Police continue search for mother of dead baby boy

DAVENPORT (AP) — The search continued Wednesday for the mother of a baby boy whose body was found in a cardboard box in the hallway of an apartment building Tuesday morning.

Preliminary autopsy results showed the baby was fully developed and weighed under 4 pounds, officials said.

Authorities also believed the infant may have been born about a month premature, but they don't know if he was stillborn, aborted or killed.

There were indications there may have been trouble with the birth, officials said. They want to find the mother to make she doesn't have any health problems.

Police say they were not thinking about possible charges in the case right now but were worried about finding the mother.

'Price is Right' model drops harassment suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "Price is Right" model who accused Bob Barker of forcing her to have sex with him said Wednesday she was dropping her lawsuit.

In a statement issued by her attorney, Dian Parkinson said she stood by the lawsuit's allegations, but her doctor had advised her she wasn't physically strong enough to withstand the stress of pursuing it.

Barker's attorney said it was clear Parkinson had no case, adding that the game show host was considering suing her for malicious prosecution.

"Bob Barker has beaten me into submission," Parkinson said in a statement released by her attorney, Howard Slotnick of New York.

Barker said he wouldn't sue if Parkinson would sign a statement admitting she wasn't sexually harassed, but Parkinson said she wouldn't do that.

UI to Kato: Stay in L.A.

Lecture committee passes on shaggy-haired Simpson witness

Matthew Brown
The Daily Iowan

He may be America's favorite house guest, but Brian "Kato" Kaelin is not welcome at the UI.

When an agent called the UI Lecture Committee on behalf of Kaelin, a star witness in the O.J. Simpson trial, the committee wasn't impressed enough to return the agent's call.

Committee Chairman Andrew Peebler, a UI junior, said the committee is trying to maintain a 40-year record of "quality" speakers, and it is unlikely they will book anyone from the Simpson trial in the future.

The request was left on the committee's answering machine by an agency that arranges speaker tours on lecture circuits. Peebler said he had never dealt with the agency before.

"There are different levels of speakers' bureaus, and we deal with the more reputable ones," said Peebler.

In the past 40 years, Eleanor Roosevelt, Jimmy Carter, Maya Angelou and Olympic champion Jackie Joyner-Kersey have visited the UI to speak.

The idea of flying the aspiring Hollywood actor to the UI drew mixed reactions from students watching a report of Wednesday's trial proceedings in the TV lounge of the Union. UI sophomore Maria Bovis said she wouldn't have gone to see Kaelin lecture.

"Personally, I think he's trying to make money out of the whole O.J. spectacle," said Bovis.

However, UI junior Amy Birchall said a speech given by Kaelin would make for a lively night out.

"I think (Kaelin) would be interesting," said Birchall. "I don't follow the trial, but I think people found him to be entertaining. His quirkiness would appeal to me. When there's an interesting speaker, it gets around."

Kaelin's testimony lasted five days and concluded on March 28. He was originally called as a prosecution witness but was declared a hostile witness when the prosecution contended his testimony painted a sympathetic picture of Simpson.

The media had a field day with Kaelin, criticizing the aspiring actor for his ambiguous testimony, little-boy demeanor and shaggy hair. In the days following his testimony, a $12 T-shirt reading "America's favorite house guest" went on sale.

The committee received the Kaelin speaking offer last month, before he testified in the Simpson trial.

The fact that Kaelin has recently become a household name does not make him a more appealing speaker to the committee, Peebler said.

► Criminalist Dennis Fung admitted that on a hot June day, crucial blood samples in the investigation sat in plastic bags inside an evidence truck for seven hours because the truck's refrigerator didn't work.

► Fung also said he never wrote a report on bloodstains on Simpson's Bronco, never had them photographed and never testified about them at a preliminary hearing last summer.

► Judge Lance Ito had an afternoon meeting with Jeanette Harris, a discharged juror who complained of racial tensions on the jury.

100 days and going strong

Associated Press

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., addresses Republican congressional candidates on Capitol Hill in September during a rally in which Republicans pledged their "Contract With America." The GOP passed nine of the 10 policies on the pledge.

With 'Contract' complete, GOP faces new challenges

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

It has been a grueling 100 days on Capitol Hill, and the Republicans came out ahead, passing nine of the 10 "Contract With America" provisions they promised the American voters during the 1994 campaign.

"The House Republicans have shown when we say we are going to do something, then we're going to get it done," said UI sophomore Mark Sands, treasurer of the UI College Republicans. "Yes, you can trust the government to keep their promises."

Looking forward to the next 100 days, the Republicans have a larger promise to fulfill: They have vowed to draft a proposal to eliminate the national debt and to tack on more tax cuts.

When lawmakers trudge back to Capitol Hill after Easter, the GOP will probably go head to head with President Clinton and minority Democrats, who will likely oppose the Republicans'.

Poll: Americans find third party appealing

David Morris
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When it comes to politics, Americans want more choices. Nearly six of every 10 voting-age people favor creation of a third party, a poll suggests.

In line with that finding, the poll also reported more of its respondents calling themselves independents (37 percent) than Republicans (30 percent) or Democrats (29 percent).

The poll, released Wednesday by the Times Mirror Center for The People and The Press, is just the latest sign of trouble for the two major parties. A recent study of the motor-voter registration program by the Associated Press found independents registering in record numbers in states where party breakdowns are tracked.

"If I were a betting person, I'd say we're going to have a third-party candidate in the race next year," said Andrew Kohut, director of the Times Mirror center.

It is much too soon to speculate how well a third-party candidate would do in the presidential contest, since the outcome would depend largely on which candidates the Republicans and a third party might nominate to run against President Clinton — and whether Clinton faces a serious challenge for the Democratic

PROGRAM'S HOURS SHORTENED

SAFEWALK staffers perplexed by low student usage

After a month of operation, less than 30 students have used the SAFEWALK service — with no calls coming after midnight, organizers said.

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

After struggling for nearly a year to reinstate SAFEWALK, organizers are frustrated and confused as to why students are not using the nighttime escort service.

"It really discourages us," said UI sophomore Patti Ferrell, a SAFEWALK committee member. "The number of users is not reciprocal of the amount of work and effort we put into the program. We can't expect the volunteers to sit for two to three hours waiting for someone to call and no one does."

Although SAFEWALK has been operating for more than a month following a yearlong hiatus, only 25 to 30 students have called for services. In contrast, during the first month SAFEWALK was first implemented in the spring of 1993, about 75 students used the program.

SAFEWALK will shorten its hours of operation from 7 p.m. to midnight Sunday through Thursday and from 7-10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The hours were from 7 p.m. to midnight Sunday through Wednesday and from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. Thursdays through Saturdays.

A continued lack of demand may cause committee members to re-evaluate the program and its usefulness.

"We have a lot of volunteers but not a lot of walkers," said UI student Debbie Haeger, SAFEWALK volunteer and committee member. "We want it to be a worthwhile service, but we've never had a call after 12 o'clock. If it's not utilized enough, we'll have to reassess it to see whether the program will be used again next fall."

Coordinators speculate that students may not be using the service because they established different arrangements for nighttime travel when SAFEWALK did not operate. Bad weather, less nighttime activity and an overall conception that

BARKER FACES 20 YEARS

Iowa teen found guilty in shootings

Associated Press

DAVENPORT — An eastern Iowa teen-ager was convicted of two counts of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting deaths of two men during a hunting dispute last September.

A Scott County jury returned the verdicts against Robert Barker, 16, Wednesday after 12 hours of deliberations. Barker faces up to 10 years in prison on each count.

Sentencing was set for May 1.

Barker was charged with first-degree murder in the shotgun slayings of William Isabel, 49, and Brett Wood, 27. The New Liberty teen-ager was accused of shooting the men in a hunting confrontation on Isabel's land in Atalissa.

Prosecutors and the victims' families appeared surprised when the verdict was announced. Barker hugged his attorney, cried and waved at his family.

A Cedar County judge ruled in December that Barker, then 15, should stand trial as an adult. Had he been tried as a juvenile, Barker could not be held after his 18th birthday. The trial was moved to Scott County on a change of venue.

In their summation, the prosecutor and defense attorney said the case of Barker is tragic, but for different reasons.

Defense attorney Brad Norton said the boy acted in self-defense.

Cedar County Attorney Lee Beine said the case is sad because of Barker's age. But he said Barker should be held accountable for his actions.

Norton told jurors his client acted out of fear. Isabel and Wood held Barker hostage while letting his two hunting companions leave the scene, he said.

"Think about being in the woods with two men who have guns in their hands and how frightening it can be to be alone," Norton said.

But Beine said Barker's friends were 10 to 15 feet away when the shotgun was fired.

Co-op butcher can hack workplace challenges

It's kind of like selling fur coats at a People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals rally. Maurice Finn's job as head butcher at the New Pioneer Co-Op Fresh Food Market, 22 S. Van Buren St., could rank high on the list of controversial jobs.

And what does Finn say to animal lovers who have the gall to criticize his profession as a meat dresser? Nothing.

DAY IN THE LIFE

"Everyone has their opinion, and we respect that attitude," Finn said.

After 30 years in the meat-cutting business and one year at the store, Finn said he's never considered giving it up. He got involved with the business in high school and never had any desire to go to college.

"I like working with people," he said. "The New Pioneer customers are really diverse."

Finn has a good time doing his job and said it still challenges him after all these years.

"If you're not watching what you are doing, you could maim yourself really easily," he said.

Finn said he's learned to watch himself carefully while performing his butchering tasks.

"In 30 years, I've never had a stitch," he said. "After that long, you learn to remove your hand before you start with the knife."

Finn said he and his colleagues use band saws, grinders, slicers and stuffers to complete the variety of tasks required to provide everything from steaks to sausages.

The larger tools are used to break down the animals into more manageable pieces upon their arrival at the store. The lambs arrive at the store as full carcasses, but everything else comes as primals, which Finn described as cut-up carcasses.

The visions created by cutting up dead animals may not be appealing to all career-seekers, but Finn said

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

Maurice Finn, head butcher at New Pioneer Co-Op Fresh Food Market, 22 S. Van Buren St., has a lot to say about the co-op. Not only does he like his job — "It's hard to beat a good steak," Finn said — but he likes the principles of the co-op. "It's all organic, from the free-range chicken to the largest variety of fresh seafood," he said. Finn stresses freshness because "a lot of people handle that frozen (stuff)."

he's never had a problem because the industry is tightly regulated.

"It is really a clean job, and New Pioneer is not any cleaner or dirtier than any place else," he said. "I wouldn't want to work in a Third World country with the way they do their food preparation."

As with any job, Finn does have an occasional bad day at the office, but the problems are easily remedied, he said.

"You just go home and kick the trash can three or four times, and that makes it better," Finn said.

Making the transition from Bigg's — a large grocery store in Colorado where he used to work — to New Pioneer has not been difficult.

"I like Iowa City because there are a lot of friendly, intelligent people here," Finn said. "It just has a certain energy."

Despite the co-op's reputation as a vegetarian's paradise, Finn said that many people purchase their meat from him because it is organic.

He said that the attraction of organic meats is that the animals are not given growth hormones and are raised on organic food.

Finn said this is a big selling point at a time when sales of red meat have been dropping steadily in a more health-conscious society. Falling sales have not caused Finn to fear for his job, and in fact, he likes cutting red meat the best.

"I myself prefer the prime rib — or rib eye — because it is such a pretty meat," he said. "You just know that you've got a good cut when you see it."

Another aesthetic pleasure Finn gets from his job is the seafood, of which he is also in charge. He handles 35 to 40 species of seafood per day on the average, and it adds spice to his job.

"Seafood is so pretty and so nice," he said. "You can actually make art-work with seafood displays."

Seafood has experienced a boom in popularity as red meat sales have fallen because of the lower cholesterol content in fish.

Cholesterol does not cause Finn too much concern — he likes to eat prime rib as much as he likes to look at it. Even after 30 years of being elbow-deep in meat and its byproducts, his appetite has not been sated.

Giving up meat altogether has never crossed Finn's mind, but there are some animal products he does not eat.

"I don't eat offal, which is the innards," he said, adding that some people do buy the guts from him.

It is not a common sale, but it is all part of the job.

"Sometimes I'd like to be at some of the customers' cookouts, when they bite in and say 'Wow!'" Finn said.

Store owner loses battle over video

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A store owner lost a court fight over Barbra Streisand: The Video.

A judge Tuesday dismissed a lawsuit filed by video store owner Robert Jaffe, who claimed that a deal between Streisand, Blockbuster Entertainment and Sony Music discriminated against small, independent stores like his.

The video "Barbra Streisand: Barbra in Concert" went on sale last year. In an agreement with Blockbuster, Streisand added the song "What Are You Doing the Rest of Your Life?" to the version sold only at Blockbuster stores.

Jaffe said the agreement violated antitrust laws by giving Blockbuster an unfair advantage.

Judge charges Stern with disorderly conduct

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — A Texas judge is gunning for Howard Stern.

Justice of the Peace Eloy Cano issued a warrant Friday charging the shock jock with disorderly conduct for mocking fans of the slain Tejano singer Selena on his show.

"I did it for all the Tejano fans," Cano said.

The warrant could be served if Stern sets foot in Texas.

Jay Jacobson, executive director for the Texas chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the warrant violates Stern's rights to free speech.

"Being a music critic — no matter how harsh — is not grounds for criminal charges," Jacobson said.

Soon after Selena was slain in Corpus Christi on March 31, Stern played her music to mock gunfire and said, "Alvin and the Chipmunks have more soul. ... Spanish people have the worst taste in music. They have no depth."

Stern later apologized on the air. A call Wednesday to Howard Stern spokesman Don Buckwald in New York wasn't immediately returned.

Stallone lobbies for filmmaking in Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sylvester Stallone the lobbyist urged Oregon legislators to support construction of a film-production center in the state.

Stallone is in the area filming "Assassins," an action-thriller scheduled for release in the fall.

A bill in the Legislature would allocate $3.25 million for an Oregon Film and Multimedia Production Center. The rest of the $15.5 million needed would be raised privately.

The center would provide sound stages, production space and offices.

"States that have the ability to draw filmmaking should do so," Stallone told six state senators who visited the movie set Tuesday.

"Films are becoming our greatest export."

"There's no reason that Washington, Oregon or even Northern California shouldn't be taken advantage of," Stallone said.

The crew will move to Seattle for nine weeks to finish production. Supporters of the bill said the production wouldn't have to move if Oregon had a movie center.

Big Bopper's son fails to receive royalties

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The son of the late Big Bopper will have to do without royalties from the cover of a telephone directory.

Jay Perry Richardson last year sued Golden Triangle Telephone Directory, which distributes the Beaumont-area directory. Richardson said the company profited by using his father's image without permission.

But State District Judge Jack King said in a ruling released Monday that the company didn't profit because ads for the directory were sold before the cover was designed and because the book is distributed free.

The Big Bopper, the rock 'n' roller whose hits included "Chantilly Lace," died in 1959 in a plane crash that also killed Buddy Holly and Ritchie Valens.

A painting of the Big Bopper is on the cover with other Beaumont-area celebrities, including Janis Joplin, singer-actor Tex Ritter and former football star Bubba Smith.

Stiff drunken driving bill earns legislators' approval

Mike Glover

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Legislature on Wednesday sent Gov. Terry Branstad a tough new drunken driving bill that lets police seize the cars of repeat offenders and sets "zero tolerance" for youngsters.

"It's a tough bill, but it's a tough problem," said Rep. Steve Grubbs, R-Davenport. "Drunk driving is a cause of death that is preventable."

The bill also calls for all people convicted of drunken driving to lose their licenses for at least 30 days, without being able to obtain special permits to drive to work and back.

The House gave the bill final legislative approval on an 82-0 vote, sending it to the governor. Branstad said he would quickly sign it into law.

Branstad, at a news conference, said he was "delighted" to sign the measure and would schedule a ceremony as soon as the bill arrived in his office.

The main fight came over the "hard suspension" proposal, with opponents saying that provision would cost jobs, as drivers who have made a single mistake won't be able to get to work.

"The effect may well be to cost people their jobs," warned Rep. Phil Wise, D-Keokuk.

House Democratic Leader David Schrader, of Monroe, said first-time offenders should be able to get the special permits, while legislators focused attention on repeat offenders. Most first-time offenders learn their lesson, he said.

"That person is totally embarrassed, realizes they have made a mistake and are never seen again," Schrader said.

"I think everybody is entitled to one screw-up," said Rep. Jim Drees, D-Manning.

But an effort to allow those special permits drew only 13 votes in a House that took a decidedly hard-line stance against drunken driving.

"Fewer people will be injured on our roads if we pass the 30-day hard suspension," Grubbs said.

Under the bill:

- All caught driving drunk would have a "hard suspension," losing all driving privileges for at least 30 days. That would be one year for repeat offenders.

- Those under 21 would have a limit of 0.02 percent blood-alcohol level. The legal blood-alcohol limit is 0.10 percent, but youngsters are held to a higher standard. Legislative staffers said the 0.02 level amounts to drinking one beer in an hour.

- Those convicted of second and later drunken driving offenses would have their car impounded or immobilized, at the judge's discretion.

Drunken driving legislation in past years has generated huge controversy, but this year's version was approved overwhelmingly.

"We have a crisis out there," said Rep. Paul Bell, D-Newton, a police officer.

Health FIRST

Courtney, Bonnie & Bob Sierk enjoy walking as a family fitness activity.

Once again this year during April, First National Bank is proud to sponsor "Health First," a month-long series of events and activities designed to introduce and reinforce health-related issues to area seventh and eighth grade students and their families.

Working closely with area educators and health care professionals, the goal of Health First is to encourage a healthy lifestyle for students and their families, thereby setting a positive example for our entire community.

The quality, scope and dedicated professionalism of the education and health care infrastructure in our community is something of which we can all be proud.

Join with us this month as we capitalize on this outstanding local resource through the events and activities of Health First, an investment in the most precious resource of all: our youth!

Mixing Chunky Monkey and Cherry Garcia ice cream with politics worked so well during election time that UI Student Government President Tim Williams and Vice President Jeremy Johnson plan to repeat the campaign ploy to keep students interested in UISG.

Williams and Johnson said they intend to hand out free pints of Ben and Jerry's ice cream again next year.

"We plan to give it out again — once each semester," Johnson said. "We want to have discussions during (the handout), too."

The campaign strategy to deliver free ice cream to potential student voters on Feb. 24 was such a success that Williams and Johnson gained more votes than the three other platforms combined. The Williams-Johnson ticket garnered 61.8 percent of the student vote.

But the ice cream campaign is not 100 percent responsible for the victory, Williams and Johnson said. The candidates' personal approach to politics put them over the top, they said.

"It was probably worth a couple hundred votes, but the ice cream alone wouldn't have done it," Williams said. "We spoke to people and got the word out. The ice cream just complimented our campaign."

Williams and Johnson personally delivered five different flavors of ice cream to students last winter, Johnson said. The Wavy Gravy and Cherry Garcia flavors were gone before the two could say freezer burn.

The Williams-Johnson platform bought 80 pints of Ben and Jerry's from the Union, and the pints were gone in about an hour. But gobs of students continued to approach the candidates' table from every direction, and Williams and Johnson were forced to order

UI Student Government President Tim Williams and Vice President Jeremy Johnson are out to make politics more fun and personal. Williams and Johnson handed out free pints of Ben and Jerry's ice cream during this year's election and garnered 61.8 percent of the student vote.

40 more pints. The venture cost about $200, which came out of their campaign fund.

Williams envisioned a Ben and Jerry's campaign theme in the fall of 1993, he said. He was hooked after he saw a Ben and Jerry's delivery van sitting in the middle of Hubbard Park, and a truckload of free ice cream being handed out to flood victims.

"People were running down the streets and getting armloads of ice cream, and I thought to myself, 'That's what I want to do,'" he said.

Ben and Jerry, meet Tim and Jeremy.

"It was catchy, so we rolled with it," Williams said.

"People couldn't believe we were giving out free ice cream; it took about five minutes before we could finally convince them it was free Ben and Jerry's ice cream," Johnson added.

The ice cream was an introductory ploy, Williams and Johnson said. The students had to meet the candidates in exchange for the free pint of ice cream.

"We wanted to find a way to relate to students and get the word out," Williams said. "We wanted to create some excitement to show students that this isn't like all impersonal politics. This was fun and more personal. It was a way for them to get to know us."

Plastic spoons with the date and time of UISG elections printed on them accompanied the ice cream, Williams and Johnson said.

Johnson and Williams wanted to set precedent during the last election year, Williams said. While the other candidates focused on issues, they spoke to students and had fun as well.

"No mudslinging. Just good, clean ice cream," Williams said.

Jack Campbell, a UI junior and Johnson's roommate, said the campaign ploy was original from a political standpoint, but it was strange. "I thought it was, well ..." Campbell said. "It depends how you're looking at it. Politically, it was a good idea, but to normal people it's pretty cheesy."

I.C. hit by series of car break-ins

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

An elaborate stereo system may be the finishing touch on the perfect car, but a recent rash of burglaries in Iowa City has turned some dream cars into targets for thieves.

The recent burglaries are occurring more frequently than normal and have been concentrated on the west side of the city, said Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department.

"We have a lot of car burglaries all the time, but this is an increase over what we usually have," Lihs said. "I would say we have more on the west side than normal."

The city's west side has been the location for eight of the 22 car burglaries reported in April. Bartelt Road, on the far northwest side of Iowa City, has been hit four times this month.

Lihs said police patrols have increased in the Bartelt Road area because of the break-ins.

"We're trying to put plainclothes officers out in unmarked cars and on bikes," Lihs said.

Other high-risk areas for car stereo theft include apartment building parking lots, Lihs said.

Two residents of the apartments at 625 S. Gilbert St. have reported car burglaries this month.

Most car break-ins include destroying the dashboard and stealing stereos and compact discs, Lihs said.

"If you've got an Alpine (stereo) system in your car, you can kiss it goodbye," Lihs said. "(Thieves) smash windows out, they tear dashes apart — they are really crude about it, and they just don't care. If you've got a convertible, they're not beyond slashing the top."

Some adventurous thieves are also stealing stereos with detachable faces, Lihs said.

But the value of stereos without their faces is low because it is difficult to match the two parts, said Shane Davidson, audio supervisor for Best Buy, 1963 Broadway.

"There are so many different models out there it would be almost impossible to find the right one," Davidson said.

Although most car burglaries happen overnight, the police department has a difficult time

"Usually when we catch somebody, they have a whole trunk full of car stereos."

Sgt. Craig Lihs, of the Iowa City Police Department

catching the criminals, Lihs said.

"Every once in a while we'll have somebody who will call in immediately, and we'll catch on to them," Lihs said. "Usually when we catch somebody, they have a whole trunk full of car stereos."

Once stolen car stereos are found, the police department attempts to match the equipment with its owner. On most occasions matches aren't made, and the stereos end up at public auctions, Lihs said.

Local car dealerships are seeing an increase in service to burglarized cars, said George Garwood, fixed operations director for Hargrave McEleney, Highway 1 West.

"(Burglaries) always seem to go in spurts," Garwood said. "I think we've got four already this month alone."

Garwood said victims of car burglaries often have to shell out more than $600 for just car repairs.

"Normally when they take radios out, they're grabbing them and yanking them out, which breaks the instrument cluster and dashboard," Garwood said. "Expenses range from $300 to $400 for the instrument cluster, then $100 for labor."

On top of the cost for repair of the dashboard, most car owners have to repair shattered windows.

"Normally, we see the driver's side window broken out," Garwood said. "That would range around $150."

After cars have been repaired, the next expense is the replacement of the stereo system.

The most popular models purchased are often compact disc systems, which range from $200 to $450, Davidson said.

Although car owners who park their vehicles on the street and in parking lots always run the risk of burglary, Lihs said there are a few precautions drivers can make.

"If you've got items of value, do not leave them in the car," he said. "Decrease the possibility of burglary by not parking (the car) out where it's by itself."

Other methods of protection include purchasing car security systems.

Garwood said it is rare for cars with alarms to be broken into.

"I don't think any we've seen have had security systems at all," he said.

DNA sequence may boost immunity

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

DNA, the blueprint of genetic information in cells, has been found to trigger the body's immune system to battle infection — a finding that could possibly contribute to the fight against cancer and the AIDS virus.

UI assistant professor of internal medicine Arthur Krieg said a special combination of DNA in bacteria is key. DNA is made up of bases, and the combination of the base cytosine followed by the base guanine (CG DNA) is fairly uncommon in humans. When the sequence does occur, the cytosine has what is called a crown of molecules dubbed a methyl group.

In bacterial DNA, the combination of cytosine followed by guanine does not have a crown. The body gets this uncrowned CG DNA when bacteria invades it.

"The immune system has recognized the uncrowned CG DNA, and it sees infection," Krieg said. "That's a signal to activate cells to fight against infection."

The AIDS virus does not have a lot of the CG DNA, Krieg said. But synthesized CG DNA could be given to patients, and theoretically it could help the immune system fight HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

This theory works in tests tubes, and Krieg said this may be significant but was cautious about it working in humans.

"One of our hopes is that it might be useful against the AIDS virus," he said. "You never know if it works in tests tubes if it will work in humans."

Another disease that CG DNA may help fight is cancer. It seems this DNA activates the natural killer cells in the body that battle cancer, Krieg said.

George Weiner, a UI associate professor of internal medicine who is working with Krieg on various cancer projects, said CG DNA could be used in several areas of cancer but added it's too soon to tell for sure.

He said studies are just being started to find possible effects and said one possibility is that CG DNA could help develop better vaccines for cancer in people who already have had it. The vaccine would prevent the disease from returning.

Weiner said the special DNA also could have a direct effect on some cancer cells, specifically cancers of the immune system like lymphomas and certain leukemias.

The CG DNA seems to activate the cells that make antibodies as well, Weiner said.

"It might be a way to make more cells that make antibodies against cancer," he said.

In addition to fighting HIV and cancer, the CG DNA may also help improve the effectiveness of vaccines, Krieg said. It would do this by encouraging the immune system to develop antibodies to the vaccine faster.

"The idea is by getting this together with the vaccine, we could cause a more immune response to the vaccine," Krieg said.

Ae-Kyung Yi, a postdoctoral associate in internal medicine, worked with Krieg on his finding. She said finding out how CG DNA turns on the immune system may help contribute to the treatments for autoimmune diseases — diseases which cause the body to attack its own cells.

An example of this type of disease is lupus, which with certain symptoms can cause death. The cause of lupus is unknown, but CG DNA will help in the investigation of it, Yi said. People with lupus have more of the CG DNA, which may cause increased production of the antibodies attacking their bodies.

Krieg said he and his colleagues found the CG DNA by accident about five years ago while working on something else, and he has been pursuing the phenomena for the last two years. It will be at least a couple more years before humans could benefit, he said.

Book Arts Club to sponsor auction

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

Book collectors, enthusiasts and artists will crowd into The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., tonight to bid on unique books and other items at the Book Arts Club's annual auction and raffle.

The doors will open at 6 p.m. to allow for viewing of auction and raffle items before the event begins at 7. Among the items to be raffled are handmade items by Cheryl Jacobsen, Glen Epstein, Penny McKean and Emily Martin; a personalized bookplate by Claudia McGohee; "Ruckus Rodeo," a pop-up book by Red Grooms; and gift certificates and various items from local businesses.

The items were donated by club members and local merchants. Raffle tickets are available for $1 at Dick Blick Art Materials, 116 E. Washington St., where many of the items have been on display since April 6.

Some of the most beautiful items are those known as artists' books, which use unusual and creative methods to explore and expand the conception of the book.

"It's a nontraditional form. Sometimes it doesn't even have pages," said Suzanne Micheau, auction chairwoman and club treasurer. "There's still some debate about what a book is today. The artists are taking the traditional book style and interpreting it in an artistic way."

Micheau expects a turnout of approximately 70 people and hopes the auction will raise about $500, which will be used to help fund the club's monthly newsletter, The Book Arts Rag; visiting artists' appearances; and a field trip. The club plans to bring artist Buzz Spector, of Champaign, Ill., to speak in Iowa City with some of the money raised.

The club is a UI student group that brings together people interested in paper-making, bookbinding, printing and the book as art. Its membership includes prominent members of the local and national artistic community as well as collectors and enthusiasts. The club's mailing list currently includes 453 people.

"The Book Arts Club allows for people from different disciplines to Frey brought 13 years of experience in commercial printing to the club, which she sees as an invaluable source of ideas and support for those interested in book arts.

"(I've been) exposed to many different views on what books are,"

she said. "And, of course, the people interested in book arts are pretty interesting."

The club meets monthly, has no dues and is open to all interested in the subject, whether beginners or experts. Anyone interested in the club can receive a copy of its newsletter by writing to The Book Arts Rag, 922 N. Dodge St., Iowa City, IA 52245.

Study: smoking extremely hazardous to fetuses, infants

BOSTON (AP) — Two researchers have produced startling numbers to back up the long-held belief that smoking during pregnancy can prove fatal to fetuses and infants.

Mothers who smoke cause the deaths of about 5,600 babies and 115,000 miscarriages in the United States every year, according to Joseph DiFranza and Robert Lew, who reviewed nearly 100 studies conducted over a 40-year period.

Their study, which appears in this month's Journal of Family Practice, also found that mothers' smoking contributes to 53,000 cases a year of low birth-weight babies and 22,000 cases of babies who require intensive care at birth.

While earlier studies have examined the risks associated with smoking during pregnancy, "no one had ever tried to calculate ... the numbers of children actually harmed," said DiFranza, an associate professor of family and community medicine at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

The doctors said they reached their numbers by using estimated percentages and actual numbers of how many women get pregnant each year and how many of them smoke.

Destructive cells targeted in Alzheimer's research

NEW YORK (AP) — Immune system cells may promote Alzheimer's disease by killing brain cells, according to a study that suggests anti-inflammatory drugs might help in treating victims.

The cells, which are naturally present in the brain, are called microglia. The trouble may come from microglia inside deposits of a substance called beta amyloid. The deposits are a hallmark of Alzheimer's disease.

Beta amyloid itself can kill brain cells in the test tube, and scientists are studying how it damages the brain in Alzheimer's patients.

The new work shows that in the test tube, microglia can kill rat brain cells when activated by the presence of beta amyloid plus a substance called gamma interferon.

Activated microglia produced toxic substances that are also typically secreted in inflammatory reactions. So if anti-inflammatory drugs can be identified that reduce the production of those substances by microglia, they might be able to slow the progression of Alzheimer's, said researcher Dr. Filippo Rossi.

Boat carrying illegal immigrants capsizes near Singapore

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A boat capsized with 48 Indonesian illegal immigrants to Malaysia aboard. At least six of them drowned, and 10 were missing Wednesday.

Singapore police rescued 17 of the immigrants, and Malaysian police arrested 15 more they found hiding in a mangrove swamp. Six bodies were floating near the swamp, said marine police Superintendent Jemaat Omar.

The boat left Batam Island in Indonesia on Saturday and capsized Sunday night in the Straits of Nenas in Singapore, Omar said.

LOS ANGELES — On a hot June day, crucial blood samples in the O.J. Simpson murder investigation sat in plastic bags inside an evidence truck for seven hours because the truck's refrigerator didn't work, an evidence collector admitted Wednesday.

Criminalist Dennis Fung's fifth day on the stand, which gave the defense yet another opening to make its case that blood evidence was tainted, proceeded with jurors presumably unaware of an escalating investigation into a dismissed panelist's claims of jury problems.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, the lawyers, Simpson and a subpoenaed television reporter went into a private session late Wednesday with the ousted juror, Jeanette Harris. The judge also indicated he would question the 12 jurors and six remaining alternates about Harris' allegations that a white juror kicked two blacks in the jury box.

According to the transcript of a sidebar conference Tuesday, the judge told attorneys he thought the reported kicking seemed more like a stumble and amounted to "something so trivial to be unbelievable."

Ito prodded defense attorney Barry Scheck on Wednesday to conclude his questioning of Fung but failed to derail Scheck's exceedingly detailed examination of every move the criminalist made on the case.

Under Scheck's withering attack, Fung described as unprecedented the actions of a detective who drove Simpson's blood sample 20 miles across the city to Simpson's estate, where it was handed to Fung.

The defense has suggested that taking a vial of Simpson's blood to his home gave police the opportunity to frame him for murder. Detective Philip Vannatter testified earlier that the blood was drawn from Simpson at the downtown police station the day after the slayings and then hand delivered to Fung so the chain of custom wouldn't be broken.

Earlier, Scheck confronted Fung with yet another textbook on evidence collection that recommended never placing blood-soaked items in plastic because it could foster bacterial growth and distort test results.

Fung insisted that plastic packaging minimized the risk of contaminating swatches of blood from the site where Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman died June 12. He said the plastic was a temporary holder until the evidence could be taken to the crime lab.

Fung said he began putting blood swatches in plastic bags at 11:30 a.m. on the sunny day after the slayings and stored the samples in his crime-scene truck. He said the truck has a refrigerator but he did not use it.

"The refrigerator stops working after several hours," he explained.

Jurors paid close attention, their heads often swiveling from lawyer to witness as if watching a tennis match.

With blood evidence taking center stage, Scheck tried to convince jurors there was so much confusion and lying about its handling that the test results are worthless. Prosecutors have promised to show jurors a trail of blood leading from the bodies to the foot of Simpson's bed, linking the former football star to the murders of his ex-wife and Ronald Goldman.

NEW EAGLE, Pa. — A teen-ager whose family was burdened by crushing medical bills apparently threw himself to his death off a bridge after getting a $154.50 speeding ticket.

"He was very upset about it because he didn't know where he was going to get the money, and he knew his mother didn't have the money to pay it," said Chuck Fowler, the father of one of Lambert Hillman's friends.

Hillman, the 16-year-old boy who drowned, was last seen walking along the Monongahela River on March 16, the same day he was ticketed for driving his mother's car at 72 mph in a 45 mph zone. His body was found floating in the river Monday.

After he disappeared, police searched the rocky riverbank in New Eagle, a small town about 15 miles south of downtown Pittsburgh.

Believing her son had run away, Hillman's mother, Kathy O'Hern, pleaded through the news media for him to return, saying he shouldn't worry about the ticket.

"Together we can handle anything," she said.

Relatives said a series of family troubles and setbacks at school and in sports had depressed the boy, a junior class vice president who played hockey and loved country line dancing.

Martin O'Hern, the stepfather with whom Hillman had been living for the past 10 years, died of cancer in December after exhausting the family's medical insurance, Fowler said.

Hillman's father, Richard Hillman, said his son watched as O'Hern grew sicker and died at home.

"That may have hurt him," he said. Fowler said the O'Herns were so strapped they used their house as collateral to obtain a loan to pay thousands of dollars in bills.

"You had a 16-year-old kid, and he's taking calls from the hospital and the creditors," Fowler said. "He became aware of and involved in things that a kid just shouldn't have to deal with."

Hillman's father said the boy had hurt a shoulder and broken a thumb playing football for Ringgold High School last fall and had dislocated the same shoulder at a hockey rink this winter.

"That's when you could see that he was really down because he couldn't go to weight training and do what he wanted to do," Hillman said.

Teachers at Ringgold have established a fund to help pay the boy's funeral expenses.

Earlier in the evening that he received the ticket, Hillman had visited his friend, Justin Fowler. Fowler's father offered to pay the ticket, and the boys went to a district justice's office to make an appointment to settle the fine.

Misread tests linked to overworked tech

James A. Carlson
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — A laboratory was charged with reckless homicide Wednesday for allegedly misreading Pap smears that could have saved the lives of two women. A technician and the doctor who supervised the lab escaped immediate prosecution under a deal with prosecutors.

District Attorney Michael McCann brought the charges against Chem-Bio Corp. of suburban Oak Creek in the case of Dolores Geary and Karin Smith. The company could face a maximum $20,000 in fines if convicted on the two counts of reckless homicide.

The women died of cervical cancer after the laboratory missed what experts testifying at an inquest said were unmistakable signs of cancer on their gynecological exams. When detected early, cervical cancer can easily be cured.

Over the weekend, the inquest jury had recommended reckless homicide charges against the laboratory as well as a technician and the doctor who oversaw the lab.

McCann said the technician and the doctor each signed an agreement with his office that defers prosecution for six years as long as they follow certain guidelines. If they abide by the agreement, no charges will be filed.

The doctor is barred from acting as medical director of any laboratory and from supervising technicians doing tissue testing.

The technician agreed to work only on salary or an hourly basis rather than the current arrangement under which she was paid based on the number of samples analyzed. McCann said she examined 20,000 Pap smears to 40,000 Pap smears a year, compared with the maximum of 12,000 recommended under professional standards. She also agreed not to work more than 42 hours.

Criminal charges for a medical error are extraordinarily rare. Such mistakes are normally handled by way of lawsuits or other civil actions, such as the lifting of a doctor's license.

Martin Kohler, a lawyer for the laboratory, said it would fight any charges.

Years after the Pap smears were allegedly misread, the women were diagnosed as having advanced cervical cancer. Smith, 29, a Nashotah accountant, died March 8. Geary, 40, a mother of three from suburban Oak Creek, died in 1993.

Both victims received multimillion-dollar settlements from the lab and the women's HMO, Family Health Plan. Smith, before dying, asked McCann to pursue criminal charges as well.

Arafat orders weapons sweep to curb violence

Donna Aub-Nasr
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — PLO chief Yasser Arafat widened his crackdown on Islamic militants Wednesday by issuing an ultimatum: register your guns by May 11 or Palestinian police will forcibly collect the firearms.

The Hamas group reacted with defiance, saying its fighters would not give up their weapons as long as Israeli forces remained in the Gaza Strip.

The challenge increased fears of civil war among the Hamas, Islamic Jihad militants and the Palestine Liberation Organization — which has ruled the autonomous areas of Gaza and Jericho for 11 months.

Tensions were high on the street, where PLO police were quick to draw their weapons Wednesday. Three plainclothes security men pulled over a Western reporter riding in a taxi, waving assault rifles as they demanded identification.

Arafat's forces arrested more than 200 Hamas and Islamic Jihad activists this week after the groups claimed responsibility for two suicide bombings Sunday that killed seven Israeli soldiers and an American college student.

Palestinian Attorney General Khaled al-Qidreh said 35 Palestinians will stand trial before a secret military tribunal. He said some defendants are militants and others are suspected collaborators with Israel. Two Islamic Jihad members were sentenced to 15 years and life this week after their convictions.

Human rights activists warned that the Palestinians are on the road to military rule and accused U.S. leaders, such as Vice President Al Gore, of hypocrisy for publicly praising the establishment of the military courts.

"I wonder how the United States can be selective about human rights," lawyer Raji Sourani told the Associated Press. "Human rights can only be measured by one standard."

Despite indications the crackdown was more serious than past efforts, there was deepening gloom in Israel liament on Wednesday.

Nearly all those arrested this week have been mid-level activists, not underground military leaders. Palestinian sources said most have already been released — only about 50 remain in custody.

The gun registration drive received little initial attention Wednesday, with one brief announcement on PLO-run television.

Brig. Gen. Ghazi Jebali, Gaza City's police chief, promised that "tough measures will be taken against those who do not give up their arms."

As part of the crackdown, he said Arafat opponents will be prohibited from forming paramilitary groups.

But by late Wednesday, Palestinian police said no one had turned in any weapons.

Justice Minister Freih Abu Medein said weapons not surrendered within one month would be taken by force.

A spokesman for the militant group Hamas said its fighters would not surrender arms as long as Israeli soldiers remained in Gaza, guarding the Jewish settlements that are home to 5,000 Israelis.

"While the Israelis are still here and killing the people, it is nonsense to ask the people to give up their weapons with which they protect themselves," said Mahmoud Zahar, a senior political figure in Hamas. "We will never give up our weapons."

Palestinian Planning Minister Nabil Shaath vowed that the campaign would be carried out to the end.

FETUSES HURT BY ALCOHOL

Syndrome cases rising

Last week, the Centers for Disease Control released a report saying the rate of babies born with fetal alcohol syndrome-related problems has increased more than six times since 1979. In 1979, one case per 10,000 births was reported; in 1993, that figure rose to 6.7 cases per 10,000 births.

According to the CDC study, one-fifth of women continued to drink after they knew they were pregnant. Because the mother and the fetus share the same bloodstream, when a mother is drinking, her fetus's blood alcohol level equals hers.

The symptoms of fetal alcohol syndrome include mental retardation, facial deformities, eye damage, stunted growth and behavioral problems.

Because the mother and the fetus share the same bloodstream, when a mother is drinking, her fetus's blood alcohol level equals hers.

According to a 1994 Washington Post article, an estimated 4,000 to 8,000 babies each year are born with fetal alcohol syndrome. In addition, as many as 55,000 babies are born each year with fetal alcohol effects — a less serious group of birth defects also caused by drinking during pregnancy, according to the article.

The Office of Substance Abuse Prevention estimated that 66 percent of women do some drinking during pregnancy, and a 1990 survey done by the Public Health Service said between 20 and 35 percent of pregnant women drink regularly.

The type of damage occurring depends on the stage of development, a 1990 New York Times Magazine article said.

"So we'd predict physical malformation from heavy drinking in the first trimester and growth retardation from drinking in the third," Dr. Sterling Claren, professor of pediatrics at the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle, said in the article. "But brain damage can occur at any time."

Although awareness of fetal alcohol syndrome has increased since the syndrome's discovery in the mid-1970s — due to warning labels on alcoholic beverage bottles and improved education of medical students — women continue to drink, and more than before.

It's astounding that with how much is known about fetal alcohol syndrome, mothers-to-be won't give up drinking for a mere nine months. They'd rather clamor when their babies are deformed or mentally retarded.

Although awareness of fetal alcohol syndrome has increased since the syndrome's discovery in the mid-1970s — due to warning labels on alcoholic beverage bottles and improved education of medical students — women continue to drink, and more than before.

Fetal alcohol syndrome is perhaps the worst form of retardation because it can be prevented. Most people want their children to be physically and mentally perfect. Why would a mother deliberately do this?

Mothers should think twice before picking up that glass of wine; they should think of their unborn child.

Pence sets record straight about fees

To the Editor:

Your story in the April 3 Daily Iowan ("Pence family happy to resume normal lives") had some inaccurate information.

My attorney, Tom Riley, provided all his services free of charge. While there were expenses related to the handling of the defense — including the cost of a trip to Chicago to consult with one of the leading authorities on accident reconstruction in order to prepare for trial — along with that consultant's charge for the meeting, Riley has never billed me for those expenses and he has advised me that he does not intend to do so. Riley considers those expenses to be part of his services in the handling of my defense.

I have received donations from concerned citizens, and those have been applied to the expenses paid by the Riley law firm. Any future donations will also be applied to those expenses.

Thank you for letting me set the record straight. In addition to thanking Riley, I want to pass along my thanks to all those people who provided moral support throughout this ordeal.

Nominee questioned

To the Editor:

The nomination of David Fisher to the Iowa state Board of Regents by Terry Branstad leads me to recall the remark Joseph Welch made to then Sen. Joe McCarthy: "Sir, have you no shame?"

Aside from this being political cronyism at its worst (Fisher ran Branstad's campaign three consecutive times and was a major financial contributor), Fisher — currently one of the defendants in a lawsuit for $20 million by the Federal Resolution Trust Corp. against the officers of the failed United Federal Savings of Des Moines (of whom Fisher is one) — is entangled in the S&L scam mess. Fisher was a member of the firm's commercial loan committee, which invested $100 million in ill-fated, ill-conceived projects from Florida to Oregon. A person being sued by the federal government for "gross negligence, negligence, breach of fiduciary and contractual duties, and other wrongful and improper conduct" is not one either to nominate — or, certainly, confirm — to the board of regents, which directs a billion-dollar enterprise requiring critical judgment from its trustees.

As a member of the governor's "Fisher Commission," Fisher recommended a 50 percent rise in student tuition and cuts in student financial aid. Shall university educations then only be reserved for the rich?

The Iowa Legislature once before rejected a Branstad nominee who was a Branstad crony and about as destructive to the state universities as was possible — Marvin Pomerantz.

TV: sucking our ambition and imagination?

It recently has occurred to me that I spend a fair amount of my time sitting on my Coca-Cola-stained harvest-gold carpet watching television. Sometimes I cook or wash dishes while watching — or at least listening to — the news or some other television program. Sometimes I try to get other things done while the television is on — paying the bills, for example, or reading a newspaper or magazine (during commercials and/or uninteresting segments).

What makes this unsettling is that ever since I lost interest in the Saturday-morning cartoons and Kellogg's Corn Pops routine, I have professed a general dislike of television. As a teenager, I thought it was sophisticated to excuse myself from conversations about soap operas and things by saying "I don't really watch much television."

In claiming to be a nonwatcher, one suggests that one's time is too valuable for frivolous entertainment, which is why such a claim is a bit pretentious in a teen-ager and downright smarmy in an adult.

Tuesday night, however, I was overwhelmed with a sense of existential despair worthy of Jean-Paul Sartre when I calculated the amount of time I spend watching television, an activity which has taken up progressively more time over the past 18 months or so — since I got cable. If I spent as much time each day training for the marathon (to use a rather hackneyed metaphor for hard work and achievement), it wouldn't be long before my running shoes would be hitting the pavement in Boston. (OK, I don't have any running shoes. I said it was a metaphor.)

This has nothing to do with the value of television in and of itself. I am not sure which side to take in the ongoing debate over the worth of television: Is it a leech on the minds of ourselves and our children, sucking out all our ambition and imagination, replacing it with violent images and a desire for consumer products and ultimately leading to the downfall of civilization as we know it? Or is it informative and enlightening, a means by which we exchange information and reconfirm our basic cultural values?

I don't know, but it is worth noting that the latter position is more hip these days — either as a backlash against the tedium and puritanism of the former or from the attitudes of most modern academics, who disdain to judge the products of a culture on their artistic merits (that's been done) and instead are devoted to analyzing their content. In other words, your high-school teacher may have pleaded with you not to watch television, but your college instructor will frequently refer to "The Simpsons" and "Star Trek" during a discussion of Shakespeare's sonnets. Intellectual content is in the eye of the doctoral candidate.

To me it seems that the problem of television is not whether the individual programs have any merit but whether it is worth watching at all. It takes up a lot of time without producing anything tangible or measurable. The same could be said of a lot of pursuits, such as learning to play chess or reading "War and Peace," but at least those stay with you in a way. Once you learn a skill, you always have it; you also generally remember having read a book, particularly if it took a long time to read.

Remembering television shows, on the other hand, is a disadvantage for the frequent viewer. With cable television, summer reruns and syndication, it often seems as though everything on television has been on before and will be on again. I recently became involved with a show that's been airing on Comedy Central that features neurotic drunken British women screaming at one another. I love the show and am loath to give it up, but I have to admit that it's hard to keep looking forward to a program when they only show a new episode if it's a Monday and there's a full moon.

I'm worried, though, that my new plan — which is to restrict the television I watch to just a few specified programs at scheduled times — will leave me feeling hopelessly out of touch with my own culture.

For example, television shows crop up in conversation, though a discussion based on a television program tends to leave the participants feeling embarrassed and/or looking geeky — no one is really impressed by anyone else's ability to remember the plot to every "Brady Bunch" episode or to recite Monty Python bits verbatim.

Then there's the problem of all the jokes I might miss because I don't get the references. Other forms of entertainment — movies, plays and comedy shows — often rely on the viewers' familiarity with television shows or even commercials. I'm afraid I'll be like Kelly McGillis' Amish character in "Witness." What if Harrison Ford tells a joke and I don't get it? I would be devastated.

Is it worthwhile to risk partly losing touch with American life in order to gain an extra four hours a day to do something else? I hope to find out. Of course, you notice I'm not brave enough to haul the TV out to the trash dumpster with nary a look back. Maybe, though, if I can use all that time for other activities, I'll find that I really am too busy to watch television.

Why we should defend affirmative action

Don't trust the deceitful arguments coming from right-wingers about affirmative action. In recent issues of The Daily Iowan, these people have spread their bigoted misconceptions about affirmative action. It's time to set the record straight.

Affirmative action is an antidiscrimination policy that was enacted during the civil rights movement. Its goal is to counter the discrimination — both past and present — faced by women, blacks and other groups in the United States. It requires employers to be able to show that their policies don't discriminate against these groups.

The affirmative action debate has a very unusual feature: Conservatives are claiming that their opposition to affirmative action is out of sympathy for working Americans. That's strange because these are the same people who want to cut every single social program — from school lunches to health care to Social Security — that helps workers. They also want to force layoffs and wage cuts on public employees.

So it's hard to believe conservatives when they start to shed their crocodile tears for white workers while arguing against affirmative action programs. They play on real fears that workers have about disappearing jobs and claim that affirmative action is taking away jobs from whites and giving them to supposedly less-qualified blacks. This is a lie.

Jobs have been disappearing and wages have been falling for white workers in the United States, but the trend has been even more detrimental to blacks. Black workers' wages have fallen with respect to whites' wages, and blacks are two to three times as likely to be jobless. If jobs were being taken from whites and given to blacks, wouldn't it seem logical to expect blacks to actually have these jobs?

Despite affirmative action, the bulk of discrimination continues to benefit whites over blacks. Blacks are the last to be hired and the first to be fired in U.S. society. So where are the jobs really going?

They're disappearing. Hundreds of thousands of workers have lost their jobs to corporate downsizing. Downsizing increases the profits enjoyed by big business. Conservatives love profits, so it's not surprising that they don't blame profiteering for unemployment. But the drive for profit is the reason so many people have become poor in the last 20 years.

To hear conservatives talk, one would think that affirmative action programs have been expanding constantly since they were implemented, victimizing and alienating white men wherever they go. This is also completely false. Affirmative action peaked in the mid-1970s and has been steadily declining ever since. By the conservatives' logic, the mid-1970s should have been the time when white opposition to affirmative action was highest. In fact, more whites supported affirmative action (around 70 percent) then than ever before or since.

White opposition to affirmative action has largely been manufactured by politicians and the media. A 1978 Supreme Court ruling against the University of California-Davis' affirmative action program began the demonization of affirmative action as "reverse racism." From President Carter to President Reagan to the right-wing ideologues of the anti-political correctness movement, politicians and the media waged a massive ideological attack on affirmative action. The current political climate is not the result of some mythical organic groundswell of angry white men, but rather a calculated campaign of lies.

Conservatives believe that supporters of affirmative action relish racial divisiveness, which is yet another lie. It is the right-wing arguments against affirmative action — which tell whites that blacks are taking their jobs — that whip up racial divisiveness. It's the old "divide and conquer" strategy, which has existed in human society as long as inequality has existed.

The racial inequality fostered by capitalism keeps black workers and white workers divided. But by fighting for affirmative action and against all inequality in modern society, black workers and white workers can bring about a better society for all oppressed and exploited people in spite of the desires of the rich to get richer at our expense.

Affirmative action undermines racial division by enhancing racial equality. It also helps women and minorities. For those reasons, affirmative action should be unconditionally supported.

Many women and minorities are still not helped by affirmative action. This is an argument for bolstering equal opportunity programs for all who would otherwise be denied such opportunities because of their gender or race or because they are poor. It's also an argument that reforms like affirmative action to the existing capitalist system are not enough. We need to build a fight-back that will not only defend and extend the gains that have been won by past struggles, but put an end to exploitation, oppression and injustice once and for all.

READERS SAY...

Today is the 100th day of the Republican-controlled Congress. What do you think of the job they've done?

Teresa Richard, UI junior majoring in elementary education

"I don't think 100 days is enough time for someone to accurately say they're successful or a failure. I want to see the results at the end. Then we'll throw a party if they've gotten something major done."

Matthew Biskner, UI sophomore majoring in engineering

"I think they've done a good job, but I think they could have done better looking at the promises they've made."

Justin Elliott, UI freshman majoring in prebusiness

"I really haven't been following it. I'm anti-government; I'm not an advocate of government."

Elizabeth Asmus, UI junior

"They got the 'Contract With America' passed and it seems like a really good idea. I wish they could have got the term-limits idea through."

"The changes that have been made in the last 100 days will affect the country for the next 20 to 30 years — maybe the rest of the country's history. This is the first step of our country evolving. We are one step closer to being right."

The economy and the success or failure of various issues before Congress will also have an impact.

The poll suggests that right now, voting-age Americans have decidedly mixed feelings.

A solid 59 percent believe Republicans have kept their campaign promises, and 52 percent are happy the GOP controls Congress.

But only 39 percent say Republicans care more about them, compared with 49 percent who say the Democrats do. And only 44 percent approve of "the policies and proposals of the Republican leaders in Congress."

By wide margins, respondents said House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole have more power and influence in Washington politics than Clinton.

Of the three, Dole had the highest rating, with 59 percent approving the way he is doing his job and 25 percent disapproving. He scored well among men and women and in all age groups and education levels. Even among Democrats, Dole's approval rating (45 percent) was higher than his disapproval (41 percent).

Clinton got good marks from 47 percent, while 43 percent disapproved of the way he is handling his job.

Respondents were evenly divided over Gingrich, with 43 percent approving and 42 percent disapproving. The gender gap was especially obvious with him: 56 percent of men but only 35 percent of women approved the way Gingrich is doing his job.

The poll was based on telephone interviews with 1,800 adults from April 6 to April 9. Results based on the entire sample have a margin of error of 2.5 percentage points in either direction.

SAFEWALK

"I never found myself in a situation where it was needed, but it was a comfort for me to know that if something happened, the program would be there for me to use it when I needed it."

Kim McDevitt, UI sophomore

The UI campus is safe were other reasons members offered for the lack of requests.

"People are used to their patterns since they haven't had (SAFEWALK) for three-fourths of the year," Haeger said. "For some, it's not convenient because it takes time to call us and have us pick them up."

Several students said the program was worthwhile for those who felt unsafe walking around campus and have no other option besides SAFEWALK. But most said they either didn't find the campus threatening or they walk with friends.

"I guess I don't feel unsafe walking around alone on campus because I know the area well enough," said UI freshman Jason McDonnell. "But I do think the program is worthwhile because I know there are some people who do feel uncomfortable."

UI sophomore Kim McDevitt lived in Hillcrest Residence Hall, where SAFEWALK was housed when it was first implemented, but does not use the service.

"I never found myself in a situation where it was needed, but it was a comfort for me to know that if something happened, the program would be there for me to use it when I needed it," McDevitt said.

Volunteers walk students to UI

"We need to let people know that we are still here and people can be aware that they can use it. I have a feeling that more people feel unsafe walking at night than have been calling us for services. We may have just hit an off year."

Patti Ferrell, UI sophomore and SAFEWALK committee member

Hospitals and Clinics, fraternity and sorority houses, parking lots, athletic complexes and downtown Iowa City businesses.

One male and one female volunteer wearing red jackets and carrying flashlights and walkie-talkies accompany students to their destinations. Escorts maintain constant audio contact with an operator stationed at the Women's Resource and Action Center, 130 N. Madison St.

Students can set up appointments for escorts to pick them up or they can call the SAFEWALK office to get picked up during operation hours. The time it takes escorts to arrive at each destination depends on how far away the user is located from the WRAC headquarters.

SAFEWALK coordinators will increase efforts to publicize the program throughout the residence halls, making its services more well-known.

"We need to let people know that we are still here and people can be aware that they can use it," Ferrell said. "I have a feeling that more people feel unsafe walking at night than have been calling us for services. We may have just hit an off year."

LIBERAL POLICY TESTED

Mercy killing of baby praised in Dutch court

Jenifer Chao
Associated Press

ALKMAAR, Netherlands — The Western world's most liberal euthanasia policy is being tested in a court case involving a newborn so painfully deformed that even prosecutors don't want her killer punished.

"Life was more threatening for Rianne than death," said the doctor who gave a 3-day-old baby a deadly injection.

The question before the court:

"A lot of people think I've taken a step too far ... but I took it because I was certain that it was best for Rianne."

Dr. Henk Prins, on the euthanizing of a 3-day-old baby

Rianne died in her mother's arms 15 minutes later.

"A lot of people think I've taken a step too far ... but I took it because I was certain that it was best for Rianne," Prins testified.

Euthanasia is illegal in the Netherlands but has wide public support. Religious groups have repeatedly blocked legalization, and the practice is punishable by up to 12 years in prison.

But in what is known as the industrialized world's most tolerant euthanasia policy, doctors who follow a series of guidelines — stipulating that incurably ill patients in unrelievable pain must repeatedly and lucidly ask for death — can expect immunity from prosecution. No doctor has ever been jailed in a euthanasia case in the Netherlands.

The prosecutor's office had originally decided to drop charges against Prins, a 48-year-old gynecologist, because the killing met the specifications that the patient be suffering unbearable pain and that consulting physicians approve.

But Rianne's death did not meet the guideline that patients express their own death wish.

Justice Minister Winnie Sorgdrager insisted on a trial to set a legal precedent.

"This case serves the primary interest of developing judicial standards and enforcement," Public Prosecutor Gerard Botman told the court.

Defense lawyer Eugene Sutorius called his client a scapegoat and said it is up to Parliament — not the courts — to regulate euthanasia.

Prins has become something of a hero in the Netherlands and was treated accordingly in court, where both judge and prosecutor praised him for honesty and openness.

"I know it's not easy for you ... but it must be solved judicially," said District Court Judge Posch.

Botman urged the three-judge panel to find Prins guilty, but not to punish him. Dutch courts do not have juries.

Hawkeyes break into the Top 25

Instead of a game Wednesday, the Iowa women's softball team got rain and a Top 25 ranking.

The Iowa City weather has now washed out a pair of Hawkeye baseball games and a softball game. The women will play this weekend at Penn State.

The good news of the week was the No. 24 ranking. Iowa (22-13-1) snuck into the Top 25, replacing Texas A&M in the poll. Iowa joins Michigan as the only ranked Big Ten teams.

TENNIS

Agassi wins first match as world's best player

TOKYO (AP) — In his first match as the world's top-ranked player, Andre Agassi beat Tommy Ho 6-3, 6-2 today in the second round of the Japan Open.

Agassi, who overtook Pete Sampras in the rankings Monday, was slowed a bit by a lower back injury sustained two weeks ago in the United States' Davis Cup victory in Italy, but had little trouble with the 103rd-ranked Ho.

"I played well considering that I came from the Davis Cup on clay and traveled across the world," Agassi said. "I'm still struggling with my back, but it felt good for a first match."

Agassi has won the U.S. and Australian Open and five other events in the last 12 months, beating Sampras this year in the finals in Australia and the Lipton Championships.

"You work your whole life for it — granted, the important thing is to maintain it — and even to be No. 1 for an hour feels pretty good," Agassi said. "To pass Pete based on me beating him is what's special. I would miss something if it weren't for Pete."

Second-seeded Michael Chang, No. 3 Wayne Ferreira of South Africa and No. 4 Jim Courier also advanced. Chang overcame a 1-4 deficit in the first set to beat Japan's Shuzo Matsuoka 6-4, 6-2. Ferreira routed Ukraine's Dimitri Poliakov 6-1, 6-3 and Courier beat Sweden's Anders Jarryd's 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Amy Frazier and Patty Fendick advanced to the women's quarterfinals. Frazier, seeded second, routed Japan's Naoko Kijimuta 6-1, 6-3 and Fendick, seeded seventh, beat compatriot Jolene Watanabe 6-1, 7-5.

Tulsa names Kansas assistant as new head man

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Kansas assistant Steve Robinson was hired Wednesday as Tulsa's new basketball coach.

School president Robert Donaldson confirmed the hiring to Tulsa radio station KVOO as he walked into a civic group meeting for a speech.

"He's a great recruiter, he's a very fine coach and he's going to be a great asset for the University of Tulsa," Donaldson said. "He has the values we look for at TU."

Robinson, 37, is replacing Tubby Smith, who led the Golden Hurricane to the Sweet 16 the past two years before leaving for the job at Georgia.

Joe reaches the end of the road

Craig Horst

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Joe will go. On Tuesday.

Joe Montana, perhaps the best quarterback in NFL history, will announce his retirement in San Francisco that day and follow with a news conference in Kansas City on Wednesday.

International Management Group, the firm that represents Montana, announced only that a news conference in San Francisco will be held, but a source at the agency said it would be Montana's long-suspected retirement.

Chiefs president Carl Peterson did everything but confirm Montana's career is over.

"I will make this statement — that we will have a press conference here next Wednesday, probably at 10 a.m., specific to the status of Joe Montana," he said.

Montana, at a police benefit in San Jose, Calif., on Tuesday night, was also evasive when questioned about his retirement.

"I can't say it ain't or it is," he said.

When asked whether he'd be attending the Chiefs quarterback camp next week, he said: "I haven't had to go to one yet. I'm hoping I don't have to go that one either."

The Kansas City Star reported that NBC has been negotiating with Montana to join the network as a football commentator. Montana, the paper added, also has talked with the NFL about becoming a league spokesman.

Montana's desire to retire at age 38 — he would be 39 at the start of training camp — results from a number of factors.

They range from injuries (most recently knee surgery), the wishes of his wife Jennifer to return to California and his feeling the Chiefs had not assembled a good enough team to help him gain an unprecedented fifth Super Bowl title.

Retirement would mark an end to a marvelous career that included Super Bowl victories in 1990, 1989, 1985, 1982. He was the Super Bowl's most valuable player three times.

An elbow injury disabled him for most of two years, and he lost his job in San Francisco to Steve Young.

Montana has one year left on the three-year contract he signed with Kansas City. He was traded by San Francisco on April 20, 1993, with safety David Whitmore and a third-round draft choice for a first-round draft choice.

He missed five games in 1993 with wrist and hamstring injuries, but led the Chiefs to an 11-5 record and the AFC championship game. He sparked playoff rallies against Pittsburgh and Houston before the Chiefs lost to Buffalo — one step from the Super Bowl.

Playoff races go down to the wire

NBA has Final Four of its own out West

Wendy E. Lane

Associated Press

The playoffs are two weeks away, and not much is settled in the Western Conference.

The top four teams are separated by just three games, and Denver and Sacramento are in a down-to-the-wire race for the eighth and final playoff berth.

While Orlando has the best record in the Eastern Conference sewed up, nothing's for sure in the West, not even after San Antonio won 15 straight to zoom to the top. After a loss to Portland on Tuesday night and Phoenix Wednesday night, the Spurs' lead is 1½ games over the Suns, 2 games over Utah and 2½ games over Seattle.

The Suns, who split the season series with Utah, currently hold the edge in tiebreakers because of their better conference record.

The only seeds in the conference that appear set are the fifth (Lakers), sixth (Houston) and seventh (Portland).

But every day brings a different look to the standings.

"We can't take anything for granted as tight as the race is," Phoenix guard Kevin Johnson said.

With four of its five remaining games at home, Phoenix feels like it has an edge over both the Jazz and the SuperSonics. But it's not an easy string of home contests, with the Lakers, the Kings, the Mavericks and the SuperSonics coming into America West Arena.

"This is a big week for us," Suns forward Charles Barkley said after Phoenix's 96-90 victory at Seattle on Tuesday night. "This win can help decide where we're going to finish."

Meanwhile, four of Seattle's seven remaining games are on the road.

"I feel confident by the end of the week that we'll have the lead on Phoenix," Sonics coach George Karl said.

Sacramento is trying to make the playoffs for the first time in nine seasons, but it will be difficult.

Pistons become latest Chicago victim

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — It didn't take long for Joe Dumars to remember how tough it is to guard Michael Jordan.

"It wasn't a bittersweet moment, because there was nothing sweet about it," Dumars said after Jordan scored 29 to lead the Chicago Bulls over the Detroit Pistons 124-113 Wednesday night.

"He's even quicker than he used to be. I used to be able to time his spin move, but there were four or five times today where he was gone before I could even react. It's always fun to see him again, though."

Jordan hit 12 of his 23 shots and added nine rebounds and nine assists as the Bulls improved to 9-3 since his return from retirement.

"Joe's a good friend, and it was nice to catch up with him," Jordan said. "But I had forgotten all the tricks he has. He's still a great defensive player."

The Pistons cut Chicago's lead to 99-94 with 8:20 to play, but the Bulls iced the game with a 9-3 surge. Jordan scored the final five points of the spurt.

Jordan's performance showed how much energy he brings to the game, Pistons coach Don Chaney said.

"He's got a huge advantage, because he's played 11 games, and everyone else has played over 70," Chaney said. "He's fresh, both physically and mentally."

Detroit made another run, pulling to 116-110 with 2:30 to go, but Steve Kerr's 3-pointer extended the Bulls' lead again.

ON THE WAY TO ST. LOUIS

Rams can head east after all

R.B. Fallstrom

Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — The Rams will play in St. Louis this year after all.

A month after barring their move from Southern California, owners voted 23-6 on Wednesday to relocate the Rams to St. Louis, the first time an NFL team has left the West Coast.

The Rams, St. Louis officials and even the Missouri attorney general had threatened to sue the league if it blocked the move.

"The game is over and I won't say we won but ... well, I guess we won one," Rams owner Georgia Frontiere said. "I think we all won."

"The decision to have peace and not to have war was a big factor."

Paul Tagliabue, NFL commissioner

The Rams agreed to pay $30 million to the league to get the owners to reverse a 21-3 vote last month in Phoenix.

The 23 votes Wednesday was the minimum needed.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said the reversal, which will leave the NFC West with only one team west of St. Louis, was more an attempt to avoid a lawsuit than about the money.

"The decision to have peace and not to have war was a big factor," Tagliabue said.

Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Washington, Phoenix and both New York teams voted against the move.

Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis abstained, as he did in Phoenix.

The weather has yet to cooperate with the Iowa baseball team this week, but the Hawkeyes will make one more attempt this afternoon.

Iowa State is scheduled to visit Iowa Field at 3 p.m. today.

The last two teams that were scheduled to play at Iowa Field (Butler on Tuesday and Northern Iowa Wednesday) never got the chance. The Hawkeyes hope they can get at least one game in before heading to Illinois for a four-game conference set this weekend.

"I think we really need to play at least once a week, so I think this game is important," Hawkeye infielder Gabe Wyckoff said. "We need to get tuned up for the weekend."

Warriors 123, Timberwolves 109

MINNEAPOLIS — Golden State set an NBA record with 17 3-pointers and finally found a way to contain Isaiah Rider for a victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

The Warriors, who took 30 shots from beyond the arc, surpassed the 16 treys made by Houston against Denver on April 9 and by Sacramento against Golden State on Feb. 9, 1989.

Chris Mullin led the long-range assault with six 3-pointers, including two in the final 1:45 after the

NO $100 MILLION FIGHT

Foreman: Tyson is afraid

Mike Drago
Associated Press

HOUSTON — George Foreman accused Mike Tyson of "hiding from a 46-year-old man" Wednesday and issued a public challenge to the newly freed former heavyweight champion.

"The word now," the IBF heavyweight champion said, "is come fight."

Foreman, meeting with reporters to pronounce himself ready for an April 22 title defense against Axel Schulz, said he contacted Tyson in prison to set up a $100 million title fight.

But Tyson declined the offer, which would have resulted in a $50 million paycheck for each fighter, Foreman said.

"Mike Tyson was afraid of a 46-year-old man," Foreman said. "Fifty-million bucks Tyson could make right now ... Tyson is hiding."

Neither Tyson, who was reported to be busy buying luxury cars and a multi-million-dollar home in Las Vegas, nor his representatives could immediately be reached Wednesday by The Associated Press.

Mort Sharnik, Foreman's publicist,

Associated Press

George Foreman, IBF heavyweight champion, answers a question about his upcoming fight against Axel Schulz at a news conference Wednesday.

said he was approached by a Tyson representative before that fighter's March 25 release from an Indiana prison.

Sharnik said Tyson wanted to fight Foreman without involving promoter Don King, and Foreman sent word for Tyson to call him in Houston. But Tyson never called, and Foreman claims "he won't even return my phone calls."

Foreman, who became a grandfather last month, said he has decided not to fight again after 1995 and hopes to close his career by boxing Tyson. He said his offer stands should Tyson choose to accept.

"C'mon, let's do it now, because this is the last year," he said. "The word now is come fight."

As for his upcoming title defense at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, Foreman said he was feeling good and had dropped to a lean 250 pounds while training in seclusion in Marshall, Texas, over the past month.

"No steaks and no hamburgers, so I'm in good shape," he said, adding that he expects Schulz to be a tough opponent even though he is unranked.

"I'm going to have to fight this thing to the end," Foreman said. "It's going to be a tough fight."

Choosing to fight Schulz rather than No. 1 challenger Tony Tucker cost Foreman his WBA championship.

EXHIBITION GAMES BEGIN

Real players take the field today

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

For the first time since last August, real major leaguers will be playing games today. And just from practice, managers and coaches can tell the difference.

"Not to take anything away from the replacement players, but the difference in velocity from today to the replacement games is unbelievable," Chicago White Sox manager Gene Lamont said after Wednesday's workout.

Ten games are scheduled in Florida and four more in Arizona as teams prepare for season openers April 25 and 26. Nearly forgotten are the replacement exhibition games, dominated by Houston (20-7) and Texas (19-7).

"I'm sure there will be some mixed (fan) reaction ... I mean, what else can you expect?" Pittsburgh Pirates manager Jim Leyland said Wednesday. "We haven't done a good enough job of marketing a hell of a product, and we've got to market it in the right way."

Teams kept scrambling to sign players Wednesday. Shortstop Jeff Blauser got the big deal, a $10 million, three-year contract with Atlanta that gives him the chance to earn $420,000 a season more in performance bonuses.

"I'm happy to get going," Blauser said. "I want to put all this behind me and do what I do best and play."

Catcher-designated hitter Mickey Tettleton and the Texas Rangers agreed to a one-year deal worth $550,000. He can make another $500,000 in performance bonuses.

The Oakland Athletics picked up infielder Mike Gallego, who would get a $300,000 contract if he makes the team. Gallego said he changed his mind 10 times in recent days about whether to rejoin the A's, whom he played for from 1985-91.

"The wait was miserable, no doubt about it," he said.

Boston added another pitcher, agreeing to a minor league deal with Alejandro Pena. He would get a $400,000 contract if he makes the team and the chance to earn $350,000 in bonuses.

Left-hander Joe Hesketh agreed to a minor league contract with the New York Yankees. He would get a $300,000 deal for making the team and the chance to earn $50,000 in bonuses.

Outfielder Candy Maldonado and Toronto appeared to be close to a one-year deal worth about $200,000.

Among players eligible for salary arbitration, pitcher Mike Stanton and the Braves agreed on a $1.5 million, one-year deal.

DO YOU KNOW HOW FAST YOU WERE GOING?

Cops bust Gooden for 117-mph joyride

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Major league baseball is investigating Dwight Gooden's latest brush with authorities which resulted in a speeding ticket.

The Florida Highway Patrol says the suspended baseball star recently was clocked driving 117 mph on Interstate 275, where the speed limit is 55 mph.

He was given a $330 ticket for the March 18 incident. His attorney says Gooden will pay.

"We are looking into the matter and will withhold comment until the appropriate time," said Jim Small, a spokesman for the baseball commissioner's office.

Gooden, who lives in St. Petersburg, was suspended from the majors for all of 1995 after failing drug tests while already on a drug-related suspension.

The former Cy Young Award winner for the New York Mets is currently a free agent.

Although Gooden passed a sobriety test in the latest incident and was not cited for alcohol-related offenses, troopers said he also had an open bottle of beer in the car and "moderate odor" of alcohol on his breath.

Highway Patrol Lt. Harold Frear said Gooden consented to a search of his car. A second bottle of beer was found, unopened, as well as a legal 9mm handgun in the glove compartment, the trooper said.

Gooden was given a warning for having an open container of alcohol, Frear said.

Citations in such cases are left to the discretion of the trooper, he said.

Beat the Clock bassist Jim Anton, above, will join his fellow band members this weekend for two performances at the Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave.

Beat the Clock looks forward to stop in I.C.

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Even though Twin Cities funksters Beat the Clock hasn't been performing live in the past few months, the band seems to agree that Iowa City is one place that can give them the right groove.

Beat the Clock is set to play Friday and Saturday nights at the Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave.

Bassist Jim Anton said audiences can expect a standard Beat the Clock show — which fans know will be anything but standard.

"It's going to be a high-energy dance-a-thon," Anton said. "A lot of the new songs are pretty funky, upbeat tunes."

After performing throughout last year, the five-man band wanted a chance to regroup. The band members have spent time in the recording studio working on a new album as well as pursuing individual interests.

"This is a pretty thinking group. Anytime we play we like there to be a reason," soundman John Robinson said. "If you're only going to play every now and then, you should have a reason."

Iowa City always proves to be an adequate reason to play a venue, Robinson said.

"There was a desire to get back down there before spring is out," he said. "As much as bands like to flatter audiences, Iowa City is a wonderful rejuvenator for the whole band — we wanted a taste of that before summer."

Beat the Clock's third album, which will be completed sometime this year, should illustrate some change in the band's sound.

Anton said while the recording has some new sounds, it retains Beat the Clock's "booty-rock" sound.

"It's a combination of songs we didn't use on the Funk Bus record, and we have recorded five or six new songs," he said.

Friday and Saturday's shows will give everyone a taste of those new songs, lead vocalist Ken Chastain said. Both nights will be power-packed with tunes.

"With this show, you never know what might happen — that makes it fun," he said. "We'll play some of the newer material, but we also know we have a fan base that has been around for a long time."

Iowa City is a special place for Beat the Clock. Band members say it has an excitement that few other places can offer.

"Part of the excitement of Iowa City is that we never know what the hell might happen," Chastain said. Chastain said Iowa City venues allow the band to have some fun with their music.

"We have a little more license to experiment and we feel a little more anonymous," he said. "There's something about Iowa City that always works. We trust the vibe — there's always a crowd that's willing to listen."

Beat the Clock will play at the Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave., Friday and Saturday nights at about 10:30. There will be no opening act.

Actors Rip Russell, left, and Ron Clark star in Riverside Theatre's production of "Dog Logic" by Tom Strellich. Clark plays Hertel, a man who cares for a pet cemetery which also houses the remains of his late father. Russell plays real-estate magnate Dale, who wants to develop Hertel's land.

Oddball conjures up wisdom in 'Dog Logic'

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

It may not be Fritjof Capra, but Riverside Theatre Company's production of Tom Strellich's "Dog Logic" does all it can to plug the ever-evolving soul of mankind into the equally transient matrix of the modern world — a fit that is usually tight at best.

Earthy, sharp, funny and hip, Strellich's play resonates with provocative themes: Evolution, land development and Godzilla films are each in turn applied to the symbiotic relationship between man and his environment.

Riverside's production staff and a talented cast have an excellent grip on it all, enough to be comfortable with applying their own flourishes and personal touches, which bring the play home and ground its lofty themes in real-world sensibility.

"Dog Logic" takes place on a piece of private property somewhere in an undeveloped no man's land in the California desert. The place's current owner, an eccentric man named Hertel, cares for the pet cemetery, which is part of the grounds, as well as a garage full of modern cultural artifacts he has accumulated.

The conflict? Hertel is in the process of defending this idyllic claim — and the resting bones of his late father, whom he has buried in the cemetery — against the unstoppable forces of development and the ever-expanding tendrils of civilization.

The play is an extension into our world of the bizarre private mythos which the "brain-damaged" Hertel has developed to explain the relation of man to his environment. History and the future collide as Hertel's bubble becomes endangered by the "black forces" of progress, which acquire a sinister, predatory undertone when seen through Hertel's eyes.

Actor Ron Clark, whose wiry-haired, shell-shocked presence suggests the ultimate combination of dishevelment and wisdom, plays Hertel as a modern shaman, living at the edge of society and detecting its health or illness from a distance. His manic monologues and mind-blasting ability to make connections take some getting used to, but once he connects with the audience, the link becomes indestructible.

That connection is played upon further when it becomes apparent that the other characters in "Dog Logic" — like the developers who intrude on Hertel's dreamy existence — don't respect him for the wise man that he is. Hertel's ex-wife, Kaye, played to shrill perfection by Mary Lynn Strand, sees him as someone to be watched out for and taken care of. Hertel's mother, Anita, who hasn't seen him in 30 years, returns to her son and accepts his odd gifts, but she has ulterior motives of her own.

Rip Russell rounds out the cast of invaders as the sleazy, upwardly mobile, would-be real estate magnate Dale. Russell's loudmouthed delivery and incessant profanity do more than make him a foil; they create a strange sort of sympathy for a guy who, in the end, just doesn't get what "Dog Logic" is all about.

But Hertel gets it in his own way. He gets it enough to develop a kind of cunning by the end of "Dog Logic," an ability to play a game that no one thought Hertel was capable playing. And through Hertel's personal triumph the audience members get it, making their own connections to "Dog Logic" in a way Hertel would be proud of.

"Dog Logic" is playing at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St., tonight through Saturday and April 20-22 at 8 p.m. and on April 23 at 2 p.m. Tickets range from $11 to $14.

SHOW IN DAVENPORT SATURDAY NIGHT

Marilyn Manson brings high jinks to Iowa

Erica Gingerich
The Daily Iowan

Assuming the names of infamous mass murderers is one way the members of Marilyn Manson like to bother people. The group's modus operandi also consists of a penchant for rubber sex-toy stage props and red lipstick, which made the group a popular opening act for Nine Inch Nails' Self Destruct '94 Tour.

Opening for Danzig at Davenport's Palmer Auditorium Saturday night, the Florida band returns to Iowa with its bilge-water brand of politically incorrect songs and stage antics.

"The tour is a little tame compared to what we're used to," said lead singer Marilyn Manson, noting that "a lot of strange things went on" during the Nine Inch Nails and Jim Rose Circus Sideshow tour that may have jaded the band to future acts of debauchery.

Manson has the vocal repertoire of Linda Blair from "The Exorcist" in concert, but his speaking voice is diabolically deep, like he's either toured too extensively or traded his normal human voice in a deal with a hooved stranger. However, he insists touring is more enjoyable than being at home and he said the band feels "kinda married" to being on the road.

"We've chosen this way to expose people to our music rather than MTV and commercial radio," he said.

Marilyn Manson debuted on the Nothing Records label last year with Portrait of an American Family, a scaldingly loud CD with songs about pedophilia, religious fanaticism and other problems blighting the modern American landscape. Trent Reznor, Nine Inch Nails' lead singer and founder of the Nothing

Nothing/Interscope

Marilyn Manson will bring its crazy antics to Davenport Saturday night when they play with Korn and Danzig.

label, helped produce Portrait and included the band during last year's tour. Although Manson won't disclose the name of the new CD the band is working on, he said a lot of the material was created over the past several months of touring.

"It's going to be a little more extreme than Portrait of an American Family," he said. "So anyone who was put off or found that record to be harsh is going to be really hurt."

The composition of the 5-year-old band changed just recently when Manson, guitarist Daisy Berkowitz, bassist Twiggy Ramirez and organist-sampler Madonna Wayne Gacy added Ginger Fish to replace drummer Sara Lee Lucas. Still an all-boy lineup, Marilyn Manson defiantly mixes cocky Lizard King machismo, bits of fetishism and sadomasochistic imagery with generous doses of androgyny.

Blurring gender distinctions is important to Manson.

"Well, maybe if anything, I've made androgyny a little more acceptable this year. I think it contributes to the cause of opening people's minds and making people think more," he said, adding that he thinks all things which are taboo are important to utilize in the task of opening minds.

"That's always the fear that I like to tap into — what people hate is what they're afraid of, so I like to be everything that everyone hates," Manson said.

The name Marilyn Manson — fused together from the names of two huge American icons (Marilyn Monroe and Charles Manson) — is another deliberate attempt to make people think, he said.

"One of the points I've always tried to make about the band is that the same type of insanity, or whatever word you want to use to describe a different way of thinking, isn't real different between mass murderers and artists."

Marilyn Manson's sexually charged shows are menacing microcosms of implied violence. During the band's show in Iowa City last November, Manson performed a lurid striptease in which he stripped down to a false penis attached to a G-string; smeared his face with blood-red lipstick; and asked, "How many 14-year-old boys in the audience want to fuck me now?" Despite his seeming lack of concern for social mores, though, he is a strong advocate of individual responsibility.

"I try and encourage people to be individuals. ... I think if you want to have the freedom to do and say what you want, you also have to clean up after yourself and accept the consequences of your actions."

Is there anything that piques the curiosity of this self-proclaimed agitator besides censorship, closed minds, religious fundamentalists and dysfunctional families?

Yes. Disappointed that Saturday's show will be in Davenport and not in Iowa City, Manson asked about a certain Iowa City character.

"Iowa City is where they have Secret Pizza, isn't it? We met that guy — very disturbing. ... Is there a Secret Pizza in Davenport? We want to see that guy again," he said.

Marilyn Manson and Korn will open for Danzig at Palmer Auditorium in Davenport. Tickets are available through all Ticketmaster locations.

Stellar roster planned for Hancher in '95-96

Erica Gingerich
The Daily Iowan

Some stomping; some angels; a little bit of grease; and a horde of musicians, actors and artists from around the world define the loose parameters of the 1995-96 Hancher performance season at the UI.

"Our specialty is diversity," said Hancher Auditorium director Wally Chappell. "I learned long ago that every time I try to impose a theme, it doesn't work. It doesn't make sense, and I'm not able to carry it through with 40 different events."

Diversity in the upcoming season means a roster including Broadway hits like "Tommy"; "Angels in America"; "Grease"; a return of "Stomp," the popular percussion performance; and visits from the likes of cellist Yo-Yo Ma, the Urban Bush Women and the Pickle Family Circus.

Bringing this variety of delights to Hancher costs approximately $4.5 million every year, with about half of the money allotted directly for the programming budget, Chappell said. If Hancher can bring in 75 percent of that from box-office receipts, Chappell said he's happy.

"We also get a lot of money from the National Endowment for the Arts, or at least we hope we do," he said. "And we also have 2,000 households in eastern Iowa that give us money on a regular basis to keep the ticket prices low."

Although Iowa may seem so off-Broadway that it makes an improbable stopping point for large acts, Iowa City is often the smallest town the big shows pass through when touring, as is the case with Tony Kushner's "Angels in America." Chappell attributes appeal of Hancher to several factors.

"There is a taste in Iowa City for this kind of fare. Enough people

Hancher Highlights

Highlights of the 1995-96 Hancher Auditorium schedule:

Sept. 23-24	"Tommy"
Sept. 27	Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis
Oct. 1	Ballet West, "Peter Pan"
Oct. 6-8	"Grease!"
Oct. 28-29	"Angels in America"
Nov. 17-19	"Stomp"
Jan. 26-28	"Crazy for You"
Feb. 23-25	Pickle Family Circus
March 12-13	"Five Guys Named Moe"

will come to justify it financially. That's the direct business answer," he said. "The better answer is that there's a tradition at the University of Iowa — not only from the Writers' Workshop, the International Writing Program, the theater, dance and music departments — for excellence and commitment to the arts."

With the departure of UI President Hunter Rawlings, Chappell said he and others in the arts community are unsure of what the future holds for arts at the UI.

"Hunter and Elizabeth Rawlings are huge supporters of Hancher," he said. "They've really been very supportive in a number of ways, particularly with helping us raise money for the renovation and the regular programming. I really hope that the coming president that's selected will be an arts person as well."

"All of us in the arts on campus are concerned about it because there's no staff or faculty person from the arts on the search committee," Chappell said of the selection process for the new president.

GROUP EFFORT WORKS WELL

Duo brings ingenuity to Chekhov's 'Vanya'

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Louis Malle and Andre Gregory, the inspired pair who brought to life the uneven yet provocative "My Dinner with Andre" in 1981, have dared to defy convention a second time with their powerful new film, "Vanya on 42nd Street."

With blatant disregard for the traditionally distanced feel of a stage production, "Vanya" redefines the intimacy which can be created with a motion picture camera while giving theater a manic jolt of novelty in the same breath.

Sony Pictures

Uncle Vanya on 42nd Street

Director: Louis Malle
"Uncle Vanya" by: Anton Chekhov
Adapted by: David Mamet

Vanya: Wallace Shawn
Yelena: Julianne Moore
Sonya: Brooke Smith

Rating: ★★★★★

"Vanya" 's final effect is one of emotional power and raw experience — a remarkable result given that the film began as nothing more than a workshop-style gathering of actors who were rehearsing a play with no intent of going public with it.

A group of gifted New York actors under Gregory's direction began rehearsing an adaptation of Anton Chekhov's provincial drama "Uncle Vanya" (adapted by playwright David Mamet) in 1989, with no clear production goal in mind.

Included in the workshop were actors Wallace Shawn (Gregory's dining mate in "My Dinner with Andre"); Julianne Moore (who appeared in Robert Altman's "Short Cuts"); and Brooke Smith, whose most widely seen film role to date was as the victim of a psychotic in "Silence of the Lambs."

The rehearsals began to take on a unique life and energy of their own until French film director Malle, a close friend of Gregory's since "Andre," sat in on one of the sessions. Inspired, he remarked, "What a shame such a remarkable production will never get to be seen by an audience."

The cinematic narrative was built around a visiting group of patrons who are seeing the rehearsals for "Vanya" upclose for the first time. The run-down rubble of the New Amsterdam Theater in Manhattan, N.Y., became the setting for the film, which retains the original cast of Gregory's workshop production.

Chekhov's play — a complex narrative interweaving troubled souls, missed opportunities and botched friendships — resonates with just as much power as it did when it was first performed more than 90 years ago, given this new infusion of inventiveness.

Malle's camera skillfully assumes the quiet and watchful role of the patrons, the rehearsals' makeshift audience, who sit no more than five feet from the actors throughout the film, sometimes sitting down at the same table with them while they perform a scene.

This kind of nakedness and exposure bring the actors out into the open — but Malle's eye catches them before they get a chance to escape. As a result, "Vanya" fills itself with bursting with some of the most powerful and least self-conscious performances ever recorded on film. Shawn, being cast against his usual nebbish type, is surprisingly deft, and Smith's quiet intensity begs lavish praise.

"Vanya" 's narrative is secondary to the emotional impact its actors deliver in that sense, performances which breathe new life into archetypal drama. Chekhov's play was already great. On a dare, it seems, Malle and Gregory have made it that much better.

'BAD BOYS' BOTCHED BY IDENTITY PROBLEM

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Like so many films written by a committee, "Bad Boys" has something of an identity problem. The story writer and three screenwriters apparently had something of a difference of opinion as to whether they wanted to do a situation comedy or a police action film. In the end, they tried to do both and the results aren't so great.

Bad Boys

Director: Michael Bay
Screenwriters: Jim Mulholland, Michael Barrie, Doug Richardson

Mike Lowry: Will Smith
Marcus Burnett: Martin Lawrence
Julie Mott: Téa Leoni
Fouchet: Tcheky Kayro

Rating: R
★½ out of ★★★★★

The film sometimes successfully integrates the two styles, most notably in the opening sequence, where Miami narcotics squad partners Mike Lowry ("Fresh Prince" Will Smith) and Marcus Burnett (comedian Martin Lawrence) use wisecracks, insults and very large guns to escape a carjacking. But more often, the screenwriters inject extended comic sequences between action segments, slowing down the purported plot and turning the film into a vague farce.

Lowry and Burnett are typical mismatched but goodhearted movie cops. The former's a smooth playboy with a large inheritance that makes other cops think he doesn't take his job seriously. By contrast, Burnett's a hard-working family man who runs hot and cold as the movie's plot vagaries demand.

The partners give each other a lot of crap about these differences, but they're still an effective, smoothly integrated team. When $10 million worth of heroin suddenly disappears from their precinct evidence locker — and it's obviously an inside job — they're seen as the department's only chance. "Do what you do, but do it faster," they're ordered. Unfortunately, they don't have anything resembling a lead.

But moments later, one of Lowry's many drooling, sex-crazed women friends contrives to get herself murdered by the thieves. By a series of convenient coincidences, her photographer roommate witnesses the murder and escapes. With the bad guys hot on her trail, she calls the precinct and demands to speak to her roommate's friend. Lowry happens to be unavailable so Burnett stands in for him.

And at that point, what was an exciting action film suddenly falls apart. The plot transmogrifies into a "Three's Company" episode as Lowry has to pretend to be Burnett, taking over his wife and kids, while Burnett has to take on Lowry's rich-kid lifestyle. Jealousy, frustration and sexual jokes abound.

When "Bad Boys" decides to be an action movie, it's fairly well-done, despite a few plot holes you could drive an exploding ether truck through. Most notably, the screenwriters repeatedly assume that a witness who's seen someone once (from the back and from a great distance, while both people were running and dodging) could easily pick that person out from a huge crowd, again from a great distance.

The humorous substratum often works fairly well, too. Smith and Lawrence have an easy, clean chemistry that comes from a lot of experience with comic timing. They work well together, they fit their roles perfectly and they keep the movie going when nothing else will. But their material is often weak and shoddy, relying on infidelity and penis jokes, and they can only rise so far above that kind of limitation.

And when the two sides come together, both get short shrift. So much time is spent following the cops' verbal volleyball that the film's villains are reduced to vague blurs. The drug heist plot falls by the wayside so many times that only a series of incredible coincidences can get the plot back on track.

What does "Bad Boys" need? More focus. More thoughtful plotting. More detailed characters. More attention paid to what the film's supposed to be about.

And probably fewer screenwriters.

"Hammering a joyful din on hollowed tree trunks, the 15 costumed Drummers of Burundi provided enough bat power for about four festivals and danced with the grace of lions."

— Daily Gazette, Saratoga Springs

"Over the course of Volcano Songs Meredith Monk celebrates the mysteries of life, aging, death, rebirth, creation and transformation. Monk made it easy to believe that the whole world is a divine volcano eternally erupting with forms of life. Because Ms. Monk is equally gifted as composer, singer, dancer and choreographer, her multimedia piece was rich in significance."
