scene is a spoof on "10"; she rises from a pool in slow motion wearing a skimpy bikini.

"I had said to someone here that I might want to go back to work but that I should start with something to see what it's like - something small and fun and light," Derek said. "So I was in Hong Kong, got the call and came to work two days later."

"Tommy Boy," which was the weekend's most popular movie, stars Farley and David Spade, comedians from NBC's "Saturday Night Live." It's only Derek's fourth film since "10," which was made in 1979.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The "Mystery Lady" finally got her Grammy.

Etta James didn't make it to the Grammy ceremony on March 1, so her record label, Private Music, surprised her with the award while she sang during a sold-out performance at the House of Blues last week.

After 40 years in the music business, James won a Grammy for best jazz vocal performance for her song 'Mystery Lady.'

James, 57, said she made the song to please her mother, Dorothy, who has long lamented her daughter's decision to sing rock and blues.

"My mother always wanted me to be a jazz singer, but I always wanted to be raunchy," she said.

Self-defense, rap music and acquaintance rape will be among the topics in a series of workshops and discussions this month at the Rape Victim Advocacy Program as part of Sexual Assault Awareness Month.

The problem of sexual assault is widespread, said Ashley Sovern, RVAP volunteer. Sovern said one in three women will be raped during her lifetime and cited FBI reports showing that 19,000 rapes occurred in the United States last year.

"I hope that everyone can come," she said. "I think (sexual assault is) something that certainly affects all of

"I've seen the play done before, and it's really entertaining," Sovern said.

A discussion will follow to get audience feedback on the issues raised in the performance, Sovern said.

In other activities, Traevena Potter-Hall, RVAP volunteer and a first-year UI law student, will present "Images of Women in Rap Music" Wednesday.

"I will present information about the positive and negative images of women in rap music," Potter-Hall said. "Not only in male rap music but female rap, too, and hopefully begin a discussion to talk about these issues along with gender roles and the kind of impact rap music has on society."

On April 24, a presentation titled "Alcohol and Sexual Assault" will be held in conjunction with RiverFest. It will examine the ties between sexual assault and alcohol abuse. "I designed this (program) to fit in with RiverFest since it begins that week," Sovern said. "People will be drinking a lot of alcohol that week, so this program will work nicely with it." RVAP is also sponsoring a selfdefense workshop April 22-23. Sovern

FUNDING HIGHER THAN LAST YEAR

Crime victim programs receive increased grants

Patricia Harris The Daily Iowan

Fines collected from federal criminals and donations from Iowans make up part of the $163,641 in federal and state grants awarded to three Iowa City crime victim assistance programs.

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program, the Domestic Violence Intervention Program and the United Action for Youth's Child Victim Assistance Program were recipients of the grants.

The level of funding is up this vear in comparison to past years. RVAP agency director Christie Munson said one reason for the increase may be the absence of federal elections this year.

"Last year's (funding) was a little bit down. Collections on the federal level were being processed slower because of the elections, with federal prosecutors being reappointed," Munson said. "This year it's recov-

The majority of the funds the groups received came from grants made possible through the 1985 Victims of Crime Act, said Virginia Beane, victim grants administrator for the Crime Victim Assistance Division of the Iowa attorney gener-

None of the act's federal grant money comes from taxes; all funding is a result of fines collected from people convicted of federal crimes, Beane said. The crime act's funding must be used to directly serve victims of crime - for example, used for educational purposes or for clerical or administrative costs.

This year's funding is the highest ever for the grants program, despite budget constraints that have caused state funding to stay at the same level for three years,

"This is more than we've ever received before," she said. "For example, in 1989, we received $290,000 in state funding, and the total funding was less than $1 million. In six years, we've really come a long way in terms of funding."

"increased aggressiveness in terms affected if we lose one piece of this of fine collection at the federal lev- very important funding."

In fiscal year 1995, Iowa received $789,000 in VOCA funding and $190,000 through the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act, another federal crime victim assistance program. Another federal agency and three other state agencies also added money, for a total grant fund of more than $2.4 million for fiscal year 1995. The money was split between 40 local and state organizations, including the three Iowa City groups

The state of Iowa contributed more than $1.4 million in funding to the grant fund, part of which came from the domestic violence checkoff box on state income-tax forms. Taxpayers may check the box and then choose the amount of their donation to the fund. Beane said the average donation is $5, and tax forms netted $68,000 for the fund in fiscal year 1995. The funds can be used in different ways under the guidelines, said Lou Blankenburg, a counselor at United Action for Youth. "The largest part of the work we do here is counseling and therapy for individuals and families when somebody has been victimized in some way," Blankenburg said.

Programs like the Rape Victim Advocacy Program and United Action for Youth may be affected if the federal government chooses to change funding for these types of programs to a block-grant style of funding. In effect, a block grant would give states lump sums of money for assistance programs. through counseling. It cannot be rather than tagging the money for certain purposes, and would allow the states to decide what they wanted to do with it. Munson said that if this happens, programs like RVAP might be in danger of falling by the wayside.

"In the days of changing federal government, this is another circumstance where a change in a granting process can have a really profound effect on service throughout the nation in terms of block grants, which in effect could take money away from the shelters," she said. "If that goes away into a block grant The higher funding is a result of somewhere, everybody's going to be

DETROIT - Henry Cisneros wades into a throng of children at a dilapidated housing project and hears them describe their dream house - a place with large windows to let in the sun and warm basements in which to play without fear of drug dealers and flying bullets.

In a room filled with boards and plastic, the children are assembling a miniature design of what they would like their decrepit Parkside housing complex to become.

"We get tired of going to school, and they say, Where y'all live at is raggedy - you live in the projects with the rats and the roaches," a girl tells the federal housing secre-

What Cisneros doesn't tell the children is that $45 million to help ay for their dream has been sliced from his budget by Congress, that survival and that he is battling to keep his job amid a looming ethics da

With this in mind, Cisneros, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, later reflected, "This may be the last opportunity I have to be in public life. ... I just want to do everything I can to make the biggest difference that I can."

A special prosecutor's investigation into what Cisneros told the FBI about money he paid to a jilted lover years ago "has been mortifying and disappointing to many of my friends," he said in an interview during his visit to Detroit

"I helped her. I believe that was the right thing to do - some people say it was not," he said. "It's disconcerting that you believe in doing the right things, and even after having made terrible mistakes you try to make things right, but you can't get

Aside from his personal problems, Cisneros is facing an increasingly hostile Congress.

His plan for overhauling HUD, which includes giving rent money directly to public housing residents in the form of vouchers, has received lukewarm reviews on Capitol Hill and a poor reception among the residents of HUD housing in cities such as Philadelphia and Boston.

There is growing talk in Congress of eliminating his department.

He says he's determined to stay, and President Clinton has given him his continued support.

"I'm going to fight on until I'm told pointblank that I've got to go," he said, suggesting that his departure

Associated Press LOS ANGELES - Three months and nearly 40 witnesses into testimony, prosecutors are coming to a crucial phase of their murder case against O.J. Simpson: DNA evidence based on blood. So far, they have pointed to gloves, a hat, blood spots and shoe prints. But these things haven't been connected to anyone.

"At this point, if the jury was asked to deliberate they would have to acquit because there hasn't been a single piece of physical evidence linking Simpson to the crime," said UCLA law Professor Peter Arenella. "But that's not a criticism. The prosecutors haven't gotten to the heart of their case yet.

Will the bloody glove found at Simpson's estate prove to match his blood and the victims'? Will those hairs in the ski cap show the same characteristics as Simpson's hair? And what about blood on the Bronco?

They now have to go to hard scientific evidence," said Loyola Law School Professor Laurie Levenson.

Scheduled to testify today is criminalist Dennis Fung, who collected blood evidence from Simpson's home and the crime scene.

"This will be the show-and-tell of all time," said Levenson.

"It's like putting together the pieces of a puzzle," she said. "You need all the pieces, and right now they're missing the big piece putting O.J. at the scene of the Arenella said prosecutors have a tough challenge - trying to keep jurors interested while leading them through technical scientific evidence.

"The prosecution needs an attenformer Cadillac factory long abantive jury," he said. "And boredom doned by General Motors - boarded means inattention, which makes confusion more likely."

"If they can't convince the jury they have reliable physical evidence to link Simpson to the murders, then the case is over," he said. "Witnesses may forget or may be biased, but scientific evidence usually leaves a strong impression on jurors if they understand it," Leven-Until now, prosecution testimony has been divided into two parts: motive and opportunity. Deputy District Attorneys Marcia Clark and Christopher Darden called 39 witnesses to suggest that Simpson was obsessively jealous of ex-wife said. "We've tried to answer them Nicole Brown Simpson and had a with some of the principles they've motive to kill her and that a careful said they believe in. But the bar examination of his movements on June 12 showed he had the opportufriend Ronald Goldman was an accidental victim who was in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Prosecution to move to DNA evidence

Defense lawyers fiercely challenged prosecution efforts to create a time line and a web of circumstantial evidence showing that Simpson was in the right places at the right times to commit the murders.

Simpson's house guest, Brian Kato" Kaelin, testified about when he and Simpson returned from McDonald's and when he last saw his host - standing at the door of his Bentley at about 9:35 p.m.

Prosecutors contend that the murders occurred at 10:15 p.m. about two miles away. They sketched a scenario in which Simpson drove over in his white Bronco; killed Brown Simpson and Goldman outside her condominium; and fled, leaving a trail of blood. They say that he then returned home with time to clean up, hide the murder weapon and bloody

They have contended that her at 10:55 p.m. for a ride to the airport.

The defense used prosecution witnesses to plant the seeds of its own theory: that Simpson is the victim of a police frame-up that originated with Detective Mark Fuhrman.

It was Fuhrman who said he found the bloody glove behind Simpson's home that matched one found at the murder scene. Fuhrman was also the first person to see a speck of blood on Simpson's Bronco.

Discovery of the glove and the blood spot transformed Simpson into a suspect, according to lead Detective Philip Vannatter. And the discovery of blood on Simpson's driveway and in his foyer - and a gash on his finger - convinced detectives Simpson was the focus of their investigation.

The defense, fighting the blood evidence as unreliable, will try to convince jurors they can't trust results obtained from evidence collected by sloppy, inexperienced technicians.

IN THE WAKE OF A TRAGEDY

Jury made right decision

At took more than two years, but Charles Pence has finally been exonerated in the death of Chris Street.

Enough has been written about that January night Street was killed when the Johnson County snowplow driven by Pence slammed into his car.

The jury found that Pence was not responsible for causing the accident. For the rest of his life, Pence will live with the memory of the broken bodies of Street and his passenger, Kim Vinton. For the rest of their lives, Street's parents will live with the empty space that he once filled.

The Streets sued Pence and Johnson County, asking for between $13 million and $18 million. Vinton joined the suit, asking for nearly $200,000 for physical and emotional damages. Pence brought a countersuit, and on Friday the jury awarded him $1. Pence probably won't frame the dollar and put it on the wall like a proud business owner. That dollar will bring him nothing but bad memories.

That is what makes the Streets' suit so strange. The court wasted time trying to determine Street's future earning potential as a professional basketball player. Even if they had won their suit and walked away with millions of dollars from Johnson County's insurance company, what could they have done with the money?

Any money they would have received would have been blood money — a financial compensation for the life of their son. How could they live with the thought? How could they have gone through life saying, "Here is the item we bought with the money we got in exchange for Chris' life." Street's spirit would not have lived on in a new car or house.

Of course, the money could have been spent to honor his short life and basketball career. The Streets could have spent the millions on community centers, gymnasiums and basketball courts. But does it pay his memory any respect or homage to force the money from the county in a courtroom?

Although courts attempt to do it every day, no monetary value can be placed on a human being. No amount of money can really fill the void a person leaves behind.

Pence said he was relieved when the jury announced the verdict and that it felt like a load had been lifted from his shoulders. The Street family should consider themselves lucky that they didn't have the weight of a financial settlement placed on them. Every one of those millions of dollars would have been a reminder that they had lost their son.

In the wake of this tragedy, Pence was fortunate that the jury found in his favor, and the Street family was fortunate that they will never have to live with the sad and torturous decision of how to spend millions of dollars.

PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH MAY HURT PROGRAM

Support UI's humanities

Back in the late 1980s, the Iowa state Board of Regents hired the accounting firm of Peat Warwick to evaluate the three regents universities to ensure that the schools were not wasting money duplicating each other's programs.

The ensuing report issued some suggestions that didn't make a lot of sense, but the report did focus on the schools' separate missions. Iowa State University was to be strong on science; the University of Northern Iowa on education; and the UI - the jewel in the crown — was to be the premier humanities institution, rivaling Stanford University or some such nonsense.

Word is out, however, that the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee has been told to focus on candidates with a strong science background.

Such an emphasis seems to conflict with UI's mission. On the other hand, it doesn't conflict with technology transfer. There's money to be made in transferring research findings in technical areas to the private sector, but none at all in transferring poetry.

Moreover, there is evidence that a president with a strong science background can hurt the humanities. We need look no further than ISU to find it. Prior to 1987 (the year Marvin Pomerantz was appointed to the board), ISU had reasonably respectable - though not outstanding - programs in areas other than engineering and agriculture. Eight years later, ISU is a disaster - much of it due to the narrow vision and gross mismanagement of its current president, Martin Jischke, who holds a doctoral degree in aeronautical engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and whose prior administrative experience includes a position as dean of the College of Engineering at the University of Oklahoma-Norman.

When he was president of the University of Missouri-Rolla (1986-91), Jischke gutted the humanities in a way that was truly shameful. When he took over at ISU, he repeated the process, being particularly destructive to the English department.

Because ISU's reputation lies in its science programs, it tends to attract students who are good in math but not in English. Also, substantial numbers of foreign students arrive each year barely functional in the language in which they will be expected to learn. Jischke's response? Cut funding and support for the very programs designed to help those students succeed. English as a second language courses are understaffed, and openings so limited that many foreign students are forced to sign up for equivalent courses at a local community college. The Writing Center is open fewer than 20 hours per week. Rhetoric classes are overstuffed - 28 students per section.

Can it happen here? Not all people with a strong background in science are cretins when it comes to supporting the humanities, as former UI President Sandy Boyd (1969-81) more than amply demonstrates. But can we trust the search committee and the regents not to do to us what they did to ISU? If we value the UI, we need to keep a close watch.

Assaults on net speech pose threat to all Imagine you are at the top increasing use of a legal strategy whereby of a wealthy church's power structure. People who leave the fold carry information that could cost your organization millions. What they know is that the group's beliefs constitute a stacked deck - something is always going to be a bit askew in the spiritual lives of each member of the flock. To fix that something - which the church always defines - requires the cooperation and skills of church officers. The true believer pays handsomely for these services. Thus, church control over defining the spiritual health of members guarantees an ongoing source of wealth.

To keep this potentially embarrassing setup from public scrutiny, certain procedures are established. Despite the almost Orwellian system of controls, you learn that a former member is leveling devastating allegations against the church and circulating them on the Internet along with official church documents exposing the system used to control members. What do you do?

The Church of Scientology wasted no time on its decision as the power player in just such a scenario. It immediately issued threats to system administrators all over the Internet: Either shut down the news groups distributing information we believe may have been stolen or risk

The Church of Scientology has its own inhouse law firm, Bowles and Moxon. It issued many such notices until administrators across the net recognized that a serious threat to the integrity of free information flow had arisen. People began to organize to counter its effects. As one netter wrote recently, "L. Ron Hubbard was a fine writer of science-fiction novels, but the religion he created is a bunch of dangerous

The group quickly found cause for concern far beyond Scientology. The greater issue is the administrators are held responsible for material subscribers distribute on the net. It is like holding AT&T responsible for harassing or lewd phone calls because they are transmitted through AT&T cables, rather than going after the dweebs doing the dialing.

This unique illogic resonates throughout the Communications Decency Act of 1995. The bill's most harrowing feature is that it is readily interpreted to mean that system administrators would be liable for user-sent material deemed "obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy or indecent." Aside from the obvious - that we've been haggling over the meaning of each of those words for the better part of humankind's intellectual existence and reached precious little widespread accord on any one of them - the bill has about it the innocuous look of much legislation. The danger is that people will not look closely enough to see what it would mean if passed into

The bill moves to expand current Federal Communications Commission regulations on obscenity to cover all content transmitted across any electronic communications network. Think about that for a minute because it covers any and all bulletin board systems; news groups; listservs; and service-providers through which you send and receive your e-mail, which you may pompously consider private.

Beyond Scientology lawsuits and potential legislation based on a cockamamie moral scheme that doesn't mesh with freedom, attempted encroachments on net liberty are pro-

In Britain, an attempt to outlaw the encryption technology known as PGP (Pretty Good Privacy) is underfoot. Oddly, it was military policeman Chris Smith of the traditionally liberal Labour Party who proposed that encryption technology be permissible only if the government has the capacity to break it. Odds being strong that the Labour Party will come into power in the next election, it seems that effective encryption in the United Kingdom may be forbidden. Encryption technology is similarly under attack in the United States.

Italy is experiencing increased interest in net control, too. In March, BITS Against the Empire BBS, a node of the Italian Cybernet computer network, was shut down. It remains closed and under investigation.

Our last example comes from Mexico. David Ronfeldt of the Santa Monica, Calif., Rand think tank, studies information technology and national security. He and his colleagues have coined a term to describe the coordinated activities of small groups with minimal power who use net technology to communicate. The term is sexy in the worst sense of the word: net war.

To summarize the global net freedom situation, special-interest groups with lots of money and power have grown hysterical over the speed and accuracy with which information is reproduced and transmitted on the net. They have begun to reach out in many countries - u their financial resources and access to legal authority and political power - to restrict the free flow of information.

As an American, I can only say that any institution threatened by free communication among people deserves to crumble, however venerable or cherished that institution may be. By the same token, any people too busy to pay attention when their freedoms are nullified by legal lackeys and church thugs wielding hyperbole and falsehood probably deserve to live under a

The Internet freedom wars are neither esoteric nor silly. Their outcome will determine the measure of freedom each of us is allowed to enjoy every day of our lives. Pay attention, seek out the facts and weigh them carefully - and let your opinions be heard.

Affirmative action goes against the grain of the political system envisioned by our Founding Fathers. Further, it encourages racial and class tensions, leading to a weakening of our society. Finally, it hurts the average college student in finding some extra money and a job.

The Founding Fathers envisioned a society based on equality for the individual and leadership by merit, following the tenets of the English political philosopher John Locke. Lockean liberals — libertarians in today's parlance — believe in freedom of opportunity; equality before the law; and meritocracy, or a government based on merit. These tenets hold as true today as they did in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Ideally, our system should be a level playing inequalities in the 1950s and '60s. Women were kept in the home to be the model June Cleaver housewife. African-Americans were regarded as second-class citizens. In the military, they were relegated to combat-support roles behind the lines. On the home front, they suffered from seg-

Affirmative action is a regation and had no real opportunities to

However, the 1960s changed all that. The civil a necessary mechanism to rights and women's liberation movements changed society for the better. Affirmative action was implemented to ensure shut-out minorities had an equal shot at the American dream of being in control of their own destinies.

Radical liberals of the 1960s seized the mechawrongs "evil" white males nism of affirmative action to push their agenda from Christopher Columbus of righting the "wrongs" of Western civilization. The baby boomers were bent on a white male witch-hunt to right the wrongs Columbus, Rudyard Kipling and others wrought on the world.

These measures to ensure a level playing field have had the side effect of reverse discrimination. Now white males - those all-powerful purveyors of injustice - cannot find scholarships, let alone jobs and positions of power. This leads to class and racial divisiveness - something socialists and liberal baby boomers relish.

When affirmative action and discrimination are raised, pundits always harp on the percentage of managers who are white. The March 16 New York Times had a front-page story showing figures on the "manager class" and how women and minorities are underrepresented.

I could care less about who is the CEO of what. I am more concerned with securing a field for everyone to compete. There were scholarship or an internship to ensure a solid steppingstone to a career. Today I see the average white male student being treated as secondclass student. There are a plethora of scholarships and internships for minorities, and the whole politically correct mindset is geared Duane Nollen's column appears alternate Mondays toward making being white and male a stigma.

The rest of us white male oppressors are left to surf the "old-boy network" on our own. If you are lucky, your academic department has a faculty member dedicated to helping students find opportunities. However, this is the exception and not the rule. Being rich is a plus because daddy has a lot of influential friends and connections, as I have discovered in state and local political campaign work. Yet again, the rest of us have to claw for anything we can get.

Well, this seems to be reality, and it bites.

So, how do we redress this issue and be egalitarian and feel warm and fuzzy all over? George Will offers a solution in his book The Leveling

Will wrote a column in the wake of a 1990 Supreme Court decision upholding the Federal Communications Commission's right give preferential treatment to minorities in the cause of "race-conscious" policies. His conclusion was to propose a constitutional amendment: "Neither Congress nor the states may classify persons on the basis of race, sex or ethnicity for the purpose of preferential treatment." This hits the nail on the head. With the proliferation of constitutional amendment proposals in Washington, Will's idea should be given high priority.

When you see an application with the usual age, race and sex blanks and the equal opportunity disclaimer at the bottom, remember that you may be getting set up for an affirmative

BRUNSWICK, Ohio (AP) — A police standoff that lasted nearly two days ended Sunday when officers entered a house and found a suspected gunman and his 9-yearold son dead, police said. The bodies of John M. Lekan, 54, and his son, John M. Lekan Jr., were found at about 1 p.m. in a bathroom.

The elder Lekan had been shot in the head, police Sgt. John Stukbauer said. It was not immediately dear how the son died.

Associated Press SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - Fighting intensified Sunday on several Bosnian battlegrounds, and the country's prime minister accused foreign governments of putting too little pressure on Serb rebels to accept a peace plan. U.N. peacekeepers confirmed fierce fighting in the Bihac enclave, where forces of Bosnia's Muslim-led government are under attack from secessionist Muslims backed by Serbs from Bosnia and Croatia.

"Almost the entire battlefront is in flames," Bosnian government radio said of the combat.

Intense fighting occurred Sunday morning after Croatian Serbs put pressure on government forces southeast of Velika Kladusa, the headquarters of the rebel Muslims in the Bihac area, said a U.N. source who insisted on anonymity

Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said the Muslim-led government, which has mounted major offensives over the past two weeks, would not consider further cease-fire talks unless the Serbs accepted an international peace plan. The plan would reduce Serb holdings from 70 percent to 49 percent of Bosnian territory.

said the international community seems more interested in stabilizing the confrontation lines than in implementing the peace plan. The heaviest fighting reported by U.N. peacekeepers Sunday was in mountains near the northeast city of Tuzla, where Serbs have been trying to stop a broad government advance. Government army sources said their troops had temporarily halted the offensive because of heavy snow.

Government officers claimed four bombs were dropped by the Serbs near the town of Kalesija, southeast of Tuzla. The United Nations could not confirm the claim.

In the U.N. protection zone in northwest Bosnia, several shells hit the village of Sokolac, and at least 11 shells hit the town of Bihac, a U.N. spokesman said. It was the third day in a row of shelling there.

Bosnian radio said 15 rounds of Serb artillery fire hit Bihac on Sunday afternoon, but there was no word of any casualties.

In Sarajevo, snipers opened fire Sunday on worshipers entering and leaving a Roman Catholic church, but no injuries were reported.

Peacekeepers said the government's lone supply road into the city came under heavy Serb machine-gun fire several times Saturday, and one government soldier reportedly was A German relief agency worker

The worker, 36-year-old Ludwig Silaidzic, quoted by Bosnian radio. Kraus, had set out in a jeep Saturday from Sarajevo for a round trip to a town about 12 miles to the west.

One American and four French drivers in a convoy for the charity Pharmacists Without Borders were detained in early March after similarly making a wrong turn. They also are held by the Serbs at Lukavica, accused of supplying goods to the Bosnian government's army.

Nuclear treaty set for renewal

Edith M. Lederer Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria - When 172 nations meet in two weeks to try to keep the lid on nuclear weapons in the 21st century, they won't be tackling the new nightmares of nuclear terrorism and smuggling.

Those worries - spawned by the growth of fanatical movements, the increase in stockpiles and commercial use of weapons-grade uranium and plutonium, and the relaxation of safety controls in the former Soviet nuclear establishment - are being put aside for another day.

The global conference in New York will focus on lingering old worries enshrined in the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty: disarmament, transfers of nuclear technology, nuclear safeguards and security assurances against nuclear attack.

When the treaty took effect in 1970, it sealed a bargain between countries agreed not to build a bomb, the nuclear powers would provide peaceful nuclear technolopledged to negotiate for the elimination of all nuclear weapons.

North Korea. Some experts are angry that the conference will not tackle any of the new nuclear threats.

The whole thing is all process and no substance," said Paul Leventhal, president of the Washington-based Nuclear Control Institute who failed to get the increasing commerce in plutonium on the conference agenda.

Patricia Lewis, a nuclear physicist who heads the London-based Verification Technology Information Center, said the only way to address issues like nuclear smuggling and nuclear terrorism is to amend the treaty. That is impossible because there is no consensus,

The best solution would be to tackle the new threats in a new nuclear and non-nuclear states. If treaty, she added. Some suggest a treaty specifically obligating states to combat nuclear smuggling. Treaty members are also concerned that three suspected nuclear weapons states - Israel, India and Pakistan - refuse to join and open all their nuclear activities to international inspection.

At the four-week conference, which starts April 17, there will not be any votes on disarmament or new treaties. The main purpose is to renew the treaty.

"I'm sorry this ever went to trial," said juror Robert Steffen. "I think it would've been best to just leave it been overlooked.

The six-man, two-woman jury began deliberating the case at 8:30 Friday morning and were in agreement by 11:18 a.m., Steffen said.

"We were all in agreement with the verdict, but there were a lot of things from the evidence we had to discuss. he said. "We decided to take the eyewitness testimony over the experts."

Branch, Iowa, clinched the verdict, Steffen said. She testified that she was southbound on Highway 1, just about to turn into the Highlander Inn Restaurant & Convention Center, Highway 1 and Interstate 80, when she was "stunned" to see Street cross the highway in front of Pence's snow-ton, Street's girlfriend and passenger the night of the crash, won the case for the defense. Vinton testified Street was looking at her at the time of the crash rather than checking for oncoming traffic.

"I believe the testimony of Mrs. Frauenholtz and the admissions of Miss Vinton established that Chris Street failed to yield the right of way,' Riley said.

After speaking with members of the jury following the verdict, Johnson County's attorney, Bruce Walker, said he learned the jurors had decided before Friday's deliberation that Pence was not at fault in the collision.

"Apparently, they had all made up their minds independently of each other so there wasn't a lot of discussion (Friday) morning," Walker said.

Jurors could have awarded damages to the Streets and Vinton if deemed at least 50 percent at fault.

A key part of the Streets' case was the assumption that the high placement of lights on Pence's snowplow caused an optical illusion that convinced Street he had enough time to cross the highway. Larson said he felt the testimony concerning the lights and Pence's speed were important.

You always want to think the jury will consider all the evidence that you present, and I haven't talked to any of the jury members yet, but it appears they didn't find the scientific evidence important," Larson said. "It plays a big part in any accident reconstruc-know their credit card is missing until they find charges on their bill,

When Fischer returned to Iowa City in January, she found her usual bill for her Citibank Visa. What she didn't expect to find was a charge to United Airlines for a one-way plane ticket to California.

"Obviously I hadn't been in California because it was charged on Nov. 30, and that's when we were in school," Fischer said

Once fraudulent charges have been made, the card-holder and credit card company are left to decide who pays

After discovering her plastic was still in her wallet, Fischer called Citibank to report the situation.

"They really didn't grill me too hard," she said. "I said, 'My card's been in my wallet, and I don't know how anyone could have gotten it."

Citibank requested Fischer sign an affidavit saying she hadn't charged the plane ticket, asked her if anyone else had access to the card number and assured her she would not have to pay for the bogus charges.

She said she was surprised at how understanding the company was. The charge was removed from the next bill she received.

"They just sent me a bill that said, 'Under investigation,' "Fischer said. Although she has no leads on who used her card number, she suspects it was obtained through a catalog purchase she made over the phone. But a credit card purchase made over the phone is only one of the ways credit card fraud can happen.

UI junior Todd Fey and his family are currently investigating the theft of one of their credit cards. Fey's mother opened a credit card account with a $5,000 limit with Citibank and gave a card to each of her three sons.

But the idea backfired a month ago when Fey, who was staying at his mother's home, received a phone call from an employee at Wilson's The Sylvia Pence's oldest son, William Hahn, was killed in 1959 when his vehicle collided with a county snowplow on his way to West Branch High School. Sylvia Pence's daughter Vivian, then 8, was left permanently mentally impaired and wheelchair-bound because of the accident. Sylvia Pence did not sue Johnson County in 1959 for her son's death, but she did sue for money to pay for her daughter's medical expenses; she lost

Pence said he will proudly tell daughters Chelsey, 4; Hayley, 2; and his third child, who is due in July, that what happened on Jan. 19, 1993 was not their father's fault. Chelsey already understands, he said. "My older daughter was sitting there watching when (the verdict) came across the news," he said "She says, 'Dad, they said it wasn't your fault! There's my dad (on TV), and it wasn't his fault."

Pence said he realizes the Streets are still grieving the loss of their son, but he said he still feels hurt they blame him. "I feel sorry they lost their son in the accident, but they didn't need to go clear to trial to find out it wasn't speeding that killed him," he said. "He just didn't look. "The Streets were just looking for someone to Pence said he was amazed how many people showed up at the Highlander Inn to express relief at the verdict that Street was 100 percent at fault in the accident.

"I knew they believed what I'd been telling them.

His half sister's support was especially appreciated, Pence said. Now, 44, Vivian Hahn lives in a group home in Iowa City. Sylvia Pence said her daughter earned her high-school diploma at age 39, and although she is still wheelchair-bound, she holds a job.

Pence said he downplayed the importance of the two-week trial because he did not want to remind his half sister of her own accident.

"She's the kind of person who's always worrying about other people more than herself," he said. "I didn't want her to worry about what they were trying to do to me, so I told her it wasn't that big of a

Pence said he was thankful to his attorneys, Tom Riley and Marty Diaz, as well as to the county for allowing him to continue his job driving trucks and snowplows — a job he said he loves and has no plans to quit.

In most circumstances, Riley would have charged about $75,000 for a similar case, but Pence said he had been charged about $1,000 for services and fees. Donations from supporters across the state have been sprinkling in since the trial started to help him cover expenses, Pence said.

Bruins' late run sends Cowboys packing

Steve Wilstein Associated Press

SEATTLE - One by one, they calmly flicked in free throws as if taking practice in an empty gym, except each of these shots in the clamorous Kingdome edged UCLA closer to its first NCAA championship in 20 years.

It was vintage UCLA, a poised and talented team taking over in the final few minutes, going on a 12-0 surge and sweeping into the title game against defending champion Arkansas with a 74-61 victory Saturday over Oklahoma State.

For more NCAA coverage...See Page 4B.

Instead of Gail Goodrich or Walt Hazzard or Mike Warren, there was tiny Tyus Edney spinning toward the hoop, going around the giant arms of 7-foot Bryant "Big Country" Reeves, and scooping in a

And instead of Bill Walton or Sidney Wicks, there was Cameron Dollar hitting a pair of free throws, and Charles O'Bannon another pair, and Edney two more, and George Zidek two after that, and finally Dollar closing it out with the last two. Ten chances at the line, 10 points.

And by then the Cowboys could do nothing but stand in awe, like the rest of the Kingdome crowd, of a UCLA team that is back where it once belonged year after year.

"Sometime this summer it will hit me that we're playing for the championship," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said. 'It's a great feeling, from where I've come from to where I am now."

For seven years, with humor and grace, Harrick carried the burden of John Wooden's legacy - 10 championships from 1964 to 1975 and now with one more victory Harrick can shed himself of that weight. For the moment, he has the Bruins in their first title game since 1980, when a Larry Browncoached squad lost to Louisville in

Yet, for all their storied past and vaunted speed, the big-city Bruins struggled mightily before subduing the Cowboys from little Stillwater,

"I felt that if the game was close toward the end, we'd end up coming out victorious," Oklahoma State's Scott Pierce said. "There, at the end, the things that we relied upon, our defense and our shot selection, ended up failing us."

Oklahoma State was playing in its first Final Four since 1951. But with Reeves scoring 25 points and hauling down nine rebounds, the Cowboys threatened to win this game until UCLA went on its clos-

Associated Press SEATTLE - Nolan Richardson wants the world to know it takes more than luck to repeat as national champion. It takes a great player, great defense and sometimes even a wild buzzer-beater. Arkansas' 75-68 win over North Carolina on Saturday was the latest of their frantic finishes in the NCAA tournament and it moved them into Monday night's championship game against UCLA.

It also gave the Razorbacks coach a chance to tweak those who keep calling his team lucky.

"You can't be lucky if you don't put yourself in a position to be lucky. In order to win championsips you have to have luck," he said. "I just hope we have one more day of luck. Then you can write they were lucky again. They almost lost. I like that."

The Razorbacks (32-6) were able to joke about surviving because Corliss Williamson, the MVP of last year's Final Four, came up big in the second half and North Carolina, the champions just two years ago, came up empty shot after after shot after shot in the second half.

Williamson was 9-for-12 from the field in the second half and scored all but two of his 21 points after

As Williamson heated up, the Tar Heels (28-6) went stone cold against the Razorbacks' swarming defense. They went 12:38 without a field goal at one point and had only one in the final 15 minutes. They

Last weekend provided the Iowa baseball team with an impressive shutout, a final-inning victory, a disappointing loss and most importantly, three out of four wins against visiting Minnesota.

The Hawkeyes (13-8, 5-3 in the Big Ten) won their first three games against the Gophers, who finished second in the Big Ten last season, eight games ahead of Iowa. Iowa won 3-0 and 5-3 on Saturday, then won 5-4 Sunday before dropping the final game of the series 5-

MINNEAPOLIS - With its final victory in a magical season, Connecticut achieved something rare in NCAA women's basketball - perfection.

Top-ranked Connecticut capped an unbeaten season by defeating No. 3 Tennessee 70-64 Sunday to win the national championship. The Huskies (35-0) pulled it off despite the foul problems of their top three players and despite trailing by nine points early in the second half.

Only one other team has gotten through a season without losing in the 14 years of NCAA women's basketball. Texas won the 1986 title with a 34-0 record.

Defense also was critical to the Huskies, who held Tennessee (34-3) without a field goal after Tiffani Johnson's three-point

CHICAGO - There is a statue of him in front of the building and his former number hangs from the rafters. But the United Center is not Michael Jordan's kind of place. At least not yet.

"I hate this building — right now. I'm not comfortable yet. It's not a fit with me yet," Jordan said Saturday night after he and the Chicago Bulls struggled before beating the Philadelphia 76ers 91-84 to clinch a playoff spot.

"I hate this building right now. I'm not comfortable yet. It's not a fit with me yet."

"I stunk up the place, but we won the game," Jordan said after making only 5 of 19 shots and finishing with 12 points to go with six assists and five rebounds. It was his lowest scoring output in the seven games he's played since coming out of retirement.

He's had a 55-point game in Madison Square Garden, a gamewinning shot in Atlanta and now a 12-point game at home. In three games in the cavernous United Center, he's made only 20 of 59

"The road is different. Wherever we go, I played there. Here, it's still new and it's going to take some time to adjust. ... It's only the third my mind I want to think the dimensions are the same, they aren't the same. That's not an excuse," said Jordan, admitting he's having problems with the more spacious background.

Replacements' dreams come to abrupt halt

It began with a dribbler to third and ended with a weak grounder to

In between, replacement baseball provided a month of curiousities, lowlights, improbable comebacks and the strangest trade in baseball history.

There was 48-year-old Pedro Borbon falling over during exercises, then striking out the only batter he faced for the Cincinnati Reds. Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland called Borbon's signing "a dis-

"I've been like a little kid in a candy store," California Angels reliever Tony Fetchel said. "I've got a lot of great memories. I learned a lot about baseball, a lot about life and a lot about taking advantage of every opportunity.'

Willie Mays refused to work with San Francisco Giants replacements, and wouldn't even watch their games. But the Hall of Famer seemed to accurately sum up the abilities of the replacements, many of whom were career minor leaguers and former big leaguers.

They know what to do," Mays said, "but they may not do it well." Replacement baseball began March 1 at Tempe, Ariz., as California played Arizona State before about 1,300 fans. The game's second pitch was tapped to third, where the Angels' Lance Robbins gloved the ball and threw it way over the head of first baseman Jose Peguero – a converted infielder.

It ended Saturday night at Los Angeles, where the Angels' Pete Coachman grounded to short with two runners on base in the ninth. Within hours, Coachman and many of his teammates were unem-

DEFENDING CHAMPIONS

Arkansas style baffles Harrick

Bob Baum

Associated Press

SEATTLE - They throw up wild 3-pointers and their defense is They're cocky. They're lucky. They're the Arkansas Razorbacks. Their basketball is no work of art. It just works.

"You can watch all the tape you want and if you can figure out what they're doing, you're Houdini," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said, "because I can't figure out what they're doing. They trap and press you and you never know when it's coming.

When he heard what Harrick said, Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson smiled.

"That's the greatest compliment," he said.

Forget about preparing to play the Razorbacks. The defense defies strategy. How can you defend a team when its coach doesn't even know what defense is about to be used. The players make that decision and there's no telling what they will decide, Richardson said.

"Predictability is something this basketball team and old Nolan will never want to be," he said. "I get a kick out of when they say, 'You know, they gamble a lot.' We do. They give you a lot of good shots.' We do. But all those good looks ain't good, and sometimes when we gamble, we win.'

The Razorbacks are 63-8 in the last two seasons and have made their chaotic way to the brink of a second straight national title.

Ironically, Richardson's inspiration came from John Wooden's UCLA teams that employed a tough full-court press to take opponents out of their offense.

FINAL FOUR NOTES

Point guards fight off setbacks

Associated Press

SEATTLE - Arkansas and UCLA were missing their point guards during Sunday's news conferences about the NCAA championship game.

Tyus Edney of UCLA was taken to the University of Washington training facility to have X-rays on his right wrist. He injured the wrist during Saturday's semifinal victory over Oklahoma State.

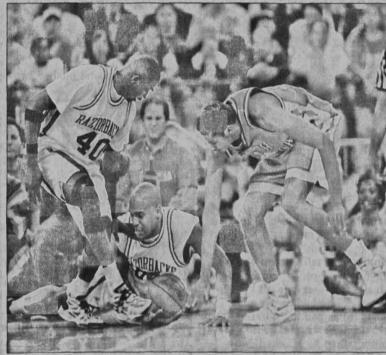

School officials said X-rays were negative and that he had only sprained the wrist.

Arkansas' Corey Beck, who suffers from asthma, was bothered by a head cold and stayed at the hotel. Both will start in toight's game.

ALL FOR ONE: UCLA is ranked No. 1, has lost only two games all season and hasn't been beaten since the end of January.

Even so, forward Charles O'Bannon believes the Bruins have not gotten the respect they deserve and won't unless they beat Arkansas in the national championship game Monday night.

HANDLE WITH CARE: Someone asked UCLA coach Jim Harrick how he intended to handle Arkansas forward Corliss Williamson, who at 6-foot-7, 245 pounds is a bull inside.

"We don't handle players, we work with them," Harrick said. So how will they work with Williamson? Harrick said the Bruins will likely use several people on Williamson.

"I have watched him as a high school player destroy high school players and come to college and do the same thing, and not a lot of guys can do that," Harrick said.

You just hope you can do a job and keep him a little bit away from

But Williamson didn't like what he saw of Thurman at first.

That first view came in an AAU basketball game. Williamson and Thurman were on opposing teams.

"I thought he was a pigeon-toed guy who talked too much,' Williamson said. "He came out and I think he hit his first three or four 3s. I got mad and told my teammate 'Let's switch, I'm going to guard him. SHORT AND SWEET: There's nothing like a person who gets right to the point.

Arkansas players were asked Sunday about the advantage of having won a national title.

Elmer Martin answered first, saying it helps to have been through such a pressure cooker

Then Clint McDaniel discussed it. Then Scotty Thurman. Then it was Corliss Williamson's turn at the microphone.

"Ditto," he said.

His three-run homer highlighted four-run third inning that put lowa ahead until Minnesota's final

But Hawkeye closer Kurt Belger missed an opportunity to pick up his second save of the weekend when he served up a solo home run to Minnesota's Wes Denning in the top of the seventh.

Denning, who would have been the game's final out, became the tying run that sent the 4-4 game into the bottom of the inning.

Iowa went right to work, leading off at the top of the order, putting runners on second and third before C.J. Thieleke popped up for the first out of the inning.

The Golden Gophers then intentionally walked Lewis to load the bases for Matt Ostrom, who flew

But the game ended with the next batter when Gopher pitcher David Lance walked Steve Fishman to send in the winning run. The 3-1 pitch, which was called a ball, was a controversial one.

"I just don't like to see the game decided by someone else other than the players," Minnesota coach John Anderson said. "It was just a bad time (for the umpire) to miss a strike.

Iowa coach Duane Banks didn't agree that it was a bad call, but did share Anderson's sentiments a little bit.

"It was a marginal pitch, but we weren't gonna' swing at it," Banks said. "It could have gone either way. It's a shame that sometimes the umpire has to decide the

EMPLOYEE ARRESTED IN SHOOTING

Tejano music star Selena killed

losh Lemieux Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas -With adoring fans, a supportive family, a sexy stage act, a distinctly emotional voice and a Grammy on her shelf before her 23rd birthday, Selena was the star of the emerging Tejano music scene

As she prepared her first recording in English, her native language, industry-watchers pegged Selena as the Mexican-American singer poised to crash through to mainstream pop and maybe superstardom.

It all ended with gunshots at a budget motel.

Police said Saturday that Selena went to a motel room Friday morning to fire the founder of her fan club, who ran a San Antonio boutique for her, and the woman shot her once in the upper back with a .38-caliber revolver. Selena, who fled to the lobby, died in a hospital about an hour later.

"That's the problem with young people. They trust too much," said Selena's father and manager, Abraham Quintanilla. "They just think that there's no bad people out there who can hurt them

Quintanilla said he recovered paperwork over the last few days that proves Yolanda Saldivar, a 34year-old employee of Selena's growing music and retail empire, was skimming money from the fan club.

"I kind of felt that she was obsessed with Selena," said Quintanilla, speaking softly and slowly outside his house. "When we presented her with all the proof that she was embezzling money, she just lost it, I guess.

"I guess she felt that she was cornered.

After the shooting, Saldivar locked herself in a red pickup in the motel parking lot and held a SWAT team at bay for nine hours by holding a gun to her head.

With television crews and hunfrom the truck and in tiny steps surrendered to police. She was charged with murder and jailed on $100,000 bail.

Largely unknown to the mainstream U.S. market, Selena's passionate soprano and spotless image carried her band, Selena y Los Dinos, to the top of Tejano.

"I can't believe Selena is gone. It's devastating," said Jessica Sierra, a No. 4 on Billboard's Latin chart this 22-year-old fan who saw the park- Selena is to be buried today.

The Barron Mendoza family approches a portrait of slain singer Selena Saturday, set up by a local radio station in Los Angeles. Fans of the famous Grammy-winning Mexican-American singer brought flowers and candles to pay their respects, and to sign a fan book the station will present to her parents. Selena was shot Friday in Corpus Christi, Texas, allegedly by her fan club manager.

"To see a Tejano artist go to that height was beyond anybody's expecdreds of Selena fans looking on, a tations," said Carlos Lopez, owner sobbing Saldivar finally edged away of a bilingual radio station that grew along with Selena's career.

"She was a role model for children," Lopez said. "She was the one who really opened the door for many

COMPANY'S SUBSIDIARY TO RELEASE ADULT FILMS

Racy new Disney films spark uproar

Scott Reckard Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. - A movie featuring promiscuous teen-agers with the AIDS virus and the deflowering of 14-year-old virgins is hardly what the public associates with Walt Dis-

Yet those youngsters and more are integral to "Kids," which Disney's Miramax Films purchased for $3.5 million and plans to release in July.

Miramax, distributor of films that have won 13 Academy Awards since Harvey and Bob Weinstein founded it in 1979, was acquired by Disney two years ago and operates with a great deal of autonomy.

The New York-based company is known for exploiting the stir created by provocative movies such as "Tie Me Up, Tie Me Down," which initially got an X rating from the Motion Picture Association of America. The film was finally distributed reviews from core customers. without a rating.

Miramax already has Disney in trouble over "Priest," a film about a homosexual priest and another who has sex with his housekeeper. It scheduled the movie for release Good Friday but changed the date after widespread protests. The 200,000-member Catholic League has called for a Disney boycott. The Timothy Plan, a Winter Park, Fla., Christian mutual fund that avoids investments in companies it believes promote abortion or pornography, has added Disney to its "no-buy" list.

Even before Disney began expanding its entertainment agenda under Chairman Michael Eisner more than a decade ago, the company had stepped into the adult-oriented arena with the movie "Splash." Its Touchstone and Hollywood Pictures divisions continued the trend.

But no Disney operation ever has released a movie rated NC-17 (which means no one under 17 is admitted). Disney has told the Weinsteins to sell "Kids" or form a separate company to release it, reimbursing the $3.5 million to Miramax.

sion of "Kids" hasn't even been completed, making it unfair to draw conclusions. Disney says there's no way the film can be sanitized.

"Harvey and Bob know Miramax can't release an NC-17 movie," said a Disney studio official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The official said that it's inconceivable the movie could be rated anything other than NC-17 - a stigma for any major studio because most newspapers won't advertise such films and most theaters won't show them.

Suggesting the Weinsteins simply are seeking publicity, the official said, "the more everybody fans the flames, the happier they are."

The idea that Disney, mecca of benign entertainment icons from Mickey Mouse to the Little Mermaid, is also the corporate parent of "Priest" and "Kids" gets mixed

"We're definitely Disney fans for family viewing."

The Weinsteins say the final ver- the family attributes," said vacationing Chicago businessman Bob Price, lounging beside the Disney-land Hotel pool in Anaheim with his wife and daughter. Yet he said he's also a Disney shareholder and grateful for the diversification that has pushed the company's stock price to record highs and annual revenues to $10 billion.

"I have no reason to criticize them," Price said of Disney executives. "They know what they're Less tolerant is Debbie Steik, a young mother browsing at the Disney Store at a Santa Ana mall.

"I think that corporations have a moral responsibility for what they produce and what they put out there," she said, dismayed over descriptions of "Priest" and "Kids."

"If Disney were involved, it would be particularly disappointing because I view them as family-oriented and generally a safe place for
