Man accused of driving off with dealership's car

When Jerry Gorvin testdrove a 1994 cherry red Toyota Celica last Thursday, he was gone a little too long for a local dealership's taste.

When Gorvin left Toyota of Iowa City, Coralville, he allegedly told the car dealer he was going to show his father the car so they could co-sign a loan.

However, according to Johnson County court reports, Gorvin instead took a joy ride to Cedar Rapids, where he put over 200 miles on the car.

When he returned to the dealership Friday afternoon at 1:30, police charged him with operating a vehicle without owner's consent.

"He left his 1984 Celica in our lot," dealership manager Mark Dreusicke said. "That was not considered a fair trade."

Gorvin was unavailable for comment.

DePaul protesters stop paper publication

CHICAGO (AP) — College students in the seventh day of a sit-in at the offices of their school newspaper said Monday they will continue their protest over language and news coverage they consider demeaning to blacks.

More than a dozen students at DePaul University in Chicago began occupying the weekly paper's office Wednesday. The paper wasn't published as scheduled Friday.

The protesters said the DePaulia perpetuated negative stereotypes about blacks in an article about a disturbance at a dance sponsored by a black student group.

The article relied exclusively on security and police reports, which identified people as "M-B" or "F-B" for male or female blacks and "M-W" or "F-W" for male or female whites. The students said the terms perpetuated degrading stereotypes.

The protest was the first in five years to halt publication of a college newspaper, said the Student Press Law Center, an advocacy group for student journalists.

Dole makes White House run

Senate majority leader makes a third bid for the presidency

John King
Associated Press

TOPEKA, Kan. — Embracing the conservative agenda of lower taxes, smaller government and a balanced budget, Bob Dole launched his third White House bid Monday by casting himself as uniquely qualified to "lead America back to her place in the sun."

"I am not afraid to lead and I know the way," the Senate majority leader said as he formally declared his candidacy for the 1996 Republican presidential nomination.

"Let us rein in our government to set the spirit of the American people free. Let us renew our moral convictions and strengthen our families by returning to fundamental values. Together, let us reassert our rightful place as a great nation," he said.

Dole, 71, entered the race with a scornful critique of President Clinton as a "clever apologist of the status quo" — elected on a platform of change in 1992 but now fighting the change voters demanded in the Republican sweep in 1994.

More rain, sleet and snow in store

Iowa is known for yielding a variety of weather conditions including rain, sleet, snow, hail, wind and lightning. However, these conditions seldom happen all in the same day, as was the case Monday. UI student Cha-Hyeon Rhee shields himself from the elements with a newspaper while waiting for a bus in front of the Main Library. Today's forecast calls for rain and occasional thunderstorms.

I.C. suffers through odd weather blitz

Flash flood warnings moved across area TV screens Monday morning, snow fell calmly to the ground and lightning streaked across the sky.

Then when darkness set in around 2:30 Monday afternoon, streetlights blinked on and drivers turned on their headlights.

Had the fickleness of spring overtaken Mother Nature?

According to state climatologist Harry Hillaker, overnight flash flood warnings are just part of a typical Iowa April.

Although Monday's bizarre weather took some people by surprise, the combination of flash floods and snowstorms is not unusual, Hillaker said.

"This storm's probably stronger than most typical spring storms, but these things can happen in April," he said. "Last year, after all, some parts of the state got snow on April 30."

And Hillaker warned more moisture is on the way.

"Usually, it doesn't last very long — and it doesn't do too much — but this is not over with yet," he said.

Democrat crosses over to new party

Joan Kirchner

GAINESVILLE, Ga. — Rep. Nathan Deal, a conservative Democrat who often voted with the Republicans, switched to the GOP on Monday, just three months after pledging to resign if he changed parties midterm.

Deal becomes the third Democrat in Congress to switch since the Republicans seized control of both chambers in the Nov. 8 election. The others were Sens. Richard Shelby of Alabama and Ben Nighthorse Campbell of Colorado.

"During the last 100 days, I have observed my party at the national level simply not being willing to admit that they are out of touch with mainstream America," said Deal, a former state senator elected to a second House term in November.

"I think it is important that at some point you get away from the schizophrenia that I have had to deal with," he said.

Deal, 52, represents a northern Georgia district that is 95 percent white and heavily Republican. It also abuts the district of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, architect of the Republican takeover.

"There's no question we strongly endorse him and are delighted ... to encourage him to represent his views in a party that actually agrees with him instead of trying to spend his whole lifetime arguing with left-wingers who don't have a clue," Gingrich said at a luncheon

Testimony kicks off in UI sex bias trial

The Daily Iowan
Associate Professor Nancy Thompson will testify as a plaintiff charging the UI with sexual discrimination today in a Des Moines federal court.

The suit, brought by two associate professors and one clinical assistant professor in the UI Dental Hygiene Program, claims the scheduled closing of the program is based on the fact that all faculty, staff, students and alumni of the program are women.

In opening statements, lawyers for the UI contended the program is being cut solely to trim the UI's budget.

When she agreed, Billings didn't know what started as a game in the school yard across from her home would turn into a three-year nightmare of physical and sexual abuse.

The boys' punching and pushing rapidly escalated to sexual advances. When Billings tried to refuse, the boys hit her and threatened to throw her bike on top of the school until she complied.

It was 10 years before Billings told anyone about the abuse of the secret initiation. When she finally confided in a close friend, she said she never felt more empowered.

that it was me, my problem, and I would deal with it myself," she said. "I found out that wasn't true."

Talking about abuse is very important in overcoming feelings of shame and isolation, said Ashley Sovern, educational director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, 17 W. Prentiss St.

"Every time somebody tells their story, I think it is really brave and gives a lot of support for other survivors," Sovern said. "It is really important because for so many hundreds of years survivors had no voice."

Billings said it wasn't until she came to the UI that she had to confront her abusive past and overcome her fear of men.

lection has taken a number of years to build. An antique can mean different things in different places, Michaud said.

"A strict definition is something (made) before 1860, but in Iowa you only find a book once a year printed before 1860. So my definition is books printed around the time of World War I and back," he said.

"Most of these books," Michaud said as he gestured toward tall leather-bound volumes reaching to the ceiling behind the counter of the shop, "were printed before 1918 and stretch back into the 19th century."

"I get a few 18th-century books, but I sell those pretty quickly. I've trends.

"At the time (when he began), there was not a lot of interest in ephemera and paper memorabilia or antiquarian books," he said. "I got into a market that was just starting to rise and I was able to make some major buys, such as thousands of books at a time from libraries and so on."

Married with two kids, Michaud said the business can be tough, but he'd never go back to working for someone else.

"The book business is business," he said. "You might think, 'Oh, what a nice pleasant life,' and it is a pleasant lifestyle, but not a very lucrative lifestyle."

The Bookery, 523 Iowa Ave., is what Michaud described as a full-service bookstore.

"We do searches, buy, sell and trade, but we also patch up and restore old books," he said. "We even build made-to-measure bookcases as well as having standard sizes in stock."

In the basement workshop where Michaud builds the bookcases, he has just completed repairing a careworn Bible (one of the more popular books in the store).

"We get a lot of grad students who have been using a particular text as a reference book, and they use it till it falls apart. It might cost $45 to replace but only $15 to repair," he said.

Although his stock is hard to find, prices remain reasonable, Michaud said.

"I rarely get a book that is worth more than about $200. Actually, some of the memorabilia items I've handled in the past have been worth more than the books," he said. "I've had philatelic items worth up to $2,000. Anyway, expensive books are really hard to sell. I'm better off buying 10 books I can sell for $20 apiece than one book I can sell for $200."

Sisters score a visit with first lady

NEW MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — What seasoned journalists wait years for, two young girls have done with apparent ease — they've landed the BIG interview with Hillary Rodham Clinton.

"I feel very privileged. I think it's going to be a really good experience, something I'll tell everyone and one day my children and grandchildren. It'll be a memory to keep forever," said Ali Weller, a sixth-grader at Schaghticoke Middle School.

Ali, 12, and her 8-year-old sister Cait are hosts of the "Cait and Ali Show," a child- and family-oriented talk show on a public access cable channel.

Ali and her father, Frank Weller, had front-row seats at a $500-person political fund-raiser in October when Ali got a chance to chat with the first lady. Rodham Clinton agreed to an interview, which was set for April 17.

The girls, however, will not be allowed to tape their meeting. But Rodham Clinton's press secretary has promised to provide some photos they can use on their show, which will air April 25.

Actress enlightened by racial roles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It took the portrayal of a slave girl in the movie "Jefferson in Paris" to open Thandie Newton's eyes to racial issues.

"I had ... a very stable upbringing. My parents were black and white — yeah, so what. No problems at all," said Newton, whose character purportedly had an affair with Thomas Jefferson (played in the movie by Nick Nolte).

Newton's mother is from Zimbabwe. Her father is from England.

"Dealing with this subject matter — and this sounds a bit dramatic — but I think it has politicized me in many ways because I never even viewed myself as black when I was growing up," the 22-year-old Newton said. "The first discrimination I ever experienced was through the characters I played in movies."

Newton played a servant in "Interview With the Vampire" and a slave in the upcoming movie "The Journey of August King."

House passes measure for sex offender registry

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Convicted sex offenders would have to sign up with local police on a registry that's available for the public to review under legislation approved by the House.

The measure sailed through the House on a 96-0 vote with only minor quibbling about details. A similar bill has been approved in the Senate, and the Legislature is likely to hammer out a final version to send to Gov. Terry Branstad before this year's session ends later this month.

"This bill is about peace of mind," said Rep. Brian Coon, R-Carlisle. "People need to know when sexual predators are released from jail. These people are some of the sickest, most demented people on this planet."

It's the third time legislators have debated the creation of a sex offender registry, but there's a new impetus this year.

When Congress approved a new crime bill last year, it included a provision saying states without such a registry could lose federal funding, which has spurred action across the country.

Legislative staffers said 40 states have adopted such registries.

Under the bill passed Monday, those released from jail after conviction of a sex offense would have to register with local police and would remain on that list for 10 years.

Critics have complained in the past that the measure could spur vigilante justice on the part of neighbors who discover a sex offender has moved into their neighborhood.

To counter that criticism, the bill directs state officials to prepare guidelines about releasing information from the registry and to keep tabs on who is seeking information.

The names of those seeking information from the registry would be kept confidential, though police would have them on file.

That caused some grumbling from legislators unhappy with what they saw as government secrecy.

"It is serious whenever we close records," said Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City. "Secrecy is where we get into trouble in the first place."

The bill makes it clear that the registry won't contain any information to identify the victim of the initial sex crime.

The bill sets up a procedure for a person on the list to seek to be deleted from the list if a conviction is reversed.

New center might rival Hancher

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Construction will begin this summer on a new Center for University Advancement, which Campus Planning Committee members say will be just as eye-catching as nearby Hancher Auditorium.

The Center for University Advancement will be located at the corner of Park Road and Riverside Drive and will be the new home of the UI Foundation, the UI Alumni Association and UI Alumni Records.

The design was unanimously approved with a project budget of $18 million Friday, said Campus Planning Committee President Richard Gibson. The project will be financed by earnings and gifts to the UI Foundation as well as revenue bonds.

The new Center for University Advancement will be a five-story rectangular office building with a rotunda on the east end. Construction is scheduled to begin this summer and will end in 1997, Gibson said.

UI Foundation President Darrell Wyrick said he is looking forward to working in the new building because the current location has been severely overcrowded for five years.

"We've squeezed in all the equipment that we can," he said. "We have no space in our building for meetings." A facility like the Center for University Advancement will be what the Foundation needs because of the center's versatility, Wyrick said.

"It's a highly functional building that will serve the UI Foundation and Alumni Association very well," he said.

While the majority of committee members said the building will be very complementary to Hancher Auditorium and the rest of the arts campus, Campus Planning Committee member David Thayer said he had mixed reactions toward the new center.

"It is a very stunning building in its own right, and that's the problem," he said. "It's up against another stunning building in Hancher Auditorium, and they may set each other off."

However, Thayer said he ultimately voted in favor of the Center for University Advancement because the building was a necessity.

President Clinton sends hopeful Passover message

WASHINGTON (AP) — The celebration of Passover should "remind us of the hope that can sustain us as a people," President Clinton said Monday.

In a statement offering "greetings to all who are observing Passover," Clinton said, "During this holiday, millions of Jews around the world draw inspiration from the example of the Israelites — who preserved their beliefs, their culture and their dignity throughout the brutal winter of slavery."

Passover, commemorating the exodus of Jews from Egypt, begins Friday night and lasts for eight days.

"When the warm spring of freedom finally came, the Jewish people rebuilt their community and thrived, ultimately infusing every corner of the earth with a powerful commitment to faith and family," Clinton's statement said.

North Korea sticks to agreement, awaits replacement reactors

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea's nuclear program remains frozen despite a deadlock in talks with Washington and reports to the contrary, a top U.N. nuclear regulator said Monday.

Hans Blix, director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency, said North Korea is continuing to allow his inspectors to monitor the freeze.

Blix also said South Korean news reports quoting him as saying North Korea is preparing to refuel a reactor were incorrect. Blix said observers had not seen North Korea preparing to reload its 5-megawatt reactor.

Under an October agreement with Washington, North Korea pledged to freeze its nuclear program until the United States arranges for construction of two modern replacement reactors that produce less weapons-grade plutonium.

South Korea has pledged to provide most of the money for the new reactors and has insisted they be of South Korean design. But North Korea refuses to accept South Korean reactors.

France tries to propel electric car sales

PARIS (AP) — France is offering $1,000 to anyone who buys an electric car, and the power company is promising twice that amount to any company that will sell one cheaply.

The incentives were announced Monday with a government pledge that 10 percent of state and municipalities' urban fleets would be electric by the year 2000.

Moments after the announcement, state-controlled automaker Renault SA said it would sell an electric version of the subcompact Clio, France's top-selling car. The company rolled out electric versions of small vans last fall.

The government's offer gives 5,000 francs to anyone who buys an electric car through the end of 1996. The state electric company will pay 10,000 francs a car to automakers who offer an electric vehicle with a price that, excluding the battery, matches that of a fuel-powered vehicle.

The incentives may not be enough to make the cars affordable. PSA Peugeot Citroen, the other French carmaker, has estimated a price gap between fuel and electric versions of more than $6,000. That gap won't disappear unless carmakers are selling 50,000 cars a year, about 100 times current output, PSA Peugeot said.

Neighborhoods fight crime with monthly newsletter

Kevin Galvin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Community crime fighters have hit upon a simple but effective weapon in the battle to keep their streets safe: the neighborhood newsletter.

The brief monthly publications become focal points for community policing efforts, informing neighbors about trouble spots and opening communication between residents and police.

"Some neighbors don't know what's going on. You need some way to communicate," said Savannah, Ga., police Maj. Dan Reynolds. "This provides a vehicle for communication from neighbor to neighbor."

From Savannah to San Diego to Lowell, Mass., residents have found detailed crime information helps increase cooperation with police and target anti-crime efforts more effectively.

"We want this community to be a quality residential community and we want it to be hostile to crime," said Mary Harcar, who helped start a newsletter in one Capitol Hill neighborhood in Washington.

"A lot of people move in and out and they need to be made aware that it's a great neighborhood, but you have to keep on your toes," said her husband, Peter Garcia.

The first edition of Beat 25 was published in June. Like five other neighborhood newsletters on Capitol Hill, it adopted a patrol beat as its area to fit the police structure.

The newsletter was printed free by a local company. As volunteers delivered it door to door, the newsletter increased interest in monthly meetings and turned out recruits for a neighborhood watch program and a citizen patrol that walks a beat Thursday nights, never far from the glow of the Capitol dome.

Some worried that detailed crime information would scare people away from the Hill. But Harcar said she and others settled on a simple principle: "Knowing is better than not knowing."

The March newsletter reported a rape in a neighboring beat, several robberies and a neighborhood watch success. Neighbors called police and a thief was caught breaking into a car on a Sunday afternoon.

It also carried a computerized map pinpointing every crime committed in the area during the past month.

"Twenty-six burglaries during January 1995 constituted a record number for any one month in Beat 25," it reported. "At this rate, with an estimated 2,000 households.... it would be just 6.5 years before everyone in the beat is a burglary victim. This is completely unacceptable."

Such information was not always so accessible, according to Wally Bradford, a senior police officer who began the District of Columbia's community policing initiative in a single Capitol Hill beat in 1990.

The police hierarchy was reluctant to release the data, fearing that residents would blame the messenger for the crimes. But officials acquiesced to the community's insistence and Bradford's persistence.

"The argument I made was, how can the community make the right decisions if they're not given all the facts?" Bradford said. "The whole program hinged on the fact that we had to be honest with people."

Response to the newsletter convinced Bradford he was right. Suddenly he had ample volunteers to be block coordinators, and residents living in other beats started their own anti-crime groups.

HIV protein may help to map AIDS drug testing

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Scientists have discovered how a little-known AIDS protein pirates its way into cells, revealing a possible new avenue for AIDS drugs.

A virus must get to a cell's nucleus to genetically alter the cell. Various proteins of HIV, which causes AIDS, get there by slowly overwhelming cells' defenses.

The Vpr protein not only gets there more quickly, it also forces the cell to help do its lethal job, University of Pennsylvania pathologist David Weiner discovered.

Vpr hijacks another protein naturally present in human cells — one that shuttles certain steroid hormones through cells — Weiner reports in today's issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Laboratory tests showed some of these steroids themselves activate HIV production and suppress immune cells, Weiner said. When he added Vpr, the protein not only used the steroids' cellular pathway to reach the nucleus, it triggered steroid overproduction to help it produce HIV, he said.

Scientists already knew that some chemicals, including the abortion drug RU-486, can block steroid overproduction in other diseases.

Weiner then tested whether RU-486 could block Vpr as well — and it did. In addition, HIV-infected cells treated with RU-486 produced 70 percent less virus than unmedicated cells, he reported.

But it's much too early to tell if RU-486 would work in people, Weiner cautioned. The method could even prove harmful if inhibiting this cellular pathway adversely affects the amount of vital hormones in a patient's body.

"There's a great danger," said Weiner, who is discussing with the National Institutes of Health how to further test if suppressing Vpr could help battle AIDS.

Jury requests murder charges against lab that misinterpreted tests

James A. Carlson
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Honoring Karin Smith's dying wish, an inquest jury is recommending homicide charges against those who misread the Pap smears that could have saved her life and that of another woman.

The district attorney is expected to decide this week whether to file charges against the laboratory, a technician and the doctor in charge of the lab in the case of Smith and Dolores Geary — both of whom died of cervical cancer.

District Attorney E. Michael McCann charged that the women were victims of indifference and blatant errors. An expert testified at the inquest that the laboratory missed unmistakable signs of cancer.

The American Medical Association said it knows of only one previous case in which criminal charges were filed against a doctor for a mistake and none against laboratories or technicians.

Smith died March 8 at age 29 after asking McCann to launch the investigation. She testified before a congressional committee a year ago that she was dying because her health maintenance organization didn't have the Pap smears diagnosed correctly.

"It was her wish for someone to pursue this because she felt it went beyond negligence," said Smith's father, Jorgen Knudsen.

"She didn't want it to happen to anyone else," said her mother, Marlene Knudsen.

McCann said the inquest jury of six laypersons was the first in Wisconsin to consider criminal charges for a fatal misdiagnosis.

Lawsuits and other civil actions are the usual course of action in cases of negligence and errors. The Smith and Geary families settled lawsuits against the women's health maintenance organizations and the lab. Smith and her husband got $6.3 million; the Gearys got $3.5 million.

AMA general counsel Kirk Johnson said the usual punishment for negligent doctors or technicians is for licensing boards to take away their credentials.

"They're basically just banished from their profession. It's a pretty serious sanction," Johnson said.

In the only prior case of criminal charges against a doctor, Dr. Gerald Einaugler of New York was ordered last month to spend 52 weekends in jail for reckless endangerment and other offenses in the death of a nursing home patient. He mistook a dialysis tube for a feeding tube and pumped food into the patient's abdomen.

Johnson questioned the need for criminal charges without willful misconduct, saying the criminal justice system isn't set up to handle such cases.

"It seems to me you have a state medical board ... designed to deal with this very kind of thing. If you can find this element of willfulness and knowledge, obviously a criminal case can be made," he said. "It sounds like what you have here is very bad practice or negligence, and you have a pretty effective remedy" in lifting doctors' licenses.

During last week's three-day inquest, experts testified cancer was evident in the Pap smears — gynecological tests for cervical cancer — years before Smith and Geary had their diseases diagnosed.

The women belonged to the same health maintenance organization: Family Health Plan.

In the case of Geary — a mother of three from suburban Oak Creek — a Pap smear in 1987 was reported as normal but showed obvious signs of cancer, said one of the experts who testified, Dr. Billy Bauman, medical director of the Dane County Cytology Center.

"It isn't very often that you see that number of malignant cells on a slide," Bauman testified.

The laboratory reported another Pap smear as normal, but when Geary underwent a hysterectomy in 1991, she was found to have advanced cancer of the cervix, testimony showed. She died in 1993 at age 40.

Bauman said the presence of cancer was "unequivocal" in slides from Pap smears done in 1988 and 1989 on Smith, a Nashotah accountant. Her cancer wasn't diagnosed until she saw a doctor outside her health maintenance organization in 1991.

While the slides didn't show how far the cancer had progressed at the time of the tests, Bauman noted that cervical cancer is "100 percent curable if it's picked up early."

"Once it becomes invasive, then it's bad news. It's a bad way to die," he said.

MOST RESTAURANTS AFFECTED

Smoking ban leaves some burned

Andrea Hamilton
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Monday was a chilly but glorious spring day in New York City, and Peggy Gache was whiling away the morning at Billy's Restaurant, enjoying coffee and a bagel.

Only one thing was missing: her cigarettes.

Gache wasn't taking it well on the first day smoking was banned in most of the city's restaurants. From East Side steak houses like Billy's to the seafood restaurants of City Island, nonsmokers were rejoicing and smokers were fuming.

"This is nonsense," Gache said. "I'm going to stay home and order Chinese takeout."

"I'm quite pleased, but I have a lot of angry friends," said Elisabeth Ford of Manhattan, after lunching at the Art Cafe Restaurant in midtown.

The New York Restaurant Association said about 11,000 of New York City's 15,000 restaurants will be affected by the law, an extension of a 1988 ordinance that required restaurants to set aside 50 percent of their seating for nonsmokers.

From now on, smoking will be permitted in no more than 15 percent of a restaurant's seating, and those seats must be in the bar area. And the bar area must be at least six feet from the dining room or separated from diners by a floor-to-ceiling partition.

Restaurants with 35 or fewer seats will be exempt as will stand-alone bars.

Smokers will also find tighter restrictions at other places, from movie theaters to office buildings. At Yankee Stadium, for example, smoking will be prohibited in all 57,500 seats — except for luxury boxes and bars.

City officials said the law reflects the will of the people. They dismissed restaurant owners' fears of losing customers.

Joan Borkowski — the owner of Billy's — built a separate dining room for smokers after the 1988 law went into effect and she said the arrangement was perfect. But those seats aren't in the bar area, so it's a nonsmoking area under the new law. On Sunday, Borkowski had 60 seats for smokers; on Monday, she had 20.

"I can't afford to lose one customer, but I'm sure I will over this," she said.

Margaret Hamburg, the city's health commissioner, said concerns over lost business have proved unfounded in cities with similar laws. She said the law would be enforced by routine inspections by her department and the city expects nonsmokers to report violations.

Restaurants — rather than smokers who violate the law — will be subject to fines ranging from $200 to $1,000.

For Ramon Barcenilla, a lawyer from Passaic, N.J., the tougher law was long overdue.

"I lost two brothers to smoking and emphysema and I don't want any smoke around me," he said at Beefsteak Charlie's in midtown.

Gache, a financial adviser who lives around the corner from Billy's and eats there three to four times a week, said things would never be the same at the wood-paneled steak house.

"The next thing they'll do is outlaw cigarettes after sex," she said.

STATE HEALTH CODE INVOKED

New York City debates closing gay bathhouses

Karen Matthews
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A decade after many of New York City's gay bathhouses and sex clubs were shut down to prevent AIDS, they're back — along with fierce arguments among gay men over what to do about them.

Some activists say the government should monitor sexual activity in such clubs because the survival of a new generation of gay men is at stake. They want to forbid all oral and anal sex, whether or not condoms are used.

Opponents of a crackdown say there's nothing wrong with men having sex in bars and clubs as long as they're using condoms. They say men are just as likely to have unsafe sex with a lover in a bedroom as with a stranger in a back room.

In the mid-1980s, New York, San Francisco and other cities closed bathhouses and other clubs where oral and anal intercourse without condoms had been common long before AIDS.

The action followed a bruising debate pitting club supporters, including many gay political leaders, against other prominent gay men, such as "And the Band Played On" author Randy Shilts. He felt the clubs had to be closed to slow the AIDS epidemic.

Now, while the city doesn't have an official count, activists estimate there are 30 to 50 clubs in New York where sex is occurring.

Many are a new type of club that emerged at the end of the 1980s. "Essentially mutual masturbation or group masturbation places," said Jim Eigo, a writer and an AIDS activist who was one of 400 people at a community forum held to debate the issue last month.

"There's very little anal sex, and all the anal sex that I see in these clubs is protected," Eigo said.

The debate flared in February, when the West Side Club opened in New York. It's a 1970s-style bathhouse with private cubicles where patrons' sexual practices can't be monitored.

Gabriel Rotello, former editor of the now-defunct gay magazine Outweek, wrote in New York Newsday that during a visit to another sex club, Zone DK, he witnessed "a murder-suicide" — two men having unprotected sex.

Rotello and others are campaigning to force the clubs to comply with the state health code, which prohibits oral, anal or vaginal sex in commercial establishments.

Neither Paul Galluccio, who owns the West Side Club, nor Michael Fesco, promoter of Zone DK, returned repeated calls.

AIDS activists who oppose a crackdown complain that the state health code makes no distinction between sex with and without a condom.

"As long as the law remains unchanged, to enforce it is to campaign against public sex, not unsafe sex," said Michael Warner, who wrote a Village Voice story titled "Why Gay Men Are Having Risky Sex."

Opponents of a crackdown say that for gay men, having sex where and with whom one chooses is a hard-fought right.

"We do not believe that the government has a role in telling adults what they can do sexually," said Marc Elovitz, an attorney with the American Civil Liberties Union's national AIDS project. "To invite the government to do so is to bring the repressive forces of the state on us."

The city said it has been enforcing the health code and has more than 30 sex club inspectors.

Israeli soldiers weep at the funeral of Staff Sgt. Yuval Regev, 20, during his burial ceremony in Holon, Israel, Monday. Regev died in a suicide bomb attack against an Israeli bus in the Gaza Strip Sunday. Palestinian police arrested 112 activists in the Gaza Strip following two attacks that killed 7 Israelis and 1 American.

Arafat asserts force in wake of bombings

Karin Laub
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — In a move that could push Palestinians closer to civil war, Yasser Arafat cracked down on Islamic militants Monday after suicide bombings killed seven Israelis and an American college student.

Arafat's security forces arrested 112 followers of Hamas and the

"We expect the Palestinian authority to take this type of concrete action against those within its jurisdiction who seek to destroy the peace process through acts of violence and terror."

Christine Shelly, State Department spokeswoman smaller Islamic Jihad after Sunday's deadly back-to-back bombings near two Jewish settlements in the PLO-ruled Gaza Strip.

Washington applauded Arafat's tough stance.

"We expect the Palestinian authority to take this type of concrete action against those within its jurisdiction who seek to destroy the peace process through acts of violence and terror," said State Department spokeswoman Christine Shelly.

But angry Islamic militant leaders raised the specter of civil war, apparently trying to force Arafat to back down.

"If (Arafat) practices this behavior, we will defend ourselves by all means," warned Mahmoud Zahar, a leader of Hamas — the most powerful group opposing the faltering Israel-PLO accord.

Despite the tensions and anger, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told negotiators to resume talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization on arranging Palestinian elections and an Israeli troop pullback to allow Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank.

The bombings wounded more than 40 people. Two of them died Monday, including Alisa M. Flatow, a 20-year-old junior at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., who was on vacation for Passover. She was wounded in the head while traveling to a beach resort at a Jewish settlement in the Gaza Strip.

After doctors declared her brain dead, Alisa's father, Steve, authorized an operation to remove organs for donation. In a statement, he said his daughter loved Israel and "her lasting contribution to the people of Israel is that her organs were donated for the saving of lives in Israel."

The mood in Israel was somber with funerals held for the victims.

"Stop killing the soldiers," wailed Phina Regev as the body of her son, Staff Sgt. Yuval Regev, was carried by jeep to a cemetery south of Tel Aviv for burial.

Arafat's police chief, Maj. Gen. Nasr Yousef, told the AP more militants would be rounded up and some would be put on trial.

A military court convened in a hastily arranged all-night session Monday, and the three-judge panel imposed a 15-year sentence on an Islamic Jihad activist for recruiting suicide bombers. It was the first time a militant had been sentenced to jail.

Israel Radio said late Monday that Abdallah Shami, the leading Islamic Jihad figure in Gaza, would stand trial along with another group leader in a special overnight session of Arafat's military court. Palestinian sources had earlier raised the possibility of such a trial but could not confirm it was imminent.

Arafat met with security chiefs late Monday and issued a statement condemning unspecified "external powers" fomenting instability in the Palestinian autonomy through terrorist attacks on Israelis. The statement said "several persons have been referred" to the special court for subversive activities.

It was unclear whether the sweep was window-dressing or whether Arafat meant business this time. The arrests targeted prayer leaders, intellectuals and political activists while the underground gunmen remained at large.

Islamic militants were defiant Monday.

"We will not be the first to start a civil war. But if this scenario (of trials and arrests) is implemented, do you expect people will not defend themselves?" Zahar said, speaking in an interview at his office at Gaza City's Islamic University.

"(Arafat) will face a popular uprising against his behavior toward the holy fighters," he added.

Zahar said all contacts between the Palestinian authority and the Islamic groups broke off last week.

Yousef, the PLO police chief, estimated that Hamas and Islamic Jihad had only about 150 armed fighters who could easily be disarmed by Arafat's 9,000 police. He was evasive, however, when questioned why this had not yet occurred.

Political opposition, threat impedes election day

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Election officials responded Monday to critics and pre-election violence by delaying balloting for two weeks and extending deadlines for candidates and voter registration.

Opposition politicians welcomed the news but threatened to boycott the elections if President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's government shuts them out of the electoral process.

The U.S. Embassy discounted accusations that the government is stacking the elections apparatus with its partisans.

"This is a very tough political climate, and one anticipates these kinds of criticisms," said embassy spokesman Stan Schrager.

The United States is footing most of the $13.5 million election bill.

The elections will be the first since a U.S.-led force restored Aristide to power Oct. 15 after three years of military dictatorship during which up to 4,000 people were killed.

The elections are a crucial test of Aristide's ability to consolidate democracy. Haiti has lacked a parliament since February, when most legislative terms expired before new elections could be organized.

On Monday, the electoral council delayed the voting — set for June 4 — until June 25, with run-off elections set for July 16 instead of June 25.

Elections were supposed to be held last December but were delayed by the tumult surrounding Aristide's return from exile.

The council announced the postponement Monday without immediate comment. It had promised action after Aristide invited 20 political leaders to air their grievances at a meeting Thursday in the national palace.

The revised timetable allows candidates an additional two weeks to declare themselves and gives 3.6 million eligible voters until the end of April to register.

Only 25 percent of the electorate in Haiti's most populous provinces have registered so far, compared to nearly 100 percent when Aristide was swept into office in 1990.

There were 12,000 registration bureaus in 1990. The council, saying it lacked time and money, opened only 3,000 this time.

Two-thirds of the 27-seat Senate and the entire 83-seat Chamber of Deputies will be contested, as will 133 municipal and 565 township councils.

Presidential elections to choose Aristide's successor are scheduled for December.

tus as the clear early GOP front-runner, Dole chose to ignore them. His announcement was elaborately choreographed, complete with a balloon drop and a charter plane marked "Dole for President."

Dole proved anew his willingness to adapt to the times — and the changes in his own party. He reached out to economic conservatives who have often questioned his commitment to lower taxes and to cultural conservatives who are influential in GOP primaries but somewhat suspicious of Dole because of his legislator's penchant for compromise.

"We can cut taxes and balance the budget," said Dole, once a fierce critic of Ronald Reagan's "supply side" economics. Aides drew the distinction that spending would be cut this time, as opposed to raised as it was at the time Reagan's tax cuts were enacted.

Still, that declaration left little doubt Dole knows his candidacy hinges as much on getting the new GOP congressional agenda through the quirky Senate as on the strong organization he has built in early primary states.

Dole winds up a weeklong announcement tour at a Veterans of Foreign Wars Post home in his hometown on Friday, the 50th anniversary of his World War II wounding in Italy.

With his wife and daughter at his side Monday, Dole dedicated his campaign to his neighbors in Russell, Kan., who stuffed cigar boxes with money to help him recover from grievous wounds.

"Because they restored my spirit in a time of trial, I have dedicated myself to restoring the spirit of America," Dole told a boisterous rally in the Kansas capital of Topeka. The event was moved indoors because of cold, rainy weather.

In the months ahead, Dole's age will certainly be an issue. He will be 73 by the 1996 election; only Reagan has been elected president at that age (his second term).

As he began his quest for the prize that eluded him in 1980 and again in 1988, Dole sought to turn his age into an advantage over GOP rivals untested on the national stage — and a baby boomer president whose leadership skills have repeatedly been called into question.

Recalling an emotional return to Italy last summer, Dole said, "Gazing across those now peaceful fields, I thought of why it is critical to have a president who knows what made America great, who knows what has been sacrificed to keep us free and who will do all in his power to lead America back to her place in the sun."

For his announcement, Dole chose Topeka over his hometown of Russell to symbolize his commitment to shift power over schools, welfare, housing and other programs back to states and communities.

To that end, he promised enactment of the line item veto and a balanced-budget amendment, a tax credit for families and a cut in the capital gains tax. Looking ahead, Dole said the entire federal tax system needed to be made "fairer, flatter, simpler."

He advocated eliminating four Cabinet departments: Commerce, Education, Energy and Housing. And he promised a review of every federal program to determine if it met the following test:

"Is this program a basic function of limited government or is it an example of how government has lost faith in the judgment of our people?" Dole asked.

Over his nearly 35 years in Congress, many Republicans have suggested Dole has had too much faith in government. "Tax collector for the welfare state" was the label once put on Dole by Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia.

Begging to differ with such characterizations, Dole said he lived by this parental guidance, "Put trust in God, not government, and never confuse the two."

pressures. I'd be dating guys, and it would get to the point where they wanted to get really intimate and I would totally flip. I related that behavior to violence because it was all I had ever known. It didn't all culminate until I came to college to meet my husband."

"My freshman year, RVAP did a program at my sorority house that deeply affected me to the point that I had to leave the room," Billings continued. "I had a good friend who kept telling me I should go to RVAP. A couple of months later, I went."

Billings said she talked one-on-one with Sovern for the rest of the semester and during the next fall semester.

"She helped me work through things. I had to deal with feelings that had been agitating for 10 years. I got real depressed. It was hard to get out of bed in the morning and hard to go to class," she said. "I really screwed up academically my sophomore year, and my professors were less than understanding."

Billings said during the months of counseling, she began to have nightmares about the abuse she had endured.

"I started having reoccurring nightmares I hadn't had for years," she said. "I would be standing in the playground behind the school yard, and the boys would ride their bikes around the corner. They always showed up like that when I least expected it and jumped off their bikes and ran around me in a circle. I would run away and jump on this ledge."

"They would all stand there and the ringleader would float forward; the others floated back. I was like 6 or 7 and I'd pull out a gun and blow his head off," Billings said. "I had variations of this dream when I was younger. I had this dream over and over for almost a year."

Lingering feelings of depression, recurring nightmares and flashbacks are natural reactions for survivors of childhood sexual abuse, said Dr. Kelly

Willson, UI Counseling Service psychologist.

"Sometimes when people begin to deal with things that happened a long time ago, they develop posttraumatic syndrome similar to what we think of when war veterans have flashbacks," Willson said. "Sexual abuse survivors will have the nightmares and flashbacks and alternate between feelings of numbness to anger or rage."

Billings said while undergoing counseling, she struggled with intense feelings of apathy and an eating disorder.

"I was at the pinnacle, at the top of the hill. I could either fall back to square one or fall forward," she said. "I was anorexic. I had no self-esteem. I realized one morning I was killing myself. I looked in the mirror and said, 'You have to do something or you are going to die.'"

After one and a half years of individual and group counseling and a lot of soul-searching, Billings disclosed her story to the entire Alpha Xi Delta chapter. Speaking to 55 of her sorority sisters about the abuse was therapeutic and it spurred some of the other women to talk about similar experiences, she said.

"Survivors can't help but be teachers; you can't leave it at home," Sovern said. "Being a survivor is not a status thing; it is a difficult thing. Talking about it lessens the isolation."

Finding strength in helping others, Billings volunteers at RVAP and is a member of People Out Working to End Rape.

Now that she has re-established safety in her life, Billings wonders if the boys who abused her ever realized what they did.

"I wonder about the guys that did this to me," she said. "They have no idea what they did. It took me 10 years to get over it. But it is never going to go away. Like I told Ashley once, the door is closed, but there is a window and I can always see it there."

today as the system moves northward, said National Weather Service meteorologist Pete Berg.

"In a way that's good because it means things will be warming up, but in a way it's bad because it means things will be living up (today)," Berg said. "That's when the main event will occur. And it looks like there's quite a bit more to come."

Despite the crazy weather changes, John Castle — park manager of the Coralville Reservoir, which is managed by the Army Corps of Engineers — said residents of Mayflower Residence Hall need not worry about having to vacate the residence hall, which was evacuated during the flood of 1993.

"This sort of weather's probably not very common," Castle said. "As far as Iowa City is concerned, the small creeks might be in danger of flooding, but that can happen whenever there are heavy rains right after each other."

Castle said the Corps of Engineers will be releasing 2,100 cubic feet of water today at the reservoir to relieve dam pressure, which is typical for April. At the height of the 1993 flooding, the corps released 25,000 cubic feet of water — which runs downstream.

Clear Creek in Coralville and Ralston Creek in Iowa City might be in danger of overflowing their banks, but the Iowa River and the Coralville Lake should remain in check, Castle said.

"A lot of it depends on where you live, but I don't think we have anything to worry about yet," he said. "We'd have to approach 8 to 10,000 cubic feet before that's really going to add to things downstream."

However, area gardeners don't have to be wary of the alternating moments of sleet and sunshine just yet, said Ed Engroff, a UI chemist who has gardened for a number of years.

"The weather is just delaying things really," Engroff said. "Except for some fruit seedlings, I don't know of anything that will be affected unless it has already blossomed. We just have to wait for things now."

Bob Oppliger, a master gardener with the Iowa State University extension service, said the spinach he planted is just poking through the soil now but agreed the heavy rains and ice will simply retard his garden's progress.

"(Gardeners) are like the farmers: we're ready to go," Oppliger said. "We kind of like the moisture because we've had a lot of dryness lately, but if it's like this on May 1, we're really going to be getting antsy."

Hillaker predicted the snow would end by the end of the month.

Iowa is on the northern edge of a storm system now centered in Oklahoma and northern Texas, he said. Hillaker said when a state is on a storm's edge, things can get very wet.

"In this case — with the north-west side of the storm — it's going to be right for the precipitation for having sleet and rain," he said. "At times, it seems we're getting all of it."

The storm system is moving slowly enough for Iowans to expect scattered showers throughout the next couple of weeks, Hillaker said.

"Whenever there are thunderstorms around and this storm moving so very, very slowly, there are lots of chances for rain," he said. "Southern and eastern Iowa has been fairly dry the last couple of months, so it seems unusual for you to be in the middle of a flash flood watch."

The forecast for today calls for rain and thunderstorms with temperatures in the upper 40s, and the extended outlook calls for rain to end and temperatures to warm up by Thursday. However, the storms will return Saturday.

"Everything will lift out in the next couple of days, and things will warm up," Berg said. "That way, we'll have a chance to dry out before the next round of storms occur."

SWITCH

in Atlanta Monday.

The switch comes three months after Deal told WSB radio, "If I choose to switch during the term, I think the honest thing to do is to resign and have a special election."

Deal did not immediately return a call seeking comment on that statement.

Deal's move increases the Republicans' House majority to 231-203, with one independent. It leaves Georgia with three Democrats and eight Republicans in the House. A year ago, there were seven Democrats and four Republicans.

"I hope this is the last of the Newt-niks in the party. Without them, we can be strong, lean, committed and dedicated and, most importantly, we will be able to count on each other in a way that we couldn't with them around," said Rep. Cynthia McKinney, one of Georgia's three Democratic representatives.

Other Georgia Democrats were more sympathetic.

Gov. Zell Miller, who has embraced a more conservative agenda in the past few years, said, "Nathan Deal is a very good congressman and a very good friend and will continue to be so regardless of his party affiliation."

Texas Rep. Martin Frost, head of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, promised to field a tough candidate against Deal next year.

PROPOSED SIDEWALK CAFÉS

Downtown would benefit

In the vacuum of rational thought that is the chamber of our City Hall, Iowa City councilors will vote today on a proposal allowing for the implementation of sidewalk cafés in downtown Iowa City. These cafés would be an outdoor extension of downtown Pedestrian Mall businesses similar to those seen in Boulder, Colo., and other college towns. Yet despite the fact that it could stimulate vitality and economic strength in the downtown area, this measure is being met with unfounded skepticism from the City Council.

Chief curmudgeon in this debate has been Mayor Susan Horowitz, who has a history of opposing ideas that would benefit Iowa Citizens. During the summer of 1993, for example, Horowitz led the City Council's dissension against an outdoor concert to benefit flood victims. After netting nearly $5,000 in a similar concert held at the now-defunct Iowa City Yacht Club, owner Don Henry Miguel arranged a rare show of solidarity among 17 Iowa City bars, and each agreed to donate a keg of beer to the event.

Although the concert was well-organized and laden with security precautions, the proposal fell upon deaf ears, thus denying a potential $30,000 to local citizens inundated by the flood. Horowitz balked at the presence of alcohol, lamely suggesting that the benefit had the potential for riotous violence.

This time around, she has again expressed questionable logic while justifying her opposition to the cafés. Horowitz has remarked that she couldn't imagine people wanting to "sit out on a hot summer day with the mosquitoes and do this." One must wonder if our mayor ever ventures out of her air-conditioned fantasy world. If she did, Horowitz might notice the exceptional success of the Downtown Association's Friday Night Concert Series or those who descend upon the Pedestrian Mall on sunny days.

Horowitz's ignorance aside, outdoor cafés have the potential to thrive in Iowa City by enhancing a downtown landscape already teeming with people. Somehow, though, the mayor has failed to comprehend such promise. As she stated, "Part of me feels it's like any new and exciting thing you try — it could soon peter out."

If conservative skepticism such as Horowitz's prevails in this issue, it might be local businesses that will soon "peter out." Due to the skyrocketing costs of rental spaces, local business owners are finding it more difficult to keep their downtown enterprises afloat. Looming as a threat to take their place are big businesses, which can afford to survive the expense of downtown commerce through their alliances with national chains.

The presence of local merchants lends an attractive charm to downtown Iowa City, and such businesses may be in danger of extinction. Imagine for a moment a 7-11 in place of the Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co. or a Wal-Mart in place of Prairie Lights Books. While the likelihood of losing these institutions is remote, we may see other local favorites fall victim to big business.

The passage of the outdoor café ordinance will inject a vital economic boost into local commerce, perhaps saving many businesses in the process. However, if the rest of the City Council chooses to embrace Horowitz's inept opinions on this issue, Iowa City stands to lose much of its identity to the plasticity of corporate chains.

AMERICA'S SCHOOLS

Combat zones or prisons?

Graduating from high school to enter college or the work force no longer has the same meaning that it used to. Instead of the excitement of being an adult and having a degree, graduation has become an excitement because students have made it through school alive. The American public school system has become a war zone where guns and knives are abundant. In the past, violence in schools has been thought of as the epidemic of the inner cities, but it has spread to middle-class neighborhoods across the country.

The scariest part of this violence is not just that it has spread to every neighborhood across every state, but that it's not even confined to high school. Five-year-old kindergarten students now tote handguns. In incidents involving guns on school property, 12 percent take place in elementary schools and 1 percent in preschools. Preschool is supposed to consist of Play-Doh, nap time and story time, not basic training for the combat zone these 5-year-olds have been drafted into.

Who's to blame for the terror running rampant in America's schools and the transformation of schools into prisons where one-fourth of large urban school systems have metal detectors? Poor parenting and Americans' love affair with television and movie violence have long been at fault, but we should not forget that the very pillars of our society promote violence. We live in a materialistic society where power and money have always deserved prestige. It is no longer powerful to have a part-time job to pay for a Walkman; instead, kids shoot other kids to take a $30 possession.

Also to blame for this epidemic is the technological advancement in American society that allows kids to play Nintendo and Sega instead of reading and doing homework. Attention deficit disorders are rising in the new generation. "Dateline NBC" showed a junior high school classroom in Colorado Springs, Colo., where students made it impossible for one teacher to teach math because they were running around the classroom and fighting with each other. During the filmed visit, the teacher gave an average of four commands a minute.

Iowans have long been proud of the high level of education and the safety of their schools, but 23 percent of the students in Iowa schools carry a weapon. Just last July, Jeremy Allen, 15, of Ottumwa High School was shot twice in the head by his classmate Michael Coffman. The Iowa House of Representatives debates random locker searches with no notice and easing restrictions on fingerprinting, photographing and handcuffing juvenile delinquents.

America's schools are dangerous and as a result students are thought of as potential criminals. The solutions put forth to help the problem suggest nothing about how to stop the violence of America's youths. What's better for young students, a combat zone or a prison? Unless our society stops worrying about money and concerns itself with giving children a healthy environment, things will only get worse no matter how strict schools become.

LEA HARAVON

The ramifications of a liberal arts education

For those of us who can afford it, going to college is not something we decide to do; it is understood — by middle-class parents, friends and teachers — that college is the next logical step following high school. As a high-school student, I was more caught up in the excitement of applying to college than I was interested in finding out what college actually was. I had a poster — an advertisement for a college — that read, "A good college challenges your assumptions." I liked the poster, but I never really thought about what it meant.

I applied to eight schools, got accepted at five and went to one. It called itself a liberal arts college, and on the first day of orientation, we, the class of 1989, were told that we were going to get a solid liberal arts education. I did not know what that meant. Was there such a thing as a nonliberal arts college education?

During those four years at college, I thought that a synonymous phrase for liberal arts education was "lots of required courses." I remember complaining to myself and to others that some of these requirements were ridiculous. When would I ever need those facts from astronomy? Why were they making me take gym? I remember thinking that these requirements were confining. Why could I not just take what I wanted to take? I was after all an adult, wasn't I? Why did someone else get to decide what my education should be?

I have heard some undergraduates at the UI ask similar questions. Another complaint I have heard is that the courses which they are required to take are not practical and will not help them in real life. In my senior year of college, I took a course that clarified some of my questions about the liberal arts. The course, believe it or not, was ancient philosophy. It turned out that Plato created an academy where he taught what he called the liberal, or free, arts. To go to Plato's academy was considered an honor and a luxury. Scholars did not go there so that they could get good jobs afterward and they certainly did not go there to learn practical skills. Plato said that the liberal arts are the highest form of leisure that exists and can be indulged in when mandatory work is done. The highest form of leisure within the liberal arts is philosophy, said Plato.

One of the goals of Plato's academy was to develop well-rounded young men who were strong in mind and body. The students were schooled in reasoning, rhetoric, the natural sciences, literature, music and the arts, and gymnastics. Contemporary liberal arts programs are modeled after Plato's academy. Required classes in rhetoric, natural sciences, humanities and physical education are all vestiges of Plato's ideas about education.

Since the idea of going to college remains an unchallenged assumption for some of us, we are not afforded the opportunity to question reasons for coming here. Consequently, students may complain that the courses they take are not practical and are, therefore, worthless. If students were never told that a liberal arts education was never intended to be practical for a professional degree, then of course they will complain about having to take a humanities course which does not seem relevant.

Should the UI prepare us for a competitive job market or should it teach us how to think? I know what Plato would say. Then again, his students did not have to work; some of them even had slaves working for them.

This past semester, I was a Teaching Assistant for Professor Ben Hunnicutt's Leisure and the Liberal Arts, a General Education course offered in my department (Sport, Health, Leisure and Physical Studies). It was in this class that students were introduced to the idea of a liberal arts education as Plato saw it. Like me when I was an undergraduate, most of them had never known what was meant by a liberal arts education. This course helped clear up for them why they were being asked to take courses like physical education and rhetoric.

It is important that we understand what we mean by a liberal arts college education. Without this knowledge and definition, we can look forward only to flimsy and ungrounded arguments regarding the future of undergraduate education. For example, some argue that the physical education requirement should be eliminated because it is irrelevant and not practical for students. If this argument is to stand, we need to ask ourselves if students are truly then getting a "liberal arts" education in anything but name.

Plato had some good ideas about education. It is arguable that some of them may need to be reconsidered in the more contemporary context of economic uncertainty. After all, it is no longer just wealthy young Athenian men of leisure who are getting this liberal arts education which Plato advocated. Regardless of any ultimate decisions concerning undergraduate education, it is important for all of us — students, professors and administrators — to understand the connotations and ramifications of the term "liberal arts education" when we engage in debates about changes in requirement and policy.

Two extremes miss the target over guns

When the subject is guns, we definitely have a failure to communicate. Those who hate guns seem to believe that those who don't are a lot of lowbrow, beady-eyed, beer-guzzling neo-fascists who are constantly leaving pistols around the house so children can find them and shoot their siblings.

Those who defend gun ownership seem to think that gun-control advocates are a bunch of left-wing, government-loving, wine-sipping sissies who believe that the best way to handle a criminal is to kneel at his feet and blubber, "Don't hurt me. Take my money. I know you had a disadvantaged childhood, but I share your pain."

That's why I seldom write about the endless struggle between gun owners and gun haters, even though I think I understand them better than they understand each other.

For example, many gun lovers seem to believe that any gun-control law that imposes any restriction on gun ownership is a bad law.

If you carry that to its illogical conclusion, we would have no gun laws and no restrictions. It would be legal for anyone — responsible citizen or nut — to buy a gun as easily as a bottle of root beer. And for anyone to carry it everywhere and anywhere, openly or concealed.

We might even have a situation that I once jokingly proposed — and the Archie Bunker show shamelessly stole — in which all passengers on airplanes would be issued loaner pistols so they could blow away skyjackers.

We need gun laws. How restrictive they should be, I don't know. But reasonable people should be able to agree on terms that would help keep guns away from dangerous hands while letting decent people protect themselves.

"Protect themselves?" someone is scornfully saying. "They don't protect themselves or anyone else. They just let their guns fall into the hands of children or criminals."

That's the response of many of those who dislike guns and want a European approach: Nobody has them but the cops or rigidly controlled sportsmen.

And I think they truly believe that hardly anyone ever uses a gun to shoot or fend off a criminal.

Maybe that's the fault of the media. We seldom overlook a story about a child using his dad's gun to shoot his older sister.

But we aren't as alert to stories about people who ping a crook.

There are sources for both kinds of stories.

The gun-control advocates keep large files on every case of careless gun use they can find. But they don't have any records of people successfully defending themselves against criminals.

At the same time, the National Rifle Association has thick files of honest citizens using guns to kill, wound or capture criminals.

But under F in its file cabinet, there is nothing about family gun tragedies.

Chances are you didn't read about the great jewelry store shootout in Richmond, Va., a couple of months ago. I know about it only because a friend in Virginia called me.

This is what happened: Two gunmen barged into the Beverly Jewelry Store. Both were career criminals with long records for stickups, burglaries, drug running and other crimes across the South and South east. One was being sought on a murder rap. It was later described by an acquaintance this way: "He won't kill you unless he has to. But if he has to, he will."

They picked the wrong jewelry store. The owner is a gutsy guy and an expert marksman. His employees had all been trained in using guns and had so many guns hidden in the store that he and his salespeople were never more than an outstretched arm away from one.

So when one of the gunmen jumped on a display case and let loose with a warning blast from his shotgun, the owner and his five employees all reached down and came up shooting. Six guns going at the same time.

The robbers got off a few shots that didn't hit anyone, but within seconds, both were dead.

The owner of the store said he doesn't believe in being passive when someone threatens his life with a sawed-off shotgun.

There are those who would disagree. Don't fight back and you won't get hurt is the approach. But that's no longer a safe bet, if ever was. Today, punks with guns take the money, then kill their victims just to see how it feels.

So if the police can't protect people from murderers — and they admit that is beyond them — who will? That jewelry store owner knew, and his employees were on their own, as most of us are.

It's not a simple subject.

Tom McGreevey, resident of Rock Island, Ill.

"I like it. I didn't realize what a good player he is. When he left, the team wasn't nearly as good. Now I appreciate him more — his skills and talents."

Jay Know, Iowa City resident

"Just call it ecstasy! It just wasn't fun without him. It is a game now. Before (he came back) it wasn't even interesting."

Lily Le, UI junior majoring in chemical engineering

"I used to like Michael Jordan much. It is good news for him to come back. I like to watch him."

Rally to be held protesting 'Contract'

Newt Gingrich and the Republicans threaten to roll back all of the rights won by ordinary working people, unions, blacks, women, gays and lesbians, and other minorities in the last 60 years. The "Contract With America" threatens to plunge millions of Americans deeper into poverty, deepen the crisis in our public education and state university systems, and annihilate decades of laws that attempt to make our workplaces safer and keep our air and water free from deadly toxins. Thus the Republicans plan to make Americans poorer, sicker and less educated.

Republicans are leading this assault on the rights of all ordinary working people with a racist divide-and-conquer strategy. The racist mantra of the Republican right is that immigrants and black women are "living it up" on welfare at the expense of the rest of society. This racist, warped image is a far cry from the reality of the dire situation facing the majority of blacks and immigrants in the United States today — yet the image serves as a "justification" for the cuts in everything from federally funded school lunches to Aid for Families with Dependent Children. The truth is that over 50 percent of those on AFDC are white and over 70 percent cannot work because they are either disabled or are children.

By using racist images of blacks and immigrants living off society, Republicans are whipping up racism while attempting to come after everyone.

So the Republicans whip up racism and then use it to assault all working people in the United States. In fact, the only group that is living it up at the expense of the rest of society today are the rich people in Congress and their corporate allies. The Gingrich plan, passed by the House last week, will cut individual capital gains taxes from the current 28 percent (down from 48 percent in 1978) to 19.8 percent and will cut corporate capital gains taxes from the current 35 percent (down from 76 percent in 1978) to a mere 25 percent. The New York Times reports that these tax breaks to the rich will total a whopping $189 billion. Friday's Wall Street Journal called the Gingrich tax break bill "the biggest bonanza in years for the wealthy." The richest 1 percent of the population of the United States owns a shocking 90 percent of the wealth. So they cut their own taxes while making ordinary Americans pay with their racist attacks on social spending.

Yet all of the social spending programs targeted in the "Contract" make up only 1 percent to 2 percent of the national budget. So even if the Republican plan is successful in wiping out social programs and plunging millions deeper into poverty, the GOP plan still will not have made a dent in the national debt. Thus the assault on social programs now is paving the way for government to grab the real target in entitlement cuts: Social Security and Medicare. Just as corporations raided workers' pension funds over the last decade, leaving them nothing to live on but Social Security, the pigs at the trough in Congress have their eyes on Social Security and Medicare. By using racist images of blacks and immigrants living off society, Republicans are whipping up racism while attempting to come after everyone. Everyone other than that top 1 percent, that is.

Unless you are in the top 1 percent, you have nothing to gain and everything to lose with the "Contract." We can either build a fight-back similar to the struggles that won the reforms — now under attack — in the first place, or we can watch the clocks turn back to an era where unregulated toxic substances spewed into our air and water; with universities reserved only for the rich; and with millions upon millions of women, men, children, disabled persons and elderly living in the streets of America.

If you opt for a fight-back, a good place to start is at the rally tonight at 7 at the east entrance of the Union. A variety of student organizations plan to rally in united opposition to the Republicans by sending a clear message to Joseph Gaylord, political coordinator for Gingrich's campaign, who will be speaking at 7:30 p.m. in the ballroom of the Union (with UI Lecture Committee funding). Anyone who is opposed to the vicious attacks being carried out by Gingrich and the Republicans should join the demonstration tonight. As one of the 400 workers occupying Gingrich's office in Marietta, Ga., stated, "We ain't waiting two years for another election. If you're determined to rip our guts out, you're going to have a fight on your hands."

GUEST OPINION • BRIDGET MCCOY

Why are Americans in constant motion?

I was just reading an article in The New York Times about an old man who welcomed in the spring by walking around in New York City and sitting on different park benches. He watched people rollerblading and mountain biking and pondered a question: "Why do Americans have to be in constant motion?" He wondered why it is that the mastery of filling every second of the day is revered, while the afternoon nap seems to be a pastime quite forgotten. It occurred to me that I am guilty of this obsession of not wasting time.

It is the first day of spring break and I am sitting in Palm Beach, Fla., at the Bath and Tennis Club. The sun is shining and the waves are hitting the beach not even 50 feet away from the cabana that I am sitting in. I am enjoying my relaxation in a warped way. I do not have anywhere to go and have nothing to do, but for some reason, I feel that I have to be doing something "productive." So I type away on my laptop computer and watch the cabana boys move the furniture. Typing is a perfectly respectable pastime, but could I be an observer and contemplator like the old man if I wanted to be?

To utilize every moment isn't a real fault unless you miss what is going on around you. To skip the pleasurable things in order to complete responsibilities and daily tasks is a fact of life. To enjoy late nights, early mornings, sunrises and sunsets is a choice. It is a cultivated art, balancing the responsibilities of life with the spontaneous and memorable, wonderful moments. For the old man in the park, there is enjoyment in relaxation and contemplation, and for others like myself, there is enjoyment in the feeling of accomplishment at the end of the day when tasks are completed. To each his own is still acceptable, right?

As the sun set and the tide rolled back and I continued to type, I decided that I had to prove to myself that relaxation is possible in the sense of filling my time with observing and not doing.

I'm not even convincing myself. I must confess that the reason I was reading The New York Times was to keep up on the political happenings in Italy. I'm not keeping up on Italian events for my own amusement but for a paper that I have to write after break is over. I wasn't typing away on my computer because I thought this would be a pleasant late afternoon activity, but because I felt guilty that I hadn't paid enough attention to my assignments. It was either admit to myself that I'm not the laid-back, care-free person that I would like to consider myself or prove that I am.

As the sun set and the tide rolled back and I continued to type, I decided that I had to prove to myself that relaxation is possible in the sense of filling my time with observing and not doing. So I tried a little experiment. A couple hours of loitering on the benches of Palm Beach was called for. I planned to get up early the next day and walk around visiting various benches to see if I couldn't enjoy a little time doing nothing.

My plan was first delayed because I couldn't get out of bed due to the fact that I unexpectedly had a late night that culminated in singing along to the soundtrack of "South Pacific" (don't ask). This is fine and actually a point in my favor of spontaneity, except for the fact that I had determined a time that I wanted to be up by and I didn't make it and this bothered me (the first sign that I didn't possess the calm of the old man). I got out there, though, and my first bench was on the corner of Ocean Boulevard and Worth Avenue, a wonderful location overlooking the crystal blue waters of the Atlantic Ocean. I sat for a while contemplating the surf and the formations of sea gulls and then decided to take a seat on the break wall so I could face the street and watch the people go by.

Palm Beach is magnificent because of its climate, architecture, restaurants, shopping and clubs, but it is infamous for its wealth. After seeing about a dozen Rolls-Royces and a hundred beautiful people, my thoughts started wandering to my own future. I went through the same thought process that I always do. How can I be rich, happy and successful, it begins. I lay out my education plans in my head, think about how I'm doing now, decide that poverty won't be so bad and conclude that I will have to marry a wealthy man. These aren't exactly the contemplations that the old man was having, but exactly what I feared my 20-year-old mind would come up with.

So my experiment ended with a sigh, and I went back to the Bath and Tennis Club and back to the reading room to catch up on Italy.

UI policy concerning animals is hypocritical

To the Editor:
After reading the "School bans furry friend's visit" article in the March 31 issue of The Daily Iowan, I couldn't help but notice the hypocrisy of the UI policy. The article says that the policy "prohibits dogs, mammals, birds and reptiles from UI buildings." What the policy fails to state is that in fact there are many buildings on campus which house animals, but unfortunately not for social or protective reasons.

The following buildings which hold animals include:

- Biology Building — rodents, frogs and crabs
- Spence Laboratories of Psychology — rodents, rabbits and pigeons
- Dental Science Building — monkeys and rats
- Bowen Science Building — rabbits
- Medical Laboratories — rats, dogs, hamsters, livestock, nonhuman primates and mice
- Seashore Hall

The purpose of keeping these animals hostage is vivisection (the drug-giving, burning, blinding, infecting, shocking, addicting, shooting, freezing and surgical mutilation of healthy animals) and dissection in classes. What is more unfortunate is that very few of these animals leave the building alive.

Personally, I feel the decision of bringing Lesha and other animals to class should be left up to the professors and students, not a hypocritical policy made by the UI.

Speaking out against the factory farm system

To the Editor:
In your article on the Iowa City Veggie Fest, beef industry representative Tom Hotz said, "For some reason, some people believe people in agriculture are not treating animals correctly, but they really don't understand or realize what is going on" (Festival plants new eating ideas, DI, March 13). What's not to understand?

For the 7 billion animals destined for America's dinner tables, the factory farm system is a living hell. Chickens suffer from painful bone disorders and spinal defects resulting from the abnormally high growth rates demanded by factory farmers. Chicken farms are so crowded many birds die from thirst or starvation because they cannot reach water or food. Pigs — forced to spend their entire lives in cramped, narrow stalls — become so weak they can barely walk even 50 yards. Calves are taken away from their mothers at birth and are confined to tiny veal crates, in which they cannot take a step backward or forward or turn around. To combat the diseases prevalent on overcrowded factory farms, cows and other animals are routinely fed and sprayed with huge amounts of pesticides and antibiotics — chemicals which are passed on to meat eaters.

Even some farmers, who definitely "understand" what's going on, are starting to speak out against the factory farm system. One thoughtful farmer lamented, "It just tears me up, some of the things we are doing to these animals. These pigs never hurt anybody, but we treat them like, like ... like I don't know what. Nothing in the world deserves this kind of treatment."

The factory farm system is just one reason meat stinks and just one reason to adopt a vegetarian diet. For others, write to People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) at P.O. Box 42516, Washington D.C. 20015.

Would you lie if the truth hurt this much?

A painful death often awaited those who first believed that Jesus rose from the dead. But theirs wasn't a blind faith. No, they kept their eyes open everywhere they told the resurrection story, knowing their next word could be their last. Would so many risk their lives for something that wasn't true? Would you die for a lie? For a brief, straightforward look at the evidence they had, ask for Beyond Blind Faith. It's free. It's painless. And it's yours for the asking. Call 1-800-236-9238 today.

Agassi overtakes top spot from Sampras

Andre Agassi's push to the top began last July at the Canadian Open when he was stuck at No. 20, an imposing 4,061 points behind leader Pete Sampras.

In those days, Agassi was viewed as a tennis novelty, a ponytailed showman who had only occasionally delivered on his promise. It was an image that was about to change drastically.

Agassi won that tournament, touching off a sensational stretch during which he won six more events in the next eight months, including two Grand Slams — the U.S. Open and Australian Open.

On Monday, his ponytail long gone, Agassi got the payoff, moving past Sampras to claim the No. 1 ranking on the ATP computer for the first time in his career.

He becomes just the 12th player in the 22-year history of men's computer rankings to hold No. 1 and ends Sampras' 82-week grip on the top spot. Sampras held it for 101 of the last 104 weeks, his string interrupted only by Jim Courier for three weeks from Aug. 23-Sept. 13, 1993.

During his march to the top, Agassi had a 55-6 match record, including 26-2 this season. He piled up points against the best players in tennis, going 17-3 against opponents in the Top 10 since winning the Canadian.

The lead is a mere 187 points as the rivals go to work this week in separate tournaments — Agassi in Tokyo and Sampras in Spain. Both were well aware of the change at the top and its significance.

"It's important for me to be the best that I can and I believe that is No. 1," Agassi said after his victory over Sampras in the finals of the Lipton Championships positioned him to take over the top spot.

"Taking over No. 1 won't have the impact that it is going to have a few years from now when I look back and know that I have maintained it."

White Sox sign Sabo to one-year deal

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Free agent third baseman-designated hitter Chris Sabo and the Chicago White Sox agreed Monday to a one-year contract.

Sabo, 33, hit .256 with 11 home runs and 42 RBIs in 68 games with the Baltimore Orioles last year. During his seven-year career, Sabo is a .269 hitter with 112 home runs and 399 RBIs. Sabo spent his first six seasons with the Cincinnati Reds.

His best season was 1991, when he hit .300, with 26 home runs, 88 RBIs and 19 stolen bases.

Big-leaguers find some big paycuts

Ronald Blum

Associated Press

NEW YORK — In the parlance of some agents and general managers, it's called "taking a shave."

All across baseball, players with multimillion-dollar salaries are taking multimillion cuts — if they don't have super stats to back up their big bucks.

"It's a changing market out there," Houston Astros general manager Bob Watson said Monday. "It's been reflected in a lot of the signings. It's an indication that the market has changed."

Tom Browning went from $3.5 million to

"You have to keep things in perspective. The salary I just signed for, you could make $5 an hour for about 15 years and not make that kind of money."

Pat Borders, New Royals catcher on his $2.2 million salary drop $300,000 when he signed with Kansas City. Bob Welch dropped from $2.9 million to $225,000 with Oakland. Bud Black, who made $2.65 million last year, signed with Cleveland for $350,000. Mike Devereaux dropped from $2,575,000 to $800,000.

"It's been incredible, just incredible," acting commissioner Bud Selig said.

Dave Stewart dropped from $3.5 million to $1 million when he signed with Oakland on Saturday. He didn't seem to mind.

"What the owners are doing now probably should have been done years ago without asking us to fix their problem," he said. "What's going on right now isn't any more than what it should have been."

In the deal most criticized by agents, catcher Pat Borders signed with Kansas City for $310,000. He made $2.5 million last season with Toronto.

"I remember making $5 an hour," Borders said. "You have to keep things in perspective. The salary I just signed for, you could make $5 an hour for about 15 years and not make that kind of money."

Players and agents say the moves of the past week show the current system of free agency and salary arbitration can adjust to changes in revenue. Owners claim they lost $700 million in revenue because of the strike.

"The irony of this labor dispute may be as

High-school star brings heroics to Hawkeyes

Chris James

The Daily Iowan

When Tom Derouin decided to play tennis for Iowa, he might have been wary of playing in one of the top conferences in the country and facing hard-nosed opponents match in and match out.

But how much could it faze a guy who brought a 146-14 career record, a state title and three all-state selections with him to college?

Probably not a whole lot. The sophomore from Moline, Ill., has adjusted just fine and is playing some of his best tennis of the spring for the Hawkeye men's tennis team. Derouin has posted a 4-0 mark in Big Ten singles play and has an equally impressive 3-1 mark in doubles.

It isn't surprising since Derouin has been around the game since the age of seven.

"I came from a family of six and we all played tennis," Derouin said. "My dad played tennis in college and my older brother plays a lot of tennis, so that's what really motivated me to keep with it."

Derouin played tennis under his father, who was the coach at Moline High School, and blossomed from there. He also kept busy in the offseason by playing basketball for four years at Moline.

"It was good to have my dad there for me as the coach of the team and my personal coach. It really helped me develop my game quicker and better," Derouin said.

Derouin finished third in the state his sophomore and senior year and won it all his junior year. He lost only six matches his last three years and led Moline to the team title his senior year.

When the time came for Derouin to choose a college, he said it was a pretty simple choice.

"West Virginia, Kansas, Illinois and Michigan State recruited me, but I really liked the program at Iowa. I knew a lot of the guys on the team and Coach Houghton impressed me, Wins like 22-3, 17-3 and 16-5 are impressive.

But the Iowa men's baseball team wishes those wins were coming against Big Ten opponents instead of Mankato State, North Dakota State and Northeast Missouri State.

The Hawkeyes have dominated midweek opponents throughout the early season, but they can't seem to carry that dominance into the weekend.

Iowa (17-11, 6-6 Big Ten) dropped three of four games last weekend to Purdue.

If weather allows, the Hawkeyes will face Luther College at 3 p.m. today on Iowa Field, then host Northern Iowa and Iowa State Wednesday and Thursday before heading back into Big Ten play.

The midweek schedule should provide the Hawkeyes with a break as well as some valuable preparation time.

"I think we need to just get back playing right away," Iowa leadoff hitter Eric Martinez said. "After losing three games when we should have split, we need to get back to winning and carry that winning momentum into this weekend when we play Illinois."

Senior Steve Fishman agreed that this week will serve as a stepping stone en route to the Illinois series.

"I think we just need to pick ourselves up and realize that last weekend hurt us," he said. "We need to build ourselves back up."

Fishman was unable to pinpoint why Iowa's play dropped off so much over the weekend.

"I just think we need to realize how fun and easy it was to relax and play those midweek games," he said. "They're not the same caliber talent, but they're the same type of games."

Martinez admitted that Purdue was a tougher team than the midweek opponents, but he said that wasn't the problem.

"We could have hit a lot better than we did," he explained. "I don't think we ever scored a run with two outs and runners in scoring position. There was an opportunity to score runs, but when the time came, we just didn't hit the ball."

Luther College (8-7) should see a Hawkeye team ready to hit. Martinez said that the Hawkeyes, who seemed to be waiting for things to come to them all weekend, would be a lot more aggressive.

NBA PLAYOFF RACE

Several teams vie for edge tonight

Mike Triplett

The Daily Iowan

Need two good reasons to toss the books aside and sit in front of the tube for a couple hours tonight?

How about Suns vs. Sonics and Bulls vs. Pacers.

The Bulls host the Pacers at 7:30 p.m. on SportsChannel, while Phoenix battles Seattle for first place in the Pacific Division at 8 p.m. on TNT. And those are just two of the 10 NBA games carrying playoff implications tonight.

The last time Chicago took on Indiana, the Pacers won. In overtime. In Michael Jordan's first game back.

Tonight the Bulls will be looking for revenge as well as attempting to widen their one-game lead over Cleveland for the fifth playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

NO HARD FEELINGS

Now that baseball's back, all is forgiven

Baseball is back, but one question still lingers: Will the fans be back?

Wouldn't it be great if baseball fans everywhere simply didn't show up when the season started? Show the players and owners that the fans make the game and we won't stand for their little spats over which million dollars goes where.

Wouldn't it be great?

Yeah, and wouldn't it be great if I won the lottery, married Cindy Crawford and discovered a year's supply of Keystone in my refrigerator?

It's all just a nice fantasy.

Teams shouldn't be concerned about fans coming back to baseball because they never left.

If anything, the interest in the game has intensified.

I know this because the day after the strike was called off, I watched as baseball fans all over campus wondered aloud about what the starting lineup of their favorite teams would be.

Instead of listening to complaints about the owners negotiating tactics, I overheard two people in Schaeffer Hall asking whatever happened to Jesse Orosco.

There was no discussion about whether to go to games this season. Rather, there was a debate in the the West's fifth seed.

Rounding out tonight's action is Miami at New York, Atlanta at Philadelphia and Detroit at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee is one game behind Boston for the eighth playoff spot, while Miami is three games back. Detroit is a distant 4½ games away from the No. 8 seed.

Atlanta is eyeing that No. 6 spot as it watches Cleveland slip. The Hawks are three games behind the Cavs.

Heck, I had opening day tickets to see the Cubs replacement players. Not because I want to see some scrub boot a ground ball, but because I want to kick back in the Wrigley Field bleachers with a beer in one hand and bratwurst in the other, trying to convince myself the Cubs have a chance to win it all this season.

And now that the real players are back, I'm sure I'll be in Wrigleyville for opening day, not angry at the players or owners, but perfectly content.

Beer in one hand, brat in the other.

20 GAMES ABOVE .500

Rebuilt Lakers can contend

Beth Harris
Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Seven games into the season, Vlade Divac went to owner Jerry Buss with a bold prediction: The Los Angeles Lakers will win the NBA championship.

Divac and his young teammates are doing their best to make it a reality for Buss and first-year coach Del Harris after the debacle of last season.

The Lakers are 47-28 and already have clinched a playoff berth. They had won seven straight at the Forum and 15 of their last 19 overall until losing 101-87 to the Western Conference-leading San Antonio Spurs on Sunday night.

They are a season-high-tying 20 games above .500 for the second time, and are on pace to win 52 games or more. Only Dallas, which is on track to improve by an NBA-high 24 games this season, can top the Lakers' 19-game turnaround.

"Big difference is last year at this time I knew I'm not going to playoffs, now I'm going to playoffs," Divac said.

After failing to make the playoffs last season for the first time in 17 years, this season looked like a rebuilding year.

Instead, the Lakers are winning with three veterans and a bunch of youngsters who have no more than five years' NBA experience among them.

"I think a lot of people still don't believe in us," second-year guard Nick Van Exel said. "I really don't know what it takes, but hopefully we can surprise some people in the playoffs."

The Lakers finished 33-49 last season under three different coaches.

Magic Johnson lasted 16 games, long enough to discover he didn't want to coach players he later ripped for having selfish attitudes and an unwillingness to work hard.

Harris has gotten better results with some of the same players, including a renewed Divac. Also making solid contributions are Cedric Ceballos, who returned to his native Los Angeles in a trade with Phoenix, and rookie Eddie Jones.

Ceballos is averaging 18.8 points and 6.6 rebounds since returning from thumb surgery 11 games ago. At various times, seven different Lakers have been on the injured list, including Jones, who has since returned to the starting lineup.

"I can't believe how quick this team is," Utah's John Stockton said. "The Lakers healthy are going to cause a lot of problems for a lot of teams, hopefully not us."

Houston's Drexler nabs player-of-the-week nod

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Houston's Clyde Drexler, whose 31.8-point scoring average was the highest in the NBA last week, was selected as the Player of the Week.

Drexler, who took up the Rockets' scoring slack in the absence of ailing center Hakeem Olajuwon, also averaged 8.3 rebounds, 4.5 assists and 2.5 steals in four games. He shot .538 from the field (43-for-80) and .744 from the foul line (32-for-43).

REMINISCENT OF REINER'S 'SPINAL TAP'

'... And God Spoke' celebrates the best found in B grade films

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

For those who take bad cinema seriously, filmmakers like John Landis — whose "An American Werewolf in London" overflowed with references to B movies — are manna from heaven. Even Landis' early films, like "The Kentucky Fried Movie" and "Animal House," showed his reverence for and desire to duplicate the trashy entertainment value and sick humor of "quickie" filmmaking.

That same raw exuberance and misanthropic attitude toward show business has found its way into the recently released film "... And God Spoke," an elaborate, hilarious mockumentary / exposé in the same vein as "This Is Spinal Tap."

This "documentary" tracks a talentless film production team — syrupy producer Marvin Handelman and neurotic director Clive Walton — who met during the 1970s while working on the same exploitation film, "The Airport." Says Handelman of the film, "No, it wasn't 'Airport,' which came out at the same time. ... Our film was 'The Airport.' Unfortunately, there were some legal problems, and our film was never released."

The partners went independent and produced a series of turkeys, from "Nude Ninjas," the story of a gardener at a college sorority who convinces some of the airheaded pledges that he is a ninja master and that they must all run around topless, to "Friday Night Boogie," which seems to be the partners' attempt to cash in on the monolithic success of the trend-setting 1980s flop "RollerBoogie."

As the mockumentary begins,

"... And God Spoke" brings skill back to the world of bad cinema. Like John Landis' "Amazon Women on the Moon," the film revels in its own poor taste and the sordid history of B movies in general.

these two inept weirdoes are in preproduction on a biblical epic titled "... And God Spoke," an ill-conceived condensation of the Bible "with all the boring bits taken out."

When it becomes clear that neither Marlon Brando nor Charlton Heston will commit to the project, the duo set their sights on a more realistic casting game. The result: Soupy Sales as Moses, Eve Plumb (Jan on television's "The Brady Bunch") as Mrs. Noah and Lou "The Hulk" Ferrigno as Cain.

Like the band in "This Is Spinal Tap," the crew of "... And God Spoke" is beset with common filmmakers' problems: arguments, cost overruns, logistical mishaps, etc. And like "Tap," director Rob Reiner, mockumentary director Arthur Borman pulls out all his punches, resulting in chaos, mayhem and hilarity.

"... And God Spoke" brings skill back to the world of bad cinema. Like Landis' "Amazon Women on the Moon," the film revels in its own poor taste and the sordid history of B movies in general. Like "Spinal Tap," it has a firm backbone, a hilarious cast and an impish sense of humor. And like last year's "Ed Wood," it paints a clear picture of misguided passion, troubled genius and the adage which seems to follow those traits everywhere they go. ... Never quit your day job.
