Jackson mulls presidential bid

Clinton's response to GOP's 'Contract' will play a role

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a two-time Democratic presidential candidate, says his decision on making another run will turn largely on President Clinton's response to the conservative agenda emerging from Congress.

As Republicans enact items in their "Contract With America," Clinton has a new chance to redefine his presidency, Jackson said.

"There is now, in the next few days really, we'll get the Clinton administration's response to the issues in the 'Contract,'" Jackson said at a news conference Thursday.

Jackson's comments came during a two-day swing through Iowa, where he attacked "the fear syndrome that's driving so much of our domestic national politics."

He also took a swipe at California Gov. Pete Wilson, a likely Republican presidential candidate, who he labeled a "glorified George Wallace" with a history of seeking political gain trading in racial fears.

"Wallace stood in the door with the cruelty to block opportunity, and Wilson is willing to seal the door, looking very acceptable and smiling as he does it," said Jackson. "A kind of Jim Crow Esquire. You cannot call him a racist. He looks rather normal, but look at the issues he takes on.

"He certainly goes down the same line as those who have been hostile to Democratic options historically," said Jackson, mentioned as a potential candidate in 1996, either as a Democrat or an independent.

Police: Crook accustomed to chiropractic clinic

Whoever burglarized a local chiropractic clinic Tuesday night probably was familiar with the office's layout, according to an Iowa City police officer.

At 8:28 a.m. Wednesday, the Iowa City Police Department received a report of a burglary at Zimmerman Chiropractic Care, 536 Southgate Ave.

"They broke into a door with a key," said Sgt. Craig Lih of the ICPD. "It appears to be someone who knows the layout of the office."

A 9 mm pistol, valued at $325, and an estimated $100 in cash were stolen from the office, Lih said.

Bobbitt accused in assault case at bar

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A nightclub patron and John Bobbitt traded accusations Thursday about whether they'd traded punches a day earlier.

Pedro Maldonado lodged a complaint of assault and battery against Bobbitt, who is emceeing for an exotic dancer these days.

"I didn't punch him at all," Bobbitt said. "He was thrown out of the club for assaulting me."

Bobbitt said Maldonado threw a drink at him and started throwing punches. Bobbitt said he pushed him away.

Defense attorneys accused prosecutors of harassing and spying on defense witnesses.

Jurors will be allowed to see a videotape the defense says shows the glove found at the crime scene was moved onto a bloody walkway.

A juror dismissed Wednesday for failing to disclose an incident of domestic abuse admitted she once accused her husband of pushing her and forcing sex on her.

SUFFERERS TURN TO MEDICATION

Surge of warm weather brings on early allergies

Iowa's high pollen count continues to make allergy, hay fever sufferers miserable.

Matthew Brown
The Daily Iowan

With Iowa City temperatures rising to above-average highs, pollen-filled breezes are blowing across the Midwest, and the allergy season has begun.

The bad news: Forecasts from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases indicate the warm, wet winter of 1994-95 will make the pollen count notably high this summer.

The good news: This information shouldn't be overly alarming because spring in the "tall-corn state" is always tough on the allergy-afflicted, a local allergy specialist said.

"In Iowa, the weather doesn't really affect the extent of the allergy season," said Thomas Casale, UI professor of internal medicine and director of the allergy and immunology division of UI Hospitals and Clinics Department of Internal Medicine. "It's going to be bad, but it's always bad."

Allergic rhinitis — more commonly known as hay fever — afflicts 20 percent of the U.S. population, Casale said. That translates to 35 million people — equivalent to the population of Colombia.

Nationally, 2 million school-days and 3 million workdays are skipped due to allergic rhinitis, Casale said.

"A lot of people are very miserable," he said, describing symptoms of watery eyes, sore throat, night coughing and inflammation of the nose.

Art school sets date to pick out director

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

UI School of Art and Art History faculty members will meet April 10 to try and determine who will head the school after Monday's resignation of former director Craig Adcock.

Amid controversy and criticism of his administrative style, Adcock resigned as director of the school and was replaced by a trio of associate directors. In a memo dated April 4, Dean Judith Aikin of the UI College of Liberal Arts said she had accepted Adcock's resignation and the decision was entirely his.

On Thursday, Aikin said there had been a several week performance review of Adcock before he submitted his resignation.

"There was a review of his performance as director and there were differences of opinion about his administrative style," she said.

The next step for the school will be to find a new leader, either on a permanent or temporary basis. In the April 4 memo, Aikin said she hoped "that this process can be

SPEAKER GAINS CELEBRITY STATUS

Gingrich takes job to whole new level

Mike Feinsilber

WASHINGTON — One day this week, the president of Egypt paid a courtesy call on Capitol Hill. As House Speaker Newt Gingrich hurried outside to greet him, a 7 1/2-year-old tourist spotted the celebrity.

"Hey, Newt," he called, waving an arm and jumping up and down. "Hey, Newt! Newt! Newt! Newt!"

Not everyone loves him, but can anyone imagine a kid shouting upon seeing Thomas Foley or Jim Wright or even Sam Rayburn?

Speakers of the House don't normally generate excitement. Nor would it ever have occurred to them to request television time for an address to the nation, as Gingrich is doing tonight — just like a president.

Few politicians outside the White House have become so dominant so fast or so capable of taking the agenda-setting role away from the president as has Gingrich.

In less than 100 days, Gingrich has turned a job that was always internally powerful within the Capitol into an externally powerful national office — even if he has yet to overcome the country's wariness. Overriding seniority, he installed

THREE MORE BUSINESSES OPEN

New coffee shops perk up I.C.

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

With an influx of new coffee houses getting off the ground, Iowa City is starting to resemble a little Seattle, the java capital of the world.

In addition to the several coffee houses already open, three more will open their doors this month in Iowa City: The Mingle Place, 127 E. Washington St.; Ground Zero, 112 S. Linn St.; and Uncommon Ground, 118 S. Dubuque St.

Already attracting coffee lovers and caffeine addicts in the Iowa City-Coralville area are The Java House, 211 1/2 E. Washington St.; Iowa City Coffee Co., 15 S. Dubuque St.; J T Connolly's Tobacco Bowl, 111 S. Dubuque St.; and It's a Grind Coffee Shop, Coralville.

Anne Rearick is manager of It's a Grind, which started serving coffee in June. She said she doesn't worry the coffee business will go down the drain when new competition flings its doors open.

"Each coffee house has its own distinct atmosphere and its own distinct group it's trying to target," Rearick said. "We're more of a morning, breakfast type of place."

The West Coast is a perfect example of how a myriad of java shops can profit even in a coffee-saturated environment, she said.

"If you go to Seattle, you have a coffee shop on every corner," Rearick said. "It's not going to be a saturated market here with all the students who have to study and stay awake all the time."

So, how about a cold-meet sandwich and a chocolate

Rider doesn't horse around with future

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

When UI sophomore Amy Lewis was 14, she could rarely ride her horse, Springer, without getting bucked off. But after five years of patience, training and persistence, she now hopes to make it to the Olympics someday.

Lewis, 18, and Springer, 10

DAY IN THE LIFE

(which in human years is about 25-30), have been training in dressage. Dressage, which is a form of show horse riding, is the harmonious union between horse and rider which results in the horse being able to perform complex and difficult movements, Lewis said.

"It's all about grace," she said. "It's about making something that's hard look easy."

Lewis and her horse train for about 40 hours a week at Diamond W Stables, 3135 12th Ave. Extension N.E., where Springer lives.

Since she began riding, she has accumulated a box full of ribbons from placing in numerous riding competitions. However, she said she knows she will not be prepared to compete at an Olympic level for at least 12 years. But she's willing to spend the time it will take.

"It's not really a job to me," Lewis said. "In your life you'll find one thing you really want to do; this is what I really want to do. So if I can do this and be successful, then I will."

A native of Iowa City, Lewis saw that Springer's previous owner wasn't able to care for him, so she offered to help out and eventually got the horse for free, she said.

"I felt bad for (Springer) because he didn't get much attention," she said. "So I asked (the owner) if I could ride him, and it just happened that way."

It costs Lewis about $300 a month to take care of Springer, but she works off the expense by helping out at the stables.

Lewis said Springer, who is part Thoroughbred and part American parade horse, has always been temperamental but has calmed down over the years.

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

"He used to be a holy terror, but he's quite an angel now," she said.

In addition to working and training Springer, Lewis — who has not yet declared a major — takes 15 semester hours of classes. She schedules all of them in the morning so she can train in the afternoon. At the stables, she is either training with Springer or teaching dressage to younger riders.

Lewis chose to ride dressage because she likes the challenge and gracefulness of the sport, said Susan Wallen, owner of Diamond W Stables and Lewis' close friend.

"Dressage is like learning to figure skate," Wallen said.

Many times, Lewis tries to get on Springer in an attempt to teach him a new trick but jumps right off again. Wallen said the process is much like a figure skater who repeatedly falls on the ice while attempting difficult moves.

"We spend hours here disciplining," she said. "You can't just go out there and have fun. We spend hours riding the horse in circles until that circle is perfect."

After learning to control Springer, the next step was to teach him different trots, Lewis said. Most people think horses are controlled by the reins, but the different ways Lewis sits on Springer are what controls how he trots.

"We have an ongoing joke that dressage riders have the best seat movements," she said. "Reins are secondary to the seat and hands."

Lewis' hip bones are what regulate the trot movement, she said.

"It's amazing how sensitive horses are," Lewis said. "Very little movement from me means so much to my horse. That sensitivity comes with the training."

Lewis said after her day at the stables is over, she usually goes straight home and studies before going to bed. The next day, she'll get up, go to her morning classes and train with Springer once again.

Gingrich's half sister to head gay pride parade

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Is Candace Gingrich making a statement, or does she just love a parade?

The lesbian half sister of House Speaker Newt Gingrich agreed Tuesday to be one of four grand marshals in San Francisco's 1995 Lesbian-Gay Freedom Day Parade in June.

Candace Gingrich accepted the invitation from parade organizers the day after her brother suggested Congress might reinstitute a ban on homosexuals in the military, although he has since softened that stance.

Robert Allen, parade committee president, said Gingrich was chosen chiefly because of the statement it makes.

Her appearance is a "slap in the face to the right-wing world," Allen said. "While Newt is standing on his little pedestal going off about his own thing, we're all here — even his family."

Gingrich, 28, has said her half brother is merely misinformed about homosexuality, not anti-gay. Newt Gingrich's office did not return calls from the Associated Press.

Russian director awaits kudos from government

MOSCOW (AP) — Director Nikita Mikhalkov is still waiting for a call of congratulations from his government for winning an Oscar last month.

"I am confused that the leaders of Russia have not expressed their reaction toward this victory of "Burnt by the Sun," the story of one day in the life of a Stalin-era family, received an Academy Award for best foreign language film.

The film has received glowing reviews from Russian critics and viewers, and many Russians hope the Oscar will provide a much-needed boost to the nation's beleaguered film industry.

'Chicago Eight' member speaks out on racial equality

ST. LOUIS (AP) — These days, Bobby Seale promotes Ben and Jerry's ice cream and calls himself a "revolutionary humanist."

The 58-year-old former Black Panther seems far removed from the man gagged and bound to a chair as one of the original "Chicago Eight" defendants on trial for conspiracy in 1969.

Speaking on Wednesday at Washington University as part of the Martin Luther King Jr. Symposium, Seale said the struggle for black equality continues.

Liberal whites who believe the United States can become a color-blind nation are just as mistaken as embittered blacks who want to drop out of society, Seale said.

"I love the array of diversity of color and ethnicity we have in this country," he said. "But DNA studies show we all are 98 percent similar and only 2 percent different."

Wiesel relates concentration camp experiences

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — On the 50th anniversary of his liberation from a Nazi death camp, Nobel Peace Prize winner Elie Wiesel told students to resist hatred and fanaticism.

"Fanaticism is in so many places," Wiesel said during an address to mark Bates College's 140th anniversary.

"The Nazis were the most fanatic of the fanatic movements and ideologies. It is on the rise in every place — in politics, in religion," he said Wednesday.

On April 5, 1945, Wiesel and nearly 400 children in Buchenwald concentration camp were spared. Six days later, he was freed by U.S. troops. He and two older sisters survived the camps, while his parents and younger sister died.

SUPREME COURT ACTION PREDICTED

Iowans forecast future for 'don't ask' policy

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

A recent court decision declaring the "don't ask, don't tell" military policy unconstitutional may lead to a Supreme Court ruling on the controversial issue, according to UI professors and supporters of the gay, lesbian and bisexual community.

A New York district court ruled March 30 that the Pentagon could not throw six soldiers out of the military because of the soldiers' homosexuality. The ruling marked the first federal court decision regarding the policy.

The policy, adopted by the Clinton administration in early 1993, requires gay or lesbian members of the military to refrain from revealing their sexual orientation

"I think the court came down on the right side. A lot of this issue deals with religion and, of course, it deals with sex. And when you put those two issues together, people's rationality sometimes goes out the window."

Markus Hayes,
UI law student to their peers. If the men or women break this rule, they probably can be honorably discharged.

The policy also forbids commanding officers from asking the sexual orientation of servicemen and women.

The judge's decision stands a good chance of being appealed all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, said Tim Hagle, UI associate professor of political science.

"As a general rule, if a district or circuit court finds a law unconstitutional, most likely it will get to the Supreme Court," he said. "Given the hotness of the issue, the Supreme Court should want to hear it."

The federal court made a good decision, but questioning gays in the military about sexual preference doesn't stop because of one court ruling, said Markus Hayes, a UI law student and member of the National Association of Gays and Lesbians in Legal Education.

"I think the court came down on the right side," he said. "A lot of this issue deals with religion and, of course, it deals with sex. And when you put those two issues together, people's rationality sometimes goes out the window."

If debated by the Supreme Court, the ruling on the "don't ask" issue may depend on how the case is portrayed, said Hagle. He said the Supreme Court will not be swayed if the case was argued on grounds of privacy, but an argument focusing on First Amendment rights might be effective.

"If you characterize the issue as one of free speech and it's a First Amendment issue, that is likely to be more successful," he said.

"With the composition of this particular court, they are more likely to go along with a First Amendment issue."

As science moves toward being capable of determining the biological origin of a person's sexual orientation, the issue of questioning gays in the military could be affected.

"More and more scientists seem to be flushing out information that would indicate sexual orientation is probably genetic, making sexual orientation an immutable characteristic and the kind of thing for which a person cannot be discriminated against," said Hayes.

More than a legal precedent is riding on the decision of the constitutionality of "don't ask, don't tell." The Clinton presidency may come under serious attack after the New York ruling, and with the 1996 elections looming, the issue may haunt Clinton.

UI political science Professor Arthur Miller said the debate may be used by Clinton's opponents as ammunition for their campaigns.

"In part, it might give some cannon fodder to anyone who's running against him," said Miller. "We'll have to see what happens down the lines in terms of appeals. If things remain the way they are, it might give them an opportunity to point to a policy that doesn't have a substantial legal basis."

MAN CHARGED

Hearing set to question never-used indictment

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

A hearing was held Thursday afternoon to address a motion requesting the charge of nonconsensual termination of a pregnancy against Chadwick Hippler be dismissed.

During Thursday's hearing the judge scheduled an additional hearing April 14 to review evidence pertaining to the legitimacy of the charge.

Hippler is the first person in Iowa to be charged with nonconsensual termination of a pregnancy.

He is accused of evading police in a stolen 1993 Pontiac on Dec. 9. He is charged with driving in the left lane on Riverside Drive, causing a collision with the car in which Jean and Doug Fisher were riding.

The crash severely injured the couple, causing Jean Fisher — who was seven months pregnant — to lose her fetus.

Hippler was driving a stolen car at the time of the accident, according to court documents.

To prove Hippler is guilty of the pregnancy termination charge, prosecutors must first prove he committed a felony at the time of the accident.

In court reports filed Monday, public defender John Priester asked that the charge of nonconsensual termination of a pregnancy be dismissed.

Priester stated in the report that the termination charge does not apply in the case against Hippler because there is only a "casual connection" between the felony car theft and the pregnancy termination.

If the charge is deemed legitimate, it may be addressed at a trial separate from the felony charge and relocated outside Iowa City.

MORE SHOOTINGS FEARED

House nixes move to name abortion doctors

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa House on Thursday rejected an effort to force the identification of doctors who provide abortions.

Backers insisted they were simply trying to gather important data on public health questions, but critics warned that in a political climate where doctors are being murdered, the move would "put a target" on those named.

The move came as lawmakers debated a larger measure calling for Iowa to begin gathering information about abortions performed in the state. Anti-abortion forces sought to require that doctors performing the abortions be named.

They argued that the names gathered would be kept confidential by the state's Department of Public Health and would be gathered only to assure accuracy.

"We want to report every single thing we can find about a gun owner, but we don't want to know any statistics about abortion. This is also a violent crime. Just because certain people don't think it is doesn't mean it isn't."

Rep. Brian Coon, R-Carlisle

"This is a public health issue," said Rep. Lynn Schulte, R-Mount Vernon, arguing that the measure would "provide information critical for the public health."

However, critics warned that any names gathered by state officials wouldn't remain secret for long, and there would be enormous peril for the doctors.

"Those are human beings in this department," said Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City. "I don't trust these people... not to leak the information to somebody."

"There are a lot of crazies out there," said Rep. Patricia Harper, D-Waterloo.

The critics pointed to shootings of abortion doctors in other states.

Though the measure didn't deal directly with access to abortion, critics said the state's gathering of names would scare many doctors away from the procedure. That was precisely the goal of anti-abortion forces seeking to circumvent Supreme Court decisions legalizing the procedure, they argued.

"Health-care providers are very afraid of retaliation," said Harper. "There have been many threats."

"Abortion is a legal medical procedure in the United States," said

Rep. Janet Metcalf, R-Des Moines. "Not everyone agrees with that, but it is the law of the land."

Abortion foes, however, labeled the procedure "a violent crime" that lawmakers needed to know more about.

"We want to report every single thing we can find about a gun owner, but we don't want to know any statistics about abortion," said Rep. Brian Coon, R-Carlisle. "This is also a violent crime. Just because certain people don't think it is doesn't mean it isn't."

The House voted 49-47 to strip the doctor reporting requirement from the larger measure but delayed a final action. The chances of the measure becoming law this year are slender because a self-imposed legislative deadline for bills to advance is today, and the Senate has yet to consider the measure.

U.S. cases of fetal alcohol syndrome up

A.J. Hostetler
Associated Press

ATLANTA — The rate of babies born with health problems caused by fetal alcohol syndrome increased sixfold from 1979 through 1993, the government said Thursday.

Researchers don't know whether the increase means an improved diagnosis rate by doctors or whether more pregnant women are drinking, the national Centers for Disease Control said.

Since the CDC began tracking cases, the rate has jumped from one case per 10,000 births in 1979 to 6.7 cases per 10,000 births in 1993. A total of 2,032 cases were reported among the 9.4 million births over the 15-year period.

Despite growing awareness that avoiding liquor prevents the syndrome, about one-fifth of women continued to drink even after they learned they were pregnant, the CDC said in releasing a study of data compiled in 1988.

A federal study released last fall found no significant change in pregnant women's drinking habits since 1988, said Louise Floyd, chief of CDC's fetal alcohol syndrome prevention section.

"Clearly, too many babies are still being harmed by too much drinking during pregnancy," Floyd said.

Symptoms of fetal alcohol syndrome include mental retardation, abnormal facial features, central nervous system problems, behavioral difficulties and growth deficiencies.

Health officials do not know how much alcohol harms a fetus. Many doctors advocate no drinking at all during pregnancy, and there is evidence that even small levels of alcohol consumption can harm a fetus.

Fetal alcohol syndrome was first described in the mid-1970s. Aggressive education campaigns — including warnings on liquor bottles and better training for medical students — have not done enough to combat the problem, said Patti Munter, founder and president of the National Organization on Fetal Alcohol Syndrome.

Cochran: pro-O.J. jurors targeted

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's lead attorney, angry over the loss of an outspokenly sympathetic juror, suggested Thursday there is a campaign to remove pro-defense members of the jury that will judge Simpson on murder charges.

Meanwhile, the Simpson judge, apparently alarmed by the dismissed juror's comments in a live TV interview about racial tensions and problems among jurors and their guards, ordered an investigation.

It was a wild day at the Los Angeles Criminal Courts Building Thursday, with court canceled because of juror illness, five Sheriff's Department officials meeting privately with the judge and defense attorneys making incendiary accusations.

Speaking to reporters outside,

"We think that Big Brother is doing more than just watching us on this case. We ... are very, very concerned about what seems to be a concerted effort to go after certain jurors on this case."

Johnnie Cochran Jr.,
O.J. Simpson's lead attorney

Johnnie Cochran Jr. and members of his team said their witnesses have been followed and harassed and suggested that someone is targeting jurors with misconduct allegations to affect the trial's outcome.

"We think that Big Brother is doing more than just watching us on this case," he said. "We ... are very, very concerned about what seems to be a concerted effort to go after certain jurors on this case."

He said the defense doesn't want a mistrial and, if it becomes necessary, he would accept a verdict from fewer than 12 jurors.

"We will never agree to a mistrial," said Cochran. "We have a great jury."

Only the defense could seek a mistrial at this point, legal experts said. Any move by prosecutors to end the trial and try Simpson again would place the former football star in double jeopardy, they said.

District Attorney Gil Garcetti would not directly deny his office was spying on and following defense witnesses. "We are seeking the truth, and we're doing it in an ethical, professional and honorable way," he said.

Cochran brushed off questions about the matter that led to the dismissal of juror Jeanette Harris: her failure to reveal in a jury questionnaire that she had experienced domestic abuse.

In a 1988 court document involving a child custody dispute, Harris said her husband, Melvin, "forcibly made me have sex with him" and "pushed and shoved me." She expressed fear that the abuse would get even more violent.

Cochran said that in the heat of spousal strife, many untrue things are said in court documents. He said he spent 10 days fighting to keep Harris, while prosecutors argued for her dismissal in meetings with Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

"We thought she was a great juror," Cochran said.

Harris conceded Thursday in an interview with KCAL-TV that she did file a complaint against her husband but had forgotten about it. She said the dispute was settled.

Outside their home Thursday, Melvin Harris denied hitting his wife and said two of his neighbors were lying when they told investigators he hit his wife twice, including once in October, during jury selection.

"I said that was a lie," he said. "I've never hit my wife."

While furor over Jeanette Harris' dismissal percolated outside the courtroom, the judge took the bench briefly to report that two jurors were sick. Defense attorney Carl Douglas said they were suffering from a viral infection — possibly the flu — and were treated briefly at a hospital before being returned to their hotel.

Later, a sheriff's spokesman, deputy John Castro, said a third panelist had been stricken, and court was canceled for today as well. Castro said two of the sick jurors required medical attention.

Monday had previously been scheduled as a day off, so the cross-examination of criminalist

Dennis Fung will not resume until Tuesday.

In a brief hearing on admissibility of evidence, Ito ruled the defense may question Fung about a videotape that purportedly shows a leather glove lying on a bloodstained blanket near the spot where Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were slain last June 12.

With Harris reporting that jurors had divided along racial lines and the judge cautioning the panelists earlier this week to "be kind to each other," suspicions heightened about juror friction.

Harris alleged the deputies were fomenting racial tensions and were not monitoring all jurors' communications with the outside world.

Two previously dismissed jurors denied any racial tensions among jurors when they left the case. One of them, Michael Knox, declined to comment Thursday on Harris' remarks, but Tracy Kennedy "was dumbfounded" about what Harris said, according to his wife, Judy. She said Kennedy watched Harris' TV interview with his mouth agape.

Harris was the sixth panelist to be dismissed; just six of 12 alternates remain.

ELECTION-YEAR GIMMICK

Thank God for Bob Dole

A lot of people are going to be scared or offended by this comment, but here goes nothing: Thank God for Bob Dole. While the House of Representatives pound out their "Contract With America," the Senate has actually decided to think about what they are voting on.

By now, everyone knows the "Contract" is nothing but a political gimmick to ensure Republican domination of the House for as long as possible.

As a senior Republican aide was quoted as saying, "The 'Contract' is a political document for 1996. It was never meant to be a governing document." If the "Contract" was never meant to be a governing document, does that mean the Republicans in the House weren't meant to govern? It should, especially considering what they're doing to basic programs Americans depend on, such as water regulation and environmental protection.

The "Contract With America" is nothing more than election-year gimmickry that can only benefit the elite in the short run and hurt the country in the long run.

The "Contract" is filled with style but offers very little substance. The unfunded mandates bill, which passed the House at the beginning of the current session, will eventually repeal such regulations as the Safe Water Act. Granted, it seems that the water in Iowa City isn't safe, but at least you are pretty sure it won't kill you — just turn your hair a different color.

The only good idea the House had in the "Contract" was defeated with almost no debate at all. The House put up three different term-limit bills, all with completely different provisions. This allowed Republicans to vote for one or two of them with the assurance that none of them would get enough votes to pass. That way, they can go to their constituents and say they tried. In fact, they'll be able to do that for the next number of terms, including the ones past what the bill would have restricted them to serving.

This week, the House passed the tax cuts bill that House Speaker Newt Gingrich said were the "crown jewel" in the "Contract." Don't forget the other three "crown jewels" that they've already passed. It throws a bone to the middle class in the form of a $500 per child tax break to families making less than $200,000 a year. The rest of the bill guts the capital gains tax so that people who already have lots of money don't have to pay their fair share of taxes.

The "Contract With America" is nothing more than election-year gimmickry that can only benefit the elite in the short run and hurt the country in the long run. Everyone should just hope and pray the deficit-hawks like Dole in the Senate will save us all from being taken advantage of even more.

TODAY: COURT PROCEEDINGS

What is tomorrow's fad?

A new fad is sweeping across America: the adventure of watching court proceedings.

America, after all, is a voyeuristic nation. We buy the tabloids even when we know the headlines and reports are a shade more sensational than the rumor that Lisa Marie Presley and Michael Jackson are having a baby. So the American desire to know and judge the details of high-profile court cases is inevitable, considering what we long have been addicted to:

- Soap operas. As early as the late 1960s, soap fans everywhere faithfully sat in front of their TV sets, enraptured by the continuing story lines of revered soap opera characters. With the advent of the VCR, working viewers breathed a collective sigh of relief, tore themselves from the set and went to work with renewed vigor.

- Talk shows. What could be better than a soap opera? A soap opera with characters that you are promised are real. TV Guide calls talk shows "discussion" programs. Critics say they are freak fests. Regardless of the term of endearment, talk shows are immensely popular.

But a recent and highly publicized real-life fatality resulting from a secret exposed on a talk show has the pendulum of popularity swinging backward. For now, enough voices have been heard about this sleazy medium to make it a fad of the recent past. Talk show obsession is slowly receding back to join the ranks of the shelved popularity of soap operas.

For all of the polls and pundits, books and tapes advocating the boycott of the Simpson case, it continues to be under the scrutiny of millions of viewers.

- The O.J. Simpson case. What could be better than talk shows than a real criminal court proceeding, complete with a high-profile celebrity and boyishly blond houseguest? Love it or hate it, the Simpson case is popular enough to be an American fad. For all of the polls and pundits, books and tapes advocating the boycott of the Simpson case, it continues to be under the scrutiny of millions of viewers. One reason for its popularity is that it has scenarios similar to soap operas and talk shows. It's like one long infomercial. Consequently, it is a fad.

Court proceedings are the current American obsession. The recent in-depth coverage of the Chris Street trial shows that this can also be a local fad.

Today, the O.J. Simpson saga. Tomorrow's fad? To be continued.

DAVE BARRY

Introducing a new 'Contract With America'

I travel a lot throughout this great land of ours, and everywhere I go in these politically uncertain times, people ask me the same question:

"Excuse me," they say. "Are you using that ketchup?"

Of course, that's not what they really mean. What they want to know but are too shy to ask is "Dave, are you going to run for president again?"

That is indeed a major question, and one that I have been pondering very seriously ever since I started writing this sentence. Having thought it over, I've decided to run.

Why am I running? For the same historic reason that motivated other top-quality U.S. presidential timbers, such as Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Winston Churchill: All the other candidates are goobers.

I mean, have you seen who's running this time? One of them is named — really — Lamar Alexander. I'm sorry, but the most powerful nation on earth cannot have a president named Lamar. How would he — to cite just one presidential duty — negotiate with the Serbs? The Serbs feed guys named Lamar to their goats. No, if Lamar hopes to be taken seriously, he's going to have to change his first name to something presidential, something that has the ring of authority and toughness — such as "Hillary."

We also cannot, in my opinion, afford to have a president named Arlen, as in Arlen Specter, who is also running despite published reports that the letters in his name can be rearranged to spell "Creep Rentals."

Arlen and Lamar are two of the approximately 257 leading, declared or semideclared Republican candidates. (In a tragedy for humor writers everywhere, Dan Quayle has announced that he will not seek the presidency, citing concerns about "the part where you have to raise your hand and talk at the same time.")

Marine life: There's trouble on the high seas

Our continued, relentless demands for so-called commercial marine species for use as food sources is fishing them out of existence, whether we like to acknowledge it or not. And apparently we do not.

Some once-abundant species — the herrings of northern Europe, California-area sardines, New England haddock and salmon stocks in many areas — already have been rendered extinct for commercial purposes, according to "Animal Liberation" by Professor Peter Singer.

Human development has already seriously threatened the very existence of salmon in many places where they are found. According to the Dec. 19 issue of the conservative U.S. News & World Report, more than 400 separate, genetically distinct salmon runs have been identified. The American Fisheries Society reports that of those runs, 214 are at moderate to high risk and 106 are extinct today.

The industry's take stands as an indicator of populations decimated as well. Where a 200 million-pound annual catch was supported in the Northwest in years past, that amount has plummeted to 20 million pounds annually today (U.S. News & World Report).

Up to 500,000 salmon migrated into 28 New England rivers annually in pre-Colonial times. By the early 1990s, however, the salmon numbered closer to 5,000.

The Boston Globe reported that in New England, a 6,000-mile area of previously prime fishing grounds was closed for a minimum of 90 days in an effort to protect cod, haddock and other ground fish from a local fleet that kills approximately 70 percent of them annually. The Globe also reported that further restrictions were being considered for implementation following the temporary closure, much to the chagrin of those in the fishing industry.

But the industry can be hard-headed, to say the least. When Canadian officials recently seized a Spanish trawler while enforcing the protection of threatened halibut populations near Greenland from overfishing, an international row ensued over fishing rights. In a statement quoted by Reuters, the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization warned the fishing industry: "The international community must now deal with the fundamental contradiction between the reality that ocean resources are finite and the prevailing impulse to exploit them as much as possible in the short term."

And indeed, business interests continue to win the day whenever efforts are made to protect these species. A March 13 release by The Associated Press reports that efforts to declare Atlantic salmon an endangered species were beaten back over concerns that such protection might interfere with business interests and hydroelectric development.

Federal officials refused to grant endangered status to the Atlantic salmon because the fish had already disappeared from many New England rivers where they once spawned; they refused to protect the salmon because they already are depleted past the point of help.

No. 3. I will not play golf. "ENOUGH with presidents playing golf" will be the fundamental underlying philosophical basis for my entire administration. The official recreational activity in my White House — mandatory for all visiting dignitaries, including Queen Elizabeth II — will be dodge ball.

No. 4. If any part of this nation is, God forbid, stricken by a natural disaster, I will immediately board my official helicopter and order the crew to fly in the opposite direction until we locate a decent restaurant.

No. 5. My Secret Service code name will be "Mr. Chuckletousers."

An ambitious program? You bet it is, and that is why I need your moral support in the form of money. As you may recall, I ran for president in 1992. That campaign left me with a surplus of $47.09, which has been shrewdly invested in the form of loose change inside a Nerf Ping Pong box. So by my calculations, all I need to finance my 1996 campaign is an additional $30 million, which will be used for necessary expenses as are shown in the following detained budget:

- Printing bumper stickers (Dave Barry for president: "It's time we demanded less"): $125.
- Incidentals: $29,999,875.

Of course, these figures are subject to change as the price of incidentals continues to rise. But the point is that this is a golden opportunity for you, the average voter, to get in on the ground floor of a winning campaign and possibly receive as a token of my appreciation a Supreme Court appointment. If we can all set aside our differences and work together as Americans, we can make this nation a truly great place in which for me to live. Thanks for listening. Here's your ketchup.

D'Amato tries to make amends for parody of judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Embarrassed by the fallout over his lampooning of U.S. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, the Japanese-American judge in the O.J. Simpson trial, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato went to the Senate floor Thursday to apologize.

"It was a sorry episode," the New York Republican said. "What I did was a poor attempt at humor."

Later, in an interview, D'Amato said he'd sent a note of apology to Ito.

"It was stupidity. I'm not trying to diminish the fact that I take responsibility," he said. "I've been brought up that when you make a mistake, you own up to it."

D'Amato enraged Japanese-Americans and many others earlier this week when he assumed a pidgin Japanese accent to mock Ito on a nationally broadcast radio program, "Imus in the Morning."

"He is making a disgrace of the judicial system, little Judge Ito," D'Amato said on the show.

On the Senate floor, D'Amato said his performance had been "totally wrong."

"As an Italian-American, I have a special responsibility to be sensitive to ethnic stereotyping. I fully recognize the insensitivity of my remarks about Judge Ito," he said.

Rep. Norman Mineta, who as a boy during World War II was locked in an internment camp with his parents, wrote to D'Amato asking him to apologize directly to Ito and other Americans of Japanese ancestry.

D'Amato issued a two-sentence statement of apology Wednesday saying he was sorry if anyone was offended by his performance, but that wasn't enough to placate his critics.

Amtrak to scale down to avoid bankruptcy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak announced a series of service cuts scheduled to take place in June and September as the passenger railroad tries to eliminate red ink.

Without the cutbacks, which will total 24 percent of the railroad's routes when complete, Amtrak might have been facing bankruptcy by midsummer, said Thomas Downs, president of the railroad.

If the savings from reducing service and staff go as planned, Amtrak will have a balanced budget this year and next, he said.

Amtrak was facing a $240 million cash shortfall and had been warned to expect no increase in federal subsidies. Amtrak receives nearly $1 billion a year from the Federal Railroad Administration.

"This is our last anticipated downsizing, we hope," Downs said. "We're down to what we think is the defensible foundation of rail passenger service in America."

The new cuts are in addition to service reductions announced last December and already in place.

British-born Nicholas Lee Ingram, right, sits shackled in a Butts County, Ga., court with his attorney Clive Stafford-Smith Wednesday. After the archbishop of Canterbury and several other Britons protested, as capital punishment is illegal in England, U.S. District Judge Horace Ward delayed the execution until this afternoon. Ingram, 31, was to be put to death in Georgia's electric chair Thursday evening for the 1983 murder of J.C. Sawyer at his home north of Atlanta. His attorneys pleaded with the judge to stay the execution, arguing that the condemned man was under the influence of an anti-psychotic medication during his trial.

Briton eludes execution with last-minute grant

JACKSON, Ga. — A British native won a stay of execution an hour before he was to die in the electric chair Thursday as the archbishop of Canterbury and others pleaded for leniency.

U.S. District Judge Horace Ward delayed the execution of Nicholas Lee Ingram until this afternoon, while he considers an appeal.

Ingram's lawyer had argued that Ingram should be granted a

"They believe the death penalty is a barbaric act and that the execution of Nicholas Ingram should not be allowed to go through. They say the death penalty is a ritual that has no place in the 20th century."

Mike Light, parole board spokesman, speaking about British callers new trial because he was under the influence of the anti-psychotic drug Thorazine during his 1984 trial, making him appear emotionless and remorseless. The state Supreme Court rejected that argument earlier Thursday.

Ingram, 31, was sentenced to death for the 1983 robbery-murder of 55-year-old J.C. Sawyer, who was abducted from his suburban Atlanta home, robbed of $60, tied to a tree and shot in the head. Sawyer's wife survived and identified Ingram as the killer.

The state Board of Pardons and Parole unanimously refused to grant clemency to Ingram Thursday, saying his punishment fit the crime.

The case has drawn intense scrutiny from the media in Britain, which effectively outlawed capital punishment in 1965, although it's still on the books for treason.

The prison and the parole board were inundated Thursday by phone calls from Americans and Britons.

"They believe the death penalty is a barbaric act and that the execution of Nicholas Ingram should not be allowed to go through. They say the death penalty is a ritual that has no place in the 20th century," parole board spokesman Mike Light said of the British callers.

The archbishop of Canterbury, George Carey, said Thursday he sent a letter to the parole board earlier in the week, noting that Ingram already spent some 12 years "suffering the mental and spiritual anguish of anticipating his execution."

"Show mercy and commute the death penalty to a sentence which offers eventual hope of fresh life and rehabilitation," Carey wrote.

Ingram, who holds dual citizenship, was born in Cambridge, England, to a British mother and an American father. The family moved to Georgia a year later.

Ingram's mother asked the British government to intervene, but Prime Minister John Major, in Washington this week, declined her plea.

Parole board member James Morris considered it his job to ignore the international media frenzy.

"If you get involved in the emotion of the case, you lose all sight of what you're here to accomplish," Morris said.

The board has commuted six death sentences since Georgia resumed executions in 1983. Eighteen people have been executed since then. The last was March 31, 1994.

Clashes continue in Burundi

Following a U.S. ambassador's reports of severe human rights violations in Burundi, the United Nations sent a special representative to the African country to investigate the situation. The U.N. representative reported that preliminary assumptions could be very dangerous in such a vulnerable area.

Terry Leonard
Associated Press

BUJUMBURA, Burundi — The government said Wednesday it would investigate reports of ethnic massacres in northeastern Burundi, where the U.S. ambassador said up to 450 people have been slaughtered in the past two weeks.

The U.N. special representative to Burundi said the death toll still needs to be verified and warned that unsubstantiated reports could aggravate ethnic hatred and push the country into genocide.

U.S. Ambassador Robert Krueger said Monday more than 150 people were massacred in the northeastern village of Gasorwe in three days of attacks that began March 29.

He said up to 450 people have been killed in the past two weeks in the region.

"I know the figures to be accurate," Krueger said Wednesday. "Indeed, today some of the figures were confirmed by a high-level church official."

Krueger gave the Associated Press photographs of about 10 people killed near Gasorwe. They showed grotesquely gashed corpses, including two children reportedly killed with bayonets. One victim's face was partially shot away.

U.N. special representative Ahmadou Ould Abdallah said he believed reports of violence in the Gasorwe area to be genuine, but he cautioned that death tolls there and elsewhere in the northeast hadn't been confirmed.

"We are pushing this country toward genocide. By we, I mean the international community, including the U.N.," Abdallah said. "In this fragile country, we are traumatizing public opinion by giving them figures that are not checked. We are telling them that genocide has started."

Meanwhile, Radio Burundi said at least 72 people were killed in three separate ethnic clashes this week.

Burundi's defense minister, Lt. Col. Firmin Sinzoyiheba, reported heavy fighting in northwest Cibitoke province between the army and extremist Hutu militiamen.

Foreign Minister Jean-Marie Ndayishimiye told a news conference Wednesday the government is forming a Justice Ministry commission to investigate reports of massacres in northeastern Musinga province.

He could not say how soon the commission will report or what steps are being taken to ensure it is impartial. Krueger said late Wednesday the commission would begin its work in Musinga Thursday.

Amnesty International said in a report released Wednesday that Burundi's justice system is dominated by Tutsis and has done little to establish who is responsible for political killings.

Survivors of the attacks in Gasorwe said they were carried out by men in army uniforms. For its part, the army has said 20 people were killed in the village after militiamen attacked soldiers.

Radio Burundi said Hutu gunmen killed a family of six Tutsis in the northern village of Muhanga. Tutsis living in a displaced camp retaliated and killed 29 people, it said.

Another 37 people were killed in the northeast village of Nyadikere while the army was trying to disarm Hutu militants, the radio station said. It said two gunmen were also killed in an attack on a military post in northern Burundi.

The station did not say when the attacks took place. However, a diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they apparently occurred late Monday and early Tuesday.

Sinzoyiheba, did not release any casualty figures but said an army position in Cibitoke province had come under repeated attack during the last 24 hours.

A Western source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the report could not be verified because the army had sealed off the area. However, he noted there have been similar attacks in the past.

Besides Cibitoke, there were other reports of ethnic fighting in the northeast, the northwest and the south, Krueger said.

More than 100,000 people have been killed in ethnic violence in Burundi since October 1993, when elements of the Tutsi-dominated military assassinated the country's first elected Hutu president during an aborted coup attempt.

Hundreds of thousands of other people have been killed in earlier eruptions of ethnic bloodletting since independence in 1962.

JACKSON

Jackson blasted Wilson as more than willing to play the race card when it works to his advantage.

Wilson, considered generally to represent the moderate wing of the Republican Party, has sent strong signals he intends to enter the GOP presidential race, and Jackson was asked to assess that field.

"Here's a guy who seems not to be able to make up his mind as to who he is," said Jackson.

Jackson argued that Wilson sought to import Mexican workers in an effort to undercut efforts to organize farm workers, then ran last year on his support for Proposition 187, which denies benefits to illegal aliens.

"Between fighting for Proposition 187 and kind of Latino-bashing, and the fighting to end affirmative action and fighting to stop motor voter registration, he is a kind of glorified George Wallace," said Jackson, referring to the former Alabama governor who once fought efforts to integrate colleges in his state.

During his swing, Jackson trooped through the Statehouse, then spoke at a Des Moines high school and visited a juvenile detention center as part of his campaign to reduce high-school dropouts.

It's Jackson's third trip to Iowa since the November elections handed President Clinton an embarrassing setback.

Jackson, who sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984 and 1988, said it's premature to talk about his candidacy.

"I have not made that decision yet," said Jackson, who pointedly noted that his previous races and long involvement in politics means he's in no hurry to make a decision.

"Obviously, it has to be before the summer's out to make that decision," he said. "Some people need a lot of money to buy recognition and to buy workers, but since ours has always been a campaign of conscience, a campaign of conviction, we've been able to motivate people."

ART SCHOOL

complete by the end of the month."

In order to meet her own goal of having an administrator in place by the end of April, Aikin said the installment of a temporary director may be necessary. She said she would consider the possibility of searching outside the school for an interim director. However, Aikin said her preference would be to choose the temporary leader from the school's current faculty.

"I hope they'll be able to choose somebody from their own ranks," she said. "I'm going to rely on their opinions on this. I'm expecting a lot of input from the faculty."

The circumstances surrounding Adcock's departure remain sketchy. In a March 27 memo, Aikin notified faculty, staff and students of the School of Art and Art History that the school would be run by associate directors John Dilg, Richard De Puma and Peter Feldstein on an interim basis.

The trio's period as directors was to have ended April 3 but was extended when Adcock resigned.

The transition has been extremely busy with "a lot of stuff to do," said Feldstein. He said he couldn't speculate on the chances of one of the three co-directors being named the permanent or interim director.

"I don't expect they'll go outside the school, but I really have no idea," he said. "We'll have to wait and see."

Most faculty members have been silent about the transfer of power and the reasons behind it. Feldstein said being tightlipped about the situation is saving people from getting their feelings hurt.

"People's feelings are involved. I don't think anybody's been out to hurt anybody else," he said. "Talking about it among ourselves to better the school — that's one thing — but there really isn't a need to talk about what's happened in the past in public."

The leadership transition has gone smoothly, De Puma said. The trio of administrators may be around as leaders of the school to see students through final exams, he said.

"I expect we'll be running the school until the end of the semester," he said.

Art Professor Christopher Roy said the replacement trio has adjusted well to the pressure of the change. Roy speculated the April 10 meeting might produce a possible replacement for Adcock from within the ranks of current faculty members.

"I would say that (the three) are doing an extremely fine job in such a difficult situation," he said. "I suspect anything that's done will be done from the inside, but who knows?"

COFFEE

chip cookie dough ice cream cone to go along with that espresso?

Laurie Tulchin — whose coffee shop, Uncommon Ground, opens today — said she will challenge anyone who says coffee houses have to be dark, serious joints.

Uncommon Ground, which is under the same roof as Blimpie and Heyn's Ice Cream, was designed as a coffee house for the entire family. Tulchin characterizes Uncommon Ground — which is filled with sunlight and has an aquarium arched over the door — as a food court-style coffee shop.

"There was no place downtown where families could come," she said. "Kids can enjoy the food here, and Mom and Dad can have a cappuccino."

Tulchin and business partner Jim Glasgow wanted to open a place where they would feel comfortable going — and somewhere to take a break from their construction business.

"I don't smoke or drink, but I love coffee," Tulchin said. "I also wanted something to do in the winter so I wouldn't be freezing all the time."

About a block away, Darin Dusanek will open Ground Zero the week of April 16. The 26-year-old Iowa native said he became hip to the coffee scene after living in San Francisco and Indonesia for several years.

"The coffee-house scene is huge in San Francisco — just behind Seattle, really," Dusanek said. "You can't even walk a block without seeing a coffee house."

However, on visits to Iowa City since Christmas, Dusanek and business partner Krishnanadari Rammelan decided the city could use another coffee house to cater to a different crowd.

While The Java House is a non-smoking establishment, J T Connolly's operates in a haze. Ground Zero will offer the best of both worlds, with a nonsmoking section in the front half and a smoking section in the back, where there will be couches and a 1920s piano.

"The Java House is great for what it does, and the Tobacco Bowl is great for what it does, but I thought there was a niche that wasn't quite being hit," Dusanek said.

Good coffee is what it's about, he said. "There's a real technique to getting coffee the way you want it," he said. "You develop a real taste for it. There's a few different things I can do to set ours apart from other coffees. I have a strong feeling about the true essence of coffee."

Dusanek said he wants to encourage political groups to meet at Ground Zero. He said the establishment will have poetry readings and acoustic jazz but will also cater to the studying crowd.

"At some places, if you aren't buying a coffee every hour, it's not appreciated," he said. "We're going for something a little more Bohemian here — more noir. And we want people to feel comfortable."

Ground Zero is in the process of being renovated. Dusanek is restoring the wooden floor and original tin ceiling, but he said the establishment should be a place where people won't worry about ruining the decor when they're relaxing.

"I'm going to keep a lot of the holes and dings in it for personality," he said. Rich Stevenson, manager of J T Connolly's, said he feels the coffee houses popping up now will result in an increase in caffeine addicts in the Midwest.

"It's pretty explosive right now with the coffee thing finally hitting the Midwest," Stevenson said. "What has happened on the West Coast, though, is when coffee houses started popping up this dramatically, more people started drinking coffee and finding their own place to go."

Having dozens of coffee shops in Iowa City would not pose a problem, said Dusanek.

"Obviously, there's going to be competition, but I feel there's enough of a market here. We aren't saturated," he said. "There's room for everyone because there are different niches to fill."

tious Diseases' forecast for a particularly bad allergy season is "based mostly on what's happening on the East Coast," said Casale, who worked at the institute for four years.

"We've been doing pollen counts for a number of years (in Iowa), and the results remain surprisingly close," he said.

In Iowa, trees are already pollinating and by June, grass will have shed its seeds, he said.

"It is always bad in the Midwest," Casale said. "Even the floods in '93 drowned everything but the ragweed."

Stacey Cohen, a UI junior majoring in English and psychology, said her allergies were mild before she came to Iowa.

GINGRICH

up fellow Republicans.

Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., only reluctantly went along with this week's tax cuts, which he wanted scaled down in deference to the deficit. "We've boxed ourselves in, and that's unfortunate," he said.

Gingrich, once a backbencher with no legislative record to speak of, brought single-minded attention to his task as speaker. He spoke like a visionary while offering raw meat to the conservative faithful, and that helps account for his dominance.

His timing was crucial. He came along to capitalize on the frustration of Republicans who had endured 40 years as an ignored minority in a majority-rules world.

His striking appearance and personality helped. His willingness to throw out an idea today and fish it back tomorrow was arresting and kept attention on him.

Also important was his own high-energy national campaign to elect a Republican House. He helped bring into office 73 Republican freshmen — a band of loyalists.

The country's mood played a role. The same anger that helped account for Ross Perot's strength and turned the tide from Clinton once he started to look like a business-as-usual

"You don't get much ragweed in the suburbs," said Cohen, a native of Arlington Heights, Ill. She said she takes prescription medicine when her allergy symptoms begin.

Larry Afifi, nurse manager at UI Student Health Service, said a lot of UI students from less rural areas fail to anticipate the Iowa effect.

"We can suggest over-the-counter remedies for the upper-respiratory / sinus-type problems we see," Afifi said.

Doug Renn, a pharmacist at Drug Town Stores, 1221 N. Dodge St., said he dispenses a number of preventive antihistamines and nasal sprays this time of year.

Casale said $2 billion a year is spent on medications taken to combat hay fever. His UI laboratory is involved in testing new products before they can be marketed, and UI students are recruited as guinea pigs.

Bonnie Bone, a UI sophomore majoring in English, participated in an allergy study at the UI last summer.

"We had to sit out in the park all day from 7 till 5," Bone said.

She said her allergies — which are severe and include reactions to dust, mold, dogs and cats — make the summer unpleasant.

"I usually have watery, swollen eyes, and I sneeze. It can prevent me from spending too much time outside, particularly if someone is mowing the lawn or something," she said. "It's pretty miserable."

politician played into Gingrich's hand.

The election results demonstrated that the general ideas in Gingrich's

"Contract With America" — less federal intrusion, diffusion of power to the states, less largess for the welfare-dependent — were acceptable.

Blackhawks bring back Savard

CHICAGO (AP) — Desperate for an offensive center to replace injured Jeremy Roenick, the Chicago Blackhawks reacquired Denis Savard, one of their all-time stars Thursday.

The Blackhawks sent a sixth-round choice in the 1996 draft to the Tampa Bay Lightning for Savard, 34, who played for Chicago from 1980-90.

During his decade with the Blackhawks, the flashy Savard had 1,013 points. Only Hall of Famers Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull had more points while wearing a Chicago uniform.

Including his three seasons with the Montreal Canadiens and two with Tampa Bay, Savard has 447 goals and 808 assists. His 1,255 points rank him 16th in NHL history.

Chicago was one of the NHL's best teams during the first half of this lockout-shortened season but started to slide before Sunday, when Roenick suffered a season-ending knee injury. The Blackhawks, in an 0-4-1 slump, have only three goals in seven periods since Roenick's injury.

The deal for Savard gives the Hawks four centers and means they can keep Murray Craven, another recent acquisition, at wing. The NHL trading deadline is Friday.

Savard had five seasons of at least 100 points with the Blackhawks. But his unwillingness to play a more defensive style for then-coach Mike Keenan led to one of the biggest trades in team history. On June 29, 1990, Chicago sent Savard to Montreal for defenseman Chris Chelios.

Indians ink Winfield

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — The Cleveland Indians hope the signing of Dave Winfield will cure the team's hitting woes against left-handed pitchers.

Winfield, 43, the active leader in hits, home runs and RBIs, agreed to a $600,000, one-year contract Wednesday night that gave him the chance to make $700,000 more in bonuses.

"He was our No. 1 choice all along," general manager John Hart said. "His offense was the big factor. There's no question he is a Hall of Fame player. But he's also a presence in the clubhouse. He's been down the road a few times and has played in the playoffs and World Series."

The Indians acquired the rights to Winfield in a trade with Minnesota on Aug. 31 during the strike. He never wore the Cleveland uniform because of the walkout and became a free agent.

White Sox lose Cora to Mariners

PEORIA, Ariz. (AP) — The Seattle Mariners have signed free agent Joey Cora, who started 74 games at second base for the Chicago White Sox last season.

Cora, 29, was signed Wednesday night.

Cora hit .276 with two home runs, 30 RBIs and had eight stolen bases in 90 games before the baseball strike began Aug. 12.

Nicklaus fires first-round 67

'Golden Bear' is one shot behind leaders

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Golf's past and future crossed paths on the soggy fairways of Augusta National on Thursday in a brilliant time trip through the first round of the Masters.

Phil Mickelson, the 24-year-old left-hander with Nicklaus-like promise, flogged the flags all day, raining iron shots all around the cup in a sensational 6-under-par 66.

Meanwhile, there was 55-year-old Jack Nicklaus himself, the six-time Masters champion, throwing a 67 on the leaderboard and once again thrilling the throngs.

And just to carry the generational thing one step further, there was 19-year-old U.S. Amateur champion Tiger Woods shooting a solid even-par 72 in his very first Masters.

The rain came overnight to Augusta and this was not the same hard, fast, fearsome course the players tried to tame in the practice rounds.

The greens softened, and Augusta National was there to be had. And it was.

Playing in steady rain that varied from a drizzle to hard shower, player after player battered par. Joining Mickelson atop the leaderboard at 66 were defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain and David Frost.

Tied with Nicklaus at 67 were Corey Pavin and David Gilford of England. Knotted at 4-under were Mark O'Meara and Chip Beck.

Seven players were at 69, eight more at 70 and 10 at 71 on a soggy day in which par became a meaningless standard.

"They had the course exactly where they wanted it and then the rain got them," said Davis Love, three strokes back at 69. "We knew the rain was coming. We knew the low scores were coming. What they need now is some wind and sun."

Mickelson gave a glimpse of the greatness predicted of him with a round in which he battered the flags all day.

"I didn't make any long putts except for No. 13," said Mickelson, who rolled in a 20-foot eagle putt there. His spectacular round included a pair of two-putt birdies, three 3-foot birdie putts and a 4-inch birdie putt. He bogeyed No. 11 and No. 18, missing the green both times.

No one has ever put up numbers in golf like Nicklaus, winner of the career grand slam but shut out in the majors since winning here in 1986. Still, he was looking and talking like he thinks he could still win.

"I sort of gear my year to get started here," Nicklaus said. "I guess maybe I point for this golf tournament."

Nicklaus holed a 5-iron for an eagle 2 on No. 5 and drew huge galleries and thunderous applause in the far reaches of Amen Corner where on this rainy day the brilliant beauty of the dogwoods and azaleas in bloom were almost obscured by a garden of colorful umbrellas as the thousands of fans huddled trying to stay dry.

They were more than warmed by the four-birdie, no-bogey 32 Nicklaus shot on the back nine.

Also warming was the effort by Woods, the stone-faced Stanford freshman.

"I just kept on saying to myself, 'The game hasn't changed. One shot at a time. Low scores wins,'" Woods said. "Everytime I step up on the first tee I get nervous. No matter what kind of tournament it is, I get jitterbugs on the first tee."

If he was nervous, he certainly handled the hoopla very well with four birdies and four bogeys.

The golfers found the inconvenience of playing in rain was more than made up for by the softness of the greens.

Ernie Els of South Africa shot a 32 on the back nine to save an even-par 72.

Six-time Masters winner Jack Nicklaus reacts to the 1995 Masters tournament Thursday. Nicklaus saving par on number 18 during first round play of finished the round at five-under-par.

CUTTING PAYROLL

Montreal, KC unload All-Stars

Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — Kansas City and Montreal continued their payroll purges Thursday, with the Royals dealing David Cone to Toronto and the Expos moving Marquis Grissom to Atlanta.

Montreal, which on Thursday sent starter Ken Hill to St. Louis and reliever John Wetteland to the New York Yankees, is attempting to cut its payroll to about $12 million. In doing so, the Expos are dismantling the team that had the best record in baseball (74-40) when the strike began last August.

"It's happening. We're just out front. The money — it's starting to show that there's not a lot of it," Expos general manager Kevin Malone said.

Kansas City sent outfielder Brian McRae to the Chicago Cubs on Wednesday before the unexpected deal for Cone. Kevin Appier and Tom Gordon could be gone by Friday, the deadline to offer contracts to players eligible for salary arbitration.

"Sometimes you have to bite some real tough bullets," said Bob Boone, the Royals' first-year manager. "You can't hide the fact that taking a Cy Young Award winner out of your rotation is a blow to the quality of your rotation. But nobody said it was going to be easy. I'm not going to cry in my beer and say poor me. What we're looking at is the long-term health of this organization."

Conference leaders square off at Purdue

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

The season is still early, but if you ask Coach Duane Banks, he'll tell you it makes no difference.

"Every game is so important," Banks always says about the Iowa baseball team's Big Ten competition.

This weekend's four-game set at Purdue should be no exception.

After facing Michigan and Minnesota, the Hawkeyes (16-8, 5-3 in the Big Ten) have taken an early lead in the conference standings. However, the Boilermakers also have a 5-3 conference mark and are right there with Iowa.

"I think this is a big weekend for us because we need to do well to stay atop the Big Ten," senior catcher Steve Fishman said. "Normally, we'll play two good Big Ten weekends, then we'll falter in the third one."

"We have to go balls out like there's no tomorrow. This is the weekend that we have to do it."

The Hawkeyes have 20 games remaining in conference play, but they are still looking to get the job

Home was finally sweet to the Iowa softball team.

After losing their home opener to Illinois State a week ago, the Hawkeyes got on track, taking a pair of games from Bradley, 4-3 and 5-0.

"The first game, we were kind of inconsistent. Defensively, we were kind of up and down. The second game, we came out and were in control," senior catcher Stacey Harrison said after the games.

"We've struggled, being inconsistent in back-to-back games. We needed these games for our confidence. In the past, we've played one game and let the second game go."

With two runs in the first and two more in the second, it looked as if Iowa would run away from Bradley in game one.

But those four runs are all that the Hawkeyes would tally in the seven-inning affair, although they still held on to win 4-3.

Bradley scored first when lead-off batter Amy Pera crossed home plate on an error by Iowa catcher Stacey Harrison.

After Iowa ran up a 4-1 lead, the Braves slowly began chipping away at the Hawkeye advantage. In the top of the fourth Bradley pitcher Amy Elza came around third to barrel over Harrison, who was unable to hold onto the ball and keep the Braves from scoring their third run.

But that was as close as the visiting team would get.

Despite consecutive hits to lead off the sixth, Bradley was unable to capitalize as Iowa's Debbie Bilbao came in relief to stabilize the Brave rally.

Leticia Castellon started for the Hawkeyes, improving her record to 4-3. Castellon allowed six hits while striking out three before Bilbao's entrance in the sixth.

The deciding blow was struck by Harrison. With nobody out and Melissa Wielandt and Erin McGee aboard, Harrison went

2,009 AND COUNTING

Ripken targets Gehrig's record

David Ginsburg
Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — The photographers clicked their shutters in rapid-fire fashion, the TV cameras whirled and autograph seekers scrambled to get their pens ready.

Cal Ripken had just emerged from the Baltimore Orioles' clubhouse, back in uniform for the first time in nearly eight months and eager to sharpen his skills before resuming his assault on Lou Gehrig's record streak of 2,130 consecutive games.

Ripken's outdoor workout Thursday lasted only 30 minutes before a rain shower forced the team indoors. But the media blitz continued a few hours later, when the durable shortstop sat down for the first of the inevitable dozens of news conferences he will participate in during this record-breaking season.

If all goes as planned, Ripken will pass Gehrig's mark on Sept. 6 in Baltimore.

Before then, he will be required to talk about The Streak until he no doubt becomes absolutely sick of the subject.

"I wish I knew how to handle it, but I'm going to try to do the best I can at retaining my focus on baseball and trying to approach this season just like I've done every other season," he said.

"I might handle it terribly, I might handle it OK. I don't know. I hope our team will win, and the whole focus will turn toward our team's chances of winning the pennant."

Regardless of how the Orioles fare in the AL East this season, the focus will be on Ripken, who has played in 2,009 consecutive games since May 30, 1982.

The streak was threatened by the baseball strike and the possibility of replacement games, but that is no longer a factor, so Ripken is now free to pursue a baseball record that once seemed unreachable.

"It was a record I thought would never be broken," Orioles manager Phil Regan said.

"For a guy to go that long without being sick, pulling a hamstring or breaking a finger — it's unbelievable."

Gehrig missed two starts during his string and occasionally was removed from a game after assuring the streak would continue. Ripken, who has started every game and missed just 148 innings, doesn't know all that much about the man whose record he is chasing.

Ripken once felt compelled to learn more about Gehrig, but quickly abandoned the idea.

"I was afraid by knowing about him, it would spark an obsession that would change my approach," Ripken said. "So, although I'm curious, I have decided not to know so much about Lou. At some point, maybe when it's all over, I'll sit down and learn a little bit about him."

Ripken apparently has a lot to learn, at one point saying of Gehrig, "I think he was a first baseman."

Ripken, 34, said the streak is a product of his upbringing. His father, who dedicated several decades to the game of baseball as a player, coach and manager, instilled a win-at-all-costs attitude into his three sons.

"I was raised with a work ethic and approach in that the object of team sports is to win. Do whatever it takes to win," he said.

"It's important for you to rely on your teammates to make that happen, and therefore it was important for me to be counted on by my teammates to be in the lineup every day."

"I'm proud of the streak for the reason that my teammates can count on me to be in the lineup and hopefully do something during the course of the game to help us win. I come to the ballpark ready to play and wanting to play."

Ripken has done that for the past 13 seasons.

AFTER JOINING YANKEES

Wetteland criticizes Montreal moves

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Newly acquired relief ace John Wetteland joined the New York Yankees for a voluntary workout Thursday but his mind was still on the dismantling of the Montreal Expos, the team that traded him.

"It's sad," Wetteland said. "Apparently they don't want to spend a dollar to make two."

Montreal, citing a need to dramatically reduce its payroll, sent Wetteland to the Yankees on Wednesday for Class A prospect Fernando Seguinol, a player to be named — expected to be a marginal talent — and what both teams indicated was a substantial amount of cash.

On the same day Montreal parted with one of the game's premier relievers without receiving anything of immediate value, the Expos also dealt 16-game winner Ken Hill to St. Louis for three prospects. Montreal is almost sure to lose more expensive talent such as Larry Walker and Marquis Grissom before it is over.

"I spent three years with Montreal. We all practically grew up together," Wetteland said. "That's tough."

Montreal received little reward after nurturing its talented young group of players. The Expos held the best record in the major leagues at 74-40 when players struck last Aug. 12, but never had the opportunity to prove their mettle in postseason.

Hard-line owners point to Montreal's small-market woes as evidence that baseball's economic system must be overhauled to include revenue sharing and a payroll tax that would help level the playing field shared by large markets and small.

Yankees captain Don Mattingly, for one, doesn't agree with that assessment.

"It strikes me they're not willing to put a product out or even try to," Mattingly said.

Wetteland said Montreal possessed a loyal fan base but lamented it was not larger. "Where was the support when we were in first place and we had 15,000 in the stands?" he wondered.

Hawks, Illini renew rivalry

The Iowa women's tennis team continues its six-game homestand this weekend when Purdue and Illinois come to town.

The Hawkeyes battle the Boilermakers Saturday at 9:30 a.m., then face the Illini on Sunday at the same time.

Illinois returns 11 starters and six seniors from last season.

Iowa will have a decided advantage against Purdue at the No. 1 singles position where Rachel Fiset is 3-22 on the year.

Both meets are at Klotz courts or the UI Rec Building depending on the weather.

Micki Schillig

Iowa is coming off a 6-3 victory over Minnesota last Sunday. The Hawkeyes upped their record to 6-8, 2-3 in the conference and hope to use this homestand as momentum heading into the last month of the season.

Coach Micki Schillig said her team is confident and ready to make some noise down the stretch.

"We're fired up and its starting to show," Schillig said. "Illinois has always been a big rival, so we're definitely looking forward to seeing them. But we are not going to overlook Purdue. We're going to have to play consistent all weekend. If we do that, then we should be fine."

Men's track
Having gone two weeks without a meet, the Iowa men's track team is ready to lace up its shoes and get back into competition.

Coach Ted Wheeler feels his athletes are ready to build on their performances in California over spring break as they compete in the Searay Relays today and Saturday, in Knoxville, Tenn.

"I'd have to say we're performing good," Wheeler said. "Right now, if you look at the Big Ten rankings, we're ranked pretty highly in the 100, the 200, the 400, the relays, the pole vault and the 5K."

This weekend, the Hawkeyes will find out exactly how good they really are.

Somewhere between 35 and 45 top schools will compete at the meet, along with numerous individuals running unattached.

The Hawkeyes will take pole vaulter Chad Ohly, Chad Feeldy in the 1500 meters, Andre Morris and Ed Rozelle in the 400 meters, Dion Trowers in the 110 high hurdles and the 4-by-100 and 4-by-400 relay teams to the meet.

"It's a top-level meet. Right now we aren't taking (George) Page (leg injury). That will have an effect on our relays and our team performance," Wheeler said. "We hope to get in the top five in each event."

"Last year, we performed well. We hope we can perform well in the relays and individual events and place high."

Individual events will take place today, with relays set for Saturday.

—Chris Snider

Women's track
If last weekend's Florida Relays were any indication of things to come, the Iowa women's track team will be a force to reckon with.

This weekend the Hawkeyes compete at the Sea Ray Invitational in Knoxville, Tenn., following a strong season opener in which they captured two victories and two top three finishes.

The invitational field will feature nearly 30 teams, including several from the traditionally tough Southeastern Conference. Iowa finished fifth out of 22 teams at last season's Sea Ray Invitational.

The Hawkeyes said it will be a dogfight for the invitational championship.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

"Whenever we go down to Tennessee, the competition level is really high," senior Yolanda Hobbs said. "It should really push us. When you see teams there like Alabama, Tennessee and other SEC schools it makes you think to yourself 'Now I have to run.'"

Senior Erin Boland should help add some punch to the Iowa distance attack.

She will be making only her second appearance since being sidelined with tendinitis in the knee following the cross country season.

Boland said the team would be working hard to improve its times.

"Coach (Jerry) Hassard wants us to work through this meet and use it as training," she said. "We're not backing off at all this weekend."

Sophomore Becky Coleman said Iowa was ready for the challenge.

"I think everyone is pumped after a good showing at the Florida Relays," she said. "We just want to go out there and have everybody running, jumping and throwing well."

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawks begin quest for national title

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

The quest for its ultimate goal begins Saturday for the Iowa men's gymnastics team.

The Hawkeyes head to University Park, Penn., for the NCAA East Regional. The top three teams will advance to the NCAA Championships on April 20-22.

Coach Tom Dunn said that he is excited about Iowa's chances at a national championship.

"We definitely have a shot," Dunn said. "We're ranked number one in the east and number two in the nation."

"The whole thing is so tight this year, you can't tell who our strongest competition will be."

Ohio State should have a strong squad in the East. In the West, Stanford, New Mexico and Nebraska appear to be the teams to beat.

Iowa is coming off a second-place finish at the Big Ten Championships. The Hawkeyes finished with 229.55 points, just narrowly behind first place Minnesota's score of 229.825.

Junior Jay Thornton and sophomore Carlos Herrero won individual event titles. Thornton finished with a school record 9.95 on the floor exercise. Herrero took first place on the horizontal bar.

Minnesota's win at the Big Ten Championships was a surprising victory. Dunn is not overly concerned about the Gophers.

"To be honest, I don't worry about them as much for the national title, but we don't overlook them either," Dunn said. "Obviously, they're capable of beating us."

Dunn said that he expected it would take a score of close to 230 to win the regional. Still, it is not necessary to finish first to advance.

"The regional is just that, a qualifying meet, with the top three teams moving on to the national. Third is just about as good as first for us."

MEN'S TENNIS

Road warriors return to meet Big Ten foes

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

A road weary Iowa men's tennis team returns home this weekend for a pair of crucial Big Ten meets against Wisconsin and Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes face the Badgers today at 2:30 p.m. and square off against the Wildcats at 2 p.m. on Sunday. Both meets will be at Klotz tennis courts or the UI Rec Building depending on the weather.

Iowa is coming off a six-game road trip in which it went 3-3. The Hawkeyes stand at 7-9 overall, 1-5 in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes are in the middle of a three game slide but hope to turn things around at home.

Coach Steve Houghton said it was good to finally be playing at home after being on the road for so long. "We're glad to be on our own court," Houghton said. "I think it will help us to relax and focus, knowing we don't have to travel after playing a tough meet."

Wisconsin comes to town with a 2-13, 0-4 mark in the Big Ten. Northwestern is ranked 41st nationally, sporting a 7-8, 3-1 record in the Big Ten.

Iowa has been fighting off injuries, which has caused some changes in the lineup. Senior Bryan Crowley is nursing a sore shoulder and senior Bob Zumpha's season has long been over after injuring his knee against Notre Dame. Houghton said the Hawkeyes depth has really been hurt by the injuries.

"We've struggled a bit but I know we have people who can step in and get the job done in any situation," Houghton said.

World Boxing Council president Jose Sulaiman presents WBC heavyweight champion Oliver McColl with the WBC Boxer of the Year Award during ceremonies Wednesday in Las Vegas. McColl will defend his title when he fights Larry Holmes Saturday.

Champion McColl vows to prove skeptics wrong

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Oliver McColl laughed when asked how he felt when people said he wrote that his second-round knockout of Lennox Lewis was a fluke.

"I hope my opponents think it's a fluke, too," the WBC heavyweight champion said Thursday. "Then they'll underestimate me, and I'll perform another fluke."

Mike Tyson's former sparring partner is preparing for the first defense of the title he won from Lewis last Sept. 24 in London.

McColl fights Larry Holmes on Saturday night at Caesars Palace.

"If I lose this fight, I'll quit right away," said Holmes, a sparring partner for Muhammad Ali before becoming the world's premier heavyweight as WBC and IBF champion from 1978 to 1985.

"There's no sense in going on."

The 29-year-old McColl is favored to retain the title on the pay-per-view show of four championship fights. They include a match between Tony Tucker and Bruce Seldon for the vacant WBA heavyweight title.

In another fight, Julio Cesar Chavez will defend the WBC super lightweight championship against Giovanni Parisi of Italy.

"I've trained for the Holmes of 1978," said McColl, who appears in superb physical condition. "Now if it is the Holmes of 1978, it just will be a little tougher."

Holmes also looks to be in top physical shape. The question is can his 45-year-old legs carry him to victory over the bullish McColl, who can take a punch?

"If I lose this fight, I'll quit right away."

Larry Holmes, former heavyweight champ

"If George can do it, why can't I do it?" Holmes asked. "George is not as good as I am."

George Foreman, who turned 46 on Jan. 10, became the oldest heavyweight champion in history when he knocked out Michael Moorer in the 10th round last Nov. 5 — two days after Holmes' 45th birthday.

"McColl can't bring nothing I haven't seen before," Holmes said.

"He's going to feel some of the pressure I felt before when I was heavyweight champion of the world for 7 1/2 years. He's going to feel all the pressure."

McColl, however, seems to be thriving on the attention a heavyweight title can bring.

He also is aware that if he keeps winning he would be in line for a major-money match with Tyson, who is scheduled to attend Saturday's show. The glory of a victory over Tyson is added incentive.

"It ain't about the money," McColl said. "I want to beat Tyson's butt. I want a little of a lot of money and a lot of glory. I'd rather have $10 million and a lot of glory than $100 million and no glory."

Holmes said that if he beats McColl, he's not interested in fighting Tyson unless it could be held before Tyson, who hasn't fought since June 28, 1991, has any tuneups. That won't happen.

The winner of the Tucker-Seldon fight also will be in line for a fight with Tyson. They, McColl and Holmes are promoted by Don King, who also promotes Tyson.

"When you've got Mike Tyson you've got big money," said the 35-year-old Tucker, IBF champion when he lost a 12-round decision to Tyson for the undisputed championship on Aug. 1, 1987.

A broken right hand and managerial and drug problems kept Tucker out of the ring for 28 months. He then fought his way to a bid for the WBC title, which he lost on points on May 8, 1993.

PRO FOOTBALL

WLAF gives veterans last shot at glory

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Dedrick Dodge and Ted Popson earned Super Bowl rings. Scott Mitchell got an $11 million contract. Jason Garrett became a folk hero for a week and Anthony Parker returned two interceptions and a fumble for touchdowns.

Welcome the World League of American Football, part II.

When the league resumes play this week after a two-year hiatus, there are 240 players who would love to follow in the footsteps of those players and 38 WLAF alumni who played in the NFL last season.

None of them made the Pro Bowl, but all achieved what the World League was set up to do — train players with potential who are deemed not quite ready for the NFL.

"I've always thought we needed a developmental league. We use it that way," says Carl Peterson, president of the Kansas City Chiefs, who had four WLAF alumni on their roster last year. Among them were receiver Willie Davis and linebacker Tracy Simien, both starters.

This year, the exposure of the World League players will be limited in the United States, although plenty of scouts will make the trek to Europe to take in the action.

For example, can Gino Torretta, the 1992 Heisman Trophy winner, show for the Dusseldorf Rhein Fire the arm strength he's been lacking? His NFL career never took off, and he wound up as Detroit's third-stringer at the end of last season.

Or can Will Furrer, who's bounced from the Bears to the Cardinals to limbo, show enough promise to get another shot? The same goes for Tony Sacca, once Arizona's third-round choice.

Associated Press

Dallas Cowboys quarterback Jason Garrett looks downfield for a receiver against the Packers Nov. 24 in Irving, Texas.

"It's something we've been through all our career," Torretta says. "You have to start at the bottom and work your way to the top."

The rosters of the six teams are littered with other familiar or semi-familiar names, some of whom had their day and are simply looking for paychecks.

One of the Amsterdam Admirals for example, is 30-year-old Troy Stradford, who played four seasons with Miami as a kick returner and third-down receiver before succumbing to injuries. There's running back Siran Stacy of the Scottish Claymores, a big-time player at Alabama who failed with the Eagles. And there's tiny Tony Jones, who played with Houston in its run-and-shoot but is now 28.

But most are hopefuls, some farmed out by NFL teams, often from the practice squad, to see what they can do.

SHOWS START MAY 5

Friday Night Concert Series set up to provide family fun

Tom Vinson
The Daily Iowan

Now that it appears that spring may finally have sprung, plans for the return of the Friday Night Concert Series to the area by Dubuque Street Fountain on the downtown Pedestrian Mall are being revived.

Lisa Barnes, executive director of the Downtown Association, said the idea for the free performances, which are set to start May 5, began three years ago when local business owners, professionals and employees decided to improve the family environment of the downtown area.

"A committee of concerned citizens and downtown business owners got together and worked with the police department, Chamber of Commerce and recreation department to propose strategies to make the downtown area a safer, family-friendly environment. One of the results of the task force was the Friday Night Concert Series," she said.

The live-music shows feature a variety of blues, reggae and pop bands that are popular with a wide range of audience members. The 6-9 p.m. time slot is ideal for families and can keep others out of trouble, Barnes said.

"Because of having an activity like that which is very visible and in which the police are involved, it encourages family participation," she said.

The series is not only good for families and downtown businesses, but the unique outside venue provides good exposure for the bands as well, Barnes said. Top priority for the shows, which drew more than 4,000 fans last year, is given to local bands.

"We really enjoyed playing in the walking mall last year," said Jim Viner, drummer for local band High and Lonesome. "It's a great thing that the Downtown Association does for the community."

The Friday Night Concert Series will be held every Friday through Sept. 1. Shows are free and open to the public.

SELENA'S MUSIC MOCKED

Shock jock Stern apologizes for jokes about singer's death

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Radio personality Howard Stern told listeners Thursday in Spanish that he meant no harm when he made fun of the killing of singer Selena.

The stunt, which included playing the slain woman's music to the sound of gunfire, had stirred outrage among Mexican-Americans.

Stern said on his morning radio program that his comments Monday — the day the 23-year-old star was buried — were not meant to hurt the victim's loved ones. "As you all know, I'm a satirical person. My comments about Selena's tragic death, without a doubt, were not made with the intention of causing even more pain to her family, friends and those who loved her," Stern said in his statement, which was translated from Spanish by the Associated Press.

In his broadcast Monday, Stern poked fun at the star, who was dubbed the queen of Tejano music, and portrayed her work as silly and shallow. He and his sidekicks also played excerpts of Selena's music with gunshot sounds.

"This music does absolutely nothing for me," Stern said. "Alvin and the Chipmunks have more soul. ... Spanish people have the worst taste in music. They have no depth."

Stern also parodied weeping mourners and made disparaging comments about Mexico and Mexican-Americans.

Hispanic leaders called the remarks disrespectful and racist and threatened to boycott businesses that advertise on the shock jock's radio show.

On Wednesday, the League of United Latin American Citizens said it would try to get Stern's nationally syndicated morning program off the air, either through Federal Communications Commission action or by pressuring advertisers.

"The man has no scruples," said Hector Flores, the 100,000-member group's regional director in Dallas. "He hides behind his constitutional right to free speech and freedom of the press. But I don't think that our forefathers intended for these rights to be abused in this manner."

Selena was shot and killed last Friday at a motel in Corpus Christi, Texas. A former employee was charged in the killing.

The FCC already has fined

Stern's employer, Infinity Broadcasting Corp., a total of $1.67 million for indecency violations after complaints against Stern, whose program often features racial, ethnic and sexist insults.

Nonetheless, his guests often include politicians, such as U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York and Gov. Christie Whitman of New Jersey, both Republicans. Stern ran briefly for New York governor last year as a Libertarian but quit the race rather than file financial disclosure forms with the state.

It was the second flap this week involving a syndicated talk radio show. On Wednesday, D'Amato issued a statement saying he was sorry "if I offended anyone" for his remarks the day before on the show of Don Imus. D'Amato had made fun of O.J. Simpson case Judge Lance Ito in a mock pidgin Japanese accent. Ito is a Japanese-American.

Quicksand
Manic Compression

Merely mentioning Green Day and some other major-label punk bands is enough to make many punk fans either giggle or cringe, depending on their disposition. The more open-minded among them may reconsider their corporate condemnation after slipping into Manic Compression, the second release from Quicksand that's as driving and dense as the New York hard-core scene from which the band sprang.

The band seems to see its sound as a sublimation of hard-core punk, combining the immediacy and spirit of hard-core with a more creative approach to rhythm and structure.

Quicksand is as concerned with engaging your mind as it is with assaulting your eardrums, and even amid the frenzied pace of songs like "Backward" and "Divorce" it's difficult to miss the band's careful craftsmanship. The few songs that exceed three minutes — particularly "Landmine Spring" and "Delusional" — delve into a complexity many punk bands don't even attempt.

In the hands of Sergio Vega, the bass is no backup instrument; it's a formidable weapon, and guitarist Tom Capone generally finds more interesting things to do with his time than repeat the same power chords ad nauseam. Along with Alan Cage's powerful, precise drumming and Walter Schreifels' clear but severe vocals, they form one of the most talented punk bands to grace a major label.

The album is slick and approachable enough that it may not appeal to some punk purists, but if future major-label rosters include more Quicksands and fewer Green Days, perhaps there is hope for major-label punk after all.

Spiritualized
Pure Phase

In essence, there is only one Spiritualized song — one that singer/songwriter Jason Pierce and company have never actually recorded.

Since his early days with the lo-fi, high-minded Spaceman 3, Pierce has been obsessed with finding and recording the unobtainable "music of the spheres," which would incorporate breathtakingly subtle melodies with harsh, endless feedback of the simplest chords.

Pure Phase sees that pursuit take a new tangent, featuring both sparse ambient tracks and fuzz-laden blues riffs. By comparison with its predecessor, 1991's Lazer Guided Melodies, Pure Phase engages the listener in a somewhat less active role, emphasizing the visceral power of phasing sound waves over the intellectually stimulating layered melodies of previous Spiritualized recordings.

Like any artist whose work honestly strives to peer behind the universal veil, the success or failure of Pierce's recordings is ultimately a subjective question. At the most basic level, Pure Phase is a great listen, both for its remarkable production detail and the simple elegance of songs like "Medication" and "Let it Flow."
