Women banned from church for noisy prayers

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Two women banned from a church for their loud prayers were at it again Sunday, this time at another church.

Despite earlier requests from priests to stop, the two prayed aloud at Blessed Sacrament Cathedral right after an early Mass, the Rev. Richard Kosisko said. The women have been praying at the church for about six weeks.

Three pastors have asked them to stop "so that our parishioners can spend time with the Lord in private prayer," Kosisko said.

The women, Joan Sudwoj and Cynthia Balconi, were banned Friday from another church in Youngwood, about five miles from Greensburg.

The Roman Catholic congregation had sued the women, saying the loud prayers had disrupted Masses and other services for two years. A third woman had agreed to be quiet.

Erroneous declaration of death peeves retired man

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Retired Army Sgt. Norman Rogers is alive. He just can't seem to get that across to the government.

Rogers, 43, says the government mistakenly declared him dead Feb. 1 and stopped paying his retirement and disability checks.

"We all thought it was funny at first. But shoot, I'm missing two months' pay now," he said.

Rogers had been paying his mortgage with the $854 monthly benefits, which were automatically deposited into his bank account.

Army spokesman Lt. Col. Bill Harkey in Washington said Sunday he was not aware of the case but that it would be investigated.

UI lawsuit has day in court

Dental hygiene program trial begins today in Des Moines

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Lawyers are set to clash in federal court today regarding charges the UI practiced blatant gender bias when deciding to terminate its dental hygiene program.

Three faculty members of the program filed suit against the UI in 1992, claiming the scheduled axing of the department discriminates against women. All faculty, staff, students and alumni of the program are women.

The case is about equity, not money, said Kelly McClelland, one of two attorneys representing the faculty members.

"This case is about justice. It's

"We have an all-female program. The faculty, staff, students and alumni are all female. It's very clear it was discrimination."

Beth Pelton, associate professor in the dental hygiene program and lawsuit plaintiff about arrogance of large universities and how they discriminate against female faculty," he said. "It's about the administration's failure to act as a check and balance of deans that violate faculty members' rights."

Associate Professors Beth Pelton, Nancy Thompson and Paula Brine are the plaintiffs in the case. The trial, being held in a federal court in Des Moines, is expected to last two weeks.

The plaintiffs are asking for continuation of the program and about $20,000 in compensation to be split among themselves.

The decision to close the program this May was finalized by the Iowa state Board of Regents in April 1992 to help trim $18.3 million from the UI's budget over four years.

The UI's dental hygiene program is the only bachelor's program in dental hygiene in Iowa and one of six in the United States with a master's program. McClelland said the UI would enhance its reputation by continuing the program.

"This university is always trying to market itself as the Harvard of the Midwest," he said. "They have a nationally recognized program right here in their midst that would help them achieve that and they're trying to cut it."

UI legal counsel Mark Schantz will defend the UI along with Iowa

Action, not words

While most demonstrations consist of signs, protesters and chants, Friday's Earth Day observance was a bit different. Led by mimes, the demonstrators walked from the downtown Pedestrian Mall to the Pentacrest without uttering a word. The group's message was a 17th-century haiku written by Japanese poet Basho. When asked their names, the mimes did not respond.

Bombings in Israel aimed to end talks

KFAR DAROM, Gaza Strip — Islamic militants opposed to the Israeli-PLO peace process killed six Israeli soldiers and wounded dozens of people in two suicide bombings Sunday near isolated Jewish settlements in the Gaza Strip.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said he would continue talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization despite calls by right-wing opponents and some of his allies to halt them in protest.

In the first attack, a van parked by the main Gaza highway exploded near an Israeli bus at about noon, killing six soldiers, said Brig. Gen. Doron Almog, Israel's commander in Gaza. Officials said 34 people were wounded.

Two hours later, about six miles up the road, a car driapplied not only to rape and battering, but also to political assaults on welfare spending, abortion and affirmative action.

"As women have been able to take some small measure of power, we're facing a fierce backlash," Patricia Ireland, president of the National Organization for Women, told the crowd.

Thousands of people spread across the National Mall for the five-hour rally, organized by NOW and endorsed by more than 700 groups — including abortion rights supporters, labor unions, civil rights groups, gay and lesbian organizations, environmentalists, socialists, victims' rights advocates and welfare recipients.

The U.S. Park Police, using helicopters, counted 50,000 people at the rally. Ireland gave a much larger estimate of 200,000.

Society becomes enlightened about rape

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

When the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, 17 W. Prentiss St., began providing services for sexual abuse survivors in 1973, only women were talking about living in a victim-blaming society.

Victim blaming is the initial reaction many people have to the news that a woman has been raped — when they say a victim "asked" to be raped, said RVAP director Christina Munson.

Sex as a Weapon

Part 1 of 3

"Our culture has a habit of victim blaming," Munson said. "We tend to blame poor people for being poor and rape victims for being raped. A lot of people will blame (rape victims) for what isn't their fault, for not doing the right thing or making right decisions. Instead of blaming or determining responsibility, we need to remember which one is the offender."

In the past five years, it has become more acceptable for both men and women to recognize rape exists and to stop blaming the victim, said Ashley Sovern, educational director of RVAP. This changing attitude has allowed for more sexual assault survivors to break the silence and report the crimes committed against them.

During the first week of April, which is Sexual Assault Awareness Month, the presence of survivors was felt at the UI. Voicing life experiences during educational programs defining personal boundaries and assault, survivors offered support for those who are still coping quietly.

"We had a great turnout, but it was not enough," Sovern said. "A lot of young people want to know what the fuss is about, why we have to be so loud and have so many programs. They say they know 'all that,' but then later, they have had experiences and they realize why we are here. Overcom-

FUNDING QUESTIONED

Road Races gets audit to prove innocence

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

With one of its main contracts still unsigned, Iowa City Road Races Inc., 212 S. Dubuque St., has decided to conduct and publish an official audit to prove its finances are in order.

The nonprofit race organization wants to clear up confusion over its finances, said David Lubaroff, president of the Road Races board of directors. Due to accusations regarding misappropriation of funding in recent months, Lubaroff said the audit will prove Road Races is on the up and up.

"We have nothing to hide," he said. "Our finances are absolutely honest and clear, but because of this nagging feeling the public has been left with, we decided the best thing to do is to go through the audit and publish the results."

Steve Atkins, president of the board of directors of United Way of Johnson County, 20 E. Market St., said he and other board members hope to maintain a good relationship with Road Races after controversy over the alleged misappropriated funds.

After a United Way board meeting Thursday, he said his charity organization is presently writing a letter to Road Races detailing its budget concerns. The United Way board is unsure whether its contract is with the Road Races board Transforming a heap of material, string and assorted sticks of wood and metal into walking, talking creatures may sound like a hobby, but for two Iowa City women it's a full-time job.

Puppeteers Monica Leo and Teri

DAY IN THE LIFE

Breitbart have been the driving force behind the Eulenspiegel Puppet Theatre, 5691 Sioux Ave. S.E., for 20 years, putting smiles on the faces of the young and old all over the world. The two have created hundreds of puppets which they use when they perform their favorite folktales.

The duo met when Leo's husband brought Breitbart — then his co-worker at a construction site — home to meet his wife.

"The night I went over there, there were all these disembodied doll heads. It was kind of bizarre," Breitbart said.

After the meeting, Breitbart became hooked on puppeteering and gave up her aspiration of becoming a doctor.

Since their meeting, the pair has traveled extensively throughout the United States, Germany and Japan. But the women's favorite location is at home in Iowa City.

On April 4, more than 80 senior citizens filled Zion Lutheran Church ELCA, 310 N. Johnson St., as Eulenspiegel presented its annual performance for them. Zion has provided rehearsal space for Eulenspiegel for 12 years.

"We feel they're such an engaging group in offering creative programs to our community for children and adults alike. We were more than pleased to accommodate them," said Roy Nilsen, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church.

Leo and Breitbart began their performance clad in black from head to toe, and for half an hour, they absorbed themselves in the antics of Anansi the spider and his friend Tortoise.

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Monica Leo and Teri Breitbart have been pulling the strings that add life to their hundreds of puppets for 20 years. The two are the driving force behind the Eulenspiegel Puppet Theatre, 5691 Sioux Ave. S.E.

The play was one of Eulenspiegel's adaptations of a series of African folktales about the precocious spider, a favorite of the duo.

"We usually do folktales," Leo said. "This is one of three folktales from Africa we often present."

The puppeteers were met with laughter from the audience as references to the Coralville Reservoir and Jimmy Hoffa were woven into the ancient tale.

Breitbart said references to modern culture keep the show interesting and prevent boredom on the part of the puppeteers.

"I think it keeps it fresh," Breitbart said. "When you perform something a lot, if you don't include any surprises, you lose your energy flow."

As the artistic director of Eulenspiegel, Breitbart is in charge of creating contemporary dialogue and directing and choreographing the performances.

Leo's job as managing director is to turn combinations of silk, steel rods, string, velvet, springs, rhinestones and hand-dyed cloth into elaborate sets and puppets for the shows.

Other Eulenspiegel events at Zion Lutheran Church include teaching sessions with Sunday school children, who will perform plays for other students, parents and the parish.

Performing for kids has a special place in Breitbart's heart. She said her favorite performance was for a group of Chicago Catholic school students.

But performances can also be nightmares Breitbart learned when she and a friend performed in the Czech Village in Cedar Rapids.

"I guess we didn't feel we needed to rehearse too much," she said. "I remember I came out and forgot my puppet for half the show."

The creative forces behind Eulenspiegel are now looking for new opportunities to advance their craft while staying closer to home.

"Eulenspiegel puppets have been for the past 20 years a touring company," Breitbart said. "It's interesting trying to get off the road."

Leo and Breitbart created Eulenspiegel with the intention of encouraging others to develop their talents.

"The idea behind a puppetry center is to explore, encourage and educate people about the art of puppetry," Breitbart said. "It increases an awareness to the scope of what puppetry is."

The company sponsors a professional season and a number of workshops, including the Young Puppeteers Festival in May.

Another goal of the company is to bring new talent to Iowa City. Puppeteers from China and Mexico are scheduled to appear this year. This summer, Eulenspiegel will bring in puppeteer Terry Snyder for several performances of the children's classic story "The Velveteen Rabbit."

Breitbart said the intensity of puppetry and the joy of putting on a successful production will keep her in the business for many years to come.

"Every now and then, it just happens where all the energy is focused in one place," she said. "It's the most exhilarating feeling to have all the energy in that one place."

Georgia students create massive reconstruction of Elvis stamp

TYBEE ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — Here's one Elvis stamp you can't return to sender: an 80,000-square-foot painting of the King's postal profile.

Students at the Savannah College of Art Design hope to get into the Guinness Book of Records with their oil on canvas painting of the stamp, which is about the size of two football fields.

"Our first idea was to do a stamp to basically mail the world off," said Ivan Morse, a graduate student and the artist in charge of the project. The Elvis stamp was picked "because he's an easily recognizable Southern American icon."

Students and community residents started the project April 2. They sprayed, slathered and rolled paint almost around the clock to finish the painting by Friday.

Sen. D'Amato and wife officially call it quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, who held a news conference to announce he was in love, released only a single-sentence statement to announce he was divorced.

The New York Republican and his wife, Penelope, were granted a divorce Friday in state Supreme Court. The couple had been legally separated for 13 years but had continued to share a home on Long Island.

The divorce had been expected since earlier this year when D'Amato told reporters he had fallen in love with Claudia Cohen, the former wife of cosmetic company heir Ronald Perelman.

4th Legionnaires' case a mistake

Associated Press

DES MOINES — An alleged fourth case of Legionnaires' disease connected to a Burlington motel has turned out to be a false alarm.

Denise Daniel, 35, told the Burlington Hawk Eye newspaper that the Des Moines County Health Department had informed her Friday she had the infection.

But Iowa Department of Public Health spokesman Kevin Teale said that was not true.

"The Centers for Disease Control and (Daniel's) doctor have told her she did not have Legionnaires," Teale told the Associated Press Sunday.

Teale said Daniel's blood tests came back showing she was exposed to Legionnaires' disease at some time in her life, but she has not contracted the disease. Teale said the CDC had told Daniel the exposure did not mean she was in danger of getting the disease.

Teale said about 4 percent of Iowa's population could have the same test result.

Daniel could not be reached for comment Sunday, but her husband said she was told Friday that she tested positive for the respiratory infection.

"She was crying and everything, but never at one time did anybody say, 'No, you don't have Legionnaires' disease,'" her husband, Steve, said in a telephone interview with the AP.

The Daniels rented a room at the Burlington Ramada Inn Feb. 11 to throw a birthday party for their 6-year-old son Nicholas.

Three people who were at the motel the weekend of Feb. 10-12 have contracted the disease, including two residents of Missouri attending a square dance convention.

One of the Missourians died in March. Missouri public health officials have yet to confirm whether Legionnaires' was the official cause of death.

Legionnaires' disease is a respiratory infection caused by a bacterium called Legionella pneumophila that lives primarily in water systems such as hot and cold water taps and showers.

Writer shares secrets of healthy life

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

Move it or lose it.

That's what New York Times writer Jane Brody had to say this weekend at the first UI Women's Health Symposium.

"The real secret of living a long, happy, healthy life is not what the doctor does," Brody said. "It does not lie in pills or potions or health-food stores. It is in what you eat and how you move your body."

Committing to a daily hour of exercise and responsible eating habits will add 20 years to your life, postponing aging and disease, she said.

Author of best-selling cookbooks and a health science writer for 30 years, Brody's speech, "How to Die Young ... As Late as Possible," revealed the secret of a healthy and long life to an audience of 200 women in the ballroom of the Union Friday night.

The problem with people in the '90s is that they "don't wear out; they rust out," Brody said.

"What happens in America today is people don't adopt a healthy lifestyle until they are sick," she said. "It's like shutting the barn door after the horse has already escaped."

UI freshman Melanie Mesaros said Brody's insights on health issues are relevant for women of all ages and that college women need to think about keeping in shape.

"Coming to college, I have thought a lot more about fitness and how my body is. I am more aware of it," Mesaros said. "With no parents to monitor how you are doing, you gain weight."

Prevention was the main theme of the symposium — sponsored by the UI College of Medicine — which focused on the social, sexual and chronic aging aspects of women's lives.

Gayle Nelson, co-director of the program, said women physicians, nurses, social workers, psychologists, educators and students attended the free two-day program.

"Understanding the environmental, medical, political and psychosocial factors that affect women's health is an important area of discussion and research," Nelson said. "We hope this meeting provided a forum for women from various disciplines to contribute to the body of knowledge about women's health, as well as develop awareness and understanding among the participants."

Kay Whitmore, a resident ofavenport, said she appreciated the frankness of the program's speakers, because she is sometimes confused by health gimmicks which target women.

"There was a lot of reinforcing of common information," Whitmore said. "But here, they said it a different way and gave it new meaning. One thing that really impressed me was the way they explained nutrition. It was boiled down to the food pyramid. It was bottom line instead of all the other stuff that is thrown at you."

Program topics included heart disease, depression, domestic violence, breast cancer, menopause and HIV.

VOTE ON SIDEWALK CAFÉS MAY OCCUR

Councilors receive differing opinions

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Although the city only received four responses to 400 letters of inquiry sent to downtown businesses concerning sidewalk cafés, one City Council member said there is still interest and support for the issue.

Councilor Bruno Pigott said there is widespread public support to add the outdoor eating areas to the city, despite the lack of responses to the letters.

"Inattention to the letter does not mean there is necessarily a lack of support," Pigott said. "I've been talking to people on the street and I get a feeling of overwhelming support. The general public really likes the idea of the added ambience, the city being alive and that there are things to do in downtown Iowa City at night."

However, Councilor Ernie Lehman said he received a different reaction from citizens and business owners he's talked to about the sidewalk cafés. He said business owners don't think the cafés will be economically feasible and he doesn't know of any restaurants that have said they plan to use them.

The first vote on the ordinance, which will reduce restrictions on sidewalk cafés downtown, may be held at Tuesday's Iowa City City Council meeting.

Lehman said he will vote against the ordinance if the City Council decides to hold the vote Tuesday. In conjunction with the meeting, there is a public hearing on the issue, and if there is opposition, the vote may be postponed.

"Right now, it's possible to have sidewalk cafés in Iowa City," Lehman said. "To me, this was drafted so the restaurants can serve alcohol outside. We have an open container law in this city, and this seems like we're drawing a line on the sidewalk and on one side it's OK to drink alcohol and on the other side it's not."

Lehman said the service of providing alcohol on the city's streets was the main concern he heard from Iowa City residents. Pigott said he also heard this concern but doesn't think it will increase public intoxication. "Cafés would be required to close before or at 10 p.m.," Pigott said. "And after 10 is when most of the rowdiness occurs in downtown."

The councilors have also heard concerns from business owners that cafés will push people away from store windows. The ordinance currently requires the cafés to be adjoining the restaurants' property.

"It will be taking up sidewalk space shoppers use to window-shop," Lehman said. "Windows are very important to businesses, and sidewalk cafés make them worthless."

Pigott said the majority of the City Council members are in favor of the ordinance, but they are willing to look into changes if any are proposed. One suggestion is to require that the cafés be set up away from buildings to allow pedestrians to window-shop more easily, Pigott said.

"If there are ideas people have — no problem," Pigott said. "If we need to put off the vote for another two weeks so we can build something people can agree on, I'm happy to do it."

Newton hopes for new jail at last

Mary Neubauer
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Newton, Iowa, finally will get the prison it's wanted.

The seven members of the Iowa Board of Corrections voted 5-2 Friday to award a 750-inmate medium-security prison slated for construction this fall to the central Iowa community.

Newton leaders were happy but remained wary.

"Is this it for us or will we be back next year? We don't give up," Gary Carlson, Newton's community development director, said. "It's up to the Department of Corrections. They have a head start on everything down there; they've got plans ready to go. We'll just show them there are a lot of people who will back them up."

Carlson is questioning the future because this is not the first time state officials have planned for a prison in Newton. That idea has been in the Department of Corrections' long-range plans for years, but the prisons have always ended up somewhere else.

BOY SAYS HE 'FLIPPED OUT' IN STATEMENT

Jury hears Iowa teen's shooting account

Associated Press

DAVENPORT — In a taped statement made hours after two men were shot to death in eastern Iowa, the accused killer told police he "flipped out" and was trying to protect himself.

Robert Lee Barker said at the moment he shot Brett Wood and William Isabel "they were screaming at me and cussing at me and aiming at me."

Then he said he heard a shot in the air.

"I just flipped out," he said on the tape. "I turned around and I shot. I was scared to death because I thought I was going to get shot."

Barker, 16, of rural New Liberty is charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the Sept. 25 shooting deaths of Isabel, 49, and his nephew, Wood, 27. The shootings took place during a hunting confrontation on Isabel's property in rural Atalissa.

The teen-ager's 25-minute taped statement was played Friday morning for a Scott County jury. The statement was taken by arresting officers at Barker's home the night of the shootings.

When asked by police "Why did you shoot four times? Why didn't you shoot just once?" Barker replied, "I was trying to protect myself."

In other testimony Friday from prosecution witnesses, the jury learned:

• One set of shotgun shell casings found at the murder scene was found 32 feet from Wood's head, 34 feet from Isabel and 21 feet from the other two casings.

The fragments of lead slugs and cardboard wadding removed from the victim's bodies were fired from the Sears, Roebuck and Co. 12-gauge shotgun seized at Barker's home the night of the shootings.

• The shell casings collected from the crime scene were all fired from that gun.

Convict sues himself for violation of religious beliefs

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — An inmate who claimed he violated his own civil rights by getting arrested filed a $5 million lawsuit against himself — then asked the state to pay because he has no income in jail.

Robert Lee Brock, a prisoner at the Indian Creek Correctional Center in Chesapeake, filed a handwritten seven-page lawsuit last month in federal court.

"I partook of alcoholic beverages in 1993, July 1st, as a result I caused myself to violate my religious beliefs. This was done by my going out and getting arrested," wrote Brock, who is serving 23 years for breaking and entering and grand larceny.

"I want to pay myself $5 million but ask the state to pay it in my behalf since I can't work and am a ward of the state," he wrote.

Judge Rebecca Beach Smith was unimpressed by Brock's ingenuity. She dismissed the lawsuit Thursday as frivolous.

"Plaintiff has presented an innovative approach to civil rights litigation," Smith wrote. "However, his claim and especially the relief sought are totally ludicrous."

Twister strikes Bangladesh, kills 37

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A tornado battered southern and central Bangladesh, killing at least 37 people and injuring more than 1,000, officials said Sunday.

The tornado struck Munshiganj in central Bangladesh and Chittagong and Cox's Bazar further south Saturday. It was accompanied by hail and heavy rains.

The tornado destroyed or damaged more than 4,000 houses, schools and offices, an official at Munshiganj, 20 miles south of Dhaka, said by telephone Sunday.

Officials said at least seven people were missing.

Most of the destroyed houses in the 110 worst-hit villages were made of bamboo and had roofs of tin sheets. The deaths were caused by the collapse of the houses and flying roofs, officials said.

One woman was cut into three pieces by swirling tin sheets, said Monir Hussain, a student at Dhaka's Teigaon college, who was in the area when the tornado struck.

Four people also were killed Saturday in the same area by lightning.

Attorneys defend reasons for removal of 6 Simpson jurors

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Ready for life away from the world's pressures, O.J. Simpson's jurors wound up in a glass bubble instead, their lives scrutinized and their motives questioned.

The ousting of six jurors has led to defense claims that someone on the prosecution side is trying to reshape the panel by investigating jurors and bringing complaints to the court.

"We do not investigate jurors," countered Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden in his first comment since the latest jury flap last week.

"The issues of alleged juror misconduct are for the court to investigate, and the court is conducting these investigations by using its own resources and using people with no vested interest in the outcome of the case," Darden told the Associated Press on Friday.

The district attorney's office said it did not initiate the investigation of juror Jeanette Harris, who was dismissed Wednesday because of domestic violence in her past.

The defense claims Harris was marked for removal because she was sympathetic to Simpson.

"It seems as though certain jurors have been targeted from the very beginning," Simpson lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr. said Friday. "They've been watched, they've been scrutinized and I think it's absolutely frightening."

Jo-Ellan Dimitrius, the consultant who helped the defense pick jurors, thinks prosecutors are unsatisfied with the predominantly black jury and want to remove those they perceive as sympathetic — such as Harris, who is black.

"It's as if these people are on trial," Dimitrius said.

Darden said prosecutors were not targeting anybody.

"All we want is a chance to present our evidence to jurors who will hear it all with an open mind," he said.

He noted that both sides selected 12 jurors and 12 alternates with the knowledge that any of them might wind up judging the case.

"What difference should it make which 12 it is?" Darden asked.

Simpson is charged with the June 12 murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Trial is set to resume Tuesday.

Los Angeles defense lawyer Barry Tarlow called the jury situation

"a sad and terribly offensive development in our criminal justice system."

"I know of no case in the history of jurisprudence where this type of activity — the continuing investigation of jurors — has gone on."

Dimitrius was equally frustrated. "All of the jurors they perceive as negative to their case are being investigated in a systematic way," she said. "There was ample time to investigate and scrutinize these people before they were chosen."

She said more jury problems may be ahead.

"We haven't heard the end of this," Dimitrius said. "Tuesday will hold all sorts of interesting things."

FORCES USE BANNED WEAPONS

Serbs open fire on civilian areas

Srecko Latal
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Rebel Serbs laying siege to Sarajevo are shooting at civilian neighborhoods with large-caliber weapons, which are supposed to be banned from around the capital, the United Nations said Sunday.

The city's troubles and increased fighting in the countryside underscored the failure of diplomatic efforts to end Bosnia's 3-year-old war, despite a cease-fire that began Jan. 1. U.N. officials say it appears only late winter snow has delayed a resumption of full-scale war.

Sarajevo was rocked by about a dozen explosions late Saturday and early Sunday, wounding two people. A U.N. investigation found at least six blasts were caused by 120 mm mortar rounds fired by Bosnian Serbs, said spokeswoman Capt. Myriam Sochacki.

Two more shells landed in the center of town Sunday night, killing two people and wounding three more. Munevera Selimovic, 58, and an unidentified 15-year-old girl died in the blasts.

The Bosnian army blamed the explosions on 120 mm mortar shells fired from Serb positions north of the city.

Weapons of that size have been banned from a 12.5-mile zone around Sarajevo for more than a year, but not all of them have been removed.

U.N. officials said the center of the city, where the shells landed, did not have any military significance.

"There are no military objects in that area. It seems they were targeting civilians," Sochacki said, adding that the United Nations protested to the Serbs.

The so-called "heavy-weapons exclusion zone" was imposed in February 1994 — under threat of NATO air strikes — after a single mortar exploded in a Sarajevo marketplace, killing more than 60 people.

Sarajevo airport remained closed Sunday with U.N. troops on high alert. A U.S. relief plane was hit by 10 bullets fired by Serbs Saturday, and they refused to promise to stop shooting.

"When they don't give guarantees, it means that they will most probably shoot at planes again," said U.N. spokesman Maj. Herve Gourmelon.

The city, surrounded by rebel Serbs, depends on the airport for most of its relief supplies.

But the government was celebrating what one commander termed one of its biggest victories of the war: the capture of territory on Mount Vlasic. The mountain is in central Bosnia, 45 miles northwest of Sarajevo.

Bosnian television showed footage of soldiers in white camouflage lined up near a communications tower reportedly captured by government troops early in their 3-week-old offensive.

"I think that this is one of the biggest victories so far," said Brig. Gen. Mehmed Alagic, commander of the Bosnian army 7th Corps. "From this location, we have the possibility to advance in several directions."

More fighting and troop movements were reported Sunday around Mount Vlasic and across northern Bosnia.

WAR ON THE MIDDLE CLASS

'Contract' not understood

Giddy Republicans crowded onto the steps of the Capitol Friday to gloat over the supposed passage of the "Contract With America" and to cheer and chant like drunks sucking down free booze at a National Rifle Association-sponsored party. The dignity of the U.S. Congress is gone. It's been replaced with the hubris of power and the self-serving and self-righteous indignation of some who think they know more than the rest of us.

House Republicans have replaced the so-called social engineers of the left — those who sought to restructure the social fabric of the country through the use of activist government — with the social engineers of the right. There is nothing even vaguely conservative about Republican attempts to dismantle social safety nets, some of which have existed since before Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole was wounded in World War II.

The Republicans have used the "Contract With America" as a carte blanche permission slip to do and say whatever they want as they pass legislation that does not accurately reflect the beliefs of the general population.

Seventy-three freshman Republicans and the GOP leadership have somehow convinced themselves that the people of the United States support the Contract. It's easy for politicians, editorial writers and news junkies to delude themselves by thinking that everyone knows as much about the "Contract" as they do.

In reality, the majority of Americans don't know who the speaker of the House is and they have even less of an idea what the "Contract With America" contains or how it could affect them.

Republicans have reached their political high due in part to the brilliant efforts of Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour. Barbour was a co-author of the "Contract" and he has been instrumental in reshaping the Republican Party.

Freshmen Republicans speak as though they have the exact same speech writer. They do. All of the new wave of Republicans use buzz words and phrases like "retaking government" and "restoring the American dream."

The Republican Party moved into the position of power by quoting from this script and by posturing and pretending to be the party that represents the working class. They claim to represent working-class and middle-class Americans and yet large sections of the "Contract" benefit more wealthy and affluent Americans.

The Tax Fairness and Deficit Reduction Act gives $500 per child tax credits for families making $200,000 or less. It also cuts capital gains taxes — taxes paid on the sale of stocks, bonds and homes — from 28 percent to 19.8 percent. Middle-class families will benefit when they sell their homes, but the people with the money to buy and sell stocks and politicians will benefit even more.

These new Republicans passed legislation like this, and then after the votes were counted, they repeatedly said they didn't want to turn the debate into a class war. But they've declared war on the middle class and they'd rather the middle class didn't realize it.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt had the best description of the "Contract With America": "Never has so much been done to help so few at the expense of so many." The most heartening aspect of the "Contract" is that it will be dismantled when it moves to the Senate in a few weeks.

ELIMINATING PROGRAMS

Cuts only benefit the rich

Lest anyone be foolish enough to think those in the Newt Gingrich wing of the Republican Party give a damn about ordinary people, let them take a look at the latest tax-cut proposals.

The entire packet of capital gains cuts, deductions and what have you will cost an estimated $189 billion in lost revenue over the next five years. When increased depreciation allowances kick in around the year 2000, we can expect $500 billion more in additional losses. Those who stand to benefit most are those whose income puts them in the upper 10 percent.

This obscenity comes on the heels of the school lunch debacle; the great welfare hoohah; cuts in student aid programs severe enough to force at least 2 million students to drop out; and heroic efforts to kill public broadcasting, the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Department of Education, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and God only knows what else. We are expected to accept such cuts in order to eliminate the deficit and balance the budget.

These "Contract on America" followers more than wiped out any savings (thus far about $17 billion a year, mostly from gutting support programs for low-income people) that could have gone into deficit reduction. One of them had the gall to call it "justice."

It seems that this pack of politicians believes that those who are mind-bogglingly rich worked very hard to get that way and are thus more deserving of decent food, clothing, shelter and other such trivialities than are those who produce their food, sew and wash their clothing or build and maintain their shelters. In the eyes of the rich and their apologists in Congress, justice means eliminating services for those at the bottom so that those at the top can keep more of their money and spend it as they see fit.

But spend it on what? How many cars can one man drive? How much food can he eat? Clothes can he wear? Chairs can he sit on? At what point does enough get to be enough?

The answer? The rich shall invest and produce riches for us all.

Where have we heard that one before? Back in the 1980s, the fabulously wealthy were given the opportunity to show us what they would do with all their dollars if they were allowed to keep them. They promptly went out and raided each other on the stock market, thus burdening the private sector with a level of debt even higher than the debt this naive experiment laid on the government. What followed was the old "lean and mean": waves of bankruptcies, disappearing companies and disappearing jobs.

Around the turn of the century, there used to be a saying in the immigrant neighborhoods: "You can't pee down my back and make me think it's rain." Could it be that back then people were a whole lot smarter than they are now?

Recreating rage, declaring war on poverty

Recently, our national discussion of affirmative action has turned away from reason and swung toward riot. There are many causes for the shift. From the moment California's civil rights initiative — which would repeal much of the state's affirmative action — emerged, people on the left have been howling.

We have been told that there was never any — or precious little, if any — discriminatory affirmative action. People were hired, admitted to school or awarded contracts on the basis of merit and race, never race alone. Besides, they added, the Bush "Glass Ceiling" Commission told us the hard truth: Among Fortune 1,000 industrial corporations, 97 percent of senior managers are white males.

At the same time, a sweeping sense of rebellion broke out among lower-class American whites. Abandoned by much of the visible and politically powerful segments of liberal America in the 1970s and '80s, poor whites now align more easily with Newt Gingrich than with Jesse Jackson. This should terrify you if it doesn't already.

The class definition of reactionary whites is as important as the rough stance they've adopted on affirmative action. Between the death of Martin Luther King Jr. and recent attempts to dismantle affirmative action, something was lost in liberal circles: the focus on poverty. Once considered a source of social and economic deprivation every bit as critical as that created by racism, poverty somehow withered as a concern among civil rights activists.

King lived his life at war with poverty and racism and did not allow either one out of his keen line of vision. In an article in the April 3 New Republic, Richard Kahlenberg reminds us that King "called for special consideration based on class, not race. After laying out a forceful argument for the special debt owed the blacks, King rejected the call for a Negro Bill of Rights for the Disadvantaged."

It is a call that must be taken up again, and soon. Affirmative action is doomed unless it is retooled with an engine of inherent justice that is not vulnerable to the type of attack it now faces. As a result of Proposition 187 and the social environment created by the civil rights initiative, Californians of color have begun to live in an Orwellian nightmare no sane American would have believed even two years ago. Incidents of racial harassment have risen. In Los Angeles, where the police force is known for exercising violent racism on the job, people report being asked for immigration papers, insulted and threatened on the street.

The whole notion of people of color being asked to show papers — to prove they have some legitimacy in America — is outrageous. It subjects all citizens of color to the suspicion of officials, employers and other civil authorities. In restaurants, electronics stores, McDonald's franchises, grade school classrooms, hotels and grocery stores, whites are taking on responsibilities for upholding Proposition 187 with gusto. The result is a pack of deputized racists asking for papers in every imaginable location, an inconceivable breach of the American notion of the personal integrity of its citizens.

Proposition 187 is also doing something else. As awful as its results have been thus far, it is giving rise to rage — an emotion that slid into dormancy during the Reagan-Bush years. Proposition 187 has subjected privileged people of color to the same treatment that poor people of color and poor whites have endured since King's dream faded into a dim memory. Their rising sense of outrage may be what saves America from one of several possible nightmare scenarios. It may bridge the gap between poor whites and privileged and poor people of color, allowing some healing and humility on both sides of that gaping fence.

Further, a coalition of privileged and impoverished would ultimately provide for the re-emergence of a moral authority so great that no racism will manage to confound it, no politician will ever overturn it and no feeling human being will ever oppose it. It can do this by giving poor people of color and poor whites a sense of inborn privilege. America must be forced to find new ways of attacking its poverty problem. That goal is beyond a race-based quota. As an appeal to the American sense of fairness, it will prove irresistible across a broad political spectrum. Such a coalition would be able to press for changes we can't even imagine in the current political climate.

What's lacking in our consideration of affirmative action is neither more nor less than the dream of King, who knew that color was only one thing keeping so many of our children down off the mountaintop. He understood that many would never live to see the peaks of that range because of a grinding poverty the country preferred to ignore. This understanding is perhaps his greatest legacy, one we have ignored for too long. It is a shame and an irony that it took something like Proposition 187 to remind us.

JAMEY PREGON

Newt Gingrich: keeping the House in order

On Sept. 27, 1994, some 300 members of Congress and congressional candidates assembled in front of the U.S. Capitol building and signed their names to a document called the Republican "Contract With America." On Nov. 8 of the same year, the American public elected a Republican-majority Congress for the first time in 40 years. America made two important declarations in doing so, the obvious one being that they were clearly disappointed with the job they had elected Bill Clinton to do in 1992. Not to be overlooked is the second declaration: an endorsement for the much publicized "Contract With America." It is this declaration that should be examined when evaluations of the 104th Congress are made, particularly in evaluating House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Admittedly, Newt has been an easy target for the press to pick apart. He comes off as an extremely abrasive man and often has trouble controlling tendencies to mouth off at inopportune moments. He has threatened committees complaining of tense legislation deadlines that if they couldn't get the job done, he would "find someone who will," and at the Republican National Committee on Jan. 20, he upbraided Hillary Clinton for her greed and accused Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., of hating him. Even his mother, on national television, confided that her son didn't hold the first lady in highest regard. Gingrich doesn't play very well with the press, and many people will allow this to cloud their perceptions of how he is doing at the job he was elected to do.

As the first hundred days of the 104th Congress wind down, a lot of things may be said of Gingrich — but one thing which cannot be said is that he hasn't done all he could do to follow through on the promises that the Republican Congress made to the American people. The "Contract" made the following promise to the people who elected them: "Within the first hundred days of the 104th Congress, we shall bring to the House floor the following bills, each to be given a clear and fair vote and each to be immediately available this day for public inspection and scrutiny." This promise was made the day that the "Contract" was signed, and indeed, the 10 bills that were part of the promise were made available to the public before the election, and the voters responded by electing a Republican Congress.

Gingrich furthered this promise by declaring, "If this just degenerates after a historic election back into the usual baloney of politics in Washington and pettiness in Washington, then the American people, I believe, will move toward a third party in a massive way. I think they are fed up with Washington. They are fed up with its games. They are fed up with petty partisanship." We didn't need Ross Perot's candidacy in 1992 to tell us that; one of the reasons that many people don't vote anymore is because of the great dissatisfaction with business as usual in Washington. Politicians make promises that they don't keep, all in the attempt to hold on to their jobs, which doesn't seem to be a major concern to the proponents of "Contract With America." (One of the bills included in the "Contract" dealt with term limits.)

Gingrich, through his well-documented antics, has been successful in prodding Congress to follow through on its promise made 100 days ago. The 10 bills have been to the House floor and were given full and open debate. Not every bill has passed, but that was not part of the promise — just read the "Contract" for yourself and you'll see that passage was not guaranteed. The balanced-budget amendment fell by a single vote in the Senate, while the term limits proposal didn't survive the House vote. The line item veto; crime, national defense, regulatory reform; legal reform; welfare reform; help for seniors and tax-cuts legislation have met favorable results in the House and have been turned over to the Senate for further debate. Promise made, promise kept, largely thanks to Gingrich.

By keeping the House in order as speaker of the House, Gingrich has given the majority who voted the Republicans into Congress what they wanted. They laid out the groundwork for the first 100 days and were successful in meeting their agenda. Under Gingrich, the Republicans have passed more legislation in such a short amount of time than this country has seen since the days of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal. With such an accomplishment, Gingrich has become one of the most powerful House speakers that this nation has ever seen.

The American people spoke up last November and their calls have been answered so far by the Congress they elected. By following through on what they promised to voters, the 104th Congress should restore some of the faith that voters used to have in their government — at long last, elections seem to mean something again. It has not been business as usual in Washington, and this fact should not go unnoticed. If people can see that their government is doing what they ask of it, maybe they will start to see that their vote does matter and they will start showing up at the polls again. The winds of change that Clinton promised in 1992 have finally swept into Washington, but it took Gingrich to usher them in.

AGENDA DISCUSSED

Gingrich reflects on 100 days in office

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The speech bore all the earmarks of a presidential address. And in case anyone missed the point, House Speaker Newt Gingrich drove it home in an interview afterward: He and the Republican Congress, not President Clinton, will control the national agenda.

"I felt like a leader," Gingrich told CBS after the network televised his 30-minute speech on the Republican agenda.

Gingrich, R-Ga., delivered his look back on the first three months of the GOP-led Congress and his look ahead to the rest of the year while seated casually on the edge of his office desk.

It was a presentation much like what one would expect from a president. He outlined proposals; countered political foes; and said his party, having kept its "Contract With America," was worthy of voter trust.

And while Gingrich disclaimed any White House ambitions, he frankly admitted in the post-speech interview that he proposes to set the national agenda.

"I just see it as a healthy, peacetime redistribution of power from the White House to the Capitol and from there to the states," Gingrich said.

For the moment, President Clinton left the national stage to Gingrich. During the speech, Clinton was flying aboard Air Force One from Dallas to Sacramento, Calif., and read rather than tuning into the talk from the plane.

Earlier, Clinton said Gingrich would "claim a lot of credit for what he has done and he should." He promised to search for common ground with the GOP but said he would veto some measures if they are not modified in the Senate.

In his speech, Gingrich unveiled no new blockbuster proposals. He said Republicans would simplify the tax code, leave Social Security untouched and give the elderly more choices in their government-funded health care.

He promised that the rest of the federal government, including the military, would be subject to budget cuts. The result would be a balanced budget in seven years "to free our children from the burdens upon their prosperity and their lives," he said.

Democratic leaders used their television response time to accuse Gingrich and the Republican majority of having no sympathy for the poor while handing out tax breaks to the rich.

But the evening had much less to do with substantive debate and much more to do with image.

Casting himself as a break from the tradition of stuffy, untelegenic congressional leaders, Gingrich brought along a bagful of props designed to show him as human and modern at once.

He showed viewers a "Dear Mr. Newt ..." letter from a Georgia first-grader.

He held up one of the "Contract With America" bills stamped "PASSED."

He showed the card House members use to cast votes electronically, calling it "the most expensive credit card in the world" for all the debt it has run up.

He juxtaposed an old-fashioned radio vacuum tube with a high-tech microchip that could bring the equipment used by federal air traffic controllers up to date and compared a fat copper telephone trunk line with a barely visible fiber-optic cable.

The message was that smaller — as in smaller government — is better, and Republicans want to make government more modern even as they shrink it.

Throughout the speech, Gingrich stressed the simplicity of the Republican program and sought to put voter fears to rest.

"Our goals are simple," he said. "We don't want our children to drown in debt. We want baby boomers to be able to retire with the same security as their parents. We want our senior Americans to be able to rely on Medicare without fear."

It turned out the letter from the first-grader was a pre-emptive public relations strike against the two Democrats given television time to respond to Gingrich. House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and his Senate counterpart, Tom Daschle, D-S.D., spoke from an elementary school in suburban Arlington, Va.

Appropriately, both led off by telling viewers that Gingrich and the Republicans want to take school lunches away from kids. Just as Gingrich sought to assuage fear, Gephardt and Daschle sought to instill it.

"Many of Speaker Gingrich's ideas are so extreme, so unfair and so wrong that even the Republican-controlled Senate will refuse to pass them," said Daschle, who delivered his remarks in shirt sleeves.

Gingrich got in the last word. In an interview on CNN, he said that while Clinton is willing to at least listen to the Republican point of view, "the Democratic leadership (in Congress) is trapped in some kind of small left-wing clique."

STATES CALLED TO ACTION

Reno backs up sex offender policy

Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Amid a wave of legal challenges to such laws, Attorney General Janet Reno pressured states Friday to require sex offenders and child molesters to notify police of their whereabouts for at least 10 years after their release from prison.

Under a provision of the crime law enacted last year, Reno proposed minimum standards for state notification laws. The crime act provides that states failing to enact notification laws to meet the standards within three years could lose up to 10 percent of their Byrne anti-crime grants.

The Byrne grants, distributed to states by formula, total $450 million this fiscal year. For small states, the 10 percent cut could cost them about $200,000; in large states, the penalty could reach $2 million.

"This law is about peace of mind," Bonnie Campbell, director of the Justice Department's Violence Against Women Office, said at a news conference. "Parents, children and women everywhere need to know that local police are notified when child molesters and sex offenders are released from prison."

Campbell acknowledged that 40 states have some kind of notification law for sex offenders, but she said they vary widely, often require offenders to register their location only once and often fail to provide notification to other states when offenders move.

State or federal judges have struck down all or part of these laws as unconstitutional in at least seven states — Alaska, Arizona, California, Illinois, New Jersey, Louisiana and New Hampshire — according to the American Civil Liberties Union.

The U.S. Department of Justice this week filed a friend of the court brief in the New Jersey Supreme Court defending that state's notification, known as Megan's Law. Enacted Oct. 31, it was named after Megan Kanka, a 7-year-old Hamilton Township, N.J., girl who was raped and killed last summer, allegedly by a sex offender who lived across the street from her house.

Going beyond many state laws, Megan's Law requires not only that offenders register with police, but that communities be notified when a sex offender moves into a neighborhood.

A state judge upheld community notification but said judges, not prosecutors, should decide the risk each offender poses and only after a hearing. A federal judge struck down community notification as an unconstitutional additional penalty for any offender convicted before the law was passed.

Campbell said some courts also held community notification an unconstitutional violation of due process of law.

"We say community notification is not a punishment at all," Campbell said. "We think it's regulatory and justified by the fact that sex offenders are much more likely to reoffend than other violent offenders."

She cited a 1988 California Department of Justice study of 1,362 sex offenders that found they were five times more likely than other violent criminals to commit a sex offense after their release from prison. A 1995 Washington state study of 1,373 adult male sex offenders found that 12 percent had been rearrested for sex offenses an average of 4.6 years after release from prison.

Reno's standards allow each state to decide whether to require merely registration with police or also notification of selected groups such as schools, child-care providers and victims or communitywide notification.

The proposed regulations also require more than 10 years of registration by those designated sexually violent predators. They require police verify the offenders' addresses at least annually and every 90 days for violent predators and that they inform states to which offenders move.

Reno also proposed that states establish court proceedings under which an offender could prove he or she was no longer a sexually violent predator.

Deputy Attorney General Gordon Allen. Schantz said charges of gender bias are unfounded. Declining enrollment and a pressing need to cut costs were reasons for the proposed closing, he said.

"We'll try to show what the reasons were for closing the program. It wasn't gender bias," Schantz said. "The student enrollment dropped from 80 students to 36 students in 10 years between 1980 and 1990."

Another reason the program is scheduled to be cut is that its classes don't appeal to UI students of diverse majors, Schantz said.

"An English or math class might be taken by students from a number of different majors, but the classes in the dental hygiene program were only being taken by dental hygiene students," he said.

Pelton said the UI clearly used gender in its decision to ax the program and she's confident the jury will agree.

"We were discriminated against," she said. "We have an all-female program. The faculty, staff, students and alumni are all female. It's very clear it was discrimination."

Finding a law firm to tackle the case was difficult because few lawyers are willing to challenge powerful institutions like the UI, Pelton said.

"I think anyone that would file a complaint against the University of Iowa, with its network of connections and the system under which it operates, would agree that it is very difficult (to find representation)," she said.

Des Moines lawyer Victoria Herring and McClelland of McClelland Law Firm of Liberty, Mo., will be representing the three women who are charging the UI with bias.

In February 1994, the McClelland firm won an age discrimination suit against the University of Missouri School of Dentistry. In the case, a department chairperson who was demoted because of age filed charges against the university.

The three women suing the UI are all tenured and will not lose their jobs if the program is closed, Schantz said. If the program is shut down, the women will be relocated to other jobs within the College of Dentistry, he said.

Georgia murderer runs out of time

Despite a last-minute campaign for his life to be spared, British-born killer Nicholas Ingram was executed Friday in the electric chair.

Elliott Minor
Associated Press

JACKSON, Ga. — Defiant to the end, a British-born killer whose case triggered a media frenzy overseas glared at witnesses and spit at the warden before being executed in the electric chair.

Nicholas Lee Ingram, 31, was pronounced dead at 9:15 p.m. Friday. He had been sentenced to death for killing a suburban Atlanta man in 1983 during a $60 robbery.

Ingram's execution was widely covered by the British media. In the days before his death, Georgia prison officials were bombarded with phone calls and letters — including one from the archbishop of Canterbury — pleading for leniency.

A wiry man with sunken cheeks, Ingram was led into the death chamber at 9 p.m., after the U.S. Supreme Court rejected a last-minute request for a stay.

He spat forcefully at Warden Jerry Thomas when Thomas asked him if he wanted to make a last statement. When the warden asked him if he wanted a prayer, Ingram simply closed his eyes.

Meeting later with reporters, a tearful Smith said he was asked to issue Ingram's final statement. He said Ingram had "total and utter contempt for the whole system of killing people."

Ingram was convicted of abducting 55-year-old J.C. Sawyer from his home, robbing him, tying him to a tree and shooting him in the head. He also tied Sawyer's wife to the tree and shot her. She survived and identified Ingram as the killer.

Ingram, who held dual citizenship, was born in England in 1963 to a British mother and an American father. The family moved to Georgia a year later.

Ingram's mother had asked the British government to intervene, but Prime Minister John Major declined.

Georgia has executed 19 people since the state reinstated the death penalty in 1983.

ROAD RACES

or a separate subsidiary organization, he said. United Way board members are also concerned about when their organization's name will be used in connection to Road Races funding.

"These are the kinds of things that still must be clarified," Atkins said.

Road Races' decision to conduct an audit was not at United Way's insistence, Atkins said. However, if Road Races chooses to share its audit information with United Way, Atkins said there will be no problems with its pending contract.

"To my knowledge, they have never had a full audit before, and if they have, the United Way Board has not seen it," Atkins said. "Personally, I would say an audit would be very helpful — not only to their cause, but even more so to ours."

Although the Road Races board consulted with Bob Rehffuss, an accountant who sat on the board for many years, it never underwent a formal audit, Lubaroff said.

"(The public scrutiny) has all been kind of a mystery to us because we have tried to do things aboveboard for all the right reasons all these years," he said. "We've earned millions of dollars for charities each year."

Lubaroff said he is uneasy because United Way has not signed a contract — with only six months left before the race — but said he understands United Way's apprehension.

"It's kind of late not to have a contract," Lubaroff said. "However, given the things happening in the last month, everybody is trying to sort out who is what and what's going on. The questions are rather upsetting, but I am sure everything will be fine and the race will go on as planned in October."

United Way has no intention of dissolving its relationship with Road Races, but Atkins said his group is concerned about the source of its money.

"Clearly, we want to maintain a relationship with them," Atkins said. "There's going to have to be clarification of the finances. The public has a right to know where their money's going to."

United Way directors have asked to see Road Races' entire budget listing, but Road Races has only shown them its fund-raising assets, Atkins said. Lubaroff said Road Races is not required to give them more information.

"I'd say the United Way clearly feels strongly that every attempt should be made to show us (where the money is going), but they continue to maintain that we are not entitled to that information," Atkins said. "More financial information in any form would certainly be forthcoming."

100 days of the new GOP-led Congress, the "Rally for Women's Lives" focused heavily on the agendas of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and other conservative politicians.

Speakers voiced fears that Congress would curtail abortion rights, cut spending on welfare programs for women and children, dismantle affirmative action programs for women and minorities, and cut funding to prevent domestic violence and aid its victims. They equated what they called "political violence" with physical attacks.

"Be it personal terror or political terror, it has just one purpose — control," said Eleanor Smeal, president of The Feminist Majority. "We are the majority. Our rights will only be taken away if we allow the terrorists to reign."

Hoisting signs that read "NOW, Not Newt" and "Republicans Don't Need Abortions, They Eat Their Young," demonstrators chanted,

"We won't go back." A few women stripped to their bras and some went topless in the warm sun. Men and children also were sprinkled through the crowd.

"There should be as many men here as women here," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said. "Men must know that none of us are secure until all of us are secure."

Among the speakers were relatives of people killed in anti-abortion shootings, including June Barrett, whose husband James was shot to death while escorting a doctor into a Pensacola, Fla., abortion clinic.

"I survived that horrible nightmare and I am here today to say to you, help stop the violence and defend a woman's right to choose," said June Barrett, who was injured in the attack.

An assortment of celebrities, including Sharon Gless and Tyne Daly of television's "Cagney and Lacey," rock singer Joan Jett, rapper Mama and musical groups BETTY and Toad the Wet Sprocket also appeared.

Timed to coincide with the rally, more than 6,000 T-shirts representing victims of rape, murder, battering, child abuse and other violence against women were strung across the Mall as part of the nationwide Clothesline Project.

Denise Brown hung a white T-shirt covered with colorful handprints and handwritten messages in honor of her sister Nicole Brown Simpson, the slain ex-wife of O.J. Simpson.

"Mommy, I miss you and I love you, Justin," read the note from Brown Simpson's 6-year-old son. Tammy Murphy of Luray, Va., brought two shirts that she said represented emotional abuse inflicted by her husband, from whom she is now separated. Hand copying a poem about her experiences onto a white T-shirt was a therapeutic experience, she said.

"When I put it on the shirt, for the first time I wasn't ashamed to sign my name," Murphy said. "That was a big step."

ing the stigma has happened very slowly, to much less extent than people think."

"Until Someone Wakes Up," a performance sponsored by RVAP and University Theatres, addressed the stigma directly and drew an audience of about 300 students and community members Friday and Saturday nights.

The series of sketches addressed the formation of gender roles, sexual prowess and acquaintance rape. Once a minute, a red light on the stage flashed the word "Rape" — representing the fact that one rape is reported each minute in the United States.

A discussion facilitated by members of People Out Working to End Rape followed the performances. Volunteer Barrett Anderson said it is important for people to understand that rape is a violation that occurs because women are taught to be passive, while men are expected to show strength.

"Our society teaches people how to be victims and perpetrators," Anderson said. "A lot is wrong with the way we treat women and how we raise our children to treat each other."

The play also briefly showed how police and the court system lend legitimacy to victim blaming.

Johnson County attorney Ann Leahy, who has represented many women in assault cases, said blaming the victim originates in the courthouse.

It wasn't until 1993 that the Iowa Legislature repealed a law requiring rape victims to provide a witness or other "prominent evidence" of their assault, Leahy said.

"There is a lot of demeaning of the victim," she said. "It depends on defense attorneys' mode of handling them. Sometimes they are treated very badly."

Individuals have to begin changing attitudes rather than waiting for court precedents, Munson said.

"We need to get these issues sorted out," she said. "Changing legislation will not change the issue.

Society must want and initiate the change. It is all a message of power control. Adults need to talk to children starting at 3 years old instead of high school or college."

Munson said teachers, not survivors, are the offenders.

"Breaking the silence is the most important thing," she said. "It is the best healing tool in a survivor's tool belt of how to make it through. Telling the public lessens the isolation and raises awareness."

driven by a Palestinian traveled into an Israeli convoy of military and civilian cars and exploded, Almog said. Eleven Israelis were wounded, including two girls ages 2 and 4 and two soldiers who are in critical condition.

Three of those injured were Americans, said White House spokesman Mike McCurry, who was traveling with President Clinton in Los Angeles. He wouldn't give their names and didn't say in which attack they were wounded.

One of those wounded in the first attack was identified as Alisa Flatow of West Orange, N.J., a Brandeis University junior on leave to study at a Jerusalem yeshiva. Her mother, Rosalyn, said she was unconscious and on a respirator after surgery.

The militant group Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for the first attack and said it was carried out by Khaled Mohammed Khatib, a 24-year-old construction worker.

Sources in the group Hamas confirmed a report that Hamas' military wing, Izzedine al-Qassam, staged the second attack. They identified the suicide bomber as Imad Abu Amouna, also 24, from the Shati refugee camp.

More than 100 fundamentalist youths gathered at Khatib's home in the Nuseirat refugee camp, their cries for revenge mingling with the wails of women from inside the house and the crack of gunshots fired into the air.

"The language of bullets is the only one that will guarantee the departure of the enemy from our territory," one Islamic Jihad activist intoned through a loudspeaker.

PLO leader Yasser Arafat strongly condemned the attacks but did not say how he will respond. "We are committed to confronting terrorism," he said. "These people are the enemies of peace."

Palestinian police began arresting Islamic Jihad activists in Gaza City Sunday evening.

Back in Washington, President Clinton also condemned the attacks. "Those responsible must not and shall not be allowed to deny a better future of hope and reconciliation to the region," he said.

Israel Radio said Arafat called Rabin to offer condolences, and Rabin asked him to do more to rein in the militants.

Other Israeli leaders warned that chances of reaching agreement on expanding Palestinian autonomy by a July 1 target date are slipping away. Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho became autonomous 11 months ago and talks are under way to extend self-rule throughout the West Bank.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

O'Bannon wins Wooden Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ed O'Bannon remembers when the last things on his mind were championships and awards. As tough as those days were 4½ years ago, he now believes they helped him.

O'Bannon, who tore up his left knee just before his career at UCLA was to start, received the John Wooden Award as college basketball's player of the year on Friday — four days after playing his final game for the Bruins.

And what a final game it was — O'Bannon's 30 points and 17 rebounds led the Bruins to their first NCAA title in 20 years.

"At the time, you say, 'Why me?' " O'Bannon said of the injury he suffered in a pickup game on Oct. 9, 1990. "Now, I look back, it helped me become a better person. At that time, all I could think about was I wanted to play, even play pickup basketball. I wasn't thinking about championships or individual accomplishments."

Numerous free agents find homes over the weekend

In one of baseball's busiest weekends ever, there were 80 deals made on Friday and Saturday.

The Chicago Cubs resigned first baseman Mark Grace to a one-year, $4.05 million deal Friday. The crosstown White Sox inked pitcher Jim Abbot and outfielder Mike Devereaux Saturday.

The St. Louis Cardinals were active also, resigning outfielder Bernard Gilkey and trading outfielder Mark Whiten and pitcher Rheel Cormier to Boston for third baseman Scott Cooper and pitcher Cory Bailey.

Cardinal free agent Bob Tewksbury signed with Texas.

The expansion teams picked up some talent. The Colorado Rockies added outfielder Larry Walker and pitcher Bill Swift, while the Florida Marlins agreed to terms with Terry Pendleton, Andre Dawson, Bobby Witt and John Burkett.

For Sunday's deals, see Page 3B. For a complete list of this weekend's transactions, see 2B.

Martinez crushes Sabatini in Bausch & Lomb final

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Conchita Martinez capitalized on an overpowering first set to win her second straight tournament, routing Gabriela Sabatini 6-1, 6-4 Sunday in the finals of the Bausch & Lomb championship.

Martinez, who a week ago won the Family Circle Magazine Cup at Hilton Head Island, S.C., sent the Argentine star to her third consecutive loss in the Bausch & Lomb finals.

Martinez won in 74 minutes, with the first set taking but 25 minutes.

"It was important to get off to a fast start, especially with the crowd behind her," said Martinez, the top seed who is ranked No. 4 in the world.

"I don't mind the fans cheering for her, but it does bother me some when they cheer my mistakes."

Crenshaw triumphs at Masters

'84 champ overcomes tragedy to beat Love III

Ron Sirak

Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Ben Crenshaw, who last Sunday took one last lesson from his teacher Harvey Penick, won the Masters championship exactly a week after Penick died.

Taming the treacherous Augusta National greens with a confident putting stroke bolstered by Penick's reassuring words, Crenshaw shot a final-round 68 to finish at 14-under-par 274, one stroke ahead of Davis Love and three ahead of Greg Norman and Jay Haas.

As his final putt dropped on the last green, Crenshaw bent over and clasped his head with both hands, overcome with emotion.

"I had a 15th club in the bag today and that was Harvey — Harvey Penick," Crenshaw said.

"I don't know how I got through the week, I really don't know," he said. "It was an emotional week. This place charges me up like nothing."

It was a slam-bang finish after the day started with 12 players within four strokes of Crenshaw and third-round co-leader Brian Henninger.

And it all turned, as always, on the tricky back nine at Augusta.

The crunching blow came at No. 16 when, with Love safely in the clubhouse at 13-under, Crenshaw hit a brilliant 6-iron shot that showed great knowledge of the course, hitting well right of the hole on the par-3 and curling down the slope to within 3 feet.

He knocked it in for the birdie that put him at 14-under and rode that exceptional sequence to a 12-footer for birdie at No. 17. He played No. 18 safely and made a bogey.

"I really don't think there was any stopping Ben," Love said. "He was driven. He was charged and obviously he is one of the greatest putters ever."

It was the second Masters title for the 43-year-old Texan, who won in 1984 and also has finished second twice and in the top 10 seven other times, certain proof he is one of the game's best putters. Remarkably, Crenshaw had no three-putt greens in the tournament.

Crenshaw, who went to Austin, Texas, on Wednesday for Penick's funeral, saw the famed 90-year-old teacher Sunday, the day Penick died.

"I had one last lesson with Harvey," Crenshaw said earlier in the tournament. "He said, 'Can you please get a putter and show me how you're stroking that ball?' And he said, 'Now, I want you to take two good practice strokes and then trust yourself and don't let that club get past your hands in the stroke.'"

No course requires more nerve, touch and confidence with the putter than Augusta National, where the steeply contoured greens are shaved to table-top speed for the Masters.

Crenshaw mastered it brilliantly. "You have to admire somebody who flies back to Texas to be at Harvey Penick's funeral and to be as pall bearer and then come back here," NNorman said.

"I think that is the strength of his character."

Nine players were stilled bunched within three strokes when Crenshaw stuck his approach on No. 9 within gimme birdie distance.

He turned for the back nine and the dangerous turns of Amen Corner alone in the lead. But it quickly became a test wills between Crenshaw, Love, Norman and Haas.

Love had the lead alone after he squandered a makeable eagle try at No. 15 and settled for birdie. He followed that with a three-putt bogey at 16.

Ben Crenshaw reacts to his 1995 Masters win on the 18th hole at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga., Sunday. Crenshaw took the victory with a 14-under-par 274, edging fellow American Davis Love III. It was his second Green Jacket - the first coming in 1984.

Michigan miscue hands Iowa win

Debbie Bilbao owns the Michigan Wolverines.

Bilbao, a freshman pitcher from Sandy, Utah, tossed 23½ innings of scoreless softball, helping the Hawkeyes take three of four from the No. 5 Wolverines.

Iowa swept a doubleheader on Saturday, winning 1-0 and 2-1. On Sunday the Hawkeyes dropped the first game 5-1 before pulling out the second 3-0 behind Bilbao's heroics.

"Debbie pitched a heck of a ballgame," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said after Bilbao completed a 14-inning shutout over Michigan in game four on Sunday.

All Bilbao did was collect two wins and one save as the Hawkeyes moved ahead of the Wolverines into first place in the Big Ten Conference.

Purdue humbles .500 Hawkeyes

Iowa's charge for first place in the Big Ten Conference took a detour this weekend as the baseball team dropped three out of four games at Purdue.

The only victory of the series came in game one of Sunday's doubleheader when the Hawkeyes won 3-1. Junior Matt Austin picked up the win for Iowa, giving up three hits while shutting out the Boilermakers through 4½ innings.

Kurt Belger mopped up for Iowa to pick up his sixth save of the season.

Iowa picked up two runs in the fifth and one more in the seventh. Catcher Steve Fishman knocked in two RBI and left fielder Jeremy Lewis had one.

Purdue got even with Iowa in game two, and then some, by thrashing the Hawkeyes 11-2.

Iowa's Mike Parenteau took the loss, serving up six runs in just three innings pitched.

The Hawkeyes fared even worse on Saturday.

Despite scoring two runs in the top of the seventh inning, Iowa was unable to erase a six-run Boilermaker fifth and fell 7-6 in game two of the doubleheader.

At the buzzer... Jordan misses?

CLEVELAND — In the worst way, Bobby Phillips didn't want to become another victim on Michael Jordan's highlight reel.

"All I could picture was Craig Ehlo falling down and Michael pumping his fist," Phillips said Sunday after Jordan, his past heroics against Cleveland on everyone's mind, missed a 25-

With the loss, Iowa's record in one-run games fell to 4-3.

The Hawkeyes (17-11, 6-6 in the Big Ten) jumped out to an early 4-1 advantage on two-run innings in the second and third.

In the second, Fishman scored from third on a throwing error by Boilermaker catcher Chris Kessick. Kessick had been trying to throw out John Ostwald, who was attempting to steal second base.

Ostwald then scored on a double by designated hitter Ryan Sienko.

defensively," Blevins said.

"We really struggled offensively. We didn't have good execution. We had a number of people on, but we just couldn't come through with the clutch at bat with runners in scoring position. But I tell you, these kids battled hard."

The win moves Iowa to 22-13-1 on the season, 9-3 in the Big Ten. For Blevins, it was her 600th career victory, her 299th at Iowa.

Michigan seemingly had game four won in the bottom of the 13th inning, but a great defensive play and a baserunning mistake let the Hawkeyes come back.

With Wolverines on first and second, Michigan's Kellyn Tate singled to right. Jennifer Smith attempted to score from second, but rightfielder Tasha Reents throw beat her to the plate and catcher Stacey Harrison held on for the second out.

With the game still knotted, 0-0, and Wolverines on the corners, Michigan junior Cheryl Pearcy hit a line drive over Iowa second baseman Erin McGee's head to drive in

When the Bulls took the ball out of bounds trailing by one with 2.4 seconds left Sunday, the setting wasn't as dramatic — the earlier buzzer-beating baskets both eliminated Cleveland from playoff series — but Bulls knew all eyes were on him and the man he was guarding.

"I sure didn't want to be part of that highlight film," Phillips said. "But you can't give me credit for everything. He missed the shot."

"Of all the shots I took today, that was probably the best-feeling one of all," Jordan said.

The Cavs conceded the long jumper to Jordan because they didn't want to risk having him sneak behind the defense for a dunk. Jordan's shooting has been inconsistent in the 10 games since

NBA ROUNDUP

Phoenix inches closer to Seattle

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — For Charles Barkley, this Sunday meant a late breakfast with the media and an afternoon of watching the Masters on television.

Oh yes, there was a little basketball in between, too.

Barkley ate with reporters at Memorial Coliseum, then scored 24 points, 11 in the decisive third quarter, as the Phoenix Suns held on for a 104-94 victory over Portland.

"We're getting better" was all he would say about the Suns' effort. "I ain't talking about no basketball today."

Phoenix led by as many as 20 before a late 10-0 run by Portland made it 95-85 with 2:57 to play. But the Blazers never got closer than eight the rest of the way.

The victory moved Phoenix within a half-game of first-place Seattle in the Pacific Division. They meet Tuesday night in Tacoma.

Rockets 123, Nuggets 120
DENVER — Clyde Drexler banked in a 30-foot shot at the buzzer Sunday, giving the short-handed Houston Rockets a win over the Denver Nuggets.

The Rockets, who won for just the third time in seven games without starters Hakeem Olajuwon and Vernon Maxwell, clinched a playoff spot for the third straight season.

The Nuggets, who lost despite shooting 55 percent from the field, lost their third straight game and fell into a tie with the Sacramento Kings for the last Western Conference playoff berth.

Drexler finished with 34 points.

Pacers 97, Hornets 68

INDIANAPOLIS — Maybe Larry Brown should keep his Indiana Pacers off the floor between games — especially after the best defensive showing in their NBA history.

Associated Press

Atlanta Hawks' Tyrone Corbin tips the ball away half Sunday in Milwaukee. Corbin was charged from Milwaukee Bucks' Glenn Robinson in the first with a foul on the play.

"I just took them out on the court and didn't even talk about Charlotte, but I talked about things we have to do defensively. ... We just went over Charlotte on the blackboard today," Brown said.

Bucks 102, Hawks 99

MILWAUKEE — It was desperation time for the Milwaukee Bucks and they played like it.

Milwaukee rallied from a 17-point third-quarter deficit then scored seven points in 33 seconds to beat Atlanta on Sunday as rookie Glenn Robinson scored 32 points and had nine rebounds.

"This one feels real good," said Robinson. "We need all these coming down the stretch."

"We just need to play till the clock says zero."

The Bucks trailed 93-87 with 1:59 left before they went on a 7-0 run over the next 33 seconds to take a 94-93 lead on Marty Conlon's basket.

Celtics 110, Bullets 98

LANDOVER, Md. — The Boston Celtics, holding on to the last playoff berth in the East, have picked a good time to put together their longest winning streak of the year.

Sherman Douglas scored 22 points as the Boston Celtics gained their fifth consecutive victory by handing Washington a loss Sunday afternoon, extending the Bullets' losing streak to a season-worst 11 games.

SPRING TRAINING

Teams round out spring rosters

Ben Walker

Associated Press

The steady stream of free-agent signings and trades slowed Sunday, leaving the likes of Mickey Tettleton, Benito Santiago and Tim Lincecum wondering how much money is left in the market for them.

There were only a few moves, none involving stars, following two days in which there were 80 deals. Boston signed Stan Belinda and Reggie Jefferson, the Chicago Cubs got pitcher Jaime Navarro, San Francisco got outfielder Glenallen Hill and Colorado signed pitcher Omar Olivares.

One trade that may not happen concerns Cleveland and Baltimore.

The Orioles want to be sure Cal Ripken Jr. can break Lou Gehrig's consecutive-games streak at Camden Yards. The date, as scheduled, would be Sept. 6 in Baltimore on the final day of a series against California. After that, the Orioles go to Cleveland.

A rainout could mess up the Orioles' plans, so they want to trade a home series with the Indians in May for that series on Sept. 8-10. But Cleveland general manager John Hart is against the swap.

"Ownership asked my opinion on it," Hart said. "I don't want to make the change. The Orioles want a backup plan. This is about competition. Our fans deserve to see the dates on the schedule. Our fans deserve to see a possible championship race in September at home."

On the move, meanwhile, was players' union head Donald Fehr. He began visiting spring training sites, and predicted there would not be another strike this season.

"Anything is possible, but I wouldn't bet on it," Fehr said in Haines City, Fla. "We're focusing on the negotiations. I want to try to get an agreement."

There's still some top-name talent looking for deals, too. Many of those players are in Homestead, Fla., at a special camp set up for free agents.

Tettleton, an All-Star last season, and former All-Stars Chris Sabo, Howard Johnson and Santiago have attended the camp, as have Belcher, Mariano Duncan and Ricky Jordan. Dave Stewart, Bobby Witt and Mike Devereaux also have appeared, but have since left after signing contracts.

Santiago made $3.8 million last season with Florida. After seeing other players take major paycuts this spring, he knows he may see his salary slashed.

"I've got a few teams interested in me, but you can see how everything's changed. You can see the situation," he said.

Belcher, who made $3.4 million from Detroit last season while going 7-15 with a 5.89 ERA, said he's waiting for his first bid.

"Everybody says I'm on their list, but they haven't gotten to me on their lists yet," he said. "I was a free agent last year and waited around then, too. It's been a rough couple of off-seasons for me."

Another free agent interested in a job is Bruce Hurst. He retired last season after trying to make a comeback from shoulder surgery with Texas, but called the Red Sox about another try.

Hurst, who nearly pitched Boston to the 1986 World Series championship, threw in front of a Red Sox scout Saturday in Las Vegas.

The team will decide later this week whether to invite the left-hander to camp.

"I tried to get him pumped up about it," said Roger Clemens, who talked to Hurst.

"It just depends on if his desire's back."

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP

McCall outlasts Holmes for title

Ed Schuyler Jr.

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Former boxing champions, including Sugar Ray Leonard and Marvelous Marvin Hagler, were being introduced when some fans started chanting, "We want Mike, we want Mike."

They didn't get to see Mike Tyson, who stayed away from the five-title fight card Saturday night at Caesars Palace, although he was in town.

They did see Oliver McCall and Bruce Seldon get in line for possible rich paydays in fights against Tyson by winning heavyweight title matches.

They also saw 45-year-old Larry Holmes fight for the last time in losing a close, but unanimous decision to McCall in a bid for the WBC championship.

"I fell short of victory and of my goal," Holmes said. "It's time to give it up, but nobody should feel sorry for me. Boxing has been great. I've had 26 years of happiness. Boxing don't owe me nothing. I owe boxing everything."

McCall and Seldon, who won the WBA title by stopping Tony Tucker after seven rounds, will have to make a defense or two before Tyson is ready to challenge for a championship. They, or whoever unseats them, are much more in the Tyson mix than IBF champion George Foreman and WBO champion Riddick Bowe.

McCall and Seldon are promoted by Don King, Tyson's promoter, and so will be any opponents they might fight in the near future. The 46-year-old Foreman and Bowe are not promoted by King and, besides, Foreman with his power and Bowe with his size would appear to be more dangerous opponents than either McCall or Seldon.

Tyson, released from prison March 25 after serving three years on a rape conviction, probably will have at least two tuneup fights before he's ready for a title bid. The former undisputed champion, who has not fought since outpointing Donovan "Razor" Ruddock on June 28, 1991, likely could begin his comeback in late August or September.

"Mike Tyson is a good friend of mine, but Mike Tyson is not the champion," said McCall, a former Tyson sparring partner. "When Mike Tyson is ready, he is going to knock on my door. I don't have to knock on his door." Immediately after outpointing Holmes, McCall said, "I'm looking forward to fighting Frank Bruno in July in London."

The fight is being discussed, but has not been made.

MEN'S TENNIS

Hawks hurt by narrow losses

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

It would be fair to say that Iowa men's tennis coach Steve Houghton is sick of the numbers three and four.

The Hawkeyes fell victim to those dreaded numbers as they dropped a pair of Big Ten tussles to Wisconsin and Northwestern last weekend both by scores of 4-3.

Iowa has dropped its last five matches and has slipped to 7-11 overall and 1-7 in the Big Ten.

Houghton said even though things aren't going well on the scoreboard he is proud of his teams' effort.

"We can't seem to convert the effort into victories," Houghton said.

"We can't seem to convert the effort into victories. We've played about as hard as we could and we can't catch a break."

Steve Houghton, Iowa men's tennis coach

"We've played about as hard as we could and we can't catch a break. A lot of these matches have come right down to it and nothing goes our way."

The Hawkeyes were led by sophomore Tom Derouin and junior Mattias Jonsson against Wisconsin.

Derouin continued to play well at the No. 2 singles position, picking up a 6-2, 6-4 victory over the Badgers' Mike Goldstein. Jonsson added to his team-high 11 victories with a hard fought 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 win over Wisconsin's Malcolm Thorne.

"Derouin and Jonsson are playing really well for us right now," Houghton said.

"We've shifted the lineup but they continue to play the most consistent tennis for us."

Iowa played its seventh 4-3 match on Sunday and couldn't quite pull it together as they were defeated by Northwestern. Houghton said it was the pivotal doubles point that hurt the Hawkeyes.

"When we lost the doubles point, that just made things tougher. The close matches we've won this year have been when we pick up the doubles point," Houghton said.

Iowa was again led by Jonsson and Derouin. Derouin picked up his 10th win of the season with a 6-4, 6-3 victory over the Wildcats Jeff Giraldo.

Jonsson snagged his 12th win with a 6-4, 4-6, 6-2 decision over Northwestern's Alex Witt at the No. 4 singles position.

Senior Bryan Crowley and junior Marcus Eckstrand also shined for the Hawkeyes as they eked out a 8-6 victory at the No. 1 doubles position. Eckstrand added a 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 win at the No. 3 singles position.

Hobbs ignites Iowa track team

The Iowa women's track team continued to whiz through its southeastern road trip at the Sea-Ray Invitational in Knoxville, Tenn., last weekend.

Yolanda Hobbs led the Hawkeye attack by placing sixth in the 100-yard dash. Her time of 11.62 also made her a provisional qualifier for the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships in May.

"That's a very good opener for her," Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said. "It's the fastest she's ever run at the beginning of the year and it's really one of the top times we've had at the school. With a mark like that early in the season, I think it shows promise for a record-breaker by the end of the year."

Freshman Becky Kaza placed fourth in the high jump with a leap of 5-feet, 8-inches. Kaza and North Carolina's Kim Jones were the only two collegiate competitors to finish in the top five.

The Hawkeyes also captured fourth in the sprint medley with a time of 3:57.16. Wynsome Cole sparked the medley team with a time of 54.4 seconds in the quarter-mile leg of the race. Cole was competing for the first time since sustaining a leg injury during the indoor season.

Erin Boland anchored a rejuvenated distance attack with her sixth-place finish in the 3000-meter run. She was clocked at 9:59.88. Fellow distance runners Briana Benning and Shawn Fleck also contributed with personal bests in the 1500-meter run.

Benning said it was good to get Boland back in the flow of things following a recent injury.

"It's good having her back and having her contribute," she said. "It provides a real boost for the team."

Hassard said his team's performance could have been better in some events, but noted that he was more concerned with upcoming meets.

"When you see these kinds of things early in the season, you don't get to worried about them because there are plenty of opportunities to make the needed adjustments," he said.

—Shannon Stevens

Men's track

The Iowa men's track team was put to the test this weekend at the Sea Ray Relays in Knoxville, Tenn.

Running without sprinter George Page, the Hawkeyes managed times of 41.02 in the 4-by-100-meter relay and 3:11.73 in the 4-by-400.

"We did good considering George didn't run, team co-captain Andre Morris said. "With George, I think we would have won the 4-by-100 and the 4-by-400."

Individually, Morris finished fourth in the 400-meter dash in a time of 46.32. This time provisionally qualifies him for the NCAA Championships in June.

"I had lane eight. That's not bad for lane eight," Morris said. Also competing for the Hawkeyes were Chad Feeldy, Chris Davis, Dion Trowers and Ed Rozell. Feeldy placed 27th in the 1500 meters. Davis ran a 47.50 in the 400 and Trowers clocked a 14.70 in the 110 high hurdles.

Trowers, Davis and Rozell joined Morris on the relay teams.

Overall, the Hawkeyes are happy with how the outdoor season is going so far.

"It's going good right now for everybody," Morris said. "We're trying to slowly get into it. Other teams are going to be worn out at the end of the season. We don't want to be wore out at the end of the season."

The Hawkeyes' next competition at the Western Illinois Invitational on April 15.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes find no advantage at home

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

It may be called the spring season, but for the Iowa women's tennis team it might as well be the dead of winter.

The Hawkeyes fell victim to cold weather and a hot team as they dropped a pair of Big Ten meets to Purdue and Illinois last weekend. Iowa was defeated by Purdue on Saturday 6-3, then tripped up by Illinois 6-3 on Sunday.

Iowa coach Micki Schilling said weather was definitely a factor in Saturday's loss to Purdue.

"The Purdue coach was adamant about playing outdoors," Schilling said. "The weather was cold and windy and it gave them the edge they needed to play with us."

Senior Laura Dvorak provided one of the highlights for the Hawkeyes as she picked up the win at No. 1 singles. Dvorak was leading 6-0, 1-0 when Purdue's Rachel Fiset retired.

The No. 3 doubles team of Cara Cashion of Kristen Campbell stayed undefeated in the Big Ten with 4-6,

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Sasha Boros returns a forehand Sunday at the UI Rec Building.

6-2, 6-2 victory over Purdue's Elizabeth Vote and Dena Degyansky.

Schilling said the Purdue loss set a poor tone for Sunday's match with Illinois.

"We wanted to beat Purdue because it would have given us momentum heading into the Illinois match, but it didn't happen, so it was tough to get something going," Schilling said.

Iowa lost six of the nine matches to the Illini and never really got on track. The only victories in singles action for the Hawkeyes were junior Sasha Boros's 6-4, 7-5 win over Illinois's Camille Baldrich and freshman Kristen Campbell's 6-0, 6-4 victory over Illinois's Lisa Kimmel.

Schilling said her team has played tough but can't seem to get over the hump.

"We've played hard and I'm proud of the effort, but it's tough sometimes to not get frustrated when things aren't going your way," Schilling said.

Tribe 8, a San Francisco-based "homo-core" punk band, will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight.

Tribe 8 makes no bones about showing sexuality

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

The lead singer of Tribe 8 isn't the first to belt out noisy, reckless anthems about lust for females, but she is one of the first women to do so. The name of this San Francisco-based "homo-core" punk band — which plays at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight with openers Smackdab and Ambush No. 5 — is a play on an antiquated term for lesbian sex and it has quite a bit to do with what goes on in Tribe 8's music. Amid a less-than-melodic barrage of speedy guitar riffs and a powerful rhythm section, vocalist Lynn Breedlove chants and rants about life, love and sex as a lesbian. The quintet's raucous punk is aimed primarily at lesbians, but that's about as fine as the distinctions get. Tribe 8 revels in and pokes fun at numerous lesbian stereotypes — often at the same time — while espousing an open sexuality that should make the homophobic squirm. "The band's members aren't shy about their sexual orientation or their libidos, but they also aren't interested in explaining themselves to heterosexuals. Tribe 8's music is steeped enough in lesbian culture that heterosexuals wouldn't understand a good deal of it, which is exactly how the band wants it. "Butch in the Streets," "Femme Bitch Top" and "Neanderthal Dyke" are typical of the songs on Fist City, the band's debut album on the Alternative Tentacles label. The key is not careful attention to melody and song structures — like most punk bands. Tribe 8 bulldozes such concerns and shoves its message right in your face, using noise and speed as a vehicle. The band's hardcore punk is not trendy affectation; it's a way of life. Among the things Breedlove wants to change is the closed-mindedness of some feminists who have objected to the band's ideas, calling them pornographic and supportive of patriarchy. Breedlove said such claims are oppressive and counterproductive to improving and promoting women's lives. "I want to be able to objectify my girlfriend and stare at chicks with lots of cleavage and eyeliner without someone else telling me that's not feminist; you're not allowed to enjoy (those things)," she said. Breedlove formed Tribe 8 in 1990 more as a way of having fun and expressing herself than to make a political statement. She didn't see then — and doesn't seem to fully acknowledge now — the tremendous step she was taking in putting together one of the first all-lesbian punk bands.

"I had just quit using drugs and I had a lot of energy to focus somewhere, to keep my mind off destroying myself," she said. "I was jumping around, spewing all kinds of ridiculous rhymes. In fact, it was the song 'Manipulate' which a lot of people tend to quote as a representation of Tribe 8, which is really kind of a dysfunctional song, and I'm spewing forth my dysfunction. ... And somebody said, 'Well, why don't you start a band,' so we did." "Manipulate" may not be entirely representative of Tribe 8's music — Fist City has finer moments — but it is representative of the band's lack of inhibitions. "I just want to manipulate my girlfriend / I just want to play games with her head / I want her to do some mental pushups / I want her to apologize and beg," says the first verse, and it's just getting started. But as on the rest of the album, the band isn't just trying to shock you — in fact, if you find the music shocking, it probably wasn't meant for you. Tribe 8's candid explorations of sex, sadomasochism and the grittier side of life and love are only shocking compared to the relatively uptight world we live in.

The French-speaking African nation of Burkina Faso — which also happens to be the capital of African film — may be the main contributor to the UI Institute for Cinema and Culture's African Film Festival this week, but the coordinators of the festival expect a widely varied cultural experience nevertheless. UI comparative literature Professor Dudley Andrew, working through the institute, has gathered a broad spectrum of films and key speakers for the festival, which runs through Wednesday. All are based on the idea of African narrative style.

"Cinema plays a different role in these countries," Andrew said. "Storytelling in Africa (Burkina Faso in particular) is an oral tradition. Many of these film makers are attempting to take on that old role."

Andrew recently visited Burkina Faso to attend the Pan African Film and Television Festival of Ouagadougou (Fespaco). The festival, held every two years, is the largest film festival in the world.

"(Burkina Faso) has always had a film culture," Andrew said, adding that the country has put a great deal of work into its film industry and the festival, which rivals even the Cannes Festival in France. The work Andrew has put into the festival, although on a much smaller scale, has paid off almost as well. He said the University of Ouagadougou has an exchange program with the UI, an advantage he has used to develop this festival.

As with past events sponsored by the Institute for Cinema and Culture, all screenings and discussion sessions are open, and the public is strongly encouraged to attend. Andrew cited last year's remarkable turnout for the institute's Irish festival as an example of success.

On Monday, "Hyanas," from Senegal will be shown at 3:30 p.m. and on Tuesday "Allah Tantou," from Guinea will be shown at 7 p.m. Both films will be shown in room 101 of the Communication Studies Building. The festival, which coincides with a performance at Hancher Auditorium Friday by the African group the Drummers of Burundi, will conclude with closing remarks and a roundtable discussion at 4 p.m. Wednesday in room 203 of the Communication Studies Building.

The public is also encouraged to attend a performance by the drummers and dancers of Oshogbo, a traditional Yoruba dance and drumming ensemble, tonight in Macbride Auditorium at 8.

The six-member troupe from Nigeria gained its name from its home village where the drummers traditionally hail from one family while the dancers come from another.

DANCE REVIEW

Students put on winning performance

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

This weekend's "Theses Pieces" by UI dance department graduate students Emily Wallace and Molly Faulkner was a dynamic mix of good choreography and excellent dancing.

"Theses Pieces" was one of the final steps in the process of the two students receiving their master's degrees. Faulkner chose a choreography thesis and put together a production of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin"; Wallace opted for a performance thesis and danced choreography by everyone from George Balanchine to department faculty to the former ballet mistress of Ballet Arizona.

Wallace made a good decision in relying on her dancing ability for "Theses Pieces." She and fellow graduate student in dance Jeffery Bullock opened the Saturday night show with a gripping performance of Cherie Noble's "Cantus," set to the haunting music of Arvo Part. The piece began with Wallace supporting Bullock's limp body as they huddled on the Space / Place Theatre's stage floor.

The introduction was the sound of tolling bells and this, along with the image of Wallace clinging to Bullock, evoked an almost biblical scene — as if Bullock was a modern-day Jesus with Wallace playing the role of his heartsick mother, Mary. The body of the work was well-danced by both Wallace and Bullock; the two very talented dancers made for a formidable pair on-stage.

Another Wallace vehicle was a resetting of Balanchine's "Raymonda," a solo for which Wallace was coached by ballet faculty member and former Joffrey Ballet dancer Francoise Martinet.

Wallace dressed in the classical ballet style with a black tutu adorned with red, yellow and green sequins. The audience seemed surprised to see such a classical piece in a Space / Place production; modern dance is the usual fare for these audiences. She danced extremely well to the Spanish-influenced strains of Glazunov but would have benefited by more dramatic lighting.

Bright white lights shone during the entire piece, while darker lighting would have given "Raymonda" a more sultry feel to match the music and choreography. In all, Wallace danced wonderfully Saturday night, showcasing her well-trained technique throughout "Theses Pieces."

Faulkner's thesis piece was her version of "The Pied Piper." She made the performance different from the folktale in a number of ways. First, the piper, danced by UI senior Mark Drahozal, was a cohort of the rats. In the traditional story, the piper leads the rats away from Hamelin and is a "good guy" type of character.

Not so in Faulkner's choreography. Not only was the piper the leader of the pack of rats, he and the rats steal all the children from Hamelin by gaining the villagers' trust and then betraying it. Faulkner's dancers played their roles well, notably UI senior Jing Hong Kuo as the lead rat jealous of the woman who the piper is romantically interested in (Christy Guth, a UI graduate student).

The entire troupe of rats danced well Saturday night, leaping into the air in contorted positions at a moment's notice to give their characters an evil twist. The rats were the highlight of this piece, including UI sophomore Kelly Hayes, who danced on an ankle she sprained in rehearsals last week.

One surprise in the piece was the unexpectedly well-done performance of 13 children cast as the apples of the piper's eye. The children, from the department's Talented and Gifted Program, kept time with the music well and they all knew Faulkner's choreography. This was surprising because the youngest of the children looked no more than 5 years old.

Faulkner and Wallace both came through with excellent performances and choreographic efforts on a combined budget of $1,200. Stress notwithstanding, "Theses Pieces" was an enjoyable evening and represented Wallace's and Faulkner's varied talents well.

Mourners applaud Eazy-E's life at rapper's memorial service

Mary Lyon
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Gangsta rapper Eazy-E got one final ovation from family, friends and fans, who mourned his death and hoped it would draw increasing attention to AIDS.

"We are going to applaud the life of Eazy-E and the family of Eazy-E," the Rev. Cecil Murray told mourners at a memorial service Friday. They responded with rousing claps followed by gospel music.

"In his last words, he said to all the thousands and thousands who identified with his song. ... He said, 'I want you to live,'" Murray said.

Mourners filled the 2,000-seat First African Methodist Episcopal Church, and about 500 fans stood outside.

The rapper, whose real name was Eric Wright, died March 26 at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, just weeks after he disclosed he had AIDS. He was 31.

One fan said Eazy-E's death will focus the attention of more blacks on AIDS than basketball star Magic Johnson's admission that he contracted the virus that causes AIDS.

"He was closer to home, closer to the hood," Charles Brown said. Eazy-E was a former drug dealer who claimed to have fathered seven children by six different women.

He became an urban music star in 1988 when N.W.A., the group he founded, released Straight Outta Compton, an in-your-face, foul-mouthed collection of songs about shootings, drugs, gangs and police brutality. It sold 2 million copies. The group's 1991 Niggaz4Life was the first hard-core rap album to hit No. 1 on the charts, despite a ban at some record stores and criticism that it demeaned women and glorified violence.

The group eventually broke up in disputes over money and artistic direction. Former members Ice Cube and Dr. Dre went on to solo careers, as did Eazy-E.
